821. (1907.) It is not such misconduct of a juror as will call for a reversal of the case for a juror to state to his fellow jurors, during their deliberations upon the verdict, that he knew about the facts and had personal knowledge of the facts before he was selected as a juror, where he does not disclose to his fellow jurors the facts that were within his personal knowledge. Fedders v. State, 79 Neb. 651 (113 N. W. 127).

Presence of bailiff in jury room.

822. (1888.) Presence of the bailiff in the jury room in a criminal case while the jury are deliberating, will vitiate verdict. Gandy v. State, 24 Neb. 716 (40 N. W. 302).

823. (1901.) An officer who is a material witness in a case is guilty of prejudicial misconduct when he remains in the jury room during their deliberations on their verdict. Cooney v. State, 61 Neb. 342 (85 N. W. 281).

Taking papers or articles to jury room.

824. (1888.) Where one of the jurors takes a copy of the Compiled Statutes into the jury room and reads therefrom the sections bearing on the crime charged, it is misconduct which will vitiate the verdict. Harris v. State, 24 Neb. 803 (40 N. W. 317).

825. (1902.) The modern practice, both in civil and criminal cases, is to send to the jury room all instruments, articles and documents, except depositions, which have been received in evidence, and which will, in the opinion of the trial judge, aid the jury in their deliberations. Russell v. State, 66 Neb. 497 (92 N. W. 751).

Reading minutes of testimony.

826. (1888.) On a trial for felony, the jury, after having been sent out to consider of their verdict, returned into court, announced that they had not been able to agree, and requested to have the testimony of the principal witness for the prosecution read to them from the reporter's notes, which being agreed to in open court by the attorneys on either side, was accordingly done. Held, That while the practice would not be encouraged, a conviction would not be reversed for that cause. Jamison v. State, 25 Neb. 185 (41 N. W. 138).

827. (1894.) On a trial for felony, the jury, after having been sent out to consider of their verdict, returned into court and requested to have the testimony of two of the witnesses for the prosecution read to them. By direction of the trial judge, the court reporter read from his notes the evidence requested by the jury. The prisoner was present in court in charge of the sheriff; his counsel was not present and had no notice of the transaction. Held, Reversible error. Bartell v. State, 40 Neb. 232 (58 N. W. 716).

Consideration of irrelevant matters.

828. (1902.) The discussion by the jury of irrelevant matters upon which counsel for defendant based an appeal for acquittal, does not constitute misconduct within the meaning of section 490, criminal code. Russell v. State, 66 Neb. 497 (92 N. W. 751).

Application of personal knowledge of juror.

829. (1893.) A juror is not permitted to state to fellow jurors, while considering verdict, facts within his personal knowledge; but should make the same known during the trial and testify as a witness. Richards v. State, 36 Neb. 17 (53 N. W. 1027).

Mistake of jurors.

830. (1881.) The prisoner was indicted and convicted of the crime of horse-stealing. A motion was made to set aside the verdict and for a new trial, one of the grounds being the mistake of certain of the jurors, as shown by their affidavit, which was in substance that they supposed the offense to amount only to petit larceny if the value of the animal stolen were returned by them as being less than thirty-five dollars; that "they did not intend to convict the said defendant of a felony, but that they intended to convict him of petit larceny only," and that they "were of the opinion that the said defendant was not guilty of a greater crime than petit larceny." Held, that this mistake of the jurors furnished no ground for setting the verdict aside since the jury have nothing to do with fixing the punishment. Wells v. State, 11 Neb. 409 (9 N. W. 552).

Urging or coercing verdict.

831. (1902.) The ancient practice of keeping the jury out while deliberating, without food, drink, fire, light or opportunity for sleep, was never in vogue in this state. The rule is that a verdict cannot stand which is the result of any species of coercion. Russell v. State, 66 Neb. 497 (92 N. W. 751; 60 L. R. A. 424).

832. (1902.) The length of time a jury shall be kept together in consultation, is a matter over which the trial court has a large discretionary power; but the verdict must in every case represent intellectual conviction and not mere lack of physical endurance. Russell v. State, 66 Neb. 497; (92 N. W. 751; 60 L. R. A. 424).

833. (1902.) The fact that a jury has been kept together an unusually long time without reasonable opportunity for sleep, will not violate the verdict if it is shown that the agreement was deliberate and voluntary and not due to fatigue or exhaustion. Russell v. State, 66 Neb. 497 (92 N. W. 751).

834. (1903.) The time which jurors shall be kept together before they are finally discharged because of their inability to agree on a verdict rests largely in the discretion of the trial court, but this is a legal discretion, and if legal rules and principles governing are transgressed, the action cannot be upheld. Jahnke v. State, 68 Neb. 154 (94 N. W. 158).

835. (1903.) Where the jury, after being kept together for an unusual length of time, have returned a verdict of guilty, and there is nothing in the record inconsistent with the view that it was agreed to voluntarily by all the jurors solely from a consideration of the evidence and the instructions of the court unaffected by anything in the nature of coercion, the verdict will not be disturbed. Jahnke v. State, 68 Neb. 154 (94 N. W. 158).

835*a*. (1907.) The case was submitted to the jury on Friday. The next day it was announced that there was a chance for an agreement. The judge then told the jury that he would soon leave and would not be back until Monday evening, and authorized them to separate only in the event they reached a verdict Monday evening. Three hours later, and before the adjournment of the court, the jury returned its verdict. Held, That the verdict should not be set aside. Gebhardt v. State, 80 Neb. 363 (114 N. W. 290).

Discharge.

836. (1885.) Where a jury in a criminal case is discharged for any of the causes mentioned in section 485 of the criminal code, the record must show the necessity for such discharge. State v. Schuchardt, 18 Neb. 454 (25 N. W. 722).

837. (1885.) The authority of a judge of the district court in the trial of a criminal case to discharge the jury in the event of disagreement, without the consent of the prisoner, can only be exercised after the jury have been in consultation for so long a time that there is no reasonable probability that they will agree. State v. Shuchardt, 18 Neb. 454 (25 N. W. 722).

838. (1885.) Where a cause was submitted to the jury at 7 o'clock P. M. and the jury at 6 A. M. next day reported to the judge that they were unable to agree, and were discharged by him without the consent of the prisoner, or notice to him or his attorney, held, that the discharge of the jury was unauthorized, and the prisoner was entitled to be released. State v. Shuchardt, 18 Neb. 454 (25 N. W. 722).

J. Verdict.

Conviction of lesser degree than that charged, see Indictment and Information, §§ 133-142.

Returning verdict to disagree as contempt, see Contempt, § 13.

Finding of value of stolen property, see Larceny, §§ 127-135.

Necessity in general.

839. (1892.) While in a civil action the failure of the court to find the facts upon which the judgment is predicated is ground of error, but does not render the judgment void, yet in a criminal prosecution, where the accused has pleaded "not guilty," there must be a finding or verdict of guilty to sustain a sentence. Atwood v. Atwater, 34 Neb. 402 (51 N. W. 1073).

Statement of inability to agree.

840. (1880.) A jury should not be permitted to return, in place of a verdict, a statement that they had agreed to disagree, and if they do so they are liable to fine and imprisonment for contempt. Greene v. State, 10 Neb. 102 (4 N. W. 422).

Rendition and reception.

841. (1880.) The verdict must be affirmed in open court, and where the jury return during an adjournment, and their verdict is received and they are discharged, it is a privy verdict and of no force or effect. Longfellow v. State, 10 Neb. 105 (4 N. W. 420).

Signature.

842. (1878.) The foreman of the jury not having affixed his official character to his signature when the verdict was brought into court, it was not error to permit him to do so in open court and in the presence of the jury before they were discharged. Clough v. State, 7 Neb. 320.

843. (1905.) If the record shows that T. Blankenbeckler was a member of the jury, and the verdict is signed "T. P. Blankenbeckler, Foreman," it will be presumed that the person so signing was the same person designated as T. Blankenbeckler in impaneling the jury. Keeler v. State, 73 Neb. 441 (103 N. W. 64).

Sufficiency in general.

844. (1877.) A verdict in these words; "We, the jury, selected, impaneled and sworn in the above entitled cause, do find the defendant, William M. Preuit, guilty of murder in the first degree," is sufficient, without adding "in manner and form," etc. Preuit v. People, 5 Neb. 377.

845. (1899.) A verdict omitting a finding as to an essential element of the crime charged will not support a sentence, and a judgment rendered on such a verdict is void. Holmes v. State, 58 Neb. 297 (78 N. W. 641).

846. (1905.) Verdicts in criminal cases should be certain and import a definite meaning free from ambiguity. If the meaning of the verdict in the light of the whole record is clear, beyond any reasonable doubt, it is sufficient. Keeler v. State, 73 Neb. 441 (103 N. W. 64).

846*a*. (1907.) Where the state in a criminal prosecution elects to proceed upon one of several counts contained in the information, and by the instructions of the court the jury are told, in effect, that their verdict must respond to the charge contained in that count, a verdict of guilty, as charged in the information, is sufficient. Bridges v. State, 80 Neb. 91 (113 N. W. 1048).

Designation of parties.

847. (1877.) A verdict must designate the defendant as the guilty party. Williams v. State, 6 Neb. 334.

Assessment of punishment.

848. (1874.) Provisions of the criminal code of 1866, that the jury, in all cases where the punishment shall be by confinement in the penitentiary, shall fix the term of imprisonment, are not affected by the enactment of the criminal code of 1873, where an offense is committed and an indictment laid under the former code. Caw v. State, 3 Neb. 357.

Several counts.

849. (1876.) Upon the trial of an indictment two counts for larceny and two counts for receiving stolen property the jury returned a verdict of guilty on the larceny counts, and not guilty on the others, and also found "the property described in the indictment to be of the value of one hundred and fifteen dollars." Held, In the absence of any evidence upon the counts for receiving stolen property, that the valuation would apply on the property mentioned in the larceny counts. Thompson v. State, 4 Neb. 524.

850. (1886.) Where distinct offenses are charged in separate counts of an indictment, the jury must either return a general verdict of not guilty or respond to each charge in their finding. Casey v. State, 20 Neb. 138 (29 N. W. 264). [Overruled. Ford v. State, 79 Neb. 309, 112 N. W. 606.]

851. (1892.) A verdict of conviction under one of two counts, each charging a separate offense, and of acquittal under the other, is not reversible, though the evidence would have warranted a conviction under both. Weinecke v. State, 34 Neb. 14 (51 N. W. 307).

852. (1895.) A verdict of guilty, responsive separately to each of two counts of an information, both counts charging one crime, should be treated, in entering judgment, as though both elements of the crime had been embraced in a single count. Griffen v. State, 46 Neb. 282 (64 N. W. 966).

853. (1897.) A general verdict of guilty against a defendant on an indictment consisting of two or more counts which charge a single offense, is sufficient without specifying the count on which the jury find him guilty. Hurlburt v. State, 52 Neb. 428 (72 N. W. 471).

854. (1907.) Where several counts are included in the same information, a conviction on one count may be sustained, although the jury ignore the others, and a judgment upon one of several counts, with no verdict as to the others, operates as an acquittal on the other counts. Ford v. State, 79 Neb. 309 (112 N. W. 606).

Motion to quash.

855. (1894.) Filing a motion to quash a verdict more than three days after rendition thereof is equivalant to amending a motion for a new trial at that time, which cannot be done. Willis v. State, 43 Neb. 102 (61 N. W. 254).

XIII. MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL, AND IN ARREST.

Necessity of motion for new trial in habeas corpus, see Habeas Corpus, §§ 53-55.

Necessity of motion to present question for review, see post, §§ 977-988.

Jurisdiction to grant new trial.

856. (1889.) The supreme court has no jurisdiction as a court of equity, in an action instituted originally before it, to vacate a judgment and grant a new trial in a criminal prosecution. Such jurisdiction is not conferred by section 2 of article VI of the constitution, which gives the supreme court original jurisdiction in "civil cases in which the state shall be a party," said clauses referring only to civil actions, distinguished from criminal causes. Paulson v. State, 25 Neb. 344 (41 N. W. 249).

857. (1893.) The supreme court has no original jurisdiction or authority to vacate a judgment and grant a new trial in a cause tried and determined in a district court. The jurisdiction of the supreme court to grant a new trial in such case is appellate only. Vincent v. State, 37 Neb. 672 (56 N. W. 320).

858. (1897.) A judge of the district court, within his own judicial district, has jurisdiction to and may hear and determine a motion for new trial in a case wherein the judge of another district presided during the trial, but, before the hearing of the motion for new trial, has ceased to preside. Lauder v. State, 50 Neb. 140 (69 N. W. 776).

859. (1904.) A court of equity will not interfere for the purpose of granting a new trial in a criminal case on the ground of newly discovered evidence. Hubbard v. State, 72 Neb. 62 (100 N. W. 153).

Power to grant in general.

860. (1876.) At common law courts had no power to grant new trials in cases of felony, and it was held that they had no power to revise or correct their judgments in such cases. Consequently if the sentence of a prisoner was so defective as to invalidate the judgment, he was discharged. But this doctrine is now overruled. Dodge v. State, 4 Neb. 220.

861. (1904.) The authority and jurisdiction of the district courts to grant new trials in criminal cases are derived from the statute, to which resort must be had in determining the extent of their powers regarding the subject. Hubbard v. State, 72 Neb. 62 (100 N. W. 153).

Discretion of court.

862. (1878.) The granting of a new trial in a criminal case is within the exclusive discretion of the trial court; and if that court, on application duly made, refuse to act upon it, it will be compelled to do so, unless such action could advantage the prisoner only by overriding a well established rule of criminal procedure. Clough v. State, 7 Neb. 351.

www.libtool.com.cn

Disqualification of juror.

863. (1878.) Before a motion for a new trial can be properly granted on the ground of a previous expression of opinion by a juror, unfavorable to the accused, it must appear by the affidavits of both the prisoner and his counsel that neither of them had any knowledge before the verdict was rendered of the expression of such opinion. Clough v. State, 7 Neb. 320.

864. (1894.) Ordinarily, the discretion of the trial judge in overruling a motion for a new trial will not be disturbed when the sole grounds for said motion are admissions of a juror as to his knowledge of the character of the accused, when such admissions have no reference to the facts tried, especially when upon his voir dire examination such juror had answered that he had no bias or prejudice which would prevent impartial action on his part. Lamb v. State, 41 Neb. 356 (59 N. W. 895).

Rulings on plea in abatement.

865. (1883.) The ruling of the court on a plea in abatement is not ground for a motion for a new trial. Bohanan v. State, 15 Neb. 209 (18 N. W. 129).

Absence of witness.

866. (1897.) A new trial should not be allowed on account of the absence of a witness who, on a subsequent day of the trial, attends and testifies for the complaining party. Morgan v. State, 51 Neb. 672 (71 N. W. 788).

Misconduct of counsel.

867. (1894.) It is the duty of the presiding judge, whether so requested or not, to protect the court by an enforcement of the rules essential to an orderly and impartial administration of the law; and should an attorney persist in attempting to influence the jury by reference to facts not in evidence, or appeals to prejudice unwarranted by the proofs, the court should not hesitate, on motion, to set aside a verdict in his favor, although no objection may have been interposed when the offense was committed. Hill v. State, 42 Neb. 503 (60 N. W. 916).

Newly discovered evidence.

868. (1879.) It is a general rule, applicable in capital as well as in other cases, that a new trial will not be granted on the ground of newly discovered evidence where such evidence would be cumulative merely. St. Louis v. State, 8 Neb. 405.

869. (1879.) In an application for a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence the statute expressly requires the applicant to show that the newly discovered evidence could not with reasonable diligence have been discovered and produced at the trial. St. Louis v. State, 8 Neb. 405; (1897) Mills v. State, 53 Neb. 263 (73 N. W. 761); (1905) Turley v. State, 74 Neb. 471 (104 N. W. 934).

870. (1882.) A new trial will not be granted on the ground of newly discovered evidence, when such evidence, if produced, could have no greater effect than to discredit a party as a witness in his own behalf; or discredit some of the witnesses on the opposite side. Ogden v. State, 13 Neb. 436 (14 N. W. 165).

871. (1886.) Newly discovered evidence of distinct and independent facts of a different character, though it may tend to establish the same ground of defense, is not cumulative within the rule. Casey v. State, 20 Neb. 138 (29 N. W. 264).

872. (1893.) A motion for a new trial should be granted on the ground of newly discovered evidence tending to impeach a witness by showing declarations contradicting his testimony, where such evidence is of so controlling a character that it would probably change the verdict. Bailey v. State, 36 Neb. 808 (55 N. W. 241).

873. (1893.) In a prosecution for adultery the only evidence of defendant's marriage was that of the complaining witness, the woman alleged to be defendant's wife. The marriage relied upon was by words of consent without the presence of a solemnizing officer or of witnesses. A new trial was asked on the grounds of newly discovered evidence, the affidavits removing every question of negligence in procuring the evidence. The newly discovered evidence alleged consisted of the declaration of the complaining witness contradicting her testimony as to the marriage. Held, That under these circumstances the motion should have been sustained. Bailey v. State, 36 Neb. 808 (55 N. W. 241).

874. (1897.) The denial of a motion for a new trial upon the ground of newly discovered evidence will not be held erroneous when it appears that the newly discovered evidence is cumulative and would not probably change the result already reached. Davis v. State, 51 Neb. 301 (70 N. W. 984).

875. (1898.) A new trial should not be granted a party on the ground of newly discovered evidence, unless he makes it appear that the newly discovered evidence is material for him, and that he could not by the exercise of reasonable diligence have discovered and produced it at the trial. Cunningham v. State, 56 Neb. 691 (77 N. W. 60).

876. (1904.) The provisions of sections 490-492 of the criminal code, regarding the granting of new trials in criminal cases on the ground of newly discovered evidence, are the exclusive source of power of the district court to grant such new trials. Hubbard v. State, 72 Neb. 62 (100 N. W. 153).

877. (1904.) In capital cases a new trial should not be allowed on account of newly discovered evidence unless its introduction on the trial might have been beneficial to the defendant, and might have led to a different result. Lillie v. State, 72 Neb. 228 (100 N. W. 316.)

877*a*. (1907.) Newly discovered evidence which is doubtful in its character, and is merely cumulative, is not a sufficient ground for a new trial. Clements v. State, 80 Neb. 313 (114 N. W. 271).

Application for new trial.

878. (1876.) In criminal, as well as in civil cases, all the reasons known to exist for setting aside the verdict, and granting a new trial, should be set forth in the motion therefor. Dodge v. State, 4 Neb. 220.

879. (1892.) Under section 491 of the criminal code, as amended in 1881, in assigning the grounds for a new trial it is sufficient to assign the same in the language of the statute and without further or other particularity. McNamee v. State, 34 Neb. 288 (51 N. W. 821).

——— Time for making.

880. (1886.) The grounds upon which a new trial may be granted in a criminal case are prescribed by statute and the motion therefor must be filed at the term at which the verdict is rendered, and, except for newly discovered evidence, within three days after the verdict was rendered, unless unavoidably prevented. Bradshaw v. State, 19 Neb. 644 (28 N. W. 323); (1887) Ex parte Holmes, 21 Neb. 324 (32 N. W. 69); (1891) Davis v. State, 31 Neb. 240 (47 N. W. 851).

881. (1886.) A motion for a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence, in a criminal case, filed more than two years after judgment was rendered was properly overruled aed dismissed. Bradshaw v. State, 19 Neb. 644 (28 N. W. 323).

882. (1887.) The filing of a motion for a new trial at a term of the district court subsequent to the term at which a defendant was tried and convicted, and six months after he had been imprisoned in the penitentiary for the purpose of serving out his sentence, would confer no authority upon such district court to set aside the verdict and judgment and grant a new trial. And in such case, where the motion was sustained and a new trial granted, the order being void, the warden of the penitentiary would have no authority to surrender the prisoner to the sheriff of the county in which such conviction was had. Ex parte Holmes, 21 Neb. 324 (32 N. W. 69).

883. (1904.) The provisions of section 318 of the code, authorizing the granting of new trials in civil actions at a subsequent term to that at which the judgment was rendered, on the ground of newly discovered evidence, are not applicable to the granting of new trials in criminal cases. Hubbard v. State, 72 Neb. 62 (100 N. W. 153).

884. (1904.) The district court possesses no inherent or common law power to grant new trials in criminal cases, on the ground of newly discovered evidence, at a subsequent term to that at which a verdict of guilty was found. Hubbard v. State, 72 Neb. 62 (100 N. W. 153).

——— Affidavits.

885. (1880.) On the hearing of a motion for a new trial one of the attorneys for the accused made an affidavit that the verdict was received by the judge during an adjournment of the court, which was not denied. The contents of the affidavit were stated to the court, and the affidavit itself handed to the district attorney for examination, but it was not filed until after the hearing. Held, the objection, if any, must be made to its introduction as evidence; and if not so made is waived. Longfellow v. State, 10 Neb. 105 (4 N. W. 420).

——— Statements, affidavits and testimony of jurors.

886. (1900.) The affidavit of jurors relating to the arguments or statements made by them while deliberating upon their verdict may not be received to impeach the verdict. Welsh v. State, 60 Neb. 101 (82 N. W. 368).

887. (1901.) The verdict of a jury cannot be impeached by one of the jurors on the ground that he misunderstood the evidence of one of the witnesses. Coil v. State, 62 Neb. 15 (86 N. W. 925).

888. (1901.) Affidavits of jurors to the effect that they believed that the jury could fix the term of imprisonment at five years, or they would not have agreed to a verdict of guilty of murder in the second degree, cannot be received to impeach their verdict returned in open court, and assented to by them in the poll of the jury. Coil v. State, 62 Neb. 15 (86 N. W. 925).

889. (1901.) A juror cannot be heard to impeach his own verdict by showing that he reasoned from false premises or adopted an illegitimate method in reaching a conclusion. Savary v. State, 62 Neb. 166 (87 N. W. 34).

890. (1901.) Statements of a juror after trial as to the manner of arriving at a verdict during the deliberations of the jury cannot be testified to by others for the purpose of vitiating the verdict. Such testimony is incompetent as hearsay. Savary v. State, 62 Neb. 166 (87 N. W. 34).

891. (1901.) A statement made by a juror after trial, and when not under oath, tending to impeach his verdict is insufficient to rebut and overcome the presumption arising from the record that the verdict returned under oath and assented to by the jury was the result of the deliberation of the jury on the evidence in the case. Savary v. State, 62 Neb. 166 (87 N. W. 34).

——— Presence of accused at hearing.

892. (1897.) One convicted of a felony who was represented by counsel cannot, as a matter of right, insist on being present in court when his motion for a new trial is filed, argued, or decided. Davis v. State, 51 Neb. 301 (70 N. W. 984).

——— Determination.

893. (1886.) Motion for new trial alleged facts and reasons therefor not shown by the record, and which were supported by affidavits. Counter-affidavits were filed in which all the allegations in the motion for a new trial were disproved. Held, That the denial of the motion by the district court was correct. Marion v State, 20 Neb. 233 (29 N. W. 911; 57 Am. Rep. 825).

894. (1895.) Where an affidaivt in support of a motion for a new trial avers that certain jurors, while the jury was deliberating, stated to the others that a certain witness for the defense, was an unchaste woman and unworthy of belief, and such averment was not denied by the state, the trial court is not obliged to take the statements as true. Tracey v. State, 46 Neb. 361 (64 N. W. 1069).

895. (1895.) Whether there had been misconduct of the jury was a question of fact for the district judge; and in trying such issue the district judge had a right to weigh and consider, as against the statements in the impeaching affidavit, the presumption of law that the jurors had obeyed their oaths. Tracey v. State, 46 Neb. 361 (64 N. W. 1069).

896. (1895.) It is not error to refuse a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence when the statements in the affidavit upon which it is based are contradicted by the sworn evidence of the proposed witness. Housh v. State, 43 Neb. 163 (61 N. W. 571).

897. (1901.) Affidavits in support of a motion for a new trial, on the ground that a witness for the state was not allowed to correct an alleged mistake in his testimony, and exception to the ruling of the court thereon, held without merit, since from the record and the affidavits it appears that no mistake had been made. Coil v. State, 62 Neb. 15 (86 N. W. 925).

898. (1902.) A motion for a new trial is properly dealt with as an entirety. If it cannot be sustained in the form in which it is presented, it is not error to overrule it. Reed v. State, 66 Neb. 184 (92 N. W. 321).

Conviction under separate counts.

899. (1899.) Where an information, in different counts, charges separate and distinct crimes, and the accused, on the trial, is acquitted on a count charging another crime, a new trial can be granted only on the count upon which a conviction was had on the former trial. George v. State, 59 Neb. 163 (80 N. W. 486).

900. (1899.) Where a crime consisting of several degrees is charged in different counts of an information, the allowance of a new trial goes to the whole case. George v. State, 59 Neb. 163 (80 N. W. 486).

Joint application.

901. (1884.) A motion for a new trial is indivisible, and when made jointly by two or more parties, if it cannot be allowed as to all, it must be overruled as to all. Dutcher v. State, 16 Neb. 30 (19 N. W. 612).

Grounds for arrest of judgment.

902. (1876.) Want of jurisdiction and insufficiency of the indictment, are the only grounds for arrest of judgment, under the criminal code. Dodge v. State, 4 Neb. 220.

www.libtool.com.cn

903. (1900.) If at a subsequent term of the court to the one at which defendant was held to answer, an information is filed and defendant pleads not guilty, the court has power to try the issue raised; and after verdict of conviction has been rendered, it is not error to deny a motion in arrest of judgment. Leisenberg v. State, 60 Neb. 628 (84 N. W. 6).

XIV. JUDGMENT, SENTENCE AND FINAL COMMITMENT.

Commitment for non-payment of fines, see Fines, §§ 1-5.

Conviction as accessory under indictment charging defendants as principals, see Indictment and Information, § 141*a*.

