A Personal Explanation.

THE question whether the works of Shakespeare, and "The Tempest" in particular, should or should not be represented on the stage, is one which has of late been debated with considerable vehemence. The negative point of view is open to argument, although it is obviously a point of view not shared by Shakespeare. Nor do I propose to tread such debatable ground. It is rather my purpose to deal with the more practical question of the manner in which the poet's works should be produced.

In the brief note which prefaced the pamphlet on the production of "The Tempest," I ventured to assert that of all Shakespeare's works "The Tempest" was probably the one which most demanded the aids of modern stage-craft, and that, therefore, no apology was needed for having striven to present this masterpiece in such a manner as to appeal to the student and the playgoer alike. But I had reckoned without my commentators. To the super-subtle nothing is so baffling as the obvious. To them, therefore, I tender an explanation.

We are this evening celebrating the fiftieth performance of this comedy. On such an occasion it would be inappropriate to enter into a serious contest with those who have so eloquently condemned our presentation. If our efforts to present this fantasy have been widely and generously recognised by men of letters and by the public at large, they have also called forth the wrath of others, whose vituperation, I prefer to think, has not been due to a desire to baulk high endeavour, but rather to an honest ignorance of the text of the play, and to a whole-hearted incapacity to appreciate the spirit of the poet. To the prosaic nothing is so embarrassing as the poetic. My contention is that unless "The Tempest" be produced in such a way as to bring home to audiences the fantasy and the beauties of the play it were better not to attempt it at all. The question is, can that fantasy and those beauties be conveyed to the senses of an audience by means of what is called "adequate" treatment? I say No. And I further contend that it is far more satisfactory to read the play in the study than to see it presented in the archaic and "echoic" methods so dear to epicures in mediocrity. Indeed, if so presented, I assert that the public would stay away, and I further assert that the public would be right, for the illusion of the spectator would be dulled rather than quickened by such a presentation. Illusion is the whole business of the theatre. Treatment, I hold, is essential to the proper comprehension of Shakespeare on the stage, and nowhere, I think, is this more evident than in the case of "The Tempest." This fact was recognised by the late Charles Kean, who gave to the public an elaborate and beautiful production of this fairy-play. The wits of the period spoke of that distinguished and enthusiastic artist as an "upholsterer," a "spectacle-maker," and a "poodle-trimmer!" Since that time the science of invective appears to have made considerable strides. A nameless writer in "Blackwood's Magazine" referring to the present production, makes the broad statement that Shakespeare's plays "afford no decent opportunity for elaborate scenery." If ever there was an author whose plays do lend themselves to elaborate stage treatment, that author is assuredly Shakespeare. None, indeed, is so rich in scenic suggestion, and it can scarcely be denied that his works were primarily intended for the theatre, and that the theatre is primarily intended for theatre-goers. The book-worm has always his book.

The nameless writer further says that "it should be impossible to turn them (the plays) to the vulgar use of stage illusion." And this is written of an art which is the art of illusion—this is written of the work of a man who was an actor and a playwright!

It may be broadly laid down that whatever tends to quicken the imagination of the audience—in fact, to create illusion, is justifiable on the stage. Whatever detracts from the appreciation of the author's work and disturbs the illusion is to be deprecated—is, in fact, bad art.

The measure of success or failure must be left to the judgment of each individual. It is a question of taste on the part of the artist who presents the play, and a question of receptiveness on the part of the spectator. There are those who see nothing but scenery—who hear nothing but the carpenter's hammer—but what else should they see? What else should they hear? When Caliban hears sounds and sweet music in the air and sees riches in the clouds, the drunken butler and the chartered fool split their sides with ironic laughter.

So fervid does this nameless writer become in his denunciation that he continues "No intelligent actor would ever bring the poet's masterpieces under a mass of irrelevant scenery" (sic). Our writer is also highly indignant with the producer for playing "The Tempest" in three acts instead of five, ignoring the fact that this arrangement comes much nearer to the system which prevailed in Shakespeare's own time, when scenes and acts followed each other in swift succession. All Shakespeare's plays have to undergo a certain amount of abbreviation to bring them within the time limit demanded by modern audiences, and indeed there is every reason to believe that these plays were considerably "cut" in Shakespeare's own time. But the nameless writer's anathema is not yet exhausted, for he makes the sweeping denunciation that "All the actors are incompetent." And worse remains behind—"The orchestra is hidden beneath a mass of vegetables." This is no doubt another instance of the vulgarity of stage illusion. Owing, we are told, to the din of the scene-shifters, the actors "put a false emphasis on every syllable which they uttered." It seems, indeed, that the "national honour" is almost involved by the "lamentable caprice" of the actor-manager.

But the main indictment of the present revival has been against the introduction of "pantomime." To this I reply that whatever there is of pantomime is Shakespeare's. I will endeavour to prove that at no point has the producer gone in this direction outside the instructions of the dramatist. Shakespeare's stage instructions in Act I., Scene 1, are as follows:—"On a ship at sea—A tempestuous noise of lightning and thunder heard." Acting upon these instructions, the producer has been presumptuous enough to endeavour to depict a ship at sea, as well as modern appliances will allow, to reproduce the effect of thunder and lightning, and to assume that their accompaniment might not too incongruously be a rough sea.

Again, in Act II., Scene 4, of the present version Shakespeare's stage instructions are "Enter several strange Shapes, bringing in a banquet, they dance about it with gentle actions of salutation; and, inviting the King, &c., to eat, they depart." Here there is a certain suggestion of pantomime which has been carried out as faithfully as possible.

Again, in the same scene, Shakespeare's instructions are "Thunder and lightning—enter Ariel like a harpy—claps his wings on the table, and with a quaint device the banquet vanishes." Here Ariel has been permitted to resemble a harpy as nearly as possible. The pantomime is Shakespeare's.

The Ballet introduced into Act III., Scene 2, may need a few words of apology or explanation. In this scene Shakespeare deliberately introduces a masque, which Prospero conjures up for the entertainment of Ferdinand and Miranda. We have merely tried to follow the author's injunctions and we know how elaborate were the masques in Shakespeare's day. Iris and Ceres and Juno enter, summoned by the wand of Prospero, and according to the instructions of the dramatist, they sing. (Throughout this play Shakespeare has recourse to the aid of music.) The instructions are somewhat meagre as to the nature of the masque, and in their absence I have thought it justifiable to invent the revels as suggested by the dialogue. (The argument of the Ballet is fully given on page 51 of the present book.) Briefly, Iris calls upon the Nymphs to be merry and to dance with the Reapers. "Enter certain Reapers, properly habited. They join with the Nymphs in a graceful dance," &c. The introduction of Cupid is, I think, permissible. It certainly has the effect of pleasing the public, and 'twill offend none but the professional purist.

Again, in the scene in which Prospero determines to punish Caliban, Stephano and Trinculo, we have endeavoured to follow faithfully the somewhat meagre instructions which are given in the play (page 56 of this version). "A noise of hunters is heard. Enter divers spirits in shapes of dogs and hounds, hunting them about. Prospero and Ariel setting them on." Prospero says "I will plague them all even to roaring." Although we cannot attain to the degree of realism which Shakespeare would have us attempt when he gives us instructions: "Enter divers spirits in shapes of dogs and hounds—hunting them about," yet we have endeavoured to present spirits in animal shapes, and in order to illustrate the discomfiture of Caliban, Trinculo and Stephano we have followed Shakespeare's directions to Ariel:—

"Go, charge my goblins that they grind their joints
With dry convulsions; shorten up their sinews
With aged cramps. Let them be hunted soundly."

I venture to assume that by these instructions, Shakespeare intended that the goblins should grind their joints with dry convulsions and that they should "hunt them soundly." Prospero also says "I will plague them all even to roaring." Those who have condemned us for introducing the goblins which they have denounced as the intrusion of "vulgar pantomime," have evidently overlooked the stage instructions to which I have drawn attention. And they forget that a high fantastical note runs through the whole play which was intended to amuse (dare I say it?) the audience for which Shakespeare wrote.

Some of our critics maintain that in this production the poetry has been deliberately dispensed with as a tiresome superfluity, and that the setting alone has been considered.

There are some, of course, to whom our stage treatment conveys no sense of poetry, and these clamour for a mode of production which we are told existed in Shakespeare's own day. They frankly prefer placards announcing the scenes in order thoroughly to abandon themselves to the poetry of the play. They would go further, no doubt, and have the female parts played by males as in Shakespeare's day. This is the style of art so dear to "Bottom the Weaver," and this spirit was given full rein to in our production of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," when placards announced "This is a Forest," and when "Thisbe" (played by a male actor) carried a board with the words "This is a Maiden," and "Snug the Joiner" was labelled "This is a Lion." I can imagine how Shakespeare would have laughed these champions to scorn.

At the end of the play I have ventured upon a certain modification of the text by omitting the Epilogue addressed by the actor to the audience, reserving Prospero's glorious speech beginning "Ye elves of hills, brooks, standing lakes and groves" for the end of the play. The Tableau which is here introduced is fully described on page 63 of this book. I hope that this particular introduction may be excused in so far as it may be thought to emphasise the fantasy and the poetry of the text.

Now, as to the characterisation in this play. The character most assailed is Caliban. I took it for granted that Shakespeare's characters were self-explanatory. Here again, it appears, I was mistaken. One writer maintains that Caliban—like Shylock—is a purely comic character, and the attempt at the end of the play to materialise Shakespeare's spirit in a tableau meets with the gravest displeasure. Many others denounce as un-Shakespearean, any note of humanity which redeems his nature—Caliban, they say, was merely a monster. Careless reading has once more been the pit-fall of these writers. For it has been maintained with fond reiteration that Caliban is described by Shakespeare himself as "a freckled whelp, hag-born, not honoured with a human shape." Precisely the contrary is the case. The lines are as follows:—

Then was this island—
- (Save for the son that she did litter here,
A freckled whelp, hag-born)—not honour'd with
A human shape.

Thus Shakespeare definitely states that Caliban had a human shape. Caliban, too, is described by Shakespeare as "a savage and deformed slave." If he was the unredeemed monster that these writers would have us think, is it possible that he should have uttered those beautiful lines "This isle is full of noises, sounds and sweet airs that give delight and hurt not," &c. ? Indeed, in his love of music and his affinity with the unseen world, we discern in the soul which inhabits the brutish body of this elemental man the germs of a sense of beauty, the dawn of art. And as he stretches out his arms towards the empty horizon, we feel that from the conception of sorrow in solitude may spring the birth of a higher civilization.

I have endeavoured to show that whatever in this production is not actually contained in the letter of Shakespeare's text, springs from the spirit which animates it, and I contend that those who attribute its success to the meretricious aids of scenic and other embellishments, are mistaken in their conclusions—however disconcerting it may be to attribute that success to merit.

