INTRODUCTORY NOTE.

www.libtool.com.cn

IN the preparation of this volume the needs of three classes of students have been kept constantly in mind. Primarily, it is intended for the use of those whose plan of work makes it impossible for them to devote to the study of Latin more than a limited amount of time, yet who are nevertheless desirous of becoming familiar with what is most famous in the literature of the language, and of gaining incidentally some general knowledge of the life and thought of ancient Rome. It is intended also to provide for school and college classes, in the sight-reading of Latin, a wider, more interesting, and more instructive course than is offered by any existing volume designed for rapid reading. Finally, it aims to be a history of Latin letters, giving in concise and practical form an outline of the development of Roman literature from its earliest days, as illustrated in the most characteristic and striking passages that have descended to us. It is, therefore, meant either to be read as supplementary to a regular course in Latin literature, or to be made itself the fundamental work in such a course.

The general plan of the book is to give, in chronological order, and grouped under the author's names, so far as these are known, such selections as will not only show the individuality of the writer and the quality of his literary style, but also reveal something of the life, manners, and opinions of the age in which he wrote. Thus, the first selection in the book is made, not from purely literary sources, but from the Roman folk-songs, the popular rhymes, and the verses sung by children in their play — all antedating the beginnings of written literature. In like manner, the editors have given, in their proper chronological order, other material of a popular nature, such as the advertisements found upon the walls of Pompeii, lampoons and parodies, theatrical and gladiatorial notices, announcements of ball-games, epitaphs upon tombstones, and old saws and maxims, all of which, though not themselves literature, throw a flood of light upon much that is found in literature and upon the life and customs of those for whom the literature was written.

In the purely literary extracts, the editors have ranged over a wide field, so as to make the collection a thoroughly representative one. The selections cover the early dramatists, the historians, orators, and philosophers, the writers of satire and epigram, the lyric and epic poets, the collectors of anecdotes, the letter-writers, and the authors of prose fiction. The last reading in the book is one of the early Christian hymns.

To the selections from each author is prefixed a concise account of his life, his works, and his place in the history of Latin literature, with a notice of the best editions of the text, the best commentary, and the best literary translations. These, taken together, give a conspectus of the development of the literature and a working bibliography of the most recent classical publications. This bibliography aims only to direct the reader to the best works easily accessible to him in any good public or college library; and the references are in most instances only to works in the English language.

To facilitate the use of the book in classes formed for the reading of Latin at sight, the more difficult words are translated at the bottom of each page. Fuller notes relating to special points are given at the end of the book. Several of the selections thus annotated have never before been published with an English commentary, so that the volume may be of interest to advanced students of Latin, as well as to those for whom the book is primarily intended. The commentary is designed to afford only such assistance as is necessary to the understanding of the selections as parts of literature, and not at all as material for drill in parsing. There are, therefore, no grammatical references and few discussions of grammatical points. The notes are intended to treat only the matters of allusion, style, and construction which would naturally come up for notice in the classroom.

It has been the plan of the editors throughout, in making the selections, to choose only such passages as are in themselves complete, embodying an entire episode or a finished thought. The collection is, therefore, not a collection of fragments, but a group of literary gems, selected and arranged upon a definite plan and with a distinct purpose kept steadily in view. It is believed that a book of this character will be welcome to those teachers who have vainly sought for a relief from the commonplace; and that it will, in making the study of Latin more attractive, create and stimulate in the student a desire for a still wider course of reading.

I. POPULAR SONGS, CHARMS, ETC.

Comparatively few of the Roman popular songs of classical times have descended to us. Such as exist are in the main preserved by casual quotations in such authors as Plautus, Cato, and Varro, in inscriptions and in the scholiasts. The fact that Roman literature, as we have it, is so largely influenced by Greek models, gives it a certain artificiality and restraint that prevent it from assimilating the crude material found in the earlier popular compositions which the over-refined writers of the Augustan Age regarded as vulgar. Such specimens of the folk-songs, proverbs, spells, and language as are known to us can be found collected by Bährens in his Fragmenta Poetarum Romanorum (Leipzig, 1886). Reference may be made to Du Méril's Poésies Populaires Latines (Paris, 1843). Cf. the introductions on pp. 18, 154 and 181.

II. TOMB INSCRIPTIONS.

Inscriptions upon tombs are among the earliest remains of Roman literature, and are of importance in the study of the development of the language. They are frequently written in the rough accentual verse (versus Saturninus) which the Romans employed before the introduction of the more formal Greek prosody. Numbers of them are collected in the Corpus Inscriptionum Latinarum (Berlin, 1862 ff.), especially in the first volume. See also Wordsworth's Fragments and Specimens of Early Latin (Oxford, 1874), and for the epitaphs in the Catacombs, De Rossi's Inscriptiones Christianae (Rome, 1857-61). An Introduction to the Study of Latin Inscriptions, by J. C. Egbert, Jr.; in press (N. Y., 1895).

III. QUINTUS ENNIUS.

ENNIUS.

Quintus Ennius (239-169 B.C.), the father of Roman poetry, was born at Rudiae in Calabria, and became a Roman citizen in 184. His chief work was an epic poem, Annales, in eighteen books, treating the history of Rome from the coming of Aeneas to the poet's time. In it the Greek hexameter was first employed in Roman literature, and it remained the national epic of Rome until superseded by Vergil's Aeneid. Ennius also wrote tragedies and comedies, on Greek models, of which about twenty are known through titles and fragments.

The importance of Ennius in the history of Roman literature is very great. He definitely, and with authority, gave to Latin writers Greek models and Greek standards, and also led the way in polishing and refining the Latin language so as to adapt it to elegant literary composition.

Collections of the epic fragments are those of Vahlen (Leipzig, 1854), and Lucian Müller (St. Petersburg, 1885); the dramatic portions in Ribbeck, Scaenicae Romanorum Poesis Fragmenta (Leipzig, 1871-73). For literary criticism, see Sellar, Roman Poets of the Republic (Oxford, 1881).

IV. TITUS MACCIUS PLAUTUS.

Titus Maccius Plautus was born at Sarsina in Umbria 254 B.C., and died in 184. He was of humble parentage. While serving as a theatrical assistant in Rome, he composed some comedies, which met with so favorable a reception that he devoted himself to comic writing. Varro found about one hundred and thirty pieces bearing the name of Plautus, of which only twenty-one were surely authentic. Of these, twenty are still extant, and present the oldest complete works of Roman literature. His plays, intended only for the momentary amusement of the public, are full of comic situations, lively dialogue, and striking pictures of Roman conditions; but the boundaries of probability and decency are often overstepped. These comedies held their place on the Roman stage until the end of the Republic. The greatest edition of the text of Plautus is that of Ritschl (Bonn, 1848-54), revised by Löwe, Goetz, and Schöll (1894), but there is no complete edition with English notes. The plays were translated into English prose by Thornton (London, 1767-74), and there is a poor version, by Riley, in the Bohn Classical Library (1880). The Plautine comedy Menaechmi is the original source of Shakespeare's Comedy of Errors; and the Aulularia, of Molière's L'Avare.

V. CATO THE CENSOR.

Marcus Porcius Cato (234–149 B.C.) was the typical Roman of the Republican era. A shrewd, hard-headed, obstinate, energetic man, a sturdy soldier, a pungent and powerful orator, he resisted during his life all the tendencies that were transforming Rome into a centre of Hellenic culture, and ever after typified to the nation the “good old times” when men of the highest rank labored in the fields, ate at the same table with their slaves, and despised learning. Cato was the father of Roman prose as Ennius was the father of Roman verse, and was a very prolific writer, publishing more than one hundred and fifty of his orations now lost, letters, suggestions on oratory, practical instructions on agriculture, and a great work in seven books, Origines, the first historical volume ever written in Latin prose, and dealing with the ethnology and antiquities of Italy. The only work of Cato’s now remaining entire is the treatise De Agri Cultura, in sixty-two chapters. It is a sort of farmer’s note-book in which are jotted down in the most off-hand style all sorts of practical directions for the care of a farm, rules for housekeeping, forms for sales and leases, and recipes for domestic medicine. It has been edited by Keil (Leipzig, 1884–94).

VI. TITUS LUCRETIUS CARUS.

Titus Lucretius Carus was born in the year 96 B.C. and died in the year 55. According to the legend preserved by St. Jerome, his wife gave him a love potion which deprived him of his reason, — a story which forms the subject of a beautiful poem by Tennyson. His great work on the nature of the universe (De Rerum Natura) is in six books, but was never finished. In it he sets forth the Epicurean system of philosophy, which is one of pure materialism. He teaches (1) that nothing exists except matter and empty space; (2) that the soul, being material as well as the body, dies when the body dies; and (3) that the world is not governed by the gods, but by the fixed law of Nature, to which he gives the name Necessity. Macaulay has characterized this work as “the noblest poem ever written, in behalf of the meanest system of philosophy.”

The best commentary on the whole of Lucretius is that of H. A. J. Munro (4th ed., Cambridge, 1886), which is accompanied by a fine translation into idiomatic English prose. Good accounts of the Lucretian philosophy are J. Masson's Atomic Theory of Lucretius (London, 1884), Wallace's Epicureanism (London, 1880), and that of Lange in his History of Materialism (London, 1881).

Death is not to be Dreaded. (iii. 830-869.)

Nil igitur mors est ad nos neque pertinet hilum,<sup>1</sup>
Quandoquidem natura animi mortalis habetur.
Et velut ante acto nil tempore sensimus aegri,<sup>2</sup>
Ad confligendum venientibus undique Poenis,

 Distractast animi natura animaeque potestas, 15
 Nil tamen est ad nos, qui compta<sup>1</sup> coniugioque Corporis atque animae consistimus uniter apti.
 Nec, si materiem nostram collegerit aetas
 Post obitum rursumque redegerit ut sita nunc est, Atque iterum nobis fuerint data lumina vitae, 20
 Pertineat quicquam tamen ad nos id quoque factum,
 Et nunc nil ad nos de nobis attinet, ante
 Qui fuimus, neque iam de illis nos adfcit angor.
 Nam cum respicias immensi temporis omne 25

 Nec memori tamen id quimus reprehendere mente : 30

 Debet enim, misere si forte aegreque futurumst, Ipse quoque esse in eo tum tempore, cui male possit
 Accidere: id quoniam mors eximit, esseque probet 35
 Illum cui possint incommoda conciliari,
 Scire licet nobis nil esse in morte timendum, Nec miserum fieri qui non est posse, neque hilum
 Differre anne ullo fuerit iam tempore natus, Mortalem vitam mors cum inmortalis ademit. 40

 A parvis quod enim consuerant cernere semper
 Alternò tenebras et lucem tempore gigni,
 Non erat ut fieri posset mirarier<sup>3</sup> umquam
 Nec diffidere, ne terras aeterna teneret
 Nox in perpetuum detracto lumine solis. 55
 Sed magis illud erat curae, quod saecla ferarum
 Infestam miseris faciebant saepe quietem:
 Eiectique domo fugiebant saxea tecta
 Spumigeri<sup>4</sup> suis adventu validive leonis, Atque intempestã cedebant nocte paventes 60
 Hospitibus saevis instrata cubilia fronde.
 Nec nimio tum plus quam nunc mortalia saecla
 Dulcia linquebant labentis lumina vitae.
 Unus enim tum quisque magis deprensus eorum

1 overtaken. 2 lamentation. 3 = mirari. 4 foaming.

- 65 Pabula viva feris praebebat, dentibus haustus, Et nemora ac montes gemitu silvasque replebat,
 Viva videns vivo sepeliri viscera busto.
 At quos effugium servârat corpore adeso,<sup>1</sup>
 Posterius tremulas super ulcera taetra tenentes 70 Palmas horum feris accibant vocibus Orcum, Donique eos vitâ privârant vermina saeva,
 Expertes opis, ignaros quid volnera vellent.<sup>3</sup>
 At non multa virûm sub signis milia ducta
 Una dies dabat exitio, nec turbida ponti
 75 Aequora fligebant<sup>4</sup> naves ad saxa virosque.
 Nec poterat quemquam placidi pellacia<sup>7</sup> ponti
 80 [Improba navigii ratio tum caeca iacebat]
 Tum penuria deinde cibi languentia leto
 Membra dabat, contra nunc rerum copia mersat.
 Illi imprudentes ipsi sibi saepe venenum
 Vergebant, nunc dant aliis sollertius<sup>9</sup> ipsum.
 85 Inde casas<sup>10</sup> postquam ac pelles ignemque parârunt, Et mulier coniuncta viro concessit in unum
 Coniugium, prolemque ex se videre creatam, Tum genus humanum primum mollescere coepit.
 Ignis enim curavit ut alsia<sup>11</sup> corpora frigus 90 Non ita iam possent caeli sub tegmine ferre, Et Venus inminuit vires, puerique parentum Blanditiis facile ingenium fregere superbum.
 Tunc et amicitiam coeperunt iungere aventes.
 Finitimi inter se nec laedere nec violari,
 95 Et pueros commendârunt muliebreque saeculum,

 Imbecillorum esse æquum misererier omnes.
 Nec tamen omnimodis<sup>2</sup> poterat concordia gigni, Sed bona magnaque pars servabat foedera caste:
 Aut genus humanum iam tum foret omne peremptum, 100
 Nec potuisset adhuc perducere saecla propago.

At varios linguae sonitus natura subegit
 Mittere, et utilitas<sup>3</sup> expressit nomina rerum, Non aliã longe ratione atque ipsa videtur
 Protrahere ad gestum pueros infantia linguae, 105
 Cum facit ut digito quae sint praesentia monstrent.
 Sentit enim vim quisque suam quoad possit abuti.
 Cornua nata prius vitulo quam frontibus extent,
 Illis iratus petit atque infestus inurget.

 Unguibus ac pedibus iam tum morsuque repugnant,
 Vix etiam cum sunt dentes unguesque creati.

Alituum<sup>6</sup> porro genus alis omne videmus
 Proinde putare aliquem tum nomina distribuisset 115
 Rebus, et inde homines didicisse vocabula prima,

Desiperest; nam cur hic posset cuncta notare
 Vocibus et varios sonitus emittere linguae, Tempore eodem alii facere id non quisse<sup>8</sup> putentur?

Praeterea si non alii quoque vocibus usi 120
 Inter se fuerant, unde insita notities est
 Utilitatis et unde data est huic prima potestas,

Quid vellet, facere ut scirent animoque viderent?
 Cogere item plures unus victosque domare
 Non poterat, rerum ut perdiscere nomina vellent. 125
 Nec ratione docere ullã suadereque surdis,<sup>9</sup>

 Nec ratione ullâ sibi ferrent amplius aures
 Vocis inauditos sonitus obtundere frustra.
 130 Postremo quid in hac mirabile tantoperest re,
 Si genus humanum, cui vox et lingua vigeret,
 Pro vario sensu variâ res voce notaret?
 Cum pecudes mutae, cum denique saecla ferarum
 135 Cum metus aut dolor est et cum iam gaudia gliscunt.<sup>2</sup> Quippe etenim licet id rebus cognoscere apertis.
 Inritata canum cum primum inmane Molossûm
 Mollia ricta<sup>3</sup> fremunt duros nudantia dentes, Longe alio sonitu rabie restricta minantur, 140 Et cum iam latrant et vocibus omnia complent:
 Et catulos blande cum linguâ lambere temptant,
 Aut ubi eos iactant pedibus morsuque petentes
 Suspensis teneros minitantur dentibus haustus, Longe alio pacto gannitu<sup>4</sup> vocis adulant, 145 Et cum deserti baubantur<sup>5</sup> in aedibus, aut cum Plorantes fugiunt summisso corpore plagas.
 Denique non hinnitus<sup>6</sup> item differre videtur,
 Inter equas ubi equus florenti aetate iuveneus
 Pinnigeri saevit calcaribus<sup>7</sup> ictus amoris, 150 Et fremitum patulis ubi naribus edit ad arma,
 Et cum sic alias concussis artibus hinnit?
 Postremo genus alituum variaequae volucres,
 Fluctibus in salso victum vitamque petentes, 155 Longe alias alio iaciunt in tempore voces,
 Et quom de victu certant praedaeque repugnant:
 Et partim mutant cum tempestatibus una

 Corvorumque greges ubi aquam dicuntur et imbris
 Poscere et interdum ventos aurasque vocare. 160
 Ergo si varii sensus animalia cogunt,
 Muta tamen cum sint, varias emittere voces,
 Quanto mortales magis aequumst tum potuisse
 Dissimiles aliā atque aliā res voce notare!

Illud in his rebus tacitus ne forte requiras, 165
 Fulmen detulit in terram mortalibus ignem Primitus,<sup>2</sup> inde omnis flammaram diditur ardor:
 Multa videmus enim caelestibus inlita<sup>3</sup> flammis
 Fulgere, cum caeli donavit plaga vapore.
 Et ramosa tamen cum ventis pulsa vacillans 170
 Aestuat in ramos incumbens arboris arbor, Exprimitur validis extritus viribus ignis
 Et micat<sup>4</sup> interdum flammai fervidus ardor, Mutua dum inter se rami stirpesque teruntur.
 Quorum utrumque dedisse potest mortalibus ignem. 175
 Inde cibum coquere ac flammae mollire vapore<sup>5</sup>
 Sol docuit quoniam mitescere multa videbant

The Plague at Athens. (vi. 1138-1251.)

Haec ratio quondam morborum et mortifer aestus
 Vastavitque vias, exhausit<sup>9</sup> civibus urbem.
 Nam penitus veniens Aegypti finibus morbus,
 Aëra permensus multum camposque natantes,<sup>10</sup> 5
 Incubuit tandem populo Pandionis omni.
 Inde catervatim<sup>11</sup> morbo mortique dabantur.

Principio caput incensum fervore gerebant Et duplices oculos suffusā luce rubentes.
 Sanguine, et ulceribus vocis via saepta<sup>3</sup> coibat, Atque animi interpres manabat lingua cruore, Debilitata malis, motu gravis, aspera tactu.
 Inde ubi per fauces pectus complêrat et ipsum 15 Morbida vis in cor maestum confluserat aegris, Omnia tum vero vitae claustra<sup>4</sup> lababant.<sup>5</sup>
 Atque animi prorsum tum vires totius, omne 20 Languibat corpus, leti<sup>10</sup> iam limine in ipso.
 Intolerabilibusque malis erat anxius angor
 Adsidue comes et gemitu commixta querella.
 25 Dissolvebat eos, defessos ante, fatigans.
 Nec nimio cuiquam posses ardore tueri
 Corporis in summo summam ferverescere partem, Sed potius tepidum manibus proponere tactum
 Et simul ulceribus quasi inustis<sup>14</sup> omne rubere 30 Corpus, ut est per membra sacer dum diditur<sup>15</sup> ignis.
 Intima pars hominum vero flagrabat ad ossa,
 Flagrabat stomacho flamma ut fornacibus intus.
 Nil adeo posses cuiquam leve tenveque membris
 Vertere in utilitatem, at ventum et frigora semper.
 35 In fluvios partim, gelidos ardentia morbo
 Membra dabant, nudum iacentes corpus in undas.

Inciderunt, ipso venientes ore patente :
 Insedabiliter sitis arida, corpora inurens,
 Aequabat multum parvis umoribus imbrem. 40
 Nec requies erat ulla mali: defessa iacebant Corpora. ~~Mussabat illacito medicina~~ timore, Quippe patentia cum totiens ac nuntia mortis
 Lumina versarent oculorum expertia somno.
 Multaque praeterea mortis tum signa dabantur, 45
 Perturbata animi mens in maerore metuque, Triste supercilium, furiosus voltus<sup>2</sup> et acer, Sollicitae porro plenaeque sonoribus aures,
 Creber spiritus<sup>3</sup> aut ingens raroque coörtus, Sudorisque madens per collum splendidus<sup>4</sup> umor, 50
 Salsaque, per fauces raucas vix edita tussi.<sup>7</sup>
 In manibus vero nervi trahere et tremere artus
 A pedibusque minutatim<sup>8</sup> succedere frigus
 Non dubitabat: item ad supremum denique tempus 55
 Compressae nares, nasi primoris acumen
 Tenve, cavati oculi, cava tempora, frigida pellis Duraque, inhorrescens rictum,<sup>9</sup> frons tenta tumebat.<sup>10</sup>
 Nec nimio rigidi post artus morte iacebant.
 Octavoque fere candenti lumine solis 60
 Aut etiam nonā reddebant lampade<sup>11</sup> vitam.
 Quorum siquis vix vitârat funera leti,
 Ulceribus taetris et nigrâ proluvie<sup>12</sup> alvi
 Posterius tamen hunc tabes<sup>13</sup> letumque manebat, Aut etiam multus capitis cum saepe dolore 65
 Corruptus sanguis expletis naribus ibat:
 Huc hominis totae vires corpusque fluebat.
 Profluvium porro qui taetri sanguinis acre

 70 Ibat et in partes genitales corporis ipsas.
 Et manibus sine nonnulli pedibusque manebant
 In vitā tamen, et perdebant lumina partim :
 Usque adeo mortis metus his incesserat acer.
 Atque etiam quosdam cepere oblivia rerum
 75 Cunctarum, neque se possent cognoscere ut ipsi.
 Multaque humi cum inhumata iacerent corpora supra
 Corporibus, tamen alituum genus atque ferarum
 Aut procul apsiliebat,<sup>2</sup> ut acrem exiret odorem, Aut, ubi gustārat, languebat morte propinquā.
 80 Nec tamen omnino temere illis solibus ulla
 Comparebat avis, nec tristia saecla<sup>3</sup> ferarum
 Exhibant silvis : languebant pleraque morbo Et moriebantur. Cum primis fida canum vis Strata viis animam ponebat in omnibus aegre :
 85 Extorquebat enim vitam vis morbida membris.
 Nec ratio remedi communis certa dabatur :
 Nam quod ali dederat vitales aëris auras
 Volvere in ore licere et caeli templa tueri,
 Hoc aliis erat exitio letumque parabat.
 90 Illud in his rebus miserandum magnopere unum
 Aerumnabile erat,<sup>4</sup> quod ubi se quisque videbat
 Implicitum morbo, morti damnatus ut esset, Deficiens animo maesto cum corde iacebat,
 Funera respectans animam amittebat ibidem.
 95 Quippe etenim nullo cessabant tempore apisci<sup>5</sup>
 Ex aliis alios avidi contagia<sup>6</sup> morbi, Lanigeras tamquam pecudes et bucera<sup>7</sup> saecla.
 Idque vel in primis cumulabat funere funus.
 Nam quicumque suos fugitabant visere ad aegros,

Vitai nimium cupidos mortisque timentes 100
Poenibat paulo post turpi morte malāque,
Qui fuerant autem praesto,<sup>3</sup> contagibus ibant
Atque labore, pudor quem tum cogebat obire
Blandaque lassorum vox mixtā voce querellae. 105
Optimus hoc leti genus ergo quisque subibat.
Incomitata rapi<sup>4</sup> cernebant funera vasta,
Inque aliis alium populum sepelire<sup>5</sup> suorum
Certantes: lacrimis lassi luctuque redibant:
Inde bonam partem in lectum maerore dabantur. 110
Nec poterat quisquam reperiri, quem neque morbus
Nec mors nec luctus temptaret tempore tali.

VII. GAIUS VALERIUS CATULLUS.

Gaius Valerius Catullus was born at Verona in 87 B.C. and died in the year 54. He went to Rome at an early age, and spent the rest of his life there in the intimacy of the leading men of his time. He stands at the head of Roman lyric poets. The most prominent event of the poet's life was his infatuation for Clodia, the wife of Q. Caecilius Metellus Celer, to whom, under the pseudonym of Lesbia, most of his amatory verses are addressed. An ardent admirer of Greek poetry, some of his songs, especially the Marriage Hymns, are more Greek than Roman in spirit. His language is usually the speech of every-day life, and abounds in diminutives, foreign words, and alliteration.

The standard edition of Catullus with English notes is that of Robinson Ellis (2d ed., Oxford, 1889). There is a good translation into English by Ellis (London, 1871), and by Sir Theodore Martin, in verse (London, 1875).

Lesbia's Sparrow. (ii.)

Passer, deliciae meae puellae
Et acres solet incitare morsus,
5 Cum desiderio meo nitenti
Carum nescio quid libet iocari (Et solaciolum sui doloris, Credo, ut tum gravis adquiescat ardor),
Tecum ludere sicut ipsa possem
10 Et tristes animi levare curas!

The Kisses. (v.)

Soles occidere et redire possunt :
 Nobis, cum semel occidit brevis lux, 5
 Nox est perpetua una dormienda.
 Da mi basia mille, deinde centum,
 Dein mille altera, dein secunda centum,
 Deinde usque altera mille, deinde centum,
 Dein, cum milia multa fecerimus, 10
 Conturbabimus<sup>1</sup> illa, ne sciamus, Aut ne quis malus invidere<sup>2</sup> possit,
 Cum tantum<sup>3</sup> sciat esse basiorum.

YOUTHS.

 Expectata diu vix tandem lumina tollit.
 Surgere iam tempus, iam pingues relinquere mensas;
 Iam veniet virgo, iam dicetur hymenaeus.
 Hymen o Hymenaeae, Hymen ades o Hymenaeae.

MAIDENS.

Cernitis, innuptae, iuvenes? consurgite contra:
 Nimirum Oetaeos <sup>4</sup> ostendit Noctifer ignes.
 Sic certe est: viden ut perniciter <sup>5</sup> exsiluere?
 Non temere exsiluere: canent quod vincere par <sup>6</sup> est.
 Hymen o Hymenaeae, Hymen ades o Hymenaeae.

10

YOUTHS.

Non facilis nobis, aequales, palma parata est;
 Adspicite, innuptae secum ut meditata <sup>7</sup> requirunt.
 Non frustra meditantur; habent memorabile quod sit.
 Nec mirum, penitus quae totā mente laborant.

PREPARING THE BRIDE.

(Von Falke.)

Iure igitur vincemur ; amat victoria curam.
 Quare nunc animos saltem convertite vestros :
 Dicere iam incipient, iam respondere decebit.
 Hymen o Hymenae, Hymen ades o Hymenae.

MAIDENS.

20 Hespere, qui caelo fertur crudelior ignis ?
 Qui natam possis complexu avellere matris,
 Complexu matris retinentem avellere natam
 Et iuveni ardenti castam donare puellam ?
 Quid faciunt hostes captā crudelius urbe ?
 25 Hymen o Hymenae, Hymen ades o Hymenae.

YOUTHS.

Hespere, qui caelo lucet iucundior ignis ?
 Qui desponsa tuā firmes conubia flammā,

Nec iunxere prius quam se tuus extulit ardor,
 Quid datur a divis felici optatius horā? 30

MAIDENS.

Hesperus e nobis, aequales, abstulit unam.

YOUTHS.

Namque tuo adventu vigilat custodia semper.
 Nocte latent fures, quos idem saepe revertens,

VIII. GAIUS JULIUS CAESAR.

CAESAR.

(Naples Museum.)

Gaius Julius Caesar, whose family traced its origin back to the Trojan Aeneas, was born July 12th, 100 B.C. He received the usual education of a patrician youth, and at the same time a thorough training in affairs of war and statesmanship in the struggle between the patricians and plebeians, which was going on during his early years. He gradually identified himself with the democracy by his marriage in 83 B.C. with Cornelia, daughter of Cinna, who was at that time the leader of the Marian party. By this marriage he incurred the hostility of the dictator Sulla, who ordered him to divorce Cornelia, and Caesar remained away from Rome until Sulla's death in 78 B.C. On his return, after signal successes as an orator, he went to Rhodes to study rhetoric under Apollonius Molon. On his return to Rome in 74 B.C. he was elected successively pontiff, military tribune, and quaestor.

His marriage with Pompeia, cousin of Pompey the Great, brought him into more intimate relations with the latter and with the people's party, and he was careful to strengthen his popularity by all possible means. In the conspiracy of Catiline he wisely kept himself in the background, but opposed the execution of the convicted conspirators. After serving as proprætor in Spain, Caesar was made consul (59 B.C.), and formed, with Pompey and Crassus, the First Triumvirate. His growing power excited the apprehension of the Senate, and, in order to keep him away from Rome, the Senate assigned to him as proconsul the provinces of Gaul and Illyricum for five years. It was in these campaigns (58-51 B.C.) that Caesar's generalship and successes gained for him the title of one of the greatest commanders of all time. Crassus died in battle (53 B.C.), when Caesar's successes in Gaul had excited the jealousy of Pompey. It had been agreed that Caesar's term of office in that province should be extended to ten years, but in 50 B.C. it was proposed in the Senate that Caesar should give up his command. In the following year, a resolution was passed, making him a public enemy unless he should disband his army. This was the beginning of civil war. Caesar advanced to Rome, receiving the submission of the cities through which he passed, and by his victory over Pompey at Pharsalus (Aug. 9, 48 B.C.) made himself master of Rome; and Pompey fled to Egypt, where he was murdered. Caesar's victory over his enemies, Cato and Scipio, at Thapsus (April 6, 46 B.C.), ended the war, and he returned to Rome with supreme power. An insurrection in Spain, excited by the sons of Pompey, was suppressed in the battle of Munda (45 B.C.), and Caesar was free to carry out the work of reform. He corrected the calendar, and made wise plans for righting abuses in the laws and administration of the state, for adorning the city, and extending the Empire. These plans he was, however, unable to see completed, although many great changes were wrought in a very short time. His career was closed by his assassination on March 15th, 44 B.C.

DEATH OF CAESAR.

(From the painting by Gérôme.)

Caesar's literary reputation rests chiefly on his Commentaries on the Gallic War, the best known and most widely studied military note-book of all ages. In it he set down, in simple language, a straightforward narrative of his campaigns, remarkable for its concise descriptions of regions, peoples, and customs, and in its revelation of the character of the writer, — his personal courage, his mastery of tactics, his power of overcoming natural obstacles, his indomitable perseverance. The Commentaries are in eight books, the last of which is the work of Caesar's friend Hirtius. There remains also a treatise by Caesar on the Civil War in three books. Other works that pass under his name were not written by him.

An interesting life of Caesar is that of Froude (N. Y. 1884) and that of Anthony Trollope (London, 1870). A study of his campaigns is that of Col. T. A. Dodge (N. Y. 1892). His work as a statesman and organizer is analyzed by Fowler in his book Julius Caesar and the Organization of the Roman Empire (N. Y. 1892). There is a good edition of his Gallic War by Peskett in five volumes (Cambridge, 1878-82), and of the Civil War by the same scholar (1890). There is a special lexicon to Caesar by Mensel (Berlin, 1884 foll.). See an interesting article by Ropes, The Likenesses of Julius Caesar, in Scribner's Monthly for February, 1887.

HEAD OF GAUL.
(Rome.)

13. In omni Galliā eorum hominum, qui aliquo sunt numero atque honore, genera sunt duo. Nam plebes paene servorum habetur loco, quae nihil audet per se, nullo adhibetur consilio. Plerique, cum aut aere alieno aut magnitudine tributorum aut iniuriā potentiorum premuntur, sese in servitatem dicant nobilibus; in hos eadem omnia sunt iura, quae dominis in servos. Sed de his duobus generibus alterum est Druidum, alterum equitum. Illi rebus divinis intersunt, sacrificia publica ac privata procurant, religiones<sup>1</sup> interpretantur; ad eos magnus adulescentium numerus disciplinae causā concurrit, magnoque hi sunt apud eos honore. Nam fere de omnibus controversiis publicis privatisque constituunt, et si quod est admissum facinus, si caedes facta, si de hereditate, si de finibus controversia est, idem decernunt, praemia poenasque constituunt; si qui aut privatus aut populus eorum decreto non stetit, sacrificiis interdicunt. Haec poena apud eos est gravissima Quibus ita est interdictum, hi numero impiorum ac sceleratorum

14. Druides a bello abesse consuêrunt neque tributa una cum reliquis pendunt, militiae vacationem omniumque rerum habent 35 immunitatem. Tantis excitati praemiis et sua sponte multi in disciplinam conveniunt et a parentibus propinquisque mittuntur. Magnum ibi numerum versuum ediscere<sup>2</sup> dicuntur. Itaque annos nonnulli vicanos in disciplinam permanent. Neque fas esse existimant ea litteris mandare, cum in reliquis fere rebus, publicis privatisque rationibus, Graecis litteris utantur. Id mihi 40 duabus de causis instituisse videntur, quod neque in vulgum disciplinam efferri velint neque eos, qui discunt, litteris confisos minus memoriae studere; quod fere plerisque accidit, ut praesidio litterarum diligentiam in perdiscendo ac memoriam remittant. 45 Imprimis hoc volunt persuadere, non interire animas, sed ab aliis post mortem transire ad alios, atque hoc maxime ad virtutem excitari putant, metu mortis neglecto. Multa praeterea de sideribus atque eorum motu, de mundi ac terrarum magnitudine, de rerum naturam, de deorum immortalium vi ac potestate disputant 50 et iuventuti tradunt.