Excessive sentence as grounds for writ of habeas corpus, see Habeas Corpus, § 20.

Release from void sentence, see Habeas Corpus, §§ 14-16.

Excessive sentence for kidnapping, see Kidnapping, § 5.

Commutation of sentence, see Pardon, § 5.

Excessiveness of sentence for larceny, see Larceny, §§ 139-141.

Discretion of court in fixing sentence, see post, § 1074

Reduction of sentence by appellate court, see post, §§ 1147-1149.

Jurisdiction.

903*a*. (1897.) Jurisdiction to pronounce a particular sentence is as essential as jurisdiction of the person and subject matter. In re McVey, 50 Neb. 481 (70 N. W. 51).

904. (1901.) A judge may receive, at chambers, a plea of guilt and pass sentence on one charged with a felony in a county of the district other than that in which the prosecution was instituted. McCarty v. Hopkins, 61 Neb. 550 (85 N. W. 540).

Formalities in pronouncing sentence.

905. (1895.) The district court in pronouncing sentence on a felon has no authority to coerce an answer from a prisoner to any question whatever; but what inquiries the court shall make of such a prisoner, aside from the inquiries provided by statute, or whether any, is a matter resting entirely in its discretion. Tracey v. State, 46 Neb. 361 (64 N. W. 1069).

906. (1895.) A district court, when called upon to pronounce judgment against a person convicted of a felony, is not limited to the sole question whether the person so convicted has anything to say why judgment should not be pronounced against him. Tracey v. State, 46 Neb. 361 (64 N. W. 1069).

907. (1902.) Section 495 of the criminal code, providing that, before sentence is pronounced in a criminal case, defendant must be informed of the verdict of the jury, and asked whether he has anything to say why judgment should not be pronounced against him, is mandatory, so that where, after a verdict of guilty, sentence has been pronounced without complying with the provisions of said section 495, the judgment will be reversed, and cause remanded for judgment and sentence in conformity with the statute. McCormick v. State, 66 Neb. 337 (92 N. W. 606).

Sentence on conviction on different counts.

908. (1889.) In a prosecution under an indictment containing a number of counts for offenses punishable by fine, the sentence should not be for one solid fine but a separate fine for each count on which defendant is found guilty, so that in case the supreme court finds that the evidence is not sufficient as to certain counts there need be a reversal only as to such counts. Burrell v. State, 25 Neb. 581 (41 N. W. 399).

909. (1889.) Where several distinct offenses of same kind are joined in same indictment, separate sentence should be passed on each count upon which defendant is found guilty. Burrell v. State, 25 Neb. 581 (41 N. W. 399).

910. (1893.) Where a person has been convicted at the same term of court of several distinct offenses, each punishable by imprisonment in the penitentiary, whether charged in separate informations or in separate counts of the same information, the court may impose a separate sentence for each offense of which the prisoner has been found guilty. In re Walsh, 37 Neb. 454 (55 N. W. 1075).

911. (1893.) Where cumulative sentences are imposed on an accused the judgment should not fix the day on which each successive term of imprisonment should begin, but should simply direct that each successive term should commence at the expiration of the one imposed by the previous sentence. In re Walsh, 37 Neb. 454 (55 N. W. 1075).

912. (1893.) If the same offense is charged in different counts of an information, and there is a conviction on each count, but a single sentence should be pronounced upon all the counts for the one entire offense. In re Walsh, 37 Neb. 454 (55 N. W. 1075).

913. (1893.) To an information containing two counts, one charging the petitioner with the forgery of a certain bank check, and the other with the uttering of the same instrument, a general plea of guilty was entered. Thereupon the court sentenced him upon the first count to imprisonment in the penitentiary for the period of one year from the 9th day of May, 1892, and upon the other count a like imprisonment was imposed for the term of one year from May 9, 1893. By good conduct the petitioner saved two months of his first sentence, and having served out the term under such sentence, he applied for his release on habeas corpus. Held, That the second sentence was illegal and void, and that he was entitled to be discharged from further imprisonment. In re Walsh, 37 Neb. 454 (55 N. W. 1075).

914. (1898.) If a single offense is charged in different counts of an information, and there is a conviction on each count, but one sentence can be imposed. Barker v. State, 54 Neb. 53 (74 N. W. 427).

Setting aside sentence.

915. (1892.) Where one charged with burglary enters a plea of guilty, and the court sentences him to the state reformatory and he is committed therein, the court cannot, at the subsequent term, vacate the sentence and enter a new one, committing the accused to a term in the penitentiary. In re Jones, 35 Neb. 499 (53 N. W. 468).

Entry of judgment.

916. (1877.) The failure of the court to act does not authorize the entry of a nunc pro tunc order or judgment. If no order or judgment was in fact rendered, the court cannot treat such defects as a clerical error. Garrison v. State, 6 Neb. 274.

Conclusiveness and effect of judgment.

917. (1877.) A judgment of an inferior court in a criminal action is conclusive, unless appealed from, or reversed on proceedings in error. Ex parte Fisher, 6 Neb. 309.

918. (1898.) If the court has jurisdiction of the person of the accused and of the crime charged and does not exceed its lawful authority in passing sentence, its judgment is not void, whatever errors may have occurred during the trial. In re Ream, 54 Neb. 667 (75 N. W. 24).

Commitment.

919. (1888.) A mittimus entitled, "The State of Nebraska, ... county," is not void, and, even if defective, the court or judge, upon habeas corpus, should not, for that cause alone, discharge the prisoner, but cause a new one to be issued in proper form. State, ex rel. Esher, v. Banks, 24 Neb. 322 (28 N. W. 830).

Stay of execution.

920. (1907.) The sentence is not vacated by a stay thereof to examine the sanity of the accused. The execution thereof is suspended until the day named in the order of stay. State v. Barker, 79 Neb. 361 (112 N. W. 1143).

921. (1907.) Upon the hearing of an application under section 551 of the criminal code, the judge may stay execution of sentence, when such stay is absolutely necessary in order that the investigation required by statute shall be had. The necessity for such stay is to be determined by the judge before whom the application is pending, in the exercise of a sound legal discretion. State v. Barker, 79 Neb. 361 (112 N. W. 1143).

Inquiry into sanity of convict.

922. (1905.) Under section 6 of chapter 105, laws 1901, it is the duty of the warden, if a convict confined in the penitentiary under sentence of death appears to be insane, to give notice thereof to a judge of the district court for the county in which the penitentiary is situated, and if such notice is given a jury must be summoned "to inquire into such insanity." Barker v. State, 75 Neb. 289 (106 N. W. 450).

923. (1905.) Under the law prior to the act of 1901, the district court of the county of the conviction and sentence of death of a person charged with a capital offense had jurisdiction, independent of statute, to investigate the question of the sanity of such convict; but that jurisdiction has by the statute been transferred to the judge of the district court for the county in which the penitentiary is situated. Barker v. State, 75 Neb. 289 (106 N. W. 450).

924. (1905.) The jurisdiction of the judge of the district court for Lancaster county to inquire as to the sanity of a convict confined in the penitentiary under sentence of death does not depend upon the giving of the notice by the warden. If it is alleged in a proper application to the judge, under oath, that the convict is insane, and that the warden unjustifiably refuses to give the statutory notice, it is the duty of the judge to make such investigation as will satisfy him whether there are such appearances of insanity as will justify summoning a jury to try the question. Barker v. State, 75 Neb. 289 (106 N. W. 450).

925. (1905.) If upon investigation of the application, the judge finds that the convict appears to be insane, a jury should be impaneled to try the question of insanity. Barker v. State, 75 Neb. 289 (106 N. W. 450).

926. (1905.) If the judge, upon investigation of sanity of one sentenced to be hanged and confined in the penitentiary, is satisfied that the warden was justified in his refusal to give the notice of the prisoner's insanity, and that there are no substantial appearances of insanity, the application will be dismissed. Barker v. State, 75 Neb. 289 (106 N. W. 450).

927. (1907.) Inquiry as to the sanity of a convict is left largely to the discretion of the district judges. State v. Barker, 79 Neb. 361 (112 N. W. 1143).

XV. APPEAL AND ERROR.

Appeal in extradition, see Extradition, §§ 11-12.

Appeal in contempt proceedings, see Contempt, §§ 82-89.

Right of state to appeal from writ of habeas corpus, see Habeas Corpus, § 47.

Time to appeal from commitment for failure to pay fine, see Fines, § 4.

A. Form of Remedy, Jurisdiction and Right of Review.

Form of remedy.

928. (1902.) Section 24 of the Bill of Rights, declaring that the right to be heard in all civil cases in the court of last resort by appeal, error or otherwise shall not be denied, is satisfied by any one of the proceedings specified. The remedy is in the alternative. Sothman v. State, 66 Neb. 302 (92 N. W. 303).

928*a*. (1908.) Under the provisions of chapter 162, laws 1907, providing for appeals to the supreme court, only judgments and sentences upon convictions for felonies and misdemeanors under the criminal code may be brought to this court by petition in error. All other cases must come here by appeal, and notice must be given, either as specified in section 3 of the act, or under the provisions of supreme court rules 33 to 37, inclusive. Brandt v. State, 80 Neb. 843 (115 N. W. 327).

929. (1880.) Where in a criminal prosecution, the jury returned, after remaining out for several hours, with a statement that they agreed to disagree and the court, in the absence of the accused, discharged the jury, the overruling of a motion, by the accused, to discharge the jury is not such an order as can be reviewed on error before final judgment. Green v. State, 10 Neb. 102 (4 N. W. 422).

930. (1893.) The rulings of the district court in a criminal case cannot be reviewed by the supreme court prior to the rendition of a final judgment in the prosecution. Gartner v. State, 36 Neb. 280 (54 N. W. 516).

931. (1893.) An order of the district court overruling a plea in abatement to an indictment is not a final order within the meaning of the statute, and a petition in error cannot be prosecuted therefrom previous to the prisoner's conviction. Gartner v. State, 36 Neb. 280 (54 N. W. 516).

931*a*. (1908.) The right of appeal given by section 324 of the criminal code applies to cases prosecuted for the violation of village ordinances pursuant to the provisions of section 52, article I, chapter 14, Compiled Statutes 1907. Ruffing v. State, 80 Neb. 555 (114 N. W. 583).

931*b*. (1908.) Where a defendant is prosecuted before a justice of the peace by complaint and warrant for the violation of a village ordinance, and the acts charged are misdemeanors under the laws of the state, such defendant has no right of appeal under section 1006 of the code from a judgment finding him guilty. Ruffing v. State, 80 Neb. 555 (114 N. W. 583).

Right of prosecution to review.

932. (1882.) A prosecuting attorney presenting a bill of exceptions to the supreme court under the provisions of section 483 of the criminal code, must obtain leave of court to file the same. State v. Page, 12 Neb. 355 (11 N. W. 459).

933. (1883.) A bill of exceptions and petition in error on behalf of the estate in a case where, in the district court, upon an appeal from a conviction of a misdemeanor before a county judge, the case was dismissed, filed in the supreme court without leave of court obtained by the district attorney, will be dismissed. State v. Halphrey, 14 Neb. 578 (16 N. W. 823).

Right of complainant to review.

934. (1881.) The right of appeal under section 324 of the criminal code is restricted to the defendant, and does not apply to a complainant against whom a judgment for costs has been rendered. State, ex rel. McGraw v. Ensign, 11 Neb. 529 (10 N. W. 449); (1896) O'Chander v. Hansen, 48 Neb. 485 (67 N. W. 604).

B. Presentation and Reservation in Lower Court of Grounds of Review.

Offer of proof on exclusion of evidence, see ante, §§ 540-541.

Necessity of presentation in general.

935. (1894.) The constitutionality of a law will not be determined upon review where the question was not presented below. Pill v. State, 43 Neb. 23 (61 N. W. 96). 96).

Necessity of objection.

——— Preliminary proceedings.

936. (1902.) The objection that the issue in a criminal case was not formally made up before trial must be first raised in the district court. Reed v. State, 66 Neb. 184 (92 N. W. 321).

——— Indictment or information.

937. (1876.) If a party fails to object in the court below, to an indictment containing two counts for larceny, and two counts for receiving stolen property on the ground that they refer to separate and distinct offenses, such objection, after a verdict of guilty on the larceny counts, will not be considered in the appellate court. Thompson v. State, 4 Neb. 524.

938. (1891.) Defects in the verification of an information not raised until after verdict are waived. Davis v. State, 31 Neb. 247 (47 N. W. 854).

——— Disqualification of juror.

939. (1878.) Where a juror, on his voir dire examination, in answer to questions put to him by the district attorney, stated that he did not think he had formed or expressed an opinion as to the prisoner's guilt, but at the same time admitted that he had "talked with the neighbors about the case," and that he had "explained to some (of his neighbors) since it occurred," who did not know about it; and the juror was accepted without examination, or objection, on the part of the prisoner, it makes a case for the application of the rule, that if a prisoner neglect to avail himself, before the trial, of any of the means which the law provides for ascertaining whether a juror is prejudiced, he will not be entitled to a new trial on that ground. Clough v. State, 7 Neb. 320.

940. (1882.) Objection that a juror was not a resident of the county is waived if not made on voir dire examination. Hickey v. State, 12 Neb. 490 (11 N. W. 744).

941. (1894.) A party who chooses to accept a juror shown by his examination to be disqualified on account of an opinion formed from a knowledge of the facts involved cannot afterward allege the prejudice of such juror as ground for a new trial. Murphey v. State, 43 Neb. 34 (61 N. W. 491).

942. (1901.) An objection that a veniremen is not a qualified juryman is unavailing unless specially raised in the trial court. Russell v. State, 62 Neb. 512 (87 N. W. 344).

——— Rulings on evidence.

943. (1878.) When the defendant in a criminal trial permits illegal testimony to go to the jury without objection, its illegality is thereby waived, and a new trial will not be granted because of its admission. Clough v. State, 7 Neb. 351.

944. (1879.) In the supreme court the examination of questions relating to the evidence is confined to such as were distinctly raised and passed upon in the court whose record is under review. Schlencker v. State, 9 Neb. 241 (1 N. W. 857); (1894) Hill v. State, 42 Neb. 503 (60 N. W. 916); (1895) Collins v. State, 46 Neb. 37 (64 N. W. 432).

945. (1895.) Rulings not objected to in admitting evidence will be disregarded on review. Thompson v. State, 44 Neb. 366 (62 N. W. 1060).

946. (1895.) An objection relating to the materiality or relevancy of testimony should be made when the testimony is offered. Ford v. State, 46 Neb. 390 (64 N. W. 1082).

947. (1904.) If, in a criminal trial, evidence is received that is not from its nature necessarily injurious to the defendant, and the receiving of such evidence is not objected to when the same is offered, nor complained of in the petition in error in the supreme court, the error, if any, will be considered to be without prejudice. Lillie v. State, 72 Neb. 228 (100 N. W. 316).

948. (1906.) Where a question is so formed as to bring out the inference that an accused was formerly accused of larceny, it cannot be made grounds for reversal for misconduct of counsel unless that objection was raised on the trial. Barber v. State, 75 Neb. 543 (106 N. W. 423).

——— Instructions.

949. (1876.) Since by statute in this state the charge of the court to the jury is required to be in writing, filed with the clerk and made a part of the record, it is appears that a charge given in a case of felony had a tendency to prejudice the accused, under any state of facts, the appellate court will correct the error by granting a new trial, even though no objection was taken to such charge in the court below. Thompson v. State, 4 Neb. 524.

950. (1895.) Judgment will not be reversed for failure to number the paragraphs of the charge, and mark instructions "given," unless objected to on that ground when given. Jolly v. State, 43 Neb. 857 (62 N. W. 300).

——— Misconduct of counsel.

951. (1885.) Where it is alleged that an attorney, in the argument of a cause on trial to a jury, made misstatements of the evidence and went outside of the record in his statements of the facts proved on the trial, the attention of the court should be called to the language and conduct of the attorney by the proper objection, and a ruling had thereon by the court. Bradshaw v. State, 17 Neb. 147 (22 N. W. 361); (1886) McLain v. State, 18 Neb. 154 (24 N. W. 720).

952. (1894.) Abuse of privilege by counsel in addressing the jury, to be available on appeal, must be excepted to at the time. Hill v. State, 42 Neb. 503 (60 N. W. 916).

953. (1897.) Where there was no objection made or exception taken to a ruling on an objection, in respect to alleged improper statements of opposing counsel to the jury in the trial court, there can be no prejudicial error predicated in the supreme court upon the impropriety of such statements. Catron v. State, 52 Neb. 389 (72 N. W. 354).

954. (1902.) A party desiring to take advantage of the misconduct of opposing counsel in the argument of a case, should seasonably object to the remarks complained of and then enter an exception, if the court rule adversely or refuse to make a ruling. Reed v. State, 66 Neb. 184 (92 N. W. 321).

955. (1903.) Ordinarily a party who did not promptly object to an argument alleged as misconduct will be held to have waived his right to complain. Parker v. State, 67 Neb. 555 (93 N. W. 1037).

956. (1903.) Where the misconduct of counsel is so flagrant, and of such a character that neither a complete retraction nor any admonition or rebuke from the court can entirely destroy its sinister influence, a new trial should be awarded, regardless of the want of an objection and exception. Parker v. State, 67 Neb. 555 (93 N. W. 1037).

957. (1905.) Alleged improper statements of counsel, made while arguing a case to the jury, to be available on error, must have been objected to at the time they were made and the ruling of the court invoked thereon. Connolly v. State, 74 Neb. 340 (104 N. W. 754).

958. (1907.) It is only in the most flagrant cases of the use of improper language by a prosecuting attorney, even in the prosecution of capital offenses that defendant's counsel can apparently acquiesce in the language used by remaining silent until the trial is finished, and then cause the trial and verdict to be set aside by complaining of statements to which he seemed at the time to consent. Clark v. State, 79 Neb. 482 (113 N. W. 804).

——— Misconduct of jury.

959. (1883.) A separation of the jury, before the taking of testimony is closed in a criminal trial, known to the prisoner or his counsel at the time it occurred, but not disclosed to the judge until after verdict, is not cause for a new trial. Polin v. State, 14 Neb. 540 (16 N. W. 898).

Sufficiency of objection.

960. (1902.) An objection that evidence is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, does not raise the question of a sufficient foundation laid for the admission of such testimony. McCormick v. State, 66 Neb. 337 (92 N. W. 606).

Necessity of ruling by trial court.

961. (1896.) An assignment of error for the overruling of a motion for a continuance will not be considered by the supreme court when the record fails to disclose that such motion was passed upon by the trial court. Bush v. State, 47 Neb. 642 (66 N. W. 638).

Necessity of exception.

962. (1878.) The taking and preserving of exceptions in criminal cases are governed by the rules established in such matters in civil cases. Clough v. State, 7 Neb. 320.

Digitized by Google

963. (1879.) In a capital case the want of an exception will not necessarily deprive the prisoner of his right to a new trial for errors of the court prejudicial to him. Schlencker v. State, 9 Neb. 300 (2 N. W. 710).

www.libtool.com.cn

964. (1884.) In order to obtain a review of the proceedings of the district court during a trial there must be an adverse ruling by such court and an exception thereto. Hair v. State, 16 Neb. 601 (21 N. W. 464).

965. (1899.) In the absence of an exception a ruling made by the district court during the progress of the trial cannot be reviewed. Reynolds v. State, 58 Neb. 49 (78 N. W. 483).

——— Rulings on evidence.

966. (1878.) When a deposition taken on behalf of the defendant in a criminal case as to his good character is suppressed, and no exception taken, the correctness of the ruling cannot be questioned on error in the supreme court. Clough v. State, 7 Neb. 320.

967. (1884.) Generally, the supreme court will not consider an objection to the admissibility of testimony unless the objection was made at the trial, and the ruling of the trial court thereon excepted to. Dutcher v. State, 16 Neb. 30 (19 N. W. 612).

968. (1887.) Where it is claimed that improper testimony was allowed to be given to a jury in the trial of a cause, it must appear by the bill of exceptions that objection thereto was made, upon which there was an adverse ruling, and to which exception was taken at the time. Otherwise it cannot be reviewed in the supreme court. Fager v. State, 22 Neb. 332 (35 N. W. 195).

——— Instructions.

969. (1876.) The provisions of the act of 1875 directing the charge of the court to the jury to be written in consecutively numbered paragraphs, is a right which the supreme court will regard as waived, when the charge is not excepted to, or where exception is taken to a particular clause only. Smith v. State, 4 Neb. 277.

970. (1876.) In cases of felony, where the instructions are properly preserved and are legitimate before the supreme court, and it is apparent that a radical error was committed, which in any view of the case must have been prejudicial to the prisoner, it is the plain duty of the supreme court to correct it, even though there was a failure to except. Curry v. State, 4 Neb. 545.

971. (1881.) Erroneous instruction must be excepted to and brought to attention of court in motion for new trial. Baldwin v. State, 12 Neb. 61 (10 N. W. 463).

972. (1886.) The giving or refusal of instructions must be excepted to in order to obtain a review in the supreme court. Heldt v. State, 20 Neb. 492 (30 N. W. 626; 58 Am. St. Rep. 835); (1894) Wax v. State, 43 Neb. 18 (61 N. W. 117); (1895) Carleton v. State, 43 Neb. 373 (61 N. W. 699); (1895) Gravely v. State, 45 Neb. 878 (64 N. W. 452); (1896) Bush v. State, 47 Neb. 642 (66 N. W. 638).

973. (1897.) Objection to an instruction on the ground that it contains two or more distinct propositions will not be noticed when made for the first time in the supreme court. Morgan v. State, 51 Neb. 672 (71 N. W. 788).

974. (1899.) The failure of the trial court to number consecutively the instructions is not reversible error if no exception was specifically taken on that point at the time they were given. Kastner v. State, 58 Neb. 767 (79 N. W. 713).

Sufficiency of exception.

975. (1876.) Each specific portion of a charge, deemed erroneous, must be pointed out and excepted to. A general exception is unavailing, although the rule will not be as rigidly adhered to in criminal as in civil cases, where it is apparent that the charge given was not applicable, and tended to mislead the jury. Dodge v. State, 4 Neb. 220. [Overruled. Aultman v. Martin, 49 Neb. 103].

976. (1877.) Exceptions to instructions to be available must be taken at the time the instructions claimed to be erroneous are given; exceptions cannot be taken before. Garrison v. State, 6 Neb. 274.

Necessity of motion for new trial.

977. (1891.) Error of trial court not excepted to, nor assigned on the motion for new trial, in the court below, will not be considered as reversible error on review. Thurman v. State, 32 Neb. 224 (49 N. W. 338).

978. (1894.) In order to secure a review of alleged errors occurring at the trial, such errors must be pointed out in a motion for a new trial, addressed to the district court, and a ruling obtained thereon. Dillon v. State, 39 Neb. 92 (57 N. W. 986); (1895) Wilson v. State, 43 Neb. 745 (62 N. W. 209).

979. (1895.) To be available on review, alleged errors occurring at the trial must be pointed out in the motion for a new trial and specifically assigned in the petition in error.

Madsen v. State, 44 Neb. 631 (62 N. W. 1081).

980. (1897.) Refusal, before trial to require the state to elect as to which count of the information it would rely upon, held reviewable without being assigned as error in the motion for a new trial. Hans v. State, 50 Neb. 150 (69 N. W. 838).

——— Disqualification of jurors.

981. (1895.) Alleged errors in overruling challenges to jurors for cause will not be reviewed by the appellate court where they were not called to the attention of the trial court in the motion for a new trial. Ford v. State, 46 Neb. 390 (64 N. W. 1082).

——— Rulings on evidence.

982. (1878.) When the error complained of concerns the admission or rejection of testimony on the trial, the record must show that the alleged error was specifically assigned in the motion for a new trial. And it is not enough merely to allege—"For errors in the ruling of the court in allowing evidence objected and excepted to by the defendant." Walrath v. State, 8 Neb. 80.

——— Instructions.

983. (1881.) Erroneous instructions must be excepted to and brought to the attention of the trial court in the motion for a new trial to be available in a reviewing court, unless the error is so vital in its nature as not to justify the conviction of the accused. Baldwin v. State, 12 Neb. 61 (10 N. W. 463).

984. (1891.) To entitle defendant to a review of alleged errors in the giving of instructions and the admission of evidence, there must have been a motion for a new trial, pointing out the errors complained of. Davis v. State, 31 Neb. 240 (47 N. W. 851); (1894) Wanzer v. State, 41 Neb. 238 (59 N. W. 909); (1898) Lackey v. State, 56 Neb. 298 (76 N. W. 561); (1899) Sullivan v. State, 58 Neb. 796 (79 N. W. 721).

985. (1895). To entitle a party to a review of instructions the giving of them must be assigned for error in the motion for a new trial and petition in error. Jolly v. State, 43 Neb. 857 (62 N. W. 300).

——— Misconduct of counsel.

986. (1878.) If it be assigned for error that "the prosecuting attorneys improperly conducted themselves in the argument of the case to the jury," to the prejudice of the prisoner, the record must show that the particular matter complained of was brought to the attention of the court below, and was made one of the grounds of complaint in the motion for a new trial. Walrath v. State, 8 Neb. 80.

——— Misconduct of juror.

987. (1901.) The alleged misconduct of a juror, to be available on review, must be presented by the record and assigned for error in the motion for a new trial. Bush v. State, 62 Neb. 128 (86 N. W. 1062).

——— Verdict.

988. (1899.) The question of the effectiveness of a verdict which lacks a finding of an essential element of the crime charged, will be examined and determined in an error proceeding to the supreme court although not of the assignment of the motion for a new trial. Holmes v. State, 58 Neb. 297 (78 N. W. 641).

Necessity of exception to ruling on motion for new trial.

989. (1894.) Rulings on evidence and sufficiency of testimony to support a finding will not be considered on error in absence of an exception to the order below overruling a motion for a new trial. Tuomey v. Willman, 43 Neb. 28 (61 N. W. 126).