This brings me to the main purpose of this Personal Explanation. It has been freely stated that, in the presentation of this play, the producer has but pandered to a vulgar public, incapable of appreciating the works of the poet, and that, in order to attract that public, he has been driven to overload the play with a lavish expenditure of money. To this charge I reply by the simple statement of fact that its cost was half that expended on a modern play recently presented on these boards. And I fail to see why Shakespeare should be treated with less care, with less reverence and with less lavishness of resource than is demanded by modern authors. So far from pandering to the public taste,

I claim that an artist works primarily for himself—his first aim is to satisfy his own artistic conscience. His output is the result of the impetus in him to work out his own ideals. Even were the public satisfied with a less complete treatment of the poet's work, I should still have presented them in the way I have done. But so far from admitting that the public—my public—is a vulgar public, I am conscious that their demands upon the art of the manager are too often in excess of his powers to gratify them. I have indeed reason to be grateful to the public for having supported the policy and work of the theatre persistently, regardless of the sneers of those who are not the leaders, but the camp-followers of progress. I have no wish to quarrel with those who attack that policy and that work, for I hold the strength of men, as of governments, is in precise proportion to the opposition they encounter. I claim, however, the right to protest against the imputation of sordid motives in placing this series of classical works before the public. I am at least entitled to maintain that I have done my best to present the works of Shakespeare in the manner which I considered most worthy, and I feel a certain pride in remembering that, be our method right or wrong, we have brought the poet's creations before hundreds of thousands. This version of "The Tempest" has already been witnessed by vast multitudes, and if only a portion of these have been given a deeper insight into, and a wider appreciation of, this high fantasy, our labours to "give delight and hurt not" will not have been in vain.

The Tempest

Act First

Scene I.

On a Ship at Sea: a tempestuous noise of thunder and lightning heard.

Enter a Ship-Master and a Boatswain.

Mast. Boatswain!

Boats. Here, master: what cheer?

Mast. Good, speak to the mariners: fall to 't, yareley, or we run ourselves aground: bestir, bestir.

Boats. Heigh, my hearts! cheerly, cheerly, my hearts! yare, yare! Take in the topsail. Tend to the master's whistle. Blow, till thou burst thy wind, if room enough!

Enter Alonzo, Sebastian, Antonio, Ferdinand, Gonzalo, and others.

Alon. Good boatswain, have care. Where's the master? Play the men.

Boats. I pray now, keep below.

Ant. Where is the master, boatswain?

Boats. Do you not hear him? You mar our labour: keep your cabins: you do assist the storm.

Gon. Nay, good, be patient.

Boats. When the sea is. Hence! What care these roarers for the name of the king?

[There is a great crash of thunder. Ariel is seen steering the ship which, taking fire, begins to sink as the curtain falls.]

N.B.—This Prologue is played during the progress of the Overture.

The Island. Prospero's Cell.

Prospero is discovered seated reading from his book.
The storm dies away gradually.

Enter Miranda.

Mir. If by your art, my dearest father, you have Put the wild waters in this roar, allay them.
O, I have suffered
With those that I saw suffer : a brave vessel,
Who had, no doubt, some noble creatures in her,
Dash'd all to pieces. O, the cry did knock Against my very heart. Poor souls, they perish'd.
Had I been any god of power, I would Have sunk the sea within the earth, or ere
It should the good ship so have swallow'd and
The fraughting souls within her.

Pros. (rises). Be collected :
No more amazement : tell your piteous heart
There's no harm done.

Mir. O, woe the day !

Pros. No harm.
I have done nothing but in care of thee,
Of thee, my dear one, thee, my daughter, who Art ignorant of what thou art, nought knowing
Of whence I am, nor that I am more better
Than Prospero, master of a full poor cell,
And thy no greater father.

Mir. More to know
Did never meddle with my thoughts.

Pros. 'Tis time
I should inform thee farther. Lend thy hand,
And pluck my magic garment from me. So :
[Lays down his mantle.]

Lie there, my art. Wipe thou thine eyes ; have comfort.

The direful spectacle of the wreck, which touch'd
The very virtue of compassion in thee,
I have with such provision in mine art
So safely ordered, that there is no soul,
No, not so much perdition as an hair
Betid to any creature in the vessel
Which thou heard'st cry, which thou saw'st sink.
Sit down ; [Miranda sits at Prospero's feet.]
For thou must now know farther.

Mir. You have often
Begun to tell me what I am, but stopp'd
And left me to a bootless inquisition.
Concluding " Stay : not yet."

Pros. The hour's now come ;
The very minute bids thee ope thine ear ;
Obey and be attentive. Canst thou remember
A time before we came unto this cell?
I do not think thou canst, for then thou wast not
Out three years old.

Mir. Certainly, sir, I can.

Pros. By what ? by any other house or person ?

Mir. 'Tis far off

And rather like a dream than an assurance.

Had I not four or five women once that tended me?

Pros. Thou hadst, and more, Miranda. [Rising.]

Thy father was the Duke of Milan, and

A prince of power. power.libtool.com.cn

Mir. O the heavens!

What foul play had we, that we came from thence?

Or blessed was 't we did?

Pros. Both, both, my girl:

By foul play, as thou say'st, were we heaved thence;

But blessedly help hither.

Mir. O, my heart bleeds

To think o' the teen that I have turn'd you to,

Which is from my remembrance! Please you farther.

Pros. My brother and thy uncle, called Antonio—

I pray thee, mark me—that a brother should

Be so perfidious!—[Distant thunder.] He whom next thyself,

Of all the world I loved, and to him put

The manage of my state.

Thy false uncle—having both the key

Of officer and office, set all hearts i' the state

To what tune pleased his ear. Thou attend'st not.

Mir. O, good sir, I do.

Pros. I pray thee mark me.

I, thus neglecting worldly ends, all dedicated

To closeness and the bettering of my mind,

He needs will be

Absolute Milan. Me, poor man, my library

Was dukedom large enough: of temporal royalties

www.libpof.com.cn

www.libtool.com.cn

He thinks me now incapable : confederates
 Wi' the King of Naples
 To give him annual tribute, do him homage,
 Subject his coronet to his crown, and bend
 The dukedom, yet unbow'd—alas, poor Milan!—
 To most ignoble stooping.

Mir. O the heavens !

Pros. Now the condition.

This King of Naples, being an enemy
 To me inveterate, hearkens my brother's suit ;
 Which was, that he Should presently extirpate me and mine
 Out of the dukedom, and confer fair Milan,
 With all the honours on my brother : whereon,
 A treacherous army levied, one midnight
 Did Antonio open
 The gates of Milan, and, i' the dead of darkness,
 Hurried thence me and thy crying self.

Mir. Wherefore did they not
 That hour destroy us ?

Pros. Well demanded, wench :
 My tale provokes that question. Dear, they durst not,
 So dear the love my people bore me.
 In few, they hurried us aboard a bark,
 Bore us some leagues to sea ; where they prepared
 A rotten carcass of a boat, not rigg'd,
 Nor tackle, sail, nor mast ; the very rats
 Instinctively have quit it : there they hoist us,
 To cry to the sea that roar'd to us ; to sigh
 To the winds, whose pity, sighing back again,

Did us but loving wrong.

Mir. Alack, what trouble

Was I then to you !

Pros. O, a cherubin
Thou wast that did preserve me. Thou didst smile,
Infused with a fortitude from heaven,
When I have deck'd the sea with drops full salt.

Mir. How came we ashore ?

Pros. By Providence divine.
Some food we had and some fresh water that
A noble Neapolitan, Gonzalo,
Out of his charity, did give us, with Rich garments, linens, stuffs and necessaries,
Which since have steaded much ; so, of his gentleness,
Knowing I loved my books, he furnish'd me
From mine own library with volumes that I prize above my dukedom.

Mir. Would I might
But ever see that man !

Pros. Here in this island we arrived ; and here
Have I, thy schoolmaster, made thee more profit
Than other princesses can, that have more time
For vainer hours, and tutors not so careful.

Mir. Heavens thank you for 't ! And now, I pray you, sir,
For still 'tis beating in my mind, your reason
For raising this sea-storm ?

Pros. Know thus far forth.
By accident most strange, bountiful Fortune
Now, my dear lady, hath mine enemies
Brought to this shore. Here cease more questions :

PROSPERO - MR. WILLIAM HAVILAND.

www.libtool.com.cn

Thou art inclined to sleep ; tis a good dulness,
 And give it way : [Miranda sleeps.]
 Come away, servant, come. I am ready now.
 Approach, my Ariel, come.

www.libtool.com.cn

Enter Ariel.

Ari. All hail, great master ! grave sir, hail ! I come
 To answer thy best pleasure ; be't to fly,
 To swim, to dive into the fire, to ride
 On the curl'd clouds, to thy strong bidding task
 Ariel, and all his quality.

Pros. Hast thou, spirit,
 Perform'd to point the tempest that I bade thee ?

Ari. To every article.

I boarded the king's ship ; now on the beak,
 Now in the waist, the deck, in every cabin,
 I flamed amazement : sometime I'd divide,
 And burn in many places ; on the topmast,
 The yards and bowsprit, would I flame distinctly,
 Then meet and join. Jove's lightnings, the precursors
 O' the dreadful thunder-claps, more momentary
 And sight-outrunning were not : the fire and cracks
 Of sulphurous roaring, the most mighty Neptune
 Seem to besiege, and make his bold waves tremble, Yea, his dread trident shake. [A noise of thunder.]

Pros. My brave spirit !
 Who was so firm, so constant, that this coil
 Would not infect his reason ?

Ari. Not a soul
 But felt a fever of the mad, and play'd

Some tricks of desperation. All but mariners
 Plunged in the foaming brine, and quit the vessel,
 Then all afire with me : the king's son, Ferdinand,
 With hair up-staring,—then like reeds, not hair,—
 Was the first man that leap'd; cried, " Hell is empty,
 And all the devils are here."

Pros. Why, that's my spirit I
 But was not this nigh shore ?

Ari. Close by, my master.

Pros. But are they, Ariel, safe ?

Ari. Not a hair perish'd ;
 On their sustaining garments not a blemish,
 But fresher than before : and, as thou badest me,
 In troops I have dispersed them 'bout the isle.
 The king's son I have landed by himself ;
 Whom I left cooling of the air with sighs
 In an odd angle of the isle, and sitting,
 His arms in this sad knot.

Pros. Of the king's ship,
 The mariners, say how thou hast disposed,
 And all the rest o' the fleet.

Ari. Safely in harbour
 Is the king's ship ; in the deep nook, where once
 Thou call'dst me up at midnight to fetch dew
 From the still-vexed Bermoothes, there she's hid :
 The mariners all under hatches stow'd ;
 Who, with a charm joined to their suffered labour,
 I have left asleep : and for the rest o' the fleet,
 Which I dispersed, they all have met again,
 And are upon the Mediterranean flote,

Bound sadly home for Naples,
 Supposing that they saw the king's ship wrecked,
 And his great person perish.