16. Natio est omnium Gallorum admodum dedita religionibus, atque ob eam causam, qui sunt affecti gravioribus morbis quique in proeliis periculisque versantur, aut pro victimis homines immolant aut se immolaturos vovent administrisque ad ea sacrificia Druidibus utuntur, quod, pro vita hominis nisi hominis vita reddatur, non posse deorum immortalium numen placari arbitrantur, publiceque eiusdem generis habent instituta sacrificia. Alii immani magnitudine simulacra habent, quorum contexta viminibus membra vivis hominibus complent; quibus succensis circumventi flammā exanimantur homines. Supplicia eorum, qui in furto aut in latrocinio aut aliqua noxā sint comprehensi, gratiora dis immortalibus esse arbitrantur; sed cum eius generis copia defecit, etiam ad innocentium supplicia descendunt.

17. Deum maxime Mercurium colunt. Huius sunt plurima simulacra, hunc omnium inventorum artium ferunt, hunc viarum atque itinerum ducem, hunc ad quaestus pecuniae mercaturasque habere vim maximam arbitrantur. Post hunc Apollinem et Martem et Iovem et Minervam. De his eandem fere, quam reliquae gentes, habent opinionem: Apollinem morbos depellere, Minervam operum atque artificiorum initia tradere, Iovem imperium caelestium tenere, Martem bella regere. Huic, cum proelio dimicare constituerunt, ea, quae bello ceperint, plerumque devovent; cum superaverunt, animalia capta immolant reliquasque res in unum locum conferunt. Multis in civitatibus harum rerum exstructos tumulos locis consecratis conspicari licet; neque saepe accidit, ut neglectā quispiam religione aut capta apud se occultare aut posita tollere auderet, gravissimumque ei rei supplicium cum cruciatu constitutum est.

18. Galli se omnes ab Dite<sup>1</sup> patre prognatos praedicant idque ab Druidibus proditum dicunt. Ob eam causam spatia omnis temporis non numero dierum, sed noctium finiunt; dies natales

85 sustinere possint, palam ad se adire non patiuntur filiumque puerili aetate in publico in conspectu patris assistere turpe ducunt.

Viri in uxores, sicuti in liberos, vitae necisque habent potestatem; et cum paterfamiliae illustriore loco natus decessit, eius propinqui conveniunt et, de morte si res in suspicionem venit, de uxoribus
95 in servilem modum quaestionem<sup>3</sup> habent et, si compertum est, igni atque omnibus tormentis excruciatas interficiunt. Funera sunt pro cultu Gallorum magna et sumptuosa; omniaque, quae vivis cordi fuisse<sup>4</sup> arbitrantur, in ignem inferunt, etiam animalia,

20. Quae civitates commodius suam rem publicam administrare existimantur, habent legibus sanctum, si quis quid de re publicā a finitimis rumore aut fama acceperit, uti ad magistratum deferat neve cum quo alio communicet, quod saepe homines temerarios atque imperitos falsis rumoribus terri et ad facinus impelli et de 105 summis rebus consilium capere cognitum est. Magistratus, quae visa sunt, occultant, quaeque esse ex usu iudicaverunt, multitudini produnt. De re publicā nisi per concilium loqui non conceditur.

The Hercynian Forest. (B. G. vi. 25-28.)

25. Huius Hercyniae silvae, quae supra demonstrata est, latitudo novem dierum iter expedito<sup>1</sup> patet; non enim aliter finiri potest, neque mensuras itinerum noverunt. Oritur ab Helvetiorum et Nemetum et Rauricorum finibus rectāque fluminis Danuvii regione pertinet ad fines Dacorum et Anartium; 5 hinc se flectit sinistrorsus diversis ab flumine regionibus multarumque gentium fines propter magnitudinem attingit: neque quisquam est huius Germaniae, qui se aut adisse ad initium eius silvae dicat, cum dierum iter LX processerit, aut, quo ex loco oriatur, acceperit, multaque in ea genera ferarum nasci constat, 10 quae reliquis in locis visa non sint; ex quibus quae maxime differant ab ceteris et memoriae prodenda videantur, haec sunt.

26. Est bos cervi figurā, cuius a mediā fronte inter aures unum cornu existit excelsius magisque directum his, quae nobis nota sunt, cornibus; ab eius summo sicut palmae rami late diffunduntur. 15 Eadem est feminae marisque natura, eadem forma magnitudoque cornuum.

27. Sunt item, quae appellantur alces.<sup>2</sup> Harum est consimilis capris figura et varietas pellium, sed magnitudine paulo ante-

 habent, neque quietis causā procumbunt neque, si quo afflictæ casu conciderunt, erigere sese aut sublevare possunt. His sunt arbores pro cubilibus<sup>2</sup>: ad eas se applicant atque ita paulum modo reclinatæ quietem capiunt. Quarum ex vestigiis cum est animad-25 versum a venatoribus, quo se recipere consuerint, omnes eo loco aut ab radicibus subruunt aut accidunt arbores tantum, ut summa species earum stantium relinquatur. Huc cum se consuetudine reclinaverunt, infirmas arbores pondere affligunt atque una ipsæ concidunt.

30 28. Tertium est genus eorum, qui uri<sup>3</sup> appellantur. Hi sunt magnitudine paulo infra elephantos, specie et colore et figurā tauri. Magna vis eorum est et magna velocitas, neque homini neque ferae, quam conspexerunt, parcunt. Hos studiose foveis<sup>4</sup> captos interficiunt. Hoc se labore durant adulescentes atque hoc 35 genere venationis exercent, et qui plurimos ex his interfecerunt, relatis in publicum cornibus, quæ sint testimonio, magnam ferunt laudem. Sed assuescere ad homines et mansuefieri ne parvuli quidem excepti possunt. Amplitudo cornuum et figura et species multum a nostrorum boum cornibus differt. Haec studiose con-40 quisita ab labris<sup>5</sup> argento circumcludunt atque in amplissimis epulis pro poculis utuntur.

IX. PUBLILIUS SYRUS.

Publilius Syrus, who was probably a native of Antioch, flourished in Rome toward the second half of the first century B.C. He was a very successful writer for the stage, contributing pieces (mimes, mimi) that were remarkable for their epigrammatic sayings, which were collected and published after his death under the title of Sententiae (moral maxims). About seven hundred of these have been preserved and have been separately edited by O. Friedrich (Berlin, 1880). They are in various kinds of verse (iambic and trochaic) and consist of a single line each.

X. MARCUS TULLIUS CICERO.

CICERO.

Capitoline Museum, Rome.

Marcus Tullius Cicero was born Jan. 3, 106 B.C., at Arpinum. His family was of equestrian rank, although not belonging to the nobility. He was educated at the best schools of Rome, and, after assuming the toga virilis, devoted himself to the study of rhetoric, philosophy, and law, under the greatest teachers of the day. During the Social War he served for a short time (89 B.C.), retiring then to private pursuits. His reputation was established by his speech in defense of Sex. Roscius (81 B.C.), in whose trial he came into opposition to Sulla. In 79 B.C. he undertook a two years' journey to Greece and Asia, in which he embraced every opportunity of continuing his rhetorical and philosophical studies. Returning to Rome, he filled the office of quaestor at Lilybaeum (75 B.C.), and increased his renown by the exercise of his oratorical talent, notably by his speech at the trial of C. Verres, former praetor in Sicily. In 69 B.C. he became aedile, and as praetor (66 B.C.), in his oration Pro Lege Manilia, aided in securing the command in the Mithridatic War for Pompey, to whose interests he had attached himself closely. He attained the consulship in 63 B.C., and rendered important service in the detection and suppression of Catiline's conspiracy, but incurred great hostility because of the illegal execution of the conspirators. Forced into exile by the Triumvirate (58 B.C.), he was recalled the succeeding year, but found himself shut out from all public activity. During this period of enforced leisure he produced the treatises De Oratore and De Republica (55 and 54 B.C.). During the years 51 and 50 he served as proconsul in Cilicia, administering the office with great energy and unselfishness. Returning at the time of the rupture between Caesar and Pompey, he espoused the cause of the latter, but after the battle of Pharsalus withdrew his support, and obtained pardon from Caesar and permission to return to Rome. During the interval previous to the death of Caesar most of his great literary works were composed. After Caesar's assassination, which he greeted with great joy, he once more entered public life in the struggle against Antony ; but when, after the defeat of the latter, Octavianus turned his arms against the Senate, and the Second Triumvirate was formed, Cicero became one of the first victims of the proscriptions which followed. He was overtaken, while fleeing, near his estate at Formiæ, and murdered (Dec. 7, 43 B.C.). Cicero's immense literary activity, his participation in the public affairs of an important period, and his supreme command of oratory, produced a body of rhetorical Latin which for literary perfection and historical value takes first rank among Latin prose writings. The style of the orations is of sustained dignity, showing absolute command of the niceties of language, but permeated throughout by the unconquerable vanity and egotism of the author, and frequently weakened by the very perfection of the rhetoric. The titles of nearly eighty orations are given, of which only thirty-six have come down to us complete, while about twenty are extant in more or less fragmentary form. Almost all of these orations represent some important juncture in Roman affairs, and are invaluable aids to the historical study of the period.

Cicero's philosophical writings embrace thirty titles, of which the best known are the treatises De Oratore, De Officiis, and De Natura Deorum, each in three books ; De Senectute (Cato Maior) ; De Amicitia (Laelius) ; Tusculanae Disputationes, in five books ; Academica, in four books ; De Finibus, in five books ; and De Legibus, in six books.

Of his correspondence we have upwards of eight hundred letters, extending over a space of twenty-six years. Of his other writings, poetical, historical, and miscellaneous, only fragments and rare traces remain.

The standard text of the whole of Cicero is that of C. F. W. Müller (Leipzig, 1878 foll.). A fine edition of his correspondence, with notes, is that by Tyrrell and Purser (Dublin and London), still in course of publication. The most vivid and striking life of Cicero is that by Anthony Trollope (1880) ; the most recent, that by Davidson (1894). Reference may also be made to Church's Roman Life in the Days of Cicero (1883) ; Boissier's Cicéron et ses Amis (last ed. 1888) ; and Fausset's adaptation from Munk, under the English title of The Student's Cicero (1890).

The Praises of Literature. (Pro Archia, vi.)

Ego vero fateor me his studiis esse deditum : ceteros pudeat, si qui ita se litteris abdiderunt, ut nihil possint ex iis neque ad communem afferre fructum neque in aspectum lucemque proferre ; me autem quid pudeat, qui tot annos ita vivo, iudices, ut a nullius unquam me tempore aut commodo<sup>1</sup> aut otium meum 5 abstraxerit aut voluptas avocarit aut denique somnus retardarit?

Quare quis tandem me reprehendat aut quis mihi iure suc-
 festos dies ludorum celebrandos, quantum ad alias voluptates et ad ipsam requiem animi et corporis conceditur temporum, quan- 10 tum alii tribuunt tempestivis<sup>3</sup> conviviis, quantum denique
 recolenda sumpsero? Atque hoc eo mihi concedendum est magis, quod ex his studiis haec quoque crescit oratio et facultas, quae, quantacumque in me est, nunquam amicorum periculis defuit. 15 Quae si cui levior videtur, illa quidem certe, quae summa sunt, ex quo fonte hauriam sentio. Nam nisi multorum praeceptis multisque litteris mihi ab adolescentiâ suasissem, nihil esse in vitâ magno opere expetendum nisi laudem atque honestatem, in eâ autem persequendâ omnes cruciatus corporis, omnia pericula 20 mortis atque exsilii parvi esse ducenda, numquam me pro salute vestrâ in tot ac tantas dimicationes atque in hos profligatorum hominum cotidianos impetus obiecissem. Sed pleni omnes sunt libri, plенаe sapientium voces, plena exemplorum vetustas:
 quae iacerent in tenebris omnia, nisi litterarum lumen accederet. 25
 Quam multas nobis imagines<sup>6</sup> non solum ad intuendum, verum etiam ad imitandum fortissimorum virorum expressas scriptores et Graeci et Latini reliquerunt; quas ego mihi semper in admini-strandâ re publicâ proponens animum et mentem meam ipsâ cogitatione hominum excellentium conformabam. 30

Quaeret quispiam: 'Quid? illi ipsi summi viri, quorum virtutes litteris proditae sunt, istâne doctrinâ, quam tu effers laudibus, eruditi fuerunt?' Difficile est hoc de omnibus confirmare, sed tamen est certum, quod respondeam. Ego multos homines excellenti animo ac virtute fuisse sine doctrinâ, et naturae ipsius 35

 40 illustrem accesserit ratio quaedam conformatioque doctrinae, tum illud nescio quid praeclarum ac singulare solere existere: ex hoc esse hunc numero, quem patres nostri viderunt, divinum hominem Africanum;<sup>2</sup> ex hoc C. Laelium, L. Furium, moderatissimos homines et continentissimos; ex hoc fortissimum virum 45 et illis temporibus doctissimum, M. Catonem illum senem: qui profecto, si nihil ad percipiendam colendamque virtutem litteris adiuventur, numquam se ad earum studium contulissent.

Quod si non hic tantus fructus ostenderetur et si ex his studiis delectatio sola peteretur, tamen, ut opinor, hanc animi adversi-

A Good Old Age. (De Senectute, xviii.)

Sed in omni oratione mementote eam me senectutem laudare quae fundamentis adulescentiae constituta sit. Ex quo efficitur id quod ego magno quondam cum assensu omnium dixi, “miseram esse senectutem quae se oratione<sup>3</sup> defenderet.” Non canī, non 5 rugae<sup>4</sup> repente auctoritatem arripere possunt; sed honeste acta superior aetas fructus capit auctoritatis extremos. Haec enim ipsa sunt honorabilia quae videntur levia atque communia, salutari, appeti, decedi, assurgi, deduci, reduci, consuli; quae et apud nos et in aliis civitatibus, ut quaeque optime morata, ita
 10 diligentissime observantur. Lysandrum Lacedaemonium, cuius

modo mentionem feci, dicere aiunt solitum Lacedaemonem esse honestissimum domicilium senectutis: nusquam enim tantum tribuitur aetati, nusquam est senectus honoratior. Quin etiam memoriae proditum est, cum Athenis ludis quidam in theatrum grandis natu venisset, in magno consessu locum nusquam ei datum a suis civibus; cum autem ad Lacedaemonios accessisset, qui legati<sup>1</sup> cum essent certo in loco consederant, consurrexisse omnes et senem illum sessum recepisse. Quibus cum a cuncto consessu plausus esset multiplex datus, dixisse ex iis quendam, "Athenienses scire quae recta essent, sed facere nolle." Multa in nostro collegio praeclara, sed hoc de quo agimus in primis, quod, ut quisque aetate antecedit, ita sententiae principatum tenet; neque solum honore antecedentibus<sup>2</sup> sed iis etiam qui cum imperio<sup>3</sup> sunt maiores natu augures anteponuntur. Quae sunt igitur voluptates corporis cum auctoritatis praemiis comparandae? Quibus qui splendide usi sunt, ii mihi videntur fabulam<sup>4</sup> aetatis peregisse, nec tamquam inexercitati histriones in extremo actu corruisse.<sup>5</sup> At sunt morosi et anxii et iracundi et difficiles senes. Si quaerimus, etiam avari: sed haec morum<sup>6</sup> vitia sunt, non senectutis. Ac morositas tamen et ea vitia quae dixi habent aliquid excusationis, non illius quidem iustae sed quae probari posse videatur: contemni se putant, despici, illudi: praeterea in fragili corpore odiosa omnis offensio est. Quae tamen omnia dulciora fiunt et moribus bonis et artibus; idque cum in vitā tum in scenā intelligi potest ex iis fratribus qui in Adelphis sunt. Quanta in altero duritas, in altero comitas! Sic se res habet; ut enim non omne vinum, sic non omnis aetas vetustate coacescit.<sup>7</sup> Severitatem in senectute probo, sed eam sicut alia modicam; acerbiter nullo modo. Avaritia vero senilis quid sibi velit non intellego. Potest enim quidquam esse absurdius quam quo minus viae restat eo plus viatici quaerere?

*A Letter from Exile. (Ad Fam. xiv. 4.)*TULLIUS TERENTIAE ET TULLIOLAE ET CICERONI SUIS S. P. D.<sup>1</sup>

Ego minus saepe do ad vos litteras, quam possum, propterea quod cum omnia mihi tempora sunt misera, tum vero, cum aut scribo ad vos, aut vestras lego, conficior lacrimis sic, ut ferre non possim. Quod utinam minus vitae cupidi fuissetus! certe nihil aut non multum in vitā mali vidissetus. Quodsi nos ad aliquam alicuius commodi aliquando recipiendi spem fortuna reservavit, minus est erratum a nobis; sin haec mala fixa sunt, ego vero te quam primum, mea vita, cupio videre et in tuo complexu emori, quoniam neque dii, quos tu castissime coluisti, neque homines quibus ego semper servivi, nobis gratiam rettulerunt. Nos Brundisii apud M. Laenium Flaccum dies XIII. fuimus, virum optimum, qui periculum fortunarum et capitis sui prae meā salute neglexit, neque legis improbissimae poenā deductus est, quo minus hospitii et amicitiae ius officiumque praestaret. Huic utinam aliquando gratiam referre possimus! habebimus quidem semper. Brundisio profecti sumus prid. Kalendas Maias: per Macedoniam Cyzicum petebamus. O me perditum! O afflictum! quid nunc rogem te ut venias, mulierem aegram, et corpore et animo confectam? Non rogem? Sine te igitur sim? Opinor, sic agam: si est spes nostri reditus, eam confirmes et rem adiuves; sin, ut ego metuo, transactum est,<sup>2</sup> quoquo modo potes ad me fac venias. Unum hoc scito: si te habebis, non mihi videbor plane perisse. Sed quid Tulliolā meā fiet? Iam id vos videte; mihi deest consilium. Sed certe, quoquo modo se res habebit, illius misellae<sup>3</sup> et matrimonio et famae serviendum est. Quid? Cicero meus quid aget? Iste vero sit in sinu semper et complexu meo. Non queo plura iam scribere: impedit maeror. Tu quid egeris nescio: utrum aliquid teneas, an, quod metuo, plane sis spoliata.

Pisonem, ut scribis, spero fore semper nostrum. De familiā liberatā, nihil est, quod te moveat. Primum, tuis ita promissum 30 est, te facturam esse, ut quisque esset meritus. Est autem in officio adhuc Orpheus; praeterea magno opere nemo. Ceterorum servorum ea causa est, ut, si res a nobis abisset, liberti nostri essent, si obtinere potuissent; sin ad nos pertineret, servirent, praeterquam oppido<sup>1</sup> pauci. Sed haec minora sunt. Tu quod 35 me hortaris, ut animo sim magno et spem habeam reciperae salutis, id velim sit eius modi, ut recte sperare possimus. Nunc, miser quando tuas iam litteras accipiam? quis ad me perferet? quas ego exspectāssem Brundisii, si esset licitum per nautas, qui tempestatem praetermittere noluerunt. Quod reliquum est, sus- 40 tenta te, mea Terentia, ut potes, honestissime. Viximus; florimus; non vitium nostrum sed virtus nostra nos afflixit. Peccatum est nullum, nisi quod non una animam cum ornamentis amisimus. Sed si hoc fuit liberis nostris gratius, nos vivere, cetera, quamquam ferenda non sunt, feramus. Atque 45 ego, qui te confirmo, ipse me non possum. Clodium Philhetaerum, quod valetudine oculorum impediabatur, hominem fidelem, remisi. Salustius officio vincit omnes. Pescennius est perbenevolus nobis; quem semper spero tui fore observantem. Sicca dixerat se mecum fore, sed Brundisio discessit. Cura, 50 quoad potes, ut valeas, et sic existimes, me vehementius tuā miserā quam meā commoveri. Mea Terentia, fidissima atque optima uxor, et mea carissima filiola, et spes reliqua nostra, Cicero, valete.

XI. PUBLIUS VERGILIUS MARO.

Publius Vergilius Maro was born 70 B.C. at Andes near Mantua, and died at Brundisium, 19 B.C. Little is known with certainty of his personal history, and no information is afforded by his own writings. His education was begun at Cremona and continued at Milan and Naples, where he devoted himself especially to the study of Greek poetry and philosophy. To this period is assigned the composition of some of his minor poems. He then returned to his farm, and busied himself in study and writing. His first important work was a series of ten pastoral poems, to which he gave the name of Eclogues, and which at once established his fame and popularity. This work is said to have been undertaken at the suggestion of Asinius Pollio, then military governor of the region. After the defeat of the republican army at Philippi, a division of lands was made to reward the soldiery, and Vergil's farm was confiscated among the rest. On the advice of Pollio he went to Rome, and secured from Augustus the restoration of his estate, which, however, seems not to have been effected, as he is described as chased by the holder of the lands and forced to swim the Mincius to save his life. Shortly after this he removed to Rome, where his reputation brought him great respect among the highest circles. At the age of thirty-three he took up his residence at Nola, near Naples, where he spent a great portion of his time. At the request of Maccenas, it is said, he now undertook the composition of the Georgics, four books on husbandry, with the view of bringing back a love of rural pursuits. Those poems are considered the most elaborate and highly polished of his works. In both Eclogues and Georgics the influence of Vergil's study of the Greek poets is evident, the Eclogues being an adaptation of Theocritus, and the Georgics an imitation of Hesiod. After the establishment of the Empire, Vergil, at the request of Augustus, began his greatest work, the Aeneid. This great epic was commenced in the year in which he completed the Georgics, and occupied him until his death. The poem uses the material and follows the arrangement of the Iliad and Odyssey, but unlike Homer's epic the Aeneid shows the highest perfection of literary art. It is the most elaborated production of a highly artificial age, and is dominated by one purpose, — the exaltation of Rome and the Julian gens. On the completion of the poem in its present form, Vergil went to Greece with the intention of spending some years in a final revision of his great work; but soon after his arrival there he was prevailed upon by Augustus to accompany him to Italy, where he died soon after reaching Brundisium. He is said to have ordered the Aeneid to be burned, being unwilling to have it published in its unfinished condition, but it was preserved by the request of Augustus and submitted to the judgment of his friends Tucca and Varius, who made it public. Vergil was buried, by his own desire, at Posillippo near Naples, where what purports to be his tomb is still shown.

In person he was tall, dark, and slender, of delicate health, and of a very shy and retiring disposition. It is related that he often entered shops or turned aside in the streets to avoid public recognition. There is no authentic portrait of Vergil known to be in existence. In the Middle Ages, popular tradition made Vergil a famous magician, and many marvelous stories were told of him, regarding which reference may be made to Tunison's Master Vergil (Cincinnati, 1889).

A standard text of the whole of Vergil is that of Ribbeck (Leipzig, 1867). There is an excellent commentary in English by Conington, revised by Nettleship, with admirable introductions (4th ed. London, 1881-83). Professor Conington also published a good prose translation (3d ed. London, 1882), and there is one by Lonsdale and Lee (12th ed. London, 1890). Good verse translations of the Aeneid are those of Conington (6th ed. London, 1881); W. Morris (London, 1876); and Thornhill (Dublin, 1886). There is an excellent literary study of Vergil in Sellar's Roman Poets of the Augustan Age (2d ed. Oxford, 1883); and of the Aeneid in Nettleship's Lectures and Essays (Oxford, 1885). Harper and Miller's edition of the Aeneid (Books I.-VI.) and Bucolics (New York, 1892) has excellent literary and historical notes.

XII. GAIUS CILNIUS MAECENAS.

Gaius Cilnius Maecenas, a famous Roman statesman and patron of literary men, was born about 70 B.C., and died in the year 8 B.C. In public life, he was long the trusted adviser and friend of Augustus Caesar, but is now best known by his munificence to the great writers of his day, especially Vergil, whose property he saved from confiscation, and Horace, to whom he gave a competence, and who in return has immortalized his name. His house was also the rendezvous of Tibullus, Propertius, Varius, Tucca, and many other men of genius. As a man, he was in many ways peculiar, — nervous, a hypochondriac, affectedly effeminate, an epicure, and almost absurd in his whimsical luxury; but all this appears to have been largely superficial and did not conceal his genuine ability, generosity, and capacity for loyal friendship. He wrote on various topics, but only a few fragments of his work remain in quotation, and have been collected by Bährens in his Fragmenta Poetarum Romanorum (Leipzig, 1886). See Milman's Life of Horace (1853).

XIII. QUINTUS HORATIUS FLACCUS.

HORACE.

(From gem in British Museum.)

Quintus Horatius Flaccus was born 65 B.C. at Venusia in the Apennines, and died 8 B.C. Most of the known details of his life are gathered from his own writings. From them we learn that his father was a freedman, who had probably obtained his freedom before the birth of Horace. At an early age Horace was placed in school at Rome, and later was sent to Athens to finish his education. While he was studying there he was made tribune in the army of Brutus, with whom he went to Asia Minor, sharing the defeat at Philippi (42 B.C.). Receiving, with others, permission to return to Italy, he settled in Rome, suffering, however, the loss of his patrimony, which induced him to court notice by writing verses. He became acquainted with Vergil and Varius, who introduced him to his future patron, Maecenas. The latter was not at first desirous of receiving the tribune of Brutus into his circle, and it was not until nearly a year after the introduction that he sent for Horace. Thereafter he was the closest friend of the poet, who became intimate at his house with many influential men. Through him, probably, Horace was introduced to Augustus. From Maecenas also he received as a present a small estate in the Sabine country, near Tibur, where he passed a part of each year in retirement. His life was not eventful. Poor health forced him to seek frequent change of air at his farm, at Praeneste, and at his favorite Baiae. The latter part of his life was spent in the study of moral philosophy. Maecenas and Horace died in the same year and were buried near one another in the farthest part of the Esquiline.

The works of Horace consist of four books of Odes; the Carmen Saeculare, an ode written at the request of Augustus for the Ludi Seculares; one book of Epodes; the Satires and Epistles, each in two books, and the Ars Poetica.

The most convenient edition of the entire works of Horace with notes in English is that of Wickham in two volumes (London, 1892). Excellent notes on the Satires are those of Palmer (London, 1883), and on the Epistles those of Wilkins (London, 1884). There are lives of Horace by Dean Milman (London, 1853), and by Hovenden (London, 1876). For general literary criticism see W. Y. Sellar's Roman Poets of the Augustan Age, pt. ii. Horace (1892). There are verse translations of the Odes by Conington (1870) and by Gladstone (1894); of the Satires and Epistles together by Conington (1869); of the whole of Horace by Sir Theodore Martin (1881). There is a prose rendering of the whole by Lonsdale and Lee (1877). A good lexicon to Horace (German) is that of Koch (1879).

The Poet and the Bore. (Sat. i. 9.)

Ibam forte Viā Sacrā, sicut meus est mos, Nescio quid meditans nugarum,<sup>3</sup> totus in illis:
 Accurrit quidam notus mihi nomine tantum, Arreptāque manu, "Quid agis, dulcissime rerum?"<sup>4</sup>
 5 "Suaviter ut nunc est," inquam, "et cupio omnia quae vis."
 "Nôris nos," inquit; "docti sumus." Hic ego, "Pluris<sup>7</sup> Hoc," inquam, "mihi eris." Misere discedere quaerens, Ire<sup>8</sup> modo ocius, interdum consistere, in aurem
 10 Dicere nescio quid puero, cum sudor ad imos Manaret talos.<sup>9</sup> O te, Bolane, cerebri<sup>10</sup>
 Felicem! aiebam tacitus; cum quidlibet ille Garriret,<sup>11</sup> vicus, urbem laudaret. Ut illi Nil respondebam, "Misere cupis," inquit, "abire;
 15 Iamdudum video; sed nil agis; usque tenebo;
 Prosequar: hinc quo nunc iter est tibi?" "Nil opus est te Circumagi; quendam volo visere non tibi notum, Trans Tiberim longe cubat<sup>12</sup> is prope Caesaris hortos."
 "Nil habeo quod agam et non sum piger; usque sequar te."
 20 Demitto auriculas ut iniquae<sup>13</sup> mentis asellus, Cum gravius dorso subiit onus. Incipit ille:
 "Si bene me novi non Viscum pluris amicum,
 Non Varium facies; nam quis me scribere plures

<sup>7</sup> gen. of value. <sup>8</sup> historical inf. <sup>9</sup> ankles. <sup>10</sup> hot temper. <sup>11</sup> chatter. <sup>12</sup> lies sick. <sup>13</sup> surly.

 Interpellandi locus hic erat: “Est tibi mater, Cognati, quis te salvo est opus?” — “Haud mihi quisquam.
 Omnes composui.” — Felices, nunc ego resto.
 Confice; namque instat fatum mihi triste Sabella
 Quod puero cecinit divinā motā anus<sup>4</sup> urnā: 30

 Nec laterum dolor<sup>6</sup> aut tussis<sup>7</sup> nec tarda podagra.<sup>8</sup>
 Garrulus hunc quando consumet cunque; loquaces
 Si sapiat vitet simul atque adolverit aetas.”
 Ventum erat ad Vestae<sup>9</sup> quartā iam parte diei 35
 Praeteritā, et casu tunc respondere vadato<sup>10</sup>

"Si me amas," inquit, "paulum hic ades."<sup>1</sup> "Inteream si Aut valeo stare aut novi civilia iura; 40 Et propero quo scis." "Dubius sum quid faciam," inquit, "Tene relinquam an rem." "Me sodes."<sup>2</sup> "Non faciam" ille; Et praecedere coepit. Ego ut contendere durum est Cum victore sequor. "Maecenas quomodo tecum?"<sup>3</sup>
 Hinc repetit; "paucorum hominum et mentis bene sanae;
 45 Nemo dexterius fortunā est usus. Haberes Magnum adiutorem posset qui ferre secundas,<sup>4</sup>
 Hunc hominem velles si tradere,<sup>5</sup> dispeream ni
 Quo tu rere<sup>7</sup> modo; domus hac nec purior ulla est
 50 Nec magis his aliena malis; nil mi officit<sup>8</sup> unquam
 Ditiior hic aut est quia doctior; est locus uni
 Cuique unus." "Magnum narras, vix credibile!" "Atqui
 Sic habet." "Accendis, quare cupiam magis illi Proximus esse." "Velis tantummodo: quae tua virtus, 55 Expugnabis; et est qui vinci possit, eoque
 Difficiles aditus primos habet." "Haud mihi deero:
 Muneribus servos corrumpam; non hodie si
 Exclusus fuero desistam; tempora<sup>9</sup> quaeram, Occuram in triviis, deducam.<sup>10</sup> Nil sine magno
 60 Vita labore dedit mortalibus." Haec dum agit, ecce Fuscus Aristius occurrit, mihi carus et illum Qui pulchre nōsset. Consistimus. Unde venis? et Quo tendis? rogat et respondet. Vellere<sup>11</sup> coepi Et prensare manu lentissima<sup>12</sup> brachia, nutans, 65 Distorquens oculos, ut me eriperet. Male salsus<sup>13</sup> Ridens dissimulare: meum iecur<sup>14</sup> urere bilis.
 "Certe nescio quid secreto velle loqui te

 Curtis Iudaeis oppedere<sup>2</sup>?" "Nulla mihi," inquam, 70
 "Religio<sup>3</sup> est." "At mi; sum paulo infirmior, unus
 Tam nigrum surrexe<sup>6</sup> mihi! Fugit improbus ac me
 Sub cultro<sup>7</sup> linquit. Casu venit obvius illi Adversarius et: "Quo,<sup>8</sup> tu turpissime?" magnā 75
 Inclamat voce, et "Licet antestari<sup>9</sup>?" Ego vero Oppono auriculam. Rapit in ius<sup>10</sup>; clamor utrinque, Undique concursus. Sic me servavit Apollo.

