PREFACE TO THE REVISED EDITION

THIS revision of WRITING LATIN — BOOK TWO contains the following changes from the first edition :

1. The Exercises are entirely new, and based on Professor Lodge's Vocabulary of High School Latin.

2. The Review of Case Constructions, covering eight Lessons, has been placed at the beginning instead of at the end.

3. An attempt has been made to have the vocabulary used in the Exercises on each construction include as many as possible of the words normally employed in that construction, an idea suggested by Professor E. P. Morris' work On Principles and Method in Latin Syntax.

4. In order not to interrupt the sustained attack on syntax, and to allow more time at the end of the course for reviews and final assimilation of principles, the Exercises in Connected Prose have, with the exception of brief paragraphs at the end of Lessons IX–XXVIII, been placed at the end of the book.

5. As in the case of Book One, the Special Vocabularies are now arranged by parts of speech, to allow of greater facility in reviewing.

6. Because of the tendency of beginners in Latin to associate one English word with one Latin word, the translation of the original Latin of the Exercises has been very free, the literal rendering being suggested in parentheses wherever this seemed necessary. It is hoped that by this means teachers will be aided in giving their classes an idea of what advanced prose composition really implies — an exact rendering of the thought of the original as distinguished from the translation of separate words.

7. The original plan of collecting the Exercises into a few groups of related subjects has been abandoned, so far as any typographical devices are concerned. Experience seemed to show that it was of no particular help to the pupil. At the same time, the principle of treating in the same lesson things which ought to be studied at the same time has been retained, as of fundamental importance.

8. The "Hints" have been revised, where necessary. In spite of certain requests, it seemed best to the writer not to add a complete section on Syntax, but to adhere to his first plan of requiring the pupil to use a grammar, to which the "Hints" should be supplementary. Teachers who desire such material in a composition book, as well as those who for reasons of their own prefer the less systematic method of a composition "based," without vocabulary, on the authors read, will find excellent books containing these features already in the field—a field which it is not the purpose of this manual to invade. Besides the grammars cited in the first edition, references have been added to the grammars of Hale and Buck, and of Burton.

INTRODUCTION

IN writing Latin, the first object should be to secure grammatical exactness. It is always worth while to verify everything about which there may be the slightest doubt; and it is needless to say that nothing diminishes the difficulties of the work so rapidly as the practice of this careful scrutiny.

The next matter of importance is the order of words.<sup>1</sup> The student should strive to obtain clearness by reading his own Latin over, and seeing if he can understand it. Verbs should regularly stand last in their several clauses; it is then easy to give variety by occasionally varying this order.

In compound and complex sentences, the best results will be obtained by avoiding an involved sentence-structure until one has acquired some degree of skill in writing Latin. Thus, if we had to translate the sentence

The townsmen sent envoys to Caesar to beg him for peace, it would be safer to write

[Oppidāni lēgātōs ad Caesarem misērunt] [quī pācem ab eō peterent], in which the two clauses are perfectly distinct, rather than

Oppidāni lēgātōs ad Caesarem [quī pācem ab eō peterent] misērunt, where the purpose clause is contained, as a sort of parenthesis, in the main clause. Furthermore, in the last sentence there are two verbs standing together at the end, which is a serious defect. This may be avoided by arranging the clauses as in the first example, or by placing some other word than the verb at the end of the first clause. Thus, the last example might be made to end

~~www. qui pacem peterent ab eō miserunt.~~

Latin frequently employs the relative where English prefers a demonstrative, even when there is a subordinating conjunction. The relative must always precede the conjunction. Thus,

Lentulus was brought in, [and] when he saw the Gauls, he was alarmed should be written

Intrōductus est Lentulus, quī cum Gallōs vidēret, perterritus est.

After one has acquired the ability to write clearly and in a normal Latin order, he may give attention to emphasis and style, combining with study of the grammatical rules the reading aloud of Latin with which he is familiar, and the retranslation into Latin of English renderings which have been written out and laid aside for a little time.

6. Attributive Agreement. Apposition: G. 289-291; 320; 321. A. 281; 282; 285. 1, 2; 286 and a; 287. 1. B. 169. 1-5; 233. 2; 234; 235. A, 1, B, 1. H. 393-395. 1, 2. HB. 316; 317. 1, 2, a; 318; 319. 1; 320. I, II; 321. 1; 323. 1, 2. Bn. 380; 381; 383; 384; 386; 629; 631; 632.

7. Predicate Adjective and Predicate Noun: G. 205; 206; 211; 286; 340. A. 283; 284; 285. 2; 287. 2-4; 391-393. a. B. 167; 168. 1, 2; 177. 1, 2; 235. A, 2, B, 2. H. 393. 8; 394; 395. 1, 2; 410. 1. HB. 317. 3; 319. II; 320. III; 321. II. Bn. 389; 392; (632).

8. Syntax of the Relative: G. 614 and Remarks. A. 305 and a; 306. B. 250. 1-3. H. 396 and 2, 3. HB. 322. Bn. 693; 694; 703; 705-707.

9. Questions with -ne, Nōne, and Num: G. 454-456. A. 332. b. B. 162. 2, a)-c). H. 378 and 2. HB. 231. 1, b), c), d). Bn. 363-367.

HINTS

Agreement. The rules of agreement depend on the following simple principles :

a. An adjective or noun used in attributive or predicate agreement has the same case as the word (or words) which it describes.

b. The gender and number of such adjective or noun will also be the same as those of the word (or words) which it describes, so far as circumstances allow. Note carefully the special rules given by the grammars for one adjective modifying two or more words differing in gender or number.

Indirect Object. Remember that while in English the indirect object may be made the subject of the passive, this must never be done in writing Latin. Only the direct object of the active can become the subject of the passive, the indirect object remaining in the dative ; so that such a sentence as will, in Latin, always take the form,

The soldiers were given money

Money was given to the soldiers, Pecūnia militibus data est.

EXERCISE I

1. The citizens have given authority to Cicero, the praetor. 2. Offices have also been bestowed upon him. 3. By [his]<sup>1</sup> excellent (best)<sup>1</sup> measures the consul saved the commonwealth. 4. Afterwards the senate called him father of [his] country. 5. He was called the father of his country by those whom he had rendered safe by his measures. 6. Were not the cities and towns of Italy, [that] most beautiful land, very numerous (many)?

<sup>1</sup> Words in parentheses ( ) are explanatory ; those in square brackets [ ] are to be omitted.

7. Men and women were not equally praised by Pompey, the general, were they? 8. Neither approbation nor offices were bestowed upon the man (is) on whom once entire responsibility had been laid (to whom all things (neut.) had been once assigned). 9. Whom will the general associate with him (join to himself [as] companion)? 10. Did the citizens surrender themselves and all their [property] to him? 11. The weapons will be given up to the man (see 8) by whom this injunction was laid on (this was enjoined to) the citizens. 12. Caesar will be elected consul by those who formerly elected Cicero consul. 13. The general will return [their] weapons to those who surrender (shall have surrendered) themselves and all their [possessions] to him. 14. You owe me much (great) money, [my] friend; why have you not paid [it] to me? 15. Those who are called enemies by the general will pay (give) the heaviest (greatest) penalty (pl.). 16. There are many men, and women too, who are not handsome. 17. Very great was the renown of the general, Pompey, who was called The Great by the Roman senate. 18. These, father, are citizens of Capua, a town of Italy which is (which is a town, etc.,) both very important (large) and very beautiful. 19. Was not this town once called Capua? 20. We will not hand Capua over to those who have not bestowed on Pompey the honors which they owed him.

2. Ablative of Manner: G. 399. A. 412. a, b. B. 220 and 1. H. 473. 3 and Note. HB. 445. 1-3. Bn. 554.
  3. Position of Cum: G. 413. Remark 1. A. 143. f; 150. d. B. 142. 4. H. 175. 7; 182. 2. HB. 418. a. Bn. 102. 4.
  4. Ablative of Accordance: G. 397. A. 418. a. B. 220. 3. H. 475. 3. HB. 414. Bn. 534.
  5. Two Accusatives: G. 339. A. 396. a, b. B. 178, complete. H. 411. 1, 2, 4. HB. 386; 393, complete. Bn. 507-509.

HINTS

Prepositions in English. Remember that the inner meaning of the English rather than its outward form must be the guide in writing Latin. This is particularly true in translating prepositional phrases. For instance, in under the table, "under" denotes actual position beneath, and is translated by sub; but under these circumstances would be his in rebus (literally, "in the midst of these things"); and under Roman rule, simply imperio Rōmānō.

How to say "Own." When own is used to emphasize the idea of possession, the genitive of ipse, self, may be used, with or without a possessive pronoun. Unless the emphasis is very strong, however, the possessive pronoun alone will be sufficient. Thus,

for your own sake { vestrā causā or vestrā ipsōrum causā.
 { tuā causā or tuā ipsius causā.

Possessive Pronouns and Adjectives. Remember that for my, your, our, the genitives of ego, tū, etc., are not to be used, but only the possessives meus, tuus, etc., in agreement with the object possessed; thus,

my horse, equus meus;
our horse, equus noster.

For his, her, its, their, use the possessive suus when the possessor is the subject of the sentence. Elsewhere use the genitive of a demonstrative pronoun. The special rule for subordinate clauses will be treated later.

EXERCISE II

1. Friends, I will not set out with you of my own accord.
2. We are writing the letter with great care.
3. He taught me this of his own accord.
4. They will be taught the liberal arts and sciences (best arts) by him.
5. Here we shall be in no sense (way) safe, where the enemy will soon pitch [their] camp.
6. We shall either live with you gladly on those terms (sing.) which he has mentioned (said), or without you die with calmness (tranquil minds).
7. Under our dominion, the Gauls will no longer struggle with the Germans.
8. We have rightly established peace and friendship with those states against (cum) which we were formerly waging war.
9. The commander had led his army across the bridge and with all his forces was laying-siege-to a town which had not been rendered safe by new fortifications.
10. At the greatest risk to himself (his own greatest risk) the consul will save the commonwealth, which he has always defended most zealously (the highest zeal).
11. It was a pleasure to hear (with pleasure we heard) the letters which you had written; we will gladly do what (those [things] which) you asked us.
12. The consul asks the senate [its] opinion in this way.
13. Those who have been asked their opinion by the consul will lay this injunction on him (see I, 11).
14. According to my view, a full meeting of the senate will be summoned, and this told to them (to whom these things will be told).
15. In a full meeting of the senate<sup>1</sup> the consul will be given<sup>1</sup> commendation by all who have (shall have) been asked their opinion. 16. Those who have been given commendation by the consul will bestow offices on the praetor, according to their custom. 17. As his practice was (according to his custom), he praised all whom he had associated with him (see I, 9) in this way. 18. The commander started with two hundred horsemen, who, as their custom was (see 17), did with the utmost eagerness all the things which he had enjoined upon them. 19. How was peace established on these terms? 20. No longer will it be without risk for us to wage war (shall we wage war without risk) against those with whom we formerly contended.

LESSON III

REVIEW OF CASE CONSTRUCTIONS—Continued

1. Possessive Genitive: G. 362; 366. A. 343 and b. B. 198 and 3. H. 439; 440. HB. 339; 340. Bn. 400-405; 408.

2. Possessive Pronouns: G. 362. Remark 1; 309 and 1. A. 299; 302 and a. B. 86. 1, 2; 243. 1 and 3. H. 176; 439. Note 4; 440. 1, Note 2; 503. HB. 339. a; 254-256; 260; 261; 262. 1. Bn. 618; 619; 622.

3. Dative of Possessor: G. 349. A. 373 and Note. B. 190; 359. 1. H. 430. HB. 374 and a. Bn. 479.

4. Dative or Ablative: G. 348. A. 364. B. 187. 1, a. H. 426. 6. HB. 365. b. Bn. 453.

5. Dative with Adjectives: G. 359. A. 383; 384. B. 192. 1, 2. H. 434. 1, 2. HB. 362. I-III. Bn. 487.

6. Dative with Special Verbs: G. 346 and Note 3. A. 367 and a; 369. B. 187. II, a, and Note. H. 426. 1 and Note 1, 2 and Note. HB. 362 and Footnote 3. Bn. 456. a; 457.

<sup>1</sup> In Latin this will be "commendation was given to the consul." Compare this use with that of the passive of verbs taking two accusatives, as in the latter part of the same sentence.

REVIEW OF CASE CONSTRUCTIONS

7. Dative with Compounds: G. 347. A. 370. a, b. B. 187. III, I,
2. H. 429. HB. 376, a. Bn. 464; 465. ad. n. p. in etc. compound. This is
8. Impersonal Use of Passive: G. 208. 2; 217. A. 372. B. 187.
II, b. H. 426. 3. dat. is retained
HB. 290, a, 1; 364, 2. Bn. 459.

HINTS

Genitive and Dative of Possession. The difference between these can best be understood from the study of examples:

(Gen. of Possessor) This book belongs to Cicero (is Cicero's), hic liber Cicerōnis est.

(Dat. of Possessor) Cicero had many books, Cicerōni multi erant libri.

Dative with Compounds. The rule as generally given is most misleading, and true hardly once in ten times. The safe way is to note in the vocabulary the usage with each verb as it occurs.

EXERCISE III

1. Caesar's wife was Julia, the daughter of Pompey.
2. How many daughters has Pompey? Do these children belong to him?
3. He is leading his own army: [it is] my soldiers, not his, [that] I am leading across the river.
4. Two kings, thoroughly-hostile (sup.) to us, are threatening this state.
5. The man who does not believe others will not be believed [himself]. (Note: This can be well rendered by the "inverted relative" construction, translating in the following clause-order: "who does not believe others, to him it will not be believed").
6. What man have you seen like this [one], who has saved his country, always served his fellow-citizens, obeyed the laws, appeased public-foes, pardoned private-enemies, [and] been-pleasing-to all who have been associated (versor, 1) with him in this enterprise (rēs)? 7. We are approaching a place which is particularly suitable for a camp. 8. Do you desire a revolution? This indeed (quidem) seems very like war. 9. This does not please me at all: to others, not to me, is the sight of the enemy pleasant. 10. Are not Catiline's sympathizers (those who sympathize with Catiline) like Catiline? (see 5). 11. Citizens, why do you favor the Gauls? They are not like the Romans, nor have they ever benefited you. 12. Also, they are nearest to the Germans, with whom they no longer are carrying on war; these, however, have always done you harm. 13. We shall resist all who either spare the enemy or have-ill-will-for (envy) the consul; for otherwise the greatest peril will threaten the commonwealth. 14. It will be extremely dangerous for you to place this man in command (with the highest danger will you place this-one in command) of the army, citizens. 15. Gratitude will be felt toward the man (is) who does not fail the commonwealth (see 5). 16. The man who was trusted by all has been presented with citizenship (see 5). 17. They have presented the man with citizenship who surrounded the enemy's city with his troops (soldiers). 18. I have not asked your advice, but I have always looked out for your interests and always shall (express by repeating the verb "look out" in the proper tense). 19. Those who have never looked out for the welfare of others will not have their own welfare looked out for (it will not be consulted for. See 5 for order.) 20. Resistance will justly be offered (it will rightly be resisted) to those who neither obey the laws nor benefit their native land in any other manner.

1. Dative of Purpose ("Object for Which"; "Service"; "Double Dative"): G. 356. 2, 3. A. 382. 1, 2. B. 191. 1, 2. H. 433. 1, 2, 3. HB. 360. a, b; 361. Bn. 483.
2. Dative of Reference: G. 350-352. A. 376-378. B. 188. 1, 2, a)-d). H. 425. 2, 4, Note, 432. Bn. 470; 473; 474.
3. Place Where: G. 385; 386 and Remark 2; 388; 411 and Remark 1. A. 426. 3; 427. 3, Footnote 1, a; 428. d, e. B. 228. 1, a)-c). H. 483-485. 2. HB. 433; 449 and a. Bn. 588-590; 592; 594; 606-609; 612.
4. Time When: G. 393. A. 423. 1. B. 230, 1, 2; 231. H. 486; 487. HB. 439. Bn. 599; 600.
5. Extent: G. 335; 336. A. 423. 2; 425. B. 181. H. 417. HB. 387. I, II. Bn. 518; 519.

HINTS

Dative of Purpose. The following points should be noted:

(a) The English equivalent for this dative is a predicate noun, or an appositive with as.

(b) The construction is customary in Latin only with a limited number of abstract nouns, and appears to be in part an attempt to avoid asserting that a concrete noun is identical in meaning with an abstract noun.