Pros. Ariel, thy charge
 Exactly is perform'd : but there's more work.
 The time must by us both be spent most preciouslly.

Ari. Is there more toil? Since thou dost give me pains,
 Let me remember thee what thou hast promised,
 Which is not yet perform'd me.

Pros. How now, moody?
 What is 't thou canst demand?

Ari. My liberty.

Pros. Before the time be out? no more!

Ari. I prithee,
 Remember I have done thee worthy service ;
 Told thee no lies, made no mistakings, served
 Without or grudge or grumblings : thou didst promise
 To bate me a full year.

Pros. Dost thou forget
 From what a torment I did free thee?

Ari. No.

Pros. Thou dost, and think'st it much to tread the ooze
 Of the salt deep,
 To run upon the sharp wind of the north,
 To do me business in the veins o' the earth
 When it is baked with frost.

Ari. I do not, sir.

Pros. Thou liest, malignant thing ! Hast thou forgot
 The foul witch Sycorax, who with age and envy
 Was grown into a hoop? hast thou forgot her?

Ari. No, sir.

Pros. Thou hast. Where was she born? speak;
tell me.

Ari. Sir, in Argier.

Pros. O, was she so? I must Once in a month recount what thou hast been,
Which thou forget'st. This damn'd witch Sycorax,
Did confine thee
By help of her more potent ministers,
And in her most unmitigable rage,
Into a cloven pine; within which rift
Imprison'd thou didst painfully remain
A dozen years; within which space she died
And left thee there; where thou didst vent thy groans
As fast as mill-wheels strike. Then was this island—
Save for the son that she did litter here,
A freckled whelp, hag-born—not honour'd with
A human shape.

Ari. Yes, Caliban her son.

Pros. Dull thing, I say so; he, that Caliban
Whom now I keep in service. Thou best know'st
What torment I did find thee in: thy groans
Did make wolves howl, and penetrate the breasts
Of ever angry bears: it was mine art,
When I arrived and heard thee, that made gape
The pine and let thee out.

Ari. I thank thee, master.

Pros. If thou more murmur'st, I will rend an oak,
And peg thee in his knotty entrails, till
Thou hast howl'd away twelve winters.

Ari. Pardon, master ;
I will be correspondent to command
And do my spiriting gently.

Pros. Do so, and after two days
I will discharge thee.

Ari. That's my noble master !
What shall I do? Say what. What shall I do?

Pros. Go make thyself like a nymph o' the sea :
Be subject to no sight but mine, invisible
To every eyeball else. Go take this shape
And hither come in't : go, hence with diligence !

[Exit Ariel.]

Scene III.

The Yellow Sands.

At Ariel's disappearance there is a roll of thunder, and the Scene darkens. In the darkness is faintly heard the singing of the Sea-nymphs, and through the mists we discern them dancing on the yellow sands and on the waves of the sea. The light is mystical—"the light that never was on sea or land."

Chorus. Come unto these yellow sands,
And then take hands :
Courtsied when you have and kiss'd,
The wild waves whist,
Foot it featly here and there ;
And, sweet sprites, the burthen bear
Hark, hark ! Bow-wow,
The watch-dogs bark ; Bow-wow,
Hark, hark ! I hear
The strain of strutting chanticler.

The Tempest.

Act I.

[At the end of the refrain, the Sea-nymphs vanish and the purple mists dissolve. Prospero enters and calls to Miranda within his cell. On the one side is the entrance to Prospero's cell and on the other there is a forbidding rock inhabited by Caliban.]

Pros. Awake, dear heart, awake! thou hast slept well ;
Awake !

Enter Miranda.

Mir. The strangeness of your story put Heaviness in me.

Pros. Shake it off. Come on ;
We'll visit Caliban, my slave, who never Yields us kind answer.

Mir. 'Tis a villain, sir,
I do not love to look on.

Pros. But, as 'tis,
We cannot miss him : he does make our fire,
Fetch in our wood, and serves in offices
That profit us. What, ho ! slave ! Caliban !
Thou earth, thou ! speak.

Cal. [Within.] There's wood enough within.

Pros. Come forth, I say ! there's other business for thee :
Come, thou tortoise !
Thou poisonous slave, come forth !

[He strikes the rock with his magic wand ; the rock opens, disclosing Caliban, "a savage and deformed slave," who crawls out with a fish in his mouth. His dress consists of fur and sea-weed, and round his neck he wears a necklace of shells and pearls, amber and coral, and other precious jewels of the sea.]

CALIBAN - MR. TREE.

www.libtool.com.cn

Cal. As wicked dew as e'er my mother brush'd
With raven's feather from unwholesome fen
Drop on you both ! a south-west blow on ye
And blister you all o'er !

Pros. For this, be sure, to-night thou shalt have cramps,
Side-stitches that shall pen thy breath up ; urchins
Shall, for that vast of night that they may work,
All exercise on thee.

Cal. I must eat my dinner.

Pros. Thou shalt be pinch'd
As thick as honeycomb, each pinch more stinging
Than bees that made them.

Cal. This island's mine, by Sycorax, my mother,
Which thou takest from me. When thou camest first,
Thou strokedst me and madest much of me, wouldst give me
Water with berries in 't ; and teach me how
To name the bigger light, and how the less,
That burn by day and night : and then I loved thee
And show'd thee all the qualities o' the isle,
The fresh springs, brine-pits, barren place and fertile :
Cursed be I that did so ! All the charms
Of Sycorax, toads, beetles, bats, light on you !
For I am all the subjects that you have,
Which first was mine own king : and here you sty me
In this hard rock, whiles do you keep from me
The rest o' the island.

Pros. Thou most lying slave,
Whom stripes may move, not kindness ! I have used thee,

Filth as thou art, with human care, and lodg'd thee
In mine own cell, till thou didst seek to violate
The honour of my child.

Cal. O ho, O ho! would 't had been done!
Thou didst prevent me; I had peopled else
This isle with Calibans.

Pros. Abhorred slave, I pitied thee,
Took pains to make thee speak, taught thee each hour
One thing or other: when thou didst not, savage,
Know thine own meaning, but would'st gabble like
A thing most brutish, I endow'd thy purposes
With words that made them known.

Cal. You taught me language; and my profit on 't
Is, I know how to curse. The red plague rid you
For learning me your language!

[He tries to strike Prospero, who repels him with his magic wand, and Caliban crouches on the ground.]

Pros. Hag-seed, hence!
Fetch us in fuel; and be quick, thou'rt best,
To answer other business. Shrug'st thou, malice?
If thou neglect'st or dost unwillingly
What I command, I'll rack thee with old cramps,
Fill all thy bones with aches, make thee roar
That beasts shall tremble at thy din.

Cal. No, pray thee.
[Aside] I must obey: his art is of such power,
It would control my dam's god, Setebos,
And make a vassal of him.

Pros. So, slave; hence.

[Exit Prospero and Miranda into cave.]

[Beautiful music is heard. At its sound Caliban becomes transformed and is moved to dance, making inarticulate sounds as if attempting to sing. Ariel enters with the Nymphs; Caliban disappears over the rock in search of wood; the Nymphs disport themselves on the sands, offering Ariel the treasures of the shore, and decking his person with their aid. At the approach of Ferdinand the Nymphs vanish. Ariel beckons Ferdinand to the sands, singing.]

Come unto these yellow sands,
 And then take hands :
 Courtsied when you have and kiss'd,
 The wild waves whist,
 Foot it featly here and there ;
 And, sweet sprites, the burthen bear.

Burthen [dispersedly] Hark, hark !

Bow-wow.

The watch-dogs bark ;

Bow-wow.

Ari. Hark, hark ! I hear
 The strain of strutting chanticleer
 Cry, Cock-a-doodle-doo.

[Ariel vanishes.]

Fer. Where should this music be? I' the air or the earth?
 It sounds no more : and, sure, it waits upon
 Some god o' th' island. Sitting on a bank,
 Weeping again the king my father's wreck,
 This music crept by me upon the waters,
 Allaying both their fury and my passion
 With its sweet air : thence I have follow'd it,
 Or it hath drawn me rather. But 'tis gone.
 No, it begins again.

Ariel appears and sings.

Full fathom five thy father lies ;
 Of his bones are coral made ;
 Those are pearls that were his eyes ;
 Nothing of him that doth fade
 But doth suffer a sea-change
 Into something rich and strange.
 Sea-nymphs hourly ring his knell :

Burthen. Ding-dong.

[The Sea-nymphs are peeping from the rocks and from the waves.]

Ari. Hark! now I hear them,—Ding-dong bell.

[Ariel vanishes.]

Fer. The ditty does remember my drown'd father.
 This is no mortal business, nor no sound
 That the earth owes. I hear it now above me.

Enter Prospero and Miranda from cave.

Pros. The fringed curtains of thine eye advance
 And say what thou seest yond.

Mir. What is 't? a spirit?
 Lord, how it looks about! Believe me, sir,
 It carries a brave form. But 'tis a spirit.

Pros. No, wench; it eats and sleeps and hath such senses
 As we have, such. This gallant which thou seest
 Was in the wreck; and, but he's something stain'd
 With grief that's beauty's canker, thou mightst call him
 A goodly person: he hath lost his fellows
 And strays about to find them.

Mir. I might call him
 A thing divine, for nothing natural
 I ever saw so noble.

MIRANDA - MISS NORAH KERIN.

www.libtool.com.cn

Fer. [Turns and sees Miranda.] Most sure, the goddess
On whom these airs attend!

[They advance slowly towards each other in the wonderment of first love. Ferdinand touches Miranda and kneels at her feet.]

Vouchsafe my prayer—May know if you remain upon this island ;

And that you will some good instruction give
How I may bear me here : my prime request,
Which I do last pronounce, is, O you wonder !
If you be maid or no ?

Mir. No wonder, sir ;
But certainly a maid.

Fer. My language ! heavens !
I am the best of them that speak this speech,
Were I but where 'tis spoken.

Pros. How ? the best ?
What wert thou, if the King of Naples heard thee ?

Fer. A single thing, as I am now, that wonders
To hear thee speak of Naples. He does hear me ;
And that he does I weep : myself am Naples,
Who with mine eyes, ne'er since at ebb, beheld
The king my father wreck'd.

Mir. Alack, for mercy !

Fer. Yes, faith, and all his lords ; the Duke of Milan
And his brave son being twain.

Pros. At the first sight
They have changed eyes. Delicate Ariel,
I'll set thee free for this. [To Ferdinand.] A word, good sir ;

I fear you have done yourself some wrong : a word.

Mir. Why speaks my father so ungently? This Is the third man that e'er I saw, the first
That e'er I sighed for : pity move my father
To be inclin'd my way!