XIV. PUBLIUS OVIDIUS NASO.

Publius Ovidius Naso was born 43 B.C. at Sulmo, about ninety miles from Rome, and died 18 A.D. In order to give his sons the benefit of residence in the capital, their father removed to Rome, where Ovid received the usual training in rhetoric and oratory. His early aspirations toward a literary career were strongly discouraged by his father, but, coming into possession of a moderate fortune at the death of his elder brother, he was enabled to pursue his natural bent, and rapidly became a favorite in the circle of court poets. He was three times married and twice divorced. For many years he enjoyed great prosperity, but when about fifty years old incurred the sudden displeasure of the emperor, and was banished to Tomi, on the Black Sea. The cause of his banishment is not known. He refers to it in his poems, but does not explain what his offense was. He was unable to mollify the anger of Augustus, and died in the place of his exile.

The most important work of Ovid is the Metamorphoses, which professes to give in order the stories of Greek and Roman mythology, beginning with the creation. There is very little continuity, and the style is rambling and excursive, the narrative running through some twelve thousand verses. The verses are smooth and easy, but lacking in elaborate finish. The poem is of great value as the best known collection of ancient fables, set down by an excellent story-teller. In the Fasti, of which six books are extant, Ovid attempts a poetical version of the Roman Calendar, describing the various festivals of the year, the customs and ancient rites of the people. The Heroides are a set of letters from various legendary characters; the Amores, a collection of miscellaneous short poems in three books; the Tristia, five books of poems written during Ovid's banishment, full of personal biography and deep feeling. His other works are his Epistulae ex Ponto, addressed to various persons and similar to the Tristia in character; the Ars Amatoria and Remedium Amoris; and the Ibis, an invective against a false friend.

The standard text of the whole of Ovid is that of A. Riese (2d ed. Leipzig, 1889). There is a good edition of the Fasti with English notes by Paley (London, 1888); of the Heroides, by Shuckburgh (London, 1879); of the Amores and Ars Amatoria, by J. H. Williams (London, 1884); of the Metamorphoses (selections), by Simmons (London, 1887); of the Tristia, by S. G. Owen (London, 1890); of the Epistulae ex Ponto (Bk. I.), by Keene (London, 1887). The Ibis is edited with Latin notes by R. Ellis (Oxford, 1881). There is a lexicon to the Metamorphoses by Eichert (9th ed. Hanover, 1886); a life (in French) by Nageotte (Dijon, 1872); and a general introduction by Church in Ancient Classics for English Readers (1876).

The Rape of the Sabines. (Ars Am. i. 101.)

 Nec fuerant liquido pulpita <sup>4</sup> rubra croco. <sup>5</sup>
 Illic, quas tulerant nemorosa Palatia, frondes 5 Simpliciter positae, scena sine arte fuit.
 In gradibus sedit populus de cespite <sup>6</sup> factis,
 Respiciunt, oculisque notat sibi quisque puellam, Quam velit: et tacito pectore multa movent. 10
 Dumque, rudem praebente modum tibicine Tusco, Ludius <sup>9</sup> aequatam ter pede pulsat humum;
 In medio plausu (plausus tunc arte carebat,) 5
 Rex populo praedae signa petenda dedit.
 Protinus exsiliunt, animum clamore fatentes, <sup>10</sup> 15
 Virginibus cupidas iniciuntque manus.
 Ut fugiunt aquilas, timidissima turba, columbae, Utque fugit visos agna novella <sup>11</sup> lupos;
 Sic illae timuere viros sine lege ruentes.
 Constitit in nullā qui fuit ante color. 20
 Nam timor unus erat; facies non una timoris.
 Pars laniat <sup>12</sup> crines: pars sine mente sedet:
 Altera maesta silet; frustra vocat altera matrem:
 Haec queritur; stupet haec: haec fugit, illa manet.
 Ducuntur raptae, genialis <sup>13</sup> praeda, puellae, 25
 Et potuit multas ipse decere pudor.
 Si qua repugnabat nimium, comitemque negabat,
 Sublatam cupido vir tulit ipse sinu:
 Atque ita, "Quid teneros laerimis corrumpis ocellos?

 Haec mihi si dederis commoda, miles ero.

ATALANTA'S RACE.
(From the painting by Poynter.)

Ille fuit; superabat enim; nec dicere posses, Laude pedum, formaene bono praestantior esset.
 Scitanti<sup>1</sup> deus<sup>2</sup> huic de coniuge 'Coniuge,' dixit, 5
 'Nil opus est, Atalanta, tibi: fuge coniugis usum.
 Nec tamen effugies, teque ipsā viva carebis.'<sup>3</sup>
 Territa sorte dei per opacas innuba silvas
 Vivit, et instantem turbam violenta procorum<sup>4</sup> Condicione fugat, nec 'Sum potiunda, nisi,' inquit, 10
 'Vieta prius cursu; pedibus contendite mecum:
 Praemia veloci coniunx thalamiq̄ue dabuntur;
 Mors pretium tardis. Ea lex certaminis esto.'
 Illa quidem immitis: sed tanta potentia formae est,
 Venit ad hanc legem temeraria turba procorum. 15
 Sederat Hippomenes cursus spectator iniqui, Et 'Petitur cuiquam per tanta pericula coniunx?'
 Dixerat, ac nimios iuvenum damnārat amores.
 Ut faciem et posito corpus velamine<sup>5</sup> vidit, Quale meum,<sup>6</sup> vel quale tuum,<sup>7</sup> si femina fias, 20
 Obstipuit, tollensque manus 'Ignoscite,' dixit, 'Quos modo culpavi. Nondum mihi praemia nota, Quae peteretis, erant.' Laudando concipit ignes,

Et, ne quis iuvenum currat velocius, optat
 25 Invidiâque timet. 'Sed cur certaminis huius Intemptata mihi fortuna relinquitur?' inquit
 'Audentes deus ipse iuvat.' Dum talia secum
 30 Aonio<sup>3</sup> visa est iuveni, tamen ille decorem Miratur magis. Et cursus facit ille decorem.
 35 Inque puellari<sup>10</sup> corpus candore ruborem
 Traxerat, haud aliter, quam cum super atria<sup>11</sup> velum Candida purpureum simulatas inficit umbras.
 Dum notat haec hospes, decursa novissima meta<sup>12</sup> est, Et tegitur festâ victrix Atalanta coronâ.
 40 Dant gemitum victi, penduntque<sup>13</sup> ex foedere poenas:
 Non tamen eventu iuvenis deterritus horum Constitit in medio, vultuque in virgine fixo
 'Quid facilem titulum superando quaeris inertes?
 Mecum confer!' ait 'seu me fortuna potentem
 45 Fecerit, a tanto non indignabere vinci.
 Namque mihi genitor Megareus Onchestius: illi
 Est Neptunus avus: pronepos<sup>14</sup> ego regis aquarum.
 Nec virtus citra genus est. Seu vincar, habebis Hippomene victo magnum et memorabile nomen.'
 50 Talia dicentem molli Schoeneïa<sup>15</sup> vultu Aspicit, et dubitat, superari an vincere malit.
 Atque ita 'quis deus hunc formosis' inquit 'iniquus

Coniugium petere hoc? non sum, me iudice, tanti.
 Nec formā tangor,— poteram tamen hac quoque tangi — 55
 Sed quod adhuc puer est. Non me movet ipse, sed aetas.
 Quid, quod inest virtus et mens interrita leti?
 Quid, quod ab aequorea numeratur origine quartus?
 Quid, quod amat, tantique putat conubia nostra;
 Ut pereat, si me fors illi dura negaret? 60
 Dum licet, hospes, abi, thalamosque relinque cruentos.
 Coniugium crudele meum est. Tibi nubere nulla Nolet; et optari potes a sapiente puellā.
 Cur tamen est mihi cura tui, tot iam ante peremptis?
 Admonitus non est, agiturque in taedia<sup>2</sup> vitae.
 Occidet hic igitur, voluit quia vivere mecum,
 Indignamque necem pretium patietur amoris?
 Non erit invidiae victoria nostra ferendae.
 Sed non culpa mea est. Utinam desistere velles! 70
 Aut, quoniam es demens, utinam velocior esses!
 At quam virgineus puerili vultus in ore est!
 Ah, miser Hippomene, nollem tibi visa fuissem!
 Vivere dignus eras. Quod si felicior essem,
 Nec mihi coniugium fata importuna negarent, 75
 Unus eras, cum quo sociare<sup>3</sup> cubilia vellem.’
 Dixerat: utque rudis<sup>4</sup> primoque Cupidine tacta, Quid facit, ignorans, amat et non sentit amorem.
 Iam solitos poscunt cursus populusque paterque:
 Cum me sollicitā proles Neptunia voce 80
 Invocat Hippomenes, ‘Cytherea’ que ‘comprecior, ausis

The Poet's Banishment from Rome. (Tristia, i. 3.)

Cum subit illius tristissima noctis imago, Quā mihi supremum tempus in urbe fuit,
 Cum repeto noctem, quā tot mihi cara reliqui, Labitur ex oculis nunc quoque gutta <sup>3</sup> meis.
 Iam prope lux aderat, quā me discedere Caesar 5
 Finibus extremæ iusserat Ausoniae.
 Nec spatium fuerat, nec mens satis apta parandi:
 Torpuerant longā pectora nostra morā.
 Non mihi servorum, comitis non cura legendi,
 Non aptae profugo <sup>4</sup> vestis opisve fuit. 10
 Non aliter stupui, quam qui Iovis ignibus ictus Vivit, et est vitae nescius ipse suae.
 Ut tamen hanc animi nubem dolor ipse removit,
 Et tandem sensus convaluere mei,
 Alloquor extremum maestos abiturus amicos, 15
 Qui modo de multis unus et alter <sup>5</sup> erant.
 Uxor amans flentem flens acrius ipsa tenebat,
 Nata procul Libycis aberat diversa <sup>8</sup> sub oris, Nec poterat fati certior esse mei. 20
 Quocumque aspiceres, luctus gemitusque sonabant, Formaue non taciti funeris intus erat.

Femina virque meo, pueri quoque, funere maerent:
 Inque domo lacrimas angulus omnis habet.
 25 Si licet exemplis in parvo grandibus uti,
 Haec facies Troiae, cum caperetur, erat.
 Iamque quiescebant voces nonnumquam canumque,
 Lunaque nocturnos alta regebat equos.
 Hanc ego suspiciens, et ab hac Capitolia cernens, 30 Quae nostro frustra iuncta fuere lari,<sup>1</sup>
 "Numina vicinis habitantia sedibus," inquam
 "Iamque oculis numquam templa videnda meis, Dique relinquendi, quos urbs habet alta Quirini, Este salutati tempus in omne mihi!
 35 Et quamquam sero clipeum post vulnera sumo, Attamen hanc odiis exonerate fugam,
 Caelestique viro,<sup>2</sup> quis me deceperit error,
 Dicite, pro culpā ne scelus esse putet!
 Ut quod vos scitis, poenae quoque sentiat auctor, 40 Placato possum non miser esse deo."
 Hac prece adoravi superos ego, pluribus uxor,
 Singultu<sup>3</sup> medios impediēte sonos.
 Illa etiam ante lares passis adstrata capillis
 Contigit extinctos ore tremente focos, 45 Multaque in adversos effudit verba Penates Pro deplorato non valitura viro.
 Iamque morae spatium nox praecipitata negabat,
 Versaque ab axe suo Parrhasis<sup>4</sup> arctos erat.
 Quid facerem? blando patriae retinebar amore:
 50 Utima sed iussae nox erat illa fugae.
 Ah, quotiens certam me sum mentitus habere

Indulgens animo pes mihi tardus erat.
 Saepe 'vale' dicto rursus sum multa locutus, 55
 Et quasi discedens oscula summa dedi.
 Saepe eadem mandata dedi, meque ipse fefelli,
 Respiciens oculis ~~in pignora chara meis~~ Denique, "Quid propero? Seythia est, quo mittimur," inquam, "Roma relinquenda est. Utraque iusta mora est. 60
 Uxor in aeternum vivo mihi viva negatur,
 Et domus et fidae dulcia membra domus,
 Quosque ego fraterno dilexi more sodales,
 O mihi Theseā pectora iuncta fide!
 Dum licet, amplectar. Nunquam fortasse licebit 65
 Nec mora, sermonis verba imperfecta relinquo, Complectens animo proxima quaeque meo.
 Dum loquor et flemus, caelo nitidissimus alto,
 Stella gravis nobis, Lucifer ortus erat. 70
 Dividor haud aliter, quam si mea membra relinquam, Et pars abrumpi corpore visa suo est.
 Sic doluit Metus tunc, cum in contraria versos Ultores habuit prodicionis equos.
 Tum vero exoritur clamor gemitusque meorum, 75
 Et feriunt maestae pectora nuda manus.
 Tum vero coniunx, umeris abeuntis inhaerens, Miscuit haec lacrimis tristia dicta suis:
 "Non potes avelli. Simul, ah, simul ibimus," inquit:
 "Te sequar et coniunx exulis exul ero. 80
 Et mihi facta via est. Et me capit ultima tellus:
 Te iubet a patriā discedere Caesaris ira,
 Me pietas; pietas haec mihi Caesar erit."

85 Talia temptabat, sicut temptaverat ante,
     Vixque dedit<sup>1</sup> victas utilitate<sup>2</sup> manus.
 Egredior, sive illud erat sine funere ferri,<sup>3</sup>
     Squalidus inmissis hirta<sup>4</sup> per ora comis.
 Illa dolore amens tenebris narratur obortis<sup>5</sup>
 90 Semianimis mediâ procubuisse domo,
 Utque resurrexit foedatis pulvere turpi
     Crinibus et gelidâ membra levavit humo,
 Se modo, desertos modo complorâsse Penates,
     Nomen et erepti saepe vocasse viri,
 95 Nec gemuisse minus, quam si nataeque meumque
     Vidisset structos corpus habere rogos,<sup>6</sup>
 Et voluisse mori, moriendo ponere sensus, Respectuque tamen non periisse mei.
 Vivat! et absentem — quoniam sic fata tulerunt —
 100 Vivat ut auxilio sublevet usque suo.

XV. TITUS LIVIUS.

Titus Livius was born at Patavium (Padua) 59 B.C., and died at the same place 17 A.D. He passed most of his life at Rome in literary work. His great history of Rome from the coming of Aeneas to the death of Drusus, 9 B.C., was contained in one hundred and forty-two books, of which only thirty-five have been preserved. He was a raconteur rather than a historian, and collated from various and often conflicting authorities the accounts of the events which he described in vivid and animated language. No attempt is made in his work to sift historical evidence or to present the results of original research. He has therefore been called "the Roman Herodotus."

A standard text is that of Weissenborn in 6 vols. (Leipzig, 1878). There is a fair translation by Spillane and others in the Bohn Library; and an excellent one of the part relating to the Second Punic War (Bks. XXI.-XXV.) by Church and Brodribb (London, 1883). For criticism of Livy as a writer and historian see the monograph in French by H. A. Taine, Essai sur Tite Live (Paris, 1860); and for his language and style the Étude sur la Langue et Grammaire de Tite Live by Riemann (Paris, 1879).

 pontis, cum captum repentino impetu Ianiculum atque inde citatos decurrere hostes vidisset, trepidamque turbam suorum arma ordinesque relinquere, reprehensans singulos, obsistens obtestansque<sup>8</sup> deûm et hominum fidem testabatur, nequiquam deserto praesidio eos fugere; si transitum<sup>9</sup> pontem a tergo 10
 reliquissent, iam plus hostium in Palatio Capitolioque quam in Ianiculo fore. Itaque monere praedicere, ut pontem ferro igni, quâcumque vi possint, interrumpant: se impetum<sup>10</sup> hostium, quantum corpore uno posset obsisti, excepturum. Vadit inde in primum aditum pontis, insignisque inter conspecta cedentium 15 pugnae terga obversis comminus ad ineundum proelium armis ipso miraculo audaciae obstupescit hostis. Duos tamen cum eo pudor tenuit, Sp. Lartium ac T. Herminium, ambos claros genere factisque. Cum his primam periculi procellam et quod tumultuosissimum pugnae erat parumper<sup>11</sup> sustinuit. Deinde eos 20

quoque ipsos exiguā parte pontis relictā, revocantibus qui rescindebant, cedere in tutum coegit. Circumferens inde truces minaciter oculos ad proceres Etruscorum nunc singulos provocare, nunc increpare omnes, servitia regum superbiorum, suae libertatis
 35 multisque incidentibus telis incolumis ad suos tranavit, rem ausus plus famae habituram ad posteros quam fidei. Grata erga tantam virtutem civitas fuit: statua in Comitio posita, agri quantum uno die circumaravit datum. Privata<sup>4</sup> quoque inter publicos honores studia eminebant: nam in magnā inopia pro 40 domesticis copiis unusquisque ei aliquid fraudans se ipse victu suo contulit.

The Deed of Mucius Scaevola. (ii. 12.)

C. Mucius, adulescens nobilis, cui indignum videbatur populum Romanum servientem, cum sub regibus esset, nullo bello nec ab hostibus ullis obsessum esse, liberum eundem populum ab iisdem Etruscis obsideri, quorum saepe exercitus fuderit,—magno audacique aliquo facinore<sup>5</sup> eam indignitatem vindicandam ratus,<sup>6</sup>
 5 primo suā sponte penetrare in hostium castra constituit; dein metuens, ne, si consulum iniussu et ignaris omnibus iret, forte prehensus a custodibus Romanis retraheretur ut transfuga,<sup>7</sup>

fortunā tum urbis crimen adfirmante, senatum adit. “Transire Tiberim” inquit, “patres, et intrare, si possim, castra hostium 10 volo, non praedo<sup>1</sup> nec populationum in vicem ultor: maius, si di iuvant, in animo est facinus.” Adprobant patres. Abdito intra vestem ferro proficiscitur. Ubi eo venit, in confertissimā turbā prope regium tribunal constitit. Ibi cum stipendium militibus forte daretur, et scriba<sup>2</sup> cum rege sedens pari fere ornatu multa 15
 esset, ne ignorando regem semet ipse aperiret quis esset, quo temere traxit<sup>4</sup> fortuna facinus, scribam pro rege obtruncat.
 Vadentem inde, quā per trepidam turbam cruento mucrone sibi ipse fecerat viam, cum concursu ad clamorem facto comprehensum 20 regii satellites retraxissent, ante tribunal regis destitutus<sup>5</sup> tum quoque inter tantas fortunae minas metuendus magis quam metuens, “Romanus sum” inquit “civis, C. Mucium vocant.
 Hostis hostem occidere volui, nec ad mortem minus animi est quam fuit ad caedem: et facere et pati fortia Romanum est. 25
 Nec unus in te ego hos animos gessi; longus post me ordo est idem petentium deus.<sup>6</sup> Proinde in hoc discrimen, si iuvat, uni tibi et cum singulis res erit.” Cum rex simul<sup>9</sup> irā infensus

XVI. GAIUS PETRONIUS [ARBITER].

Gaius Petronius [Arbiter], a writer concerning whose personality there has been much discussion, is probably to be identified with the Gaius Petronius who was for some time the mâitre de plaisirs of Nero, — the Beau Brummel of Imperial Rome in the first century A.D. A man of great natural ability and unusual cultivation, he preferred a life of elegant dissipation to any serious pursuit. In 66 A.D., he was accused to the emperor of complicity in a plot, and at once committed suicide by opening his veins in a bath (Tacitus, Annales, xvi. 17). He wrote the work entitled Satira or Satiricon from which the following extracts are taken, — the best surviving example of the ancient world of manners. It depicts with absolute fidelity the daily life of the author's time, in narrating the adventures of two friends, Encolpius and Ascyltus, in one of the small cities of Campania. All classes of society are drawn with unusual power and merciless realism, from the standpoint of the man of the world. Its dialogue gives many specimens of the Latin of common life. Only a portion, however, of the work has survived, and the gaps in the existing portions are frequent.

The standard edition of the text is by Bücheler (Berlin, 1862; smaller edition, 1882). There is an edition of a portion of the work (the Cena Trimalchionis) with notes and a German translation by Friedländer (Leipzig, 1891); an edition in English (announced) by Waters (1895); an English translation of the whole by Kelly (London, 1854), and a good French translation by De Guerle (Paris, 1862).

Permittetis tamen finire lusum.” Sequebatur puer cum tabulā terebinthinā<sup>1</sup> et crystallinis tesseris,<sup>2</sup> notavique rem omnium delicatissimam. Pro calculis enim albis ac nigris aureos argenteosque habebat denarios. Interim dum ille omnium textorum dicta inter lusum consumit, gustantibus adhuc nobis repositorium<sup>3</sup> allatum est cum corbe,<sup>4</sup> in quo gallina erat lignea patentibus in orbem alis, quales esse solent quae incubant ova. Accessere continuo duo servi et symphoniā strepente scrutari paleam<sup>5</sup> coeperunt erutaque subinde pavonina ova divisere convivis. Convertit ad hanc scaenam Trimalchio vultum et “Amici,” ait “pavonis ova gallinae iussi supponi. Et mehercules timeo ne iam concepti<sup>6</sup> sint; temptemus tamen, si adhuc sorbilia<sup>7</sup> sunt.” Accipimus nos coclearia non minus selibras pendentia ovaque ex farinā<sup>8</sup> pingui figurata pertundimus. Ego quidem paene proieci partem meam, nam videbatur mihi iam in pullum coisse. Deinde ut audivi veterem convivam: “Hic nescio quid boni debet esse,” persecutus putamen<sup>9</sup> manu pinguissimam ficedulam<sup>10</sup> inveni piperato vitello<sup>11</sup> circumdatam.

 vehementer percussit, ex cuius plagā turdi<sup>5</sup> evolaverunt. Parati aucupes<sup>6</sup> cum harundinibus fuerunt et eos circa triclinium voli-65 ferri, Trimalchio adiecit: "Etiam videte, quam porcus ille silvaticus lotam comederit glandem." Statim pueri ad sportellas accesserunt, quae pendebant e dentibus, thebaicasque et caryotas ad numerum<sup>7</sup> divisere cenantibus.

Repositorium cum sue ingenti mensam occupavit. Mirari nos 70 celeritatem coepimus et iurare, ne gallum quidem gallinaceum tam cito percoqui<sup>8</sup> potuisse, tanto quidem magis, quod longe maior nobis porcus videbatur esse, quam paulo ante aper fuerat.
 Deinde magis magisque Trimalchio intuens eum, "Quid? Quid?"
 inquit "porcus hic non est exinteratus?"<sup>9</sup> Non mehercules est.
 75 Voca, voca cocum in medio." Cum constitisset ad mensam cocus tristis et diceret se oblitum esse exinterare, "Quid? oblitus?" Trimalchio exclamat "Putes illum piper et cuminum<sup>10</sup> non coniecisse. Despolia."<sup>11</sup> Non fit mora, despoliatur cocus atque 80 coeperunt et dicere: "Solet fieri; rogamus, mittas; postea si fecerit, nemo nostrūm pro illo rogabit." Ego, crudelissimae severitatis,<sup>13</sup> non potui me tenere, sed inclinatus ad aurem Agaaliquis oblivisceretur porcum exinterare? Non mehercules illi relaxato in hilaritatem vultu "Ergo" inquit "quia tam malae

XVII. GAIUS PLINIUS SECUNDUS MAIOR.

Gaius Plinius Secundus Maior, a famous encyclopaedic writer, usually spoken of as "Pliny the Elder" to distinguish him from his nephew, was born in the north of Italy (probably at Novum Comum) in 23 A.D. After seeing service in the German campaign of which he wrote an account now lost, he studied law; but gave up active practice to devote himself to study and the composition of literature. As a student his industry was extraordinary. He rose at two o'clock in the morning and read all day, having a slave read aloud to him at meal-time and while he was in his bath; and of all that was read he took copious notes, so that on his death he left to his nephew one hundred and sixty volumes of memoranda. From these materials he wrote, among other works, the monumental Historia Naturalis in thirty-seven books, -- a great storehouse of encyclopaedic knowledge that has been of inestimable value to archaeologists and historians. It deals with astronomy, geography, botany, mineralogy, meteorology, medicine, zoölogy, inventions and institutions, and the fine arts, -- besides touching on many other topics of great interest. In his preface he says that in its compilation he drew upon some two thousand books; and he has, besides, incorporated many facts observed by himself. Pliny died in the eruption of Vesuvius, 79 A.D.

The standard edition of the Latin text is that of Detlefsen in 6 vols. (Berlin, 1882). There is an English translation with an index, by Bostock and Riley, in the Bohn Series (London, 1859); and one in French by Littré (Paris, 1848-50).

XVIII. MARCUS FABIVS QVINTILIANVS.

Marcus Fabius Quintilianus was a native of Spain, where he was born about 40 A.D. Educated at Rome, he long resided at the capital as a professional teacher of rhetoric and oratory, receiving a regular salary from the imperial treasury. Among his pupils were Pliny the Younger and the grandnephew of the emperor Domitian. In the later years of his life he published a work, in twelve books, on the complete training of an orator from childhood up, in which he summarized his own practical experiences and observations as a teacher. This treatise, which is entitled Institutio Oratoria, is written in a clear and pleasant style, and exhibits both good taste and common sense. Its illustrations drawn from Roman sources, its judgments upon the great works of ancient literature, and its occasional anecdotes regarding historical personages, are all of permanent interest and value. Quintilian died about 95 A.D.

The standard edition of the text of Quintilian is that of Carl Halm, revised by Meister (Prague, 1886-87), and of Books X. and XII., with notes by Frieze (New York, 1889). There is a fair translation by Watson, in the Bohn series; and a lexicon by Bonnell, in Spalding's edition (1834).

Nunc fere negligentia paedagogorum sic emendari videtur, ut pueri non facere, quae recta sunt, cogantur sed, cum non fecerint, puniantur. Denique cum parvulum verberibus coegeris, quid iuveni facias, cui nec adhiberi potest hic metus et maiora discenda sunt? Some Roman Jokes. cr (vi. 3.)

XIX. MARCUS VALERIUS MARTIALIS.

Marcus Valerius Martialis was born at Bilbilis in Spain in the year 40 A.D., and died in the year 102. He went to Rome to pursue legal studies, but preferred, as he himself says, casu vivere, to get his living by flattering the emperors, especially Domitian, and the rich nobles. He returned to his native home so poor that the younger Pliny was obliged to give him money for the journey. His fame rests on fifteen books of epigrams, depicting all the follies and vices of his time, with spirit and cutting wit, but without any moral feeling.

The chief edition of the text is that of Friedländer (Leipzig, 1886). There are no adequate translations of the epigrams into English.

XX. DECIMUS IUNIUS IUVENALIS.

Decimus Iunius Iuvenalis was born about 47 A.D. at the Volscian town of Aquinum, and died about 130. He was either the son or protégé of a rich freedman, but raised himself to the rank of knight. His extant works consist of sixteen satires on the foibles and vices of society at Rome under Domitian, and were probably written at an advanced age. Juvenal is supposed to have been banished for satirizing the influence of the actor Paris at the imperial court, and hence died in exile. The Satires are highly rhetorical in their tone, so much so as to lessen their effect by producing an impression of insincerity. They abound in epigrammatic lines and phrases, many of which have become proverbial; while his studied antitheses and anticlimaxes with his occasional irreverent freedom of expression have led some editors to compare him with James Russell Lowell in the Biglow Papers, and to describe his rather grim wit as "the earliest known instance of American humor." A very full commentary is that of Mayor (London, 1886); a very convenient one, that of Lindsay (N. Y., 1890). A good verse translation is that of Gifford, and a good prose rendering that of J. D. Lewis. Dr. Samuel Johnson's paraphrase of Satires III. and X., under the respective titles of London and The Vanity of Human Wishes, are fine imitations in spirited and energetic verse, and contain lines that by their epigrammatic form have become almost as famous as any in the original.

XVI. GAIUS PLINIUS CAECILIUS SECUNDUS (MINOR).

Gaius Plinius Caecilius Secundus (Minor) was born at Comum 61 A.D. Having lost his father at an early age, he was adopted by his uncle, the elder Pliny, whose name he assumed. From his earliest years he was devoted to literature, and his acquirements made him one of the most learned men of the age. When about seventeen years old he was at Misenum during the great eruption of Vesuvius, which destroyed Pompeii and in which his uncle lost his life. He filled various political offices under Domitian, and under Trajan served two years as propraetor of Pontus. This office, as his letters show, he administered with much activity and fidelity.

His private character and tastes appear in his own letters. He was a kindly and upright man, of cultivated mind, fond of simple country life, liberal, and public-spirited. He was twice married, but had no children. His letters are valuable as throwing light upon a great variety of topics, and present an agreeable picture of his own life and that of his friends and associates. They are written with much care, evidently with a view to publication, and in them the author constantly betrays an amiable desire for fame. Nothing is known as to the date or manner of his death.

His extant works are the Panegyricus (a eulogy on Trajan) and the ten books of his Epistles.

A standard text of Pliny is that of Keil (Leipzig, 1870). There is a good English translation of the letters by Lewis (London, 1879). There is a good edition of Bks. I. and II. by Cowan with English notes (London, 1889), and of Bk. III. by Mayor (London, 1880). Selected letters by Prichard and Bernard (Oxford, 1873).

Non moratus ultra proripit se effusoque cursu periculo aufertur. Nec multo post illa nubes descendere in terras, operire<sup>7</sup> maria: cinxerat Capreas et absconderat.<sup>8</sup>

40 Miseni quod procurrit abstulerat. Tum mater orare, hortari, iubere quoquo modo fugerem; posse enim iuvenem, se et annis et corpore gravem bene morituram, si mihi causa mortis non fuisset. Ego contra, salvum me nisi una non futurum: dein manum eius amplexus, addere gradum cogo. Paret aegre incusatque se quod me moretur. Iam cinis, adhuc tamen rarus: respicio; densa caligo<sup>9</sup> tergis imminebat, quae nos torrentis modo infusa terrae sequebatur. “Deflectamus” inquam, “dum videmus ne in viā strati<sup>10</sup> comitantium turbā in tenebris operamur.<sup>11</sup>” Vix consideramus, et nox, non qualis inlunis aut nubila,

A Haunted House. (Epist. vii. 27.)

Erat Athenis spatiosa et capax domus, sed infamis et pestilens. Per silentium noctis sonus ferri, et si attenderes acrius, strepitus vinculorum longius primo, deinde e proximo reddebatur: mox

 15 amentiae quos, quia cives Romani erant, adnotavi in urbem remittendos. Mox ipso tractatu, ut fieri solet, diffundente se crimine plures species inciderunt. Propositus est libellus sine auctore multorum nomina continens. Qui negabant esse se Christianos aut fuisse, cum praeunte me deos appellarent et 20 imagini tuae, quam propter hoc iusseram cum simulacris numinum adferri, ture<sup>8</sup> ac vino supplicarent, praeterea male dicerent Christo, quorum nihil posse cogi dicuntur qui sunt re verã Christiani, dimittendos esse putavi. Alii ab indice nominati esse se Christianos dixerunt et mox negaverunt; fuisse quidem, sed
 25 desisse, quidam ante plures annos, non nemo etiam ante viginti quoque. Omnes et imaginem tuam deorumque simulacra venerati sunt [ii] et Christo male dixerunt. Adfirmabant autem hanc fuisse summam vel culpae suae vel erroris, quod essent soliti stato die ante lucem convenire carmenque Christo quasi

XXII. GAIUS.

An accomplished teacher of Roman law, of whose personality nothing is known, but whose introductory treatise on the subject (Institutiones), in four books, was a favorite authority with Roman students, and is much quoted by modern writers on Roman jurisprudence. The first book relates to persons; the second and third, to property; and the fourth, to legal procedure. There is an edition of the text with an English translation in parallel columns, and notes on the subject-matter, by Poste (Oxford, 1875); other editions by Muirhead (Edinburgh, 1880), and Mears (London, 1882).