Translation of "for." When for denotes simply the person interested, it may be rendered by the dative, as

The sun shines for all, Sōl omnibus lūcet.

When for denotes protection or substitution, use the ablative with prō, as

It is a happy and glorious (fate) to die for one's country, Dulce et decōrum est prō patriā morī.

When for denotes extent, it is, of course, translated by the accusative; but in certain negative expressions the ablative is used. Thus,

I have not seen him for several years, Complūribus annīs illum nōn vidī.

Here there is really no idea of extent. The expression means "at no time within the space of several years have I seen him."

If, however, we had such a sentence as

They have not yet been three months in Italy,

where the "not" belongs with "three months" and not with the verb "been," the sense would require the accusative,

Nōndum mensis trīs in Italiā sunt.

Note in this last example how the present tense is used to translate "have been" when accompanied by an expression of duration (mēnsis trīs). In the same way

Iam pridem hoc faciō

means

I have been doing this for a long time now.

Some other translations of "for" will be noticed later.

EXERCISE IV

1. At that time he was very useful (for a great use) both to me and to my brother Quintus. 2. Two legions were left that night as a protection to the camp. 3. In the river [their] shields were a great inconvenience to the soldiers. 4. For many days we did not resist that consul whose measures have always been a [means of] safety to the state. 5. The cavalry were sent many miles as a reinforcement to this legion. 6. That summer he was given nothing as a present. 7. In recent years I have had him as both a help and a protection. 8. To me, at least, that which has been said seems most charming.

9. In early spring Orgetorix took upon himself the office-of-ambassador to (ad) the states. 10. This (pl.) has been done, not for us only, but also for our children.

11. That which was undertaken by me that winter I undertook, Quirites, for your benefit (for you). 12. That [man] in early youth waged war against the enemies of the Roman people. 13. We staid in that city three months. 14. At Rome Cicero once spoke for two hours in the senate, which nevertheless did not resist his measures. 15. I have not had many conversations with him in recent years. 16. In Corinth, a city of Greece, there were many beautiful<sup>1</sup> statues of the gods. 17. At day-break he will speak with the enemy's chief. 18. All these things will not be accomplished in one month; in my opinion we shall be in that place for many years. 19. At Carthage; in Italy; in Sicily; in two days; for two days; in the whole [of] Gaul; at Capua; here and there in Asia; in a small town; for the last twenty years (see 7). 20. On that day they travelled (went) thirty miles.

HINTS

Place and Time. The place to which and the time until which are expressed in the same way in Latin, as

The battle raged till late at night, Ad multam noctem pugnatum est.

Similarly, the place from which and the time from which have the same construction.

Translation of "for," continued. When "for" denotes the end of motion, it is expressed by the accusative, with in or ad if the noun admits it, as Watch for other meanings of "for" as the lessons proceed, and reread the "Hints" of Lesson II.

general. 6. First the Gauls were ushered into the senate; then the consul asked the senators their opinion about them; finally all were taken under the protection of the state. 7. All these were summoned to the senate-house; afterwards, however, they gathered at the consul's home. 8. From home I came here; from here (hence) I shall return home; I shall stay at home till evening. 9. From the city I went to the country; I did not stay in the country long, but from the country I soon returned to Rome. 10. In the country how many things charm us! From daybreak until late-at-night all things are perfectly delightful (sup.) to us. 11. There you will be freed from all the anxieties which once you had at Rome. 12. Everything that you once lacked, but which we used-to-have, now belongs to you (is now yours), by whom we have been robbed of all our possessions (rēs). 13. This town was now without (empty of) those who formerly had defended it from the enemy. 14. Everything has been taken from me (dat.) by those who always injure all the good. 15. Soon you will be free from worries: in the country everything will charm you. 16. Unperturbed, I have been deprived of the (is) things of which all the citizens have been robbed. 17. Have not many honors been taken from him which once he was most happy to receive (received very gladly)? 18. We had previously been presented by Caesar himself with the weapons which were surrendered (trādō) to him on that occasion. 19. Surely you will not (express surely . . . not by num) rob us of both arms and homes—[us] who never either (neither ever) harmed you or (nor) wanted a change of government or (nor) were unfriendly to anyone who was friendly to you!

HINTS

Material. The grammars are not all equally clear on this point. The following is a safe rule to follow in writing.

The material—the actual “stuff” out of which something is made—is denoted

(a) by the ablative with ex, with or without factus:

1. chains of gold, catēnae ex aurō;
2. chains made of gold, catēnae ex aurō factae.

(b) by an adjective:

golden chains,
chains of gold, } catēnae aureae.

The genitive may be used to show that of which something is composed or consists, when the word which it limits denotes quantity, and when this idea of quantity is important; as, a host of cavalry, multitudō equitum.

Cause. "The ablative denotes the motive from which, or the influence through which (by virtue of which) a thing is done" (MADVIG).

When the cause is something external, ob or propter with the accusative is usual, as

The crops were not yet ripe because of the frosts, Propter frigora frumenta mātūra nōndum erant.

But this distinction is not always observed.

EXERCISE VI

1. Archias was descended (born) from very noble stock.
 2. Were not the Belgae, who were almost equal to the Romans in courage, descended from the Germans? 3. That famous silver eagle has been sent on to Faesulae. 4. One class is [composed] of those who are overwhelmed with debt.
 5. Shall we not obey Pompey, a man possessing (of) extraordinary knowledge of warfare (war), unique courage, a most illustrious personality, [and] surpassing good-fortune?
 6. For you will very seldom (least often) find a man of this kind, Quirites. 7. Who does not remember his voyage of forty-nine days? 8. Trees of every kind were seen on that hill. 9. A great quantity of silver and gold was abandoned to the Roman soldiers by Mithridates in his retreat. 10. The Germans were men of great strength, but were they equal to the Romans in strength? 11. The trinkets of the women were made of gold and silver.
 12. Women wear golden ornaments; but for men the ornaments are swords and spears made of iron. 13. Shall not a man of such (is) modest worth (modesty) be left unharmed by the jurors? 14. In these regions he displayed (was characterized by) the utmost seriousness, [and] no avarice. 15. These men were swayed by their envy of the consul, a man of the highest courage. 16. On account of his capacity the highest offices will be bestowed upon him. 17. For this (which) reason (rēs), those who rejoiced in Catiline's unpatriotic acts-of-robbery (robberies) will all be put to death for (propter) their crimes. 18. All who had been pardoned were powerfully agitated by these circumstances. 19. Because of the greed of the generals, nobody believed them. 20. Those who obey the laws from fear are not men of very great courage; but nevertheless they are of service to the country.

5. Ablative with Dignus and Indignus: G. 397. Remark 2. A. 418. b. B. 226. 2. H. 481. HB. 442. Bn. 587.

HINTS

Comparison. In writing the following exercise, it will be well to express comparisons both with and without quam, wherever that is possible. Of course quam must always be used when the first of the words compared is in any other case than nominative or accusative. Thus, if we should try to translate, without using quam, The farmer's horse is larger than that of the physician, we should have Agricolae equus maior est medicō; that is, The farmer's horse is larger than the physician!

We must write, therefore, Agricolae equus maior est quam medicī.

Notice that the "that" in the phrase "than that of" is not to be expressed in Latin.

Genitive with Adjectives. Notice that where English says skilled IN, sharer IN, the Latin has skilled OF, sharer OF. This genitive is not partitive, but objective; a sharer is not part of that which he shares, nor a skillful person of that in which his skill is exercised.

Genitive with Verbs. a. The perfect of memini has the force of a present, the pluperfect of a perfect, the future perfect of a simple future.

b. Sentences containing the impersonals paenitet, pudet, etc., may be written according to the following models:

I repent of this	}	Huius mē paenitet.
= it repents me of this,
The soldiers were ashamed of their cowardice	}	Militēs ignāviae pudēbat.
= it shamed the soldiers of their cowardice,
We deeply repented of having done this, Hoc fēcisse nōs maximē paenitēbat. c. Master the peculiar construction with the impersonals interest and rēfert. It is both important and easily forgotten.

EXERCISE VII

1. I shall never forget you, Gaius; I will always be obedient to you. 2. Do you not remember Pompey, who was much more experienced in warfare (war) than all the commanders of that period (time)? 3. For who was like Pompey, or who was his peer (equal to him) at any time?— [Pompey] who has engaged-in-conflict with his country's-foe (one word) oftener than any one [else] has quarrelled with a personal-enemy. 4. Catiline neither repents of his crimes nor is he ashamed [of them]. 5. He has been accused of many crimes of which he will never be declared guilty. 6. For the judges are much more eager for money than covetous of praise. 7. This is a little more to your interest than to the praetor's. 8. That, however, concerns them less than [it does] you, who are Catiline's own, and altogether like (sup.) him; it does not affect us, who have neither been forgetful of the laws nor injured the commonwealth in any way. 9. He is full of good counsel, [a man] of the highest worth, who never forgets the injunctions which have been laid (those things which have been enjoined) upon him. 10. The longer we who have been charged with the burning of the city stay in this place, the greater the danger we shall be in. 11. These men are equal in [point of] cultivation, but Marcus is both five years older than his brother, and much braver [than he]. 12. Are not those by whom the country has been kept-safe much more worthy of esteem than those who have called Catiline their friend? 13. We will not lay all the responsibility on that [man], who has never been ashamed of the misfortunes which the citizens have suffered through him. 14. He always rendered to every man his [due]; none has been found more just or patriotic than he. ✓ 15. We shall be glad to surrender (gladly shall we surrender) ourselves and all our [possessions] to a man of such justice, and we shall never (nor . . . ever) repent of this act. 16. This spot (place) was not more than a mile away from the enemy's camp. 17. In the third year he was elected consul by the citizens, who deemed him the most deserving of that-high (so great) office. 18. Have you forgotten the offices which were bestowed upon you (with which you were affected) by the Roman people? Will you not always remember those by whom you were so early raised to the highest position-of-authority? 19. Those who have been pronounced guilty of such villainies will suffer (be affected with) the severest penalties. 20. This concerns Pompey more than [it does] Caesar; for the former was more than three days' journey farther away from that spot than the latter [was].

HINTS

Partitive Genitive (Genitive of the Whole). In general this construction, from its similarity to English, offers few difficulties. It will, however, be necessary to make a careful study of the grammar, in order to discover and learn certain words which are followed by a genitive in Latin contrary to the English usage, such as

nihil boni, no good,

and the like.

With regard to numerals, it will be best to use the ablative with ex or dē after ūnus, duo, and trēs, even though the grammar allows the genitive. This construction should also be used with quidam.

The use with quisque and uterque, and with such adjectives as medius, reliquus, summus, and extrēmus, should be carefully learned.

It should be remembered that the plural of mille is followed by a genitive in Latin, although no hint of this is given by the form of the English; thus, while a thousand soldiers is mille militēs, two thousand soldiers is duo millia militum (literally, two thousands of soldiers).

EXERCISE VIII

1. A large part of the weapons which the enemy were using have not yet been given up (sing.). 2. Three thousand soldiers were seen on the top of the hill, some of whom fled at once, while (autem) others resisted us. 3. A thousand horsemen gave-chase-to these, and surrounded many of them [as they were] floundering in a swamp. 4. Only-a-few of these escaped; but the rest resisted our [men] most valiantly until evening. 5. Then, exhausted by their wounds, all either were killed, or surrendered themselves to our men amid the heaps of slain (lit. bodies). 6. In the middle of the summer he got everything ready which he needed for (ad) this war. 7. Those supplies (rēs) of which he had no stock he purchased from (dē) the Aeduans at a high (great) price.

8. Soon we shall gain possession of the enemy's camp, which is not more than two miles distant from ours.

9. Some of the conspirators will meet in Marcus Laeca's house; others will await their accomplices at the gates.

10. Which of these [two men] is the more deserving of honor? for each of them (each of whom) is a most courageous man, having the highest mental-ability (abl. of description), and having received the most flattering attentions at your hands (affected by your most honorable favors)?

✓ 11. Who of these was the first to need help?

12. Which-of-the two leaders required the more soldiers?

13. His characteristics were (there was in him) a lack of application (too little diligence) and an excess of (too much) daring.

14. The conspirators who have been arrested by order of the consul will not enjoy life long.

15. He who has cruelly murdered so many [of] your fellow-citizens has as yet incurred (suscipiō) no punishment befitting his crimes.

16. Oh, the glorious renown of my consulship! for I have either slain all our enemies, or forced them out of the city into the-life-of brigands (robbery).

17. Two of the robbers, who were engaged in a constant competition for distinction (always contended with each other about glory), entered into the house of the consul himself, at midnight.

18. I will not be the first to enter upon war — [I] who lately was nearly killed in my own house (loc.).

19. Some fled in (into) one direction, others in another.

20. The one has need of friends, the other of weapons; but both of them are worthy of our friendship.

LESSON IX

MOODS IN DIRECT QUESTIONS. COMMANDS. EXHORTATIONS. PROHIBITIONS

1. Alternative Questions: G. 458; 459. A. 334; 335. Note, a-d. B. 162. 4. H. 380 and 1. HB. 234. a. Bn. 372; 373; 378; 379.
2. The Subjunctive in Direct Questions: G. 259; 265; 558. A. 444; 462. a. B. 277. H. 557; 559. 4, 5. HB. 503; 513. 1; 515. 1; 517. 1; 519. 1. Bn. 771; 772.
3. Imperative: G. 266; 267; 268. 1, 2. A. 448. a; 449. 1, 2, a. B. 281. 1, a), b), 2. H. 560. 2, 4. HB. 496. c, d. Bn. 931-933.
4. Hortatory and Jussive Subjunctive: G. 262. 3. A. 439. Notes 1 and 2, a. B. 274; 275. H. 559. 1, 2. HB. 500; 501. 2, 3. Bn. 768.
5. Prohibitions: G. 271. 2; 263. 2, (b), 3; 275. A. 450. B. 281. 2; 276. a, b. H. 561. 1. HB. 501. 3, a, 1), 2). Bn. 934; 936; 937.

HINTS

Questions in the Subjunctive. The mood of the question depends upon the form of the expected answer. Questions in the indicative are answerable by a statement of fact in the indicative, as

What does he see? He sees the enemy.
Quid videt? Hostis videt.

Questions in the subjunctive are answerable by an imperative, or a statement of obligation, propriety, or the like, as

What am I to do? Come here.
Quid faciam? Hūc veni.

Imperative. Remember never to use the imperative mood for prohibitions. For expressing these, nōli and nōlite with the infinitive will be the most useful method.

There will be practically no occasion to employ the future imperative except in the case of certain verbs like memini and sciō, where the present form is not in use.

Review in the Grammar the imperative forms of dīcō, dūcō, faciō, and ferō, and their compounds.

EXERCISE IX

1. What was the limit of Catiline's display of insolence (to what limit did Catiline's daring display itself)?
 2. Said<sup>1</sup> the consul: "Are you more disturbed (perf.) by the guard set over the city at night (the city's nocturnal guard), or by the people's anxiety?" 3. What was I to do?<sup>2</sup> Should I arrest him at once, or let him go? 4. Who could justly have censured me? What else was I to do?
 5. Did the senators display courage and faithfulness in their decision (decree courageously and diligently), or not?
 6. Quirites, let us daily protect the city from Catiline's madness. 7. Soldiers, follow your general even to the farthest-limit-of Gaul. 8. [My] friends, do not forget those who have always both helped you and given you pleasure. 9. Never be ashamed of the leniency which you have displayed (used). 10. Let not those who are thrilled with joy by (ob) this event (rēs) forget those who are correspondingly (equally) plunged in (cast down with) woe. 11. They are not ashamed to follow their general, are they? 12. Is not this really your army, Pompey? Are not you the general? I am not mistaken (deceived), am I? ✓ 13. I was not mistaken, was I, in either the day or the place (did either day or place deceive me)? All the plans that you had formed I both saw and clearly perceived. 14. Shall I not esteem this [man]? Shall I not admire [him]? Shall I not defend him by every [possible] means? 15. Go (set out) into exile, Catiline; cease-to-think-of (forget) burning and killing.

CONNECTED PROSE

Let not merited (true) praise be withheld from Lucullus in (by) my speech, nor (nēve) undeserved distinctions (honors which he has not deserved) be bestowed on Pompey by any one. First, however, who would not praise him? Next, who would not be glad to elect (would not gladly elect) him consul? Wherefore, Quirites, be obedient to my words (to me) and place him in charge of this most important enterprise (these so great things).