C. Proceedings for Transfer of Cause.

Time for taking proceedings.

990. (1879.) Proceedings in error in a criminal case must be instituted in the supreme court within one year after the rendition of the judgment. Kountz v. State, 8 Neb. 294.

991. (1905.) The supreme court has no jurisdiction to review the proceedings and final judgment of the district court in a criminal case, unless proceedings in error are instituted therein within six months after the rendition of such judgment. Kock v. State, 73 Neb. 354 (102 N. W. 768).

992. (1905.) The fact that one convicted of a crime has been imprisoned in the penitentiary does not show a disability that will extend the limitations for appealing to the supreme court. Kock v. State, 73 Neb. 354 (102 N. W. 768).

Recognizance.

993. (1894.) A recognizance for an appeal in a criminal case is not required to be signed by the defendant and his sureties; but if so signed, it is not for that reason alone invalid. If otherwise properly taken and certified, the signatures of the recognizors may be disregarded as surplusage. Shupe v. State, 40 Neb. 524 (59 N. W. 100).

994. (1894.) A recognizance executed under section 324 of the criminal code, for the purpose of prosecuting an appeal by one who has been convicted of a misdemeanor, conditioned that he "shall be and personally appear at the next term of the district court in and for Saunders county, on the first day of the term thereof, and abide the judgment of the court, and not depart the court without leave, then this recognizance to be void, otherwise to remain in full force and effect," sufficiently complies with the requirements of the statute and is a binding obligation. Shupe v. State, 40 Neb. 524 (59 N. W. 100).

995. (1897.) On appeal from a police magistrate a recognizance failing to designate the court wherein the prisoner is to appear is invalid and confers no jurisdiction on the appellate court to try the case. Kazda v. State, 52 Neb. 499 (72 N. W. 853).

996. (1904.) To render an appeal to the district court effective in a misdemeanor case, where conviction has been had in an inferior court, the defendant must enter into a recognizance, and with sureties, to be fixed and approved by the court or magistrate trying the case, as is provided by section 324 of the criminal code. A recognizance entered into by the defendant alone is insufficient to perfect a valid appeal. Zobel v. State, 72 Neb. 427 (100 N. W. 947).

D. Record and Proceedings Not in Record. Matters to be included in record.

997. (1871.) In a criminal case for felony, in which the indictment or other proceedings are had at a called term of the court, the record should show the request made by the county commissioners to the judge for the term, the order of the judge thereon, and the due publication of notice of the holding of the court. Burley v. State, 1 Neb. 385.

998. (1871.) It is not necessary that the record should show affirmatively that every step was taken to convene the court at a called term, in order to support the proceedings had thereat, providing enough appears to establish the facts. Burley v. State, 1 Neb. 385.

999. (1871.) Record in criminal cases for felony should show that a venire for summoning the juries has been issued to the sheriff and been by him executed, or that the court, by its order, directed the summoning of the juries, and that the prisoner was present at and during the trial, and at the rendition of the verdict. Burley v. State, 1 Neb. 385.

1000. (1885.) Where an objection to argument of counsel is overruled, and exception taken the question may be reviewed in the supreme court upon the language, objection, ruling and exception being made a part of the record by the proper bill of exceptions. Bradshaw v. State, 17 Neb. 147 (22 N. W. 361); (1885) McLain v. State, 18 Neb. 154 (24 N. W. 720).

1001. (1895.) An assignment that the trial court erred in overruling a motion to strike from the files a certain paper cannot be considered upon review where neither such motion, nor the grounds thereof, appear in the record. Barr v. State, 45 Neb. 458 (63 N. W. 856).

1002. (1895.) Mere statements made by a counsel in the course of an argument, even though contained in a bill of exceptions, cannot be considered as evidence of the fact so stated. Grossman v. State, 46 Neb. 21 (64 N. W. 354).

1003. (1901.) Error cannot be successfully predicated upon a ruling where the record is contradictory as to what the ruling was. Dinsmore v. State, 61 Neb. 418 (85 N. W. 445).

1004. (1901.) An assignment of error for the overruling of a motion for a continuance is unavailing where such application is not included in a transcript. Russell v. State, 62 Neb. 512 (87 N. W. 344).

1005. (1903.) An exception by the defendant to a ruling of the trial court on a challenge for cause in a felony case, is not properly presented for consideration on review, where the juror is afterwards excused, and the record does not show the exhaustion of all his peremptory challenges, and that the proposed juror to whom the exception relates was excused by him in the exercise of his right of peremptory challenges. Jahnke v. State, 68 Neb. 154 (94 N. W. 158).

1006. (1907.) The supreme court will not consider affidavits made after the trial to determine the question of whether or not a juror had made statements during the deliberations of the jury upon the verdict that were at variance with his voir dire examination, when such voir dire examination is not in the record, unless it is shown that the complaining party was prevented, without fault on his part, from having such examination taken and preserved in the record. Feddern v. State, 79 Neb. 651 (113 N. W. 127).

——— Complaint or information.

1007. (1895.) An objection on the ground that a particular charge of an information was not included in the complaint upon which an accused was held to answer by the examining magistrate, will not be noticed by this court on petition in error to noticed by the supreme court on petition in error to review a judgment of conviction where such preliminary complaint is not set out or made part of the record. Wright v. State, 45 Neb. 44 (63 N. W. 147).

1008. (1900.) Refusal to allow county attorney to file an amended information in a criminal cause cannot be reviewed where the amended information is not in the record. State v. Dennison, 60 Neb. 192 (82 N. W. 628).

——— Evidence.

1009. (1874.) In the absence of a record showing the whole of the testimony submitted to the jury, the appellate court will presume that the verdict was abundantly supported by the evidence. Caw v. State, 3 Neb. 357.

1010. (1876.) Instructions asked for by a prisoner with reference to an alleged confession, made by him and admitted in evidence, held properly refused, there being nothing in the record showing the nature of the confession, to whom made, its extent, or whether corroborated or not. Dodge v. State, 4 Neb. 220.

1011. (1893.) Assignments of error involving rulings on the admission of testimony cannot be considered unless the rulings and testimony have been preserved by a bill of exceptions. Vincent v. State, 37 Neb. 672 (56 N. W. 320).

1012. (1896.) Assignments of error based upon the existence of facts in respect to which there is no evidence in the record will be disregarded in the supreme court. McCall v. State, 47 Neb. 660 (66 N. W. 635).

1013. (1897.) Error in the refusal to give a proffered instruction must affirmatively appear from an inspection of the entire record; and if a case is presented on a transcript unaccompanied by a bill of exceptions, and there may have been a possible state of facts disclosed by the evidence which would have warranted such refusal, the assignment of error must be overruled. Lauder v. State, 50 Neb. 140 (69 N. W. 776).

1014. (1897.) Where the bill of exceptions reveals that material evidence introduced on the trial has been omitted, the supreme court cannot review an order denying a motion to direct a verdict, when to do so would require an examination of the proofs. Hans v. State, 50 Neb. 150 (69 N. W. 838).

1015. (1897.) An order overruling a motion for appointment of counsel to defend a prisoner cannot be reviewed in the supreme court where the evidence on the hearing was not preserved by a bill of exceptions. Durfee v. State, 53 Neb. 214 (73 N. W. 676).

1016. (1903.) When the evidence upon which the trial court decided an issue of fact is not preserved in the record, it will be presumed that the decision is right. Hoy v. State, 69 Neb. 516 (96 N. W. 228).

1017. (1907.) Ordinarily, where the bill of exceptions shows upon its face that it is incomplete and does not contain all of the testimony, the supreme court will refuse to consider it; but in a capital case the court will carefully examine the whole record and determine for itself the sufficiency of the evidence contained in the record to sustain the conviction. Clark v. State, 79 Neb. 473 (113 N. W. 211).

——— Presentation of question to trial court.

1018. (1905.) Objections to the instructions of the district court will not be regarded unless the record affirmatively shows that they were excepted to and called to the attention of that court by a motion for a new trial. Rule relaxed in cases of capital punishment. Barker v. State, 73 Neb. 469 (103 N. W. 71).

1018*a*. (1908.) In order to obtain a review of instructions given to a trial jury by the court, it is necessary that the record show that exceptions were taken to the instructions of which complaint is made. Carson v. State, 80 Neb. 619 (114 N. W. 938).

——— Arguments of counsel.

1019. (1878.) Arguments of counsel on questions raised during the trial, and the remarks of the court in deciding them, serve no useful purpose in a bill of exceptions, and should be omitted. Clough v. State, 7 Neb. 320.

1020. (1905.) The alleged improper statements of counsel, together with the objection thereto and the rulings of the court thereon, must be preserved in the bill of exceptions. Connolly v. State, 74 Neb. 340 (104 N. W. 754).

Sufficiency of record.

1021. (1898.) The transcript in this case shows, with sufficient clearness, that an information was filed against the accused in the court below during the term at which he was required to appear, and that the trial was had upon an amended information presented at a subsequent term of the court. Barker v. State, 54 Neb. 53 (74 N. W. 427).

Necessity of bill of exceptions to bring matters into record.

1022. (1878.) When papers are stricken from the files they cease to be a part of the case for any purpose, unless brought into the record by order of the court, which may be done by bill of exceptions. Clough v. State, 7 Neb. 351.

——— Affidavits.

1023. (1887.) Affidavits used in the hearing of a matter in the trial court must be embodied in a bill of exceptions to be available as evidence in the supreme court. Richards v. State, 22 Neb. 145 (34 N. W. 346); (1895) Wright v. State, 45 Neb. 44 (63 N. W. 147); (1896) Korth v. State, 46 Neb. 631 (65 N. W. 792).

1024. (1894.) An affidavit which it is claimed was used in the hearing of motion for a new trial, but the record does not disclose whether it was used or presented at the hearing of the motion, cannot be considered for any purpose in the supreme court unless presented by bill of exceptions and thus made a part of the record in the case. Berneker v. State, 40 Neb. 810 (59 N. W. 372).

1025. (1897.) Affidavits for a continuance must be embodied in a bill of exceptions to be considered in the appellate court. Hans v. State, 50 Neb. 150 (69 N. W. 838).

1026. (1901.) Affidavits on an application for a continuance not made a part of the bill of exceptions and found only in the transcript of the record are not properly presented. Kerr v. State, 63 Neb. 115 (88 N. W. 240).

1027. (1901.) Affidavits on an application for a motion for a new trial, not made a part of the bill of exceptions, will not be considered. Kerr v. State, 63 Neb. 115 (88 N. W. 240).

1028. (1903.) Affidavits offered in support of one of the grounds presented in a motion for a new trial cannot be considered in the supreme court when the same are not preserved in a bill of exceptions. Martin v. State, 67 Neb. 36 (93 N. W. 161).

1029. (1903.) Affidavits used on the trial of an issue of fact, do not become part of the record by being certified to the supreme court by the clerk of the district court. The law, and not the clerk, determines what shall constitute the record. Hoy v. State, 69 Neb. 516 (96 N. W. 228).

——— Evidence.

1030. (1893.) The evidence embraced in a stipulation of facts between parties to a case tried in the district court must be embodied in the bill of exceptions. Otherwise it will not be examined by the supreme court. Perry v. State, 37 Neb. 623 (56 N. W. 315).

1031. (1901.) The evidence relative to the impaneling of a jury must be incorporated in the bill of exceptions and designated in the certificate to make the rulings of the court in denying a challenge for cause the subject of review. Dinsmore v. State, 61 Neb. 418 (85 N. W. 445).

1032. (1901.) Evidence adduced on the hearing of a motion for a new trial, to be available on review, must be incorporated in a bill of exceptions. Holt v. State, 62 Neb. 134 (86 N. W. 1073).

Expenses of transcript.

1033. (1878.) A person convicted of felony can require from the court reporter a copy of the testimony taken at the trial only at his own expense. And the reporter, if he so choose, may require his fees therefor to be paid in advance. The fact of the prisoner being without the means of making payment does not change the rule. State, ex rel. Rustmeyer, v. Moore, 8 Neb. 22. [Modified by statute. Laws 1879, p. 93, sec. 49. Modifying statute unconstitutional. Morgan v. State, 48 Neb. 798. Overruled. State v. Cornell, 50 Neb. 526.]

Authentication and certification.

1034. (1894.) The law makes no provision for the certification by the shorthand reporter of the proceedings of the district court, hence a transcript of his notes, although accompanied by a formal certificate, is not admissible as independent evidence. Smith v. State, 42 Neb. 356 (60 N. W. 585).

1035. (1894.) A bill of exceptions must be certified by the clerk as being a part of the record or as being the original bill. Wax v. State, 43 Neb. 18 (61 N. W. 117).

1036. (1897.) A certificate "that the foregoing is all the evidence offered by either party on the trial of the cause" is not sufficient to embrace the voir dire examination of a juror, or the evidence adduced on the hearing of a challenge to the whole panel or array of jurors. Durfee v. State, 53 Neb. 214 (73 N. W. 676); (1901) Coil v. State, 62 Neb. 15 (86 N. W. 925).

1037. (1901.) Whether the trial court erred in overruling a challenge for cause, on the ground that a juror had been summoned and served as such within two years prior thereto, not interposed until after the juror had been passed for cause, and when the right to peremptory challenges was being exercised, not determined, because purported bill of exceptions is not properly authenticated. Coil v. State, 62 Neb. 15 (86 N. W. 925).

Conclusiveness and effect.

1038. (1895.) The transcript of the record filed in the supreme court imports absolute verity. If incorrect, or it fails to speak the truth, the correction must be made in the trial court and not in the supreme court. Ford v. State, 46 Neb. 390 (64 N. W. 1082).

1039. (1897.) The record of the trial court, when properly authenticated, imports absolute verity. If such record is partial or incorrect, the remedy is by means of an appropriate proceeding to secure a correction thereof in the lower court. Morgan v. State, 51 Neb. 672 (71 N. W. 788).

Amendment and correction.

1040. (1903.) Where a record of the trial court filed in the supreme court is found to be incorrect, the remedy is by appropriate proceedings to secure a correction thereof in the lower court. Reno v. State, 69 Neb. 391 (95 N. W. 1042).

1041. (1903.) Serving notice of a motion to have the record corrected, and of the hearing thereof in the district court, on the attorney of the defendant who was prosecuting the error proceedings, held sufficient. Reno v. State, 69 Neb. 391 (95 N. W. 1042).

Questions presented for review.

1042. (1889.) Where a case is presented in the supreme court upon transcript alone, without bill of exceptions, it will be presumed that the proceedings below were regular and the instructions correct, unless the latter contain statements of the law which could not be correct in any possible case made by the proof under the pleadings. Willis v. State, 27 Neb. 93 (42 N. W. 920).

1043. (1895.) A ruling below on motion to compel an election as to whether the case in which it was filed or another case involving the same offense should be dismissed cannot be reviewed in the supreme court in absence of a showing that two such cases were in fact pending. Lindsay v. State, 46 Neb. 177 (64 N. W. 716).

1044. (1901.) In proceedings under section 515 of the criminal code, the supreme court will confine itself to the record as in other cases. State v. Moore, 1 Unof. 213 (95 N. W. 334).

E. Assignments of Error, and Briefs.

Necessity of assignments.

1045. (1887.) The supreme court will consider only such questions as are presented to it by assignments of error. Fager v. State, 22 Neb. 332 (35 N. W. 195).

1046. (1897.) A question discussed in the brief of counsel, but not raised by any assignment in the petition in error, will not be considered. Raker v. State, 50 Neb. 202 (69 N. W. 749).

1047. (1900.) Errors which have not been specifically assigned will not be considered. Baer v. State, 59 Neb. 655 (81 N. W. 856).

1048. (1902.) Rulings of the trial court not alleged as error in the petition in error will not be reviewed. Reed v. State, 66 Neb. 184 (92 N. W. 321).

Sufficiency of assignments.

1049. (1894.) An assignment of error as to the giving or refusing en masse of certain instructions will be considered no further than to ascertain that any one of such instructions was properly given or refused. Berneker v. State, 40 Neb. 810 (59 N. W. 372); (1894) Wax v. State, 43 Neb. 18 (61 N. W. 117); (1895) Thompson v. State, 44 Neb. 366 (62 N. W. 1060); (1901) Bush v. State, 62 Neb. 128 (86 N. W. 1062).

1050. (1894.) An assignment of error in the following terms: "The court erred in admitting evidence of defendant's receiving property at dates subsequent to the receiving on which and for which he was convicted," held, to be too indefinite, in that it is too general and failed to designate any particular or specific portion of the testimony of which complaint is made. Berneker v. State, 40 Neb. 810 (59 N. W. 372).

1051. (1894.) An assignment in a petition in error of "error of law occurring at the trial" is insufficient to present for review the rulings of the trial court on the admission or exclusion of testimony. Wanzer v. State, 41 Neb. 238 (59 N. W. 909); (1900) Hawkins v. State, 60 Neb. 380 (83 N. W. 198).

1052. (1897.) An assignment in a petition in error that the court erred in denying the motion for a new trial is too indefinite to be available where several distinct grounds are stated in the motion. Hans v. State, 50 Neb. 150 (69 N. W. 838).

1053. (1900.) An assignment in a petition in error should specifically indicate the ruling of which complaint is made. Hawkins v. State, 60 Neb. 380 (83 N. W. 198).

1054. (1900.) Instructions should be assigned specifically in the petition in error. Hawkins v. State, 60 Neb. 380 (83 N. W. 198).

Briefs.

1055. (1895.) A conviction in a criminal case will ordinarily be reversed whenever the attorney general, after an examination of the record, declines to file a brief on the ground that the judgment is not supported by the evidence. George v. State, 44 Neb. 757 (62 N. W. 1094).

F. Hearing.

In general.

1056. (1882.) Where the proof fails to show that the accused committed the crime, or that he aided in its commission, but at most merely shows a strong suspicion, it is the duty of the attorney for the state to call the attention of the court to that fact. Morrison v. State, 13 Neb. 527 (14 N. W. 475).

Order of hearing.

1057. (1905.) Criminal cases take precedence in the hearing of causes, in order that the party, if innocent, may be discharged. Kock v. State, 73 Neb. 354 (102 N. W. 768).

G. Review.

Scope and extent in general.

1058. (1895.) Mere statements made by a counsel in the course of an argument, even though contained in a bill of exceptions, cannot be considered as evidence of the facts so stated. Grossman v. State, 46 Neb. 21 (64 N. W. 354).

1059. (1905.) Assignments of error which involve questions (such as the right of the state to prosecute by information) that have been often determined by the supreme court, and have by repeated decisions been declared to be the settled law of this state, will not be further considered or discussed. Barker v. State, 73 Neb. 469 (103 N. W. 71).

Parties entitled to allege error.

1060. (1889.) Objections were predicated on certain testimony of an expert, but it appeared from the record that the testimony objected to had been first drawn out on cross-examination by the attorneys for the prisoner. Held, That the objections could not be considered. Reynolds v. State, 27 Neb. 90 (42 N. W. 903; 20 Am. St. Rep. 659).

1061. (1899.) One requesting an instruction on a specific point cannot complain that the court, on its own motion, gave an instruction on the same subject. Smith v. State, 58 Neb. 531 (78 N. W. 1059).

Judicial notice.

1062. (1907.) In the supreme court, where appeals from a conviction of a violation of a city ordinance, are not triable de novo, judicial notice will not be taken of whatever facts the lower court was required to notice judicially, and hence such matters must be included in and made a part of the record, or the correctness of the rulings with respect thereto will be presumed. Steiner v. State, 78 Neb. 147 (110 N. W. 723).

Presumptions.

1063. (1874.) Where the jury separates during the trial of a criminal prosecution, in the absence of a showing on the record, it will be presumed that the court properly admonished as provides for by section 484 criminal code (Comp. Stats.). Caw v. State, 3 Neb. 357; (1879) St. Louis v. State, 8 Neb. 405.

1064. (1877.) Where the record does not show that defendant was present when the jury viewed the scene of the alleged crime, but does show that he was present in court on the day of the view, it will be presumed that he continued in presence of the jury during the viewing, provided nothing in the record contradicts that theory. Fillion v. State, 5 Neb. 351.

1065. (1878.) The record shows that on the 31st of January the court adjourned until the following morning at 9 o'clock. There was no formal entry, in the record of the case, of the opening of the court on the 1st day of February, but it did appear that on "Friday, February 2, 1877, court met at 9 o'clock A. M., pursuant to adjournment." It was objected to the record that it showed there was a failure of the court to meet according to the adjournment of the 31st of January, and that consequently the term must be considered as having lapsed. Held, That by the entry of February 2, reciting that the court convened on that day, "pursuant to adjournment," it was sufficiently shown that the court must have been in session of the 1st day of February. Held, further, That to make such objection available it must be shown, affirmatively, that there was a failure of the court to meet, or its continuance in legal session will be presumed so long as business is transacted as of that term, up to the time appointed for the next regular term. Clough v. State, 7 Neb. 320.

1066. (1882.) The presence of a prisoner at his trial being once shown by the record will be presumed to have continued to the end unless the contrary be made to appear. Folden v. State, 13 Neb. 328 (14 N. W. 412); (1897) Bolln v. State, 51 Neb. 581 (71 N. W. 444).

1067. (1894.) The indorsement of the name of a witness on the copy of the information contained in the transcript of the case raises the presumption that such indorsement was made at the proper time, and in the absence of proof to the contrary such presumption will prevail. Berneker v. State, 40 Neb. 810 (59 N. W. 372).

1068. (1898.) The absence of jurisdiction of the district court will not be presumed, but must affirmatively appear from the face of the record. Barker v. State, 54 Neb. 53 (74 N. W. 427).

1069. (1903.) In the absence of competent evidence to the contrary, the presumption will be indulged in that the trial court ruled correctly on a motion for a new trial, where the ground relied on is required to be supported by evidence. Martin v. State, 67 Neb. 36 (93 N. W. 161).

1070. (1903.) Where the evidence has not been preserved by a bill of exceptions, the presumption is that instructions to the jury which refer to the testimony are based upon and supported by the evidence in the case. Von Haller v. State, 76 Neb. 161 (107 N. W. 233).

1071. (1907.) In a proceeding in error, where the record does not contain a copy of the warrant of commitment, it will be presumed that such warrant conforms to all of the requirements of the law. Leiby v. State, 79 Neb. 485 (113 N. W. 125).

1072. (1907.) Where the record in a criminal prosecution discloses that the defendant was present during the trial, but is silent as to whether he was present when the verdict was received, it will be presumed that the verdict was properly received and that the defendant was present in court at the time. Feddern v. State, 79 Neb. 651 (113 N. W. 127).

Discretion of lower court.

1073. (1876.) Where there is no abuse of the discretion vested in the district court, in excusing persons from serving on juries, its action in that regard will not be reviewed in the supreme court. Dodge v. State, 4 Neb. 220.

1074. (1877.) Within the limits fixed by the statute, the term of imprisonment to which a party convicted of crime may be sentenced, rests entirely with the judge of the court before whom the case was tried, and the judgment will not be set aside because it seems to be severe. Geiger v. State, 6 Neb. 545; (1882) Morrison v. State, 13 Neb. 527 (14 N. W. 481); (1892) Weinecke v. State, 34 Neb. 14 (51 N. W. 307); (1895) Wright v. State, 45 Neb. 44 (63 N. W. 147); (1905) Keeler v. State, 73 Neb. 441 (103 N. W. 64).

1075. (1896.) The question of whether the state will be required to elect between the several counts, if a motion is made by defendant that it be so required, will rest in the sound discretion of the trial court, and unless it appears that there has been an abuse of such discretion in overruling the motion, it will not be available as error. Korth v. State, 46 Neb. 631 (65 N. W. 792).

1076. (1897.) A witness may be cross-examined as to his interest or bias, but the extent of the examination rests largely in the discretion of the trial court. Davis v. State, 51 Neb. 301 (70 N. W. 984).

1077. (1901.) The ruling of a trial court in deciding a challenge for cause will not be disturbed unless an abuse of discretion is shown. Dinsmore v. State, 61 Neb. 418 (85 N. W. 445); (1901) Coil v. State, 62 Neb. 15 (86 N. W. 925).

1078. (1905.) The determination of the trial court upon an application of the accused for change of venue will not be disturbed, unless it appears from the record that its conclusion is wrong. Its discretion in the matter is a legal and not an arbitrary one. Lucas v. State, 75 Neb. 11 (105 N. W. 976).

Questions of fact, verdict and findings.

1079. (1875.) A verdict without evidence to support it, should be set aside; but if the evidence is conflicting and the issues fairly submitted to the jury, the verdict should not be disturbed. Palmer v. People, 4 Neb. 68.

1080. (1879.) In criminal cases all questions of fact are to be settled by the jury, and unless the want of sufficient evidence to support their finding be very clear it will not be disturbed. Schlenckcr v. State, 9 Neb. 241 (1 N. W. 857); (1880) Monroe v. State, 10 Neb. 448 (7 N. W. 285); (1904) Henry v. State, 72 Neb. 252 (100 N. W. 295).

1081. (1880.) A party cannot be convicted of a felony upon a mere suspicion. The law requires the testimony to exclude all reasonable doubt, and while to a great extent the weight of the testimony and degree of credibility to be given to the witnesses must be left to the jury, the court, where the verdict is unsupported by evidence or is clearly wrong, will set it aside and grant a new trial. Priest v. State, 10 Neb. 393 (6 N. W. 468).

1082. (1884.) Where the testimony is conflicting, and it is fairly submitted to a jury, a new trial will not be granted if the testimony is sufficient to sustain the verdict. Murphy v. State, 15 Neb. 383 (19 N. W. 489); (1900) Cardwell v. State, 60 Neb. 480 (83 N. W. 665); (1902) Van Buren v. State, 63 Neb. 453 (88 N. W. 671); (1902) Musfelt v. State, 64 Neb. 445 (90 N. W. 237); (1903) Parker v. State, 67 Neb. 555 (93 N. W. 1037).