The Business Capacity of Women. (i. 190-193.)

XXIII. WALL-INSRIPTIONS

Many inscriptions have been found in Pompeii and Rome scratched upon the walls, doorposts, pillars, and tombs by all classes of idlers, — slaves, schoolboys, loungers, policemen, — and often giving information of much interest concerning the popular ways of living, thinking, and speaking. These inscriptions (graffiti) are sometimes made with a stilus or some other sharp instrument, and sometimes drawn with charcoal or chalk. The best collections of these are those of Bishop C. Wordsworth in his Miscellanies (London, 1879); Père Garrucci's Graffiti de Pompéi (Paris, 1856); and the fourth volume of the Corpus Inscriptionum Latinarum, edited by Zangemeister. See also Parton's Caricature and Other Comic Art (New York, 1878).

XXIV. CORNELIUS TACITUS.

Cornelius Tacitus, one of the greatest of the Roman historians, was born about 55 A.D., and died about 120 A.D. He is the last of the truly classic writers of Roman literature. He was trained in rhetoric and writing, and held a number of public offices under Vespasian and succeeding emperors, being praetor in the year 88. His works are a life of his father-in-law Agricola (Vita Agricolae); Historiae, a history of the Empire from 69 to 96 A.D., of which there remain only four complete books; Annales, a history of the Empire from the death of Augustus (14 A.D.) to the death of Nero (68 A.D.), in sixteen books, of which nearly five are lost; a description of Germany (De Moribus et Populis Germaniae) of great historical and ethnographic value; and a dialogue on Roman oratory (Dialogus de Oratoribus), of which some writers have refused to admit the Tacitean authorship.

Tacitus is a powerful and impressive writer, a remarkable analyzer of character, and fond of psychological investigation. His language is epigrammatic, highly rhetorical, and at times almost unduly condensed.

The best edition of the Dialogus is that of Gudeman (N. Y. 1894); a good one of the Agricola and Germania, that of Church and Brodribb (2d ed. London, 1889); of the Historiae, that of Spooner (London, 1891); and of the Annales, that of Furneaux (Oxford, 1884). A good English translation of Tacitus is that by Church and Brodribb.

 55 ipsum ac mare et silvas, ignota omnia, circumspectantes, clausos quodammodo ac vinctos dii nobis tradiderunt. Ne terreat vanus aspectus et auri fulgor atque argenti, quod neque tegit neque vulnerat. In ipsa hostium acie inveniemus nostras manus; agnoscent Britanni suam causam, recordabuntur Galli priorem 60 libertatem, deserent illos ceteri Germani, tamquam nuper Usipii relinquerunt. Nec quicquam ultra formidinis; vacua castella, senum coloniae, inter male parentes et iniuste imperantes aegra municipia et discordantia. Hic dux, hic exercitus; illic tributa et metalla et ceterae servientium poenae, quas in aeternum per

An Account of the Germans. (Germania, xvi.–xix.)

35 accipitur, atque invicem ipsa armorum aliquid viro affert. Hoc maximum vinculum, haec arcana sacra, hos coniugales deos arbitrantur. Ne se mulier extra virtutum cogitationes extraque bellorum casus putet, ipsis incipientis matrimonii auspiciis ad-

Ergo septā<sup>2</sup> pudicitiam agunt nullis spectaculorum illecebris,<sup>3</sup> 45 nullis conviviorum irritationibus corruptae. Litterarum secreta viri pariter ac feminae ignorant. Paucissima in tam numerosā gente adulteria, quorum poena praesens, et maritis permissa.

XXV. GAIUS SUETONIUS TRANQUILLUS.

Gaius Suetonius Tranquillus, whose life probably lies between the year 75 and 160 A.D., was a Roman lawyer and writer under the Emperor Trajan, and was for a time private secretary to the Emperor Hadrian. He was a man of wide learning and wrote many works of an encyclopaedic character, some of them in Greek. His more important productions were a biographical work Viri Illustres, fragments of which remain; a collection of miscellanies entitled Pratum, now lost; and a life of the twelve Caesars (De Vita Caesarum) in eight books. His style and manner of treatment are monotonous, yet by the accumulation of details he often gives pictures of great vividness, so that one of the later emperors, Commodus, offended by their graphic power, ordered the book to be thrown to the wild beasts.

The standard text of the Lives is that by Roth (Leipzig, 1858); and of the fragments, that by Reifferscheid (2d ed. Leipzig, 1890). There is an edition of the first two books of the Lives with English notes by H. T. Peck (2d ed. N. Y. 1893). The Lives and the remains of the Viri Illustres are translated into English in the Bohn Library by Thomson and Forester (London, 1881).

Scaenicos ludos et assidue et varii generis ac multifariam fecit, quandam et nocturnos, accensis totā urbe luminibus. Sparsit et missilia <sup>8</sup> variarum rerum, et panaria <sup>9</sup> cum obsonio viritim <sup>10</sup> divisit; quā epulatione equiti Romano contra se hilarius avidiusque vescenti partes suas misit, sed et senatori ob eandem causam codicillos, <sup>11</sup> quibus praetorem eum extra ordinem designabat. ## XXVI. PUBLIUS AELIUS HADRIANUS.

HADRIAN.
(British Museum.)

Publius Aelius Hadrianus was born at Rome in 76 A. D. and died in 138. He was of Spanish ancestry and related to the Emperor Trajan, by whom he was brought up, and whom he succeeded in the year 117 A. D. With the exception of the last years of his reign, when he became suspicious and cruel, he devoted himself to the material and intellectual good of his subjects, by the promulgation of humane laws, and especially by the numerous magnificent architectural works which he planned and carried out. He spent several years in travel, visiting all parts of the Empire, and founded or aided many institutions of learning. He sought everywhere the society of men of letters, and was especially fond of Athens and Alexandria, where he was constantly engaged in discussion with the philosophers. His own writings were of a desultory character and seem never to have risen above the level of dilettanteism, though often clever and full of wit. Apart from decrees, there remain to us only short fragments, epistolary and epigrammatic. There is a life of Hadrian in German by Gregorovius (Stuttgart, 1884).

XXVII. THE LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT OF A LITTLE PIG. (TESTAMENTUM PORCELLI.)

This jeu d'esprit is of unknown authorship and uncertain date; but as it is mentioned by St. Jerome (Comment. in Is. xii. introd.), it must have been written earlier than the fourth century A.D. The oldest MS. containing it is of the ninth century. St. Jerome says that it was repeated by the boys in schools, where it excited much laughter. It is evidently intended for children, the language of the preliminary paragraph being unmistakably that of the nursery tale; though some editors have supposed it to be the work of a lawyer, and written merely to burlesque the legal forms of a will. It has been edited by Moritz Haupt (Opuscula, ii. 178); and the text is printed by Bûcheler in his smaller edition of Petronius (Berlin, 1886). See Notes.

XXVIII. AULUS GELLIUS.

Aulus Gellius, a writer of miscellanies who flourished in the second century A.D., was probably of Roman birth, though little is known of his life, except that he spent some time at Athens pursuing various studies, the results of which are embodied in his only work, entitled Noctes Atticae, in twenty books, of which the eighth is lost except the chapter-headings. The Noctes Atticae is a great scrap-book consisting of unrelated extracts from Roman and Greek authors, especially archaic writers, with his own comments. The importance of the collection is in the light it often throws on questions of history, grammar, antiquities, and literature, and in its preservation of quotations from Greek and Roman authors whose works have perished. The chief edition of this text is that by Hertz, 2 vols. (Berlin, 1883-5). There is a poor translation into English by Beloe (London, 1799).

A Woman Hater. (i. 6.)

Multis et eruditis viris audientibus legebatur oratio Metelli Numidici, gravis ac disertī viri, quam in censurā dixit ad populum de ducendis uxoribus, cum eum ad matrimonia capessenda<sup>3</sup> hortaretur. In eā oratione ita scriptum fuit: si sine uxore
5 [vivere] possemus. “Quirites, omni eā molestia careremus; sed quoniam ita natura tradidit, ut nec cum illis satis commode, nec sine illis ullo modo vivi possit, salutī perpetuae potius quam brevi voluptate consulendum est.”

Videbatur quibusdam, Q. Metellum censorem, cui consilium 10 esset ad uxores ducendas populum hortari, non oportuisse de molestiā incommodisque perpetuis rei uxoriae confiteri, neque id hortari magis esse quam dissuadere absterreque; set contra in id potius orationem debuisse sumi dicebant, ut et nullas plerum-que esse in matrimoniis molestias adseveraret et, si quae tamen accidere nonnunquam viderentur, parvas et leves facilesque esse 15 toleratu diceret maioribusque eas emolumentis et voluptatibus obliterari easdemque ipsas neque omnibus neque naturae vitio, sed quorundam maritorum culpa et iniustitiâ evenire. Titus autem Castricius recte atque condigne Metellum esse locutum existimabat. "Aliter," inquit, "censor loqui debet, aliter rhetor. 20 Rhetori concessum est, sententiis uti falsis, audacibus, versutis,<sup>1</sup>

 esse ait rhetori, si quid in malâ causâ destitutum atque inpropugnatum relinquat. "Sed enim Metellum," inquit, "sanctum 25 virum, illâ gravitate et fide praeditum cum tantâ honorum atque vitae dignitate apud populum Romanum loquentem, nihil decuit

Socrates and Xanthippe. (i. 17.)

Quantâ cum animi aequitate toleraverit Socrates uxoris ingenium intractabile ; atque inibi, quid M. Varro in quâdam saturâ de officio mariti scripserit.

Xanthippe, Socratis philosophi uxor, morosa admodum fuisse fertur et iurgiosa,<sup>8</sup> irarumque et molestiarum muliebrum per diem perque noctem scatebat.<sup>9</sup> Has eius intemperies in mari-tum Alcibiades demiratus, interrogavit Socraten, quâenam ratio

Secundum hanc www.libtool.com/en sententiam quoque Varro in saturā Menippeā, quam de officio mariti scripsit “Vitium,” inquit, “uxoris aut tollendum aut ferendum est. Qui tollit vitium, uxorem commodiorem praestat, qui fert sese meliorem facit.” Haec verba Varronis “tollere” et “ferre” lepide<sup>1</sup> quidem composita sunt, sed “tollere” apparet dictum pro “corrigerere.” Id etiam apparet, 15 eius modi vitium uxoris, si corrigi non possit, ferendum esse Varronem censuisse, quod ferri scilicet a viro honeste; vitia enim flagitiis leviora sunt.

The Ring Finger. (x. 10.)

Quae eius rei causa sit, quod et Graeci veteres et Romani anulum hoc digito gestaverint, qui est in manu sinistrā minimo proximus.

ANULUS.

Veteres Graecos anulum habuisse in digito accepimus sinistrae manus, qui minimo est proximus. Romanos quoque homines aiunt sic plerumque anulis usitatos. Causam esse huius rei Apion in libris Aegyptiacis hanc dicit, quod insectis apertisque humanis corporibus, ut mos in Aegypto fuit, quas Graeci “ἀνατομάς” appellant, repertum est, nervum quendam tenuissimum ab eo uno digito, de quo diximus, ad cor hominis pergere ac pervenire; propterea non insectum<sup>2</sup> visum esse, eum potissimum digitum tali honore decorandum, qui continens et quasi conexus esse cum principatu cordis videretur.

Some Superstitions. (x. 12.)

De portentis fabularum, quae Plinius Secundus indignissime in Democritum philosophum confert,<sup>1</sup> et ibidem de simulacro volucris columbae.

Librum esse Democriti, nobilissimi philosophorum, de vi et naturā chamaeleontis eumque se legisse Plinius Secundus in naturalis historiae vicesimo octavo refert, multaque vana atque intoleranda auribus deinde quasi a Democrito scripta tradit, ex quibus pauca haec inviti meminimus, quia pertaesum<sup>2</sup> est: 5 accipitrem avium rapidissimum a chamaeleonte humi reptante, si eum forte supervolet, detrahi et cadere vi quādam in terram ceterisque avibus laniandum sponte suā obiicere sese et dedere. Item aliud ultra humanam fidem: caput et collum chamaeleontis si uratur ligno, quod appellatur “robur,” imbres et tonitrus fieri 10 derepente, idque ipsum usu venire, si iecur eiusdem animalis in summis tegulis uratur. Item aliud, quod hercle an ponerem dubitavi, ita est deridiculae vanitatis, nisi idcirco plane posui, quod oportuit nos dicere, quid de istius modi admirationum fallaci inlecebrā sentiremus, quā plerumque capiuntur et ad perniciem 15 elabuntur ingenia maxime sollertia, eaque potissimum, quae discendi cupidiora sunt. Sed redeo ad Plinium. Sinistrum pedem ait chamaeleontis ferro ex igni calefacto torrerī cum herbā, quae appellatur eodem nomine chamaeleontis, et utrumque macerari<sup>3</sup> unguento conligique in modum pastilli<sup>4</sup> atque in vas<sup>5</sup> 20
mitti ligneum et eum, qui id vas ferat, etiamsi is in medio palam versetur, a nullo videri posse.

His portentis atque praestigiis a Plinio Secundo scriptis non dignum esse cognomen Democriti puto; vel illud quale est, quod idem Plinius in decimo libro Democritum scripsisse adseverat, 25 aves quasdam esse certis vocabulis et earum avium confuso sanguine gigni serpentem; eum qui ederit linguas avium et colloquia interpretaturum.

 30 huiuscemodi commenta<sup>2</sup> in Democriti nomen data, nobilitatis auctoritatisque eius perfugio utentibus. Sed id, quod Archytam Pythagoricum commentum esse atque fecisse traditur, neque minus admirabile neque tamen vanum aequè videri debet. Nam et plerique nobilium Graecorum et Favorinus philosophus, memo-35 riarum veterum exsequentissimus, affirmatissime scripserunt, simulacrum columbae e ligno ab Archytā ratione quādam dis-ciplināque mechanicā factum volasse; ita erat scilicet libramentis suspensum et aurā spiritus inclusā atque occultā concitum.

 athleticam desisset iterque faceret forte solus in locis Italiae 5 silvestribus, quercum vidit proxime viam patulis in parte mediā rimis hiantem.<sup>3</sup> Tum experiri, credo, etiam tunc volens, an ullae sibi reliquae vires adessent, inmissis in cavernas arboris digitis, diducere et rescindere quercum conatus est. Ac mediam quidem (partem) discidit divellitque; quercus autem in duas 10 diducta partes, cum ille, quasi perfecto quod erat conixus, manus laxāset, cessante vi rediit in naturam manibusque eius retentis inclusisque stricta denuo<sup>4</sup> et cohaesa, dilacerandum hominem feris

CHAMBER IN THE ROMAN CATACOMBS.

The Latin hymns of the early Christian Church are interesting as literary compositions and also for their metrical structure, as showing a reversion to the older system of verse in which accent and rhyme prevail instead of syllabic quantity. Such had always been the case with the purely popular poetry of the Romans, with whom the elaborate system of prosody found in classical literature was always an artificial thing; and so it was natural that the hymns of the early Church, being written for the people, should display the same characteristics as are found in the folk-verse. No hymns of which the authors' names are known are found earlier than the first part of the fourth century, after which time St. Hilary and St. Ambrose led the way in this species of composition, in which they were followed by Prudentius (350-410), Sedulius, about the same time, Venantius Fortunatus (530-609), Gregory the Great (540-604), the Venerable Bede (673-735), and many others.

Of the three specimens given here, the first is by St. Ambrose (340-397), who was chosen Bishop of Milan in 374. The second, the immortal Dies Irae, is of unknown authorship and uncertain date, though it has often been ascribed to the Franciscan, Thomas of Celano. The third is by St. Bernard.

For a good account of the Latin hymns, with sketches of the best known Latin hymn-writers, reference may be made to Archbishop Trench's Sacred Latin Poetry (London, 1874), and to Duffield's Latin Hymn Writers (New York, 1888). A fine collection of Latin hymns is that by Cardinal Newman, Carmina Ecclesiae (London, 1876); as also that of the German scholar, Mone, Hymni Latini, 3 vols. (1853-55). Considerable information on special points is to be found in Julian's Dictionary of Hymnology (New York, 1888). For further discussion see the Notes.

SUGGESTIONS FOR COLLATERAL READING.

The following works will be found especially useful as collateral and supplementary reading: —

BIBLIOGRAPHY.

KELSEY. Fifty Topics in Roman Antiquities, with References. Boston, 1891.

LANGUAGE.

ALLEN. Remnants of Early Latin. Boston, 1880.

HARRINGTON AND TOLMAN. Early Latin Fragments. (In Preparation.)

EGBERT. Introduction to the Study of Latin Inscriptions. (In Press.)

MERRY. Selected Fragments of Roman Poetry. Oxford, 1891.

HISTORY.

SHUCKBURGH. A History of Rome to the Battle of Actium. London and New York, 1894.

BURY. A History of the Roman Empire from its Foundation to the Death of Marcus Aurelius (B.C. 27—A.D. 180). London and New York, 1893.

[This work takes up the story of Rome at the point where Mr. Shuckburgh leaves it. The book is admirably written, in accordance with the best authorities, and contains some special chapters on the development of Roman literature and the various phases of Roman life.]

BARING-GOULD. The Tragedy of the Caesars. 2 vols. London, 1892.

[A suggestive account of the personality of the first six Caesars, written with considerable freshness and originality. The text is sumptuously illustrated with reproductions of the most famous likenesses of the emperors and their immediate associates.]

www.libtool.com.cn

TEUFFEL, SCHWABE, AND WARR. A History of Roman Literature. 2 vols. London, 1891-92.

[A work essentially for reference, rather than for reading. It is indispensable to the advanced student of Latin; giving a minute account of the original sources of information regarding the writers of Latin literature, and a very complete bibliography of all standard works, especially the German, including monographs, dissertations, and programmes.]

CRUTTWELL. A History of Roman Literature from the Earliest Period to the Death of Marcus Aurelius. London and New York, 1886.

[A very pleasantly written account of Latin literature, with some interesting paragraphs on the language. It is probably better adapted to excite the interest of the student than any work of the kind in English, and is independently written from the author's own standpoint.]

ROMAN LIFE AND CUSTOMS.

FRIEDLÄNDER. Darstellungen aus der Sittengeschichte Roms in der Zeit von August bis zum Ausgang der Antonine. 3 vols. Leipzig, 1888-90.

[A treasure-house of information about the details of Roman life, Roman society, usage, and custom, with references to the sources from which this knowledge is drawn.]

PRESTON AND DODGE. The Private Life of the Romans. New York and Boston, 1894.

[A popular account of the subject, drawn from good authorities, and written in an interesting style. The text is illustrated by a number of cuts.]

INGE. Society in Rome under the Caesars. London and New York, 1888.

[This little book was originally written as an essay, in competition for the Hare Prize at the University of Cambridge. While making no pretensions to originality, it is a well-written and convenient condensation of the facts set forth in more elaborate works, and will be found accurate and instructive.]

DYER. Pompeii: Its History, Buildings, and Antiquities. New edition. London, 1875.

[So many problems of archaeology are solved by the discoveries at Pompeii as to make the records of this buried city of extreme interest to every student of Roman life. This work in a single volume gives a good account of the excavations prior to 1875, and is illustrated by plans, maps, and cuts.]

LANCIANI. Ancient Rome in the Light of Recent Excavations. Boston and New York, 1888.

[A most fascinating account of the city of Rome, with especial reference to the new light that has been thrown upon its topography, architecture, history, and society, by excavations made during the past twenty years. It is written with a wealth of special knowledge and a charm of style that make it unique among works of archaeology. It is beautifully printed, and is made especially interesting by its carefully selected illustrations, one hundred in number.]

GUHL AND KONER. The Life of the Greeks and Romans. Last edition of the English translation. New York, 1878.

[An account of Greek and Roman life as illustrated by the external objects that have been preserved to modern times. A great many cuts and diagrams give additional value to the text. A new German edition of this standard work appeared in 1893.]

LECKY. A History of European Morals. Vol. I. New York and London, 1884.

[A work of unusual power and value, written with great charm of style, and dealing with its subject in a scientific and philosophical spirit. A vast amount of minute and curious knowledge is embodied in its pages; and the foot-notes supplement the text with references and quotations of much interest to the student.]

I. POPULAR SONGS, CHARMS, ETC.

PAGE 13. lalla. A natural sound made in soothing children. It is the same as the Swedish lulla, "to hum," and its elements occur in the English lull, lullaby, and in the historical nickname Lollards applied to the followers of Wyclif, originally meaning "the droners," or "chanters" (Skeat). So the Germans call the vocabulary of the nursery Lallwörter. The word is not here the imperative of lallo, "to babble" (Gk. λαλεῖν), but only a soothing sound formed from the repetition of the syllables la, la, la.

lacta. "Take your milk."

Terra pestem teneto. From Varro's treatise De Re Rustica, i. 2. 27, where it is quoted. The person using this charm is to sing it over twenty-seven times, to touch the ground, and to spit, — spitting being regarded by the Romans as having some special medical virtue. Thus epilepsy is cured by spitting on the patient (Plaut. Capt. iii. 4. 23; Pliny, H. N. x. 23. 33 and xxviii. 4. 7). Compare Christ's cure of the blind man in the Gospel of St. John ix. 6.

Habeat scabiem, etc. Reconstructed by L. Müller from the scholiast Porphyrio on Horace, Ars Poetica, 417. It is the Roman equivalent of the modern "Devil take the hindmost." The goal-post which marks the end of the race is supposed to be the speaker of the line.

Huat hanat huat. Probably mere gibberish, like the famous "Hocus pocus tontus talontus" of the mediaeval jugglers, though like that it may have been corrupted from an actual formula. Many of the old liturgies used by the Roman priests had become so twisted out of their original sound as to be unintelligible even to those who used them in their rites (Quintil. i. 6. 40). This particular cautio, or charm, is quoted by Cato in his agricultural treatise, 160.

14. Hiberno pulvere, etc. An old saw quoted by Festus, p. 93. It is like "A green Christmas makes a fat churchyard," and "A dirty spring makes a golden harvest," etc.

camille. The camilli were boys employed in religious rites and services, especially by the Flamen Dialis and at Roman marriages, something like the acolytes of the Roman Catholic Church. The word, which is a very old one, is of uncertain etymology. See Hartung, Die Religion der Römer, i., p. 157; ii., p. 71.

Quod habes ne habeas, etc. From Plautus, Trinummus, 350, where it is given as a popular gibe against misers, and dog-in-the-mangers generally.

bene esse. "To have a good time." Colloquial expression.

Heia, viri, etc. A boating song, of uncertain age, found in a Berlin MS. of the eighth century. There is frequent mention in the ancient writers of the nautilus cantus (e.g. Cic. Nat. Deor. ii. 35) of boatmen at the oar; and the practice of singing at work also appears to have been general. Thus Varro, cited by Nonius (56), speaks of the vine-dressers singing at the vintage, and the sarcinatrices in machinis, which one would like to translate, "the seamstresses over their sewing machines." For the spirited lines given here, see Bährens, Poet. Lat. Min. iii. 167, and Peiper in the Rheinisches Museum, xxxii. 523.

nostrum. Agreeing with the second heia, "our yoho."

corus. Also written caurus; the argestes of the Greeks and the mistral of modern Provence. The northwest wind. See Gell. ii. 22.

Dulcis amica veni, etc. This very curious poem is found in MSS. of the eleventh century, but in the main is probably of much older date. Goldast ascribes it to a certain Albius Ovidius Iuventinus, but this personage appears to be a sort of mediaeval Mrs. Harris, and the authorship is in reality quite unknown. The Romans seem to have been greatly interested in the capacity of the Latin language to imitate in its vocabulary the sounds made by the various birds and beasts, and took pride in the number of expressive mimetic words (onomatopoeias) which it possessed. In one of the works of Suetonius, entitled Pratum (see p. 163), he brought together all these imitative verbs; and though the Pratum as a whole has not come down to us, this particular chapter has been preserved, and may be found in Reifferscheid's collection of the fragments of Suetonius (pp. 247-254). It is probable that the missing portions of Varro's treatise, De Lingua Latina, contained a still earlier collection of the same kind. Spartianus relates that the Emperor Geta used to get together the teachers of language, and ask them to give him lists of these imitative words, quoting from earlier writers their authority for using them (Spart. Geta, 5). The subject of onomatopoeias is again taken up by Polemius Silvius, in the fifth century, in his Laterculus; showing that it possessed a continuous interest for students of language. There are also two short poems of similar character, entitled respectively De Voce Hominis Absona (Bährens, Poët. Lat. Min. v., p. 368) and De Philomela (id. ibid., pp. 368-370). It is reasonable, therefore, to suppose that the poem given in our text is of earlier origin than the period to which its oldest MS. is assigned, and that it is possibly based upon the chapters of Suetonius. Its mediaeval modifications, however, are made evident by the single word drosca (line 11), which is not Latin, but German (throsca, droschel, drossel, Eng. throistle, thrush), and which serves as a sort of ear-mark to show that the poem was worked over in some German monastery.

The superior richness of the Latin in onomatopoeias, as compared with the English, will be seen in attempting to translate the poem. For many of the Latin verbs there are no English equivalents whatsoever. The poem has been edited by Nodier in the Appendix to his Dictionnaire des Onomatopées Françaises (2d ed., Paris, 1828), and by Lemaire in his Bibliotheca Classica Latina, vol. cxl. See, for criticism, comment, etc., Ebart, Allgemeine Geschichte der Literatur des Mittelalters im Abendlande, vol. ii.; Löwe, in the Rheinisches Museum, vol. xxxiv., pp. 493-496; Wackernagel, Voces Variæ Animantium (Basel, 1869); and a paper by H. T. Peck, on "Onomatopoeic Words in Latin," in the Classical Studies in Honour of Henry Drisler, pp. 226-239 (New York and London, 1894).

15. vocum discrimina. "Distinct sounds." So in line 47.

odis. Gk. φδῆ.

glottorat. Another form is gloctorat. The word refers to the clattering of the stork's huge bill, and not, as Lewis and Short seem to think, to the bird's voice. Compare Ovid, Met. vi. 97:

Ipsa sibi plaudat crepitante ciconia rostro,

a passage which also refutes Mayor's explanation of crepitat in Juv. i. 116, though, curiously enough, he quotes it in support of his own view.

ciconia. The stork's bill. Roman boys bent up their fingers in imitation of this, as a gesture of mockery and contempt, much like the modern placing of the thumb upon the nose and spreading the fingers. This gesture was called ciconia, and is mentioned by Persius (i. 58) and by St. Jerome. Another gesture of insult was the thrusting out of the middle finger (digitus infamis), for making which sign at one of his officers the Emperor Caligula was assassinated.

pessimus et passer. "The sparrow, the rascal."

chaere. The Greek salutation χαῖρε, with which parrots were regularly taught to greet those who entered the house (Pers. Prol. 8).

16. omne quod audit ait. So Ovid, Met. v. 299, Institerant ramis imitantes omnia picae; and Pers. Prol. 9.

panther amans. "The rutting panther." The more usual Latin form is panthera. Pliny derived the word from πᾶν + θῆρ, and explained it as given because the characteristics of all beasts are found united in the panther. From this popular etymology a number of curious fables arose, for which see Wright's Popular Traditions in Science, p. 82.

pia . . . ovis. "The faithful sheep."

sordida. "Greedy."

rite. "As is their wont," "usually"; i.e. the dog makes a variety of sounds, but barking is the most characteristic of them. Naturalists tell us that the wild dog has only one or two notes as against the whine, whimper, howl, yelp, and bark of the domesticated animal.

rana coaxat. Aristophanes, in his play, the Frogs, represents the frog's croak by κόαξ; and the Latin coaxo (also written quaxo) may be borrowed from it. Cf. Fest., p. 288, Müll. From the Latin form is the French verb coasser.

17. Pessuli. The lover is supposed to stand outside the house of his mistress, and adjure the bolts and bars to slip aside and let him in. Similar compositions are common in Latin literature. Hor. Odes, iii. 10.

ludii barbari. Ludii (also ludiones) are acrobats. He wishes the bolts fairly to leap from their sockets in their eagerness to let him.

nihili. Genitive of value.

mille, mille, mille. Sung by the soldiers of Aurelian. The verse is trochaic tetrameter catalectic, but based on accent, and not on syllabic quantity. Thus the penult of the words homo, bibat, and habet, is in each regarded as long because the accent lengthens it, just as in English. See T. H. Key's chapter on accent in his Language, its Origin and Development, p. 442 (London, 1874), where he cites this passage. Another specimen is found in the verses of Hadrian given on p. 171.

The repetition of the mille is a primitive trick of emphasis, like the children's "ever and ever and ever so long ago." Cf. Dryden's "Fallen, fallen, fallen, fallen, fallen from his high estate." This principle of repetition, as a device for giving greater force to what is said, lies at the base of various figures of rhetoric (anaphora, epizeuxis, epistrophe, symploce, epanalepsis, anadiplosis, epanadiplosis, epanados, polyptoton, paregmenon, paronomasia, alliteration, synonyma, parechesis, etc.), and explains reduplication and other forms of dynamic change in the making of words.

II. TOMB INSCRIPTIONS.

18. The sarcophagus of Lucius Cornelius Scipio, of which an illustration is given in the text, was found in the family tomb of the Scipios, on the Appian Way, not far from the Porta Capena of Roman times, and was removed to the Vatican Museum by Pope Pius VII. In it the bones of Scipio were found in 1780, in very good preservation. They were removed to Padua, and there interred at the expense of a Venetian, Signor Quirini. The tomb itself is still one of the sights of Rome, and is shown to visitors, who grope about its various dark and dismal chambers by the light of a taper. The Scipio of the sarcophagus was consul in B.C. 298, and was the great-grandfather of Scipio Africanus, who conquered Hannibal (B.C. 202). The inscription is in Saturnian verse.

sepulcrum hau pulcrum pulcræ. A sort of parechesis, like Cicero's pleniore ore, fortunatam natam, etc.

19. horunc. i.e. horum + ce.

incessu. Compare Vergil's famous vera incessu patuit dea (Aen. i. 405).

lanam fecit. The spinning of wool was the typical occupation of a Roman matron. The mater familias sat in the atrium of the house spinning among her maids; and so Lucretia, when Tarquin met her.

Dum vixi bibi libenter. A line that reminds one of honest Iago's ditty:—

“ And let me the canakin clink, clink,
And let me the canakin clink :
A soldier's a man
And life's but a span, —
Why then let a soldier drink ! ”

Salvius et Eros dant. Salvius and Eros are the slaves or freedmen who have caused the stone to be erected.

III. QUINTUS ENNIUS.

20. impudentes arioli. The ancient representatives of the ingenious persons who in modern times advertise to impart (for a small sum) their knowledge of a sure way to make a fortune, or who write books on “The Secret of Success.”

monstrant viam. The blind are leaders of the blind.

dracumam. Lengthened form of drachmam, like Alcumena for Alcmena; mina for mna, etc. The drachma was worth about eighteen cents.

Hæce locutus vocat. Aulus Gellius (xii. 4) cites these lines from the eighth book of the Annales as giving an ideal picture of a true and loyal friend, — the perfect type of an intimate. He adds that Lucius Aelius Stilo, Varro's great teacher, used to say that Ennius had here drawn with accuracy a fine picture of himself. Notice the roughness of the hexameters in this passage and in the speech of Pyrrhus given below, — the continual neglect of the final s (locutu', lassu', rebu', malu', doctu', facundu', contentu', scitu', commodu'), the long penult in dederitis, the synizesis in eorundem, etc.

21. O Tite tute Tati, etc. The most famous alliterative line in Latin, as the most famous alliteration in Greek is the line from the Oedipus Tyrannus of Sophocles (line 371), in which Oedipus taunts the seer Tiresius with his blindness:—

τυφλὸς τὰ τ' ὤτα τὸν τε νοῦν τὰ τ' ὄμματ' εἶ.