 (a) We know that this is true, and
 (b) We know this to be true.

Latin employs only one of these, the second. Thus,

Scimus hoc esse vĕrum.

The easiest and surest way to write sentences of the indirect form is to recast them in the form of (b), above. In this way the second sentence of Exercise II becomes which can be translated directly into Latin.

The consul says himself to be afraid, etc.,

Tense of the Infinitive. The present infinitive of Latin must sometimes be used to translate what in English requires a past tense. Thus,

He said that he was tired, when changed according to the suggestion of the preceding paragraph, becomes

He said himself to be tired, which is in Latin

Dixit sē dĕfessum esse.

To make this still clearer, suppose that we had

Dixit sē dĕfessum fuisse.

This would be, literally,

He said himself to have been tired,

or, in more natural English,

He said that he had been tired.

When in doubt, imagine yourself as saying the thing which is quoted, heard, etc., and use a present, perfect, or future infinitive, according as the time of your verb is present, past, or future. Thus, in the first case, the speaker must have said

I am tired, Dēfessus sum ;

while in the second he said

$$I \left\{ \begin{array}{l} \textit{was} \\ \textit{have been} \\ \textit{had been} \end{array} \right\} \textit{tired,} \quad \textit{Dēfessus} \left\{ \begin{array}{l} \textit{eram,} \\ \textit{fui,} \\ \textit{fūeram.} \end{array} \right\}$$

Finally, remember that the signs of the future infinitive in Latin are "will," "would," "going to," and the like. Thus,

He said that he would come, Dixit sē ventūrum (esse).

Subjunctive in Subordinate Clauses. If the action described occurs AT THE SAME TIME as that of the main verb, use the present or imperfect subjunctive, according to the sequence; if it occurs BEFORE the time of the main verb, use the perfect or pluperfect, according to the sequence. The principle involved in cases where the action occurs at a later time than that of the main verb is treated in Lesson XI.

Verbs of Hoping and Promising. Since promising is a kind of telling, and hoping an action of the mind, verbs meaning "to hope" and "to promise" are regularly followed by the construction of indirect discourse. And since hopes generally and promises always are concerned with the future, it is also evident why the future is the tense of the infinitive habitually used with such verbs.

Use with Memini. Memini takes the present infinitive of the recollection of a personal experience, as

I remember his coming, Memini eum venire.

Pronouns. In sentences beginning "He said that he," "They knew that they," and the like, the translation of the second pronoun may be troublesome. If the second pronoun refers to the same person as the first, meaning, "A said that A," "B knew that B," etc., the reflexive sē must be used. If the second pronoun refers to some other person, and means "A said that X," "B knew that Y," etc., use the accusative of is, ea, id or of ille, illa, illud.

Thus,

They said that they would not go.

may be

Negāvērunt sē itūrōs,

or

Negāvērunt eōs itūrōs.

The first means that the speakers themselves refused to go; the second, that they reported the refusal of others.

In general, observe also that in subordinate clauses which express the thought, words, or will of the subject of the leading verb, sē (or, to avoid ambiguity, ipse), and not ille or is, is used to refer to that subject when the verb is in the third person. For the reflexive of the first and second person, forms of ego and tū must be used.

EXERCISE X

1. He denies that he either has failed-in-his duty to the commonwealth, or is forming plans against it, or will harm the citizens in any way. 2. The consul said that he had replied to the ambassadors that the Roman people pardoned them and would always be on friendly terms (in friendship) with them. 3. The general said, "I have been informed that the enemy's camp will be pitched where we formerly pitched our own." 4. They promise to give the grain which the Roman people has demanded of them. 5. We hope either to crush the fellow or to check all his attempts and movements. 6. You are not sorry, are you, that the city, which he has long since been threatening with destruction, has been rescued from its perilous-position (danger)? 7. For a long time now I have felt that all that we had said in the meeting would be divulged. 8. I have long since known that the soldiers would not follow one (is) who they thought had promised to arrest Pompey. 9. The scouts bring word that the hill which our men had seized the day before is now in the possession of (held by) the enemy. 10. He says that he remembers that Gnaeus Pompey prepared for this great (this so great) war at the end of winter, entered upon it in early spring, [and] finished it by (in) midsummer. 11. They found that all the reports which the envoys had brought back (all which the envoys had reported) about him were true. 12. For they had reported that he understood that our troops were soon going to make an attack on the camp which he had pitched on the top of the hill. 13. All are both pronounced and considered enemies who hope to be kings in a state whose citizens have declared that they will never have kings. 14. He said that he did not repent of this deed, which he had done with good intentions, and that he had never tried to avoid the enemy's attack. 15. Shall I believe that any plans which you have formed, Catiline, are free from treachery? or are you unaware that I know that you confessed that you feigned many things which were afterwards discovered to be false?

CONNECTED PROSE

I do admit, Quirites, that I once hoped to be elected consul by you; but now I am not sorry that you have replied to me that this did not please you at all. For I am not ignorant that at this most-important (tantus) crisis [in the fortunes] of the commonwealth, there is need of men more skilled in warfare [than I].

HINTS

Indirect Questions. English usually employs no auxiliary, such as should or might, to suggest the subjunctive which is necessary in turning indirect questions into Latin. Sometimes the beginner confounds indirect questions with relative clauses. Remember that indirect questions (a) must be introduced by some interrogative word, and (b) are substantive clauses, being either the subject or the object of some verb of the class described in the grammar (rarely appositive). Thus,

Subject: What you did | was seen,
Quid facerēs | visum est.

Object: We saw | what you did,
Vidimus | quid facerēs.

Sequence of Tenses. Note the following points:

(a) In any given dependent clause which takes the subjunctive, only two tenses are possible. The problem is to determine which one of these we shall use.

(b) In writing indirect questions, the tense used in English is a sufficient guide, with one exception.

Thus,

- (1) I do not know why he  $\left\{ \begin{array}{l} \text{laughs (a)} \\ \text{is laughing (b)} \\ \text{does laugh (c)} \end{array} \right\}$ , nesciō quid rideat (pres. subj.);
- (2) I did not know why he was laughing, nescivī quid ridēret (impf. subj.);
- (3) I do not know why he  $\left\{ \begin{array}{l} \text{laughed (a)} \\ \text{has laughed (b)} \\ \text{was laughing (c)} \end{array} \right\}$ , nesciō quid riserit (perf. subj.);
- (4) I did not know why he had laughed, nescivī quid risisset (plup. subj.).

In sentence (c) of the third form we must be on our guard against using the imperfect subjunctive; the PERFECT being the tense which is normally used to express past time when the main verb is primary.

First Periphrastic. This form must be used when the indirect question inquires what will or would be the case.

Note, however, that if this question be really deliberative, that is, asks what one is to or was to do, the simple present or imperfect subjunctive is sufficient, as in Sentence 4 of the following exercise.

Note carefully the various English equivalents for the periphrastic future. Thus,

Interrogāvī quid factūrus essēs

might mean I asked what you  $\left\{ \begin{array}{l} \text{were going to do,} \\ \text{were about to do,} \\ \text{were likely to do,} \\ \text{intended to do,} \\ \text{would do, etc.} \end{array} \right.$

EXERCISE XI

1. First he asked me whence I came and whither I was bound (setting out); then of what I was in search (what I sought); finally the names of both my father and my mother. 2. Let us not reveal to any one what things our general lacks, nor what we have overheard, nor by what method we intend to overpower Catiline. 3. Think from how many and how great dangers the consul has saved the commonwealth, which you know a single (one) night nearly destroyed. 4. Then you will more easily determine whom you shall place in command of this (so) great war. 5. I do not know whom they are going to place in command of this war which is being made on us and our tributaries. 6. "A certain [man]," said Cicero, "asked Catiline whether the expressions on the faces (faces and expressions) of the senators did not disturb him at all (moved him nothing)." 7. But these cried out that Catiline was his country's bane, and should go from the city at once. 8. I believe that he wholly forgot whether the senate had decreed this, or not. 9. I replied to the soldiers that it was not yet time for battle, [and] that they should stay (hold themselves) in camp (abl. without in). 10. Tell me, Cicero, how numerous and how important [the] states [are which] have united on account of (causā) this war. 11. The consul said, "I know well, Quirites, both what opinion you hold concerning me, and what you ordain for others." 12. He said that the citizens should depart to their homes, and protect them by guards and patrols just as on the past night. 13. He said that their dwellings would be protected by the man (ille) who not once only, but again and again, at the greatest risk to himself (at his own very great risk), had rescued the city from [the hands of] those who had hoped to gain possession of it. 14. For he was waiting-to-see if any one would resist them, and (or) what plan the enemy were forming. 15. The conspirators did not know whether the city would have an adequate (enough) guard, or not.

CONNECTED PROSE

Some asked the consul what he had done about these matters, and what they themselves should do. To these (to whom) he replied that they should return to their homes, which he would render safe by the measures he should take, his strenuous endeavors, and the risks he should run (his measures, labors, risks).

/// LESSON XII

PERSONAL AND IMPERSONAL PASSIVE. GERUND AND GERUNDIVE. SECOND PERIPHRASTIC CONJUGATION

1. Personal and Impersonal Passive: G. 528. A. 330. a, 1, 2, b, 1. B. 332. a)-d) and Note. H. 611. 1, 2, and Notes. HB. 590, complete. Bn. 958, 959.

2. Gerund: G. 425; 426. A. 502. B. 338. 1-5. H. 624. HB. 611 complete; 612 complete. Bn. 1003-1005.

3. Gerundive: G. 427 and Remarks 4 and 5; 428 and Remarks 1 and 2; 429, 430-433. A. 503 and a; 504. b, c; 505-507. B. 339. 1-5; 7; 337. 8, b), 2), 7. H. 623 and 1; 625; 626. 1-3; 628-631. HB. 609; 610; 612, complete; 613, complete; 614. Bn. 1005; 1009; 1011; 1013; 1014.

4. Passive Periphrastic Conjugation: G. 251. 1, 2. A. 158. d, 1; 194. b; (196); 500. 2; 372 (see the last example). B. 115; 337. 8, b), 1). H. 621. 1, 2. HB. 162; 600. 3, a. Bn. 1000; 1001.

5. Dative of the Agent: G. 355 and Remark. A. 374. a, Note 1. B. 189. 1, a. H. 431 and 1, with the Footnote. HB. 373. 1. Bn. 480; 481.

HINTS

Compound Infinitives. Remember that after the personal passive, a compound infinitive form (future active or perfect passive) is put in the nominative, agreeing with the subject of the leading verb. Otherwise, of course, it would agree with its own subject accusative. Thus,

(Personal) They are said to have tried (It is said that they tried)
Dicuntur cōnātī esse.

(Impersonal) It was said that they had tried (They were said to have tried), www.libtool.com.cn
Dictum est eōs cōnātōs esse.

The reason is that, in the personal construction, the infinitive is really complementary; and therefore the participle, like other adjectives with the complementary infinitive, is in the nominative case.

Verbals in -ing. Distinguish between the English present participle, which is an adjective, and the gerund or “infinitive in -ing,” which is a noun; thus,

Participle: a bird flying, avis volāns.

Gerund: the power of flying, potestās volandī.

Gerund and Gerundive. It will be safest to write the gerundive rather than the gerund wherever the verb is transitive and the object expressed.

Gerundive with Special Verbs. The use of the gerundive in agreement with the object of such verbs as dō, tribuō, cūrō, etc., to express purpose can be readily understood by attention to the literal rendering, although the English is awkward. Thus,

Agrōs illis colendōs dedit

is literally, He gave them fields to-be-tilled, that is, He gave them fields to till.

Genitive with Causā. Remember that causā and grātiā must always FOLLOW the genitive. This genitive denotes the end in view; therefore when the cause is not something to be accomplished, but is an established basis for action, it is expressed by ob or propter, or by the ablative of cause.

Second Periphrastic. The English sentence must be recast in the passive form; thus,

ENGLISH	LATIN
I must do these things	} Haec facienda sunt mihi.
= These things are to be done by me,

This would also be the translation for

I have to do this, or I should do this.

Notice that when the verb is transitive, the gerundive agrees with the subject of the passive, as facienda with haec above. When intransitive, the neuter singular is used (impersonal construction); as,

I must speak of Pompey's matchless prowess, Dē eximiā Pompei virtūte mihi est dicendum.

EXERCISE XII

1. Some supposed that Catiline had formed plans for destroying the whole world with fire and sword. 2. Many are said to have escaped from Rome for the sake of their own preservation (of preserving themselves). 3. The place seemed to be suitable for pitching camp. 4. It was said that they had escaped by fastening ships together. 5. I must pass over these [points] in my speech (in speaking) [as] belonging too much to the past (too ancient). 6. Should not all who are truly patriotic obey the laws? 7. He said that those who had formed a plan to overthrow (for overthrowing) the laws must be restrained by imprisonment (prison) and chains. 8. His most distinguished grandfather, a man of consular rank and full of good sense, whose friendship I long enjoyed (whom I long used [as] a friend) replied that not even a tribune of the plebs ought to be set free if he had (who had) conspired against the general welfare (safety of all). 9. Two-days are deemed sufficient for completing these arrangements (rēs).

10. The consul said, "We must rescue the city from the jaws of death." 11. A new legion had to be enrolled in Nearer Gaul in order to (ad) put down this insurrection.

12. He has had a bridge built (faciō) over (in) the river.

13. Let no observance (let not any thing) be omitted which may tend (subj.) to appease the gods. 14. The consul said that Lentulus had assigned him to Cethegus to - butcher, the other citizens to Gabinius to kill, [and] the whole [of] Italy to Catiline to ravage and plunder.

15. Let us stay here for the purpose of resisting the gladiators.

CONNECTED PROSE

The same night it is said that two Roman knights promised to go to the consul's house at dawn for the purpose of killing him (ipse). Catiline gladly gave them this permission (to whom Catiline gladly intrusted this), for no one had resisted his designs so vigorously as (quam) [had] Cicero.

LESSON XIII

INFINITIVE AS SUBJECT AND AS OBJECT. LICET.

OPORTET. NECESSE EST

1. Infinitive as Subject: G. 422. A. 452. 1. B. 327. 1. H. 615. HB. 585. a, b, d; 597. 1, a). Bn. 948.

2. Infinitive as Object (Complementary): G. 423. 1, 2. A. 456 and Note. B. 328. 1, 2. H. 607. 1, 2. HB. 586. a; 587; 588. Bn. 951.

HINTS

Difference between Latin and English Uses of the Infinitive. By analyzing sentences containing the English infinitive we find it has the following uses :

- |                   |   |
|-------------------|---|
| 1. Noun use.      | { Subject of a verb, To do this   is folly.Object of a verb, I like   to read.Apposition, This is pleasant,   to find you at home. |
| 2. Adverb use.    |   |
| 3. Adjective use. |   |
- { Modifies a verb, We came | to see you.
 { Modifies an adjective, This is easy | to do.
 { Modifies a noun or pronoun, Some books are to be tasted.

In classical Latin prose the infinitive is, generally speaking, used only as a noun.

Infinitive as Subject. It should be remembered that the verbal noun in -ing is often used in English in place of the subject-infinitive proper. Thus,

Dulce est ridēre

may be the equivalent of either

(It) is pleasant to laugh,
 or To laugh is pleasant,
 or Laughing is pleasant.

Infinitive as Object. Because of the confusion between certain infinitive and subjunctive constructions in Latin, it is desirable to memorize the subjoined list of common verbs which regularly take an infinitive as their object or complement. Most of these are required in the exercise which follows :

volō, wish, be willing.
cupiō, desire.
mālō, prefer.
possum, can, be able.
dēbeō, ought.

cōnsuēscō, become accustomed.
soleō, be accustomed, be used. statuō
cōstituō } determine, decide.
cōgō, compel.
audeō, dare, venture.

dubitō, hesitate.	dēsistō } cease, stop.
parō, prepare, make ready.	dēsīnō } cease, stop.
cōnor, try, attempt.	iubeō, bid, command. incipiō, begin.	vetō, forbid. coepti, began.	sinō, permit, allow.
prohibeō, prevent.	patior, suffer, permit.

Auxiliary Verbs. Subjoined is a table of the most usual modes of rendering May, Can, Must, and Ought in Latin.

(1) May (denoting permission or freedom to perform an act):

You may do this.	{	(a) Tē hoc facere   licet.
		(b) Tibi   hoc facere   licet.
		(c) Hoc faciās   licet.