Fer. O, if a virgin,
And your affection not gone forth, I'll make you
The Queen of Naples.

Pros. Soft, sir ! one word more.

[Aside.] They are both in either's powers ; but this swift business

I must uneasy make, lest too light winning
Make the prize light. [To Ferdinand.] One word more ; I charge thee ;

That thou attend me : thou dost here usurp
The name thou owest not ; and hast put thyself
Upon this island as a spy, to win it
From me, the lord on't.

Fer. No, as I am a man.

Mir. There's nothing ill can dwell in such a temple :
If the ill spirit have so fair a house,
Good things will strive to dwell with 't.

Pros. Follow me.
Speak not you for him ; he's a traitor. Come ;
I'll manacle thy neck and feet together ;
Sea-water shalt thou drink ; thy food shall be
The fresh-brook muscles, wither'd roots and husks
Wherein the acorn cradled. Follow.

Fer. No ;
I will resist such entertainment, till

Mine enemy has more power.

[Draws, and is charmed from moving.]

Mir. O dear father,

Make not too rash a trial of him, for
He's gentle and not fearful.

Pros. What ! I say,
My foot my tutor ? Put thy sword up, traitor ;
Who mak'st a show but dar'st not strike, thy conscience
Is so possess'd with guilt ; come from thy ward,
For I can here disarm thee with this stick
And make thy weapon drop.

[Ferdinand attempts to strike Prospero, who raises his wand, at which Ferdinand drops his sword.]

Mir. Beseech you, father.

Pros. Hence ! hang not on my garments.

Mir. Sir, have pity ;
I'll be his surety.

Pros. Silence ! one word more Shall make me chide thee, if not hate thee. What !
An advocate for an impostor ! hush !
Thou think'st there is no more such shapes as he,
Having seen but him and Caliban : foolish wench !
To the most of men this is a Caliban,
And they to him are angels.

Mir. My affections
Are, then, most humble ; I have no ambition
To see a goodlier man.

Pros. Come on ; obey :
Thy nerves are in their infancy again,

And have no vigour in them.

Fer.

So they are :

My spirits, as in a dream, are all bound up.
 My father's loss, the weakness which I feel,
 The wreck of all my friends, nor this man's threats,
 To whom I am subdued, are but light to me,
 Might I but through my prison once a day
 Behold this maid : all corners else o' the earth
 Let liberty make use of ; space enough
 Have I in such a prison.

Pros. [Aside.] It works.

[Ariel appears.]

Thou hast done well, fine Ariel ;
 Hark what thou else shalt do me.

Mir.

Be of comfort ;

My father's of a better nature, sir,
 Than he appears by speech ; this is unwonted
 Which now came from him.

Pros.

Thou shalt be as free

As mountain winds : but then exactly do
 All points of my command.

Ari.

To the syllable. [Exit Ariel.]

Pros. Come, follow. Speak not for him.

[Exeunt.]

[Prospero leads Miranda slowly away, followed by Ferdinand. Caliban enters carrying wood, and watches the lovers ; with hatred in his face he lifts a log to strike Ferdinand, but is charmed from doing so by Prospero, and skulks into his rocky lair. Prospero and Miranda move towards the cell, Ferdinand following enrapt. The Sea-nymphs are heard singing faintly as the curtain falls.]

END OF ACT I.

A WOOD.

EMILE A. RUCHEL

www.libtool.com.cn

Act Second.

www.libtool.com.cn

Scene I.

A Wood.

Ariel is discovered in a bower made by the surrounding trees, from which wild honey-suckle hangs in profusion. He sings.

Where the bee sucks, there lurk I ;
 In a cowslip's bell I lie ;
 There I couch when owls do cry.
 On the bat's back I do fly
 After summer merrily.
 Merrily, merrily shall I live now
 Under the blossom that hangs on the bough.

N.B.—Shakespeare introduces this song in the last Act of the play, but it is thought to be equally appropriate in the Woodland Scene. The chorus of invisible fairies accompanies the song.

Enter Alonzo, Sebastian, Antonio, Gonzalo, Adrian, Francisco and others.

Gon. Beseech you, sir, be merry ; you have cause,
 So have we all, of joy ; for our escape
 Is much beyond our loss. Then wisely, good sir, weigh
 Our sorrow with our comfort.

Alon. Prithee, peace.

Seb. He receives comfort like cold porridge.

Look, he's winding up the watch of his wit ; by and by it will strike.

Gon. Sir,—

Seb. One : tell.

Gon. When every grief is entertain'd that's offer'd,
Comes to the entertainer—

Seb. A dollar.

Gon. Dolour comes to him, indeed : you have spoken truer than you purposed.

Seb. You have taken it wiselier than I meant you should.

Gon. Therefore, my lord—

[They sit and lie on the ground.]

Ant. Fie, what a spendthrift he is of his tongue !

Alon. I prithee, spare.

Gon. Well, I have done : but yet,—

Seb. He will be talking.

Gon. Though this island seem to be desert,—

Seb. Ha, ha, ha !

Gon. Uninhabitable and almost inaccessible,—

Seb. Yet,—

Gon. Yet,—

Ant. He could not miss 't.

Gon. It must needs be of subtle, tender and delicate temperance.

Adr. The air breathes upon us here most sweetly.

Gon. Here is everything advantageous to life.

Ant. True ; save means to live.

Seb. Of that there's none, or little.

Gon. How lush and lusty the grass looks ! how green !

Ant. The ground, indeed, is tawny.

Seb. With an eye of green in 't.

Ant. He misses not much.

Seb. No ; he doth but mistake the truth totally.

Gon. But the rarity of it is,—which is indeed almost beyond credit,—

Seb. As many vouched rarities are.

Gon. That our garments, being, as they were, drenched in the sea, hold notwithstanding their freshness and glosses, being rather new-dyed than stained with salt water. Methinks our garments are now as fresh as when we put them on first in Afric, at the marriage of the king's fair daughter Claribel to the King of Tunis.

Seb. 'Twas a sweet marriage, and we prosper well in our return.

Alon. Would I had never Married my daughter there ! for, coming thence,

My son is lost.

Fran. Sir, he may live :

I saw him beat the surges under him,
And ride upon their backs ; he trod the water,
Whose enmity he flung aside, and breasted
The surge most swoln that met him ; his bold head
'Bove the contentious waves he kept, and oar'd
Himself with his good arms in lusty stroke
To the shore, that o'er his wave-worn basis bow'd,
As stooping to relieve him : I not doubt
He came alive to land.

Alon. No, no, he's gone.

Seb. Sir, you may thank yourself for this great loss,
That would not bless our Europe with your daughter,
But rather lose her to an African ;
The fault's your own.

Gon. My lord Sebastian,

The truth you speak doth lack some gentleness,
And time to speak it in : you rub the sore
When you should bring the plaster.
Had I plantation of this isle, my lord,—

Ant. He 'ld sow 't with nettle-seed.

Seb. Or docks, or mallows.

Gon. And were the king on 't, what would I do ?

Seb. 'Scape being drunk for want o' wine.

Gon. I' the commonwealth I would by contraries
Execute all things ; for no kind of traffic
Would I admit ; no name of magistrate ;
Letters should not be known ; riches, poverty,
And use of service, none ; contract, succession,
Bourn, bound of land, tilth, vineyard, none ;
No use of metal, corn, or wine, or oil ;
No occupation ; all men idle, all ;
And women, too, but innocent and pure ;
No sovereignty ;—

Seb. Yet he would be king on 't.

Ant. The latter end of his commonwealth forgets the beginning.

Gon. All things in common nature should produce
Without sweat or endeavour : treason, felony,
Sword, pike, knife, gun, or need of any engine,
Would I not have : but nature should bring forth,
Of its own kind, all foison, all abundance,
To feed my innocent people.

Seb. No marrying 'mong his subjects ?

Ant. None, man.

Gon. I would with such perfection govern, sir,
To excel the golden age.

Seb. 'Save his majesty !

Ant. Long live Gonzalo !

Enter Ariel, invisible, playing solemn music.

Ant. Nay, good my lord, be not angry.

Gon. No, I warrant you ; I will not adventure my discretion so weakly. Will you laugh me asleep, for I am very heavy ?

Ant. Go sleep, and hear us.

[All sleep except Alonzo, Sebastian and Antonio.]

Alon. What, all so soon asleep ! I wish mine eyes
Would, with themselves, shut up my thoughts : I find
They are inclined to do so.

Seb. Please you, sir,
Do not omit the heavy offer of it :
It seldom visits sorrow ; when it doth,
It is a comforter.

Ant. We two, my lord,
Will guard your person while you take your rest,
And watch your safety.

Alon. Thank you. Wondrous heavy.

[Alonzo sleeps. Exit Ariel.]

Seb. What a strange drowsiness possesses them !

Ant. It is the quality o' the climate.

Seb. Why
Doth it not then our eyelids sink ? I find not Myself disposed to sleep.

Ant. They fell together all, as by consent ;

They dropp'd, as by a thunder-stroke. What might,
 Worthy Sebastian? O, what might?—No more :—
 And yet methinks I see it in thy face,
 What thou shouldst be : the occasion speaks thee, and
 My strong imagination sees a crown
 Dropping upon thy head.

Seb. Prithee say on.

Ant. Will you grant with me
 That Ferdinand is drown'd?

Seb. He's gone.

Ant. O, that you bore
 The mind that I do ! what a sleep were this
 For your advancement ! Do you understand me?

Seb. Methinks I do.

Ant. And how does your content
 Tender your own good fortune?

Seb. I remember
 You did supplant your brother Prospero.

Ant. True :
 And look how well my garments sit upon me ;
 Much feater than before : my brother's servants
 Were then my fellows ; now they are my men.

Seb. But for your conscience?

Ant. Ay, sir ; where lies that ? I feel not
 This deity in my bosom : Here lies your brother,
 No better than the earth he lies upon,
 If he were that which now he's like, that's dead ;
 Whom I, with this obedient steel, three inches of it,
 Can lay to bed for ever ; whiles you, doing thus,
 To the perpetual wink for aye might put

This ancient morsel, this Sir Prudence, who Should not upbraid our course. For all the rest,
They'll take suggestion as a cat laps milk ;
They'll tell the clock to any business that
We say befits the hour.

Seb. Thy case, dear friend,
Shall be my precedent ; as thou got'st Milan,
I'll come by Naples. Draw thy sword ; one stroke
Shall free thee from the tribute which thou payest ;
And I the king shall love thee.

Ant. Draw together !

Seb. O, but one word. [They talk apart.]

Re-enter Ariel, invisible, sings.

While you here do snoring lie,
Open-eyed conspiracy
His time doth take.
If of life you keep a care,
Shake off slumber, and beware ;
Awake, awake !

Ant. Then let us both be sudden.