1083. (1886.) Questions of fact are for the trial jury to determine, and when the testimony is conflicting a verdict of guilty in a prosecution for a misdemeanor will not be set aside if there is evidence sufficient to sustain it, notwithstanding it may be contradicted by the testimony on the part of the defense. Seling v. State, 18 Neb. 548 (26 N. W. 254).

1084. (1894.) It is only when there is a total failure of proof in a criminal case to support a material allegation in the information, or where the testimony adduced is of so weak or doubtful a character that a conviction based thereon could not be sustained, that the trial court will be justified in directing a verdict of not guilty. Wanzer v. State, 41 Neb. 238 (59 N. W. 909).

1085. Where the evidence by which it is sought to impeach a verdict on account of the prejudice of a single juror, subsequently discovered, is conflicting, an order denying a new trial will not as a rule be disturbed on appeal. (1894) Hill v. State, 42 Neb. 503 (60 N. W. 916); (1895) Murphey v. State, 43 Neb. 34 (61 N. W. 491).

1086. (1895.) Where a new trial is asked for on the ground of misconduct of parties, jurors, or witnesses, and the evidence is conflicting as to the existence of such misconduct, the finding of the trial court will not be disturbed. Carleton v. State, 43 Neb. 373 (61 N. W. 699).

1087. (1895.) Facts determined upon consideration by the district court of contradictory affidavits will be presumed by the supreme court to have been fully established by the proofs. Grossman v. State, 46 Neb. 21 (64 N. W. 354).

1088. (1895.) Where the evidence as to the alleged misconduct of jurors is conflicting, the finding of the trial court thereupon will not be disturbed. McMahon v. State, 46 Neb. 166 (64 N. W. 694).

1089. (1895.) A ruling of the district court upon a question of fact presented by motion supported by affidavits will not be disturbed in the supreme court unless such ruling is clearly without support of sufficient evidence. Lindsay v. State, 46 Neb. 177 (64 N. W. 716).

1090. (1895.) While the district court might properly set aside the verdict of guilty on the mere showing that the prosecuting attorney, notwithstanding the instructions of the court forbidding conversation with jurors, had talked with one of them, yet where, upon a full disclosure of what was in fact said, and that it had no relation whatever to the subject matter of the trial in progress, the district court overruled a motion for a new trial, such motion will not be disturbed in the supreme court. Lindsay v. State, 46 Neb. 177 (64 N. W. 716).

1091. (1899.) A finding assailed as not sustained by sufficient evidence will not be disturbed unless clearly wrong. Ward v. State, 58 Neb. 719 (79 N. W. 725).

1092. (1902.) The finding of the trial court in deciding a challenge for cause will not be set aside by the appellate court, unless manifest error appears. Rhea v. State, 63 Neb. 461 (88 N. W. 789).

1093. (1904.) In criminal trials the question of the qualification of a juryman is one of fact for the determination of the trial court, and, unless it appears to be against the weight of the evidence, it will not be overruled by the supreme court. Lillie v. State, 72 Neb. 228 (100 N. W. 316).

1094. (1905.) When two or more defendants are tried together for the same offense, and different penalties are inflicted, and it appears from the evidence that the defendant receiving the least punishment is at least equally guilty, it may become necessary for the supreme court to determine from the evidence, as an original question, whether the punishment of the defendants or some of them should be reduced. Keeler v. State, 73 Neb. 441 (103 N. W. 64).

1095. (1906.) Where, by a supplemental motion for a new trial, the competency of a juror, on account of an alleged bodily infirmity, amounting to a disability, is put in issue, and is determined as a matter of fact upon competent evidence introduced before the trial court, the finding of the fact on that question will not be set aside by a court of review, unless it is unsupported by the evidence and is clearly wrong. Reed v. State, 75 Neb. 509 (106 N. W. 649).

1096. (1907.) Where evidence is conflicting the jury are the judges of its weight, and their verdict will not be molested, in such a case, unless it appears to be clearly wrong. Craig v. State, 78 Neb. 466 (111 N. W. 143).

1097. (1907.) Where the question as to the alleged misconduct of an attorney in his argument to the jury has been submitted to and decided by the trial court on conflicting evidence, such decision will not be disturbed unless it is unsupported by the testimony and is clearly wrong. Clark v. State, 79 Neb. 473 (113 N. W. 211).

1098. (1907.) A judgment of conviction in a criminal case will not be set aside because of conflicting evidence, where the evidence of the state, if believed by the jury, is sufficient to sustain the verdict. Wheeler v. State, 79 Neb. 491 (113 N. W. 253).

1098*a*. (1907.) Where the question as to the alleged misconduct of the county attorney in conducting the prosecution has been submitted to and decided by the trial court on conflicting evidence, such decision will not be disturbed unless it is unsupported by the testimony and is clearly wrong. Harris v. State, 80 Neb. 195 (114 N. W. 168).

1098*b*. (1907). A judgment in a misdemeanor case rendered upon conflicting evidence will not be reversed simply because the appellate court receives a different impression of the evidence than did the jury and trial court, but such judgment will be upheld, unless it is clearly wrong. Gebhardt v. State, 80 Neb. 363 (114 N. W. 290).

1098*c*. (1908.) Upon the trial there was a sharp conflict between the testimony of the witnesses for the state and those on behalf of the defense. If the jury believed the witnesses produced by the state there was sufficient evidence to sustain a verdict finding the accused guilty. They being the sole judges of the weight of the evidence, their finding cannot be molested. Carson v. State, 80 Neb. 619 (114 N. W. 938).

Harmless error.

1099. (1882.) An immaterial error, or one which could not have prejudiced the prisoner, is not a ground for a new trial Folden v. State, 13 Neb. 328 (14 N. W. 412).

1100. (1893.) Where it is apparent that the plaintiff in error has not been prejudiced by the ruling complained of, the judgment will be affirmed, and the supreme court will not examine the record for the purpose of determining wheather or not such ruling is technically correct. May v. State, 38 Neb. 211 (56 N. W. 804).

1101. (1897.) Denial of a jury trial upon an issue of fact tendered by a plea in abatement held not reversible error, where the record fails to disclose that the prisoner was prejudiced. Bolin v. State, 51 Neb. 581 (71 N. W. 444).

1102. (1899.) A ruling, if erroneous, cannot be availed of if so seasonably retracted that by such ruling no prejudice could result to the party complaining of it. McVey v. State, 57 Neb. 471 (77 N. W. 1111).

1103. (1899.) An erroneous conviction will not be affirmed on the ground that "outraged Justice has laid her avenging lash on the back of one who honestly deserves the scourge." Reynolds v. State, 58 Neb. 49 (78 N. W. 483).

——— Burden of showing prejudice.

1104. (1895.) To secure the reversal of a judgment in an error proceeding to the supreme court it is not enough to establish that the district court erred, but it must appear from the record that such error may have caused or contributed to the judgment under review and thus have prejudiced the complaining party. Tracey v. State, 46 Neb. 361 (64 N. W. 1069).

1105. (1897.) The burden is on the party complaining of the refusal of an instruction not only to show that he was probably prejudiced by such refusal, but that the entire instruction is correct as a proposition of law and applicable to the facts in evidence in the case. Davis v. State, 51 Neb. 201 (70 N. W. 984).

1106. (1901.) Errors will not be presumed but must be affirmatively shown from the record. Coil v. State, 62 Neb. 15 (86 N. W. 925).

1107. (1902.) Under the rule that error must affirmatively appear, the burden is on the complaining party to show that an assertion of personal belief by counsel for the opposing party was not given as a deduction from the evidence. Reed v. State, 66 Neb. 184 (92 N. W. 321).

——— Ruling as to indictment.

1108. (1897.) Error cannot be predicated upon the overruling of a demurrer to a count in the information, where a nolle prosequi is subsequently entered to such count. Bartley v. State, 53 Neb. 310 (73 N. W. 744).

——— Denial of continuance.

1109. (1905.) The defendant in a criminal trial is not prejudiced by the denial of his application for continuance upon the ground of absence of material witnesses, if the matters to be proved by the evidence of the absent witnesses are conclusively established upon the trial by other witnesses and are not controverted by the state. Lucas v. State, 75 Neb. 11 (105 N. W. 976).

——— Ruling on challenge of juror.

1110. (1883.) Although there may be error in overruling a challenge to a juror for cause, yet if the prisoner be not compelled to exhaust his peremptory challenges to exclude him from the panel, it is error without prejudice. Bohanan v. State, 15 Neb. 209 (18 N. W. 129).

1111. (1889.) The overruling of a challenge to an incompetent juror in a criminal case is not cured by a subsequent peremptory challenge of such juror by defendant, where he has exhausted his peremptory challenges. Thurman v. State, 27 Neb. 628 (43 N. W. 404.)

1112. (1894.) Where the trial court overruled defendant's challenge for cause to a juror, and the record is silent as to the manner in which the juror was dimissed, and does not show that the defendant was compelled to exhaust his peremptory challenges to exclude him from the jury, and the record does disclose that the party challenged was not one of the jurors who tried the case, held, that, so far as indicated by the record, there was no prejudicial error in overruling the challenge to the juror. Blenkiron v. State, 40 Neb. 11 (58 N. W. 587).

1113. (1897.) A party by failing to exercise his right of peremptory challenge will be held to have waived any objection on account of a juror's disqualification then known to exist. Morgan v. State, 51 Neb. 672 (71 N. W. 788).

1114. (1897.) Error cannot be predicated upon the overruling of a challenge to a juror for cause, where the record fails to disclose that the complaining party exhausted his peremptory challenges. Bartley v. State, 53 Neb. 310 (73 N. W. 744).

1115. (1899.) A ruling on a challenge for cause will not be disturbed on review unless clearly wrong. Ward v. State, 58 Neb. 719 (79 N. W. 725).

——— Admission or exclusion of evidence.

1116. (1878.) To make the admission of immaterial testimony ground for a new trial, it must at least have tended to prejudice the accused. Clough v. State, 7 Neb. 320.

1117. (1879.) If a witness for the prosecution in answer to a proper question give immaterial testimony prejudicial to the prisoner, which on objection is promptly excluded from the consideration of the jury, this is not ground for reversing the judgment. St. Louis v. State, 8 Neb. 405.

1118. (1886.) Where an objection to a question is sustained and the testimony excluded, if the witness is afterwards recalled and fully examined upon the matters presented by the former interrogatories the ruling of the court in sustaining the objection, even if erroneous, will not be sufficient cause for reversing a judgment unless it should affirmatively appear that the prisoner was prejudiced thereby. Ballard v. State, 19 Neb. 609 (28 N. W. 271); (1901) Coil v. State, 62 Neb. 15 (86 N. W. 925).

1119. (1891.) The admission of testimony of witnesses whose names had not been indorsed on the information is not prejudicial where they only testified to facts admitted by defendant in his testimony. Langford v. State, 32 Neb. 782 (49 N. W. 766).

1120. (1893.) In a criminal prosecution, evidence which on its face is clearly incompetent and prejudicial to the accused should not be introduced, and if the prosecution, without a promise to prove other facts to render it competent, is permitted to introduce such evidence and it is thus placed before the jury, an order of the court afterwards made to strike it out does not wholly cure the wrong and may be cause for reversing the judgment. Bedford v. State, 36 Neb. 702 (55 N. W. 263).

1121. (1894.) The admission of incompetent testimony to prove a fact is harmless error, where such fact is established by other evidence. Lamb v. State, 40 Neb. 312 (58 N. W. 963); (1895) Ford v. State, 46 Neb. 390 (64 N. W. 1082); (1897) Kelly v. State, 51 Neb. 572 (71 N. W. 299).

1122. (1897.) A case will not be reversed because of the limitation placed by the court upon the cross-examination of a witness as to his interest or bias, unless it appears from the record that the party against whom the witness was called was probably prejudiced by such limitation. Davis v. State, 51 Neb. 301 (70 N. W. 984).

1123. (1897.) Error cannot be predicated on the admission of testimony, where the fact sought to be established by it is subsequently admitted during the trial upon the record by the parties. Whitney v. State, 53 Neb. 287 (73 N. W. 696).

1124. (1898.) Admission of immaterial testimony is not ground for reversal where it did not prejudice the rights of the party complaining. Carrall v. State, 53 Neb. 431 (73 N. W. 939).

1125. (1901.) Overruling objections to an improper question to witnesses of defendant is not reversible error, when the answer was not prejudicial. Nightingale v. State, 62 Neb. 371 (87 N. W. 158).

1126. (1902.) Where a witness has testified in rebuttal that the defendant had been arrested prior to the time of the charge for which he was being tried, and such evidence is stricken out on motion of the defendant, he cannot predicate error thereon. McCormick v. State, 66 Neb. 337 (92 N. W. 740).

1127. (1903.) Error in sustaining an objection to a question is without prejudice, if the same question is afterwards asked and answered. Edwards v. State, 69 Neb. 386 (95 N. W. 1038); (1906) Reed v. State, 75 Neb. 509 (106 N. W. 649).

1128. (1907.) Where a defendant voluntarily testified as a witness in his own behalf, and the facts testified to by him, as well as sufficient other competent evidence, clearly show that he is guilty of the crime charged, a verdict of guilty will not be set aside on account of errors in the admission of evidence. O'Hearn v. State, 79 Neb. 513 (113 N. W. 130).

——— Instructions.

1129. (1874.) An erroneous instruction given on a point entirely outside of the case as made by the evidence furnishes no grounds for a reversal of a judgment otherwise correct. Caw v. State, 3 Neb. 357.

1130. (1883.) Although it may be found that detached portions of a charge are not technically correct, yet if, taking the whole charge together, the law was fairly given, and no prejudice done to the accused, the judgment will not be disturbed. Parrish v. State, 14 Neb. 60 (15 N. W. 357).

1131. (1886.) If one of the paragraphs in the charge of the court to the jury misstates the law upon a material point, such error will not be cured by another paragraph which states the law correctly, because the jury would be left in doubt as to which paragraph was correct. Ballard v. State, 19 Neb. 609 (28 N. W. 271); (1895) Barr v. State, 45 Neb. 458 (63 N. W. 856); (1895) Metz v. State, 46 Neb. 547 (65 N. W. 190); (1897) Raker v. State, 50 Neb. 202 (69 N. W. 749); (1897) Henry v. State, 51 Neb. 149 (70 N. W. 924; 66 Am. St. Rep. 450); (1897) Beck v. State, 51 Neb. 106 (70 N. W. 498); (1898) Bergeron v. State, 53 Neb. 752 (74 N. W. 253); (1899) Sweenie v. State, 59 Neb. 269 (80 N. W. 815); (1901) Thompson v. State, 61 Neb. 210 (85 N. W. 62; 87 Am. St. Rep. 453); (1901) Howell v. State, 61 Neb. 391 (85 N. W. 289).

1132. (1895.) The giving of an instruction that a misdemeanor prosecution was not barred until 18 months, instead of one year, is error without prejudice, where the undisputed evidence discloses that the act charged was committed less than a year prior to the filing of the complaint. Jolly v. State, 43 Neb. 857 (62 N. W. 300).

1133. (1895.) It is not reversible error to give an erroneous instruction where it could not have prejudiced the complaining party. Debney v. State, 45 Neb. 856 (64 N. W. 446; 34 L. R. A. 851); (1896) Hornberger v. State, 47 Neb. 40 (66 N. W. 23); (1897) Ferguson v. State, 52 Neb. 432 (72 N. W. 590; 66 Am. St. Rep. 512); (1897)

Whitney v. State, 53 Neb. 287 (73 N. W. 696); (1900) McArthur v. State, 60 Neb. 390 (83 N. W. 196).

1134. (1896.) Although there was a failure to instruct as to certain points, so that they were in effect withdrawn from the consideration of the jury, yet if it is clear that the jury have formed the right conclusion and no prejudice has resulted from the omission, it is not error which calls for a reversal of the judgment. Pjarrou v. State, 47 Neb. 294 (66 N. W. 422).

1135. (1896.) Where the evidence fails to show an offense of a less degree than that charged, the failure to give an instruction defining the lesser offense is not prejudicial error. Fager v. State, 49 Neb 439 (68 N. W. 611).

1136. (1897.) In an instruction the trial court used this language: "And if the jury find from the evidence that all the incriminating circumstances upon which the prosecution relies for a conviction will as well apply to some other person or persons as to the defendant, or if such facts and circumstances are reconcilable with any reasonable theory or hypothesis other than the guilt of the defendant, or if such facts and circumstances, together with the direct evidence offered in this case, do not satisfy the minds of the jury beyond any reasonable doubt of the guilt of defendant then you should, by your verdict, acquit him." Held, That the use of the expression "incriminating circumstances," if error, was without prejudice to the prisoner. Davis v. State, 51 Neb. 301 (70 N. W. 984).

1137. (1902.) The giving of an instruction which is an inaccurate sttaement of the law, is not reversible error, where it is immediately withdrawn and a proper instruction substituted. Reed v. State, 66 Neb. 184 (92 N. W. 321).

1138. (1903.) An instruction to the jury excepted to by the defendant examined, and, although incorrect in the way framed, held to be neither confusing nor prejudicial to the defendant. Martin v. State, 67 Neb. 36 (93 N. W. 161).

1139. (1907.) In a prosecution for murder in the first degree, if the evidence establishes conclusively that the defendant is either guilty of the crime charged or is entirely innocent, a failure to instruct the jury in regard to inferior degrees of the crime charged in the information is not prejudicial error. Clark v. State, 79 Neb. 482 (113 N. W. 804).

——— Arguments and conduct of counsel.

1140. (1896.) Where counsel for the state referred in an argument to the jury to facts not in evidence, and upon objection that the statements were unwarranted by the evidence the district court instructed the jury to disregard such statements, there was left no ground for complaint, for the reason that the court, when appealed to, granted all relief prayed for. Hoover v. State, 48 Neb. 184 (66 N. W. 1117); (1901) Argabright v. State, 62 Neb. 402 (87 N. W. 146).

1141. (1902.) Where a defendant in a criminal case was asked on cross-examination whether he did not serve a term in a reformatory institution, and an objection to the question was sustained and the jury directed to disregard it, held, that the incident was too trivial to exert any influence in the decision of the case. Reed v. State, 66 Neb. 184 (92 N. W. 321).

Errors waived in appellate court.

1142. (1901.) Rulings not argued are deemed waived. Russell v. State, 62 Neb. 512 (87 N. W. 344).

1142*a*. (1907.) General assignments of error for the admission or rejection of evidence will not be discussed unless specifically called to the attention of the court by brief or oral argument where no manifest error appears. Harris v. State, 80 Neb. 195 (114 N. W. 168).

Subsequent appeals.

1143. (1886.) A question having been decided in a previous ruling becomes the law of the case when before the court on a second hearing. Marion v. State, 20 Neb. 233 (29 N. W. 911; 57 Am. Rep. 825).

1144. (1901.) Where, in a criminal prosecution, instructions given the jury are assigned as error and on appeal such instructions held properly given, and on a subsequent trial the same instructions are given and again assigned as error, the decision of the question on the first appeal will be held to be the law of the case and followed in reviewing the case on the appeal last taken. Argabright v. State, 62 Neb. 402 (87 N. W. 146).

1145. (1901.) The defendant on a former trial was found guilty of murder in the first degree, and on error to the supreme court the evidence was examined and found sufficient to support the verdict. A subsequent trial resulted in a like verdict and on error it is again urged that the evidence is insufficient to support the verdict. The evidence against the defendant in the last trial being substantially the same and fully as strong and convincing, the decision on the former trial has become the law of the case. Argabright v. State, 62 Neb. 402 (87 N. W. 146).

1146. (1907.) If, upon a second appeal to the supreme court, the same state of facts substantially is presented as upon the former appeal, the former decision upon the sufficiency of the evidence settles the law of the case and is conclusive. Lucas v. State, 78 Neb. 454 (110 N. W. 145).

H. Determination and Disposition of Cause.

Reduction of sentence.

1147. (1889.) Under the provisions of the act approved March 31, 1887, it is made the duty of the supreme court in all criminal cases pending therein on error, where the sentence is excessive, to reduce the same and render such sentence against the person convicted, as is warranted by the evidence. Anderson v. State, 26 Neb. 387 (41 N. W. 951).

1148. (1889.) The act of reducing a sentence under the statute of 1887, and rendering such a one as is warranted by the evidence, is in no sense a commutation nor the exercise of clemency. That is an act of grace to be exercised or not by the executive alone, in his discretion. But the reduction of a sentence and the imposition of a new one based upon the testimony, is a right which every one convicted of a crime and upon whom a sentence higher than is warranted by the testimony has been imposed may demand under the act referred to. Anderson v. State, 26 Neb. 387 (41 N. W. 951).

1149. (1896.) A sentence should not be reduced in an error proceeding because of apparent undue severity. Barney v. State, 49 Neb. 515 (68 N. W. 636). [Overruled. Palmer v. State, 70 Neb. 136.]

1150. (1903.) Section 509*a* of the criminal code, which provides that the supreme court may reduce an excessive sentence and pronounce such sentence as is, in the opinion of the court, warranted by the evidence in the record before it, is not violative of the provision of the constitution which forbids the exercise by the judiciary of any power properly belonging to the executive branch of the government. Palmer v. State, 70 Neb. 136 (97 N. W. 235).

Reversal.

1151. (1882.) Where a judgment against a person for horse stealing was reversed, a judgment of conviction against one accused of concealing him should also be reversed, regardless of errors therein. Ray v. State, 13 Neb. 55 (13 N. W. 2).

1152. (1889.) Where a judgment of conviction, rendered in the district court against one charged with larceny, is reversed in the supreme court on the ground that there had been no preliminary examination as required by law, such accused is not necessarily discharged thereby, but proceedings against him may be commenced anew by making complaint under oath without releasing him from custody. White v. State, 28 Neb. 341 (44 N. W. 443).

1153. (1898.) A conviction will ordinarily be reversed where the attorney general declines to file a brief on the ground that the evidence is insufficient to sustain the judgment. Lorenz v. State, 53 Neb. 463 (73 N. W. 935).

——— Directing judgment in lower court.

1154. Where there is found no error in the record, except an irregularity in entering judgment upon the verdict, a cause will be remanded to the district court with instructions to enter judgment on the verdict in the manner prescribed by law. (1875) Dodge v. People, 4 Neb. 220; (1895) Griffen v. State, 46 Neb. 282 (64 N. W. 966); (1896) Hornberger v. State, 47 Neb. 40 (66 N. W. 23).

1155. (1904.) Where a prisoner has been found guilty on a criminal charge, and the only error that appears on the record is the failure of the court to pronounce a legal judgment against him, it is the proper practice, and the supreme court has the power, after setting aside the void or erroneous judgment, to remand the case and the accused, if sentence has not been suspended, to the district court, with instructions to render judgment on the verdict in the manner provided by law. McCormick v. State, 71 Neb. 505 (99 N. W. 237).

Term of imprisonment.

1157. (1892.) Under section 518 of the criminal code the term of imprisonment of one sentenced to the penitentiary dates from the sentence and not from the delivery of the prisoner to the warden of the penitentiary. In re Fuller, 34 Neb. 581 (52 N. W. 577).

Imprisonment in addition to fine.

1158. (1884.) A justice of the peace, in a proper case, may impose a fine not to exceed $100, or sentence to imprisonment not to exceed three months, but cannot, as a punishment for the same offense, impose both fine and imprisonment. In re Stewart, 16 Neb. 193 (20 N. W. 255).

Nature of property.

1. (1882.) Growing or standing cultivated crops have always, for most purposes, been deemed personal property; not so with growing wild grass and other natural products of the soil. Keith v. Tilford, 12 Neb. 271 (11 N. W. 315).

Subject to execution.

2. (1901.) Growing crops are subject to levy and sale irrespective of their stage of growth. Johns v. Kamarad, 2 Unof. 157 (96 N. W. 118).

Rights of execution purchaser to crops.

3. (1902.) A purchaser of land at execution sale is entitled to all crops planted thereon after confirmation. Jaques v. Dawes, 3 Unof. 752 (92 N. W. 570).

4. (1894.) A judgment debtor harvested a crop of wild grass from land after it had been sold on execution against him but before the confirmation of the sale. In an action of replevin brought by the purchaser of the real estate at the execution sale for said grass, held, that as the grass was severed from the realty before the confirmation of the sale, the title to the grass did not pass to the purchaser of the land. Yeazel v. White, 40 Neb. 432 (58 N. W. 1020; 24 L. R. A. 449).

5. (1902.) Annual crops growing on the land do not pass to the purchaser at judicial sale; and for the purpose of saving the debtor's rights thereto, these annual crops will be regarded as personalty. Aldrich v. Bank of Ohiowa, 64 Neb. 276 (89 N. W. 772; 97 Am. St. Rep. 643; 57 L. R. A. 920).

Effect of sale of land.

6. (1905.) Where, by the terms of a lease, rent is reserved in a share of the crops, the landlord and tenant are tenants in common of the growing crops, and in such case a purchaser of the real estate from the landlord during the term of the lease, in the absence of an agreement to the contrary, is not entitled to a portion of the crop belonging to the landlord which had been severed from the realty prior to the time he acquired title to the land upon which the crop was grown. Wendt v. Stewart, 74 Neb. 855 (105 N. W. 550).

Liability for destroying crops.

7. (1888.) One who negligently causes the destruction of growing crops is liable to the owner for their value. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Marley, 25 Neb. 138 (40 N. W. 498; 13 Am. St. Rep. 482).

7a. (1907.) The measure of damages for the destruction of a growing crop is the value of the crop at the time of its destruction. Berard v. Atchison & N. R. Co., 79 Neb. 830 (113 N. W. 537).

Rights of co-tenant.