In (a), tē is the subject of facere. In (b), tibi is the indirect object of licet. In (c), hoc faciās is the subject of licet.

(2) Can :

You can do this, Hoc facere potes.

(3) Must :

You must do this.	{	(a) Hoc tibi faciendum est.	}	oportet.
		(b) {			}
		1. Tē hoc facere
		2. Hoc faciās			necesse est.
		(c) {				}
		1. Tē hoc facere
2. Tibi hoc facere
3. Hoc faciās

These do not mean precisely the same thing : (a) denotes that something is to be done, (b) that the given action is fitting under the circumstances, (c) that it is inevitable.

(4) Ought :

You ought to do this.	{	(a) Hoc facere dēbēs.	}	oportet.
		(b) {			}
		1. Tē hoc facere
2. Hoc faciās

Of these, (a) denotes moral obligation ; while (b), as in (3), denotes what is fitting under the circumstances.

Past Tenses. Remember that with the verbs just mentioned the PRESENT tense of the infinitive must be used, only the auxiliary being put in the perfect tense. Thus,

www.libtool.com.cn

You ought to have done this.	}	(a)	Hoc facere dēbuisti .	}	oportuit .
He could have gone, Ire potuit, etc.	}	(b)	{ 1. Tē hoc facere 2. Hoc facerēs }

EXERCISE XIII

1. Cannot the walls of a private house keep the words of the conspirators (conspiracy) secret? 2. The wise are in the habit of doing (are wont to do) not what they desire, but what they can. 3. Ought that [man] to be put to death through whose efforts we have lately been freed from fear? 4. How exceedingly I think they are to be feared, you may appreciate from this (hence). 5. He wants to be just; we know that he would rather pardon [them] all than force any one to be dragged to [his] death. 6. He ought not to have hesitated to start, for with our help he could easily have resisted the robbers. 7. He thought that he ought to go to Manlius at (to) Faesulae, for he had heard that he had forbidden any one to approach the city. 8. I will not permit, I will not suffer those who ought to have left the city long ago by command of the consul to remain in order to (ad) destroy the commonwealth. 9. He had made up his mind to give up (cease from) this attempt, for he realized that he could not without danger attain that [end] which he nevertheless most madly desired. 10. It is permissible for me to do many things which nevertheless I see should not be done; for a just and patriotic man wishes to obey not only the laws but the gods also. 11. Whether you wish this or do not wish it, it is inevitable that what-you-possess (ista) be resigned to some fugitive-slave or gladiator. 12. Is it not easier to seem good than to be good? 13. It is not so hard, is it? to command others to be good as to try to do these same things ourselves. 14. I am not now beginning to do the work; for many years I have been doing (pres.) this same thing which you have lately begun, and of which you ought to have made a beginning long ago. 15. We both dare and are ready to attempt everything which brave and patriotic men may honorably do.

CONNECTED PROSE

In the senate at Rome one of the senators said that he had never (denied that he had ever) tried to harm the commonwealth. He further said both that it could not be harmed at all by him (nothing could be harmed to it by himself), and that it was much easier for one (aliquis) to charge others with doing a wrong than to be just and brave himself. Some, however, thought that he ought not to have said this (pl.).

HINTS

www.libtool.com.cn

Purpose Clauses in English. In the sentence

He left all to save his country,

notice that to save

(a) is adverbial, modifying left, and

(b) may be replaced by a clause beginning "in order that," without affecting the sense. Thus,

He left all in order that he might save his country,

which becomes in Latin,

Omnia reliquit ut patriam servāret.

This furnishes a test by which to distinguish the English infinitive expressing purpose from other uses of the infinitive. Remember that the infinitive must not be used to express purpose in Latin.

Relative Clauses of Purpose. The difference between a purpose clause introduced by a conjunction and one introduced by a relative is largely a matter of emphasis. Thus, if we analyze these two ways of expressing He sent a certain man to fire the town, we get

(a) Quendam misit

ut oppidum incenderet.

and (b) Quendam misit

quī oppidum incenderet.

In (a) ut . . . incenderet is adverbial, modifying and so emphasizing misit. In (b) quī . . . incenderet is adjectival, modifying and so emphasizing quendam. In (a) the dependent clause merely tells us what the purpose was in sending. In (b) we think of the purpose in close connection with the one who was to carry it out. In general, the relative form is more common when the purpose can be referred to an antecedent in this way.

Negative Clauses. As a negative purpose clause must be introduced by nē, the English cannot always be literally translated as it can be in negative clauses of result. Compare the following :

RESULT	PURPOSE
that no one . . . . ut nēmō . . .	nē quis . . . (literally, lest any one).
that nothing . . . . ut nihil . . .	nē quid . . . (literally, lest anything).
that never . . . . ut numquam	nē umquam (literally, lest ever).
that nowhere . . . . ut nusquam	nē usquam (literally, lest anywhere).

Quō. Do not forget that purpose clauses containing a comparative are regularly introduced by quō. Thus,

He said this, the more easily to escape blame,

Haec dixit, quō facilius culpam vitāret (literally, whereby he might more easily escape blame).

Sequence of Tenses. We are familiar with this in English. For instance, we say

I do this that I may help you, but I did this that I might help you.

It is easy to master the restrictions which Latin places on the use of the tenses of the subjunctive by observing how they are used in each construction. Thus :

Clauses of purpose use only two tenses — present and imperfect.

Clauses of result use three commonly, — present, imperfect, and perfect, — the last of these without regard to the usual law that it must follow only principal tenses.

Subjunctive by Attraction. This construction is not so mysterious as it seems. Precisely as many people say "those kind of things" instead of the grammatically correct "that kind of things," because the word "things" comes into their minds before the word "kind," so when one sets out to use a clause containing a subjunctive, he will often half unconsciously put in the subjunctive the verb of some other clause which is intimately connected in thought with the original clause. But this was not by any means an invariable rule; the mood of the speaker determined the mood of the verb.

It should also be remembered that many subjunctives referred to the principle of "attraction" are better explained as indirect discourse.

EXERCISE XIV

1. He rushed out of the senate-house to escape [from] those who wished to lay violent hands on him. 2. We must make war on Mithridates, so that that wicked [man] may not deprive our tributaries of [their] liberty. 3. Ambassadors were sent to Caesar to ask for aid, and-he (use rel.) was so touched by their entreaties that they were enabled to gain every [favor] that they asked. 4. Quirites, [for] our generals so to be engaged among the allies and foreign nations as to (that they) have no thought (consider nothing else) except about glory and the public interests is not an easy [thing] to do. 5. It is hard to say how we are hated by foreign nations on account of the outrageous conduct (outrages) of those whom we have sent to them in recent years with a general's authority. 6. It is hard to say whether Catiline set out for Faesulae in order to take the place of Manlius, or to escape the severity of the laws. 7. With your eyes and ears, Quirites, observe these proofs of the crime, for they are (which are) so clear that now it seems that not men but the immortal gods brought them to our notice. 8. The conspirators did not think that they were safe within the city's defenses, nor (not) within the walls of a private house, where (whither) they had gathered so that the night might be able to conceal their infamous assemblies by its darkness. 9. Now change that purpose of yours, Catiline, that no one may be able to know how many times you have aimed at the consul's life. 10. The city is protected by such strong (tantus) guards that no one can go out or in without the order of the consul. 11. The guards will watch faithfully, so that no harm can be done (nothing can be harmed) to the city by depraved citizens. 12. They watched so faithfully that neither Catiline's madness nor the cruelty of Lentulus could do any harm (harm anything) to the city. 13. Soon with all his forces he will set out from that camp at Faesulae for Rome, in order to (ad) set the temples and dwellings of the city on fire with torches, to lead the women and children into slavery, [and] to lay waste the whole commonwealth with fire and sword. 14. [It is] for the purpose of checking these designs [that] I have come here, so that (quod) you may be the better able to resist those desperate [men]. 15. He hopes to institute (make) such a massacre that no one will be left even to tell of the ruin of this great and powerful nation (so great a power).

CONNECTED PROSE

Those who had won in this fight (abl. of means) behaved so that it was hard to tell whether the survivors dreaded their prowess or esteemed their humanity the more. For they had not come into these parts (regions) to exercise their authority cruelly, but to restore peace.

LESSON XV

SUBSTANTIVE CLAUSES WITH UT AND NĒ

www.libtool.com.cn

1. Substantive Clauses of Purpose (Final Clauses): G. 544. II; 546. I, 2, Remarks 2, 3; 548; 549. A. 560; 561. a; 563. a, b, 1, 2, c-e; 558. b. B. 294; 295. 1-5, a; 296. 1. H. 563; 564. I, II; 565. 1-5; 566; 568. 2, 6-8. HB. 502. 2, b, 3, a. Bn. 821; 825-827.
2. Substantive Clauses of Result (Consecutive Clauses): G. 553. 1, (2), 3, 4. A. 568 and Note 1; 569. 1. B. 297, complete. H. 594. II; 595. 1, 2; 596. 2. HB. 517. 3; 519. 4, a; 521. 3, a). Bn. 841-843.
3. Substantive Clauses of Fear: G. 550. 1, 2. A. 564. B. 296. 2. H. 567. 1, 2. HB. 502. 4. Bn. 838; 839.

HINTS

Substantive Clauses of Purpose. Review the list of verbs which may be followed by an infinitive, given in Lesson XIII. Then learn the following list of very common verbs which require the subjunctive with ut or nē.

peto, ask (request or demand).	hortor, urge, encourage.
postulō, ask (as a right).	moneō, advise, warn.
quaerō, ask (inquire).	persuādeō, persuade.
rogō, ask (in any way).	imperō, command.

It should be remembered that these lists are typical, not complete. Furthermore, there are verbs in each list which sometimes are followed by other constructions than those indicated.

Double Use of the Same Verb. Verbs often take different constructions according to their meaning. Thus,

I persuaded them to leave is Illis persuāsi ut discēderent;
 but I persuaded them that he had left is Illis persuāsi eum discessisse.

In the first case, to leave is in the subjunctive because it expresses something willed or intended; in the second case, I persuaded them means I convinced them, that is, made them believe, and so is followed by the infinitive of indirect discourse.

EXERCISE XV

1. The outcome was that the soldiers preferred to return to the place (thither) whence they had come [rather] than to advance farther. 2. From these circumstances it came to pass that the people were afraid that the slaves who favored Catiline's cause (pl. of rēs) would be aroused to [~~the point of making~~] war. 3. Those who seemed to fear that the consul would not have a sufficient force to (ad) accomplish these ends (things) were told that they had very little cause for alarm (that they should be alarmed very little). 4. It was replied that he had not yet been induced to do what (that which) was in harmony with the principles of the ancients. 5. Will he be able to bring his mind to the point of going (to go) into exile? Will he not be afraid that as an exile he may die among strangers? — that they will not even bury one (is) whom they have always looked upon as (deemed) an enemy? 6. These were instructed to be obedient to the consul. 7. They were likewise instructed that the consul was aiding, watching, providing for the commonwealth, so that they might be unable (neg. with possum) to do it any (quid) harm. 8. The senate decreed that the consuls should look to it that the commonwealth should suffer no harm (not take anything of harm). 9. This is the advice he gave me (this he advised me): not to be afraid that he would not have the city defended. 10. Be sure to play (be) the man, that you may not appear cowardly. 11. The praetor urged the people to place Pompey in command of this important (this so great) war, and not (nēve) to make the mistake of honoring any one with so great an office who was neither worthy of respect nor well qualified for the conduct of (ger.) a war. 12. It happened that no one could persuade him that this civil war amounted to (was) anything. 13. I do not command you to go into exile, but I should like (subj. of volō) to recommend this to you. 14. One class of the conspirators, which was burdened with debt, he reminded of their danger, and urged them for the future to avoid the suspicion of crime. 15. I beseech you to do what your representatives promised me you would do.

CONNECTED PROSE

The senate decreed that all who in any place (everywhere) had been Catiline's accomplices should be reckoned as (deemed) enemies, and that no one should be pardoned who had been declared guilty of the murder of citizens. From this (which things) it came to pass that the number of those who were taking refuge in (fleeing to) Manlius' camp was increasing day by day. /

LESSON XVI

QUĪN AND QUŌ MINUS. CLAUSES OF CHARACTERISTIC

1. Clauses of Characteristic: G. 631. 1, 2, Remark. A. 537. 2, Notes; 535. a, Notes 1, 2, b. B. 283. 1, 2, 4; 282. 3; 284. 2. H. 591. 1, 2, 4, 5, 7. HB. 513. 3; 515. 2; 517. 2; 519. 2; 521. 1, a, b, c. Bn. 798.
2. Quīn and Quō minus: G. 547; 548. Note 2; 549; 554; 555. 1, 2; 556. A. 558. a, b; 559. B. 283. 4; 284. 3; 295. 3; 298. H. 595. 1, 2, 4; 568 and 8. HB. 502. 3, b); 519. 4, b); 521. 1, 2, 3, b). Bn. 802; 829; 832-834.

HINTS

Verbs of Hindering and Refusing. Latin sometimes regards a clause dependent on such a verb as final, sometimes as consecutive. For practical purposes, follow this rule:

(a) If the verb of hindering is not negated, use nē or quō minus with the subjunctive.

(b) If the verb of hindering is negated, use quō minus or quā with the subjunctive. Thus,

- |   |   |                                      |   |                             |
|---|---|--------------------------------------|---|-----------------------------|
| (a) I will hinder you from doing that,     | {   | (1) Tē impediam nē id faciās. | } | quō minus id faciās. |
| (b) I will not hinder you from doing that, |   | (2) Tē impediam               |   |                             |
| {   | (3) Tē nōn impediam                | }                                    |   |                             |
|   | (4) Tē nōn impediam quā id faciās. |                                      |   |                             |

Similarly,

- |   |   |                                      |   |                            |
|---|---|--------------------------------------|---|----------------------------|
| (a) They refused to come.        | {   | (1) Recūsāvērunt ne venīrent. | } | quō minus venīrent. |
| (b) They did not refuse to come, |   | (2) Recūsāvērunt              |   |                            |
| {                                       | (3) Nōn recūsāvērunt               | }                                    |   |                            |
|   | (4) Nōn recūsāvērunt quā venīrent. |                                      |   |                            |

Clauses of Characteristic. In deciding whether to use the indicative or subjunctive in a relative clause, the first thing to consider is the ANTECEDENT. Subjoined is a list of the antecedents most commonly accompanied by a relative clause with the verb in the subjunctive. The general distinction between relative clauses which take the indicative and those which take the subjunctive will appear from the following: the sentence

Nōn is est quī civitatī insidiātur, He is not the man who is plotting against the state, means merely that on this particular occasion this man is not a conspirator; but

Nōn is est quī civitatī insidiētur, He is not the man to (who would) plot against the state, means more — that not only is this man not at present a conspirator, but that he does not belong to the conspirator class.

It will be safest, until you are very familiar with the construction, to restrict your use of such clauses to those which correspond with the following list.

www.libtool.com.cn

Typical Clauses of Characteristic

(a) He is	$\left\{ \begin{array}{l} \textit{suitable} \\ \textit{worthy} \\ \textit{unworthy} \end{array} \right\}$	$\left\{ \begin{array}{l} \textit{to receive.} \\ \textit{honor,} \end{array} \right\}$	$\left\{ \begin{array}{l} 1. \textit{Idōneus} \\ 2. \textit{Dignus} \\ 3. \textit{Indignus} \end{array} \right\}$	$\left\{ \begin{array}{l} \textit{est quī} \\ \textit{honōre} \\ \textit{adfiātur.} \end{array} \right\}$
-----------	---	---	---	---

2 and 3 may also be translated worthy (unworthy) of receiving honor.
This is worth hearing would be Hoc dignum est quod audiātur.

(b) There are	$\left\{ \begin{array}{l} \textit{those} \\ \textit{some} \end{array} \right\}$	$\left\{ \begin{array}{l} \textit{who say this is unjust,} \end{array} \right\}$
---------------	---	--

Sunt quī dicant hoc iniūstum esse.

(d) Those disagreements were such that they were settled by the massacre of citizens, Illae dissēsiōnēs erant eius modī quae (ut) interneciōne civium diiūdicātae sint.

(e) He was the only one who could not be persuaded,

1. Sōtus	$\left\{ \begin{array}{l} \textit{erat cui} \textit{ persuādēri nōn} \textit{ posset.} \end{array} \right\}$
2. Ūnus

(f) Who is there who does not love his country? Quis est quī patriam nōn amet (quīn patriam amet)?