Gon. Now, good angels, preserve the king. [They wake.]

Alon. Why are you drawn ?

Wherefore this ghastly looking ?

Gon. What's the matter ?

Seb. Whiles we stood here securing your repose,
Even now, we heard a hollow burst of bellowing
Like bulls, or rather lions ; did 't not wake you ?
It struck mine ear most terribly.

Alon. I heard nothing.

Ant. O, 'twas a din to fright a monster's ear,

To make an earthquake ! sure, it was the roar
Of a whole herd of lions.

Alon. Heard you this, Gonzalo?

Gon. Upon mine honour, sir, I heard a humming,
And that a strange one, too, which did awake me :
As mine eyes open'd,
I saw their weapons drawn : there was a noise,
That's verily. 'Tis best we stand upon our guard,
Or that we quit this place : let's draw our weapons.

Alon. Lead off this ground ; and let's make further search
For my poor son.

Gon. Heavens keep him from these beasts !
For he is, sure, i' th' island.

Alon. Lead away !

[All go out. Ariel appears again among the honeysuckle.]

Ari. Prospero, my lord, shall know what I have done ;
So, king, go safely on to seek thy son.

[Ariel sings.]

“ Merrily, merrily, shall I live now,
Under the blossom that hangs from the bough.”

Scene II.

A Barren Waste. A storm and noise of thunder.

Enter Caliban with a burden of wood.

Cal. All the infections that the sun sucks up
From bogs, fens, flats, on Prosper fall, and make him
By inch-meal a disease ! [Music.] His spirits hear me,
And yet I needs must curse. But they'll nor pinch,

CHAS. A. BUCKEL.

STEPHANO - MR. LOUIS CALVERT.

www.libtool.com.cn

Fright me with urchin-shows, pitch me i' the mire,
 Nor lead me, like a firebrand, in the dark
 Out of my way, unless he bid them ; but
 For every trifle are they set upon me ;
 Sometime like apes, that mow and chatter at me,
 And after bite me ; then like hedgehogs, which Lie tumbling in my barefoot way, and mount
 Their pricks at my footfall ; sometime am I
 All wound with adders, who with cloven tongues
 Do hiss me into madness.

[Trinculo heard in the distance.] Lo, now, lo !
 Here comes a spirit of his, and to torment me
 For bringing wood in slowly. I'll fall flat ;
 Perchance he will not mind me.

Enter Trinculo.

Trin. Here's neither bush nor shrub, to bear off any weather at all, and another storm brewing ; I hear it sing i' the wind : yond same black cloud, yond huge one, looks like a foul bombard that would shed his liquor. If it should thunder as it did before, I know not where to hide my head ; yond same cloud cannot choose but fall by pailfuls.
 [Falls over Caliban.] What have we here ? a man or a fish ? dead or alive ? A fish ; he smells like a fish ; a very ancient and fish-like smell ; a kind of not of the newest Poor-John. A strange fish ! Were I in England now, as once I was, and had but this fish painted, not a holiday fool there but would give a piece of silver : there would this monster make a man : any strange beast there makes a man : when they will not give a doit to relieve a lame beggar, they will lay out ten to see a dead Indian. Legged like a man ! and his fins like arms ! Warm to my troth ! I do now let loose my opinion ; hold it no longer : this is no fish, but an islander, that hath lately suffered by a thunderbolt. [Thunder.] Alas, the storm is come again ! my best way is to creep under his gaberdine ; there is no other shelter hereabout : misery acquaints a man with strange bed-fellows. I will here shroud till the dregs of the storm be past.

Enter Stephano, singing ; a bottle in his hand.

The master, the swabber, the boatswain, and I,
 The gunner, and his mate,
 Loved Moll, Meg and Marian and Margery,
 But none of us cared for Kate ;
 For she had a tongue with a tang,
 Then to sea boys, and let her go hang !

This is a scurvy tune too : but here's my comfort.

[Drinks, and sits on Caliban who gives a cry.
Stephano is surprised into sobriety.]

What's the matter ? Have we devils here ? Do you put tricks upon 's with salvages and men of Ind, ha ? I have not 'scaped drowning to be afeard now of your four legs.

Cal. The spirit torments me ; Oh !

Ste. This is some monster of the isle with four legs, who hath got, as I take it, an ague. Where the devil should he learn our language? I will give him some relief, if it be but for that. If I can recover him and keep him tame, and get to Naples with him, he's a present for any emperor that ever trod on neat's-leather.

Cal. Do not torment me, prithee; I'll bring my wood home faster.

Ste. He's in his fit now and does not talk after the wisest. He shall taste of my bottle: if he have never drunk wine afore, it will go near to remove his fit.

Cal. Thou dost me yet but little hurt; thou wilt anon, I know it by thy trembling: now Prosper works upon thee.

Ste. Come on your ways: open your mouth; here is that which will give language to you, cat: open your mouth; this will shake your shaking, I can tell you, and that soundly: you cannot tell who's your friend: open your chaps again.

Trin. I should know that voice: it should be—but he is drowned; and these are devils:—O defend me!

Ste. Four legs and two voices: a most delicate monster! His forward voice, now, is to speak well of his friend: his backward voice is to utter foul speeches and to detract. If all the wine in my bottle will recover him, I will help his ague. Come:—Amen! I will pour some in thy other mouth.

Trin. Stephano!

Ste. Doth thy other mouth call me? Mercy, mercy! This is a devil, and no monster: I will leave him; I have no long spoon.

Trin. Stephano! If thou beest Stephano, touch me, and speak to me; for I am Trinculo,—be not afeard,—thy good friend Trinculo.

Ste. If thou beest Trinculo, come forth: I'll pull thee by the lesser legs: if any be Trinculo's legs, these are they. [Drags him out by the legs.] Thou art very Trinculo indeed! How camest thou to be the siege of this moon-calf?

Trin. I took him to be killed with a thunder-stroke. But art thou not drowned, Stephano? I hope now thou art not drowned. Is the storm over-blown? I hid me under the dead moon-calf's gaberdine for fear of the storm. And art thou living, Stephano? O Stephano, two Neapolitans 'scaped!

Ste. Prithee, do not turn me about; my stomach is not constant.

Cal. [Aside.] These be fine things, an if they be not sprites. That's a brave god and bears celestial liquor: I will kneel to him.

Ste. How didst thou 'scape? How camest thou hither? Swear by this bottle how thou camest hither. I escaped upon a butt of sack which the sailors heaved o'erboard, by this bottle!

Cal. I'll swear upon that bottle to be thy true subject; for the liquor is not earthly.

Ste. Here; swear, then, how thou escapedst. [He drinks.]

Trin. Swum ashore, man, like a duck : I can swim like a duck, I'll be sworn.

Ste. Here, kiss the book. Though thou canst swim like a duck, thou art made like a goose.

[Trinculo drinks.]
www.libtool.com.cn

Trin. O Stephano, hast any more of this ?

Ste. The whole butt, man : my cellar is in a rock by the sea-side where my wine is hid. How now, moon-calf ! how does thine ague ?

Cal. Hast thou not dropp'd from heaven ?

Ste. Out o' the moon, I do assure thee : I was the man i' the moon when time was.

Cal. I've seen thee in her, and I do adore thee :

My mistress showed me thee and thy dog and thy bush.

Ste. Come, swear to that ; kiss the book ; swear.

[Caliban drinks.]

Trin. By this good light, this is a very shallow monster ! I afeard of him ! A very weak monster ! The man i' the moon ! A most poor credulous monster ! Well drawn, monster, in good sooth !

Cal. I'll show thee every fertile inch o' th' island ;
And I will kiss thy foot : I prithee be my god.

Trin. By this light, a most perfidious and drunken monster ! when 's god's asleep, he'll rob his bottle.

Cal. I'll kiss thy foot : I'll swear myself thy subject.

Ste. Come on, then ; down, and swear.

Trin. I shall laugh myself to death at this puppy-headed monster. A most scurvy monster ! I could find in my heart to beat him,—

Ste. Come, kiss. [Caliban kisses Stephano's foot.]

Trin. But that the poor monster's in drink : an abominable monster !

Cal. I'll show thee the best springs ; I'll pluck thee berries ;
I'll fish for thee and get thee wood enough.

A plague upon the tyrant that I serve !

I'll bear him no more sticks, but follow thee,

Thou wondrous man.

Trin. A most ridiculous monster, to make a wonder of a poor drunkard !

Cal. I prithee, let me bring thee where crabs grow ;
And I with my long nails will dig thee pig-nuts ;
Show thee a jay's nest and instruct thee how
To snare the nimble marmoset ; I'll bring thee
To clustering filberts, and sometimes I'll get thee
Young scamels from the rock : Wilt thou go with me ?

Ste. I prithee now, lead the way without any more talking.
Trinculo, the king and all our company else being drowned, we will inherit here : here ; bear my bottle : fellow Trinculo, we'll fill him by and by again.

Cal. [Sings drunkenly.]

Farewell, master ; farewell, farewell !

Trin. A howling monster ; a drunken monster !

Cal. No more dams I'll make for fish ;
Nor fetch in firing
At requiring ;
Nor scrape trencher, nor wash dish :
'Ban, 'Ban, Ca-Caliban,
Has a new master : get a new man.

[They all go off dancing and singing the refrain.]

Cal. [Shouting.] Freedom, heyday ! heyday, freedom !

[Exeunt singing.]

FERDINAND - MR. BASIL GILL.

www.libtool.com.cn

Scene III.

Before Prospero's Cell.

Enter Ferdinand, bearing a log.

Fer. There be some sports are painful, and their labour
 Delight in them sets off : some kinds of baseness
 Are nobly undergone, and most poor matters
 Point to rich ends. This my mean task
 Would be as heavy to me as odious, but
 The mistress which I serve quickens what's dead,
 And makes my labours pleasures : O, she is Ten times more gentle than her father's crabbed,
 And he's composed of harshness. I must remove
 Some thousands of these logs and pile them up,
 Upon a sore injunction : my sweet mistress
 Weeps when she sees me work, and says, such baseness
 Had never like executor. [Enter Miranda.]

I forget :

But these sweet thoughts do even refresh my labours,
 Most busy lest, when I do it.

Mir. Alas, now, pray you,
 Work not so hard ; I would the lightning had Burnt up those logs that you are enjoind to pile !
 Pray, set it down and rest you : when this burns,
 'Twill weep for having wearied you. My father
 Is hard at study ; pray, now, rest yourself ;
 He's safe for these three hours.

Fer. O most dear mistress,
The sun will set before I shall discharge
What I must strive to do.

Mir. If you'll sit down,
I'll bear your logs the while : pray, give me that ;
I'll carry it to the pile.

Fer. No, precious creature ;
I had rather crack my sinews, break my back,
Than you should such dishonour undergo,
While I sit lazy by.