Curiously enough each involves the repetition of the letter t. The alliteration in the line of Ennius, is, however, rather a childish and meaningless jingle. Some writers have tried to trace a sort of principle in the choice of letters in Latin alliterative lines. Thus Munro in his introduction to Lucretius thinks that the repetition of v is used to produce the effect of wailing (see in the present volume, p. 34, line 67); that the repetition of p conveys the idea of effort and force, etc., but this seems rather fanciful. The earlier and later Roman writers are fond of alliteration, but those of the Augustan Age use it very sparingly. See Ebrard, Alliteration in d. lat. Sprache (Bayreuth, 1882); Bötticher, De Alliterationis apud Romanos Titus Livii (Berlin, 1884); and Cruttwell, pp. 238, 239.

The Titus Tatius of the line is the Sabine king who undertook to avenge the rape of the Sabine women. See p. 103.

Nec mi aurum posco. The Epirote King Pyrrhus, the Cœur de Lion of antiquity, who waged war on the Romans from B.C. 280–275 in a spirit of knightly adventure, is represented in these lines as refusing to accept money as a ransom for the prisoners that he had taken, but as freely giving them up without a price. The chivalrous and martial spirit of the king is finely indicated in the lines which are given by Cicero in his De Officiis, i. 12.

dederitis. This long penult is common in the older prosody. The general tendency in the development of Latin prosody is toward the shortening of long vowels; i.e. toward lightness and grace. Thus Ennius has more long vowels than Lucretius, and Lucretius than Vergil.

vitam cernamus. A sort of condensed expression for the more regular de vita cernamus, or pro vita cernamus. The accusative must be explained as an accusative of specification.

Nemo me decoret. Twice quoted by Cicero (De Amicit. 20; Tusc. Disp. i. 15), who thinks it a fine and manly assertion by the poet of his own greatness, like that of Horace in the famous ode beginning Exegi monumentum aere perennius.

IV. TITUS MACCIUS PLAUTUS.

22. Advorsum venire, etc. The stage setting shows the front of the house of Philolaches. Philolaches, Philematium, and others are beginning a drinking-bout (comissatio), reclining upon couches in the Graeco-Roman fashion. Callidamates, who has been dining not wisely but too well elsewhere, enters with unsteady steps, leaning upon Delphium, who directs his course as well as she can.

temperi. Adverbial form = tempore.

hem, tibi imperatum est. "There! those are your orders."

illi. For illuc, the latter being the stronger (deictic) form with the emphatic suffix -ce.

comissatum. Supine, to denote purpose after a verb of motion. From κωμάζω, "to revel," and not connected with committo.

Philolachetem. This name is declined Philolaches, genitive, Philolachētis, or Philolachis. Cf. line 1. The proper names in Plautus are usually indicative of the characters who bear them, like those in Thackeray. Thus, Philolaches, the spendthrift (φιλός + λάχος from λαχεῖν) is "one fond of his inheritance"; Callidamates, the lover of women, is "the one subdued by beauty" (κάλλος + δαμάω); Philematium, the loving mistress of Philolaches, is "little kiss," "Küsschen" (φιλημάτιον). Notice that the names and scenes of Roman comedies are Greek, it being forbidden to depict Roman personages on the stage except in the dignified fabulae praetextae, or historical dramas. Thus Naevius, a contemporary of Plautus, was imprisoned and then exiled for the liberties he took with leading statesmen like the Metelli. This fate is guardedly mentioned with sympathy in the Miles Gloriosus, 211:—

Os columnatum poetae esse inaudivi barbaro
Quoi bini custodes semper totis horis occubant.

Actors (histriones) and theatrical people generally received summary treatment at Rome. The former were Greeks, freedmen, or slaves, and were legally classed as infames, being coupled with gladiators and prostitutes. The praetor might at any time have them whipped without a formal trial, and they often suffered banishment. Nevertheless, as time went on, though their legal status was little improved, they gained in social standing, and some of them, like Aesopus, and Roscius the friend of Cicero, were universally respected and esteemed. "Stars" like these received large sums for their services. Aesopus left a fortune of 20,000,000 sesterces ($800,000); and Roscius was paid at the rate of 1000 denarii ($175) for each performance. (See Cic. Pro Roscio, 8, § 23; Macrobius, Sat. iii. 14.)

moratus. From mos, mores.

licet. "You may."

amabo. A colloquial expression like sis (si vis), sultis (si vultis), etc.

ocellus . . . mel meum. Other familiar terms of endearment are melilla (dimin. of mel), mea vita, anima, meus pullus passer ("my chick-sparrow"), mea columba ("dovey"), passercula (dimin. of passer), anaticula ("duckey") vitellus ("my little calf"), pullulus ("chickabiddy"), mus ("mousey," — also curiously enough, a term of abuse, "you rat!" in Petron. 58), corculum ("sweetheart"), and a variety of similar epithets, — zoölogical, botanical, and physiological.

sed et hoc, sc. bracchium. He has hold of her arm.

cedo. Emphatic imperative of dare: ce + da. The plural form is cette (ce + date).

Hem tene. "Come now! hold on."

anime mi. Said to Philematium, by whose side he is reclining.

Accuba, i.e. on a couch by the table.

Quin. Quī + ne; literally "how not." Ne is here the early negative = the later non.

eumpse. Earlier and more logical accusative of ipse (is + pse). Afterward the suffix pse was regarded as a part of the stem and the case-ending placed after the whole.

simitu. "All at the same time" = simul.

expetessam. Present subjunctive of the intensive verb expetesso.

rei. "Business," "money-getting." Some one has wittily said that the word res is a check signed in blank so that one may write into it any meaning that he wishes.

reus. The defendant in a suit is reus; the plaintiff, accusator.

rem. Here "case"; a legal term.

saviis. Savium is the old word for a kiss (φιλημα), and denotes the kiss of passion; osculum, the kiss of pure affection. After the time of Catullus (see notes to p. 42), basium is the usual word (French, baiser; Old Eng., buss).

si audes. Audeo contains the root of avidus, and hence the phrase si audes (usually syncopated to sodes) is equivalent to si vis, — "won't you."

ille cuculus. "That goose."

fiat. "All right."

sumpti. As many as eighteen nouns of the fourth declension are occasionally found with the genitive form of the second declension. Most of these are verbal nouns, and the second declension genitive probably comes from confusion with the neuter of the perfect participles used substantively.

nuntii, renuntii. "Messengers back and forth."

apage. "Begone." Gk. ἀπαγε.

te nil utor. "I have no use for you."

Larem coronā. Callicles is coming out of his house, and as he does so, turns and calls out to his wife who is within, and invisible to the audience. As he utters the fourth line, he shuts the door. The lar, or image of the household god, in early Roman times stood in the front part of the house, — the atrium, or general reception-room. Afterward, it was removed to the private apartments, and even to the kitchen. He tells his wife to put a garland upon the image, the day being a festival of some sort.

ut valet. "How is her health?" Ut here = quo.

siquid mihi malist. "If I have any piece of bad luck."

victuraquest. "And she's going to live (forever)."

nupta sit . . . ducam. A woman is said nubere; a man, ducere.

Vin conmutemus. "Would you like us to make a swap?" Vin = visne.

fazo. Future perfect for fecero.

ne. Not the negative, but a particle of affirmation like the Greek ναί.

nanctu's. From nanciscor, and = the more used nactus, the participle here retaining the nasal of the present indicative.

nota mala res optumast. "Better to bear the evils that we have, than fly to others that we know not of."

V. CATO THE CENSOR.

27. vilici. The steward or overseer in charge of a villa rustica. Such a villa had two courts, an outer and an inner. At the entrance to the outer court the vilicus had his office, so as to watch the slaves as they went in and out. Near by was the kitchen where the slaves gathered after the day's work was over. Above both courts were the little sleeping-rooms (cellae) of the slaves; and underground, in a kind of cellar, was the ergastulum, or slave-prison, where the refractory ones were punished by being kept in chains (vincti). The inner court was occupied by the stables, cattle-pens, etc. (bubilia, equilia, ovilia). It will be seen, therefore, that the villa rustica was a combination of farm-house, slave-quarters, and stable. See Varro, Res Rustica, i. 11-13; Columella, i. 4, 5 foll.

Feriae. The holidays of various sorts, especially the Feriae Sementivae or Paganalia (at seed-time), the Compitalia (see below), and the vintage festival, the Feriae Vindemiales, in October.

familiā. The slave family; a noun cognate with famulus, "a servant," from the Oscan famel.

gratiam referat. "Show his gratitude," "express his appreciation."

siet. An old optative form, originally esiet. Cf. the Greek εἴην (εἶσθην, etc.).

exerceat. "Keep busy."

Compitalibus. The Compitalia, or Ludi Compitalicii, was an annual festival in honor of the Lares Compitales, or deities presiding over the cross-roads (compita). On the occasion of this feast, all slaves were released from work, and allowed to do as they pleased. After the time of Augustus, the Compitalia were held twice a year (May 1 and Aug. 1), but in Cato's time, in the winter. See Gellius (x. 24).

credat. "Give credit."

28. Duas aut tres familias. Here familiae has its modern sense. He is not to be a general borrower or lender, but may have neighborly relations of the sort with two or three families in the vicinity.

putet. The verb putare means originally "to prune," "clear away," i.e. of vines, — a sense retained in the English "amputate" (ambi + putare); thus, "to clear up," "arrange," "settle," applied to accounts; lastly, and following naturally from the preceding, "to reckon," "calculate," "think." It is a good illustration of the process by which a word referring to a purely physical action gradually takes on a metaphysical meaning.

politorem. "A farm laborer." This and the two preceding words refer to hired workmen as opposed to slaves.

Parasitum. "Hanger-on."

scibit . . . dormibit. In early Latin the ending -bo as a future suffix is found in all four conjugations. This future formation occurs only in Latin and Keltic, and is one of the facts adduced by Schleicher to prove that at one time there was a Latino-Keltic period; i.e. that the Latin and Keltic branches of the Indo-European family were still united after the Hellenic and other kindred peoples had separated from them. See Schleicher in the Rheinisches Museum for 1859. All this, however, belongs to the ancient history of linguistics.

cubitum. Supine.

modios. The modius was closely equivalent to the English peck, contained sixteen sextarii or pints.

conpeditis. "To the chain-gang."

P. IIII. Pondo quattuor, — pondo being an indeclinable noun regularly used with numerals. It was originally the ablative of a second-declension noun, pondus, and meant "by weight," "by the pound."

ficos esse coeperint. Esse is here edere.

congius. The congius was about six pints English.

II S. i.e. duos et semissem, "two and a half." In Vitruvius and other writers, semis is usually indeclinable.

Saturnalibus. A famous Roman festival in honor of Saturn, held in the latter part of December. In city and country alike, it was a season of absolute relaxation and mirth, resembling in many respects the carnival of modern Italy, while some of its usages survive in our Christmas customs. It was, for slaves especially, a season of merriment, for they were excused from all ordinary labor, allowed to wear the liberty cap, to speak with entire freedom, and according to some Roman writers were treated to a banquet at which they wore their masters' clothes, and were even waited on by them.

summa vini. "The whole amount of wine."

pro portione. "Proportionally," i.e. to the severity of the labor assigned them.

Oleae caducae. Olives that fell to the ground; opposed to oleae tempesitivae, those that duly ripen and are picked.

29. hallecem et acetum. The brine and vinegar in which the olives have been kept.

S. I. i.e. sextarium unum, "one pint."

P. III S. Of three and a half pounds of wool.

centones. Garments composed of patchwork. Hence arose the literary term cento, applied to a poem made up of lines and half lines of other poems pieced together, — a species of literary work in which many dilettante engaged during the decline of classical literature. Homer and Vergil furnished the greatest amount of material for these mosaics (Homero-centones, Vergilio-centones). Thus, there is a poem of 2343 verses on the life of Christ, wholly composed of bits from Homer dovetailed together, and traditionally ascribed to the Empress Eudocia. Another, on the passion of Christ, is from Euripides, and consists of 2610 verses. From Vergil was drawn the sacred history by Proba Faltonia (in the fourth century A.D.), and a tragedy called Medea, the work of Hosidius Geta, of the second or third centuries A.D. Other specimens will be found in the fourth volume of the Poetae Lat. Minores. See Borgen, De Centonibus Homericis et Vergilianis (Copenhagen, 1828); Hasenbalg, De Centonibus Vergilianis (Putbus, 1846); Delapierre, Ouvrages Écrits en Centons (London, 1868); id. Tableau de la Littérature du Centon (London, 1875).

The passage from Cato shows on the whole a spirit of justice and, in a way, of kindness, toward the slave. He must do his full share of work, but he is to be properly cared for, with no indulgence, to be sure, but with no unnecessary severity. Yet the spirit after all is that of Varro's striking phrase in which he calls the slave instrumentum vocale, — a mere utensil which happens to be able to speak. There is not a word that ranks him higher than the cattle, — "something better than his dog, a little dearer than his horse." On slavery among the ancients, see Gurowski, Slavery in History (New York, 1860); and Wallon, Histoire de l'Esclavage dans l'Antiquité (Paris, 1879).

VI. TITUS LUCRETIUS CARUS.

30. Nil igitur mors est. Lucretius thinks that as death is utter annihilation of our own personality, it can bring us no evil of any kind, being merely the negation of everything. Epicurus, the philosophic master of Lucretius, condensed this argument into an epigram. "The thought of death need not trouble us; for where we are, death is not; and where death is, we are not." See Ritter,

Hist. of Ancient Philosophy, iv. 87; and Zeller, Stoics, Epicureans, and Sceptics, ch. 17.

aegri. Genitive after nīl.

fuere. The subject is homines, to be supplied.

utorum. i.e. the Carthaginians or the Romans. "Men were uncertain to the dominion of which one of the two all human possessions were to fall."

cadendum . . . esset. Impersonal, the agent being expressed by the dative omnibus humanis.

ubi non erimus. "When we shall cease to exist." Nothing concerned us before we came into being, and so nothing will concern us after we cease to be.

omnino. "At all."

31. nostro de corpore. To be taken with distractast.

Pertineat. The nec in line 18 modifies this verb.

retinentia. i.e. the matter of which we are now composed may again unite and form another similar human being, but as the identity has been lost, and the chain of conscious continuity has been broken, the new being will have no kinship to its predecessor.

de nobis. "So far as we are concerned." de illis. "So far as they are concerned."

cum respicias. "Whenever you consider."

semīna. The seeds of things; "atoms." Other expressions of Lucretius for the atoms are elementa (prima), primordia, corpora prima, genitalia corpora, exordia rerum, etc.

ut nunc sum. ut = in quo. "That these same atoms of which we are now composed were formerly arranged in the same position as they are now."

inter enim iectast. Tmesis for interiecta. Tmesis is more and more frequent the nearer one gets to the primitive stages of both Greek and Latin, because one is thus getting nearer to the period of those languages when the prepositions were adverbs. Ennius even separates compound nouns into their original elements: e.g. saxo cere comminuit brum (cerebrum comminuit); and Massili portabant iuvenes ad litora tanas (Massilitanas).

vitai pausa. "A cessation of life."

ab sensibus. "Dissociated from sensations," i.e. as non-sentient matter.

Debet enim . . . esse. "For he must exist."

misere si forte aegreque futurumst. "If perchance one is to be unhappy and wretched."

id quoniam mors eximit. "Since death takes this away from us;" i.e. the time when one can be wretched.

probet. Syncopated for prohibet.

neque hilum differre. "And that it makes not the slightest difference."

ullo tempore. i.e. whether he has been born at one time rather than another, since it comes to the same thing in the end.

mors immortalis. A very striking expression, — the one thing that is deathless is death itself.

tellus quod dura creâsset. Lucretius regarded life as inherent in certain combinations of atoms, and thought that when the earth was young it teemed with vital energies which produced spontaneously all possible forms of life, — that out of the warm soil came not only herbage, trees, and all kinds of vegetation, but also living creatures. Birds broke forth from the eggs that had been found within the earth. Little children crept out of the hollows near the surface. All sorts of monstrosities were also produced. There were those which had no feet, others with no heads; eyeless and mouthless creatures came into being. But only those able to maintain themselves lived; for the law of nature is the survival of the fittest. This crude form of the doctrine of evolution was first taught by Empedocles, of Agrigentum, who flourished in the fifth century B.C., and whom Lucretius greatly admired (i. 716-733). See Winnefeld, Die Philosophie des Empedocles (Rastatt, 1862), and the account in Mayor's Sketch of Ancient Philosophy (Cambridge, 1881).

The picture of the gradual dawnings of civilization as given by Lucretius is very interesting, and shows great ingenuity and penetration. Man goes to school to Nature. He discovers fire by seeing lightning kindle a conflagration, or by observing flame produced when the branches of trees rub together in the forest. The use of metals was learned when burning forests melted them, and they ran into cavities on the earth's surface. Planting and grafting were also acquired by observation. Men began to sing when they tried to imitate the sounds of the birds. The wind blowing through the hollow reeds first suggested the flute and the pipe. The medical art was learned from sick animals that sought out by instinct the herbs that were able to effect a cure. Language developed gradually by the exercise of a power inherent in men and animals alike.

novitas florida. "The blooming youth."

scibant = sciebant.

arbita. Same as arbuta.

Umida saxa. This repetition is called by the rhetoricians Epizeuxis.

33. sibi valere. To be his own master, — "lord of himself, that heritage of woe."

silvestria. "In the woods."

subus. Scanned in the archaic fashion subu'. See notes to p. 21.

palantes. "Roaming about."

erat curae. Sc. illis.

Spumigeri suis. Sus is here masculine, as often.

intempestâ nocte. "At the dead of night."

Nec poterat quemquam, etc. This and following are two very striking lines.

Improba navigii ratio. The Latin races have never been fond of seafaring, and Latin literature abounds in passages that display a dread of the seas, and a belief that the gods intended them to be absolute barriers between the lands they separate. A familiar expression of this thought is found in the famous ode of Horace to Vergil (i. 3, 21-26).

amicitiem. Rare form of the fifth declension.

At varios lingue sonitus, etc. The Lucretian theory of language is that man has the faculty of evolving language just as he possesses other faculties that are gradually developed by necessity and practice. This is just as true of animals as of men, only the former, having no complex or abstract ideas to express, need only the limited vocabulary of cries and howls. In the beginning, man's vocabulary was equally limited, for his range of thought was little greater than that of the beasts; but as his mind developed beyond theirs, so his power of speech correspondingly grew. There was in the primitive speech a peculiar appropriateness in the name to the thing. Epicurus says: "The natures of men in the case of each people, experiencing peculiar feelings and having peculiar ideas, expelled the air accordingly, thus expressing different feelings and ideas differently."

This is in reality the theory of phonetic types (the "ding-dong theory"), advocated in recent years by Heyse and Max Müller. A simple statement of it is as follows: Just as a piece of metal rings differently when struck by different substances, so man rings differently, so to speak, when struck by different emotions, desires, and ideas. It is curious that the advocates of this theory do not see that it is only the onomatopoeic theory over again, stated in the form of a simile; for the onomatopoeic theory covers not only such words as are imitative of sound, but those that are inherently appropriate to whatever they describe. Thus Vergil's line descriptive of the flight of a dove, — is just as truly onomatopoeic with its recurrent liquids and vowels as his wonderful mimetic description of a cantering horse: —

utilitas. A favorite term in the Epicurean philosophy, denoting the general adaptation of means to end, — “expediency,” “convenience.”

ad gestum. Language is therefore a sort of verbal gesture. See Aulus Gellius, x. 4.

infantia. From in, negative, and fari, “to speak.”

pantherarum. See notes to p. 16.

putare aliquem tum nomina distribuisse. Cf. Genesis, ii. 20.

inde. Pronominal adverb. “From him.”

36. rebus . . . apertis. By things that are open to every one’s observation.
canum Molossûm. The Molossian hounds of Epirus are everywhere spoken of as the finest and sturdiest for hunting large game.

Et catulos blande, etc. “And when they begin to lick their whelps tenderly with their tongues, or when they fondle them with their paws, and charging on them with open mouth, threaten to swallow them, while their teeth menace them in pretense.”

baubantur. An onomatopoetic word found only here.

37. Corvorum. Professor Kelsey refers, for an account of the ancient mystery connected with the raven, to an article in the Popular Science Monthly, vol. xviii., pp. 45-56, entitled “A Flock of Mythological Crows.”

fulgère. Here of the third conjugation.

rami stirpesque teruntur. The ancients produced fire by rubbing together sticks prepared for the purpose and known as igniaria (Gk. πυρῆια). These were (1) a block of soft wood with a hollow in it; and (2) a bit of hard wood which was whirled around in the hollow of the block until the friction produced sparks which were, in early times, caught on a tinder made of dried grass, but later on a kind of sulphur matches (ramenta sulphurata), such as were used down to the early part of the present century, before lucifer matches were invented. The igniaria were so inconvenient to use that they were generally employed only for kindling fire for sacred purposes, e.g. for relighting the fire in the Temple of Vesta when by any chance it became extinguished. For ordinary needs, the more convenient flint and steel were employed, and mention is also made of burning-glasses (Plutarch, Numa, 9). For an account of primitive methods of producing fire, reference may be made to Tylor’s Early History of Mankind, p. 237 (London, 1865), and a paper by Dr. M. H. Morgan in the Harvard Studies in Classical Philology, vol. i. (Boston, 1890).

Haec ratio quondam morborum, etc. This great plague which devastated Athens is described by Thucydides in his second book, and by Hippocrates (De Morbis Popularibus, bk. iii.). It is also mentioned by Diodorus Siculus (xii. 7), who ascribes the appearance of the disease to an excess of rain in the hot months, to a lack of proper food, — the preceding harvests having failed, — and to unnatural absence in this year of the customary cool north winds (Etesiae). See also Häser, Geschichte der epidemischen Krankheiten (Jena, 1867).

Cecropis. Cecrops and Pandion (line 6) were early kings of Attica.

38. vis in cor. i.e. into the stomach, which the early physicians called by the name for heart (καρδία). Compare our term "heart-burn" for a form of dyspepsia.

singultus. "Retchings," "belchings" (Gk. λύγξ κενή).

nervos. "The muscles."

coactans. "Contracting."

sacer ignis. Erysipelas, known in modern times as "St. Anthony's fire," because in the pestilential epidemic of 1089 in France, it was reputed that many were cured by the intercession of St. Anthony. It is fairly probable that the epidemic of 1089 and that in Athens were identical in character, neither being erysipelas, but rather a form of raphania, — a disease caused by eating the ergot of rye produced in damaged grain, such as the Athenians must have had owing to the poor harvests of the preceding year and the wet, unhealthful summer in which the plague broke out. The symptoms as described by Lucretius and others are strongly suggestive of ergotism.

40. fida canum vis. "The faithful dogs." This statement corresponds with that of Thucydides (ii. 50).

animam ponebat. Here ponebat = deponebat. So animam agere and (line 94) animam amittebat.

VII. GAIUS VALERIUS CATULLUS.

Passer. Sparrows were favorite pets of the Romans. Other birds so kept were doves, ducks, jackdaws, parrots, and quails, the last being used for fighting, like game-cocks.

42. deliciae. "The darling." Plural of excellence.

Quicum. Qui is here an ablative of the form of the third declension. Other third declension forms of the relative are cuius (cuiis), cui, quem, quibus.

meae puellae. Lesbia, on whose identity with Clodia, mentioned in the biographical note, see a paper by Professor Alfred Gudeman in the American Journal of Philology, x. 3.

tristes. "Gloomy."

Vivamus, mea Lesbia, atque amemus. "The key-note of the whole poem is struck in the first word" (Merrill). Live and enjoy life, is the dominant thought; yet there is an undercurrent of pathos in the exquisite lines that finds expression in the Nox est perpetua una dormienda. The more intense the joie de vivre, the more agonizing the thought that we must leave it all; and the recollection of this is always the skeleton in the Epicurean closet.

severiorum. Intensive comparative; men who are too old to sympathize with the love of pleasure.

unius assis. Genitive of value. The as was worth about a cent.

Disertissime Romuli nepotum. This poem was written to thank Cicero for some favor done to Catullus. Some editors have regarded the complimentary expressions contained in it as ironical, but for no reason that is obvious to the exoteric mind. On the other hand, Caesar was greatly disliked by Catullus, who attacked him in two of his poems, without much effect, however, for Caesar made no reply to his abuse, and with a sort of contemptuous cynicism, sent him an invitation to dinner.

Collis O Heliconii. This poem was written in honor of the wedding of one Manlius Torquatus, identified by some editors with the L. Manlius Torquatus who was one of the Pompeian party and fell in battle in B.C. 47. His bride was Vinia Arunculeia. It is a sort of epithalamium, but not written to be sung as epithalamia usually were, by a choral band outside the chamber of the newly married couple.

The wedding day of a Roman pair was chosen with great care, so that it might not fall on any unlucky day or upon a day for any reason inappropriate. The whole month of May, for instance, was considered unlucky for weddings, and there was a Roman proverb, Mense Maio malae nubent. The early days of March and also of June were likewise regarded as unsuitable for marriage, and so the Kalends, Ides, and Nones of every month. The conventional wedding-dress was a pure white robe (tunica) fastened by a woolen girdle. The bride's hair was done up in six braids, and adorned with a garland of flowers gathered by herself. The bridal veil was of vivid flame-color (flammeum). The ceremony was simple. Some married lady, a friend of the pair, led them to one another; they joined hands, a prayer was offered to the deities who presided over marriage, and a sacrifice offered. Then followed the wedding banquet, which began in the afternoon. When night came on, the bride was seized, and with a pretence of violence was taken from her mother and carried to her husband's house, escorted by a procession headed by musicians playing the flute, and by an attendant with a lighted torch. Songs were sung on the way. By the side of the young wife walked two boys whose father and mother were still living (patrimi et matrimi), and behind her were borne a spindle and thread to symbolize her matronly duties. The bridegroom scattered walnuts (spargere nuces) among the street boys as a sign that he had now put away all childish things. At the house, the bride anointed the door-posts with oil and fat, and having decorated them with ribbons, was carefully lifted over the threshold lest she should stumble (a bad omen) in entering. In the atrium of the house, where stood the marriage-bed (lectus genialis), her husband welcomed her to their home, and with him she offered a prayer to the gods. Three coins were brought by her, one of which she gave to her husband (symbolizing her dowry), one she gave to the household Lares, and one she dropped into the street for the Lares Compitales. (See notes to p. 27.) On the day after the wedding, the husband gave a dinner (repotia), at which the bride received her husband's relatives, who then brought their wedding presents. On wedding rings, see text on page 176. A fuller account of the Roman ceremonies will be found in Becker's Gallus. For the symbolism involved in the various rites, see Maine, Early Law and Custom (London, 1883); McLennan, Studies in Ancient History (London, 1876); and Westermarck, History of Human Marriage (London, 1891).

Cultor, Uraniae genus. Hymen, god of marriage, is variably called the son of the muse Urania, of Terpsichore, and of Bacchus and Venus. The song opens with an apostrophe to him. Cultor = incola.

Hymenæe Hymen. Gk. Ἕμῆν Ἕμῆναϊε. The god of marriage.

44. Luteum. The red yellow of flame.

Pelle humum pedibus. i.e. in dancing.

Idalium. A mountain in Cyprus sacred to Venus.

Phrygium iudicem. Paris, who acted as judge in the first beauty-show on record, awarding the prize to Venus.

alite. Literally "bird," so many omens being drawn from the flight of birds. See notes to p. 114.

45. in modum. "In unison," "rhythmically."

zonulā soluunt sinus. The bride wore a girdle (zona, dimin. zonula) which the husband removed. Hence zonam solvere = nubere. Notice the diaeresis in soluunt.

captat aure maritus. The husband stands at the door of his house, waiting eagerly to catch the distant music that will announce the approach of the procession escorting his bride.

puellulam. A double diminutive, the primary form being the obsolete puera (fem. of puer), then puella, puellula. Catullus is fond of diminutives, and his use of them gives his lines a tinge of colloquialism, since their formation characterized the popular Latin as they do the popular Spanish of to-day.

Splendidas quatiunt comas. "The torches toss their tresses of flame."

Flere desine. Said to the bride who weeps as all women feel inclined to do at a wedding, whether their own or another's.

46. Tollite o pueri, faces. The procession is now about to depart.

conlocare. i. e. in the lectus genialis.

caelites. "The celestials."

Bona Venus. "Kindly Venus."

47. Vesper adest. A second epithalamium possibly on the same marriage as the preceding, though there is nothing in the verses themselves to show this.

innuptae. = virgines.

contra. On their side of the pingues mensae, opposite the youths.

Oetaeos. Mt. Oeta between Thessaly and Aetolia.

Noctifer. The evening star.

perniciter. From pernix, pernitor, and not connected with perniciēs, which is from perněco.

palma. The palm of victory.

alio . . . alio. "To one theme . . . to another."

48. avellere natam. Referring to the symbolical show of violence in taking the bride from her mother. See introductory note, pp. 205, 206.

49. Ut flos in saeptis. A very famous passage often quoted and often imitated. Readers of the Heart of Midlothian will recollect its citation by Reuben Butler to the Duke of Argyll. Professor Merrill cites from Robinson Ellis the imitation by Ben Jonson in The Barriers, and by Robert Browning in The Ring and the Book, iii. 233 foll.

Ut vidua. The old simile of the vine and the elm, the ivy and the oak, that has since done yeoman's service in the mouths of sentimentalists.

nudo. "Treeless."

contingit summum radice flagellum. Inversion for contingit radicem flagello.

50. iuveni. i. e. between the rows of vines.

par conubium. A marriage with her social equal. The adjective par refers to rank, aequalis to age.

Chommoda. The smart set at Rome at various times pursued fads of different kinds with an exaggerated enthusiasm not unknown in modern days. At one time everything Greek was in fashion; at another time everything Etruscan, just as in our own country the fashionable world was affected with Gallomania during the palmy days of the Second Empire, and with Anglomania after 1871. This poem of Catullus satirizes the affectation of a young Hellenomaniac. The Latin language had none of the aspirated consonants so common in the Greek, — ch, ph, th, — and the rough breathing h played no great part in its word-formation. In fact, the general tendency was to drop it as an initial letter (cf. the ordinary forms arena, anser with the older harena, hanser), and as a matter of fact, h did finally become a silent letter as in modern Spanish, and is practically lost in Italian. The prevailing fondness for everything Greek, however, led to the Graecizing of many words. Thus, Quintilius mentions such forms as chorona, praecho, chenturio (i. 5, 19 foll.). Several words definitely retained the aspirated consonant and fixed it in the language, as pulcher, Cethegus, triumphus, and Carthago, for the older pulcer, Cetegus, triumpus, Cartago (Cic. Or. 160), just as we now in English universally but incorrectly write rhyme instead of rime, having been misled by the analogy of rhythm into thinking it a word of Greek origin. Later, when h became a silent letter, the wildest confusion prevailed in the orthography of the Romans. Arrius, in the present epigram, was simply a fashionable young person who aspirated at random in his attempt to ape the Greeks. Sir Theodore Martin's translation of the epigram is so clever as to deserve quotation : —

“ Whenever Arrius wished to name ‘Commodious,’ out ‘chommodious’ came:
 And when of his intrigues he blabbed,
 With his ‘hintrigues’ our ears he stabbed;
 And thought, moreover, he displayed
 A rare refinement when he made His h’s thus at random fall
 With emphasis most guttural.
 When suddenly came news one day
 Which smote the city with dismay,
 That the Ionian seas a change
 Had undergone, most sad and strange;
 For, since by Arrius crossed, the wild ‘Hionian Hocean’ they were styled!”

quantum poterat. “As loud as he could.” He was naturally anxious that every one should realize how thoroughly “good form” he was.

leniter et leviter. Other swells mispronounced as he did, but in quiet tones, and did not stun the ears.

VIII. CAESAR.

53. Druidum. The etymology of this word is uncertain. It has been connected with the Greek δρῦς, “oak,” with the Saxon dry, “magician,” with the Irish druí, “a sacred person,” and with other words; but no derivation has met with general acceptance. The origin of the Druids is likewise a matter of conjecture. Their doctrines, which closely resemble those of Pythagoras, indicate an Eastern origin, but nothing is known with regard to their first appearance on the stage of European history, the first and most detailed account that we possess being this short digression of Caesar. His account, with some further details furnished by the elder Pliny, form practically the sum of our knowledge of the institution and its workings. The order gradually decayed in Gaul, but maintained for some time its influence in Britain, where the chief monuments still exist in the remains of altars, etc., which show considerable skill in mechanics. Among the best discussions of Druidism are those of Jean Reynaud, L'Esprit de la Gaule (Paris, 1866); Barth, Ueber die Druiden der Kelten (Erlangen, 1828); and Rhys, Celtic Heathendom (London, 1888).