Other forms will be recognized by their general similarity to the above types.

The First Periphrastic Conjugation. As has been already noticed (Lesson XI), this combination of the future participle with forms of the verb sum is used instead of a simple future to denote intention, probability, and the like.

In the subjunctive, this construction will be found chiefly in the following cases :

- (1) After negative expressions of doubt ; as,

Nōn erat dubium quā victūrī essent,
There was no doubt that they would (were going to) win.

- (2) In indirect questions ; as,

Interrogāvī quid factūrus essēs,
I asked what you

{	were going to do,
	would do,
	intended to do, etc.

- (3) In subordinate clauses in indirect discourse ; as,

Crēdō praeium quod dux militī datūrus sit magnum esse,
I believe that the reward which the general will give the soldier is a large one.

In substantive clauses of fear, clauses of purpose, and most other subjunctive constructions, the fact that the subjunctive expresses an act as willed or intended is enough, with the aid of the context, to express futurity without the aid of this construction. The first periphrastic is, therefore, an "emergency" construction, only to be used when the meaning would not otherwise be clear.

EXERCISE XVI

1. There is no doubt that he will not go with me.
2. I have already refused this, and I shall certainly always refuse to try to prevent those from returning home who do not wish to advance with us.
3. In fact there are those who still believe that Catiline hates Manlius and is hated by him.
4. No one could hinder them from confessing all that had been both done and said at Laeca's house.
5. The consul said, "There is no one who doubts that with your guilty conscience you know that these things are true."
6. Said he, "I was the only one who could not be persuaded to give (dīcō) evidence. 7. "Who," said he, "is there to whom the sight of the city, the possession of liberty, [and] finally life itself is not only not highly prized (dear), but also agreeable and charming?" 8. There ought to be no one who would not hesitate to do harm to his native land. 9. He is [a] suitable [person] on whom to bestow this most important (so great) office (on whom this . . . may be bestowed). 10. I cannot be discouraged from bringing aid to those who are in difficulties in the line of battle. 11. I have nothing to reply (rel. clause of char.) to those who say that they are not troubled by their faults. 12. There is no reason why you should say this so many times; I do not doubt that he can feign ~~and dissemble~~ everything. 13. The consul did not doubt that it was more important (greater) to make sure that the absent should have somewhere (quō) to return to [as] victors than to open provinces to us. 14. Who doubts that those disagreements were such that they did not contemplate the destruction of the commonwealth? 15. He objected strongly to revealing to the gladiators what he had overheard. 16. Who is so reckless, so insane, as not to desire to hinder those from escaping who, relying on the protection of that scoundrel, have dared to disagree with this view?

CONNECTED PROSE

In a speech which he delivered before the Quirites the consul impressed upon (showed) them that they must in no way doubt that their wives, their children, their dwellings, and their temples could all be rendered safe. ~~And~~ ~~yet~~ he did ~~not~~ deny that there were certain [individuals] who desired to hinder him by every [possible] means from averting this great (this so great) danger from the citizens.

LESSON XVII

EXPRESSIONS OF CAUSE. SUBSTANTIVE CLAUSES.

WITH QUOD

1. Cum Causal: G. 586. A. 549. B. 286. 2. H. 598. HB. 525; 526. Bn. 892.
2. Quod, Quia and Quoniam: G. 540-542; 525. 1-3; 610. A. 540. 1, 2, Notes; 572. a, b. B. 286. 1, b, c; 299 complete; 331. V, a. H. 588. I, II, 2, 3, Note, 4. HB. 552. 1, 2; 555. Bn. 822; 823; 886-888.
3. Relative Clauses of Cause: G. 633. A. 535. e. B. 283. 3, a). H. 592. HB. 523. Bn. 807.

HINTS

With cum causal, the reason is regarded as being the circumstances under which the main action occurs; with quia and quod causal, the reason is given simply as a fact; with quoniam, its truth is assumed to be admitted by the person addressed.

The relative causal clause is really a form of the clause of characteristic. Thus, in the sentence,

O fortunāte adulēscēns, quī tuae virtūtis Homērum praecōnem invēneris,

O happy youth, { to have found since you have found } a Homer as the herald of your prowess,

quī invēneris means literally "as being one who," etc. The reason is implied rather than stated.

EXERCISE XVII

1. Because they cannot see the danger with their eyes, they pretend, forsooth, that we ought to keep silent, for-fear-that (lest) that incorrigible should be angry! 2. They pretend that they have kept still so long because they feared assassination [at the hands] of Catiline. 3. What I purpose, that I perform; not because this is easy, but since only in this way do I feel that I am worthy to be called a man. 4. I am not afraid of him, because, as (what) I have always wished, a wall stands between me and him. 5. Since, as you know, I was not present at these deliberations, I cannot help asking you what was said there. 6. I ought to be especially glad of this — not that I seem to myself to be possessed of great talent, but that such a case has been presented to me that in it (in which) words (a speech) can fail no one. 7. It was quickly Archias' good fortune to outstrip all [competitors] in the reputation for (gen.) talent; there was the additional circumstance that many showed him attentions who were more anxious to be considered wise than to be wise. 8. Since that king has now been reigning for twenty years (is now reigning for the twentieth year) who assigned so many of the citizens to his soldiers to butcher, why do we not get that thoroughgoing scoundrel (most wicked [man]) out of the way, in defense of our altars and hearths, our wives and children, our dwellings and our temples? 9. He is violently enraged (angry) because of Catiline's madness in hoping (because he hopes) to be king of Italy. 10. Since you yourself will not (are unwilling to) read what is written on the tablets, I must needs read them to you, that you may the more easily understand how you are hated by all good men. 11. Because that person (iste) lives — nay, even comes into the senate — how, pray, do you think we should feel (it should be borne by us)? 12. On account of the glare (light) of the conflagration, which could be seen from a distance, he was afraid that he had brought aid to his comrades too late. 13. Inasmuch as he can often be seen within the walls and even in the senate, there is danger that (lest) some may not be able to understand how, since these things are so, he can be an enemy. 14. Such being the case, hear what opinion the leaders of the senate, the most august and influential deliberative-body in (of) the whole world, have formed of (about) him. 15. They assure us (dat.) that his crimes are neither unknown nor few (not many), wherefore he must be resisted by every [possible] means.

CONNECTED PROSE

Then you were at Laeca's on that night, Catiline! There is the additional circumstance that on many previous occasions (many times before) you have plotted against the consul's life. Such being the case, I advise you to [make your] escape at once; not because I fear you, but because I do not wish even you to be killed.

LESSON XVIII

CONCESSIVE (ADVERSATIVE) CLAUSES

1. Indicative Alone: G. 605. A. 527. d, Note. B. 309. 2. H. 586. I. HB. 554; 556. Bn. 894.
2. Subjunctive Alone: G. 587; 606-608. A. 549; 527. a, b. B. 309. 1, 3, 4. H. 586. II; 598. HB. 526 and a; 532. 2, a, b. Bn. 898; 900.
3. Indicative or Subjunctive: G. 604. A. 527. c. B. 309. 2. H. 585. HB. 582. 8. Bn. 897.
4. Relative Clauses of Concession: G. 634. A. 535. e. B. 283. 3; b). H. 593. 2. HB. 523. Bn. 807.

HINTS

Choice of a Conjunction.

(a) With the indicative.

Quamquam means in spite of the fact that . . .

(b) With the subjunctive.

Quamvis means however much the assumption be true that . . .

Licet means granting that . . .

(c) Indicative or subjunctive.

Etsi, etiamsi, tametsi may be used where the "although" really means "even if."

Do not use quamquam if the "although" clause states something merely assumed, as "Let justice be done, though the heavens fall."

Cum Concessive. As cum temporal, when followed by the subjunctive, gives the circumstances which incidentally mark the time of an action, and cum causal the circumstances which are the cause of an action, so cum concessive (adversative) gives circumstances in spite of which the action occurs. The context alone determines which meaning cum shall receive. Similarly in English, the temporal conjunction when can take on both causal and concessive meanings. Thus, (Temporal) When I was asked to come, I could not refuse.

(Causal) I could not refuse, when they seemed so anxious that I should come. (When = since; because of the circumstance that.)

(Adversative) I stayed at home, when I ought to have gone out. (When = although; in spite of the circumstance that.)

EXERCISE XVIII

1. Although Catiline had predicted that the consul would be killed in the Campus [Martius], he could not keep many [people] from warning him of (dē) this (so) great danger. 2. However much Manlius' camp felt the need of him as general, Catiline did not dare to leave (set out from) the city. 3. Granted that this (pl.) is true, I must not raise a disturbance by my official act (in the name of the state). 4. Albeit we are willing to keep silent about the death of his former wife, we cannot help saying a great deal (multa) about the crimes which were committed (done) after that. 5. Even if he has provided firebrands for setting the city on fire, he has succeeded-in nothing which he hoped to be able<sup>1</sup> to do. 6. Then Cethegus, although (quī) a little while before he had made some answer (replied something) about the crimes of Catiline, denied that he had ever heard anything about this matter. 7. Notwithstanding that he came to [take part in] the naval war, nevertheless all the on-slaughts of Mithridates were checked / <sup>adventu</sup> at his coming. 8. Notwithstanding they had fought (used) successful battles, nevertheless they missed their friends sorely (greatly). 9. Although I have tried by every means [in my power] to check the attacks of-the-people, nevertheless I am afraid that I cannot hinder ~~the plebs~~ from providing firebrands for setting the city on fire. 10. However many may have promised (subj.) to die in Caesar's behalf, there is no doubt that the same [persons] would prefer to live with Pompey. 11. Granted that this evil has existed for many years, what reason is there why we should suffer it to exist longer? 12. Although the men of Chios are said to have claimed Homer as their own, they could not help many others' insisting that he belonged to them (was theirs). 13. Although Caesar was unable to avenge this villainy, yet he asserted that he recoiled from [the thought of] so great a crime. 14. Although the air (breath) of heaven can in no way be delightful to him, perhaps he is waiting-to-see if his other accomplices in (of) crime are detected (subj.) by the senate. 15. Although he does not know who is responsible for (has done) this (so) great villainy, he surely knows well by what means it was done.

CONNECTED PROSE

Quirites, though many (and) great men enjoying the highest (amplus) honors at your hands (your highest honors) hope that you will not place Pompey in command of this (so) great war, yet you can of yourselves determine what is best to do (supine). ✓ For often before, as you remember, you have made it possible for all to see (brought it to pass that all could see) that you had more political insight (saw more in politics) than the-other-side [did].

LESSON XIX

TEMPORAL CLAUSES

1. Cum Temporal: G. 579 complete; 580; 581; 584; 585; 588; 242 and Remarks. A. 545. Note 1, a; 546. Notes 1-3, a; 547. B. 288. 1-3; 289 and a; 290. 1, 2. H. 597; 600. I, 1, II, 1; 601. 1, 2, 4. HB. 521. 1, b, c; 524; 540 and a; 550 and a. Bn. 856-861.
2. Ubi; Postquam; Simul atque, etc.: G. 561. A. 543 and a. B. 287. 1-3. H. 602. 1, 2. HB. 550; 557 and a. Bn. 870; 871.

HINTS

Cum Temporal. The indicative with cum is chiefly used for the purpose of emphasizing the fact that two actions occurred at identically the same time. Both verbs are then in the same tense. When the important idea is, not that the actions were simultaneous, but that the situation described in the cum-clause formed the circumstances under which the action of the main clause occurred, then (of past events) we shall have cum with the imperfect or pluperfect subjunctive; and to this class belong the majority of the temporal cum-clauses which one is likely to use.

Future Time. Cum, like si, when referring to the future, takes a future or future perfect indicative, where English prefers the present or perfect. Thus,

(a) When you are away, I shall not forget you,

Cum aberis, tuī nōn oblivīscar.

(b) When Caesar has conquered the Gauls, let him (then) celebrate a triumph.

Caesar cum Gallōs superāverit tum triumphet.

EXERCISE XIX

1. When he had gone (proficīscor) to Sicily, and when he was returning from that province, he came to Heraclia.
 2. At the time (then) when I was driving him from the city, I foresaw this in (with) my mind. 3. When you consider, Quirites, how much courage he possesses (there is in him), how much refinement, how much integrity, then you will more easily be able to understand why all the allies have desired and demanded him for this most dangerous war. 4. The conspirators had not yet left the house of Marcus Brutus when the consul was informed of all their plans. 5. After he had read the books, he said, "the man (is) who can write such [things] should be accounted worthy of the greatest praise." 6. As soon as we arrived at the Forum, we were surprised that so many citizens had gathered at (to) the same place. 7. The moment he caught sight of Catiline, the consul said, "Oh, the difficult problem (wretched condition) of saving the commonwealth!" 8. On hearing (as he heard) this word, Catiline said that no one would venture (dared) to say that he had ever attempted to harm his native land. 9. As soon as I was able, I came here to ask your mercy (mercy from you) for (gen.) my many great crimes. 10. As soon as ever Archias grew out of boyhood (went forth from the boys), he devoted himself to the pursuit of writing. 11. On the one hand, he realized that this was being done in accordance with the man's (is) deserts, and on the other, he thought that it was greatly to the advantage of the state for the influence of Indutiomarus to be as strong as possible among his own [people]. 12. After those (iste) [persons] realized that his life was most carefully (with the highest carefulness) guarded, they formed another plan, full of criminal daring (crime and daring). 13. He said that after they realized that they were given no opportunity of committing (doing) a murder, they had formed another (and) more daring plan. 14. Then, as soon as Catiline saw that they had come together, although he had frequently had many discussions (discussed many [things]) with them individually (one at a time), yet he made a speech like this (of this kind). 15. Although the facts were plain and open, there were [some] who pretended to think that this criminal had been unjustly brought to trial. 16. Whenever he sees me, he tells me what he has been doing. 17. Whenever the citizens saw Catiline, they wondered whether he would leave Rome.

CONNECTED PROSE: A ROMAN LETTER

Cicero sends greeting to his Terentia. If you are well, I am glad (bene est). I am well.<sup>1</sup> Although I have<sup>2</sup> nothing to write (which I may write) to you about myself, yet after I had heard that you were worried by reports emanating-from (of) those who said that I would be driven into exile, it seemed that I ought to inform you as soon as possible that there was no truth (nothing of true) in those rumors, and that no one would dare to hinder me from returning home as soon as I had completed the-arrangements (ea) which had to be made about my consulship. Be sure to take care of your health. Good-bye.

<sup>2</sup> In letters, the writer often puts himself mentally in the attitude of the recipient, and so uses past tenses of present events which will be past when the letter arrives. These are called epistolary tenses.

LESSON XX

TEMPORAL CLAUSES—Continued

1. Antequam and Priusquam: G. 574-577. A. 550; 551. c. B. 291; 292. H. 605. I, II, 1. HB. 507. 4, a)-d); 571; 550. b. Bn. 862-866.
2. Dum and Quoad: G. 568-572. A. 552-556. B. 293. I-III. H. 603; 604. HB. 507. 5; 571; 550. b; 559; 560. Bn. 876; 878; 881; 884.

HINTS

With antequam and priusquam, before, and dum and quoad, until, the mood to be employed is subjunctive or indicative according as the act described is conceived as anticipated, or as merely occurring. Thus,

Caesar captured the spies before they could get away, means that he anticipated their escape, and succeeded in preventing it. Therefore we have the subjunctive:

Caesar speculātōrēs comprehendit priusquam effugere possent.

But in the sentence

I had learned this fact before I reached home, we have a mere succession of events: the time of the occurrence is the important detail. Therefore the indicative is used:

Hanc rem cōgnōveram priusquam domum pervēnī.

In practice this rule is not quite consistently carried out. Observe particularly the statements of the grammar about

dum, and for antequam and priusquam use the following table, as covering most cases :<sup>1</sup>

www.libtool.com.cn

Present

1. With affirmative leading clause, priusquam with pres. subj.
2. With negative leading clause, priusquam with perf. ind.
(Such sentences usually denote customary or repeated action.)

Past

3. With affirmative leading clause, priusquam with imperf. subj. or perf. indic.
4. With negative leading clause, priusquam with perf. indic. But to express design the imperf. subj. may be used.

Future

5. With affirmative leading clause, priusquam with pres. indic. (but if the leading verb is an imperative, use priusquam with pres. subj.).
6. With negative leading clause, priusquam with fut. perf. indic.