8. (1894.) Where there is a contract between the owner of the land and another person whereby such other person is to cultivate the land and harvest the hay for a share thereof, but where the relation of landlord and tenant is not created, and there is no specific agreement as to the possession of the land, the parties become tenants in common of the grass and hay, and if one of the parties to such contract seize the whole crop either before or after severance, and dispose of it in denial of the other's rights, the other may maintain trover for his share. Reed v. McRill, 41 Neb. 206 (59 N. W. 775).

Rights to, as between tenant and receiver.

9. (1902.) Where an appeal is taken from an order of confirmation and a supersedeas granted and a receiver of the mortgaged premises is appointed pending such appeal, a tenant of the mortgagor is entitled to the crops, growing on the mortgaged premises at the time of such appointment, as against such receiver, whether such crops are mature or not. *Cassell v. Estate of curtesy subject to execution or mortgage, § 5.
Bar or forfeiture of right, §§ 6-8.
Right of lessee of wife, § 9.

CROSS-REFERENCE.

See, also, Dower.

Definition of curtesy.

1. (1879.) An estate by curtesy at common law is defined to be that estate to which a husband is entitled upon the death of his wife, in the lands and tenements of which she was seized in possession, in fee simple or in fee tail during the coverture; provided they have had issue born alive and possibly capable of inheriting her estate. Forbes v. Sweesy, 8 Neb. 520.

Rights in general.

2. (1879.) To entitle the husband to an estate by the curtesy the wife must have been seized in fact as well as in deed, and not merely a seizin in law. Forbes v. Sweesy, 8 Neb. 520.

2a. (1907.) Under our statute the husband is not entitled to an estate by the curtesy in lands of his deceased wife held by her under a contract of purchase. The estate of the wife to which the estate of curtesy may attach must be at the least a freehold. Granjean v. Beyl, 78 Neb. 349 (110 N. W. 1108).

3. (1903.) A surviving husband of a woman who died prior to the amendment of the statute of descent, in 1887, took a life estate in the property of the wife as tenant by the curtesy. Withnell v. Withnell, 69 Neb. 605 (96 N. W. 221).

Right of curtesy in equities of wife.

4. (1898.) A surviving husband, whose wife died in 1877, was not entitled to an estate of curtesy in lands in which she had a mere equitable estate at the time of her death. Hall v. Crabb, 56 Neb. 392 (76 N. W. 865).

Estate of curtesy subject to execution or mortgage.

5. (1892.) The life estate of a husband as tenant by the curtesy is subject to seizure and sale on execution against him. A tenant by the curtesy may likewise convey his title by deed or mortgage. Deming v. Miles, 35 Neb. 739 (53 N. W. 665; 37 Am. St. Rep. 464).

Bar or forfeiture of right.

6. (1888.) Where a will provides for the disposition of the testator's property among his children, and expressly provides that the share of one particular daughter shall be held in trust for her, and all control and interest therein shall be forever kept from her husband, such husband, upon the death of the wife, takes no estate in the wife's property as tenant by curtesy. McCollough v. Valentine, 24 Neb. 215 (38 N. W. 854).

7. (1892.) The fact that a husband was the grantor in a deed to his wife will not bar his right to an estate by curtesy, since such right is not limited by conveyance. Deming v. Miles, 35 Neb. 739 (53 N. W. 665; 37 Am. St. Rep. 464).

8. (1905.) The right by curtesy is distinguishable from the right by dower in this: that it may be defeated by the deed of the wife and without the consent of the husband. Hiskett v. Bozarth, 75 Neb. 70 (105 N. W. 990).

Right of lessee of wife.

9. (1879.) A lessee of a wife, claiming under a lease of her separate estate and made during her coverture, is, after her death, entitled to possession of the premises until the end of the term as against purchasers at execution sale of the husband's curtesy. Forbes v. Sweesy, 8 Neb. 520.

Necessity of knowledge of custom.

3. (1896.) Proof of knowledge is required to give effect to a custom, unless it is so widely and generally known, and so well established, as that knowledge thereof may well be presumed. Union Stock Yards Co. v. Westcott, 47 Neb. 300 (66 N. W. 419).

4. (1897.) Proof of knowledge is required to give effect to a custom not widely and generally known. Frey v. Curtis, 52 Neb. 406 (72 N. W. 478).

5. (1903.) One not shown to have knowledge of a trade usage confined to a particular business, which is not shown to be of such a general and notorious character that he must have been presumed to have contracted with reference to it, is not bound by such usage. Bixby v. Bruce, 69 Neb. 78 (95 N. W. 34).

Admissibility to interpret contract.

9. (1894.) Parties to contracts are bound thereby and evidence of customs and usages cannot be received as a substitute. American Building & Loan Ass'n v. Mordock, 39 Neb. 413 (58 N. W. 107).

10. (1897.) The business usage of a particular individual is not admissible to interpret a contract between that individual and another in the absence of proof of knowledge by the latter of such usage. Gamble v. Stauber Mfg. Co., 50 Neb. 463 (69 N. W. 960).

11. (1897.) Custom or usage in trade or business may be shown for the purpose of interpreting a contract or controlling its execution, although not for the purpose of changing its intrinsic character, provided it be known to the party sought to be charged, or is so well settled and so uniformly acted upon as to warrant the presumption that it was known to both contracting parties and that they contracted with reference to it. McKee v. Wild, 52 Neb. 9 (71 N. W. 958).

12. (1892.) Where a foreign corporation owning a ranch in Wyoming appoints one as its manager with power limited to the hiring and paying of necessary help, and the payment of current expenses, in an action of replevin by the principal against a purchaser of cattle from such ranch manager it was error to receive evidence on the part of the defendants to prove that, at the time they purchased the cattle from A., it was the custom or usage of managers of cattle companies doing business in Wyoming to sell the cattle from the ranches of such companies, in the absence of any evidence that the plaintiff company had knowledge of such usage. Milwaukee & Wyoming Investment Co. v. Johnston, 35 Neb. 554 (53 N. W. 475).

Waiver of error of admission of evidence.

13. (1888.) Where both parties call witnesses to establish usage, neither can assign error in the admission of such testimony. Howell & Co. v. Graff-Murray Co., 25 Neb. 130 (41 N. W. 142).

I. NATURE AND GROUNDS.

In general.

1. (1894.) The law awards damages, for personal injuries resulting from negligence, as compensation for pecuniary loss, pain and suffering, and not as a punishment of the negligent party. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Leslie, 41 Neb. 159 (59 N. W. 559).

General and special damages.

2. (1894.) General damages are such as the jury may give when the judge cannot point out any measure by which they are to be ascertained except the opinion and judgment of a reasonable man. Special damages are such as by competent evidence are directly traceable to defendant's failure to discharge his contract obligations, or such duties as are imposed upon him by law. Bank of Commerce v. Goos, 39 Neb. 437 (58 N. W. 84; 23 L. R. A. 190).

Failure to comply with statutes.

3. (1894.) Proof of a defective compliance with laws of congress as to acquiring a railroad right of way across the public domain, without more, cannot be made a ground for the recovery of damages as against the party whose duty it was to properly secure such right. Fitzgerald v. Fitzgerald & Mallory Construction Co., 41 Neb. 374 (59 N. W. 838); 44 Neb. 463 (62 N. W. 899).

II. NOMINAL DAMAGES.

In general.

4. (1894.) Where a breach, by defendant, of an actually existing contract between plaintiff and defendant is proven, plaintiff is entitled to at least nominal damages. Mollyneaux v. Wittenberg, 39 Neb. 547 (58 N. W. 205).

5. (1900.) Failure to award nominal damages is not reversible error where it does not affect a substantial right or entitle plaintiff to costs. Heater v. Pearce, 59 Neb. 583 (81 N. W. 615).

III. GROUNDS AND SUBJECT OF COMPENSATORY DAMAGES.

Consequence of being ejected from train as element, see Carriers, § 359.

Injury to business or credit by wrongful attachment as element, see Attachment, §§ 463-469.

Pain and loss of time as element for ejecting passenger, see Carriers, § 356.

Damages recoverable from carrier for loss of goods, see Carriers, § 94.

Mental suffering of beneficiary as element of, for wrongful death, see Death, § 56.

In general.

6. (1902.) In an action for damages, whether upon contract or for tort, compensatory damages can alone be recovered, and only such as are the probable, direct and approximate consequences of the wrong complained of, and such as may fairly be supposed to have been within the contemplation of the accused party at the time the cause of action arose. Karbach v. Fogel, 63 Neb. 601 (88 N. W. 659).

Rental value.

7. (1898.) In estimating the value of real estate, its rental value may be taken into consideration. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Sturey, 55 Neb. 137 (75 N. W. 557).

What is market value.

8. (1898.) Market value is not what property is worth solely for the purpose for which it is devoted, but the highest price it will bring for any and all uses to which it is adapted, and for which it is available. Maul v. Drexel, 55 Neb. 446 (76 N. W. 163).

Proximate consequences.

9. (1881.) In an action against a city to recover for damages caused by a defective sidewalk, plaintiff could only recover for those damages which were directly traceable to the injury and negligence complained of as the probable cause, and damages caused by the negligence of the plaintiff in the employment of medical aid were not chargeable to the city. City of Crete v. Childs, 11 Neb. 252 (9 N. W. 55).

10. (1895.) The wrong done and injury sustained must bear toward each other the relation of cause and effect, and the damages must be the natural and proximate consequence of the act complained of. Fitzgerald v. Fitzgerald & Mallory Construction Co., 44 Neb. 463 (62 N. W. 899).

Remote and consequential.

11. (1901.) In an action for negligence of an officer of a bank, remote and consequential damages can not be recovered. Fiala v. Ainsworth, 63 Neb. 1 (88 N. W. 135; 93 Am. St. Rep, 420).

Past and prospective damages.

12. (1904.) Where an obstruction causing the overflow of water and consequent damage to adjacent lands is of such a character that, unless interefered with by the hand of man, it will continue indefinitely. the damages, past and prospective, are recoverable in one action, and successive actions therefor can not be maintained. Gartner v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 71 Neb. 444 (98 N. W. 1052).

Expense of replacing property.

13. (1899.) In an action for damages for destroying an advertising sign on a building in Omaha, railroad fare of a workman sent from Chicago to replace the sign cannot be allowed as an element of damages, in the absence of evidence that there was no available competent person nearer. Shiverick v. Gunning, 59 Neb. 73 (80 N. W. 264).

Expenses incurred. www.libtool.com.cn

14. (1893.) There can be no recovery for expenses incurred in efforts to cure an injury, unless it be shown that the expense so incurred was reasonably necessary. Hewitt v. Eisenbart, 36 Neb. 794 (55 N. W 252).

14*a*. (1897.) In an action ex delicto where expenses incurred by reason of the tort are recoverable, it is not essential that the plaintiff should have actually paid the money. It is sufficient if he has incurred a legal obligation to do so. Minneapolis Threshing Machine Co. v. Regier, 51 Neb. 402 (70 N. W. 934).

Loss of profits.

15. (1879.) Where one causes a loss to a crop of wheat by breach of his contract to cut the same when ripe, the measure of damages is the value of the crop. Kelley v. Peterson, 9 Neb. 76 (2 N. W. 346).

16. (1890.) Where one contracts to furnish a heating apparatus in complete working order, to a specified degree of temperature, for a newly erected building, and the owner of the building rescinds the contract and refuses to allow the furnace to be placed in the building, the measure of damage recoverable by the seller is the amount of the profits that would have been realized under the contract. Hale v. Hess, 30 Neb. 42 (46 N. W. 261).

17. (1894.) In an action by an agent against a manufacturer for breach of a contract granting the former the exclusive right to sell manufactured articles in a specified territory, the measure of damages is the profit which he shows he was prevented from realizing. Russell v. Horn, Brannen & Forsyth Mfg. Co., 41 Neb. 567 (59 N. W. 901).

18. (1896.) The general rule is that the party injured by breach of contract is entitled to recover all his damages, including gains prevented as well as losses sustained, provided they are certain and such as might naturally be expected to follow the breach. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Wilhelm, 48 Neb. 918 (67 N. W. 870).

19. (1898.) In an action for personal injuries, where there is no evidence of emancipation, recovery should not be permitted for loss of earning power during plaintiff's minority. Swift v. Holoubek, 55 Neb. 228 (75 N. W. 584).

20. (1898.) A party injured by breach of contract may recover for gains prevented, provided they are within the established rules permitting consequential damages, and provided they can be proved to a reasonable degree of certainty. Wittenberg v. Mollyneaux, 55 Neb. 429 (75 N. W. 835).

21. (1900.) A party may recover for gains prevented as well as for losses sustained, when such damages are not only certain, but are the natural and probable result of the wrong complained of. Wittenberg v. Mollyneaux, 60 Neb. 583 (83 N. W. 842).

22. (1902.) In an action brought by plaintiff to recover damages for a breach of contract, whereby he was to receive as compensation for caring for a flock of sheep, one-half of the increase and one-half of the wool clip, held, that plaintiff was entitled to recover for such profits or advantages, the direct and immediate fruits of his contract as were lost by such breach of contract on the part of the defendant. Schrandt v. Young, 2 Unof. 546 (89 N. W. 607).

23. (1904.) Instructions examined, and held to not permit a recovery for loss of earnings during plaintiff's minority. City of South Omaha v. Sutliffe, 72 Neb. 746 (101 N. W. 997).

24. (1904.) In an action for breach of a contract to perform services, plaintiff can recover the excess he is obliged to pay to another for the services, only from the date of the breach to the date when the action was commenced and not to the date when the contract would have expired. Brown v. Cowles, 72 Neb. 896 (101 N. W. 1020).

Duty to reduce loss.

25. (1879.) On becoming aware that one contracting to cut grain would not perform his contract the other should make all reasonable effort to reduce the loss. Kelly v. Peterson, 9 Neb. 76 (2 N. W. 346).

26. (1881.) If plaintiff himself is in inexcusable default, he cannot recover for defendant's breach of a contract. Reynolds v. Burlington & M. P. R. Co., 11 Neb. 186 (7 N. W. 737).

27. (1884.) In addition to the general measure of damages, the law, in some cases, imposes upon a party injured from another's breach of contract or tort the active duty of making reasonable exertions to render the injury as light as possible. Where this duty exists, the labor or expense which its performance involves is chargeable to the party liable for the injury thus mitigated. Long & Smith v. Clapp, 15 Neb. 417 (19 N. W. 467).

28. (1393.) If through negligence a party permits the damage to him from the breach of a contract to unnecessarily enhance, the increased loss falls upon him. He should use all reasonable means to reduce the loss. Loomer v. Thomas, 38 Neb. 277 (56 N. W. 973).

29. (1895.) It is the duty of a party suffering damages from breach of a contract to exert himself to lighten damages, and he cannot recover damages which would have been avoided had he performed such duty. Uhlig v. Barnum, 43 Neb. 584 (61 N. W. 749).

30. (1895.) One whose chattels are injured by the negligence of another cannot, by voluntarily abandoning what remains, charge that other with the total value of the chattels; and where there was evidence tending to show that the destruction was not total and that the plaintiff had so voluntarily abandoned what remained, it was error to instruct the jury that the measure of damages was the market value of the chattels before the injury. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Metcalf, 44 Neb. 848 (63 N. W. 51; 28 L. R. A. 824).

Interest.

31. (1888.) Where property is destroyed by the negligence of another the owner will be entitled to interest on the value of such property from the time of its destruction. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Marley, 25 Neb. 138 (40 N. W. 948).

32. (1896.) Where the rendition of judgment on a verdict for the plaintiff in an action of contract or tort is delayed during the pendency of a motion for a new trial on behalf of defendant, it is not error to render judgment for the amount of the verdict and interest from its date to the date of rendition of judgment. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Root, 49 Neb. 900 (69 N. W. 397).

32*a*. (1899.) Where the amount to be recovered is unliquidated interest will not be allowed. Wittenberg v. Mollyneaux, 59 Neb. 203 (80 N. W. 834). [Overruled. Parkins v. Missouri P. R. Co., 76 Neb. 242 (107 N. W. 260).]

32*b*. (1906.) Interest will be allowed on the recovery of damages when the damages are capable of being definitely ascertained. Parkins v. Missouri P. R. Co., 76 Neb. 242 (107 N. W. 260).

33. (1896.) Where property is destroyed by the negligence of another, the owner is entitled to interest on its value from the time of its destruction. Union P. R. Co v. Ray, 46 Neb. 750 (65 N. W. 773).

IV. LIQUIDATED DAMAGES AND PENALTIES.

In general.

34. (1896.) An agreement to convey land providing for a forfeiture held to be a provision for liquidated damages upon a default of the promisor. Lorius v. Abbott, 49 Neb. 214 (68 N. W. 486).

Construction of stipulation.

35. (1890.) In construing a contract to determine whether or not a provision therein for the payment of a stipulated sum in case of default by one of the parties is to be considered as a penalty or liquidated damages, the court will consider the subject matter, the language employed, and the intention of the parties. If the construction is doubtful, the agreement will be considered a penalty merely. If damages result from the performance or omission of acts, which damages are certain or can be ascertained by evidence, the stipulated sum is considered as a penalty; but where the acts or omissions occasioning damages are not susceptible of measurement by a pecuniary standard, the sum stipulated ordinarily will be regarded as liquidated damages. Brennan v. Clark, 29 Neb. 385 (45 N. W. 472).

36. (1894.) The courts, in determining whether a sum fixed by a contract to be paid for its violation is liquidated damages or a penalty, will take into consideration the subject matter of the contract, the consideration on which it is based, the intention of the parties, and the language of the contract; but these facts, nor any of them, nor all of them, will not necessarily control the court's construction. Gillilan v. Rollins, 41 Neb. 540 (59 N. W. 893).

Certainty as to amount.

37. (1890.) A provision in a building contract that the contractor shall pay a stipulated sum per day after a certain date if he failed to complete the building at the time designated is in the nature of penalty and not liquidated damages. Brennan v. Clark, 29 Neb. 385 (45 N. W. 472).

Stipulation as to amount.

38. (1894.) When parties to a contract stipulate that in case of a violation thereof the party making default shall pay to the other a stipulated sum, the courts will take the sum so fixed as the innocent party's measure of damages only when it appears that to do so will no more than compensate his losses. Gillilan v. Rollins, 41 Neb. 540 (59 N. W. 893).

38*a*. (1891.) A provision in an executory contract to sell and deliver 3,500 sheep at a stipulated price per hundred pounds, that the party making default shall forfeit to the other party $1,000, is in the nature of a penalty when the actual damages by reason of such default may be readily determined. Squires v. Elwood, 33 Neb. 126 (49 N. W. 939).

39. (1894.) When parties to a contract stipulate that in case of the violation thereof the party making default shall pay to the other a stipulated sum, if the taking as the measure of damages the sum fixed in the contract to be paid for its breach will more than compensate the innocent party, the court will regard such sum as a penalty. Gillilan v. Rollins, 41 Neb. 540 (59 N. W. 893).

40. (1901.) When parties to a contract stipulate that in case of a violation thereof the party making default shall pay to the other a stipulated sum as liquidated damages, the courts will take the sum so fixed as the innocent party's measure of damages, only, when it appears that to do so will no more than compensate his loss. Lee v. Carroll Normal School Co., 1 Unof. 681 (96 N. W. 65).

41. (1901.) If the measure of damages fixed in the contract, to be paid for its breach, will more than compensate the innocent party, the court will regard such sum as a penalty. Lee v. Carroll Normal School Co., 1 Unof. 681 (96 N. W. 65).

V. EXEMPLARY DAMAGES.

Right to exemplary damages.

42. (1881.) Exemplary or punitive damages are not recoverable in this state. Riewe v. McCormick, 11 Neb. 261 (9 N. W. 88).

43. (1886.) Punitive damages are not given in this state in any class of cases between private parties. Boldt v. Budwig, 19 Neb. 739 (28 N. W. 280).

44. (1901.) No recovery can be had of punitive or exemplary damages. In theory, at least, the damages recoverable are the pecuniary equivalent of the injury. Mangold v. Oft, 63 Neb. 397 (88 N. W. 507).

45. (1894.) It is not the policy of the law to punish a party for violating his contract, but to compel him to make good to others the losses they have sustained by his default. Gillilan v. Rollins, 41 Neb. 540 (59 N. W. 893).

46. (1896.) The law awards damages to a person injured through negligence of another, not as punishment, but as compensation for pecuniary loss and for pain and suffering. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. French, 48 Neb. 638 (67 N. W. 472).

VI. MEASURE OF DAMAGES.

Measure in attachment, see Attachment, §§ 426, 427.

Measure for wrongful attachment, see Attachment, §§ 463-469.

For conversion of mortgaged chattels, see Chattel Mortgages, § 184.

Damage recoverable for wrongful appointment of receiver, see Receivers, §§ 126-130.

Measure of damage for fraud in sale of land, see Vendor and Purchaser, §§ 432-447.

A. Personal Injuries.

For assault and battery, see Assault and Battery, §§ 28-36.

Ejecting passengers from train or cars, see Carriers, §§ 356-360.

Measure of, for loss of wife's services, see Husband and Wife, § 235.

Damage for criminal conversation, see Husband and Wife, §§ 271, 272.

Measure of, in libel and slander, see Libel and Slander, §§ 107-111.

Measure and element of damages for wrongful injunction, see Injunction, §§ 180-196.

Alienation of affection as element of damage for libel or slander, see Libel and Slander, § 111.

Measure of, in action against liquor dealer, see Intoxicating Liquors, §§ 441-452.

Bodily pain and suffering.

47. (1907.) In an action to recover for a personal injury suffered on account of the alleged negligence of the defendant, the instructions should limit the recovery for future pain and suffering to such as are reasonably certain to result from the injury. Nixon v. Omaha & C. B. Street R. Co., 79 Neb. 550 (113 N. W. 117).

47a. (1889.) Wherein an action for damages by reason of a personal injury, the court instructed the jury, among other things, that in case they found for the plaintiff in the action they could take into consideration bodily pain and suffering, loss of time and reduction of plaintiff's ability to earn money in her business and calling; the instruction was sustained as being applicable to the evidence produced on the trial Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Starmer, 26 Neb. 630 (42 N. W. 706).

Future injuries.

48. (1898.) Where medical experts had testified to results which would in their opinion follow from personal injuries and with reference to other results which they believe might follow, held not erroneous to instruct the jury that the party injured was entitled to recover damages for such injuries as the jury believed from the evidence such party might labor under in the future as the result of the injuries. Omaha Street R. Co v. Emminger, 57 Neb. 240 (77 N. W. 675).

49. (1902.) In an action for personal injuries, compensation can be recovered only for such future damages as are shown with reasonable certainty to be a consequence thereof. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. McDowell, 66 Neb. 170 (92 N. W. 121).

Social standing.

50. (1904.) Under the issues involved in this case, held not error to omit from a general instruction on the measure of damages any reference to the social standing of plaintiff's mother. City of South Omaha v. Sutliffe, 72 Neb. 746 (101 N. W. 997).

Medical services and expense.

51. (1894.) Where an injured party, by reason of the injury which is the foundation of the action, has incurred necessary expenses for medical attendance, nursing, etc., and has become liable or indebted for the payment of such expenses, the reasonable and fair valuation of such services may be recovered, although not yet paid by the party injured. City of Friend v. Ingersoll, 39 Neb. 717 (58 N. W. 281).

52. (1897.) In an action for personal injuries, plaintiff may recover the reasonable value of medical services rendered, not to exceed the expense incurred therefor. Golder v. Lund, 50 Neb. 867 (70 N. W. 379.

53. (1898.) When a party is liable for services rendered by a surgeon he may recover the reasonable value of such services where they were necessitated by the injuries for the compensation of which he has brought his action, notwithstanding the fact that he has not actually compensated such surgeon. Omaha Street R. Co. v. Emminger, 57 Neb. 240 (77 N. W. 675).

54. (1903.) In an action for personal injuries by a married woman, she is not entitled to recover the value of medical services rendered, in the absence of proof that she has paid for such medical services, or that she is the owner of a separate estate which might become liable therefor. Pomerene Co. v. White, 70 Neb. 177 (98 N. W. 1040).

55. (1881.) A plaintiff who was injured by a defective sidewalk can recover only for the damages directly traceable to the injury, and damages caused by negligence of plaintiff in the employment of medical aid not chargeable to the city. City of Crete v. Childs, 11 Neb. 252 (9 N. W. 55).

Mental suffering.

56. (1893.) In an action for personal injuries, mental suffering and anxiety caused by a physical injury are elements of damage whether or not the injury was due to the wilful act of defendant. American Water-Works Co. v. Dougherty, 37 Neb. 373 (55 N. W. 1051).

57. (1894.) Compensation for mental suffering is an element of damage in actions for trespass to property where the wrongful act was inspired by fraud or malice. Murray v. Mace, 41 Neb. 60 (59 N. W. 387; 43 Am. St. Rep. 664).

58. (1894.) Where a married woman is injured by the negligence of another, two causes of action arise, one for the wife for physical and mental suffering, loss of earning capacity, etc., and the other for the husband for loss of his wife's services and society and for reasonable expenses by him incurred. Omaha & R. V. R. Co. v. Chollette, 41 Neb. 578 (59 N. W. 921).

59. (1895.) Mental and bodily suffering is incapable of measurement by any fixed and arbitrary rule, but must from its nature depend largely upon the judgment of the jury, governed by the circumstances of each particular case. St. Joseph & G. I. R. Co. v. Hedge, 44 Neb. 448 (62 N. W. 887).

60. (1902.) In an action for damages in which injury to the feelings is alleged as an element of damages, the jury can not act capriciously, and allow damages for imaginary injuries, not warranted by the evidence. An instruction which fails to properly warn the jury in that regard, and will admit of the construction that the jury is not to be governed by the evidence in estimating such damages, is erroneous. Hoover v. Haynes, 65 Neb. 557, 564 (93 N. W. 732).