54. in finibus Carnutum. Probably near the present town of Dreux. Anglesea was the headquarters in Britain.

loco consecrato. The oak was their sacred tree, and oak groves, sometimes surrounded by stone walls, formed the temples.

in Britannia reperta. But the Welsh tradition says that they entered Gaul from the remote East.

Graecis litteris. Characters, not the language.

transire ad alios. It is not known whence the Druids derived this theory. Cf. Lucan, i. 450.

mundi. Like κόσμος = order.

55. homines immolant. As no instances of this practice are recorded at this period, it has been judged that it had passed out of existence as an institution in Caesar's time. Livy (xxii. 57) records a similar practice on the part of the Romans.

simulacra. These images seem to have been permanent ones, but no details can be gleaned from this vague description.

Mercurium, etc. The identification of these gods is in some cases uncertain. The Gallic divinities are called by the names of the Roman gods whose attributes they appear to possess. Jupiter is probably Taranis; Mercury, Teutates; Mars, Hesus; Apollo, Belenis.

exstructos tumulos. Probably the cairns, topped with a flat stone, on which the Druidical fires were lighted.

numero . . . noctium finiunt. The Germans had the same custom, Tac. Germ. 11. So the Jewish and the Puritan Sabbaths began at nightfall. Cf. our fortnight, sennight, twelfth-night.

56. vitae necisque potestatem. The paterfamilias originally had absolute power, including that of life and death, over the familia. It was customary to inflict capital punishment only after condemnation by a family tribunal, and he was not criminally responsible for the abuse of this power. In later times this legal absolutism was limited to the right of administering moderate chastisement. The patria potestas included the right of repudiating a new-born child, and of selling children into slavery. Until the time of Augustus, the filius familias was incapable of holding property in his own name.

57. Hercyniae silvae. Embracing the Black Forest, Odenwald, Thüringerwald, Erz- and Riesengebirge, and part of the Carpathians.

Helvetiorum. Between the Jura Mountains, the Rhine, and Lake of Constance, the Rhone, and Lake Geneva.

Nemetum. West of the Rhine. Their capital was Noviomagus, now Speier.

Rauricorum. Near Basle. www.libtool.com.cn

Dacorum et Anartium. In the southeast provinces of modern Austria, beyond the Theiss.

bos. The reindeer or bison. The statements of these chapters are evidently derived from mere hearsay and misconception.

IX. PUBLILIUS SYRUS.

59. Absentem laedit. A thought similar to that involved in the appeal from Philip drunk to Philip sober.

Amans quod suspicatur, etc. A foreshadowing of the Shakspearian description of the "green-eyed monster which doth mock the meat it feeds on."

Bis gratum est, etc. A variation of the familiar bis dat qui cito dat, which is found in Publilius Syrus in another place in the form bis dat qui dat celeriter.

Bona nemini hora, etc. This line is the converse of the English proverb "It's an ill wind that blows nobody good."

Bonus animus laesus, etc. "Beware the fury of a patient man" (Dryden). This is again given by Publilius in another form: Furor fit laesā saepius patientiā.

Discipulus est, etc. Cf. Henry Ward Beecher's remark that "one's foresight is never as good as one's hindsight."

Ducis in consilio, etc. Cf. "Better an army of stags with a lion for a leader than an army of lions led by a stag."

60. Fortunam citius reperias, etc. "Easy come, easy go."

Malum est consilium, etc. "Consistency is the vice of fools."

Non pote non sapere, etc. A maxim agreeable to the teachings of Socrates and Herbert Spencer.

Stultum facit Fortuna, etc. Another form of the more familiar proverb, Quem perdere vult Deus prius dementat.

Voluptas e difficili data, etc. "Sweet is pleasure after pain." (Dryden.)

Ubi peccat aetas maior, etc. "As the old cock crows, the young one learns."

X. MARCUS TULLIUS CICERO.

62. This extract serves to show the wide range of matter admitted in argument before a Roman court, as well as to exhibit the perfection of Cicero's style when applied to a congenial subject. The speech was delivered in court in the year 62 B.C., in defense of Cicero's friend, the poet Archias, a native of Antioch, who had acquired Roman citizenship under the Lex Plautia Papiria in 89 B.C., but whose claim to its possession had been attacked by a certain Gratius. The legal argument is but a small part of the oration, the remainder being devoted to an exposition of the charms and value of literature.

63. tempestivis conviviis. Beginning early and lasting till late. The usual hour for the cena was three o'clock.

64. quaedam. "What I may call;" quidam is often so used by Cicero.

hunc . . . Africanum. The younger, as being nearer in time.

C. Laelium. The friend of P. Cornelius Scipio, and the chief speaker in the dialogue Laelius (De Amicitia), which takes its name from him.

M. Catonem. Nepos calls him cupidissimus litterarum. He began the study of Greek at an advanced age. Cicero's treatise De Senectute is called for him Cato Maior. The treatise was written about 45 B.C., when Cicero was 62 years old. Scipio, Aemilianus, and Laelius are supposed to visit Cato the Censor, and, wondering at his cheerfulness and activity at 84, request him to show them how to bear the weight of years so easily. Cato complies, refutes the charges usually brought against old age, and fortifies his position by instances of illustrious men of all periods. The purity of style and dignity of treatment have always made it a favorite work, though it is full of false logic and special pleading.

Non cani. Saepe grandis natu senex nullum aliud habet argumentum quo se probet diu vixisse praeter senectutem (Seneca, Tranq. iii. 7).

65. certo in loco. Special seats of honor were reserved for ambassadors and distinguished guests.

nostro collegio. i.e. the college of augurs, of which Cicero was a member. The augurs formed the authorized medium for learning the will of the gods, which in Rome was sought in the flight of birds and in omens, not, as in Greece, through oracles. Augurship was commonly supposed to owe its origin to Romulus, who appointed a college of three augurs, answering to the number of the early tribes (Cic. De Repub. ii. 9, 16). Livy, on the other hand, refers the institution of augurs to Numa, to whom the origin of most religious customs was attributed, as the Jewish rites were all attributed to Moses. The college consisted of six members after the time of Numa, all patricians. The number was increased to nine by the addition of five plebeians (300 B.C.) to fifteen by Sulla, and to sixteen by Julius Caesar. The augurs were elected for life. The only distinction in the college was that of age, and the only pay of the members consisted in the privileges accorded to other priests, — special places at the games and festivals, and exemption from military service and certain civil duties.

66. In the year 62 B.C., during the celebration of the mysteries of the Bona Dea at the house of Julius Caesar, P. Clodius, a dissolute young patrician, gained admission disguised in female costume. He was discovered, but escaped, and at his trial for sacrilege, set up a plea of alibi, which was disproved by the evidence of Cicero, who thus incurred the enmity of Clodius. The latter became tribune in 58, and introduced an enactment forbidding fire and water (the usual formula of banishment) to any one who had put Roman citizens to death without a trial. Although this law was aimed at Cicero, he was not mentioned by name, but, thoroughly frightened, he went into voluntary exile at the advice of his friends. On the day of his departure, Clodius carried a law banishing him by name, and prohibiting him from living within 400 miles from Rome. Cicero journeyed to Thessalonica, where he lived in security at the house of his friend Cn. Plancius. This letter, written on his journey, shows the weaker side of his character. For a time he lost all courage, and indulged in unmanly lamentations and regrets, suspecting his friends, and trying by various artifices to regain the favor of those whom he had offended. In the following year a decree was passed sanctioning his recall, and he returned to Rome in September of 58 B.C.

S. P. D. The form of the Roman letter differs in several respects from that used in modern correspondence, particularly in the combination of salutation and signature, and in the absence of complimentary phrases, such as “yours truly,” and the like. The normal order of the address is the nominative case of the name of the writer, the dative of the person addressed, and the letters S. D. (salutem dicit). This formula was capable of variation corresponding to the degree of intimacy of writer and recipient, by the addition of suus, dulcissimus, or some endearing epithet, by the use of a diminutive, or by the more cordial plurimam added to salutem. All these variations are exhibited in the address of the present letter. The body of the letter does not differ greatly from modern forms, except in the “epistolary use” of the historical tenses based on the time of reading, where we use the present based on the time of writing. The close is apparently abrupt, — vale, or cura ut valeas, followed by the date (sometimes preceded by data, agreeing with epistula understood), and the place, usually in the locative or ablative.

The ordinary materials for brief correspondence were tablets of wood or ivory, fastened together in sets of two or more, and coated with wax, upon which the writing was scratched with the stilus. For longer communications, papyrus was used, upon which the writing was done with ink (atramentum) made of soot and gum, the pen being a split reed (calamus). This rude writing equipment made it impossible to conduct a large correspondence except by means of slaves, to whom the letters were dictated (librarii, servi a manu, amanuenses). Letters were first securely tied with thread (linum), wax was dropped upon the knot and impressed with the seal of the sender, which to some degree took the place of the autograph signature.

As there was no public postal service, the delivery of letters was accomplished by special messengers or by the hand of travellers, until imperial time, when a sort of system was established (cursus publicus) for the use of officials and those who could secure special permission to employ its facilities. See Rothschild, Histoire de la Poste aux Lettres (Paris, 1875).

minus vitæ cupidi. A weak regret that he had not committed suicide.

XI. PUBLIUS VERGILIUS MARO.

70. Copa. This lively genre piece belongs, if genuine, to Vergil's earlier efforts. It is an invitation to a friend to escape the heat of the day in a shady resort, enjoying fruit and wine in good company. The youth of the poet is seen in the spirit of the poem, which shows much greater vivacity than his later compositions. There is a separate edition of the poem with notes by Leo (Berlin, 1891).

taberna. Literally, a hut formed of planks, then a shop, and especially a wine-shop by the roadside, which the Roman landlords were in the habit of erecting to dispose of the produce of their estates.

Maenalió. The Arcadian mountain Maenalus, the favorite haunt of Pan, was so celebrated that the Roman poets frequently use the adjective for "Arcadian" or "pastoral."

cado picato. The newly made wine was first poured into a large gourd-shaped butt (dolium) smeared with pitch, and usually let into the ground. Here it was allowed to ferment for a year, when, for purposes of sale or use, it was poured (diffundere) into amphoræ or cati, which were also pitched, and, if the wine was to be preserved for a longer period, were corked with clay and the mouth pitched.

serta. Garlands made by stitching blossoms upon thin strips of linden bark.

71. Acheloís. A water-nymph, the daughter of Achelotís, the river-god.

caseoli. The Roman cheeses were usually eaten in a fresh state like cream cheese or pot-cheeses, but were also pressed and hardened into ornamental shapes in boxwood moulds.

tuguri custos. i.e. Priapus. See note to p. 90.

cicadae. Identical with the American "locust," so-called. At Athens a golden cicada (τέτραξ) was worn in the hair as an ornament, it being regarded as a creature sprung from the earth like the early inhabitants of Attica, according to the legend. The cicada was also kept in cages like canaries at the present day.

vitro. It has been asserted that glass was more generally used and for a greater variety of purposes among the ancient peoples than in our own time. It is at least certain that its use among the Romans was very general. Glass of Phœnician importation occurs at Tarquinii in cemeteries of the eighth century B.C. The word vitrum is first used by Lucretius (iv, 604, vi, 991), but the substance is constantly referred to as a well-known object by poets of the Augustan age (cf. Verg. Aen. vii. 759; Hor. Carm. iii. 13, 1). Italy was for a long time supplied from the manufactories of Phœnicia and Egypt; but in Pliny's day glass factories had been established in Italy, Spain, and Gaul. The workmanship of the specimens seen in the large museums ranks in skill and delicacy with that of the best modern artists. Glass was familiar in nearly all its modern applications, including its use for window panes, as has been shown by discoveries at Pompeii and Herculaneum. The aedile Scaurus, B.C. 58, constructed the scena of his theater in three tiers, the lower of marble, the upper of gilded wood, and the middle largely of glass. (Pliny, Hist. Nat. xxxvi. 189.) See Fröhner, La Verrierie Antique (Paris, 1879).

talos. The talus, originally knuckle-bone or ankle-bone, was also the name given to dice, which were at first only the natural bone. The tali had four long sides and two small ends. Two of the long sides were broad and two narrow. One of the broad sides was convex, the other concave, while of the narrow sides one was flat, the other indented. In playing, four tali were used, emptied from a dice-box (fritillus). The lowest throw (canis, canicula) was four aces; the highest was that called Venus, in which the numbers cast were all different, their sum amounting to fourteen. This throw was also called Basilicus, because by obtaining it the king of the feast was appointed (Hor. Carm. i. 4, 18; ii, 7, 25). See Becq de Fouquières, Les Jeux des Anciens, pp. 325-356.

Laocoön. The Laocoön group of the Rhodian school of Greek sculpture once stood, according to Pliny, in the palace of Titus. It was found in 1506 in the baths of Titus. The restoration of the right arm, which was lacking when the group was discovered, has been severely criticised. For a noble description of the group, see Byron, Childe Harold, iv. 160. Vergil, in writing this passage, probably had in mind the statue. For a criticism of the Laocoön group, see Perry's Greek and Roman Sculpture, pp. 520 foll. (London, 1882).

Tenedo. A small island in the Aegean off the coast of Troas. To this island the Greek fleet withdraw in order to induce the Trojans to think that they had departed (Aen. ii. 21).

72. Ardentesque oculos. Accusative of specification.

73. Harpyiae. The Harpies (ἀρπάζω, "to snatch") had been sent by the gods to torment Phineus in Thrace. He was delivered from them by the Argonauts, who drove them to the Strophades. To the two mentioned by Hesiod (Ællo and Ocypete), Vergil adds a third, Celaeno. Dante (Inferno, xiii. 10) gives the following description : —

“ There do the hideous Harpies make their nests,
 Who chased the Trojans from the Strophades,
 With sad announcement of impending doom ;
 Broad wings have they, and necks and faces human,
 And feet with claws, and their great bellies fledged.”

74. Misenus. The pilot of the fleet of Aeneas. He was drowned and buried near Cumae on a promontory, which from him was called Misenum.

Dardanios. “Trojan” ; descended from Dardanus, one of the founders of the Trojan line.

Danaïis. “Greek” ; from Danaüs, an ancient king of Argos.

Iliacos. “Trojan” ; of Ilium, the city of Ilus, son of Dardanus.

Penates. The Penates, originally the guardians of the storeroom (penus), together with Vesta and Lar, were the household gods of the Romans. Their altar was the hearth of the house, on which were sculptured the figures of the two Penates with that of the Lar.

75. Ithaca. Now Thiaki, a small rocky island in the Ionian Sea, famed as the birthplace of Ulysses.

Ulixi. The name of the great Greek hero of the Trojan War, Odysseus, appears in Latin in the forms Ulysses, Ulyxes, and Ulixes.

Cyclopis. “Round-eyed.” In works of art, the Cyclopes are represented as giants with one eye in the forehead. They were the sons of Uranus and Gaea, and were cast into Tartarus by their father. After assisting Cronus to the sovereignty of the gods, they were put again into prison by him, and at last freed by Zeus, for whom they forged the lightning. The Cyclopes were later imagined as assistants of Vulcan, and placed in Sicily under Aetna. Polyphemus was said to be the son of Poseidon and Thoösa. Later legends make him the unsuccessful lover of the nymph Galatea, for which story see Gay’s Acis and Galatea ; Proctor’s Death of Acis ; Robert Buchanan’s Polypheme’s Passion ; and Austin Dobson’s Tale of Polypheme.

76. Phoebeae lampadis. “The torch of Phoebus,” i.e. the sun.

Monstrum horrendum. The halting, heavy sound produced by the elisions and spondees of this line represents the laboring movements of the blinded giant. Browning (Waring, iv.) has made strange use of these lines : —

“ As long I dwell on some stupendous And tremendous (Heaven defend us !)
 Monstr’ — inform, — ingens — horrend — ous
 Demoniaco seraphic Penman’s latest piece of graphic.”

lavit inde cruorem. A very bold stroke or thoughtlessness on Vergil's part. Bathing a wound in sea water is hardly a natural proceeding, and neither Polyphemus nor Vergil probably knew anything of antiseptic medicine.

77. Aetnaeos fratres. The Cyclopes, who were supposed to inhabit the caves of the mountain.

obscuri. The entrance to the infernal regions was begun at break of day.

Ditis. Dis (= Dives) pater. The ruler of the lower world, worshipped by the Romans, and corresponding to the Greek Pluto or Hades.

Orci. A peculiar divinity of the dead, created by popular belief. Like Hades, his name was used to denote the lower world. With this description, compare that in Spenser's Faery Queen, vii. 21-25.

78. Eumenidum. The goddesses of vengeance (Gk., Erinyes), variously called the daughters of Gaea, or of Nyx (Night) and Skotos (Darkness), who punish all transgressions. Their name, Eumenides ("the kindly ones") springs from the familiar unwillingness to speak plainly of things of ill omen.

Multaque praeterea. "These several mixed natures, the creatures of imagination, are not only introduced with great art after the dreams, but, as they are planted at the very entrance and within the very gates of these regions, do probably denote the wild deliriums and extravagances of fancy which the soul usually falls into when she is just upon the verge of death" (Addison, Tatler, No. 154).

Centauri. A savage race, dwelling in the district near Pelion and Ossa in Thessaly, who were destroyed in a war with their neighbors, the Lapithae. They are represented as half horse, half man.

Briareus. One of the hecatoncheirae, huge monsters with a hundred arms; son of Uranus and Gaea, "called by men Aegaeon, by the gods Briareus" (Hom. Il. i. 403).

belua Lerna. A monster with nine heads which ravaged the country of Lerna near Argos. The slaying of the monster was the second of the labors of Heracles.

Chimaera. A fire-breathing monster, the fore part of whose body was that of a lion, the middle that of a goat, and the hind part that of a dragon. It ravaged Lycia, and was finally killed by Bellerophon. The Chimaera was probably the fanciful personification of a volcano of the same name in Lycia.

Gorgones. Three frightful beings, daughters of Phorcys and Ceto, with wings, brazen claws, enormous teeth, and serpents instead of hair. The best known of the Gorgons, Medusa, was killed by Perseus with great difficulty, as the sight of her head turned every one who looked upon it into stone. The head was placed by Athena in the centre of her shield.

Coccyto. "River of Wailing." (Gk. κωκύω.) A river in Epirus, a tributary of the Acheron, and, like the latter, supposed to be connected with the lower world, or a river of the lower world. Homer makes it a tributary of the Styx, and Vergil in this passage represents the Acheron as flowing into the Cocytus.

Charon. The son of Erebus and the Styx, a dark and grisly old man, who ferried the souls of the departed across the river of the lower world. His fare, an obolus, was placed in the mouth of the dead person.

79. Tendebant. A wonderfully pathetic line, often quoted in literature.

Navita. i.e. Charon. Navita = nauta.

O virgo. The Sibyl.

olli. Archaic form for illi. Cf. the pronominal adverb olim.

Stygiam paludem. Styx, daughter of Oceanus and Tethys, was the first of the immortals to help Zeus against the Titans, and in return was made the goddess by whom the most solemn oaths were sworn. As a river, Styx is described as a branch of Oceanus flowing in the lower world.

Nec datur, etc. "This was probably an invention of the heathen priesthood to make the people extremely careful of performing proper rites and ceremonies to the memory of the dead" (Addison).

80. Cerberus. To increase the horror, some poets gave him a hundred heads (Hor. Carm. ii. 34), others fifty, but he is usually portrayed with three, the middle head being that of a lion, with a wolf's head on one side and an ordinary dog's head on the other.

"Cerberus, monster cruel and uncouth,
With his three gullets like a dog is barking
Over the people that are there submerged.
Red eyes he has, and unctuous beard and black,
And belly large, and armed with claws his hands;
He rends the spirits, flays and quarters them."

(Dante, Inferno, vi. 13.)

Minos. A mythical king of Crete, son of Zeus and Europa. On account of the murder of his son at Athens, he undertook an expedition against Attica, and compelled the Athenians to send him once every nine years seven boys and seven girls to Crete to be devoured by the Minotaur. He appears in later times as a judge of the dead, with Aeacus and Rhadamanthus.

81. Phlegethon. "River of Burning." (Gk. φλέγω.) A river of the lower world, a tributary of the Acheron.

Tisiphone. One of the Furies. See note on Eumenidum, to p. 78.

Teucrûm. The Trojans, as descendants of Teucer, the most ancient king of Troy, son of Scamander and the nymph Idaea.

Hecate. A Greek deity, sometimes confused or associated with Persephone, sometimes identified with the moon goddess. As a goddess of the night, she gradually became a deity of ghosts and magic. She was represented as haunting graves and crossways, where offerings of eggs, fish, and onions were made to her on the last day of the month. In art she is usually represented by three statues placed back to back, each one with special attributes.

Avernis. Now Lago di Averno, a lake near Cumae, filling the crater of an extinct volcano. Near it was the cave of the Cumaean Sibyl, through which Aeneas descended to the lower world.

Rhadamanthus. Brother of King Minos of Crete, who, in consequence of his justness in life, was made a judge in the lower world.

agmina saeva sororum. The Furies.

82. praeceps. Adjective used as a noun.

Titania pubes. The Titans, offspring of Uranus and Gaea (Heaven and Earth).

Salmonea. Salmoneus was a Thessalian who emigrated to Elis and built the town of Salmone. He deemed himself equal to Zeus, ordered sacrifices made to him, and imitated the thunder and lightning. He was slain by a thunderbolt and punished in the lower world.

Aere et cornipedum. Imitative line.

Tityon. Tityus, a giant of Euboea, offered violence to Latona or Artemis, and was slain by her arrows. Cast into Tartarus, he lay stretched over nine acres, with vultures or snakes devouring his liver.

Terrae omniparentis. Cf. the notes to p. 31.

Lapithas. A savage race, neighbors of the Centaurs. They were said to be the inventors of bits and bridles for horses.

Ixiona. Ixion was the king of the Lapithae, who treacherously murdered his father-in-law, and when purified and taken to heaven by Zeus, attempted to win the love of Hera. A phantom resembling her was created by Zeus, and by it Ixion became the father of Centaur. As a punishment for his ingratitude, he was chained to a wheel which rolled perpetually.

Pirithoüm. The son of Ixion. When he was celebrating his marriage with Hippodamia, an intoxicated Centaur insulted the bride. This gave rise to the battle with the Centaurs, who were defeated. Pirithoüs was tormented in Hades for having attempted to abduct Proserpina.

83. clienti. "A dependent."

Theseus. The great legendary hero of Attica, son of King Aegeus of Athens, who figured in almost all the great heroic expeditions. He took part in the Argonautic expedition, slew the Minotaur, and assisted Pirithoüs in his attempt to carry off Proserpina, for which he was kept in the lower world until delivered by Heracles.

Phlegyas. The son of Ares and father of Ixion and Coronis, the latter of whom became by Apollo the father of Aesculapius. Having in revenge set fire to the god's temple, he was slain by Apollo and condemned to punishment in the lower world.

Non, mihi si linguae, etc. An imitation of Hom. Il. ii. 489.

XII. GAIUS CILNIUS MAECENAS.

quate. "Make my glairy teeth chatter."

si sedeam cruce. Referring to the instrument of torture known as the eculeus or "colt" (cf. the Italian cavaletto),—a sort of seat with a sharp point, astride of which the victim was placed with heavy weights attached to his feet.

XIII. QUINTUS HORATIUS FLACCUS.

86. Emirabitur. A word found only here.

tabulā votivā. The temples of Isis especially were thus adorned. Compare the custom, common in Italy, of adorning the shrines of saints with crutches, etc., of those who have been cured.

Babylonios. Cicero's writings show a widespread belief at Rome, even before the time of Horace, in the Chaldean astrology. Through it mathematics and astronomy became objects of suspicion, and the Senate repeatedly passed resolutions de pellendis magis, Chaldaeis, mathematicis, astrologis, ceterisque maleficis; cf. Tac. Ann. ii. 27, 32, 69; xii. 52; Hist. i. 22, etc. Horace himself was free from this superstition.

carpe diem. A famous phrase.

87. Integer vitae. This ode, beginning with the praises of virtue, and at the close making enjoyment the sum of all wisdom, while apparently containing contradictory sentiments, is in accord with Horace's practise ridendo dicere verum.

Fusce. Aristius Fuscus, a friend of Horace, of whom not much is known. He is mentioned again in Sat. i. 9.

Syrtes. The modern gulfs of Sidra and Cabes.

Hydaspes. A tributary of the Indus, now the Jhelûm.

Lalagen. "The prattler." (Gk. λαλεῖν.) See note to p. 13.

Daunias. Daunia was a part of Apulia, whose inhabitants were renowned for their military spirit.

Iubae. King of Mauritania, which he received in exchange for his paternal kingdom of Numidia, when the latter was made a Roman province. He wrote many works, and is cited by Pliny as an authority on natural history.

Arida. "Parched."

pigris. "Sluggish"; i.e. frozen.

Iuppiter. The name of the god is frequently used to designate his realm, the bright sky; e.g. sub Iove under the open sky.

Chloë. This poem may be compared with Longfellow's Maidenhood, of which it is the ancient prototype.

88. Tempestiva. "Old enough."

Fons Bandusiae. The locality has been much disputed, but is now known to have been near Venusia. Horace gave the same name to a fountain on his Sabine farm. The festival of the Fontinalia was celebrated on Oct. 13. Libations of wine were offered, garlands were placed about the fountains, and the blood of a sacrificed kid was allowed to flow into the springs.

vitro. See note on vitro, p. 71.

Lascivi. "Playful."

Caniculæ. The star Sirius. The Dies Caniculares were proverbial with the Romans, as the dog-days with us.

Nescit. = nequit. Cf. Eng. can = the Scotch ken (know); and the use of French savoir in the same sense.

nobilium fontium. Hippocrene, Arethusa, Castalia, etc.

Lymphæ. An improperly Graecized form for the true Latin lumpæ, like our rhyme for rime.

89. Maecenas, summoned to Brundisium on affairs of state in 37 B.C., took with him several friends, among them Horace, on the trip of which this satire gives a humorous description. The journey was made leisurely, sixteen or seventeen days being consumed on the road between Rome and Brundisium, 312 miles. This satire has been put to use by Becker in the journey scene in his Gallus.

Aricia. Now Riccia, about 16 miles from Rome; celebrated for the grove and temple of Diana on the Lacus Nemorensis (now Nemi) with the spring of Egeria.

Hospitio. Inns (deversoria) existed in Rome as early as the second century B.C. The taverns erected on the highroads by neighboring land owners (see note on taberna, p. 70) were supplemented, as traffic increased, by stations for changing horses (mutatio) and for night quarters (mansio). The cook shops (popinae) and taverns (cauponae) were not frequented by the better classes, although the gilded youth of Rome had their special taverns, in which they held the Roman equivalent for the German Kneipe. The occupation of innkeeper (caupo) belonged to the most despised professions (cf. l. 4, cauponibus malignis). The interior arrangement of the inns corresponded probably to that of the present Italian osterie, and then, as now, the nature of the house was indicated by signs. So, for example, Pompeii had its "Elephant House," Rome its "Cock Tavern," in the Forum, Lyons its "Inn to Mercury and Apollo," etc.

Heliodorus. Nothing further is known of him.

Forum Appi. Founded by Appius Claudius, 43 miles southeast of Rome, when he made the Appian Way. From this place a canal led through the Pomptine Marshes to Anxur.

altius . . . praecinctis. "To more active travellers"; referring to the habit of girding up the garments for greater ease in exercise.

Iam nox . . . parabat. Mock-heroic.

90. pueri. Cf. the French use of garçon and "boy" = "slave" in our Southern States.

convicia. Con + vox.

Ingerere. Historical infinitive.

viator. See the article by Ashmore in Classical Studies in Honour of Henry Drisler (N.Y. 1894).

dolat. Literally "hews," "cuts at him."

quartā . . . horā. Until about 290 B.C., the time of midday was announced to the consuls by a servant (accensus), who watched till the sun reached a particular opening in the south side of the Forum. After the introduction of sundials (solaria) and water-clocks (clepsydrae), the daylight and darkness were divided into twelve hours each, the hours, of course, varying in length with the season of the year.

pransi. The Romans had in early times three meals — breakfast (ientaculum) at 9, the principal meal (cena) at 12, and the vesperna in the evening. Later a different arrangement became customary; lunch (prandium) was substituted at 12 for the cena, which was then taken about 3, after the bath. The cena, originally a very simple meal, became, after the second century B.C., a very elaborate one, sometimes prolonged over the whole latter part of the day. Masters and servants originally took their meals in common in the atrium; later, special dining-rooms (triclinia) were built. Napkins (mappae) were introduced in the reign of Augustus. No knives or forks were used; the meats were cut up by a special slave (scissor).

Anxur. A Volscian city, later called Tarracina by the Romans.

Priapum. Priapus, the Greek god of fruitfulness. His statue, set up in Roman gardens, seemingly served as a scarecrow.

Maluit esse deum. Cf. the magnificent piece of sustained irony, Isaiah, chap. xlv. 9-17.

novis hortis. On the Esquiline Hill.

commune sepulcrum. The eastern slope of the Esquiline, outside the Servian rampart, was in early times the Potter's Field of Rome. Within the city, no burials could take place; hominem mortuum, inquit lex in duodecim, in urbe ne sepelito neve urito (Cic. De Leg. ii. 23, 58). See Lanciani, Ancient Rome, chap. iii.; and Pagan and Christian Rome, chap. vi. The place was acquired by Maecenas, who laid it out in gardens (cf. novis hortis, l. 6) and built there a handsome house.

www.libtool.com.cn

91. Heredes . . . sequeretur. The usual inscriptions were H. M. H. N. S. = hoc monumentum heredes ne sequatur, or H. M. Ad H. N. Trans. (transito), i.e. the burial place did not form a part of the inheritance, and hence could not be sold by the heirs.

Aggere, etc. The Servian agger. See note on commune sepulcrum above.

quae versant. Note the impressive effect of the indefinite.

Umbrae. "Shades." Cf. Shakespeare's witch-scene in Macbeth.

caliendrum. "(False) headdress," i.e. "wig."

Accurrit quidam. Propertius has been suggested as the bore, but he was more than ten years younger than Horace, and therefore hardly more than a child when this satire was written.

Num quid vis. A usual formula preliminary to saying farewell, as seen in various passages in Plautus; cf. num quid nunc aliut me vis (Mil. Glor. 1086).

quendam non tibi notum . . . longe cubat. These circumstances are touched upon as likely to discourage the bore from accompanying him.

Caesaris hortos. On the Ianiculum, bequeathed to the Roman people by Julius Caesar (Suet. Iulius, 83).

pluris. Genitive of value.

Varium. L. Varius, an epic and tragic poet, the friend of Horace, Vergil, and Maecenas. After the death of Vergil, he was directed by Augustus to revise the Aeneid.

93. quis membra . . . mollius. "Who can shake a leg more neatly?"

Est tibi mater. Probably an ancient equivalent of the modern impertinence, "Does your mother know you're out?"

Sabella. Sabinum was traditionally a witch-country.

quando . . . cunque. Tmesis.

Vestae. The temple stood on the south side of the Forum, north of the Palatine. Horace and his companions had walked along the Via Sacra, past the (later) Arch of Titus, and had reached the tribunal of the praetor, which reminded the bore of his lawsuit.

vadato. Probably ablative absolute = vadimonio dato, corresponding to the similar absolute uses sortito, testato and intestato, auspicato, etc.

94. stare. Technical legal term.

propero. Colloquial indicative where strict Latinity (the Latinity of literature) would demand the subjunctive.

sodes. = si audes. Audeo contains the root of avidus. "If you please."

Maecenas quomodo tecum. "How does Maecenas stand with you?" A flattering way of putting it, as though Horace were the great man and Maecenas the humble follower.