Until. Note that after a negative leading clause, if before may be substituted for the until without altering the meaning, priusquam and not dum must be used. Thus,
And they did not stay their flight until (= before) they reached the Rhine,

Neque prius fugere dēstitērunt quam ad Rhēnum pervēnērunt.

Before and After. The sentence

He returned four years  $\left\{ \begin{array}{l} \textit{after (adv.)}, \\ \textit{afterwards} \end{array} \right.$

may be expressed as follows :

If after be the conjunction, we may have these forms and two others in addition. Thus,

He returned four years after he had set out,

www.libtool.com.cn

- |                         |                                |
|-------------------------|--------------------------------|
| (a) Quattuor post annis | } revertit quam profectus est. |
| (b) Quattuor annis post |                                |
| (c) Post quattuor annōs |                                |
| (d) Post quārtum annum  |                                |
| (e) Quārtō annō post    |                                |

The same principles apply also to antequam and priusquam.

EXERCISE XX

1. Before I come to the point where I shall call for your vote (recur to the vote), I will say a few [words] about myself. 2. It is our desire (pleases us) that the letter be opened (inf.) by you before you lay it before the senate. 3. That it might be possible for a delay to occur (that space might be able to intervene) until the soldiers for whom he had made requisition should assemble, he replied to the envoys that he would take time to think the matter over (for deliberating). 4. While this (pl.) was going on, it was reported to Caesar that the horsemen were drawing nearer to the hillock. 5. While we live (are alive), let us live! 6. As long as the consul shall live he will be able to defend those [measures] which you decide on (fut. perf.), and to execute them by himself. 7. Catiline would not have proclaimed (plup. subj.) the republic's day of destruction and doom so long in advance. 8. Four days before he was brought to trial, it is said that he promised a certain slave to give him his liberty. 9. Five years later (after), he returned to Rome. 10. Five years after his return (he returned) to Rome, he was forced to [make his] escape a second time, because certain crimes, committed many years before, had been reported to the senate. 11. A few days after Caesar reached there, he demanded hostages and all their weapons. 12. They will not stop retreating until they reach the Rhine. 13. As long as there were others to defend your cause, I thought that all my time ought to be devoted to the demands (times) of my friends. 14. They did not let the leaders go from the meeting until they agreed (it had been yielded by them) to their taking arms and pressing on (contendō) to the camp (that they should take, etc.). 15. Forty-nine days after leaving Brundisium (on the forty-ninth day after he set out from, etc.), he annexed the whole of Cilicia to the domain of the Roman people.

CONNECTED PROSE

Of (ex) all these [men], Catiline was alone to be feared, but [only] for such time as he was found (contained) within the walls of the city. For after he left the city, even before he reached Manlius' camp, we perceived that as it were a mass-of-corruption (cesspool), great and perilous to the state, had been removed (drawn out).

LESSON XXI

CONDITIONAL SENTENCES

1. Protasis and Apodosis (Condition and Conclusion): G. 589-592; 496. 1, 2. A. 512. a, c; 525. a, c. B. 301; 306. 1-4. H. 572; 575. 1-6. HB. 573; 574; 577; 578. 1-3. Bn. 907-910.

2. Indicative in Conditional Sentences: G. 595; 242. Remarks 1, 2. A. 515; 516. 1, a, c, d. B. 302. 1, 3, 4; 261. 1. HB. 575. A; 579, a. Bn. 911; 914.

3. Subjunctive in Conditional Sentences: G. 596 and 1; 597. A. 514. B, 2, a, b, C, 1, 2. B. 303; 304. H. 576; 577; 579. HB. 580, a; 581. Bn. 915; 917; 919-921.

HINTS

In turning a conditional sentence into Latin, we should first make sure whether the supposition is in present, past, or future time. To do this, one must observe both condition (protasis) and conclusion (apodosis), because in English the tense of the verb does not always show the time of the sentence. For instance, the protasis "If I saw" can refer to present, past, or future suppositions. Thus:

- (1) If I saw him (yesterday), I did not (then) recognize him. (Past time.)
- (2) If I saw him (at this moment), I should not (now) be looking for him. (Present time.)
- (3) If I saw him (to-morrow), I should probably not recognize him (then). (Future time.)

Notice that in each case the form of the conclusion makes the time of the whole sentence clear, even if the words "yesterday," "to-morrow," etc., are omitted.

By adding the words "now," "previously," or "subsequently," to a conditional sentence, and observing which one seems to fit, it is often possible to determine the time of the sentence more readily than by other means. Thus, in the sentence,

If you understood this, I should not be explaining it,
the full thought is clearly,

If you understood this now, I should not now be explaining it.

Having determined the time, the next step is to find whether one must use the indicative or the subjunctive. This may be done by attention to the formulas here presented.

I. Present Conditions

(a) If this is so, it is fortunate. (Nothing assumed: takes pres. indic.)

(b) If this were so (which it is not), it would be fortunate. (Supposition assumed to be untrue: takes imperf. subj.)

II. Past Conditions

(a) If this was so, it was fortunate. (Nothing assumed: takes imperf. or perf. indic.)

(b) If this had been so (which it was not), it would have been fortunate. (Supposition assumed to be untrue: takes pluperf. subj.)

III. Future Conditions

(a) If he (actually) comes, all will be glad to see him. (Assumes the future event as a reality: takes fut. or fut. perf. indic.)

(b) If he should (by any chance) come, all would be glad to see him. (Assumes the future event as a more remote possibility: takes pres. or perf. subj.)

Finally, notice how, in the protasis of a future condition, English is apt to use a present tense where Latin employs a future or a future perfect. Thus, English says,

If Caesar conquers, he will spare the captives;

but Latin would make the protasis,

If Caesar shall conquer or

If Caesar shall have conquered,

Caesar si superābit or superāverit, captivis parcerit or pepererit.

EXERCISE XXI

1. If Catiline is standing in the Comitium armed (with a weapon), why does not the consul have him arrested? 2. If he passes over this, [namely] how many times that [man] has tried to kill him when consul, there is no doubt that it will be [the act] of a wise [man]. 3. If, as Cicero says (āiō), Catiline has accomplished nothing, why has he notwithstanding (nevertheless) never ceased to attempt and to wish? 4. If the sword had not fallen from his hand, would he not have tried to kill the consul? 5. If the city should be bare of defenders (a garrison), we should easily gain possession of it; but if, as you say, there are many to defend it, there will be need both of strategy [on the part] of the general and courage [on the part] of the soldiers. 6. If the Roman people were gentle to (in) its enemies, would not foreign nations dare many things which they now hesitate to do? 7. Whether, as he said, he thought that he must not be afraid of being too careful (too much carefulness must not be feared), or whether there was some other reason for [his] refusal (gen. of ger.), there is no doubt that he acted wisely. 8. Unless you surrender yourselves and all your [possessions] to us, you will lose not only your liberty, but even your lives (sing.). 9. If, according to his custom, he had asked the senators their opinion before he made his speech, no one could have accused him of betraying his country. 10. If you had said the same things as (which) the consul [did], you would have had to go into exile. 11. Unless you give me as many hostages as I have demanded, you will all be led into slavery. 12. Had you not given me such honor as no one within human recollection has attained, I should have no answer to make you (should not have what I might reply to you). 13. If the consul had been afraid of being too careful (too much diligence), we should not be safe now. 14. If you believe me, do not hinder this incorrigible from being punished by the state. 15. For if the commonwealth had punished him many years sooner (ante), so many great (so many and so great) dangers would not be threatening it now.

CONNECTED PROSE

You have asked me, friends, if I thought that this [man] should be punished. But I have no answer to make (see Sentence 12), for if he (iste) should be visited with punishment, there is no doubt that many would say that it was an act of cruel arrogance on the part of the consul (had been done cruelly and arrogantly by the consul); but if I should adopt some milder method (should do something milder), I am afraid that at some time every one would think that the government had been administered by me with scant fidelity (too little diligently).

LESSON XXII

OPTATIVE SUBJUNCTIVE. CLAUSES OF PROVISO. CONDITIONAL CLAUSES OF COMPARISON

1. Optative Subjunctive: G. 260; 261. A. 441; 442. B. 279. 1, 2. H. 558. 1, 2. HB. 510. a; 511. 1. Bn. 773.
2. Clauses of Proviso: G. 573. A. 528. B. 310. I, II. H. 587. HB. 529. Bn. 929.
3. Conditional Clauses of Comparison: G. 602. A. 524. B. 307. 1, 2. H. 584. 1-4. HB. 504. 3, a. Bn. 928.

HINTS

Optative Subjunctive. Notice that the tenses refer to the same time as in conditional sentences taking the subjunctive; the present subjunctive referring to future time, the imperfect to present time, and the pluperfect to past time.

Conditional Clauses of Comparison. Notice especially that while these apparently resemble contrary to fact conditions, the tense-use is different; the present referring to present time and the imperfect to past time.

EXERCISE XXII

1. He says that he is innocent, as if we did not know how often he has refused to obey the laws. 2. The consul will be freed from great apprehension (fear), if only there is a wall between him and Catiline. 3. They feared the cruelty of the absent Ariovistus as if he were present. 4. He did not dread any one's ill-will, provided that through his efforts dignity and safety were secured for the Roman people. 5. May that band not have more power than the [combined] majesty of the republic and yourselves. 6. Would that he had taken their life from the villains! 7. If only you understood how greatly you are mistaken (follow sequence) when you say that I have harmed the commonwealth! 8. If only Jupiter help us, in three days we shall reach Italy. 9. If he should not stand by you, how would you accomplish that which you hope to do? 10. O that you believed me as (in what manner) I believe you! 11. If I did not believe you, I could not help hating you. 12. May it not happen that one (is) who has saved his country, rendered services to (served) the citizens, appeased the enemy [and] pleased all patriots, should be forced by profligate men to go into exile. 13. Would that you felt more grateful (had greater gratitude) to a man (is) who has never failed his country! 14. As long as you thank me, there is nothing I will not gladly do for you.<sup>1</sup>

CONNECTED PROSE

Would that you had such an abundance of brave and upright men, Quirites, that it was easy to put some one in charge of so great an enterprise (rēs) and so important a war! As-it-is, however, since Pompey is the only one who possesses all the highest qualifications (in whom are all the highest [things]), why do we hesitate to appoint him commander immediately, provided this can be done with the consent of the senators?

LESSON XXIII

CONDITIONAL SENTENCES IN INDIRECT DISCOURSE

Conditional Sentences in Indirect Discourse. (a) The Apodosis: G. 656, 2; 657-659. A. 589. 2, a, 1-3, b, 2-4, Note 1. B. 319. A; 320. A; 321. A. H. 646. 1, 2; 647. 1-3. HB. 534. 1, b; 581. b, 1. Bn. 979-982. (b) The Protasis: G. 595. Remark 1; 597. Remark 4; 656. 1, 3; 510. B. 589, 1, b, 1; 483; 485. g. B. 319. B, a; 320. B; 321. B; 267; 268. 4. H. 646; 647; 544; 545. HB. 534. 2, II; 536; 581. b, Note; 477. a. Bn. (same references as for Protasis).

HINTS

The Protasis. No new principle is involved. In writing the protasis of a conditional sentence in indirect discourse, notice whether the verb describes completed or incomplete action. If it describes completed action, it must be put in the perfect or pluperfect subjunctive, according to the sequence. If it describes incomplete action, use the present or imperfect subjunctive, according to the sequence. Remember that in these clauses the tense of the subjunctive does not indicate the time when the act occurs, but only whether it is conceived as completed or continuing at the time indicated in the apodosis. Thus, a future perfect indicative in protasis of the direct discourse would in indirect discourse become a perfect subjunctive if the sequence were primary, a pluperfect if the sequence were secondary.

The Apodosis. Here also no new principle is involved: the tense of the infinitive indicates the time of the original verb — present for present conditions, perfect for past, and future for future.

Contrary to Fact (Unreal) Conditions. The above rules are modified in the case of conditions contrary to fact, as noted in the references to the grammars.

EXERCISE XXIII

1. If you ask-my-advice, I recommend this to you. (a) The consul says that if he asks-his-advice, he recommends this to him. (b) He said that if he asked his advice, he recommended this to him. 2. If this happened to no one, it was surprising. (a) I think that if this happened, etc. (b) I thought, etc. 3. If I order you to be arrested forthwith (iam), I shall do right (adv.). (a) I believe, etc. (b) I believed, etc. 4. If your country should speak (talk) thus (haec) with you, she would deserve to gain her request. (a) He answers, etc. (b) He answered, etc. 5. If I could accomplish this by a [mere] word, I should be forcing out those very men. (a) He says, etc. (b) He said, etc. 6. If they had been willing to do this earlier, we should find (use) them better citizens. (a) We know, etc. (b) Did we not know, etc.? 7. He asserted that they were very much mistaken, if they expected that that original leniency of his would last forever (be permanent). 8. We understood that if Cicero had changed his opinion, some would have thought him extremely cruel (superl.). 9. It was said to him that if he wished to render a service to (serve) the consul's reputation (praise), he should go into exile. 10. He replied that if those things which had been reported to him had not been discovered, yet he did not think that too much carefulness was to be feared. 11. In this letter (abl. of means) he wrote me that unless I had resisted the infamous designs of the conspirators, the commonwealth would have perished. 12. I knew that if I did not make war on this nation, it would make war on the Roman people unprovoked (of-its-own-accord). 13. He knew that unless war had been made on them by him, war would have been made on him by them. 14. I say that unless many honors had been taken from him, he would not have become an enemy to the commonwealth. 15. He was informed that if he did not get to (reach) the river before the enemy had crossed, they would all escape.

CONNECTED PROSE

The consul said that if he should say that [it was] he [who] had resisted Catiline and his accomplices, he should be presumptuous (should take too much to himself) and intolerable (not to be borne); but that they must feel grateful to Jupiter, for unless he had robbed the enemy of their senses (by whom unless good-sense had been taken from the enemy), in no way could this (so) great peril have been averted from the country.

LESSON XXIV

PARTICIPLES. THE ABLATIVE ABSOLUTE

1. Tense of the Participle: G. 276; 282. Remark; 283. A. 158. a, b, c, 1, 2, Note; 491. B. 336. 1-5; 337. 4. H. 640 complete. HB. 599. a-c; 600. 1, 4. Bn. 984-988.

2. Ablative Absolute: G. 409; 410. Remarks. A. 419 and a; 489; 492; 493. 1, 2. B. 227. 1, 4. H. 489. 1, 3, 5. HB. 421 complete. Bn. 558.

3. Participles Equivalent to Clauses: G. 664. Remark 1; 665-667. A. 496; 497. B. 227. 2, a)-f). H. 638. 1, 2. HB. 604. 1-7. Bn. 559-565; 991; 994.

HINTS

Tense of the Participle. In the English sentence

Laelius, returning to Rome, learned that his house had burned down, the present participle returning may mean that the news came to him either while returning or after returning.

Latin is more precise. If we mean while returning, we must use the present participle. Thus,

Laelius, Rōmam revertēns, domum suam dēflagrāsse certior factus est.

If, however, we mean after returning, the perfect participle must be used. Thus,

Laelius, Rōmam reversus, etc.

The Ablative Absolute. The verb revertor being deponent, the perfect participle reversus has an active meaning, having returned, and therefore naturally agrees with Laelius. Suppose, however, we had wished to turn into Latin the sentence

Caesar, having received the hostages, withdrew his troops.

Since Latin has no perfect active participle, except in the case of deponent verbs, we cannot translate having received literally. We must therefore change the participial clause to the passive. Thus,

Caesar, hostages having been received, withdrew his troops.

Translating the nominative absolute of the English by the Latin ablative absolute, we have

Caesar obsidibus acceptis cōpiās dēdūxit.

From this it appears that the ablative absolute construction is in part a makeshift, enabling one to employ a participle in the tense desired, even when it cannot agree with the subject or object of the main verb.

The converse is also true, that we must never use the ablative absolute when the word with which the participle agrees, or a pronoun representing this word, can at the same time be the subject or object of the leading verb. Thus, if we have

Caesar, having withdrawn his troops, halted them on a hill,

we must recast the sentence in the form

Caesar halted his withdrawn troops on a hill,

Caesar cōpiās dēductas in colle cōstituit.

Had we used the ablative absolute,

Caesar cōpiīs dēductīs eōs in colle cōstituit,

it would have meant

Caesar, having withdrawn his troops, halted them (i.e. not the troops, but some other persons of whom mention had just been made) on a hill.