Mir. It would become me
As well as it does you : and I should do it
With much more ease ; for my good will is to it,
And yours it is against.

Mir. You look wearily.
Fer. No, noble mistress ; 'tis fresh morning with me
When you are by at night. I do beseech you—
Chiefly that I might set it in my prayers—
What is your name ?

Mir. Miranda.—O my father,
I have broke your hest to say so !

Fer. Admired Miranda !
Indeed the top of admiration ! worth
What's dearest to the world ! Full many a lady
I have eyed with best regard, and many a time
The harmony of their tongues hath into bondage
Brought my too diligent ear : for several virtues
Have I liked several women ; never any
With so full soul, but some defect in her
Did quarrel with the noblest grace she owed,

And put it to the foil : but you, O you,
So perfect and so peerless, are created
Of every creature's best !

Mir.

I do not know

One of my sex ; no woman's face remember,
Save, from my glass, mine own ; nor have I seen
More that I may call men than you, good friend,
And my dear father : how features are abroad,
I am skill-less of ; but, by my modesty,
The jewel is my dower. I would not wish
Any companion in the world but you,
Nor can imagination form a shape,
Besides yourself, to like of. But I prattle
Something too wildly, and my father's precepts
I therein do forget.

Enter Prospero at a distance.

Fer. [Kneeling.] Miranda ; Hear my soul speak :
The very instant that I saw you, did
My heart fly to your service ; there resides
To make me slave to it : and for your sake
Am I this patient log-man.

Mir.

Do you love me ?

Fer. O heaven, O earth, bear witness to this sound,
And crown what I profess with kind event
If I speak true ! if hollowly, invert
What best is boded me to mischief ! I,
Beyond all limit of what else i' the world,
Do love, prize, honour you.

Mir.

I am a fool

To weep at what I am glad of.

Pros. [Aside.] Fair encounter
Of two most rare affections! Heavens rain grace
On that which breeds between 'em!

Fer. [Rising.] www.libtool.com Wherefore weep you?

Mir. At mine unworthiness, that dare not offer
What I desire to give; and much less take
What I shall die to want. But this is trifling;
And all the more it seeks to hide itself,
The bigger bulk it shows. Hence, bashful cunning!
And prompt me, plain and holy innocence!
I am your wife, if you will marry me;
If not, I'll die your maid: to be your fellow
You may deny me; but I'll be your servant,
Whether you will or no.

Fer. My mistress, dearest;
And I thus humble ever. [Kneels.]

Mir. My husband, then? [Raising him.]

Fer. Ay, with a heart as willing
As bondage e'er of freedom: here's my hand.

Mir. And mine, with my heart in't.

Pros. So glad of this as they I cannot be,
Who are surprised withal; but my rejoicing
At nothing can be more. I'll to my book. [Exit.]

[The lovers kiss for the first time. They walk slowly up and look out to sea. A silence falls; the light begins to fade. Miranda's head falls on Ferdinand's shoulder, sweet music is heard, and the scene fades out.]

ANTONIO - MR. LYN HARDING.

www.libtool.com.cn

Scene IV.

Another part of the Island.

www.libtool.com.cn
Enter Alonzo, Sebastian, Antonio, Gonzalo, Adrian, Francisco and others.

Gon. By'r lakin, I can go no further, sir,
 My old bones ache : here's a maze trod, indeed,
 Through forth-rights and meanders ! By your patience,
 I needs must rest me.

Alon. Old lord, I cannot blame thee,
 Who am myself attach'd with weariness,
 To the dulling of my spirits : sit down, and rest.
 Even here I will put off my hope, and keep it
 No longer for my flatterer : he is drown'd
 Whom thus we stray to find ; and the sea mocks
 Our frustrate search on land. Well, let him go.

Ant. [Aside to Sebastian.] I am right glad that he's so out of hope.

Do not, for one repulse, forego the purpose
 That you resolved to effect.

Seb. [Aside to Antonio.] The next advantage
 Will we take thoroughly.

Ant. [Aside to Sebastian.] Let it be to-night ;
 For, now they are oppress'd with travel, they Will not, nor cannot, use such vigilance
 As when they are fresh.

Seb. [Aside to Antonio.] I say, to-night : no more.

[Solemn and strange music.]

Alon. What harmony is this? My good friends, hark!

Gon. Marvellous sweet music!

*Enter several strange Shapes, bringing in a banquet ;
they dance about it with gentle actions of salutation ;
and, inviting the King, &c., to eat, they depart.*

Alon. Give us kind keepers, heavens! What were these?

Seb. A living drollery. Now I will believe

That there are unicorns.

Gon. If in Naples

I should report this now, would they believe me?

If I should say, I saw such islanders—

Fran. They vanish'd strangely.

Seb. No matter, since

They have left their viands behind; for we have stomachs.

Will't please you taste of what is here?

Alon. I will stand to, and feed,

Although my last: no matter, since I feel

The best is past. Brother, my lord the duke,

Stand to and do as we. [Thunder and lightning.]

Enter Ariel, like a harpy: claps his wings upon the table.

Ari. You are three men of sin, whom Destiny,

That hath to instrument this lower world

And what is in't, the never-surfeited sea

Hath caused to belch you up; and on this island,

Where man doth not inhabit; you 'mongst men

Being most unfit to live.

[Alonzo, Sebastian, &c., draw their swords.]

You fools ! I and my fellows
Are ministers of Fate : the elements,
Of whom your swords are temper'd, may as well
Wound the loud winds, or with bemock'd-at stabs
Kill the still-closing waters, as diminish
One dowl that's in my plume :
But remember that you three
From Milan did supplant good Prospero ;
Exposed unto the sea, which hath requit it,
Him and his innocent child : for which foul deed
The powers, delaying, not forgetting,
Do pronounce by me
Lingering perdition, worse than any death.

[There is a crash of thunder followed by a momentary darkness, during which Ariel and the banquet vanish. The light returns and all are standing in amazement, gazing at vacancy.]

END OF ACT II.

Act Third.
www.libtool.com.cn

Scene I.

The Cliffs.

Caliban is discovered seated on the shore listening to sweet music in the air, and weaving a wreath of flowers wherewith to crown his new-found master. Placing the wreath on his head, he looks at himself in the pool.

Enter Stephano and Trinculo.

Ste. Tell not me;—when the butt is out, we will drink water; not a drop before: therefore bear up, and board 'em. Servant-monster, drink to me.

[Caliban takes the wreath and crowns Stephano.]

Trin. Servant-monster! the folly of this island! They say there's but five upon this isle: we are three of them; if th' other two be brained like us, the state totters.

Ste. Drink, servant-monster, when I bid thee: thy eyes are almost set in thy head.

[Lies down on his back.]

Trin. Where should they be set else? he were a brave monster indeed, if they were set in his tail.

Cal. How does thy honour? Let me lick thy shoe.

[Stephano offers his foot. Trinculo laughs.]

I'll not serve him: he is not valiant.

Trin. Thou liest, most ignorant monster : I am in case to iustle a constable. Why, thou deboshed fish, thou, was there ever man a coward that hath drunk so much sack as I to-day? Wilt thou tell a monstrous lie, being but half a fish and half a monster?

Cal. Lo, how he mocks me ! wilt thou let him, my lord?

Trin. “ Lord ” quoth he ! That a monster should be such a natural !

Cal. Lo, lo, again ! bite him to death, I prithee.

Ste. Trinculo, keep a good tongue in your head : if you prove a mutineer,—the next tree ! The poor monster’s my subject, and he shall not suffer indignity.

Cal. I thank my noble lord. Wilt thou be pleased to hearken once again to the suit I made to thee ?

Ste. Marry, will I : kneel and repeat it ; I will stand, and so shall Trinculo. [Rises and Caliban kneels.]

Enter Ariel, invisible.

Cal. As I told thee before, I am subject to a tyrant, a sorcerer, that by his cunning hath cheated me of the island.

Ari. Thou liest.

Cal. Thou liest, thou jesting monkey, thou :

I would my valiant master would destroy thee !

I do not lie.

Ste. Trinculo, if you trouble him any more in ’s tale, by this hand, I will supplant some of your teeth.

Trin. Why, I said nothing.

Ste. Mum, then, and no more. Proceed.

Cal. I say, by sorcery he got this isle ;
From me he got it. If thy greatness will Revenge it on him,—for I know thou darest,
But this thing dare not,—

Ste. That's most certain.

Cal. Thou shalt be lord of it and I'll serve thee.

Ste. How now shall this be compassed? Canst thou bring me to the party?

Cal. Yea, yea, my lord : I'll yield him thee asleep,
Where thou mayst knock a nail into his head.

Ari. Thou liest ; thou canst not.

Cal. What a pied ninny's this ! Thou scurvy patch !

[Ariel beats Caliban ; he, thinking the blow has been dealt by Trinculo, beats him.]

I do beseech thy greatness, give him blows,
And take his bottle from him : when that's gone,
He shall drink nought but brine ; for I'll not show him
Where the quick freshes are.

Ste. Trinculo, run into no further danger : interrupt the monster one word further, and, by this hand, I'll turn my mercy out o' doors, and make a stock-fish of thee.

Trin. Why, what did I? I did nothing. I'll go farther off.

Ste. Didst thou not say he lied?

Ari. Thou liest.

Ste. Do I so? take thou that. [Beats Trinculo.]

Cal. Ha, ha, ha !

Ste. Now, forward with your tale. Prithee, stand farther off.

Cal. Why, as I told thee, 'tis a custom with him
 I' the afternoon to sleep : there thou mayst brain him,
 Having first seized his books ; or with a log
 Batter his skull, or paunch him with a stake,
 Or cut his wezand with thy knife. Remember
 First to possess his books ; for without them
 He's but a sot, as I am, nor hath not
 One spirit to command : burn but his books.
 And that most deeply to consider is
 The beauty of his daughter ; he himself
 Calls her a nonpareil : I never saw a woman,
 But only Sycorax my dam and she ;
 But she as far surpasseth Sycorax
 As great'st does least.

Ste. Is it so brave a lass ?

Cal. Ay, lord, she will bring thee forth brave brood.

Ste. Monster, I will kill this man : his daughter and I will be king and queen,—save our graces !—and Trinculo and thyself shall be viceroys. Dost thou like the plot, Trinculo ?

Trin. Excellent.

Ste. Give me thy hand : I am sorry I beat thee ; but, while thou livest, keep a good tongue in thy head. [Both weep.]

Cal. Within this half hour will he be asleep :
 Wilt thou destroy him then ?

Ste. Ay, on mine honour.

Ari. This will I tell my master.

Cal. Thou makest me merry ; I am full of pleasure :
 Let us be jocund : will you troll the catch

You taught me but while-ere ?

Ste. At thy request, monster, I will do reason, any reason,
Come on, Trinculo, let us sing. [Sings.]