Nemo dexterius. A delicately veiled sneer at Maecenas. The bore is feeling for Horace's true sentiments towards Maecenas, and trying to draw him out.

sic habet. = sic se res habet, οὕτως ἔχει.

deducam. Deducere is a technical term used of clients escorting their patronus home; prosequi is to escort him from his house to the Forum, etc.

dissimulare . . . ridere. Historical infinitives.

95. tricesima sabbata. Many ingenious explanations of these words have been given, but it is altogether unlikely that Fuscus had any special Jewish feast in mind, but trumped up the excuse as a part of the practical joke on Horace.

oppedere. A coarse word belonging to the colloquial language.

surrexe. Colloquial contraction for surrexisse.

Archiacis. "Made by Archias," an otherwise unknown maker of inexpensive furniture.

imperium fer. "Put up with my ordering."

Moschi. According to the scholiast, a rhetorician from Pergamum, accused of poisoning.

nato Caesare. The birthday may be either that of Julius Caesar, July 12, or that of Augustus, Sept. 23. Aestivam noctem below would seem to indicate the former.

96. paupertate. Not exactly "poverty," for which the word is egestas, but narrow means.

toral. The covering of the lectus.

mappa. See note on pransi to p. 90.

par pari. A Latin form of our proverb "Birds of a feather flock together." So in Cic. De Senectute (3, 7), Pares autem, vetere proverbio cum paribus facillime congregantur.

umbris. Additional guests not invited by the entertainer, but brought by invited guests. Cf. Sat. ii. 8. 22.

quanti. Genitive of price.

Fallacem. Because the resort of fortune-tellers, rogues, and cheats.

pueris tribus. A very small number. Cf. Sat. i. 3, 12, where ten slaves are mentioned as very few.

echinus. A word originally meaning a sea-urchin; here probably a salt-cellar. So in the Third Satire Horace speaks of concha salis.

dormitum. Supine of purpose.

Marsya. A satyr flayed by Apollo. His statue stood in the Forum near the praetor's tribunal. The features, distorted after his punishment by Apollo, seemed to express disgust for the usurious Novius.

97. Ad quartam. Eight to nine o'clock. He probably does not mean that he slept so late, for he calls one who sleeps to the first hour (Epist. i. 17, 6), or after daylight (Epist. i. 18, 34), a late sleeper. These quiet hours of the early morning he uses for his studies. Libitina conscripto below.

durare. Infinitive used for a quin clause.

O matre pulchrā filia pulchrior. It is not clear from the ode who the beauty was whom Horace here tries to propitiate, but she is supposed to be one Tyndaris, daughter of Gratidia or Canidia, who had been ridiculed by Horace (cf. Sat. i. 8). Tradition makes her to have been a Neapolitan flower-girl.

Latoë. = Apollo, son of Latona. For the sentiment cf. Juvenal's mens sana in corpore sano, p. 145.

Nunc est bibendum. An ode celebrating the taking of Alexandria and death of Cleopatra (30 B.C.).

Saliaribus . . . dapibus. The feasts of the Salii, or priests of Mars, were proverbial for their richness.

Tempus erat. The tense is at first sight peculiar. "Now was the time"; i.e. we were right in waiting for the present time; it really was the proper moment.

98. Tendit Apollo. i.e. relaxation is necessary. "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy." "It's a long lane that has no turning."

imminuit dies. Here dies = tempus.

99. Exegi monumentum. So Ennius in the lines given on p. 21; so, too, Ovid.

Libitinam. Venus as a death goddess.

fortibus et bonis. Not the ablative of the agent, which would require the preposition ab, but the ablative of source — "from the brave and good."

Credat Iudaeus Apella. The Jews were regarded by the Greeks and Romans as excessively superstitious. This quotation is used very much like our "Tell that to the marines!"

100. Quidquid delirant. Quidquid is the accusative of specification.

Dimidium facti. "A thing begun is half done."

Oblitusque meorum, etc. Imitated in Pope's line, "the world forgetting, by the world forgot."

adire Corinthum. According to Gellius (i. 8, 4), the proverb οὐ πάντως ἀνδρὸς ἐς Κόρινθον ἔσθ' ὁ πλοῦς originated because frustra iret ad Corinthum ad Laïdem, qui non quiret dare quod posceretur. The sense, of course, is that only the wealthy can indulge in expensive luxuries.

Hinc illae lacrimae. An expression first used by Terence (Andria, 126), and then by Cicero (Pro Caelio, 23).

XIV. PUBLIUS OVIDIUS NASO.

103. The prose account of this tradition is given in Livy, i. 9.

viduos. Viduus and caelebs are used of both unmarried men and widowers.

vela. Awnings, in place of roofs, were stretched over the whole theater as a protection against sun and rain. The rings to which the awnings were fastened may still be seen in the Colosseum.

scena. Originally "bower," as in Verg. Aen. i. 164; then applied to the stage decorated as described in the preceding line.

plausus. The system to which applause was later reduced is seen in the following passage from Suetonius (Nero, 20). "At the same time he chose young men of the equestrian order and above five thousand robust young fellows from the common people, on purpose to learn various kinds of applause, called bombi (booming, humming), imbrices (clapping with hollowed hands; imbrex, gutter-tile), and testae (clapping with flat hands; testa, tile). They were divided into several parties, and were remarkable for their fine heads of hair, and were extremely well dressed, with rings on their left hands. The leaders of these bands had 40,000 sesterces allowed them." The ancient claque.

104. commoda. Gifts made to soldiers on their discharge from service.

Annae Perennae. The goddess of the returning year. Her festival was celebrated near the junction of the Arno and the Tiber, on the Ides of March.

advena. Because considered an Etruscan river.

Nestoris annos. Nestor had lived through three generations of men.

Forsitan audieris. Venus tells Adonis how Atalanta was overcome in a foot-race by Hippomenes, son of the Boeotian king Megareus, and great grandson of Neptune.

105. teque viva carebis. Atalanta was transformed into a lioness, and so lost her own form while still alive (Met. x. 698).

106. Aonio. = Boeotian. The name Aonia was given to that part of Boeotia, near Phocis, in which Mt. Helicon and the fountain of Aganippe were situated. Hence the Muses are called Aonides.

Onchestius. The father of Megareus was Onchestus, son of Neptune.

107. nollem visa fuissem. Ut is omitted after nolo.

108. Schoeneia. She was the daughter of the Boeotian king Schoeneus.

109. For Ovid's banishment, see Introduction, p. 101.

Ausoniae. Originally the district about Caes and Beneventum; later extended to near Italy. It was also called Opica.

110. extinctos focos. The hearth typified the family life, and its extinction the desertion of the home. So the sacred fire of Vesta symbolized the life of Rome.

Parrhasis. = Parrhasia. Calisto, daughter of Lycaon, king of Arcadia, transformed by Hera into a bear, and afterwards placed as a constellation in the heavens.

www.libtool.com.cn

apta. Lucky for starting, as determined by an astrologer.

limen tetigi. The most unlucky omen on beginning a journey. So the bride was carried across the threshold of her father's and of her husband's home to avoid the possibility of such an ill omen. See p. 206.

111. Scythia. A vague term in ancient geography, sometimes meaning Scythia, properly so called, sometimes an indefinite name for modern Mongolia and Tartary.

Theseā . . . fide. The proverbial friendship of Theseus and Pirithoüs; cf. Hor. Carm. iv. 7, 27. Nec Lethaea valet Theseus abrumpere caro Vincula Pirithoo.

Metus. King of Alba, punished in this manner for treachery by Tullus Hostilius (Livy i. 2, 8).

XV. TITUS LIVIUS.

113. Et supererat multitudo. "And (this was a natural expedient, for) the number of inhabitants was too great." This use of et, equivalent to the elliptical καὶ γάρ (et . . . enim), is a favorite one with Livy.

avitum malum. Referring to the seizure of Numitor's kingdom by his brother Amulius.

inde. The cause of the strife; the occasion is given in the next sentence.

aetatis. A recognition of the rights of primogeniture.

114. tutelae. "Under whose protection these regions were."

templa. As here used, templum is any spot consecrated by the augural ritual; cf. Livy, i. 18, 6 (Numa) ab augure . . . deductus in arcem, in lapide ad meridiem coudedit. . . . Declaratus rex, de templo descendit.

conditoris nomine appellata. An etymological impossibility. Roma or Ruma meant originally "River-town" (Gm. Stromstadt, Corssen).

Palatium. Originally a "feeding place," "pasture," from the root of pasco.

Euandro. (Εὐάνδρος, "Good-man.") A mythical prince who, before the Trojan War, led a Pelasgian colony from Arcadia and founded a city Pallanteum on the hill afterwards called Palatium. He introduced the worship of Pan = Faunus; cf. Verg. Aen. viii. 51.

Herculem . . . Geryone. The tenth labor of Hercules was to steal the cattle of Geryon, a three-headed monster on the island of Erytheia. He was supposed to have come to Italy on his return with the cattle.

Cācus. Described as a half-human, fire-breathing monster. His name was confounded by the Italian Greeks with κᾶκός, without regard to the quantity of the first syllable, in contrast with the good Evander.

115. Cum hostes adessent. The Etruscans already had possession of the Ianiculum, which formed a natural bulwark toward Etruria.

Pons Sublicius. Remains of this earliest of Roman bridges are still to be seen. It was built by Ancus Martius in 639 B.C., and was entirely of wood, iron being unknown at the time of the construction, nor was iron allowed in any subsequent restoration. For the horror of iron, see Lanciani, Ancient Rome, p. 41 f.

in statione. "In command of the guard."

116. Tiberine pater. Cf. Verg. Aen. viii. 72, Tuque, o Thybri tuo genitor cum flumine sancto, and Macaulay's lines:—

"O Tiber, father Tiber, to whom the Romans pray, A Roman's life, a Roman's arms take thou in charge this day!"

118. iuberem macte virtute esse. = dicerem "macte virtute esto." Macte is the vocative of the adjective mactus, from an obsolete mago = augeo; and is formulaic, being used even with the accusative (Florus, ii. 18, 16).

XVI. GAIUS PETRONIUS [ARBITER].

119. The selection given here forms a part of the famous episode known as "Trimalchio's Dinner Party" (Cena Trimalchionis). The narrator of the story is one Encolpius, who tells how he and his friend Ascyltus with a boy, Giton, are invited to dinner by a rich old upstart named Trimalchio. Trimalchio had been born a slave, but had won his freedom by no very nice practices, and had subsequently accumulated an immense fortune in trade. He is now a shrewd, vulgar, conceited old fellow, with some gleams of kindness and good feeling, but utterly ignorant of social usages and destitute of tact. His guests are, for the most part, persons of his own kind. The conversation put into their mouths by Petronius gives us valuable specimens of the colloquial, ungrammatical Latin (sermo plebeius) spoken by the uneducated and often non-Roman people of the mercantile class. The scene of the Cena is probably laid in Puteoli. See a valuable paper by H. W. Haley in the Harvard Studies in Classical Philology, iii. 1-40.

niuatam. "Cooled with snow." The ancients kept snow in pits and used it as we do ice.

paronychia. Παρωνυχία in classical Greek means a felon or whitlow, but here it means the thin loose skin about the nails.

acido cantico. "A shrill song."

triclinium. "The table."

patris familiae. For the older form patris familias, which possesses the genitive ending in -s of the first declension in Greek.

gustatio. A sort of preliminary course intended to whet the appetite. It usually consisted of shell-fish, olives, eggs, mushrooms, radishes, etc., and the drink served with them was wine mixed with honey (mulsum). To serve so elaborate a gustatio as Trimalchio gave them was an exhibition of ignorance of the niceties of gastronomy.

Trimalchionem. The name signifies "thrice effeminate" from μαλάσσω, Lat. malacus, malchio (Mart. iii. 82).

locus novo more primus. The usual number of guests was nine, arranged as follows:—

		lectus medius
		imus	medius	summus
	summus	6	5	4	imus
	medius	7		3	medius
lectus imus	imus	8		2	lectus summus
		9		1	summus

The place of honor was no. 6. The master of the feast usually reclined at no. 7. At Trimalchio's dinner, the host, instead of putting some guest into the honorable place, takes it himself, probably because, as he politely tells them later on, he does not consider the present company as entitled to any great civility. Mau, however, regards primus locus as referring to the place marked 1 on the diagram, citing the use of πρῶτος in Plutarch, Quaest. Conviv. i. 3.

promulsidaria. Promulsis is another name for the gustatio.

120. Corinthius. i.e. of Corinthian brass, greatly valued by the ancients.

bisaccio. A word found only here.

Syriaca pruna. The black plums and the scarlet pomegranate seeds represented coals of a fire under the silver gridiron, as though the sausages were still broiling on the hearth.

glires. Dormice were regarded by the Romans as great delicacies. Pliny (H. N. viii. 82) tells us that at one time the censor, in an effort to suppress luxurious living, forbade dormice, oysters, and imported birds to be eaten. Rules for cooking dormice are given by Apicius, viii. 9. See Friedländer, Sittengeschichte Roms, iii. 29. 6.

papavera. "Spices."

ad symphoniam. "To the sound of music."

laticlaviam mappam. He marked his napkin with the broad purple stripe (latus clavus), the badge of high rank. Trimalchio was a Sevir Augustalis, an office usually given to freedmen, and regarded it in his reverence for official rank as a mighty honor. Only senators were allowed to wear the latus clavus on the tunic, so Trimalchio puts one on his napkin.

anulum grandem subauratum. Only knights were entitled to wear a golden ring (ius anuli). Trimalchio does not dare to violate the law, but manages to evade it in part. He wears two rings, both of which appear to be gold when seen at a distance; but one is only gilded, and the other is sprinkled with little iron stars so as not to be wholly golden.

pinnā argenteā. Martial (xiv. 22) called a toothpick dentiscalpium. Ordinarily they were made of the stalks of the mastic tree (lentiscus) or of quills.

denes perfodit. A revelation of his breeding, which is accentuated by his remark that it is a great bore for him to be present, and that his guests have greatly inconvenienced him.

121. absentivos. Old form with -os for the later -us, retained like many other archaisms in the plebeian Latin.

calculis. The game was probably the game of latrunculi, closely resembling our checkers or draughts. An account of it may be found in Falkener's Games Ancient and Oriental (London, 1892).

omnium textorum dicta. "All kind of Billingsgate," the weavers (textores) being taken as typical of the great unwashed. Cf. Martial, xii. 59. 6.

mehercules. For the more common mehercle. Seneca, however, has mehercules more than forty times (Friedländer).

concepti sint. Sc. pulli.

coclearia. "Spoons." The coclear had a sharp point on one end, for eating oysters, snails, etc., and a bowl on the other end for eating eggs (Mart. xiv. 121). The ligula more closely resembled our spoon.

selibras. "Half a pound." After plus, minus, and amplius the quam may be omitted without changing the construction. Hence the accusative case here instead of the ablative.

toralia. A hanging attached to the front of a couch or sofa depending from above the mattress to the floor. It was commonly white in color and was usually of some material that could be washed. The toralia of Trimalchio with their elaborate embroideries are therefore another instance of his ostentation.

subsessores. Huntsmen who lie in wait for the game.

pilleatus. The pilleus was the liberty-cap, and was set on the head of a newly made freeman. Trimalchio explains to his guests presently that the boar had already been served up at a previous dinner the day before, and having been sent off by the guests untouched, was now decorated like a slave just dismissed from bondage. A mild joke of Trimalchio's.

scrofam. A dainty bit of table decoration.

122. apophoreti. Usually in the neuter apophoreta (ἀποφόρητα). Presents for the guests to take home with them. The fourteenth book of Martial's Epigrams consists of 223 couplets, each of which is supposed to be enclosed with a souvenir, as a sort of motto.

polymitā. From πολύμιτος, "woven with many threads."

debet esse. "He must be a thoroughly worthless slave."

At non Trimalchio. "But not so Trimalchio."

123. botulus. Botulus is a vulgar Latin word, reappearing in the French boudin and English "pudding." Cf. Gell. xvi. 7. 11.

Gaio feliciter. Sc. eveniat or vertat. When the emperor and empress entered the theater, the people used to rise and exclaim Domino ac dominae feliciter (Sueton. Domit. 13).

lacunaria. In the most magnificent houses at Rome, the panels of the ceiling were arranged to shift their position and display different scenes to the guests. Sometimes they would open and let a shower of roses fall. See the passage from Suetonius given on p. 164; and cf. Mayor's note on Juvenal, i. 56.

alabastris. "Scent-bottles."

more vulgato. "In the usual way."

minimā vexatione. "On the slightest pressure."

crocum. The Romans made great use of saffron, both as a condiment for food and to give a perfume to their wines. In the amphitheater, concealed pipes, at frequent intervals, sprayed the spectators with saffron-water. By refined persons, however, saffron was regarded much as musk is to-day, and rose-water and violet were preferred.

mappas implevimus. i.e. to carry away. This was a not uncommon custom at Rome (Mart. ii. 37; vii. 20).

124. Lares bullatos. The bullā was a globe of metal, often of gold, worn by free-born children, who on coming of age consecrated it to the Lares. The children of freedmen wore bullae made of leather. It was regarded as a sort of amulet.

Dii propitii. sc. sint. A sort of grace after meat. For another clever description of a parvenu's dinner, see the account given by Horace (Sat. ii. 8) of how the snob Nasidienus entertained Maecenas.

fortis tamquam Orcus. "As bold as the devil."

Apoculamus. A word found only in Petronius, where it occurs again in ch. 66. The meaning is clear, but the derivation is doubtful. Some derive it from ab + oculus, comparing the low Latin aboculus whence the French aveugle; so that apoculare (= aboculare) would mean "to get out of sight" (Bücheler). More probably it is from the low word culus, so that apoculare will exactly represent the French reculer (low Latin rincolare).

gallicinia. From gallus + cano; cf. Hor. Sat. i. 10, sub galli cantum. The plural seems to occur only here.

facere. sc. se. = ire. A late Latin use. So in Tertullian, Pall. 3: ad illum ex Libyâ Hammon facit.

respexi ad comitem. The use of ad is post-classical; exactly our "looked back at."

Mihi anima in naso esse. "My heart was in my mouth." Editors compare Anacreon's κραδίη δὲ ῥινὸς ἄχρῖς ἀνέβαινε (Bergk, 7); esse is the historical infinitive.

lupus factus est. The belief in werewolves is older than recorded history, and is one of the primitive manifestations of a general belief in metempsychosis. Herodotus (iv. 105) says of the Neuri, a semi-Scythian people, that it is reported that "once every year each Neurian becomes a wolf for a few days, and then is restored again to the same form as before." Vergil in the Eighth Eclogue says:—

His ego saepe lupum fieri et se condere silvis Moerim . . . vidi.

Pliny the Elder (H. N. viii. 34) speaks of the common belief in lycanthropy, but says that it is a mere superstition, and ridicules those who entertain it. Plautus twice mentions the versipelles (Amphitr. Prol.; Bacch. iv. 4, 10). Pomponius Mela repeats the Herodotean story about the Neuri (ii. 1). In modern times, the belief has been widely diffused, and the legends of the Black Forest populate it with these gruesome inhabitants. The notion probably arose from cases such as that of the "wolf-boys" of India like Mowgli the Shikarri immortalized by Rudyard Kipling in Many Inventions and the Jungle Book. See Herz, Der Werwolf (1862); Baring Gould's Book of Werewolves (1865); and K. F. Smith in the Publications of the Mod. Lang. Assoc. for 1894.

Qui mori. Sc. debuisset; or mori may be the historical infinitive.

XVII. GAIUS PLINIUS SECUNDUS MAIOR.

126. Lolliam Paulinam. The granddaughter of the immensely rich M. Lollius, whose fortune she inherited. She was first married to C. Memmius Regulus, but the Emperor Caligula fell in love with her, divorced her from her husband, and married her himself. His passion for her did not, however, last very long, for he soon repudiated her. When Claudius was emperor, Lollia intrigued to win his favor, but her successful rival Agrippina procured her banishment, and finally her death.

Gai principis. Caligula.

smaragdis margaritisque. Emeralds and pearls were the favorite jewels of the Romans, though the opal, amethyst, and ruby were much admired. Julius Caesar gave to Servilia, the mother of Brutus, a pearl worth $240,000. The famous pearl which Cleopatra dissolved and drank was one of a pair valued at $400,000. The ancients probably knew of the diamond, but, as the art of cutting and polishing it had not yet been learned, did not greatly value it. All the gems were imitated by the ancient jewelers in paste and crystal. For a full account of gems in classical times, see Middleton, The Engraved Gems of Classical Times (London, 1891; Blümner, Technologie, iii. 227 foll.; and Murray, Handbook of Greek Archaeology, pp. 40-50, 146-173 (London, 1892).

quadringenties HS. Sc. centena milia. A sum equal to $1,600,000. The sign HS. stands for IIS (duo et semis), the sestertius having been originally worth two and a half asses. The value of the sestertius may be roughly reckoned at four cents.

127. Curius aut Fabricius. Two typical old heroes of the days of Rome's simplicity.

fercula. The litters on which were carried in the triumphal processions the spoils of the victorious general. Occasionally captives of great distinction were so paraded.

In morsu. "In case of a bite."

pollici. Sc. pedis. Cf. the French doigt de pied.

lytta. (λύττα.) Hence the Gk. verb λυττάω "to rave" Pliny's superstition about the lytta has endured down to the present century, and puppies are still occasionally "wormed" to prevent hydrophobia. What are supposed to be worms, however, are really white pustules beneath the tongue.

Saliuntur. "Are salted."

128. scholae. The various schools of medicine.

litteras scire. "To have some learning." So litteras nescire is a proverbial phrase "to be a fool." A fuller account of the theory of Herophilus is given by Pliny in xi. 88. The notion was that there was a normal rate of pulse beat for persons of each age, a variation from which indicated that something was wrong.

inter initia. "At first."

contrariā medicinā. Pliny elsewhere (xix. 7) says that Antonius Musa cured Augustus of a severe illness by prescribing lettuce which his former physician had forbidden him to eat. Suetonius (Aug. 81) relates that he treated Augustus for abscesses with cold applications.

apud principes. In their practice any people of importance.

imputavit principibus. Regarded it as a favor to the emperor; lit. "set it down to the account of the emperor." A business phrase used of recording a debt due to one's self.

ad eam aetatem. "Up to their time."

eloquentiae assectator. "A professor of oratory."

Iatronicen. "Conqueror of physicians" (Gk. ιατρονικης).

129. ephemeride. "Almanac."

turba se medicorum periisse. Supposed to be a translation of a line of Menander:—

Πολλῶν ἰατρῶν εἰσοδος μ' ἀπόλεσεν.

flatu. "The puffing."

insignia. "Some striking facts."

ius Quiritium. "The full right of Roman citizenship."

compito Acilio. "The Acilian four-corners." A part of the city.

quae nunc nos tractamus. Pliny is, in this part of his work, treating of medicine as the pharmacopoeia.

ad Graecos transfugae. In adopting their language for writing medical works. An instance of a Roman medical author who wrote in Greek is Sextus Empiricus.

131. credatur. Impersonal. "Credence is given."

For a full account of ancient medicine, see Watson, The Medical Profession in Ancient Times (New York, 1856); Daremberg, Histoire des Sciences Médicales (Paris, 1870-73); and Berdoz, Origin and Progress of the Healing Art (London, 1893).

XVIII. MARCUS FABIVS QVINTILIANVS.

132. Chrysippus. The celebrated Stoic philosopher who lived B.C. 280-207. deforme. "Unseemly."

injuria. "A wrong thing."

illiberalis. "Coarse."

vapulantibus. Vapulo is a neuter passive verb like fiō and veneo.

133. nimium est. "More than enough."

Quintilian's view of corporal punishment was not the view that generally prevailed at Rome. Martial speaks of the noise made in whipping children, which made the vicinity of a school unpleasant to the residents (xii. 57). Horace has made the severity of his teacher Orbilius proverbial. Verrius Flaccus, the tutor of the grandchildren of the emperor Augustus, introduced a system of rewards to take the place of a system of punishments, appealing to the ambition rather than to the fears of the children.

in sipario. The drop curtain in a theater was called siparium, the principal curtain, aulaeum.

in nervo. The nervus was an arrangement for confining criminals something like the stocks, being made of wood and having holes for the feet (Plaut. Asin. iii. 2, 5).

XIX. MARCVS VALERIVS MARTIALIS.

135. Nil istic quod agat, etc. "There is nothing there for a third cough to do."

Non amo te, Sabidi, etc. This very famous epigram is the original of one equally famous in English, — that written by Tom Brown on Dr. John Fell, Dean of Christ Church, Oxford, about 1670. It runs as follows: —

“I do not like thee, Dr. Fell,
The reason why I cannot tell;
But this I know and know full well,
I do not like thee, Dr. Fell.”

A still earlier imitation in English is found in Thomas Forde's Virtus Rediviva (1661): —

“I love thee not, Nell,
But why I can't tell;
Yet this I know well,
I love thee not, Nell.”

It seems probable that Brown's epigram was imitated from this rather than directly from Martial.

copo. Plebeian form of caupo, the diphthong disappearing in the long vowel.

Emptis ossibus. Artificial teeth seem to have been made and used by the Romans at a very early period. Cicero (De Legibus, ii. 24) quotes an old law which forbade the placing of gold in tombs except that used in the artificial teeth. Martial has other hits on the same subject, e.g. that given on p. 137.

Cerussata. The cerussa (ψιμίθιον in Greek) was a face enamel prepared by exposing lead to the fumes of vinegar. It was very largely used by Roman woman as was rouge (fucus) and other cosmetics. A description of the making up of a woman's face is given by Plautus in the Mostellaria, i. 3; and a fragment (Medicamina Fuciei) ascribed to Ovid treats learnedly of the whole subject. From these and other sources we learn that Roman ladies enameled their skins, rouged their cheeks, touched up their lips with scarlet (minium), stained the eyebrows black with antimony, darkened the lids with a preparation of soot (ἄσβολος), traced over the veins with blue, and used patches (splenia) to heighten the fairness of their complexion by contrast. See Böttiger's Sabina, i. pp. 24 foll. (3d ed. revised by Fischer, Munich, 1878).

comatus. i.e. by wearing a wig (galerus, capillamentum), which was a very common thing at Rome, as were all the arrangements of false hair (switches, bangs, chignons, “rats”) that are usually supposed to be modern.

XX. DECIMUS IUNIUS IUVENALIS.

frivola. Things half worn out; rubbish. Derived from frio, frico.

Ucalegon. = neighbor. The name is borrowed from Vergil's account of the burning of Troy (Aen. ii. 311). Vergil gets it from Homer (I. iii. 148).

reddunt. "Pay over;" i.e. as rent. The word implies giving what is due.

139. Codro. Otherwise unknown.

Proculā. Probably some well-known female dwarf at Rome.

minor. "Too small."

opici. The Opici, or Osci, were an Italian race proverbially rough and uncouth. See the passage from Cato cited by Pliny, and given on p. 130.

differt vadimonia. Puts off the consideration of bail questions.

Euphranoris. Euphranor was distinguished both in sculpture and painting. He was a native of the Corinthian Isthmus. His chief works were produced during the reigns of Philip and Alexander.

Polycliti. Polyclitus, one of the most celebrated sculptors of the ancient world, was an associate of Phidias and Myron. All of his work was in bronze, except the ivory and gold statue of Hera in her temple between Argos and Mycenae.

mediam Minervam. The literary works in the libraries were under her protection.

Persicus orborum lautissimus. "Persian," because the Persians and Orientals generally were regarded as rolling in wealth. Cf. our "nabob." The expression orborum lautissimus is best taken as a case of the rhetorical figure Oxymoron; but orborum may be "childless." Asturicus is rich and childless, and hence all flatter him and send him presents, hoping to be remembered in his will.

140. avelli. Middle voice; "tear yourself away."

Sorae, Fabrateriae, Frusinone. Sora was in Volscian territory, on the Liris, north of Arpinum and Fregellae. Fabrateria lay to the south of Sora, and Frusino to the southwest.

tenebras. "Darkness" for a dark house (aedes tenebrosas), by the figure Metonymy, a favorite with Juvenal.

haustu. "By an easy dip."

epulum . . . Pythagoreis. The Pythagoreans were vegetarians, because of their belief that the souls of men passed into animals.

Redarum transitus. Wagons were not allowed to drive through the town before the tenth hour of the day, except loads of building material for public edifices.

mandrae. Mandra is originally a halting place, then a cattle pen, and finally the cattle themselves. It is here the objective genitive: "the curses hurled at the team." www.libtool.com.cn

Druso. The emperor Tib. Claudius Drusus was famed for his fondness for sleep. Cf. Suet. 8: quotiens post cibum obdormisceret, quod ei fere accidebat; Suet. 33: in iure dicendo obdormisceret vixque ab advocatis de industria vocem audentibus excitaretur.

obiter. Physical use of the adverb = in viā or per viam.

sportula . . . culina. The early custom of occasionally inviting clients to a regular dinner (cena recta) gradually gave place to that of presenting to each a portion of food, which being carried away in a small basket (sporta) received the name of sportula. For the sake of convenience, an equivalent in money was substituted, the usual amount being 100 quadrantes. In this passage portable ovens take the place of baskets, to keep the food warm.

Corbulo. Nero's famous general, Cn. Domitius Corbulo, was corpore ingens, verbis magnificus (Tac. Ann. xiii. 8).

saxa Ligustica. The quarries of Luna and Pisa furnished white marble (now called Carrara), used in sculpture, and stone of a bluish tint, which was used only for building purposes.

142. Strigibus. The strigil was a flesh scraper used after the vapor bath or the palaestra to remove moisture and impurities, and the oil after anointing.

novicius. "Being new to the business"; i.e. having never died before. A grim joke.

Porthmea. For this passage, see Vergil's description, pp. 78, 79. Beside the fare, costly articles were also laid in the grave with the bodies of the rich. Accounts of the discovery of such articles may be found in Marquardt, Privatleben der Römer, and in Lanciani, Ancient Rome.

patent vigiles fenestras. This may be punningly rendered in English, "as many as there are windows up." Cf. pervigiles popinae, Sat. viii. 158; vigiles lucernae, Hor. Carm. iii. 8, 14.

lampas. A candelabrum with many lights, originally carried before the emperor only.

Candelae. A wax or tallow light with adjustable wick.

143. vapulo. Neuter passive verb like fiō and veneo.

stari. Impersonal: "a halt to be made."

quaero. "Am I to look for you?"

Pomptina palus. The Pomptine Marshes on the coast of Latium, near Terracina, are formed by several rivers which spread over the plain instead of finding their way to the sea.

Gallinaria pinus. A fir forest near Cumae, a resort of bandits.

uno carcere. The Tullianum, or Mamertine Prison, built by Ancus Marcius. Carcer ad terrorem increscentis audaciae media urbe, imminens foro, aedificatur (Livy, i. 33, 8). It was originally a stone quarry called Lautumiae, from which issued a fine spring (tullius), the same now shown to visitors as a miraculous feature of St. Peter's prison. The modern and mediaeval name "Mamertine" came from a statue of Mars (Oscan Mamers) which formerly stood near it.

tunicas succingere. Only men wore such tunics, those of the women reaching to the ankle.

Caedere Silvano porcum. Cato, De Agric. 83, describing the sacrifice to Mars Silvanus, adds: eam rem divinam vel servus vel liber licebit faciat, mulier ad eam rem divinam ne adsit neve videat quo modo fiat.

quadrante lavari. Like the Cynic and Stoic philosophers; for even among men, only the poorest bathed in so inexpensive a manner.

quaedam non intellegat. Cf. Martial, ii. 90: sit non doctissima coniunx, Sit nox cum somno, sit sine lite dies.

Palaemonis artem. Q. Remmius Palaemon, the teacher of Quintilian, docuit Romae, ac principem locum inter grammaticos tenuit. His yearly income as a teacher amounted to 400,000 sesterces ($16,000).

sit mens sana in corpore sano. Cf. Seneca, Epist. 10, 4: roga bonam mentem, bonam valitudinem animi, deinde tunc corporis.