To summarize directions, in translating English participles into Latin, first be sure of the precise TIME indicated by the participle (either at the same time as the main verb or before it), then be sure that the Latin participle agrees with the proper word. A rigid, literal re-rendering of your Latin will be the surest test.

EXERCISE XXIV

1. After worshipping Jupiter, Quirites, depart to your homes. 2. He asked [whether they ought to endure Catiline, when-he-desired<sup>1</sup> to devastate the world with massacre and fire (burnings).] 3. I hope we shall reach our journey's end in safety (safe), [with none to hinder] [us]. 4. I am not going to state what great deeds he did in other provinces, after the completion of this war. 5. When matters in Italy had been settled in this way (so), he left for Sicily to conduct the war there. 6. Leaving for Sicily, after he had returned from Africa, he crushed all the pirates who were there (all who were pirates there) by force of (and) arms. 7. As he was returning (to whom going back) to Rome, tidings were (sing.) brought to him that his life was being sought by some who desired a revolution. 8. Thinking that these should be resisted in all possible ways (ratĭō), he took pains to have as strong (large) a guard as possible about (with) him. 9. On learning of their opinion, he replied to [those]-who begged (pres. part.) that he should give orders (order) that Catiline be arrested at once, that he could not do this when so many citizens were resisting [such action]. 10. If your parents feared you, should you not, on learning of this fact, think that you must leave the city? 11. These all fell fighting bravely. 12. The soldiers, having followed them too far, came to a dangerous spot (locus aliĕnus); when the lieutenant, fearing that he should be unable to lead his troops back in safety (unharméd), sent [men] to beg that reinforcements be sent him. 13. On his way back (when he was returning) to Italy, he was informed by a certain barbarian that a movement was on foot to cut him off (passive) from supplies. 14. Having a residence at Rome, he registered before the praetor Marcus Marcellus, his intimate friend.

CONNECTED PROSE

The general, after haranguing his [men], joined battle. Since our men were thrown into disorder by the first onslaught of the enemy, he sent the third legion as reinforcements to [those]-who-were-in-difficulties (see 10, above) in the line of battle, whereupon (quō) it happened that the enemy, fearing that they would be surrounded, took to flight, while our [men], pursuing them (for "while . . . them," say "whom") for many miles, surrounded three hundred of them with the cavalry [and] cut them to pieces. When this battle was fought (faciō), on learning of the enemy's purpose to cut him off from supplies, the general returned by the longest possible marches (as great marches as possible) to the place (thither) whence he had come the day before.

LESSON XXV

USE OF TĀLIS, ETC.

HINTS

The "Hints" to Lesson XXVII are also applicable here.

EXERCISE XXV

1. The character of every state depends upon (every state is such as is) either the nature or the will of its ruler (him who rules it). 2. He is such [a man] as I see you to be. 3. These [qualities] exist in him in the same degree in which they are lacking (are as great in him as they are not) in all other generals. 4. The consul incurred such unpopularity [so great was the consul's unpopularity] on account of Catiline's execution (Catiline having been executed) as no one ever before, within human recollection, had incurred in saving the country (the country having been saved). 5. After killing as many Roman citizens as he could find in Asia [Minor], Mithridates declared war on us. 6. No one has desired as many and as great favors (rēs) from the immortal gods as

(how many and how great) the gods have bestowed upon you without your asking for them (voluntarily). 7. I wish the same thing as you: that through my efforts dignity and safety may be secured for the commonwealth. 8. This man is not so brave as [he is] wise: for he struggled hard (greatly) that he might always please the one (is) who had the greatest power. 9. The more he wished to attack them when-off-their-guard, the less he seemed to accomplish it. 10. You have not written me as often as I had hoped you would (write). 11. As often as (how often)<sup>1</sup> you have attacked me, I have escaped you by-my-own-efforts (through myself). 12. I will give you as much money as (how much of money)<sup>1</sup> I have with me. 13. In this war, such a war as (what sort of war)<sup>1</sup> was never before waged within human recollection, I hope so to conduct myself that you all, Quirites, may understand that what I do, I do for my country. 14. I will write you as many letters as I shall be days at Rome. 15. Who ever thought that you had done as much as you could was very much mistaken.

CONNECTED PROSE

Now, Quirites, observe both what this war is like, and how important it is (of what sort and how great this war is). But it is not so important that it should be feared, for as often as our general has come into conflict with the enemy, he has led back his army victorious. Now, however, it will be more dangerous for us to wage war (with greater danger shall we wage war); for the new king is as wise as [he is] brave, and he will not fight in the same way as did his predecessor on the throne (he who reigned before him).

<sup>1</sup> These shortened expressions are common.

LESSON XXVI

PRONOUNS

www.libtexas.com EXERCISE XXVI

1. Even if we ourselves could perceive these things neither by eyes nor ears nor any sense, yet we ought to believe that they exist, when we are told (accipio) by the greatest and wisest men that this is so. 2. Whatever we perceive by the mind, all this springs from the senses. 3. Whatever (what) designs should be resisted, these I will resist in whatever way [I can]. 4. All the most learned men deny that the earth is flat. 5. You have never done anything worse than what (that which) you are now doing. 6. Has any state which was rich been brought to a state of peace and quietness (pacified)? 7. If any one does not know what cupidity men display when they start (with what cupidity men start) for their provinces, let him hear what is written in this letter. 8. To have the same tastes and antipathies (to wish and not wish the same thing), that and only that (ea dēmum) is lasting friendship. 9. Then and only then (tum dēmum) did they turn their thoughts to providing for their safety (did they provide with their minds for their safety) when with their eyes they saw the actual mischief. 10. Now the very stillness terrifies him whom once not any weapons [that were] hurled alarmed. 11. But now what does that life of yours amount to (what is, etc.), in defense of which you have committed so many infamous<sup>1</sup> crimes? 12. Let all the best men obey the laws. 13. Some one has said that those who desire a revolution do not have to obey the laws; but you and I,<sup>2</sup> (as) I imagine, consider that the advice of a wise [man] would be different. 14. He who forgets the instruction of a parent can in no wise be a good citizen. 15. A certain man asked the consul why, if all the citizens were agreed upon saving the state, it was necessary for them to protect their houses by guards and patrols [any] longer.

CONNECTED PROSE

Whoever of them hopes to be king or even consul is very much mistaken. For he has entirely forgotten that the Roman people will never suffer any one to be made king, so long as they shall remember (sing.: why?) Tarquinius Superbus.

LESSON XXVII

CORRELATIVES

HINTS

Translation of "as." In this Lesson notice particularly that the translation of the second as in "as many as," "as often as," etc., depends on the first part of the expression, tam being followed by quam, tot by quot, etc.

The case of a quālis or quantus will be the same as if a form of quī were to be used. Thus,

I have never seen such a man as he is said to be, Numquam talem hominem vidi quālis ille esse dicitur.

Avoid putting such correlatives close together. Thus,

Pompey has won as often as Caesar would be Totiēns Pompeius quotiēns Caesar vicit, or Quotiēns Pompeius vicit, totiēns Caesar; not Pompeius totiēns quotiēns, etc.

EXERCISE XXVII

1. You will go in safety (safe) by the same way as you came here. 2. This man says that Sulla would not have refused him if he had asked citizenship of him. 3. [It is] not so [much that] they are inactive as [that] they are afraid that (if what they should say should be overheard) they would suffer (come into) the severest (summus) torture. 4. For the dearer life is to human beings, the more carefully they think it ought to be guarded by whatever means [they can]. 5. As often as you have cried that you were a good citizen, I have seen those laugh who believe that you cherish no design (meditate nothing) but (nisi) the ruin of your native land. 6. You, forsooth, think that those who hold supreme control should live differently from us, who are merely citizens. 7. Where you go, there I shall go; where you live, there also shall I live: 8. Let my remarks begin at the point (speech start thence) whence this whole case arises (is led). 9. Many men of many minds! (how many men, so many opinions). 10. He had a bridge built (made) over (in) the river, across which (where) he might lead his army. 11. And so he returned home in less than thirty days by the same route as it had taken him six months to pass over (he had marched in six months). 12. He made it possible for horses (there) to go where before one man could scarcely crawl (rēpere). 13. If our fellow-citizens are such as they ought to be, there will be no need of foreign assistance. 14. For this war is not as great as many which have been waged by our forefathers.

CONNECTED PROSE

Most honorable and excellent Roman knights<sup>1</sup> say that this war ought not to be carried on in the same way as (in which) the others [have been]; for, [they say] the character of the enemy is different, and it is necessary to go (set out) to-a-different-place from [that to which] our armies marched before; but that if we were going to start for the same place where we have engaged with the enemy so many times already, we should be undertaking this war with equanimity.

LESSON XXVIII

G. Appendix I. A. 630; 631. B. 371; 372. H. 754-756. HB. 660-671. Bn. 603; 604.

HINTS

Dates. The following diagram illustrates the divisions of the Roman month:

“ In March, July, October, May,
 The Ides are on the fifteenth day,
 The Nones the seventh ; but all besides
 Have two days less for Nones and Ides.”

The YEAR may be expressed by giving, in ordinal numerals, the year since the Founding of the City of Rome (A.U.C. = annō urbis conditae or ab urbe conditā).

(1) For dates B.C., subtract the given date from 754. Thus,

$$44 \text{ B.C.} = 754 - 44 = 710 \text{ A.U.C.}$$

(2) For dates A.D., add the given date to 753. Thus,

$$1903 \text{ A.D.} = 753 + 1903 = 2656 \text{ A.U.C.}$$

According to the above rule, the sentence

America was discovered in 1492 A.D.

becomes

America inventa est annō urbis conditae bis millēsīmō ducentēsīmō quādrāgēsīmō quīntō.

EXERCISES IN CONNECTED NARRATIVE

EXERCISE XXIX

Horatius at the Bridge. A

After the Tarquins had been banished from Rome, they fled-for-refuge to Lars Porsena, the king of Clusium, and besought that he would not suffer them to live in exile. Porsena, therefore, came to Rome with a hostile army. When the enemy were at hand, all moved into the city from the fields; the city itself they strengthened by troops (pl. of praesidium). The Pons Sublicius almost gave entrance (iter) to the foe; but one man, Horatius Cocles, who happened to have been placed (by chance had been placed) on guard at (of) the bridge, when he saw the Janiculum taken by an unexpected attack, and that his [comrades] were abandoning their arms and leaving the ranks (were leaving arms and ranks) in a panic, advised them to destroy the bridge with fire and steel (iron). He promised that as far as one man could, he would withstand the enemy. Thereupon he advanced to the nearer end of the approach (entered the first approach) to the bridge (gen.); nevertheless a sense-of-shame kept two of the Romans with him, Spurius Lartius and Titus Herminius. Except these, no one offered to help him.

EXERCISE XXX

Horatius at the Bridge. B

With these he first withstood the enemy's attack for a little while. Then, when there was [but] a small (narrow) part of the bridge left (abl. abs.), he forced even (ipse) these to retire to a place of safety like-the-rest (also). Thereupon he taunted the chiefs of the Etruscans, and bitterly reproached them for being willing (because they were willing) to compel the Romans to take back their kings. Then, with a yell (raising a shout), the Etruscans, stung by his taunts (lit. "by shame"), let fly their missiles from-every-quarter at their solitary (one) foe. [Now] after (when) he had kept these off (which when he, etc.) for a long time by interposing his shield, he suddenly felt that the bridge was breaking (passive: why?). Observing this, he said, "Father Tiber (adj.: see Voc.), I pray you to receive this armor and this soldier [and carry them] down stream." Then, in-full-armor (armed), he jumped down into the Tiber; and though many a dart was hurled at him, he reached his [friends] unscathed. In consequence the entire state thanked Horatius, and gave him (to whom was given) as much land as he could plow round (circumarare) in one day. Of this deed the fame has lasted even to our own time; for who has not heard how Horatius kept the bridge in the brave days of old (an early and a better age)?

EXERCISE XXXI

Manilian Law. A

In the course of his speech (when he was making, etc.), Cicero said first that he possessed (there was in him) as much influence as the people had resolved (volō) that he should possess (that there should be). Next, he promised to use whatever (if any) influence he had among those who had given it to him. He was glad that such a case had been presented to him that in it (in which) it was harder to find a stopping-place for (of) his speech than a beginning.

After he had explained what (cuīus modī) was the character of the war which the Romans had to carry on, he admonished the people of the peril to the state unless they should take thought for both citizens and allies. For he told (doceō) them that two most powerful kings were threatening Asia [Minor], while [autem] it was from Asia that the richest (greatest) revenues of the commonwealth came in (redeō), and if these were lost (which having been lost) they would inevitably be (it was inevitable that they should be) deprived of (miss, requirō) the means of carrying on (pl. of subsidiūm) war. Therefore, [he said], they should reflect on what was to be done, so as to keep safe and-set-free (participlē) not merely from disaster but from the dread of disaster, those whose great fortunes were at stake [through being] invested in farming the taxes.

EXERCISE XXXII

Manilian Law. B

The consul said that whatever authority he possessed ought to be exercised (used) among those who had given it to him. Then he set forth the perils of a war waged in Asia and carried on against kings (an Asiatic and kingly war). "The great fortunes of the Roman knights," he said, "are at stake, invested in farming your revenues. Lucullus' successor is far from (not enough) prepared to conduct a war of such magnitude (so great). Unless you reflect on what is to be done, you will put many citizens in extreme peril (summon to the highest danger), for whom it is your duty to take thought, both for their own sake and for the sake of the country. For these cannot suffer ruin without others also losing (so that others do not lose) property and fortunes." Then he inquired whether they intended to be indifferent to the taking of a life (a taken life), and do nothing about (abandon) the murder of an ambassador after he had been cruelly tortured (an ambassador murdered with all punishment); especially since, if they did not protect their own fellow-citizens, no one thereafter would dare to farm the revenues. Wherefore he showed them that it belonged to their humanity to defend, not only from ruin but from the fear of ruin, those whose property was at stake in [the business of] farming the revenues.

EXERCISE XXXIII

Manilian Law. C

Who can compose (find) a speech that shall do justice to (be equal to) Pompey's noble-qualities (virtūtēs)? He can be stern in his judgments (gerund) because he is willing for others to be stern critics of him (to be stern judges towards (in) himself). Then, he exercises a commanding influence greater than that possessed by all other generals (there is in him as much authority as there was not in the other generals). I believe that [it is] due to the direct guidance of the immortal gods (the immortal gods being leaders) [that] he is in the (is) locality where our armies are at-this-moment awaiting a commander. (And) so why should we hesitate to apply to the preservation (gerundive) of the commonwealth this great blessing (this so much of good) which has been proffered us by the immortal gods? For, had not the gods aided him, think you that he would have been the winner of so many fights (used so many successful battles) and defeated so many foes with such [perfect] safety to the republic? For assuredly we should not have been a match for them (to whom we should assuredly not have been equal) if Pompey had not undertaken the war just at the critical moment of that emergency. Now if we had many commanders of (de) whom such things could be said, I should, perhaps, be making a different kind of (another) speech; but as-it-is, since he is the only one who possesses (in whom there are) all the highest [qualifications], ought we not to be ashamed if we allowed any one to hinder us from putting into his hands the conduct of (gerundive) this war?

EXERCISE XXXIV

Manilian Law. D

My remaining duty, apparently, is to say (it remains that it seems that I must say) a few [words] about prestige. For no one doubts that the estimate of our commanders held by the enemy and our allies (what the enemy, what the allies think about our commanders) has an important bearing on the conduct of (gerundive) wars. You will ask, perhaps, what especially creates prestige. You yourselves, Quirites, in expressing (when you made) such flattering opinions about any man as [you have] about Pompey, by that very act created prestige. Moreover, I am not in the least reluctant to (not unwillingly do I) remind you of this, because it is necessary to remember that this power resides in you, so that you may never (lest at any time) use it unwisely or rashly. For it is true that to whom much is given (perf. and pl.), of him much will be required (pres.). Accordingly, not to say more, I assure you that that Pompey possesses prestige in a degree attained by no commander (there is as much prestige in Pompey as in no commander) whose name and glory have lasted down to (usque ad) [the times within] our own recollection. For by the mere report of his renown he (who by mere name and rumor) delayed and checked the enemy's attacks; [while] by his arrival he ended the war, once and for all (abolished and buried the war). And we have no need of many commanders; there is one who by himself can guarantee the safety of (maintain safe) the city, Italy, the commonwealth, the allies, and all the citizens.