B. Injuries to Property.

Damages for trespassing animals, see Animals, § 104.

Measure of, for changing street grade, see Municipal Corporations, §§ 371-379.

For destroying crops, see Crops, § 7

Interest on award in eminent domain, see Eminent Domain, §§ 223-225.

Measure and amount for taking property under eminent domain, see Eminent Domain, §§ 86-137.

Element of, for property taken under condemnation proceedings, see Eminent Domain, §§ 68-85.

For overflow of land by reason of construction of railroads, see Railroads, §§ 131-146.

Measure of, for spread of fire by railroads, see Railroads, §§ 385-390.

Measure of, for conversion of property, see Trover and Conversion, §§ 98-120.

Damage for flooding lands, see Water and Watercourses, §§ 132, 133.

Measure of, and assessment for erecting dam in streams, see Water and Watercourses, §§ 168, 169.

Injury to personal property.

61. (1888.) Where growing crops are destroyed through the negligence of another the owner may recover from the party at fault the value of such crops. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Marley, 25 Neb. 138 (40 N. W. 948).

62. (1895.) Where chattels are injured by the negligence of another, but not wholly destroyed, the measure of damages is the difference btwen th value of the chattels immediately before the injury and immediately thereafter. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Metcalf, 44 Neb. 848 (63 N. W. 51; 28 L. R. A. 824).

62*a*. (1906.) In an action for damage to merchandise, the original cost of the goods is not a proper basis for the computation of damages. In such case, the measure of damages is the difference between the value of the goods immediately before and immediately after the injury. City of McCook v. McAdams, 76 Neb. 1 (106 N. W. 988).

63. (1894.) Where the wrong consists in the taking or destruction of personal property without fraud, malice, or other aggravating circumstances, the measure of damage is compensation for the plaintiff's loss, which is ordinarily the value of the property with such incidental damage as may be shown to be the natural and proximate result of the act charged. Murray v. Mace, 41 Neb. 60 (59 N. W. 387; 43 Am. St. Rep. 664).

Destroying trees by fire.

64. (1896.) In an action for negligently setting out fire destroying trees on the land of the plaintiff the measure of damages is damages suffered by such trees. In ascertaining such damages the inquiry should be not alone as to the value of the trees before their injury, but should be as to the difference in value before and after the fire. Kansas City & O. R. Co. v. Rogers, 48 Neb. 653 (67 N. W. 602).

64*a*. (1906.) The measure of damages to growing trees, having no value for purposes of transplanting, is the value of the trees with reference to the land in the situation in which they stood prior to the damage, less their value for practical purposes afterwards. Union P. R. Co. v. Murphy, 76 Neb. 545 (107 N. W. 757).

Delay of enforcing execution by obtaining injunction.

65. (1902.) Where the collection of a judgment is enjoined and one of the elements of damage sought to be recovered is for delay in its collection, the proper measure for this element of damage is additional court costs, if any, and interest at the rate which the judgment draws during the time of such delay. First Nat. Bank of Harvard v. Hockett, 2 Unof. 512 (89 N. W. 412).

Wrongful sale of realty.

66. (1894.) Where the plaintiff sells land of defendant under execution upon a judgment which the latter has paid, the measure of damages defendant may recover is the fair market value of his interest in the land at the time it was sold by the sheriff. Pope v. Benster, 42 Neb. 304 (60 N. W. 561; 47 Am. St. Rep. 703).

Use of property by bailee.

67. (1905.) The measure of damages for the unauthorized use of the property of another by a bailee therof is not the value that may be produced by the labor and investment of the bailee, combined with such use of the property, but is the value of the use itself and any damage that may be done to the property in so using it, or, if the use amounts to a conversion, then the measure of damages will be the value of the property. State v. State Journal Co., 75 Neb. 275 (106 N. W. 434; 9 L. R. A. [n. s.] 174).

Negligence of bank in making collection, see Banks and Banking, § 255.

For refusal of bank to pay check, see Banks and Banking, §§ 197, 198.

Measure for loss to live stock by carrier, see Carriers, § 161.

Amount recoverable in action for breach of contract, see Contracts, §§ 523-560.

For breach of covenant, see Covenants, §§ 77-82.

For breach of marriage promise, see Breach of Marriage Promise, §§ 3, 4.

Amount recoverable from agent for negligence, see Principal and Agent, §§ 72, 73.

Measure of recovery for error in telegram, see Telegraphs and Telephones, §§ 49-54.

In general.

68. (1879.) A party may recover as damages, for the breach of a contract to cut grain, the value of the entire crop, if it is shown the damages amount to so much, and they are the proximate result of the breach. Kelley v. Peterson, 9 Neb. 76 (2 N. W. 346).

69. (1880.) Whn a contract has been established, the measure of recovery is the price agreed upon in the contract less the damages sustained by the employer by the breach of the same. McMillan v. Mallory, 10 Neb. 228 (4 N. W. 1004; 35 Am. St. Rep. 471).

70. (1884.) When two parties have made a contract which one of them has broken, the damages which the other party ought to receive in respect of such breach of contract should be such as may fairly and reasonably be considered either arising naturally; i. e., according to the usual course of things from such breach of contract itself, or such as may reasonably be supposed to have been in the contemplation of both parties at the time they made the contract as the probable result of the breach of it. Aultman & Co. v. Stout, 15 Neb. 586 (19 N. W. 464).

70*a*. (1894.) It is not the policy of the law to punish a party for violating his contract, but to compel him to make good the losses others have sustained by his default. Gillilan v. Rollins, 41 Neb. 540 (59 N. W. 893).

71. (1902.) The general rule is that the injured party is entitled to recover such damages as naturally and reasonably result from a breach of a contract or as may reasonably be supposed to have been in contemplation of the parties as a result of such breach when the contract was made. Punteney-Mitchell Mfg. Co. v. Northwall Co., 66 Neb. 5 (91 N. W. 863).

72. (1904.) The rule is elementary that in an action for damages for breach of contract such damages only may be recovered as are probable, direct and proximate consequences of the wrong complained of, and such as may fairly be supposed to have been within the contemplation of the parties at the time of the making of the contract as a probable result of the breach of the same. Brown v. Cowles, 72 Neb. 896 (101 N. W. 1020).

73. (1898.) One rescinding a contract on the ground of fraud cannot recover damages sustained by reason of the fraud. Smith v. Meyers, 56 Neb. 503 (76 N. W. 1084).

Total failure to perform.

74. (1903.) Where the contract is entire, is one for personal services only and the breach of it is total, the measure of damages is what the plaintiff would have earned, less what it would have cost him to perform it according to its terms. School District of Omaha v. McDonald, 68 Neb. 610 (94 N. W. 829).

75. (1901.) When one commits a total breach of his contract to cultivate lands of another in a workmanlike manner to a specific crop, the measure of damages is the injury to the lands, if any, from allowing them to lie idle and become foul with weeds, and the probable value of the landowner's share of the crop, had the contract been fulfilled. Culley v. Taylor, 62 Neb. 651 (87 N. W. 341).

76. (1894.) Where plaintiff was appointed the exclusive agent for the sale of defendant's goods in a territory, the measure of his damage for defendant's failure to deliver goods to a purchaser procured by him, was the difference between the price at which defendant had agreed to deliver, and the market value of such goods at the time and place when and where they should have been delivered. Russell v. Horn, Brannen & Forsyth Mfg. Co., 41 Neb. 567 (59 N. W. 901).

Partial performance.

77. (1880.) Where a person contracts to thresh the whole of another's crop of grain at a certain price per bushel, but, after threshing about one-third, refused to further carry out his contract, the part performance being beneficial to the employer, the employee may recover for the value of his labor less the damage done the other by reason of the breach of the contract. McMillan v. Mallory, 10 Neb. 228 (4 N. W. 1004; 35 Am. St. Rep. 471).

78. (1894.) Where there has been a partial performance of a contract and an offer to perform the balance, the measure of damages is compensation for the part performed, and the profits to be made under the contract. Roberts v. Drehmer, 41 Neb. 306 (59 N. W. 911).

79. (1895.) Where the time for completing a continuing contract has not expired the plaintiff, in an action for a breach thereof, can only recover the damages sustained before the suit was instituted. Terry v. Beatrice Starch Co., 43 Neb. 866 (62 N. W. 255).

Partial performance of building contract.

80. (1894. Where a contractor agrees with the owner of real estate to furnish the material and labor and erect for him an improvement thereon, and such contractor voluntarily abandons the work before completion, the owner may charge the contractor with (a) the necessary costs of completing the improvement as the contractor agreed to complete it, (b) the amount of all payments made to the contractor on the contract, (c) the amount of all valid liens on the real estate for labor and material furnished the contractor and used by him in such improvement, and (d) the amount of actual damages the owner has sustained by reason of the contractor's default. The difference between the total of these items and the contract price is the measure of damages of both the owner and contractor. Von Dorn v. Mengedoht, 41 Neb. 525 (59 N. W. 800).

81. (1894.) Where a contractor agrees with the owner of real estate to furnish the material and labor and erect for him an improvement thereon, and the owner rightfully authorizing him to do so upon the happening of certain contingencies, then the contractor is entitled to recover from the owner the actual benefit he has received from the contractor's partial performance; and this is found by ascertaining the reasonable worth of such partial performance appropriated or received by the owner at the time of such receipt or appropriation, and deducting therefrom payments made to the contractor, and the actual damages, if any, the owner has sustained by the contractor's default, if he has made one. Von Dorn v. Mengedoht, 41 Neb. 525 (59 N. W. 800).

82. (1901.) The measure of damages for the breach of a contract to complete a building within the contract time is the loss of the possession of the building as a thing of use. Lee v. Carroll Normal School Co., 1 Unof. 681 (96 N. W. 65).

Preventing or obstructing performance.

83. (1890.) If a contract for particular work is partly performed, and the employer puts an end to it without fault of the contracting party, he is liable for the profits to be made under the contract as well as for compensation for work already done. Hale v. Hess, 30 Neb. 42 (46 N. W. 261).

84. (1894.) Where a contractor agrees with the owner of real estate, to furnish the material and labor, and erect for him an improvement thereon, and the owner wrongfully terminates the same or the contractor's employment thereunder before the completion of the work, the contractor's measure of damages is the reasonable value of his partial performance increased by all actual damages sustained by him by reason of the owner's unjustifiable termination of the contract. Von Dorn v. Mengedoht, 41 Neb. 525 (59 N. W. 800).

85. (1896.) In a suit against a party for wrongfully terminating work under a contract, plaintiff's measure of damages is the profit he would have made by completing it. Kreamer v. Irwin, 46 Neb. 827 (65 N. W. 885).

86. (1897.) Where one party to an express contract is wrongfully prevented by the other party from completing, he may sue upon the contract for a breach thereof, and the measure of his damages will be the value of the part performed as measured by the contract price plus the profits, if any, which would have accrued to him had he completed the contract according to its terms; or he may ignore the contract and declare upon a quantum meruit or quantum valebat, in which case the measure of his damages will be the fair and reasonable value of what he has done. Thompson v. Gaffey, 52 Neb. 317 (72 N. W. 314).

87. (1897.) There is, in principle, as well as on authority, a wide distinction between contracts for personal service and for the doing of specific acts. In the former case, unless the plaintiff, who has been discharged without sufficient cause, is able to secure other employment, the contract price furnishes the exact measure of his damage. In the latter class of cases the measure of damage upon the violation of the agreement by the employer is that asserted by the district court, viz., the plaintiff's probable profit; in other words, the difference, if any, in his favor between the contract price and the sum it would have cost to complete the work. Jewett v. Wilmot, 51 Neb. 700 (71 N. W. 775).

Agreement to give security.

88. (1887.) Where A being indebted to B fraudulently procured C to execute to B a mortgage for $2,650, with statements that B would furnish that amount, the proceeds to be applied to the payment of a mortgage of $1,200 already on the land and a $900 note held by A, with remainder in cash, and instead A procured only $1,000 from B and applied the $1,650 to the payment of his indebtedness, the measure of C's damages in an action against A would be the $1,650 and legal interest thereon, notwithstanding the fact that by the increased mortgage liens on C's land he was unable to borrow sufficient to discharge them, and by subsequent foreclosure proceedings the land was sold and C's title destroyed. Forbes v. Thomas, 22 Neb. 541 (35 N. W. 411).

Agreement to convey land in payment of note.

89. (1887.) Where in an action on a promissory note the defendant set up in his answer a contract entered into between the parties for the conveyance of certain property in full satisfaction of the debt, and alleged a performance in compliance with the contract, and there was testimony tending to sustain the answer, held, that in case of defect of title of, or incumbrance on, part of the property so conveyed, the measure of damages was not the amount of the note less the value of the property conveyed, but the amount of the incumbrances, or value of the property to which the title had failed. Downie v. Ladd, 22 Neb. 531 (35 N. W. 388).

Agreement of creditors to continue debtor's business.

90. (1901.) Under a contract by a merchant and his creditors whereby the latter were to assume the management of the business in order to pay off their debts and, also were to keep the stock of goods supplied with new goods, in an action for a breach of such contract by an alleged sale of the goods at public auction in violation of the contract, a refusal to instruct that the measure of damages was the difference in amount for which the price for which they would have sold for at private sale, erroneous. Paxton & Gallagher v. Vaddonker, 1 Unof. 776 (96 N. W. 378).

VII. INADEQUATE AND EXCESSIVE DAMAGES.

Adequacy of award for assault, see Assault and Battery, §§ 30-36.

Excessiveness of award for causing death, see Death, §§ 57-62.

Excessiveness of award for alienation of affections, see Husband and Wife, §§ 261, 262.

Inadequate or excessive damage for loss of support or death, see Intoxicating Liquors, §§ 456-460.

Personal injuries.

91. (1884.) Verdict for $9,250 for damages caused by explosion of locomotive boiler, resulting in concussion of the spinal cord, held excessive, and remittitur of $3,000 ordered. Sioux City & P. R. Co. v. Finlayson, 16 Neb. 578 (20 N. W. 860; 49 Am. Rep. 724).

91*a*. (1888.) A verdict for $5,000 for injuries sustained by falling into an excavation in a sidewalk is excessive, and cut down to $3,000. Village of Orleans v. Perry, 24 Neb. 831 (40 N. W. 417).

92. (1892.) A verdict for $2,000 was not excessive damage for personal injuries to a healthy boy ten years of age, resulting from being kicked by his step-father, where the proof showed that the boy's spine was permanently injured and caused constant pain and unfitted him for hard labor. Wohlenberg v. Melchert, 35 Neb. 803 (53 N. W. 982).

93. (1894.) A verdict of $2,650 for an injury consisting of a dislocated shoulder and sprained ankle, received by a young man earning $50 per month, held excessive, and reduced to $1,200. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Leslie, 41 Neb. 159 (59 N. W. 559).

94. (1896.) A farmer 24 years old, was injured by a railroad train, the fleshy part of his heel being cut and the ankle bruised and lacerated and strained, but no bones broken. He was in bed for eleven weeks and required crutches for eight or nine months. He lost about a year's time, but was not permanently disabled. Held, That a verdict for $6,300 was excessive and a remittitur of $1,300 ordered. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. French, 48 Neb. 638 (67 N. W. 472).

95. (1897.) Where a bridge in a city collapsed, throwing plaintiff and his horses and loaded wagon into a creek, injuring him and the team and breaking the wagon, a judgment against the city for $2,500 held not excessive. City of South Omaha v. Powell, 50 Neb. 798 (70 N. W. 391).

96. (1898.) A verdict for $1,200 for injuries to an arm by reason of a fall on a defective sidewalk sustained. City of Harvard v. Stiles, 54 Neb. 26 (74 N. W. 399).

97. (1902.) In an action for damages for injuries to the person and property of the plaintiff, where the testimony clearly shows that plaintiff has sustained substantial damages to both person and property, a judgment for $1 damages will be set aside as grossly inadequate. Carpenter v. City of Red Cloud, 64 Neb. 126 (89 N. W. 637).

98. (1903.) A verdict in an action for malpractice for $1,140 for the negligent treatment of a compound fracture of plaintiff's leg bone upheld when corrected by a remittitur of an item of interest erroneously allowed between the date of the injury and that of the judgment. Leisenring v. La Croix, 68 Neb. 803 (94 N. W. 1009).

99. (1903.) Where plaintiff, an electric lineman of 33 years of age, earning $65 monthly, has been injured in both feet and one ankle in such a manner as to compel amputation of the right foot almost eleven months later, with severe suffering, a verdict for $15,000 will not be reduced or set aside as excessive. New Omaha Thomson-Houston Electric Light Co. v. Rombold, 68 Neb. 54 (93 N. W. 966).

100. (1903.) An award of $3,000 damages for a broken leg which was skillfully set and "formed a good union" in the ordinary course, and is not shown to have resulted in any permanent injury beyond what is usually involved in such an accident, held excessive. City of South Omaha v. Fennell, 4 Unof. 427 (94 N. W. 632).

101. (1904.) Evidence examined and held that, in the case stated, a verdict for $1,500 for a broken leg and sprained ankle, is excessive for personal injuries. Judgment affirmed upon condition. Johnson v. Heath, 5 Unof. 369 (98 N. W. 832).

101*a*. (1906.) In an action by a shipper of stock to recover for personal injuries received at a crossing of the railroad and a highway by user, resulting in he loss of both legs, a verdict for $27,500 held not excessive. Union P. R. Co. v. Connolly, 77 Neb. 254 (109 N. W. 368).

102. (1904.) Verdict for $18,000 for the loss of a foot by a child 4 years old reduced in the district court by remittitur to $12,000 held to still be execessive and a further remittitur of $3,000 directed. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. Krayenbuhl, 70 Neb. 766 (98 N. W. 44).

Loss of life.

103. (1895.) A verdict for $2,000 for the death of plaintiff's husband, a healthy man, 38 years old, earning $10 per week, and with plaintiff and eight minor children wholly dependent on him for support, was not excessive. Kearney Electric Co. v. Laughlin, 45 Neb. 390 (63 N. W. 941).

104. (1896.) Verdict for plaintiff for $2,400 sustained where the person killed was a boy of 17, a competent compositor, able to earn $4 a day, and his next of kin, his father, forty-six years old, a poor man with four children. Post v. Olmstead, 47 Neb. 893 (66 N. W. 828).

105. (1896.) A verdict for $2,850 for the death of a boy 10 years of age who was drowned in a pond of water accumulated in a street of a municipality. City of Omaha v. Richards, 49 Neb. 244 (68 N. W. 528).

106. (1901.) In this action brought by an administratrix for causing the death of her intestate, being her son, 7 years of age, a verdict for $1,525 held not excessive so as to require a reversal. City of Omaha v. Bowman, 63 Neb. 333 (88 N. W. 521).

107. (1903.) Damages in the sum of $1,100 on behalf of a mother and a sister to whom a son and brother, 35 years of age, able-bodied, successful in business, earning a salary of $1,800, unmarried, was accustomed from time to time to render pecuniary assistance, is not excessive. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Young, 67 Neb. 568 (93 N. W. 922).

Breach of contract.

108. (1902.) Where by reason of the delay in delivering a message summoning a physician to a woman in confinement the labor of the woman is unduly prolonged, a verdict for $950 as damages for the additional suffering in body and mind on account of the physician's failure to attend is not so excessive as to be presumptively the result of passion and prejudice. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Church, 3 Unof. 22 (90 N. W. 878).

Injury to feeling and humiliation.

109. (1902.) In an action by one who was employed as a messenger for a central committee of a political party that maintained headquarters in a hotel, against such hotel for refusing to permit him to use the elevator in going to and from such headquarters, evidence showing the damage to be trifling will not support a verdict for $500. Hoover v. Haynes, 65 Neb. 557 (91 N. W. 392).

Remission of excess.

110. (1879.) Where, in an action for damages for fraud and breach of warranty, the recovery is clearly excessive, the supreme court will, on appeal, affirm the judgment on condition plaintiff remit a certain sum to defendant, otherwise the judgment will be reversed. Patrick v. Leach, 8 Neb. 530.

111. (1884.) In an action for injuries sustained by reason of an explosion of a boiler a verdict of $9,250 held excessive and a remittitur of $3,000 ordered. Sioux City & P. R. Co. v. Finlayson, 16 Neb. 578 (20 N. W. 860).

112. (1889.) In an action for damages in replevin a verdict of $1 held excessive as nominal damages and a remittitur of 95 cents ordered. White v. Woodruff, 25 Neb. 797 (41 N. W. 785).

113. (1894.) Where a verdict is too large and the amount of excess definitely appears from the record for review in supreme court, the party in whose favor the verdict was rendered, in absence of other error, may be permitted to remit the excess and have judgment for balance affirmed. Omaha & R. V. Co. v. Ryburn, 40 Neb. 87 (58 N. W. 541).

114. (1894.) Where part of an award by a jury for damages for personal injuries is not supported by evidence, judgment rendered thereon will be reversed where defendant in error fails to remit the excess. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Leslie, 41 Neb. 159 (59 N. W. 559).

115. (1894.) An award of a jury for damages for personal injuries will not be reduced by supreme court where it is supported by sufficient competent evidence. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Leslie, 41 Neb. 159 (59 N. W. 559).

115*a*. (1897.) The mere fact that a verdict for $2,865.30 was $105 in excess of the amount recoverable is not sufficient to show that the jury was influenced by passion or prejudice. Omaha Fire Ins. Co. v. Thompson, 50 Neb. 580 (70 N. W. 30).

116. (1904.) In an action for personal injuries, where substantial damages are proved, but the verdict of the jury appears to be excessive, the error may be corrected by a proper remittitur of the excess directed by the district court, or by the supreme court on a proceeding in error. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Krayenbuhl, 70 Neb. 766 (98 N. W. 44).

VIII. PARTIES, PLEADING, EVIDENCE, AND ASSESSMENT.

A. Parties and Pleadings.

Parties.

117. (1890.) A purchaser of real estate holding the same by contract and being in possession may recover damages for injuries to the land. Omaha & R. V. R. Co. v. Brown, 29 Neb. 492 (46 N. W. 39); Omaha & R. V. R. Co. v. Slanden, 29 Neb. 622 (46 N. W. 46).

Pleading.

——— In general.

118. (1892.) In an action for breach of a contract to open and maintain a public road, damages which necessarily result from the breach may be recovered without any special statement of the same, and a motion to make the petition more definite and certain was properly overruled. Kingsley v. Butterfield, 35 Neb. 228 (52 N. W. 1101).

119. (1898.) A recovery may be had under a general allegation of damages for all injuries which necessarily follow as the results of the act, the subject of complaint. They need not be specially pleaded, and this is applicable to necessarily resulting permanent effects of the injuries. City of Harvard v. Stiles, 54 Neb. 26 (74 N. W. 399).

119*a*. (1906.) It is unnecessary in most actions where the demand is unliquidated and sounds wholly in damages, and where there is but a single cause of action, to state specifically and in amounts the different elements or items which go to make up the sum total of the damages. It is enough generally to claim so much in gross as damages for the wrongs done. Habig v. Parker, 76 Neb. 102 (107 N. W. 127).

119*b*. (1906.) In case the pleader elects to claim a named sum for any one or more of the items of claimed damages, he is restricted in his recovery on these items to the amount named in his petition, and the court should so charge. Habig v. Parker, 76 Neb. 102 (107 N. W. 127).

120. (1904.) In actions for personal injuries it is not necessary to specially allege every indirect injury to each part of the body to lay the foundation for such proof on the trial; such proof may be admitted when the injury alleged is shown to have been the natural and proximate cause of the injury proved. City of South Omaha v. Sutliffe, 72 Neb. 746 (101 N. W. 997).

——— Consequential damages.

121. (1893.) Where only consequential damages are claimed they should be pleaded. Omaha Coke, Coal & Lime Co. v. Fay, 37 Neb. 68 (55 N. W. 211).

——— Special damages.

122. (1888.) Where special damages are properly pleaded a recovery may be had for the same, although the prayer for relief is general. Everton v. Esgate, 24 Neb. 235 (38 N. W. 794).

123. (1892.) A claim for special damages, in an action for a breach of a contract, held frivolous and failed to show a cause of action. Boyer v. Cox, 34 Neb. 813 (52 N. W. 715).

124. (1897.) Special damages to be recovered must be specially pleaded. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Emmert, 53 Neb. 237 (73 N. W. 540; 68 Am. St. Rep. 602).

B. Evidence.

Opinion evidence as to amount of damage, see Evidence, §§ 538-549; 568.

Exhibit of injured part of body to jury, see Evidence, §§ 203-207.

Declarations as to physical sufferings.

125. (1898.) In an action for damages for personal injuries evidence of plaintiff's complaints of such suffering as would probably be caused by the injuries may be admitted. Omaha Street R. Co. v. Emminger, 57 Neb. 240 (77 N. W. 675).

Proof of mental suffering.

126. (1898.) In an action for personal injuries plaintiff may make proof of such physical pain and mental suffering as resulted from the injury. Omaha Street R. Co. v. Emminger, 57 Neb. 240 (77 N. W. 675).

127. (1902.) In an action for damages, in which injury to the feelings is alleged as an element of damages, direct proof of damage is not indispensable. The existence and amount of such damage is to be determined from the circumstances of the case disclosed by the evidence. Hoover v. Haynes, 65 Neb. 557, 564 (93 N. W. 732).

Physical condition.

128. (1904.) Rulings of the trial court rejecting offered testimony of plaintiff as to condition of her health prior to the injury held error. Nielson v. Cass County, 5 Unof. 430 (98 N. W. 1090).

Expense of medical services.

129. (1894.) The evidence in the case held sufficient to sustain the verdict generally, but that there was no testimony of the reasonable and fair value of the services of the physicians, and defendant in error is allowed to file a remittitur of the sums charged for their services, and the judgment then to stand affirmed. If the remittitur is not filed, the case reversed and remanded. City of Friend v. Ingersoll, 39 Neb. 717 (58 N. W. 281).