Flout 'em and scout 'em
And scout 'em and flout 'em ;
Thought is free.

Cal. That's not the tune.

[Caliban is in deep pain. Ariel plays the tune on a pipe.]

Ste. What is this same ?

Trin. This is the tune of our catch, played by the picture of Nobody.

Ste. If thou beest a man, show thyself in thy likeness : if thou beest a devil, take't as thou list.

Trin. O, forgive me my sins !

Ste. He that dies pays all debts : I defy thee. [Stephano strikes at Ariel with his staff.] Mercy upon us !

Cal. Art thou afeard ?

Ste. No, monster, not I.

Cal. Be not afeard ; the isle is full of noises,
Sounds and sweet airs, that give delight, and hurt not.
Sometimes a thousand twangling instruments
Will hum about mine ears ; and sometimes voices,
That, if I then had waked after long sleep,
Will make me sleep again : and then, in dreaming,
The clouds methought would open and show riches
Ready to drop upon me ; that, when I waked,
I cried to dream again.

Ste. This will prove a brave kingdom to me, where I shall have my music for nothing.

Cal. When Prospero is destroyed.

Ste. That shall be by and by : I remember the story.

Trin. The sound is going away ; let's follow it, and after do our work.

Ste. Lead, monster ; we'll follow. I would I could see this taborer ; he lays it on. [Exeunt.]

[Ariel leads them about like a will-o'-the-wisp, then flies above them still playing the air. Caliban attempts to dance and sing whilst the others watch him curiously.]

Scene II.

In Prospero's Cave.

Ferdinand sitting on a rock.

Enter Prospero and Miranda.

Pros. If I have too austere punish'd you,
Your compensation makes amends ; for I
Have given you here a third of mine own life,
Or that for which I live ; who once again
I tender to thy hand ; all thy vexations
Were but my trials of thy love, and thou
Hast strangely stood the test ; here, afore Heaven,
I ratify this my rich gift. O Ferdinand,
Do not smile at me that I boast her off,
For thou shalt find she will outstrip all praise,
And make it halt behind her.

Fer. I do believe it
Against an oracle.

Pros. Then, as my gift and thine own acquisition
Worthily purchased, take my daughter :
Sit, then, and talk with her ; she is thine own.
What, Ariel ! my industrious servant, Ariel !

www.libtool.com.cn

Enter Ariel.

Ari. What would my potent master ? here I am.

Pros. Thou and thy meaner fellows your last service
Did worthily perform ; and I must use you
In such another trick. Go, bring the rabble,
O'er whom I give thee power, here to this place :
Incite them to quick motion ; for I must Bestow upon the eyes of this young couple
Some vanity of mine art : it is my promise,
And they expect it from me.

Ari. Presently ?

Pros. Ay, with a twink.

Ari. Before you can say " come " and " go,"
And breathe twice, and cry, " so, so,"
Each one, tripping on his toe,
Will be here with mop and mow.
Do you love me, master ? no ?

Pros. Dearly, my delicate Ariel : do not approach till thou dost hear me call.

Ari. Well I conceive. [Exit Ariel.]

Pros. No tongue ! all eyes ! be silent. [Soft music.]

[Prospero waves his wand, revealing a fairy glen and a lake, in which the Naiads of the winding brooks are playing among the water-lilies.]

SEBASTIAN - MR. JULIAN L'ESTRANGE.

www.libtool.com.cn

Enter Iris.

Iris. Ceres, most bounteous lady, thy rich leas
 Of wheat, rye, barley, vetches, oats and pease ;
 Thy turfy mountains, where live nibbling sheep,
 And flat meads thatched with stover, them to keep ;
 Thy banks with pioned and twilled brims,
 Which spongy April at thy hest betrimms,
 To make cold nymphs chaste crowns : and thy broom-groves,
 Whose shadow the dismissed bachelor loves,
 Being lass-lorn ; thy pole-clipt vineyard ;
 And thy sea-marge, sterile and rocky-hard,
 Where thou thyself dost air ;—the queen o' the sky,
 Whose watery arch and messenger am I,
 Bids thee leave these, and with her sovereign grace,
 Here, on this grass-plot, in this very place,
 To come and sport :—her peacocks fly amain :
 Approach, rich Ceres, her to entertain.

Enter Ceres.

Cer. Hail, many-colour'd messenger, that ne'er
 Dost disobey the wife of Jupiter ;
 Who, with thy saffron wings, upon my flowers
 Diffusest honey-drops, refreshing showers ;
 And with each end of thy blue bow dost crown
 My bosky acres, and my unshrubbed down,
 Rich scarf to my proud earth ;—why hath thy queen
 Summon'd me hither, to this short-grassed green ?

Iris. A contract of true love to celebrate ;
 And some donation freely to estate

On the blest lovers.

Cer. High'st queen of state,
Great Juno, comes ; I know her by her gait.

Juno. How does my bounteous sister ? Go with me
To bless this twain, that they may prosperous be,
And honour'd in their issue. [They sing.]

Honour, riches, marriage-blessing,
Long continuance, and increasing,
Hourly joys be still upon you ;
Juno sings her blessings on you.

Earth's increase, foison plenty,
Barns and garners never empty,
Vines with clustering bunches growing,
Plants with goodly burthen bowing ;
Spring come to you at the farthest
In the very end of harvest !
Scarcity and want shall shun you ;
Ceres' blessing so is on you.

[They gradually fade from view.]

Fer. This is a most majestic vision, and Harmonious charmingly. May I be bold
To think these spirits ?

Pros. Spirits, which by mine art
I have from their confines call'd to enact
My present fancies.

Fer. Let me live here ever ;
So rare a wonder'd father and a wife
Makes this place Paradise.

Pros. Sweet, now silence !
Or else our spell is marr'd.

[At this moment the water-nymphs are discovered. Iris addresses them.]

Iris. You nymphs, call'd Naiads, of the winding brooks,
 With your sedged crowns and ever-harmless looks,
 Leave your crisp channels, and on this green land
 Answer your summons; Juno does command.

[Addressing certain Reapers who appear.]

You sunburnt sicklemen, of August weary,
 Come hither from the furrow, and be merry :
 Come, temperate nymphs, and help to celebrate
 A contract of true love ; be not too late.
 Make holiday : your rye-straw hats put on,
 And these fresh nymphs encounter every one
 In country footing.

[At this point Shakespeare introduces a Masque, in which Iris calls on the "Naiads of the winding brooks. . . to celebrate a contract of true love," with the "sunburnt sicklemen of August weary." The author's stage instructions are as follows:—"Enter certain Reapers properly habited. They join with the Nymphs in a graceful dance." To illustrate this incident, I have designed a little Ballet with a purpose, of which the following explanatory story may not be amiss. The Naiads of the winding brooks are discovered disporting themselves in the water among the rushes and water-lilies. Iris calls on them to leave their crisp channels to dance on the green turf. Nothing loth, the Naiads leave their native element and dance as mortals dance. The sudden appearance of the boy Cupid interrupts their revels—the Naiads modestly immerse themselves in the water. Cupid, ever a match-maker, brings in his train the sunburnt sicklemen who, leaving their lonely furrows, are enjoined by Iris to make holiday with the Nymphs "in country footing." Taking advantage of the chaste amiability of the Nymphs, the Reapers endeavour to embrace them, but their advances are indignantly repulsed, the maidens very rightly pointing to their ringless wedding-fingers, it being illegal (in fairy-land) to exchange kisses without a marriage certificate. Thus rebuffed, the Reapers continue their dance alone. Suddenly Cupid re-appears on the scene, and shoots a dart in the heart of each coy maiden; at once they relent, and, love conquering restraint, they sue to the Reapers. But the Reapers are now obdurate. They laugh; the maidens weep. Cupid now shoots an arrow into the heart of each of the Reapers, who, seeing their little friends aweep, now sue to them, pointing to their wedding-fingers. Cupid re-appears on the scene, and an impromptu wedding is arranged, all the Reapers and Nymphs taking part in the ceremony. To the wedding song of "Honour, riches, marriage-blessing," the Nymphs assume the marriage veils which they gather from the mists of the lake, and each having received a ring and a blessing at the hands of the Rev. Master Cupid, they dance off with the Reapers in quest of everlasting happiness, thus triumphantly vindicating the ethics of the drama. No excuse is necessary for this introduction, which is in obedience to the author's directions. In the absence of any detailed instructions as to the nature of the Masque introduced by Shakespeare, it is hoped that this fanciful trifle will serve.]

Pros. Our revels now are ended. These our actors,
As I foretold you, were all spirits, and
Are melted into air, into thin air :

And, like the baseless fabric of this vision,
 The cloud-capp'd towers, the gorgeous palaces,
 The solemn temples, the great globe itself,
 Yea, all which it inherit, shall dissolve,
 And, like this insubstantial pageant faded,
 Leave not a rack behind. We are such stuff
 As dreams are made on; and our little life
 Is rounded with a sleep.

[Aside.] I had forgot that foul conspiracy
 Of the beast Caliban and his confederates
 Against my life : the minute of their plot
 Is almost come.

Fer. This is strange : your father's in some passion
 That works him strongly.

Mir. Never till this day
 Saw I him touch'd with anger so distemper'd.

Pros. Sir, I am vex'd ;
 Bear with my weakness ; my old brain is troubled :
 Be not disturb'd with my infirmity :
 If you be pleased, retire into my cell,
 And there repose : a turn or two I'll walk,
 To still my beating mind.

Fer. Mir. We wish your peace.

[Exeunt.]

Pros. I thank thee.

Come with a thought, Ariel, come.

Enter Ariel.

Ari. Thy thoughts I cleave to. What's thy pleasure?

Pros. Spirit,

We must prepare to meet with Caliban.

Ari. Ay, my commander : when I presented Ceres,
I thought to have told thee of it, but I fear'd
Lest I might anger thee.

Pros. Say again, where didst thou leave these varlets ?

Ari. I told you, sir, they were red-hot with drinking ;
So full of valour that they smote the air
For breathing in their faces ; beat the ground
For kissing of their feet ; yet always bending
Towards their project. Then I beat my tabor ;
At which, like unback'd colts, they prick'd their ears,
Advanced their eyelids, lifted up their noses
As they smelt music : so I charm'd their ears
That calf-like they my lowing follow'd through Tooth'd briers, sharp furzes, pricking goss and thorns,

Which enter'd their frail shins : at last I left them
I' the filthy-mantled pool beyond your cell,

Pros. This was well done, my bird.

Thy shape invisible retain thou still ;
Go, charge my goblins that they grind their joints
With dry convulsions ; shorten up their sinews
With aged cramps. Let them be hunted soundly.

Ari. I go, I go. [Exit.]

Pros. A devil, a born devil, on whose nature
Nurture can never stick ; on whom my pains,
Humanely taken, all, all lost, quite lost ;
And as with age his body uglier grows,
So his mind cankers. I will plague them all,
Even to roaring.