Sardanapali. The last king of the Assyrian Empire of Nineveh, passed his time in effeminacy and luxury, dressed in female attire and unseen by his subjects.

The paraphrase of the last few lines by Dr. Johnson in his Vanity of Human Wishes runs as follows:—

"Still raise for good the supplicating voice,
But leave to Heaven the measure and the choice.

Safe in his power whose eyes discern afar
 The secret ambush of a specious prayer ;
 Implore his aid, in his decisions rest,
 Secure whate'er he gives, he gives the best.
 Yet, when the sense of sacred presence fires,
 And strong devotion to the sky aspires,
 Pour forth thy fervors for a healthful mind,
 Obedient passions and a will resigned :
 For love, which scarce collective man can fill ;
 For patience, sovereign o'er transmuted ill ;
 For faith, that panting for a happier seat,
 Thinks death kind Nature's signal of retreat.
 These goods for man the laws of Heaven ordain,
 These goods he grants who grants the power to gain ;
 With these celestial Wisdom calms the mind,
 And makes the happiness she fails to find.

XXI. GAIUS PLINIUS CAECILIUS SECUNDUS (MINOR).

146. avunculi. Pliny the Elder. See p. 126.

Miseni. A town on the harbor formed by the promontory of the same name. The harbor was the principal station of the Roman fleet in the Tyrrhenian Sea. It was about 20 miles from Pompeii. All along the coast were many handsome villas of the Roman nobility.

147. Campaniae solitus. " Habitual to Campania."

posco librum Titi Livi. This is usually sneered at by the commentators as a bit of priggishness on Pliny's part ; but there is no particular priggishness in his telling of it, for he does not parade it as being necessarily an exhibition of courage. Possibly it was done in the spirit of the philosopher in the haunted house (p. 150) who writes while the ghost is clanking its chains.

ego intentus. Sc. resto.

excedere oppido visum. Sc. est. " It seemed best to leave the town."

148. effuso cursu. " Headlong flight."

descendere . . . operire. Historical infinitive.

Capreas. Now Capri ; a small island opposite Naples.

orare, hortari, iubere. Historical infinitives.

lymphati. Literally "bewitched by the nymphs" (lumpae).

150. donec de avunculo nuntius. Sc. veniret.

idolon. Gk. εἰδωλον. Latin names for a ghost are larva, imago, umbra, etc.

legit titulum. Advertisements of houses to let began among the Romans with the words EST LOCANDA, which form is retained by the modern Romans at the present time.

iubet sterni. Impersonal.

innuebatque digito. "And beckoned with its finger."

151. ceris. From cera "wax," used by Metonymy for the waxed pages of the tablets.

publice. "At the public expense." The tale has all the stage-properties of a modern ghost story. The old man beckoning and leading suggests the ghost in Washington Irving's story, Dolph Heyliger.

152. A letter addressed by Pliny while governor (propraetor) of the province Pontica to the Emperor Trajan. It gives the earliest information that we have from pagan sources, and is referred to by Tertullian, Eusebius, and St. Jerome.

domine. The word dominus originally meant a master in relation to a slave, like the Greek δεσπότης; hence it was not until the Empire had become autocratic that the Roman emperors ventured to allow themselves to be addressed by this title. It was applied, however, to persons in private life as a title of courtesy, exactly as is our English "Master," which has now assumed the form "Mister" on the analogy of its feminine "Mistress." In the Romance languages, and through the various low Latin varieties (domnus, domna, dominicella), it becomes the French dame (originally both masculine and feminine), demoiselle, Spanish don, doña, Portuguese dom, and the Old English Dan.

quia cives Romani essent. Who, as being Roman citizens, had the right of an appeal to Caesar, as in the case of St. Paul (Acts, xxv. and xxvi.).

libellus. "An accusation."

153. sacramento. The word sacramentum was originally applied to a military oath taken by the Roman soldiers when first enlisted, to be followed presently by the more formal oath, ius iurandum. In later usage, however, it is equivalent to ius iurandum, and denotes a solemn oath of allegiance and devotion. Hence the Christians applied it to the ceremony of the Lord's Supper as involving a renewed profession of allegiance to the faith.

cibum promiscuum tamen et innoxium. Pliny makes this remark, because the pagan Romans, misunderstanding the language used in the celebration of the Sacrament, had the notion that at the agapae, or love feasts, the Christians ate human flesh and drank human blood. This was only one of the monstrous stories circulated with regard to them. They were reported to be guilty of sacrilege, incendiarism, incest, and murder, and Tacitus ascribes to them odium humani generis. Many of these charges were spread by the Jews, with whom for a long time the Christians were regarded by the Romans as identical. Hence when Nero sought to find a class of people of whom he could make scape-goats after Rome had been partly burned, he found the Christians convenient for his purpose, and had them tortured, torn by dogs, and burnt alive in tunics of papyrus smeared with wax and pitch (tunica molestae).

hetaerias. Despotie governments always dread the formation of clubs and societies, because of the feeling that they may at some time be turned to political use and made the centers of sedition. Trajan had issued a special rescript forbidding such gatherings, and the weekly meetings of the Christians for worship appeared to be a violation of the order.

civitates. Here in its rare and generally late Latin sense of "cities." The remote country districts (pagi) retained the old Roman faith longest, and held out most stubbornly against Christianity; hence our word "pagan" (pagani). Trajan's reply to this letter directed Pliny to punish such Christians as might be brought before him, but not to be zealous in seeking them out, and to take no notice of anonymous accusations.

XXII. GAIUS.

154. dicis gratiā. The phrases dicis causā and dicis ergo in the same sense (= λόγῳ χάριν) also occur. Dicis, like vicis, is a genitive of which the nominative is not found.

res mancipi. The word mancipium (from manus + cipio) means "a taking by the hand"; res mancipi are things that are taken possession of by formal purchase and sale. The genitive is descriptive in its nature.

XXIII. WALL-INSRIPTIONS.

155. LABORA ASELLE QVOMODO EGO LABORAVI ET PRODERIT TIBI. A graffito from the walls of the Palatine, and probably drawn by some slave who had been made to do a turn at the mill (pistrinum) as a punishment (cf. Terence, Andria, i. 2, 28). "Toil on, little ass, as I have toiled, and much good may it do you!"

petat. The Romans had various games of ball (pila), the most popular being the triangular game, known as trigon, which resembled the English "hand ball." The following description of the Roman game is quoted (with a few slight modifications) from a recent English writer: —

“In this favorite game of the Romans, there were no sides, but each played for himself; still it was a legitimate game, played for winning and losing. The following description may, as it seems to us, best meet the accounts which we have: There were three players standing in the form of an equilateral triangle. Each player had one ball to start with, and played for his own score. He would wish both his fellow-players to miss their strokes, and drop the ball as often as possible. He might send his ball to either player (presumably there was some rule about sending it fairly within their reach), and he might do so either by catching the ball which came to him and throwing it, or by “fiving” it, so as either to strike it back to the sender (repercute) or sideways to the third player (expulsare). Obviously the most disastrous position would be receiving three balls nearly at the same time—if, for instance, his own ball is smartly struck back to him, and almost simultaneously the two others have been sent to him; obviously, also, his easiest position was to receive only one ball at a time with a fair interval before the next.”

The winner was probably the player who allowed his ball to drop the fewest times. In the game announced in this inscription Hedysius is probably a professional player (pilierepus) who is challenged by the other three. Two of them play with him at a time. Amianthus signs the notice at the end. See Becq de Fouquières, Les Jeux des Anciens, pp. 176-211.

156. Candida me docuit, etc. This is an adaptation of a line of Propertius which runs:—

Ad quem. “At whose house.” A pentameter line.

Quisquis amat valeat, etc. An hexameter line.

Ianuarias. Sc. Kalendas . . . rogo. “I ask the January Kalends for many happy years for us.” On the Kalends of January (the first), the Romans exchanged gifts with one another, so that the year might begin with a good omen. These gifts were called strenae, whence the modern French étrennes. Some of them have been preserved with the formulaic wish Anno novo faustum felix tibi (Orelli, Inscr. 4306). Poor persons exchanged copper coins, and the rich, gold. The Christian Fathers condemned the practice, as it was associated with the cult of the goddess of good luck, Strenia.

LABYRINTHVS HIC HABITAT. A rough drawing of a labyrinth found on a wall at Pompeii. The writer has, probably in jest, written LABYRINTHVS for the MINOTAVRVS which one would expect, remembering the story of Theseus.

157. Sermo est ille mihi. “That’s the talk, to punch holes through his hollow chest.”

Quoi . . . non. = nisi ei. Quoi is archaic and plebeian for cui.

The caricature of a soldier, given at the end of the page, was found on the wall of a barrack that had been the quarters of a Roman garrison. The name of Nonius Maximus was written above it, and the same name was repeated in other places accompanied by various insulting epithets. It is thought to be a caricature of a centurion who had made himself unpopular by his severity and strictness. The drawing was made in red chalk.

www.libtool.com.cn
XXIV. CORNELIUS TACITUS.

158. Agricola having led the Roman troops northward from Britain into Caledonia, the native tribes assailed a portion of his army, and were repulsed. They prepared, however, to renew the struggle, and when Agricola reached the Grampian Mountains, he found the Caledonian host drawn up under its chieftain Galgacus, ready for a decisive battle. Tacitus puts into the mouth of this warrior the spirited harangue given in our text. Such addresses made to an assemblage of troops were technically styled contiones.

necessitatem nostram. "Our desperate situation."

spem ac subsidium. Hendiadys = spem subsidii.

servientium litora. The shores of Gaul, which had been thoroughly subdued by the Romans.

159. terrarum ac libertatis. This sort of phrase is very characteristic of Tacitus, who is continually coupling concrete and abstract nouns, the effect being regarded as epigrammatic. At the present day, it is usually done for giving a comic effect, as "He was clothed in rage and a long ulster."

recessus ipse ac sinus fama. "Our remoteness and the obscurity of our name"; fama meaning the reports about them.

omne ignotum pro magnifico. A very famous phrase.

infestiores Romani. "And the still more hostile Romans."

ager atque annus. "Our yearly produce."

in frumentum. "Grain for tribute."

mancipia. = servi. Abstract for concrete.

familiā. The slave family, of course. See notes to p. 27.

ferocia. "High spirit."

Brigantes feminā duce. The allusion is to the great revolt of the Britons under the heroic queen of the Iceni, Boadicea (better Boudicea), in which the Roman colonies at Camulodunum (Colchester) and Londinium (London) were destroyed and 70,000 Romans and their allies were slain. See Tacitus, Annales, xiv. 31.

160. tegit. "Gives shelter."

aegra mancipia. In apposition with senum coloniae.

in hoc campo. "Rests on this field of battle." The spirit of the whole harangue strikingly resembles that of the immortal lines put by Burns into the mouth of the later Galgacus, Robert Bruce, and beginning "Scots wha hae wi' Wallace bled."

urbes. i.e. no large cities. They had a few small towns (Tac. Ann. i. 56).

ut fons placuit. Church and Brodribb note that the modern names of German towns frequently end in bach (brook), feld (field), holtz (grove), wald (wood), and born (spring), thus indicating their origin; e.g. Bergerbach, Elberfeld, Holzbach, Sponholtz, Tannwald, Paderborn.

161. caementorum. sc. caesorum lapidum.

tegarum. The French tuile, whence Tuileries.

materia. "Building material."

subterraneos specus aperire. When the Emperor Julian (the Apostate) was passing through the territory of the Alemanni, a deserter informed him that the enemy had concealed themselves in a great number of subterranean caves with intricate windings, out of which they might rush upon his troops at any moment. (Ammian. Marc. xvii. 1 foll.) Cf. Xenophon, Anab. iv. 25.

fallunt. "Escape notice" = λανθάνουσι.

Sagum. A Gallic word; the modern French chagrin, English shagreen, shag. In Latin it regularly means the soldier's heavy cloak, and is often used metaphorically as opposed to toga, the garb of the civilian or pékin.

maculis pellibusque. Hendiadys = maculatis pellibus.

brachia ac lacertos. Brachium is the forearm; lacertus is the arm from the elbow up. There is no word in Latin for the arm as a whole.

ad delicias muliebres. "For the finical tastes of women."

162. coniugales deos. These among the Romans were Iupiter, Iuno, Diana, Venus, Hymenaeus, etc.

denuntiant. "Solemnly declare."

sic vivendum. Sc. esse, depending on denuntiant.

spectaculorum. Tacitus here, as in so many other places, glances at the demoralization of Roman society, heightened by the contrast which it presents to the purity, simplicity, and virility of the Germans.

XXV. GAIUS SUETONIUS TRANQUILLUS.

163. damnosior. "More wasteful."

a Palatio Esquilias usque. i.e. usque ad Esquilias. The celebrated gardens of Maecenas were on the Esquiline (Hor. Sat. i. 8), and Nero now joined them to the imperial precinct. (Tacitus, Annales, xv. 39.)

transitorium. "Passage-way." So the Forum of Nerva at Rome was called Forum Transitorium, as being a passage-way between the Subura and the Forum Romanum.

incendio. Mentioned by Tacitus in the passage of the Annales, cited above.

cultu. "Adornment."

in quo . . . staret. Such that a Colossus 100 feet high could stand in it. Pliny (H. N. xxxiv. 7) gives the height of this Colossus as 120 feet, and says that it was the work of one Zenodorus. It represented the sun god.

rura insuper. Cf. Tacitus, Annales, xv. 42.

164. unionumque. The name unio was given to any large pearl (margarita) when set as a solitaire.

tabulis eburneis versatilibus. Panels of ivory that slipped aside and let flowers fall upon the guests.

fistulatis. So in the amphitheater, concealed pipes sprayed the spectators with saffron-water.

albulis. Water impregnated with sulphur was called albula aqua. Near Tibur (modern Tivoli) were a number of sulphur springs, known as Albulae, which made the place the Saratoga of the Romans. Of these several still remain, and are resorted to by invalids as of old. The modern name is Bagni di Tivoli.

gazeae. A word derived from the Persian through the Greek γάζα.

The palace of the Caesars, to which Nero added in so remarkable a manner, was begun by Augustus upon the site of the house formerly owned by the great orator Hortensius, on the Palatine Hill, — a quarter already the most fashionable in Rome. The palace erected by Augustus (a comparatively modest structure) was dedicated by him in 26 B.C. In the year 3 A.D., this was destroyed by fire. A public subscription, in which no person was allowed to contribute more than one denarius (about twenty cents), raised a great sum of money for the rebuilding of the palace, with the result that a much more magnificent structure was erected. To this Tiberius added a new wing, and Caligula so added to it as to fill with various edifices the whole space between the domus Tiberiana and the Forum. Nero's addition overlooked the valley in which the Colosseum was afterwards built. See the very interesting chapter on the subject in Lanciani's Ancient Rome, pp. 106-133; and Middleton's Remains of Ancient Rome, vol. i. pp. 158-219 (London, 1892).

in amphitheatro Tauri. A stone amphitheatre built in 30 B.C. by Statilius Taurus, a distinguished guard of Augustus.

in Septis. The Septa, (neuter plural) was a name used to designate a number of enclosures in the Campus Martius, in which the people were collected by tribes or centuries at the time of the elections (comitia) to vote. Each enclosure was originally called ovile (a pen or sheep-fold), but in imperial times the whole site was regarded as a single structure, and finished off in marble, surrounded by porticoes and elaborately decorated. Augustus used the place for wild beasts, shows, etc. (Suet. Aug. 43).

edidit. The technical term for giving a show; whence the person so giving it is styled editor.

missilia variarum rerum. The expression missilia rerum occurs again in Suet. Aug. 98 and Nero 11. See Peck's note on the former passage. Missilia is here to be regarded as a noun, and the expressions missilia rerum to be compared with the tabularum picturas of Aug. 75.

cum obsonio. Obsonium or opsonium (ὀψώνιον) is literally anything that is eaten with bread, either fish or flesh, but also applied to relishes and dainties, e.g. figs, olives, and even salt (Pliny, H. N. xxxii. 87 and xv. 82). The pure Latin word is pulmentarium. See Saalfeld, Küche und Keller in Alt-Rom (Berlin, 1883).

extra ordinem. Out of the regular order (cursus honorum) in which persons of senatorial rank were advanced from office to office.

Africanarum. Sc. ferarum. "African animals"; e.g. tigers, lions, panthers, buffaloes, etc. At some of these imperial venationes, an extraordinary number of wild animals were hunted and killed. Under Caligula, 400 bears were put to death in a single day; under Claudius, 300. Nero had 400 tigers fight with bulls and elephants. When the Colosseum was dedicated by Titus, 5000 animals perished to celebrate the event. Fierce beasts were frequently chained together, and thus rolled together in the bloody sand in a death struggle. See Magnin, Origines du Théâtre, pp. 445-453, and Lecky, Hist. of European Morals, vol. i. pp. 278-282.

Troiae decursione. The so-called ludus Troiae, which was an equestrian sham fight exhibited by boys of patrician families. See Vergil, Aeneid, v. 553-603.

chrysocollâ. Pliny (H. N. xxxiii. 5) says that Nero used to strew the track with green sand whenever he appeared himself as a charioteer of the "Green" faction (factio prasina).

Commisit et subitos. "He also matched improvised fighters"; i.e. a "scratch" band. In this sense, subitus is opposed to expertus. The word subitarius is also used.

e Gelotianā. Sc. domo. The domus Gelotiana was an addition to the imperial palace made by Caligula, who purchased a large and handsome house from one Gelotius, and made it a sort of training school and quarters for his jockeys, grooms, pages, etc. The house stood near the Circus, and through it the emperor could pass unobserved to his place among the Greens. Many graffiti have been discovered on the ruins which still remain of this building.

maenianis. A maenianum was a balcony which projected from the upper floor of a house or other building and overhung the street. The name is said to be derived from that of C. Maenius, censor B.C. 318 (Fest. s.h.v.).

166. aulicis. From aula (regia), the court.

εἰς κόλπανος ἕστω, etc. A quotation from Homer, Il. ii. 204, where it is put into the mouth of Odysseus.

167. simulacrum . . . iconicum. A statue of exactly the same proportions as the subject; a portrait statue. So, also, effigies iconica (Pliny, II. N. xxxiv. 4).

magisteria sacerdotii. "The chief places in the priesthood." Those who took precedence of their fellow priests were called magistri. These offices were probably held for life (perpetua), but temporarily (vicibus) under Caligula. It must be remembered that these apparently sacred offices were largely political in their nature, and were sought for the honor they conferred by men who had no religious belief whatever. Thus Iulius Caesar was pontifex maximus, though little better than an atheist himself.

generatim per singulos dies. i.e. flamingoes on one day, moor-fowls on the next, peacocks on the next, etc.

ceteros ordines. "Persons of other classes."

equitem. Generic singular = equites.

decimas. A word meaning the gifts bestowed upon the people (Cicero, De Officiis, ii. 17; Suet. Galba, 15). It probably gets its significance from the fact that in the early days of Rome, victors and persons in luck generally used to give a tenth part of their gains to Hercules. (Macrob. Sat. iii. 12; cf. Livy, v. 21).

paegniarios. From παγνιον, a plaything.

168. a calvo ad calvum. Literally "from baldhead to baldhead." Pre-

169. Atellanae. A species of native comedy usually acted by amateurs.

verbosum in historiā. Livy's history was in 142 books.

respondere. The technical term used of the official opinions on points of law given by the great juriconsults, and having the force of a judicial interpretation.

praeter eum. For praeter se. When the words of another are quoted in the oratio obliqua, the exact use of the pronoun is occasionally neglected. This is especially true of the later Latin writers. For instances, see Val. Max. v. 1, 3 ; percontabatur an ea quae ad aures eius pervenerant dixissent ; and Eutrop. vii. 11 ; cum tanti se non esse dixisset ut propter eum civile bellum commoveretur. A second instance in Suetonius is probably to be found in Nero, 31, but the reading there is disputed.

XXVI. PUBLIUS AELIUS HADRIANUS.

170. Ego nolo Caesar esse. The verse is the popular trochaic dimeter based upon accent and not upon syllabic quantity. Thus, égo, láti-, scýthi-, culi- are to be regarded as trochees, though properly they are pyrrhics, √ ∪.

popinas. An Oscan form, the p representing the Latin q. Hence, popina would have been in a pure Latin form coquina (coquo). The word meant properly “ cook shop,” or “ eating house,” where ready cooked food was sold, and is hence distinguished from caupona, a place devoted to the sale of drinks ; but practically there was little difference, so that popino means a debauchee. See Macrobius, Sat. vii. 14.

Animula, blandula, vagula. This beautiful verse has always been the despair of translators. The latest attempt at rendering it into metrical English is that contained in Cottabos for 1894. The nearest approach to the spirit and grace of the original is found in Pope's famous paraphrase, beginning : — “ Vital spark of heavenly flame,

Quit, oh quit this mortal frame.
Trembling, hoping, lingering, sighing, O the pain, the bliss of dying ! ”

rigida. “ Unyielding.” In this short verse of five lines, there are three ἀπαξ λεγόμενα (vagula, blandula, nudula), while pallidula occurs in only one other place.

XXVII. TESTAMENTUM PORCELLI.

172. In the MSS., the testamentum has prefixed to it the words INCIPIT TESTAMENTUM PORCELLI.

M. Grunnius Corocotta. Grunnius is from grunnio, "to grunt"; Corocotta suggests χοῖρος; but editors cite Porphyrius, who says that in India the hyena is called by the natives κοροκόττα. Now the word hyena (ὑαίνα) is properly the feminine form of ὕς, "a hog," given to the hyena because of his bristling, hog-like mane. Hence a sort of connection is established between the name corocotta and a pig. Several ancient writers (e.g. Ælian and Pliny) use the word of an Indian or African animal.

Magirus. Gk. μάγειρος, meaning both "a cook" and "a butcher"; both meanings here uniting, unfortunately for M. Grunnius.

solivertiator. Haupt regards this word as = fugitivus, because of the following words: fugitive porcelle; but we should in this case have a very pointless tautology. For solum vertere = fugere, see Cic. Pro Caec. 100; Petron. 81; and Juv. xi. 49. The word is a ἄπαξ λεγόμενον.

puer. The attendant slave, — a kitchen helper.

ut hunc porcellum faciam cruentum. The true nursery-tale way of putting it, — "so that I can make this little pig all bloody." A delightfully horrible sentence, and well adapted to give the small Roman a delicious shiver.

sub die XVI Kal. Lucerninas. All editors have given up this expression in despair, as the Kalendae Lucerninae are nowhere else named. It is possibly a joke to denote the time of the year just preceding the season when the days begin to grow short and the evenings long, — "the month when we begin to use candle light."

Clibanato et Piperato. From clibanus (κλίβανος), an earthen or iron pot (Apic. vii. 5); and piper, pepper.

clamavit ad se. An archaic use of the verb, retained in the plebeian Latin. It has here the sense simply of vocare, as in the Romance forms of the same verb chiamare, llamar, chamar. Haupt cites Martial, i. 49; veniet tibi conviva clamatus, i.e. vocatus.

dimitteret. Here in its legal sense "renounce," "bequeath"; cf. line 29.

173. Verrino Lardino. From verres, a boar, and lardum, bacon.

do lego dari. Legal amplification. "I give and bequeath"; cf. dabo donabo below.

Veturinae. Probably formed from vetus like the ordinary proper name Veturius.

Laconicae siliginis. This wheat is mentioned in Pliny, H. N. xviii. 10.

Quirrinae. Possibly formed to suggest χοῖρος (as if Χοιρίνη), as Salmasius suggested ; but better from quirrito, "to queek" (see p. 16, line 55, of the poem on the nightingale). Hence we have written it Quirrinae rather than Quirinae, which last is preferred by Haupt.

dabo donabo. Words continually coupled together usually omit the connective et ; cf. comminus eminus, sursum deorsum, prima postrema, huc illuc, etc.

rixoribus. Probably the same as rixatoribus, "brawlers." One MS. does, in fact, read here rixatoribus.

capitnam. A word found only here and of unknown meaning. Possibly it is a plebeian equivalent for caput in the sense of cerebrum, so often used by the Latin writers as the seat of wrath, hot temper, etc. ; cf. Horace, Sat. i. 5, 21, given on p. 90, cerebrosus prosilit unus ; and Sat. i. 9, 11, O te, Bolane, cerebri felicem.

surdīs auriculas. Because a pig's sense of hearing is very keen.

isiciariis. From ισκίων, a dish of collops ; whence also the Latin insicia and insicium, "force meat." The form insiciarius is elsewhere used.

ungulas. Here to be rendered "claws" for comic effect ; cf. Plaut. Pseud. iii. 2, 63.

nec nominando coco. "The cook who deserves no mention" ; "the unspeakable cook."

de Tebeste usque ad Tergeste. "From Dan to Beersheba." Apparently a proverbial expression. Tebeste or Theveste was probably a city of Numidia (Orelli, Inscript. 3575). Tergeste is the modern Trieste.

liget collo de reste. i.e. liget reste ex collo. The same construction with de is found below in line 40 : bene condiatis de bonis condimentis, and appears to have been common in the language of cookery ; cf. Apicius, iv. 2, iv. 5, vii. 2, viii. 8 (Haupt).

ex litteris. A use of ex, also common in Apicius, and presumably formulaic in Roman cook books ; cf. Apicius, iii. 15 : apium coques ex aqua nitrata ; id. iv. 1, iv. 2, v. 1, vii. 4, and often.

in medio testamento. Perhaps we should read here in meo testamento with our MS.

Cyminatus. From cyma, a young cabbage.

Lucanicus. From lucanica, a kind of sausage meat much liked by the Lucanians; cf. Cicero, Ad Fam. ix. 16: solebam antea delectari oleis et lucanicis tuis; Martial, xiii. 35. Its composition is given by Apicius, ii. 4.

Tergillus. From tergilla, a rind of pork; a word found only in Apicius, iv. 3, and the Gloss. Philox.

Celsinus. A name that suggests the dish called by Apicius (viii. 7) porcellus Celsinianus.

Nuptialicus. The significance of the name is not clear. Haupt suggests that it refers to some preparation of pork used at wedding feasts (nuptiae), pork being, next to fish, the dish most favored by the Romans. Salmasius conjectures Botulicus from botulus.

signavit. These seven pigs all sign the will as witnesses, though in line 2, the pig who makes the will says that he is unable to write a will with his own hand, and so has to dictate it, — a slight inconsistency on the part of the author.

Explicit. A word found in later Latin at the end of books, probably for explicitus (liber est), but here for explicitum (testamentum est); cf. Mart. xi. 107, 1.

feliciter. A word of good omen placed at the end of books and other writings. St. Jerome says (Epist. 28, 4): Solemus completis opusculis ad distinctionem rei alterius sequentis, medium interponere EXPLICIT aut FELICITER aut aliquid istius modi.

It is to be noted that though the general form of a Roman will is observed in the Testamentum, and although the seven witnesses carefully sign, such a will as this would be invalid as no heir (heres) is mentioned in it, there being only legatees (legatarii). Hence the burlesque is probably not the work of a lawyer.

XXVIII. AULUS GELLIUS.

foris. Abl. of place; foras, acc. of direction.

saturā Menippeā. Menippus was a Cynic philosopher who lived about 60 B.C. The works embodying his teaching were cast in satirical form. They are all lost, but some fragments remain of Varro's Saturae, written in imitation of him.

minimo. The special names of the fingers are: pollex, thumb; index, or

pergere ac pervenire. Gellius is extremely fond of using pairs of words, generally with alliteration, which together mean little, if any more, than either would mean alone. The fondness for this usage is still more strongly developed in modern German, and may also be illustrated from prayer-book English.

177. Democriti. A celebrated philosopher, born at Abdera, in Thrace, about 460 B.C., who, with Leucippus, was the founder of the Atomic Theory. His writings covered a wide range of mathematics, grammar, music, and philosophy.

178. Archytas. A distinguished philosopher of the Pythagorean school, a contemporary of Plato. He was a practical mechanic as well as a theoretical mathematician. His wooden flying dove was one of the wonders of antiquity.

Favorinus. A philosopher of Arles who lived during Hadrian's reign.

Milo Crotoniensis. A famous athlete who was victor twelve times in the Olympian and Pythian games. He is mentioned by Herodotus, iii. 137.

Olympiade. The period of four years between the Olympian Games. As the latter were held in July, any year B.C. belongs half to one year and half to the next of an Olympiad. The record of victors at Olympus began in 776 B.C. but this system of reckoning was apparently first systematically adopted by Alexandrian writers in the third century B.C.

Arion. A celebrated Greek bard and musician of Methymna, in Lesbos, who spent most of his life at the court of Periander. Of his life, little is known beyond the story here given. A fragment of a hymn ascribed to him, but really belonging to a later period, is contained in Bergk's Poetae Lyrici Graeci, p. 566.

179. Periander. Tyrant of Corinth, 625 to 585 B.C.; commonly reckoned among the seven sages of Greece. He was a patron of literature and art, but harsh in his rule and cruel in his private life.

orthium. The carmen orthium (νόμος ὀρθίος) was a sort of dithyrambic ode, without, however, any antistrophe or refrain, usually sung to the lyre or flute, and pitched in a very high key. The tune seems to have been a very familiar one among the Greeks, as may be inferred from the passage in the Knights of Aristophanes, 1279, with which compare Herodotus, i. 24, where we first find it mentioned, and Aristotle, Probl. 19, 37.

XXIX. CHRISTIAN HYMNS.

182. Veni, redemptor gentium. This hymn has been paraphrased by J. Frank in one of the noblest German hymns, "Komm, Heidenheiland, Lösegeld."

Geminae gigas substantiae. The "giants" of Genesis, vi. 4, were in legend of two natures or substances, being sons of the angels who came down and united with the "daughters of men." "In the double substance of the giants thus born of heaven and earth, Ambrose sees a reference to Him who in like manner was of twofold nature, divine and human" (Trench).

Egressus eius, etc. Cf. the Nineteenth Psalm.

183. Dies irae. This magnificent hymn, of which the best known verses are given in our text, is said to have first appeared in a missal made at Venice about 1250, and is one of the five "Sequences" of the Roman Church, having its place in the Missa in Commemoratione Omnium Fidelium Defunctorum. Its proper title is De Novissimo Iudicio, "On the Last Judgment." The text established by the Council of Trent is slightly different from that of the older missals, and a still different version appears on a marble tablet of uncertain date in a church of the Franciscan Order at Mantua. On the probable authorship of the hymn, see Mohnike, Hymnologische Forschungen, vol. i. pp. 1-24.

No more impressive specimen of ecclesiastical Latinity exists. Its stupendous theme finds an apt expression in the stately language, and in the solemnity of the verse with its triple beat, which, as Guericke says, makes the innermost soul tremble as with three blows of a hammer. In modern literature, it plays an important part, being introduced, for instance, with thrilling effect by Goethe in his Faust; and in music it has received interpretations from the genius of Palestrina, Haydn, Cherubini, and Mozart. Though it defies translation, it has been many times rendered into English, the versions of Crashaw, Macaulay, Lord Lindsay, Roscommon, Williams, Drummond, and in our own country of the late General Dix, being the best. Perhaps the most successful representation in English of the spirit of the original is found in the paraphrase of a portion of it by Sir Walter Scott, at the end of the Lay of the Last Minstrel, beginning:

"That day of wrath, that dreadful day,
When heaven and earth shall pass away,
What power shall be the sinner's stay?"

In German there are versions by Herder, Fichte, and Schlegel, among others. See Fifty Versions of the Dies Irae in the Dublin Review for 1882.

Teste David cum Sibyllā. Some read here teste Petro, referring to 2 Peter iii. 7-11, while others, who object to the insertion of a heathen Sibyl into a Christian hymn, have altered the whole line to Crucis expandens vexilla (Matt. xxiv. 30). But the thought of the line is evidently "both Jew and pagan bearing witness." For the witness of David, cf. Psalms xcvi. 13; xcvi. 3; xi. 6; as for the heathen testimony, cf. Vergil, Ecl. iv. See also Lactantius, Inst. Div. vii. 16-24.

185. Ut iucundas cervus undas. A reminiscence of the beautiful psalm beginning, "Like as the hart desireth the water brooks, so longeth my soul after thee, O God."