EXERCISE XXXV

Manilian Law. E

No one can guarantee good-fortune for (dē) himself. Moreover, it is dangerous for human beings to talk too boldly about the power of the gods. But you have said that you remember the past, [and] hope [for] the future. Good (bene): for I am sure the gods forgive you this [boldness] and will grant (give) you their indulgence. But do not either say or do anything except what can be both said and done with safety to yourself and the commonwealth (with your own safety, etc.). Also, [one] should always rather thank the gods for what they have done (because they have done) than complain of what (because) they have not done. And so I am not going to proclaim how fortunate I have been; and all the more because we believe that to count one's blessings is essentially somewhat wrong (has in itself something of bad) and is displeasing to the gods. This is certainly what we have heard (so, surely, we have received) from our forefathers, and I hope, my son, that you will not depart from this way (dissent from this view). For a man (is) who grumbles because he has no share in the blessings which others are given is not himself fit to obtain what has not been given to the rest [of mankind]. Wherefore be sure to win your distinctions by the industrious habit (ratio) of your life; for there is no greater [piece of] good luck than this: to have both the ability and the desire (that you may both be able, etc.) to work-hard. But he who will not toil, (pres. ind. : why?), and only waits-to-see if some good [thing] is offered him, most assuredly deserves to be hated by all good [men].

EXERCISE XXXVI

Archias. A

In (by) the (is) speech which he made for the poet Archias, Cicero promised that, as far as in him lay, he would bring both aid and deliverance to the man (is) from whom he had received that [power] whereby he could win some success as a speaker (win something in speaking) whenever he tried to defend the safety of friends or clients. He begged the judges to suffer him to speak with a little more freedom (a little more freely) [than was usual], and to employ a style of oratory (speaking) which was somewhat at variance with that customary in (the custom of) trials. This concession being granted him, he made them think that Archias ought to have been presented with citizenship even if he had not been a citizen.

He began by saying (said first) that his-client (this) Archias belonged to a distinguished family (locō nōbili nātus) at Antioch, a very populous and wealthy city of Asia, and in that city had been a favorite with (pleasing to) the most learned men; and that afterwards, when he had come to Rome, he had been treated with great respect by many (and) great men; next [he said] that he had been presented with citizenship by the Heracliots, and lastly that he had registered at Rome before a praetor, according to the law of Silvanus and Carbo, — the law that (which law) gave the citizenship to all who had had their [legal] residence in Italy and who should have registered before a praetor within sixty days.

EXERCISE XXXVII

Archias. B

What reason is there why you should entertain doubts (doubt) concerning my rights-as-a-citizen (citizenship)? For after I moved from Antioch, and not many years before I reached Rome, I had the good-fortune to become a citizen of Heraclea (won the fortune of citizenship at Heraclea); and therefore (on account of which thing) I am eligible to be enrolled [as] a Roman citizen under your laws. Nor is this the only reason why you should think that I ought to be admitted; for, as far as in me lay, I devoted all my interest and all my talent to [the task of] publishing the glory of the Roman people. But if no one had ever taken the trouble to spread abroad the nation's fame, who knows whether that glory and fame would have reached<sup>1</sup> as far as (eōdem . . . quō) the weapons wielded by (of) your hands have penetrated? Or are you really so mean-spirited as to think that it makes no difference to you whether foreign nations hear [of] these things, or not? Wherefore I beg of you, jurors, rather to relieve me in-a-spirit-of-humanity (by your humanity) than wrong me through your severity. Then, whatever talent I possess, <sup>1</sup> When the apodosis of a past contrary to fact condition is a dependent clause, as here, it has the future participle with the perfect subjunctive of sum (-ūrus, -a, -um fuerim). No change is made in the apodosis of the present contrary fact condition under such circumstances.

whatever enthusiasm, whatever experience as a writer (of writing) proceeding (having set out) from [my] studies and training in the best branches-of-learning — all this I promise and proffer to you and all the citizens for glorifying the name of the Roman people.

EXERCISE XXXVIII

Archias. C

Is there anything in life more to be coveted than praise and glory? Do you consider it of more [importance] to get everything that you wish for, or to have brought relief to those who needed your assistance? As for me (mihi quidem), to do good seems better than to be in the public eye (be gazed upon); nor do I reckon those deserving of honor who, whatever they do, think all must be done for their own benefit (for themselves). For this is of small worth, that you should be praised (inf.) by the lips (conversations) of men, if your deeds are hateful to the immortal gods; nor can he be truthfully called (said) or considered fortunate who thinks it more important to have much (pl.) or to be eulogized by many than to live honorably. Such a man, indeed (autem), ought to be admonished that he has lost more than he has gained, for neither monuments nor triumphs are to be coveted unless he who has obtained them has benefited, not himself alone, but his fellow-citizens also. Therefore before you pray the gods for glory, you should pray that you may do your country good, and not interfere with any one's enjoyment of (hinder any one from enjoying) life, liberty, [and] property.

EXERCISE XXXIX

Archias. D

How many men, how honorable [and] how distinguished, were said to have come with official evidence on account of this trial! They did not suppose, but knew that Archias had been entered-on-the-lists at Heraclea. What precautions<sup>1</sup> did Cicero take (of how great diligence was Cicero), who thought nothing too hard to (harder than that he should) attempt, if only he could make the jurors understand that not only must Archias (use a pronoun) not be driven from the state, but that even if he had not been a citizen, he ought to have been most eagerly (summō studiō) desired [as one]! "Should not my-friend-here (hic)," he said, "who we know has reached the [degree of] reputation enjoyed by (of) the classic (old) writers, [and] who ought, with perfect justice (by his own right), to be reckoned among those who by their writings have aided mankind (men) in the comprehension of (toward comprehending) moral excellence, — [should not he] be presented with citizenship by those whose deeds have been written about (impers. with dē), when Sulla gave this prize to many who did not seek it (pres. part.)? Our forefathers were quick to honor (eagerly revered) those by whom [the fame of] the deeds which they had done could be spread abroad; [and] shall we [men] of high principle, banish from the state a man possessing (abl. of quality) such talent as that ought to be considered whose owner (which), [as] you see, is sought after by so many (and so) great men? Or do you say that you do not want your deeds written about? You are truly very different from the great Marius, who, although he appeared somewhat indifferent to (ad) these matters, yet showed-honor-to Archias, because he understood that without the reward of praise and glory (the reward, etc., being withdrawn), there was no reason why he should exert himself in such toilsome enterprises (labors).

<sup>1</sup> Latin is very apt to use a connective, such as autem, vērō, and the like, when a sentence is related in thought to the one preceding.

EXERCISE XL

Archias. E

Are you not convinced, jurors, that a man of the (that) high-character which he possesses ought to be relieved in the spirit of (by) humanity rather than wronged through severity? And yet, what harm can be done (what can be harmed) to him who really understands the art of right living? For whether you isolate yourself from other men (cēteri) that you may have more leisure (time) for pursuing the studies which belong to mental cultivation, or live (versor) where the crowds are thickest (in the most frequented places), you should not be much concerned about (consider of great importance) what others think or say about you, if only in your own heart (by your own feeling) you know that you are living virtuously. Some, it is true (quidem), are given to exulting (inf.) because they have the approval of (are praised by) others: it is of much more importance that one have his own approval (that you are praised by yourself). And yet there is no one living who, either because he employed his leisure wisely or because he could be persuaded neither by desire of pleasure nor by fear of pain to do anything but (nisi) what would benefit the country, has received (been affected by) such honor as Archias has had accorded him (as has been accorded to Archias) by all for his having (propter with perf. part.) treated of Roman history (rēs, pl.) in the most talented fashion (summō ingeniō). For that genius ought not to be considered slight by which the deeds which we ourselves and our forefathers have done have been reported almost to the ends of the earth (farthest lands). "But," you will say (at enim), "this deals only with his talent (these about talent only); what can be said of his high-character, of which at the beginning of your speech you promised to give some account (set forth)?" Look into [this], jurors, for this [question] does not seem to be asked without reason. I for my part am of the following opinion (so estimate), that no one can wholly devote his talents (talent cannot be entirely devoted by any one) to celebrating the best and noblest deeds unless there exists in him both the utmost inclination towards virtue (gen.) and [the deepest] detestation of wrong. Therefore I do not doubt that this man possesses both high character and many [other] qualities which are correctly held [to be] the attendants of this [one].

EXERCISE XLI

Archias. F

Once I heard a conversation which two very distinguished and learned men were having about writing books. The first speaker (he who made a beginning of talking) said that one who wrote a good book deserved the greatest praise. To him (to whom) the other answered that the Greeks had well said that a great book was a great bore, and that not only was learning necessary (opus) in (ad) writing a book, but that the man who intended to devote himself to literary pursuits ought above all to be sure to exercise a certain degree of restraint in [his] writing, so as both to charm the reader (those who read) and most advantageously (best) to set forth what he wished to be understood. For books, [he said] like (sicut) men, were either loved or hated: one book would display (there would be in one book), as it were, a kind of serious air (seriousness); another would be wholly deficient in seriousness, doing (inf.) everything in a light-hearted way (lightly), while [yet] another would have a nature combining (mixed from) [both of] these things.

On another occasion (postea) one of those who were talking at that time, Marcus Cicero, said in the presence of his brother, Quintus Cicero the praetor, that Archias deserved exceedingly well at-the-hands-of (dē) the state; for once when he was writing he had devoted all his talent to celebrating its praise and glory. Had he not done this, probably we should not so easily have made all nations not only hear, but really understand that no power has ever existed anywhere so wonderful as [that] of the Roman people.

EXERCISE XLII

Catiline

By [his own] inclination Catiline was impelled toward the basest deeds. For unless he had experienced a certain satisfaction in enduring cold, thirst, [and] hunger, I cannot but think that he would have been deterred from assuming such great risks [as he did], and permitting himself to be hateful in the eyes of all decent men (boni). For it is not to be disguised that for some men a kind of pleasure resides in danger itself, as though their very safety were sweeter when procured by escaping death. And yet Catiline's corps was not to be despised in comparison with the army of the Roman people — [a force] gathered from old men devoid of hope, from bandits, and the other ruined men whom Cicero mentions in his speeches<sup>1</sup> against Catiline. For when the battle was done (faciō), then one<sup>2</sup> might easily have discerned what (quantus: why?) daring and what an indomitable spirit (force of spirit) there was in Catiline's army. For it is a well-authenticated fact that no one had deserted the spot (place) which he had chosen (taken) [for fighting,] or had received wounds except in front. Wherever resistance was necessary (it was to be resisted), there they resisted the Romans; they obeyed him whom it was their duty to obey (2d periphrastic), even though (if) they could have saved their lives (sing.) by running away. And the army of the commonwealth could not feel (crēdō) that it had won until all Catiline's men (militēs) were either slain or taken prisoner, for none of them refused to die fighting (either cum clause or pres. part.) for his commander.

EXERCISE XLIII

The Eastern Peril

When the people had gathered in the Forum (acc.: why?), they heard with deep (great) concern how Mithridates was exulting in the victory which he had won (reportō, 1) over (ab) Lucullus. For when all had supposed that he lay prostrate, so to speak, suddenly, contrary to [the general] expectation, word was brought that he had routed our veteran army (abl. abs.) [and] was besieging with immense forces a city belonging to the allies. Accordingly Cicero assured [them] that a fresh commander, thoroughly experienced (sup.) in warfare, must be despatched to those parts as quickly as possible, if they wished to rescue their surest revenues from [the jaws of] the enemy, [saying] that [it was] beyond question [that] the King, [though] lately he had met with severe reverses (afflictus) was now taking heart, while (vērō) he always, maddened by hatred for (in or ergā with acc.) the Roman nation, had done it harm as far as he had been able, and had tried to prevent it from being active (versor) in Asia at all. There was danger, [he went on to say], that (nē) he would ravage the homes of the allies with fire and sword, unless this help were sent them at once. But as when a conspiracy, formed (habēō) by citizens [and] long concealed, at length was plainly detected so that it was possible to fight (it could be fought) in the open, so Mithridates' designs could now be clearly seen and perceived, [with the result] that all could understand how great a peril must be withstood.

EXERCISE XLIV

The Character of Cicero

Who doubts that Cicero had a love of glory, too keen, perhaps, but still creditable? For he had laid away, deep in his inmost soul (mind and soul: dat.) the words of philosophers, who affirmed that nothing in life was greatly worth striving for (gerundive) save esteem and honor. And so he admitted that he was always actuated by the desire of esteem. I, who myself have often heard his speeches, remember his saying<sup>1</sup> that all the best men were powerfully attracted by [the prospect of] glory. And that glory was not sought from the living alone, for it is certain that he hoped that even after his death he should not be unconscious (there would not be absent from his consciousness) what people should be saying about the deeds which in his consulship he had done for the commonwealth. For he had banished from the city Catiline, a man of criminal impulses (an author of crime), with the intention that the citizens to a man might realize that he had plotted against the commonwealth. And it was not his fault but [that] of circumstances (the times) if there were [men] to reproach him bitterly because he had not rather arrested so deadly (capitalis) a foe than let him go. For the majority, as if buried in (by) slumber, or like (as if) men who had drunk too much wine, either feigned not to see (dissembled) what they did see, or deemed Catiline's forces contemptible (gerundive of contemnere) in-comparison-with the Roman armies, or on account of debt despaired of their deliverance unless through this atrocious league of Catiline's they should be able to gain power and office (pl.), whereby (by which) they might obtain (comparāre) a large-amount-of (great) money.

EXERCISE XLV

Concerning Old Age

Before writing, in the book which you intend to publish, that old age is wretched, will you not hear what Cicero, who was a profound philosopher (a man surely very wise), said of old age? For he thinks that old men, albeit they do not have the physical strength of youth(s), nevertheless are so strong in [point of] counsel and authority that they can accomplish more than they ever could by their bodily powers. He told his friends that one must resist old age (impers.), take (use) exercise (pl.), and use (adhibere) so much food that their strength should be revived, not injured (opprimere). Moreover, what friends do we love as much as [we do] those with whom we have been intimate through [the course of] a long life; or what could be more delightful than, released from responsibilities, to recall the deeds which we did in our prime (as young men) and to know that we have used our whole lifetime well and wisely? [One] who has never done a base deed (anything base), [who has] governed his household with justice (justly), recalled striplings from their folly, delivered his native land out of the hands of the enemy, [and] always, as far as he could, done his duty (what he ought)—should not he (is) be called truly happy, and not at all an object of commiseration (pitiable)? For my part, if by any means I reach this time of life, I hope so to live that I may look back upon my life as [one] who has come to the end of a journey which, while it lacked neither suffering nor perils, nevertheless has been at the same time full of pleasures, of services which I have performed for others, [and] of kindnesses which I have received from others. Thus, surely, old age must neither be reckoned among [our] misfortunes, nor the rest which it brings looked on with apprehension (dreaded) for-fear-that (nē) it may suffer pain from [the recollection of] a life [which has] not [been] led wisely (after the manner of a wise [man]).

EXERCISE XLVI

The Claims of Pompey

That man ought not to be without a share in the glory of a commander who helped him to obtain (ad with gerundive) that glory. Therefore those should be resisted who say that Pompey is not competent to take to this war as his second-in-command the one (is) who in his earlier campaigns made it possible for him to (brought it to pass that he should) have so powerful (so great) a fleet that the enemy, who had formerly flaunted themselves before the Tiber's mouth(s), now could be found nowhere within the Mediterranean (in the sea). What do you think he could have done had he not then been given a sufficient force? Or by what means, with fewer troops, could he have defeated so many of the enemy on land and sea? I have recalled these matters to you (admonished you concerning these things) unwillingly, Quirites, because I know that there are some who do not wish too much power to be committed to one man; but if, [however,] there is [just] one who possesses all the highest [qualifications], if he is the only one whom the enemy fears, the citizens love, [and] the allies want, and if there is no one else who by his own experience as a commander (his own commands), and by bringing campaigns to a fortunate conclusion (wars fortunately ended) is as well trained as Pompey for conducting all [our enterprises], why should we not gladly accept this great (so great) blessing which has been given us by the immortal gods? Yes (vērō, postpos.), we should feel grateful to them (to whom we should feel, etc.) for having already delayed the enemy's attacks so often, before we were ready to decide whom to send to those parts (regions) in defense of our safety.