130. (1897.) In order to recover for expenses of medical treatment in an action for personal injuries it is not necessary to prove by the record that the physician rendering the services was licensed to practice under the statute. Proof that he practiced as a physician raises the presumption in actions between third parties that he was licensed to do so. Golder v. Lund, 50 Neb. 867 (70 N. W. 379).

Incapacitated from labor.

131. (1903.) In an action by a married woman for personal injuries it is proper to 131*a*. (1907.) In an action by a married woman for personal injuries it is proper to show that she has been incapacitated by reason of her injuries from performing labor, for the purpose of showing the nature and extent of her injuries. Bliss v. Beck, 80 Neb. 290 (114 N. W. 162).

Earning capacity and profits.

132. (1871.) The value of services cannot be shown by proof of what was paid therefor, but only by proof of what they are worth. Holmes v. Boydston, 1 Neb. 346.

133. (1888.) In an action for damages resulting from personal injury, the plaintiff was permitted to testify to the amount of her earnings prior to the injury, for the purpose of showing the value of her time. This was without objection. She was then asked how much she made each week by her labor. Objection was made to the question, which was overruled. Held, No error. City of Lincoln v. Beckman, 23 Neb. 677 (37 N. W. 593).

134. (1894.) The testimony of defendant in error showed what had been his earning capacity just previous to the receipt of his injuries, and what he had actually earned during twenty-five weeks immediately following his injuries. Held, Error to permit a much greater earning capacity during the same period to be shown by proof that in larger towns than that wherein the defendant in error had had employment a much higher rate of wages prevailed than what was paid in the town in which he was employed during and just preceding the aforesaid twenty-five weeks. Omaha & R. V. R. Co. v. Ryburn, 40 Neb. 87 (58 N. W. 541).

135. The Carlisle tables of mortality are admissible in evidence in an action for damages for personal injuries. (1879) Roose v. Perkins, 9 Neb. 304; (1882) King v. Bell, 13 Neb. 409 (14 N. W. 41); (1898) City of Friend v. Burleigh, 53 Neb. 674 (74 N. W. 50).

136. (1894.) The Carlisle tables of expectancy of life are admissible in evidence as tending to prove the expectancy of life of a plaintiff in an action for damages for personal injury. City of Friend v. Ingersoll, 39 Neb. 717 (58 N. W. 281); City of Lincoln v. Smith, 28 Neb. 762 (45 N. W. 41).

136*a*. (1898.) Carlisle tables held admissible in evidence in an action for death by wrongful act. City of Friend v. Burleigh, 53 Neb. 674 (74 N. W. 50).

137. (1898.) Where a personal injury is permanent in its character, though plaintiff be a minor, evidence as to his expectancy of life, from experience tables, must be based on his actual age and not on the age of majority. Swift v. Holoubek, 55 Neb. 228 (75 N. W. 584).

137*a*. (1902.) When it is shown that a person is affected by a serious constitutional disease or a tendency thereto, it is error to submit to the jury the question of his expectancy of life, in the absence of any evidence bearing upon that question. City of Central City v. Engle, 65 Neb. 885 (91 N. W. 849).

137*b*. (1904.) The Carlisle tables of mortality or life expectancy are properly admissible in evidence for the consideration of the jury in determining the probable duration of the life of the deceased, the proper foundation as to age and general health being first proved. Horst v. Lewis, 71 Neb. 370 (103 N. W. 460).

138. (1904.) While the Carlisle and other mortuary tables of accepted accuracy and in general use are always properly admissible in evidence for the purpose of aiding a court or jury in determining the probable expectancy of life, when such fact is in issue, yet, when admitted, these mortuary tables are not binding upon the estimate of the triers of such fact. They may, without such tables, make their own estimate from the age, health, habits, physical condition and appearance of the person whose expectancy is at issue. City of South Omaha v. Sutliffe, 72 Neb. 746 (101 N. W. 997).

138*a*. (1907.) In an action for personal injuries, the Carlisle tables of expectancy may be given in evidence after the introduction of credible evidence tending to show the permanent character of the injury. Howard v. McCabe, 79 Neb. 42 (112 N. W. 305).

Market reports.

139. (1905.) Market reports in journals, such as the commercial world relies upon, are competent evidence of the state of the market. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Todd, 74 Neb. 712 (105 N. W. 83).

Sufficiency.

140. (1884.) Evidence in an action by the owner of a livery stable to recover damages for the wrongful hiring out of plaintiff's horse, resulting in its death, sustains a verdict for plaintiff. Homan v. Boyce, 15 Neb. 545 (19 N. W. 590).

141. (1889.) Evidence in an action for damages for breach of a contract held not to sustain the verdict, as if plaintiff was entitled to recover all, the verdict is too small. Hancock v. Stout, 28 Neb. 301 (44 N. W. 446).

C. Proceeding for Assessment.

Physical examination of person injured.

142. (1884.) It is not error for the court during the progress of a trial to refuse to order the plaintiff, who sues for injuries to his person, to submit to an examination of his person by physicians who are witnesses for the defendant, in the absence of any showing whatever that justice would be promoted thereby, and especially so when the plaintiff submits to an examination by such witnesses in the presence of the jury. Sioux City & P. R. Co. v. Finlayson, 16 Neb. 578 (20 N. W. 860; 49 Am. Rep. 724).

143. (1885.) If a personal examination is desired, the application should be made before the trial begins and experts agreed upon by the parties or appointed by the court. Stuart v Havens, 17 Neb. 211 (22 N. W. 419).

144. (1885.) In an action for personal injuries, where the defendant during the trial asks for an order requiring the plaintiff to submit his person to the personal examination of certain experts selected by the defendant, the application should be denied. Stuart v. Havens, 17 Neb. 211 (22 N. W. 419).

144*a*. (1889.) It is not error to refuse to order a plaintiff, in an action for damages for personal injuries to submit to a physical examination in the absence of showing that justice would be promoted thereby. Sioux City & P. R. Co. v. Finlayson, 16 Neb. 578 (20 N. W. 860).

145. (1894.) In an action for a personal injury a judge of the district court has no jurisdiction at chambers outside of the county in which the cause is pending to make an order requiring plaintiff to submit his body to a personal examination by a board of physicians appointed by the judge for such purpose. Ellsworth v. City of Fairbury, 41 Neb. 881 (60 N. W. 336).

146. (1895.) If it is proper for a court, in an action for personal injuries, to appoint physicians to examine plaintiff physically, if proper in any case, it is only on application made before the trial begins. City of Chadron v. Glover, 43 Neb. 732 (62 N. W. 62).

Determination by jury.

147. (1888.) Jurors proceeded to mark down the sum of damages, according to the opinion of each juror respectively, which several sums they added together, taking the gross sum as a dividend, taking their own number as a divisor, and agreed upon the quotient as the amount of their verdict, and returned it into court as such, without any agreement in advance of ascertaining such quotient. Held, That this method was within the rule of propriety, and not obnoxious to the law. Village of Ponca v. Crawford, 23 Neb. 662 (37 N. W. 609; 8 Am. St. Rep. 144). [See Burke v. Magee, 27 Neb. 156 (42 N. W. 890).]

148. (1894.) Where there is no evidence of special damages the jury may determine the general damages by their own opinions and judgment as reasonable men. Ellison v. Brown, 43 Neb. 68 (61 N. W. 97).

Questions for court and jury.

149. (1886.) In an action for damages alleged to have been sustained by the next of kin to a deceased, whose death is alleged to have been caused by the negligence of the defendant, the question as to the amount of damages sustained by reason of such death is for the jury to determine, under such testimony as to the measure of damages as may be submitted to them. Johnson v. Missouri P. R. Co., 18 Neb. 690 (26 N. W. 347).

150. (1898.) What acts, omissions, facts and circumstances are competent evidence of damages to be considered by a jury are questions of law for the court; but whether such acts, omissions, facts or circumstances affect an owner's property and damage it, and the amount of such damages, are for the jury. Jaynes v. Omaha Street R. Co., 53 Neb. 631 (74 N. W. 67; 39 L. R. A. 751).

Computation of definite sum.

151. (1901.) Where damages are susceptible of actual computation, the amount thereof should not be left to conjecture. Paxton & Gallagher v. Vaddonker, 1 Unof. 776 (96 N. W. 378).

Instructions.

the amount of damages, an instruction that "the question of amount of damages scarcely requires much attention, since in the trial the defendant has made no contest thereon." is erroneous. Republican V. R. Co. v. Fink, 18 Neb. 89 (24 N. W. 691).

153. (1902.) In an action, by an infant in the care and custody of its father, for personal injuries it is error to instruct the jury that his lessened earning capacity is an element of damages, unless it be limited to the period from which he would be entitle to his earnings. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Krayenbuhl, 65 Neb. 889 (91 N. W. 880).

154. (1902.) The court is not required to cover the rule as to the measure of damages in any one particular paragraph of its instructions. It will be sufficient if the instructions as a whole correctly state the rule. Rath v. Rath, 2 Unof. 600 (89 N. W. 612).

——— Elements of damage in general.

155. (1888.) An instruction, "You should carefully examine all the evidence as to the nature, character, and extent of the injury, and the result; whether the disability, if any resulted from the injury, is permanent or temporary; its extent, whether total or partial. If any permanent disability resulting, you should consider plaintiff's age, his reasonable expectancy of life, how much money he could earn as he was before the injury, how much, if any, he could earn with his reduced capacity, if any there was on account of the injury, and allow him reasonable compensation for any loss of time and capacity resulting from the injury. You should also allow him for his suffering. The law lays down no rule for estimating his damages on this account, but leaves it to your sound judgment. And you should allow such amount as in your best judgment would be just under the circumstances, not exceeding in all the sum claimed—$25,000," correctly states the law. Sioux City & P. R. Co. v. Smith, 22 Neb. 775 (36 N. W. 285).

156. (1891.) Where two instructions are given which state different rules for estimating damages upon the same state of facts, thereby leaving the jury in doubt as to the correct rule, the verdict will be set aside, notwithstanding one of said instructions may have been correct and based upon the testimony. School District v. Foster, 31 Neb. 501 (48 N. W. 267).

——— Harmless error.

157. (1896.) Even where the damages are unliquidated, where the trial court has, by an instruction, submitted to the consideration of the jury an element of damages not sustained by the evidence, the error will be treated as harmless where, from an examination of the evidence and the verdict, it is reasonably certain that the jury was not misled, and that it allowed nothing on account of the element improperly submitted. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Archer, 46 Neb. 907 (65 N. W. 1043)

——— Failure to caution against punitive damages.

158. (1903.) Failure to caution the jury against punitive damages is not error where the court has instructed them to allow such damages as "under all evidence would be a just compensation for the injury." Whiting v. Carpenter, 4 Unof. 342 (93 N. W. 926).

——— Permanency of injuries.

159. (1896.) In an action for personal injuries it is error to submit to the jury a consideration of the question, in assessing damages, as to whether the injuries were permanent, in the absence of evidence tending to establish such permanency of injuries with reasonable certainty. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Archer, 46 Neb. 907 (65 N. W. 1043).

160. (1904.) In an action for personal injuries it is error to give an instruction allowing the jury to assess damages for permanent injuries or lasting impairment of health, unless there is evidence showing, with reasonable certainty, that such permanent injuries or lasting impairment of health were in fact sustained by the plaintiff. Goken v. Dallugge, 72 Neb. 23 (103 N. W. 287).

——— Compromise by jury.

161. (1889.) An instruction that "If the jury wished to compromise the amount of damage, they could each one write his amount of damage separately on paper and then add them together and divide them by five, the number of jurymen, and let that be their verdict," is erroneous, as it substitutes chance or hazard for the deliberate judgment of the jury as a whole. Burke v. Magee, 27 Neb. 156 (42 N. W. 890).

Directing verdict.

162. (1895.) Where damages are liquidated and there is no conflict of evidence

I. EVIDENCE OF DEATH AND SURVIVORSHIP.

Presumption of death from absence.

1. (1884.) When defendant in an action to annul her marriage, relies on the presumption that her former husband was dead, and the evidence shows that soon after such husband left her, she moved from the state where they had been living, and later moved again, and made no effort to ascertain his whereabouts, an instruction to find that such husband was dead if he left defendant "and that she has never heard from him for more than seven years at the time of her marriage," is erroneous. Thomas v. Thomas, 16 Neb. 553 (20 N. W. 846).

2. (1884.) In order to raise the presumption of death by an absence of seven years, it must be shown that the party alleged to be dead has been absent from his usual place of resort for more than seven years and that during that time he has not been heard from by those who would naturally do so. Thomas v. Thomas, 16 Neb. 553 (20 N. W. 846).

3. (1886.) Where a husband leaves his wife in anger, declaring an intention never to return, and there is evidence to show that he was seen within seven years prior to the wife's remarriage, the presumption of his death is overcome, and the second marriage dissolved on the prayer of the second husband. Thomas v. Thomas, 19 Neb. 81 (27 N. W. 84).

4. (1885.) Evidence of character, habits, domestic relations, and the like, making the abandonment of home and family improbable, and showing a want of all those motives which can be supposed to influence men to such acts, may be sufficient to raise the presumption of death, or from which the death of one absent and unheard from may be inferred without regard to the duration of such absence. Cox v. Ellsworth, 18 Neb. 664 (26 N. W. 460; 54 Am. Rep. 827).

5. (1886.) The death of an absent person may be presumed in less than seven years from the date of the last intelligence from him, from facts and circumstances other than those showing his exposure to danger which probably resulted in his death. Cox v. Ellsworth, 18 Neb. 664 (26 N. W. 460; 54 Am. Rep. 827).

5*a*. (1907.) A presumption of death arises from the continued and unexplained absence of a person from his home or place of residence for seven years, where nothing has been heard from or concerning him during that time by those who, were he living, would naturally hear from him. Holdrege v. Livingston, 79 Neb. 238 (112 N. W. 341).

5*b*. (1907.) Proof of a change of residence from one state to another, and that such person has not been heard of in the former state for a period of seven years, does not create the presumption. Holdrege v. Livingston, 79 Neb. 238 (112 N. W. 341).

6. (1903.) Depositions given in the same action about five years previous to the final decision, showing next of kin to be then alive, carry a presumption of their existence at the time of the verdict. Chicago, R.

II. Actions for Wrongful Death.

Right of action.

8. (1881.) At common law and independent of statutory provisions, an action for damages cannot be maintained for the death of a human being. Wilson v. Bumstead, 12 Neb. 1 (10 N. W. 611).

9. (1881.) Application of principles of action for wrongful death. Wilson v. Bumstead, 12 Neb. 1 (10 N. W. 411).

Right of action as property.

10. (1898.) A cause of action for death by wrongful act is not an asset of decedent's estate. City of Friend v. Burleigh, 53 Neb. 674 (74 N. W. 50).

Statutory provisions.

11. (1895.) Though the action created by chapter 21, Compiled Statutes, is purely a creature of the statute, the courts will not give the statute a technical or narrow construction. Kearney Electric Co. v. Laughlin, 45 Neb. 390 (63 N. W. 941).

12. (1900.) Chapter 21, Compiled Statutes, creating rights of action for death by negligence, is not amendatory of section 3, article I, chapter 72, Compiled Statutes, making a carrier presumptively liable for injuries to passengers nor do the acts in anywise conflict, one with the other. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Zernecke, 59 Neb. 689 (82 N. W. 26; 55 L. R. A. 610).

Survival of right to personal representative.

13. (1881.) An action for causing the death of a human being must be brought by the personal representatives of the deceased. Wilson v. Bumstead, 12 Neb. 1 (10 N. W. 411.) [See City of Friend v. Burleigh, 53 Neb. 674 (74 N. W. 50).]

14. (1899.) Under Lord Campbell's Act (Comp. Stats., ch. 21) an action may be maintained by a personal representative of a decedent who left surviving one belonging to the class for whose benefit the statute was enacted and who sustained pecuniary loss. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Oyster, 58 Neb. 1 (78 N. W. 359).

15. (1899.) Under chapter 21, Compiled Statutes, the legal representative of one who died in consequence of an injury sustained through the wrongful act of another has a right of action where the injured person might have maintained a suit had he survived the injury. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Young, 58 Neb. 678 (79 N. W. 556).

16. (1900.) Under chapter 21, Compiled Statutes, known as "Lord Campbell's Act," a right of action is given the legal representative of one who has died in consequence of injuries sustained while being transported by a railroad company, where the injured party could have maintained an action had he survived. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Zernecke, 59 Neb. 689 (82 N. W. 26; 55 L. R. A. 610).

Contributory negligence of beneficiary as defense.

17. (1901.) In an action for the death of a child, the father as administrator being plaintiff, it is error to instruct the jury that contributory negligence of the father is no defense. Tucker v. Draper, 62 Neb. 66 (86 N. W. 917; 54 L. R. A. 321).

Jurisdiction of state courts for death in foreign state.

18. (1888.) State courts have jurisdiction in actions against a railroad company for death in a foreign state. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Lewis, 24 Neb. 848 (40 N. W. 401; 2 L. R. A. 67*n*).

Pleading.

——Averment of next of kin or beneficiary.

19. (1885.) In an action by the personal representatives of a deceased person to recover damages for his death, it must be alleged in the petition that the deceased left a widow or next of kin, or both, according to the fact. Burlington & M. R. R. Co. v. Crockett, 17 Neb. 570 (24 N. W. 219).

20. (1885.) A husband, as executor, cannot maintain an action under the statute approved February 25, 1873, for the death of his wife, unless it appear that there are next of kin entitled to the amount to be recovered and if the petition fails to state facts showing the existence of next of kin it will not state a cause of action. Warren v. Englehart, 13 Neb. 283 (13 N. W. 401).

21. (1898.) A petition in an action based on chapter 21, Compiled Statutes, which avers that the defendant by his wrongful act, neglect, or default caused the death of a person, that the plaintiff is such person's duly-appointed personal representative, and that the deceased left a widow and children, states a cause of action. City of Friend v. Burleigh, 53 Neb. 674 (74 N. W. 50).

22. (1899.) In an action for damages the petition should disclose the names of all beneficiaries, but where the names of dependent minor children of decedent are averred, omission to allege whether he left a widow does not make the petition demurrable. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Oyster, 58 Neb. 1 (78 N. W. 359).

23. (1899.) Where the facts alleged in the petition do not show that the persons, for whose benefit the suit was instituted, had a pecuniary interest in the life of the deceased person the pleading is defective. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Young, 58 Neb. 678 (79 N. W. 556).

24. (1899.) In a suit for damages for death by wrongful act a petition is fatally defective which discloses no survivor entitled by law to support by the person deceased, and in which, with reference to such survivor as is described, there is no averment of pecuniary injury. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Van Buskirk, 58 Neb. 252 (78 N. W. 514).

25. (1899.) In an action for damages under the provisions of chapter 21, Compiled Statutes, a petition is fatally defective which discloses no survivor entitled by law to support by the person deceased, and in which, with reference to such survivor as is described, there is no averment of pecuniary injury. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Bond, 58 Neb. 385 (78 N. W. 710).

——— Pecuniary loss or injury.

26. (1895.) In a suit by a widow as administratrix to recover from a corporation damages for negligently causing the death of her husband, a petition alleging that deceased left seven minor children who were wholly dependent upon him for support and maintenance, is not open to the objection that it fails to aver facts showing the wife and next of kin sustained pecuniary injuries within the meaning of chapter 21, Compiled Statutes. Kearney Electric Co. v. Laughlin, 45 Neb. 390 (63 N. W. 941).

27. (1895.) A petition under chapter 21, Compiled Statutes, for the death of the plaintiff's intestate by the wrongful act of the defendant is fatally defective, which fails to show that the person or persons for whose benefit the action is brought have sustained pecuniary injury by the death of the deceased. Nor will the petition in the absence of such allegation support a judgment for nominal damages. Orgall v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 46 Neb. 4 (64 N. W. 450).

28. (1898.) A petition under Lord Campbell's Act, which alleges that the deceased left a widow and next of kin, describing them, on whom the law confers the right to be supported by the person killed, sufficiently avers pecuniary loss, and in that respect states a cause of action. Omaha & R. V. R. Co. v. Crow, 54 Neb. 747 (74 N. W. 1066; 69 Am. St. Rep. 741).

29. (1901.) In an action by an administrator to recover damages for the death of his intestate under chapter 21, Compiled Statutes, the petition must show a pecuniary injury to the widow or next of kin, but as against a general demurrer it is sufficient in that regard to allege that "by reason of the death of the intestate and the loss of the service and society and fellowship of the said intestate the plaintiff has been damaged in the sum of five thousand dollars." Tucker v. Draper, 62 Neb. 66 (86 N. W. 917; 54 L. R. A. 321).

30. (1903.) In an action by an administrator for damages for causing the death of his intestate, it is proper to allege such facts as will show a pecuniary loss to the next of kin. Union P. R. Co. v. Roeser, 69 Neb. 62 (95 N. W. 68).

31. (1903.) The petition is not demurrable because it alleges a contract to support the next of kin made by the deceased in his lifetime, without alleging that the estate of the deceased is insufficient for that purpose. Union P. R. Co. v. Roeser, 69 Neb. 62 (95 N. W. 68).

——— Amendment.

32. (1093.) Where the petition sets forth in general terms pecuniary loss in an action under Lord Campbell's Act, it is no abuse of discretion to permit an amendment setting forth the particular facts from which such loss is inferable. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Young, 67 Neb. 568 (93 N. W. 922).

——— Averment of revocation of authority to sue.

33. (1885.) Where an administratrix had authority when the action was commenced to bring an action to recover damages for the death of the intestate, a subsequent revocation of the authority must be specially pleaded, and is not put in issue by a denial of her authority "to sue or recover in and maintain this action." Burlington & M. R. R. Co. v. Crockett, 17 Neb. 570 (24 N. W. 219).

——— Construction of pleading.

34. (1895.) The words "support and maintenance" in a petition for negligently causing the death of plaintiff's husband, mean food, clothing, and shelter. Kearney Electric Co. v. Laughlin, 45 Neb. 390 (63 N. W. 941).

Admissibility of evidence.

——— Cause of death.

35. (1895.) In an action for damages for death by reason of a brick wall falling on decedent, defendant, in a defense of act of God by means of a severe wind storm, may produce evidence that there had been no such severe storm of recent years. Olsen v. Meyers, 46 Neb. 240 (64 N. W. 954).

36. (1899.) The testimony of a witness describing the positions of decedent and the engine shortly after the accident which resulted in the death of the plaintiff's intestate was admissible as res gestæ. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Oyster, 58 Neb. 1 (78 N. W. 359).

——— Dying declaration.

37. (1898.) Where the negligence of a city causes the death of one, and his personal representative sues such city to recover for the benefit of the widow and next of kin of the deceased damages to compensate them for the pecuniary loss they have sustained by reason of his death, the exclusion from evidence of the declaration of the deceased that his injury was the result of his own carelessness, held not prejudicial. City of Friend v. Burleigh, 53 Neb. 674 (74 N. W. 62).

——— Expectancy of life of deceased.

38. The Carlisle tables of mortality are admissible in an action for death by wrongful act. (1879) Roose v. Perkins, 9 Neb. 304; (1882) King v. Bell, 13 Neb. 409 (14 N. W. 41); (1898) City of Friend v. Burleigh, 53 Neb. 674 (74 N. W. 62).

39. (1894.) The Carlisle tables of expectancy of life are admissible in evidence as tending to prove the expectancy of the life of a deceased. City of Friend v. Ingersoll, 39 Neb. 717 (58 N. W. 281); City of Lincoln v. Smith, 28 Neb. 762 (45 N. W. 41).

40. (1904.) The Carlisle table of mortality or life expectancy is properly admissible in evidence for the consideration of the jury in determining the probable duration of the life of the deceased, the proper foundation as to age and general health being first proved. Horst v. Lewis, 71 Neb. 370 (103 N. W. 460).

41. (1904.) The Carlisle table of morality or life expectancy is properly admissible in evidence for the consideration of the jury in determining the probable duration of the life of the deceased, the proper foundation as to age and general health being first proved. Horst v. Lewis, 71 Neb. 370 (103 N. W. 460).

——— Earning capacity of deceased.

42. (1889.) In an action by a widow for damages for the death of her husband, a question to plaintiff as to how much her husband could earn, when answered by a statement as to what he had earned per year in the past, is not erroneous. Sellars v. Foster, 27 Neb. 118 (42 N. W. 907).

43. (1893.) In an action by an administrator under the provisions of chapter 21, Compiled Statutes, to recover damages for the death of his intestate, it is proper to prove the value of the services of the deceased which the next of kin of the deceased could reasonably expect but for the injury would have been rendered in their behalf, the natural expectancy of life of the deceased just previous to receiving the injury which resulted in her death having been duly shown. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Baier, 37 Neb. 235 (55 N. W. 913).

——— Pecuniary loss to beneficiary.

44. (1901.) Where there was proof tending to show that the next of kin, the father, was receiving from him pecuniary assistance in supporting the mother and brothers and sisters of deceased, it was not error to admit proof of the existence of such relatives. South Omaha Water-Works Co. v. Vocasek, 62 Neb. 710 (87 N. W. 536).

——— Pecuniary condition of deceased.

45. (1902.) In an action to recover damages for the death of a person it is incompetent for the defendant to show what the value of the estate of the deceased was. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Hambel, 2 Unof. 607 (89 N. W. 643).

46. (1903.) In an action by an administrator for the benefit of the widow and children under section 2, chapter 21, Compiled Statutes, evidence as to the amount of property left by the deceased is inadmissible. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Holmes, 68 Neb. 826 (94 N. W. 1007).

——— Remarriage of widow.

47. (1902.) In an action by an administrator to recover damages resulting to a wife on account of the death of her husband, alleged to have been caused by the negligence of the defendant, the fact that such wife has subsequently remarried is immaterial, and should not be submitted to the jury, nor considered by them, in fixing the amount of the recovery. Chicago, St. P., M. & O. R. Co. v. Lagerkrans, 65 Neb. 566 (91 N. W. 358).