[Exit.]

Enter Caliban, Stephano and Trinculo, all wet.

Cal. Pray you, tread softly, that the blind mole may not hear a footfall : we now are near his cell.

Ste. Monster, your fairy, which you say is a harmless fairy, has done little better than played the Jack with us.

Trin. Monster, I do smell all horse-pond ; at which my nose is in great indignation.

Ste. So is mine. Do you hear, monster ? If I should take a displeasure against you, look you.

Trin. Thou wert but a lost monster.

Cal. Good, my lord, give me thy favour still.

Be patient, for the prize I'll bring thee to

Shall hoodwink this mischance : therefore speak softly.

All's hush'd as midnight yet.

Trin. Ay, but to lose our bottles in the pool,—

Ste. There is not only disgrace and dishonour in that, monster, but an infinite loss.

Trin. That's more to me than my wetting : yet this is your harmless fairy, monster.

Ste. I will fetch off my bottle, though I be o'er ears for my labour.

Cal. Prithee, my king, be quiet. See'st thou here,

This is the mouth o' the cell : no noise, and enter.

Do that good mischief which may make this island

Thine own for ever, and I, thy Caliban,

For aye thy foot-licker.

Ste. Give me thy hand. I do begin to have bloody thoughts.

[Trinculo laughs loudly.]

Cal. The dropsy drown this fool ! we shall lose our time,

And all be turned to barnacles, or to apes
With foreheads villainous low.

[*They all creep stealthily to the entrance of Prospero's cell. Enter Ariel. Darkness and thunder. Shakespeare's stage directions which follow are—*Enter divers spirits in shapes of dogs and hounds, hunting them about." Prospero's magic wand is once more at work. To Caliban, Stephano and Trinculo is now revealed a monstrous cave. At first there is an uncanny silence. The three are paralyzed with fear. They attempt to creep off, but are met at every turn by strange shapes which, appearing from behind the rocks, bow to the drunkards with a mocking and haunting politeness. The three men rush up the steps, but are again met by divers spirits with terrible and unearthly shapes. They are hunted about and tortured as Shakespeare directs. Once more they seek to rush from their tormentors, but the air itself is now inhabited by the denizens of night-mares which afflict conscience-stricken men. The shapes laugh a hollow laugh. The punishment of the drunkards is now complete—the comic Inferno dissolves and we are once more in Prospero's cave.] [Exeunt.]

Scene III.

Prospero's Cave.

Enter Prospero.

Pros. Now does my project gather to a head :
My charms crack not ; my spirits obey ; and time

Enter Ariel.

Goes upright with his carriage. How's the day ?

CHERRY BUSH

www.libtool.com.cn

Ari. On the sixth hour ; at which time, my lord,
You said our work should cease.

Pros. I did say so,
When first I raised the tempest. Say, my spirit,
How fares the king and 's followers ?

Ari. Confined together
In the same fashion as you gave in charge,
In the lime-grove which weather-fends your cell ;
The king, his brother and yours, abide all three distracted,
And the remainder mourning over them,
Brimful of sorrow and dismay ; but chiefly
Him that you term'd, sir, "The good old lord, Gonzalo" ;
His tears run down his beard, like winter's drops
From eaves of reeds. Your charm so strongly works them
That if you now beheld them, your affections
Would become tender.

Pros. Dost thou think so, spirit ?

Ari. Mine would, sir, were I human.

Pros. And mine shall.
Hast thou, which art but air, a touch, a feeling
Of their afflictions, and shall not myself,
One of their kind, that relish all as sharply,
Passion as they, be kindlier moved than thou art ?
Though with their high wrongs I am struck to the quick,
Yet with my nobler reason 'gainst my fury
Do I take part : the rarer action is
In virtue than in vengeance : they being penitent,

Go release them, Ariel !

Ari. I'll fetch them, sir. [Exit.]

Re-enter Ariel: then Alonzo, Gonzalo, Sebastian and Antonio. They all enter the circle which Prospero had made, and there stand charmed, which, Prospero observing, speaks.]

There stand, for you are spell-stopp'd. Not one of them
That yet looks on me, or would know me ; Ariel,
Fetch me the hat and rapier in my cell :
Quickly, spirit. Thou shalt ere long be free.

[Exit Ariel.]

I will discase me, and myself present. As I was sometime Milan.

Re-enter Ariel with sword and coronet.

Pros. Why, that's my dainty Ariel ! I shall miss thee ;
But yet thou shalt have freedom : so, so, so.

[Prospero waves his wand and removes the spell.]

Behold, sir king,
The wronged Duke of Milan, Prospero :
For more assurance that a living prince
Does now speak to thee, I embrace thy body ;
And to thee and thy company I bid
A hearty welcome.

Alon. But how should Prospero be living and be here ?

Pros. [To Gonzalo.] First, noble friend,
Let me embrace thine age, whose honour cannot
Be measured or confined.
For you, most wicked sir, whom to call brother
Would even infect my mouth, I do forgive

Thy rankest fault ; all of them ; and require
My dukedom of thee, which, perforce, I know,
Thou must restore.

Alon. If thou be'st Prospero,
Give us particulars of thy preservation ;
How thou hast met us here, who three hours since
Were wreck'd upon this shore ; where I have lost—
How sharp the point of this remembrance is !—
My dear son Ferdinand.

Pros. Pray you, look in. [Pointing to cell.]

Enter Ferdinand and Miranda.

Alon. If this prove
A vision of the Island, one dear son
Shall I twice lose.

Fer. Though the seas threaten, they are merciful ;
I have cursed them without cause.

[Kneels at Alonzo's feet.]

Mir. O, wonder !
How many goodly creatures are there here !
How beauteous mankind is ! O brave new world,
That has such people in it.

Pros. 'Tis new to thee.

Alon. What is this maid ?
Is she the goddess that hath sever'd us,
And brought us thus together ?

Fer. [Kisses Miranda.] Sir, she is mortal ;
But by immortal Providence she's mine :
I chose her when I could not ask my father
For his advice, nor thought I had one. She

Is daughter to this famous Duke of Milan,
Of whom so often I have heard renown,
But never saw before : of whom I have Received a second life ; and second father
This lady makes him to me.

Alon. I am hers :
But, O, how oddly will it sound that I
Must ask my child forgiveness !

Pros. There, sir, stop :
Let us not burthen our remembrance with
A heaviness that's gone.

Alon. [To Ferdinand and Miranda.] Give me your hands:
Let grief and sorrow still embrace his heart
That doth not wish you joy !

Gon. Be it so ! Amen !

Enter Ariel.

Pros. [Aside to Ariel.] My tricky spirit !
Set Caliban and his companions free ;
Untie the spell. [Exit Ariel.]
There are yet missing of your company
Some few odd lads that you remember not.

Enter Ariel, driving in Caliban, Stephano and Trinculo.

Ste. Every man shift for all the rest, and let no man take care for himself ; for all is but fortune. Coragio, bully-monster, coragio !

Trin. If these be true spies which I wear in my head, here's a goodly sight.

Cal. O Setebos, these be brave spirits indeed !
How fine my master is ! I am afraid
He will chastise me.

Seb. Ha, ha !
What things are these, my lord Antonio ?
Will money buy them ?

Ant. Very like ; one of them
Is a plain fish, and, no doubt, marketable.

Alon. Is not this Stephano, my drunken butler ?

Seb. He is drunk now : where had he wine ?

Alon. And Trinculo is reeling ripe ;
How camest thou in this pickle ?

Trin. I have been in such a pickle since I saw you last, that, I fear me, will never out of my bones ; I shall not fear fly-blowing.

Seb. Why, how now, Stephano !

Ste. O, touch me not ; I am not Stephano, but a cramp.

Pros. You'd be the king o' the isle, sirrah ?

Ste. I should have been a sore one, then.

Alon. This is a strange thing as e'er I look'd on.

[Pointing to Caliban.]

Pros. He is as disproportion'd in his manners
As in his shape. Go, sirrah.

Cal. Ay, that I will ; and I'll be wise hereafter,
And seek for grace. What a thrice-double ass
Was I, to take this drunkard for a god,
And worship this dull fool !

[He kneels at the feet of Miranda and goes out, followed by Trinculo and Stephano.]

Pros. I'll bring you to your ship, and so to Naples,

Where I have hope to see the nuptial
Of these our dear-beloved solemnized ;
And thence retire me to my Milan, where
Every third thought shall be my grave.

[The ship's crew are heard singing in the distance.]

I promise you calm seas, auspicious gales,
And sail so expeditious, that shall catch
Your royal fleet far off.

[Exeunt Ferdinand, Miranda, Antonio, Sebastian, &c.]

My Ariel, chick,
That is thy charge : then to the elements
Be free, and fare thou well !

[Exit Ariel.]

[At this point I have ventured to make a slight transposition, and practically to end the play with the following beautiful lines, omitting the Epilogue in which the actor addresses himself to the audience.]

Pros. Ye elves of hills, brooks, standing lakes, and groves ;

And ye that on the sands with printless foot
Do chase the ebbing Neptune, and do fly him
When he comes back ; you that rejoice
To hear the solemn curfew ; by whose aid,
Weak masters though ye be, I have bedimmed
The noontide sun, call'd forth the mutinous winds,
And 'twixt the green sea and the azured vault
Set roaring war : to the dread rattling thunder
Have I given fire, and rifted Jove's stout oak
With his own bolt ; the strong-based promontory
Have I made shake, and by the spurs pluck'd up

THE YELLOW SANDS.

www.libtool.com.cn

The pine and cedar : graves at my command
 Have waked their sleepers, oped and let them forth
 By my so potent art. But this rough magic
 I here abjure, I'll break my staff,
 Bury it certain fathoms in the earth,
 And deeper than did ever plummet sound
 I'll drown my book.

FINAL TABLEAU.

[Prospero breaks his staff, at which there is lightning and thunder, followed by darkness. Through the darkness we gradually see once more a picture of the Yellow Sands enveloped in a purple haze. The Nymphs are again singing "Come unto these yellow sands." But their music is broken by the homing-song of the sailors, and we see the ship sailing away, carrying Prospero and the lovers, and all their train. Caliban creeps from his cave, and watches the departing ship bearing away the freight of humanity which for a brief spell has gladdened and saddened his island home, and taught him to "seek for grace." For the last time Ariel appears, singing the song of the bee. Taking flight at the words "Merrily, merrily shall I live now," the voice of the sprite rises higher and higher until it is merged into the note of the lark—Ariel is now free as a bird. Caliban listens for the last time to the sweet air, then turns sadly in the direction of the departing ship. The play is ended. As the curtain rises again, the ship is seen on the horizon, Caliban stretching out his arms towards it in mute despair. The night falls, and Caliban is left on the lonely rock. He is a King once more.