Presumptions and burden of proof.

48. (1895.) The mere fact that a man is found dead under a railroad car does not raise the presumption that he came to his death through the negligence of the railroad company. Spears v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 43 Neb. 720 (62 N. W. 68).

49. (1895.) In a suit by an administrator against a railroad company for negligently causing the death of his intestate, there is no presumption of law that either party was guilty of negligence. Spears v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 43 Neb. 720 (62 N. W. 68).

50. (1892.) Where, in an action for damages against a railroad company for wrongfully causing the death of plaintiff's intestate, the plaintiff proves his case without disclosing any negligence on the part of his intestate, contributory negligence is a matter of defense, and the burden of establishing it is on the defendant. Anderson v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 35 Neb. 95 (52 N. W. 840).

Weight and sufficiency of evidence.

51. (1892.) Evidence in an action to recover for the death of one killed by a railroad held to sustain a verdict for nominal damages. Anderson v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 35 Neb. 95 (52 N. W. 840).

52. (1896.) Evidence in an action by an administrator for injuries causing the death of his decedent examined, and held sufficient to sustain the verdict for plaintiff. Post v. Olmstead, 47 Neb. 893 (66 N. W. 828).

53. (1901.) In an action for damages for the death of plaintiff's child, caused by falling into a well on defendant's premises, the evidence examined, and found sufficient to warrant the trial court in submitting the question of negligence to the jury. Tucker v. Draper, 62 Neb. 66 (86 N. W. 917; 54 L. R. A. 321).

Damages.

——— Elements of damage in general.

54. (1892.) In case of a verdict in favor of the plaintiff, in an action against a railroad company for wrongfully causing the death of plaintiff's intestate, he is entitled to recover such a sum as the jury may deem from the evidence a fair and just compensation to the next of kin, for the pecuniary loss resulting from the death which is made the basis of the suit, not exceeding the statutory amount. Anderson v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 35 Neb. 95 (52 N. W. 840).

——— Nominal damages.

55. (1892.) Under section 2, chapter 21, Compiled Statutes, in an action against a railroad company for wrongfully causing the death of plaintiff's intestate, where the proof shows that the next of kin was not pecuniarily injured by the death of the intestate, the plaintiff is only entitled to recover nominal damages. Anderson v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. R. Co., 35 Neb. 95 (52 N. W. 840).

——— Mental suffering of beneficiary as element of damage.

56. (1904.) Damages recoverable for injuries resulting in death are limited to pecuniary compensation to the next of kin. No damages can be given on account of bereavement, mental suffering, or as a solace on account of such death. Johnson County v. Carmen, 71 Neb. 682 (99 N. W. 502).

——— Excessiveness of award.

57. (1903.) Damages in the sum of $1,100 on behalf of a mother and a sister to whom a son and brother, 35 years of age, able-bodied, successful in business, earning a salary of $1,800, unmarried, was accustomed from time to time to render pecuniary assistance, is not excessive. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Young, 67 Neb. 568 (93 N. W. 922).

58. (1895.) A verdict for $2,000 for the death of plaintiff's husband, a healthy man, 38 years old, earning $10 per week, and with plaintiff and eight minor children wholly dependent on him for support, was not excessive. Kearney Electric Co. v. Laughlin, 45 Neb. 390 (63 N. W. 941).

59. (1896.) A verdict for $2,850 for the death of a boy 10 years of age, who was drowned in a pond of water accumulated in a street of a municipality, not excessive.

City of Omaha v. Richards, 49 Neb. 244 (68 N. W. 528).

60. (1896.) Verdict for plaintiff for $2,400 sustained where the person killed was a boy of 17, a competent compositor, able to earn $4 a day, and his next of kin his father, 46 years old, a poor man with four children. Post v. Olmstead, 47 Neb. 893 (66 N. W. 828).

61. (1898.) In an action against a saloon-keeper for the death of plaintiff's husband, a mechanic 38 years old, earning $3 per day, a verdict for $850 held not excessive. Schick v. Saunders, 53 Neb. 664 (74 N. W. 39).

62. (1901.) In this action brought by an administratrix for causing the death of her intestate, being her son, 7 years of age, a verdict for $1,525 held not excessive so as to require a reversal. City of Omaha v. Bowman, 63 Neb. 333 (88 N. W. 521).

——— Inadequate award.

63. (1903.) Held, That a verdict for only $10, for the pecuniary loss sustained by reason of the death of a minor child 3 years and 4 months old, is inadequate in amount. Draper v. Tucker, 69 Neb. 434 (95 N. W. 1026).

——— Disposition of award.

64. (1899.) Damages recovered under Lord Campbell's Act are assets for distribution to the widow and next of kin of decedent. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Oyster, 58 Neb. 1 (78 N. W. 359).

65. (1902.) A judgment recovered by an administrator under the provisions of section 2, chapter 21, Compiled Statutes of Nebraska, is for the exclusive benefit of the widow and the next of kin of such deceased person, and the fact that the administrator, in his petition, for damages, fails to name all the legal beneficiaries provided for in this act, will not bar any legal distributee not named in his petition from receiving his distributive share of the judgment recovered. Oyster v. Relief Department of Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 65 Neb. 789 (91 N. W. 699; 59 L. R. A. 291).

Question for jury.

66. (1886.) In an action for damages alleged to have been sustained by the next of kin to a deceased, whose death is alleged to have been caused by the negligence of the defendant, the question as to the amount of damages sustained by reason of such death is for the jury to determine, under such testimony as to the measure of damages as may be submitted to them. Johnson v. Missouri P. R. Co., 18 Neb. 690 (26 N. W. 347).

67. (1901.) In an action for damages for death resulting from the alleged negligence of defendant, unless the facts are undisputed and are of such a nature that ordinary minds would not differ in their judgment of them, the question of negligence must be submitted to the jury. Tucker v. Draper, 62 Neb. 66 (86 N. W. 917; 54 L. R. A. 321).

Instructions.

68. (1896.) Where a bath house company was notified of a bather's disappearance soon after he had been seen as to warrant the inference that an immediate search would have resulted in his rescue before death, and the company had no one in charge of the place to watch and rescue bathers, an instruction for a verdict for defendant is erroneous. Brotherton v. Manhattan Beach Improvement Co., 48 Neb. 563 (67 N. W. 479; 58 Am. St. Rep. 709).

69. (1900.) Instructions as to measure of damages held proper. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Zernecke, 59 Neb. 689 (82 N. W. 26; 55 L. R. A. 610).

Definition.

1. (1877.) A dedication is defined to be the act of devoting or giving property for some proper object in such manner as to conclude the owner. It may be made by parol, and may be presumed from lapse of time. State, ex rel. Sims, v. Otoe County, 6 Neb. 129.

Acknowledgment as deed to land.

2. (1897.) Under section 106, article 1, chapter 14, Compiled Statutes, the acknowledgment and registration of a plat subdividing tracts of land are equivalent to a deed in fee-simple of such portion of the premises platted as is on such plat set apart for streets and other public uses. Ehmen v. Village of Gothenburg, 50 Neb. 715 (70 N. W. 237).

Platting land as dedication in general.

3. (1894.) The plat of an addition to a city is not void because the owners of the land platted failed to acknowledge the plat. Pillsbury v. Alexander, 40 Neb. 242 (58 N. W. 859).

4. (1887.) Where the owners of real estate caused it to be surveyed as a town site and the plat thereof to be recorded, in which plat a square is marked and designated therein as "College Square," the lots in blocks, abutting thereon, being only one-half the size of other lots in that part of the plat, and so laid out as to front to the square, and held at a higher valuation by reason thereof in order to secure compensation for the land included in such square, it was held, that there was a dedication of College Square to the public, with a right to the use thereof for the purpose of an institution of learning so long as the user continued; the title remaining in the public as represented by the municipal corporation (after being incorporated) for that use, and ejectment will lie to remove any person unlawfully in possession. Weeping Water v. Reed, 21 Neb. 261 (31 N. W. 797).

5. (1897.) Where land is platted into a town site, and signed by all of the several owners save one, whose name was signed by one of the other as "attorney" and the one not signing afterward conveyed his land to another who recognized the validity of the plat, under section 115, chapter 14, of Compiled Statutes, the execution and recording of the plat as amended February 8, 1869, and was equivalent to deed absolute. Weeping Water v. Reed, 21 Neb. 261 (31 N. W. 797).

6. (1897.) The statute provides for the acknowledgment and recording of plats subdividing tracts of land, and that the acknowledgment and recording of such a plat is equivalent to a deed in fee-simple of such portion of the premises platted as is on such plat set apart for streets and other public use. Held, That under this statute a plat, properly acknowledged and recorded, showing the subdivision of land into blocks and lots with streets traversing the same, with a block in the center thereof not subdivided into lots and with no alley traversing the same as was the case with other blocks, said block being designated "Ehmen's Park" (Ehmen being the owner of the land subdivided), operated as a statutory dedication of that block for a public park. Ehmen v. Village of Gothenburg, 50 Neb. 715 (70 N. W. 237).

Revocation before acceptance.

7. (1883.) A dedication of property by the state to a private corporation in trust for a public use may be withdrawn at any time before its acceptance. The bringing of an action to recover from a subsequent donee is not an acceptance. State Historical Ass'n v. City of Lincoln, 14 Neb. 336 (15 N. W 717).

Reservation by grantor.

8. (1897.) In view of the owner's name to designate a park granted by him, the use of the term "Ehmen's Park" cannot be taken to imply a reservation of the land for Ehmen's private use. Ehmen v. Village of Gothenburg, 50 Neb. 715 (70 N. W. 237).

Highways, streets and alleys.

——— Right to acquire by dedication.

9. (1880.) The public may acquire by dedication from the owner an easement in land for the purpose of travel. Graham v. Hartnett, 10 Neb. 517 (7 N. W. 280).

——— Right to dedicate.

10. (1888.) Where a party has entered land under the homestead law of the United State, and made final proof, and complied with the law on his part to entitle him to a patent, he may make a valid dedication of a portion of said land for a public road, although the patent has not been issued. Rube v. Sullivan, 23 Neb. 779 (37 N. W. 666).

11. (1890.) To establish the existence of a highway by dedication by deed it must appear that the grantor was the owner of the land when the dedication was made. Warren v. Brown, 31 Neb. 8 (47 N. W. 633).

12. (1898.) An effectual statutory dedication of land for use as a public street cannot result from the filing of a plat, in the office of the county clerk or register of deeds, by one who is not the owner of the fee. Lewis v. City of Lincoln, 55 Neb. 1 (75 Neb. 154).

——— Who may accept.

13. (1906.) In order to constitute a highway by dedication, it is not necessary that the offer of dedication be accepted by the public authorities, it may be accepted by the public itself. Cassidy v. Sullivan, 75 Neb. 847 (106 N. W. 1027).

Title and rights acquired.

14. (1898.) Where land is surveyed and platted into an addition to a city, the fee simple title to the streets and alleys of the addition vests in the public. Jaynes v. Omaha Street R. Co., 53 Neb. 631 (74 N. W. 67; 39 L. R. A. 751).

15. (1898.) The dedication of streets in a platted addition to a city contemplates the right of the public to use them for the purpose of passage by such means as it may see fit to employ, but the grant does not contemplate that one may exclusively and permanently appropriate a portion of a street to the exclusion of the remainder of the public. Jaynes v. Omaha Street R. Co., 53 Neb. 631 (74 N. W. 67; 39 L. R. A. 751).

——— Acts constituting dedication.

16. (1882.) Where the owner of a tract of land adjoining the city of Lincoln laid out the same into additions to said city and filed plats upon which "K" street was marked as if laid out, and lots were sold fronting thereon, but the description merely extended to the outer line of the street, there was sufficient dedication of the street. Gregory v. Lincoln, 13 Neb. 352 (14 N. W. 423).

17. (1884.) Where a deed containing description by metes and bounds describes one line as an alley when in fact there was no such alley, the land not having been platted, and such knowledge was known by the purchaser, there is no dedication of the alley to the city, thus giving the purchaser the rights to a public alley. Bushman v. Gibson, 15 Neb. 676 (20 N. W. 106).

18. (1894.) The state of Nebraska sold to Arnold & Abbott certain land and gave them a contract for a deed; Arnold & Abbott caused this land to be surveyed and platted into lots, blocks, and streets, and designated as "Arnold & Abbott's Addition to Grand Island." They did not attach or acknowledge or sign a certificate to such plat as required by section 105, chapter 14, Compiled Statutes, 1893. They caused said plat to be filed in the office of the recorder of deeds of Hall county. They sold and conveyed parts of the land platted, describing the parts so sold as lots and blocks in Arnold & Abbott's addition. The public took possession of and used the land designated as streets on said plat. Held, That Arnold & Abbott, by their acts, had estopped themselves, their heirs and grantees, from claiming any title to said land designated as streets on the plat in said addition; and their acts in platting said addition amounted to a common law dedication to the public of the land reserved on said plat for streets. Pillsbury v. Alexander, 40 Neb. 242 (58 N. W. 859).

19. (1906.) Where adjoining landowners place fences and plant trees along the line between their lands in such a way as to leave an intervening space for public travel, and with the intention that it be used for that purpose, and the public enter upon and use the intervening space as a highway and continue in such use and enjoyment thereof for almost 20 years, it will be regarded as a highway by dedication. Cassidy v. Sullivan, 75 Neb. 847 (106 N. W. 1027).

Evidence to establish.

——— Title of grantor.

20. (1890.) To establish the existence of a highway by dedication by deed it must appear that the grantor was the owner of the land when the dedication was made. Warren v. Brown, 31 Neb. 8 (47 N. W. 633).

——— Acceptance by public.

21. (1880.) If acts alone of the owner be relied on to prove it, they must be such as to clearly manifest an intention to dedicate, and the public must have so acted with reference to it as to indicate an acceptance thereof. Graham v. Hartnett, 10 Neb. 517 (7 N. W. 280).

22. (1890.) Where the acts of the owner of the land are relied on to establish a dedication of land for the purpose of a public road, an acceptance of the same by the public must be proved. Warren v. Brown, 31 Neb. 8 (47 N. W. 633).

23. (1906.) The acceptance by the public itself is shown by its entering upon the land and enjoying the privilege offered by user. Cassidy v. Sullivan, 75 Neb. 847 (106 N. W. 1027).

23*a*. (1907.) An acceptance of the dedication of lands of the general government, for road purposes, made by section 2477, Revised Statutes U. S., may be shown by the acts of the public authorities, or by the acts of the public itself. Van Wanning v. Deeter, 78 Neb. 282 (110 N. W. 703).

24. (1907.) The acceptance of a grant of land to a county for road purposes may be shown by proof that the public authorities afterwards assumed control over it and improved a portion of it, and that it was used by the public as a highway. Lyons v. Mullen, 78 Neb. 151 (110 N. W. 743).

——— Intent to dedicate.

25. (1880.) To establish the existence of a public road by dedication the clear assent of the owner of the land must be shown. Graham v. Hartnett, 10 Neb. 517 (7 N. W. 280).

26. (1880.) If acts alone of the owner be relied on to prove dedication, they must be such as to clearly manifest an intention to dedicate, and the public must have so acted with reference to it as to indicate an acceptance thereof. Graham v. Hartnett, 10 Neb. 517 (7 N. W. 280).

27. (1880.) An entry in the county commissioners' record, purporting to be a statement to the county clerk that the owner of land, for a stated consideration, had agreed to release the county from the payment of damages awarded him for locating a public road across his land, is not competent evidence against him, without showing that he either made or authorized the statement. Graham v. Hartnett, 10 Neb. 517 (8 N. W. 280).

28. (1888.) Unless there is some clear and unequivocal manifestation of an intention to dedicate, dedication will not be presumed until after the lapse of ten years. Rube v. Sullivan, 23 Neb. 779 (37 N. W. 666).

29. (1888.) A party owning land, in fencing the same, left a strip along the section line, a rod or more in width, apparently for the use of the public for a public road, and it was traveled as such; but there was no proof of dedication or an intention to dedicate any of the land within the enclosure. Held, That without such proof the jury would not be justified in finding that any of the land within the enclosure had been dedicated to public use, and, therefore, a road overseer who removed the fence as an obstruction to the highway would be liable for the trespass, Rube v. Sullivan, 23 Neb. 779 (37 N. W. 666).

30. (1894.) In order to establish the existence of a public highway over private property by dedication the animus dedicendi is essential, and must be clearly proved. Brown v. Stein, 38 Neb. 596 (57 N. W. 401).

31. (1896.) Where the acts of an owner of real estate are relied upon to prove that he has dedicated it to the public the acts must be such as to clearly manifest an intention on his part to dedicate it, and the public must have so acted with reference to the property as to indicate an intention of acceptance of the property dedicated. City of Omaha v. Hawver, 49 Neb. 1 (67 N. W. 891).

32. (1896.) Acts of an owner which amount to a dedication of his property to the public must be such as indicate an abandonment of the use of the property exclusively to the public. City of Omaha v. Hawver, 49 Neb. 1 (67 N. W. 891).

33. (1902.) To constitute a valid dedication of private property for a public highway, it must clearly appear that the owner intended to dedicate the land for a highway, and that the public by user or otherwise accepted the land for that purpose. Close v. Swanson, 64 Neb. 389 (89 N. W. 1043).

34. (1903.) The allegation that private property has been dedicated to a public use, can only be established from declarations or circumstances showing that the owner intended to make the donation in question. Langan v. Whalen, 67 Neb. 299 (93 N. W. 393).

Weight and sufficiency of evidence.

——— In general.

35. (1894.) Evidence examined, and held insufficient to establish a dedication of the property in controversy as public streets. Brown v. Stein, 38 Neb. 596 (57 N. W. 406).

36. (1896.) The evidence examined, and held to sustain the finding of the district court that the defendant in error had not dedicated certain real estate to the public for use as a highway. Oyler v. Ross, 48 Neb. 211 (66 N. W. 1099).

37. (1896.) Evidence showing that a city contractor, in grading a street entered upon adjoining land and took away dirt for grading purposes, without authority from anyone, and unknown to the owner, will not sustain a finding of a dedication of such land for street purposes. City of Omaha v. Hawver, 49 Neb. 1 (67 N. W. 891).

38. (1906.) Evidence showing use by the public for twenty years as a highway sustains a finding of dedication to the public by the owners. Cassidy v. Sullivan, 75 Neb. 847 (106 N. W. 1027).

39. (1907.) To prove an implied dedication of a road to the public as a highway and the acceptance thereof by the public, it is not necessary to prove that the public authorities have improved or repaired the road, where the evidence showed that it rquired no improving or repairing to fit it for public travel. Brandt v. Olson, 79 Neb. 612 (113 N. W. 151).

40. (1907.) Evidence of ten years' use by the public of a road through cultivated land without substantial variance, with the knowledge and acquiescence of the owner for a period of ten years, raises the presumption of an implied dedication and acceptance of such road as a public highway. Brandt v. Olson, 79 Neb. 612 (113 N. W. 151).

——— Plats and recognition.

41. (1884.) The city of O. having been in fact laid out into lots, blocks, streets, and squares more than twenty-five years ago, during all of which time the same have been used, enjoyed, and the lots taxed as such, held, that a decision of the supreme court that such lots have no legal existence for the reason that no plat or map of said city has ever been filed or recorded, would be against public policy, and a discussion of authorities which might logically lead to such a decision, declared inexpedient. Bryant v. Estabrook, 16 Neb. 217 (20 N. W. 245).

42. (1898.) The owners of real estate situated within the corporate limits of a city subdivided and platted the same. On the recorded plat, L street, which the public authorities had previously undertaken to establish, was indicated as being 66 feet wide, and the surveyor's certificate, in effect, declared that to be its width. The owners of the subdivision built houses on said street as shown on the plat, and along the same constructed a sidewalk, of which the general public enjoyed the unhindered use. They also mortgaged some of the lots, and represented to the mortgagee, as an inducement to make the loan, that such lots were located on L street. Held, That the finding of the trial court that L street is a thoroughfare 66 feet wide was warranted by the evidence, and should be sustained. McCague v. Miller, 55 Neb. 762 (76 N. W. 422).

——— Abandonment, and use by public.

43. (1880.) The building of a bridge by the county on a road leading to and across the plaintiff's land, he not being either by word or deed connected therewith, is no proof against him of dedication. Graham v. Hartnett, 10 Neb. 517 (7 N. W. 280).

44. (1882.) A public road over wild unenclosed prairie lands cannot be established by mere user, yet where the testimony shows that the landowner assisted in staking out and afterwards dedicated such road to the public, which accepted and worked the same, the jury will be justified in finding the establishment of such public road. Rathman v. Norenberg, 21 Neb. 467 (32 N. W. 305).

45. (1888.) Ten years' uninterrupted use of a public road will create a presumption of dedication, but a much shorter period will be sufficient, where the act of the owner from which the dedication is inferred is clear and unequivocal, and accompanied or immediately followed by public use. Rube v. Sullivan, 23 Neb. 779 (37 N. W. 666).

46. (1888.) A party owning land, in fencing the same, left a strip along the section line a rod or more in width, apparently for the use of the public for a public road, and it was traveled as such; but there was no proof of dedication or an intention to dedicate any of the land within the enclosure. Held, That without such proof the jury would not be justified in finding that any of the land within the enclosure had been dedicated to public use, and, therefore, a road overseer who removed the fence as an obstruction to the highway would be liable for the trespass, Rube v. Sullivan, 23 Neb. 779 (37 N. W. 666).

47. (1901.) Evidence of long continued use by the public tends to show the establishment of a road by dedication over the public domain. So also does the surveying, marking out, platting and improvement of a road by the public authorities. Streeter v. Stalnaker, 61 Neb. 205 (85 N. W. 47).

48. (1903.) The passive permission by the owner of lands of the use of them by the public, is not alone sufficient evidence of an intent to dedicate them to such use. Postal v. Martin, 4 Unof. 534 (95 N. W. 8).

49. (1905.) Evidence of user, and of surveying, platting and otherwise improving by public authorities, examined, and held sufficient to show the establishment of a public road by dedication. Eldridge v. Collins, 75 Neb. 65 (105 N. W. 1085).

50. (1906.) Evidence showing use by the public for twenty years as a highway sustains a finding of dedication to the public by the owners. Cassidy v. Sullivan, 75 Neb. 847 (106 N. W. 1027).

I. REQUISITES AND VALIDITY.

Essentials of deed to homestead, see Homesteads.

A. Nature and Essentials in General.

What law governs.

1. (1876.) At common law lands could be conveyed only by conforming to the law of the place where the lands were situated, but, by statute, lands in this state may be conveyed by conforming to the law of the place where the deed is executed and acknowledged. Hoadley v. Stephens, 4 Neb. 432.

Definition.

2. (1877.) A deed at common law is defined to be a written instrument under seal, containing a contract or agreement, which has been delivered by the party to be bound and accepted by the obligee or covenantee. McMurtry v. Brown, 6 Neb. 368.

Deed or testament.

3. (1898.) An instrument, although in form a deed, which by its terms was to operate only after the death of the maker or grantor, is testamentary in its character, and not a deed, and passes no present estate in the premises therein described. Pinkham v. Pinkham, 55 Neb. 729 (76 N. W. 411).

Absolute deed as mortgage.

See, also, Mortgages, §§ 38-72.

4. (1871.) A deed of real estate, absolute on its face, given to secure the payment of a sum of money, as between the parties, and all persons having knowledge of the purpose for which it is given, must be construed as a mortgage. Wilson v. Richards, 1 Neb. 342; (1888) Eiseman v. Gallagher, 24 Neb. 79 (37 N. W. 941).

5. (1876.) A conveyance in the form of a deed of trust to secure the payment of a promissory note, and conditioned that in case of failure to pay, the trustee shall sell, or upon payment, reconvey, is in effect only a mortgage. Webb v. Hoselton, 4 Neb. 308 (20 Am. Rep. 638).

6. (1883.) Where at the solicitation of the agent of a mortgagee, the mortgagor executed a deed to the premises to such agent who was to sell the same and, after paying the mortgage, and other incumbrances, deliver the balance to the mortgagor, such deed as between such agent and the grantor was a mortgage. Tower v. Fetz, 26 Neb. 706 (42 N. W. 884; 18 Am. St. Rep. 795).

7. (1891.) An absolute deed of real estate, or a bill of sale of personal property absolute on its face, executed and intended as security for a debt or loan, will be construed as a mortgage as between the parties thereto, and all others, except bona fide purchasers for value without notice. Kemp v.

Small, 32 Neb. 318; (49 N. W. 169); (1896) Names v. Names, 48 Neb. 701 (67 N. W. 751).

8. (1893.) Where a conveyance of property is shown, by the contemporaneous written contract of the parties thereto, to have been intended solely as security for the payment of money, or as indemnity against liability, such conveyance between against liability, such conveyance as between is, a mere mortgage. Nelson v. Atkinson, 37 Neb. 577 (56 N. W. 313).

9. (1895.) A deed absolute in form will be treated as a mortgage when it is given to secure payment of a debt, though the parties may have agreed that upon default of payment the deed should become absolute. State Bank of O'Neill v. Mathews, 45 Neb. 659 (63 N. W. 930; 50 Am. St. Rep. 565); (1901) Fahay v. State Bank of O'Neill, 1 Unof. 89 (95 N. W. 505); (1902) First Nat. Bank of David City v. Sargeant, 65 Neb. 594 (91 N. W. 595; 59 L. R. A. 296).

10. (1896.) The statute of limitations runs against a bill to declare a deed absolute in form a mortgage, in favor of a grantee in possession, from the time such possession becomes adverse to the grantor's title. Stall v. Jones, 47 Neb. 706 (66 N. W. 653).

11. (1896.) In this state a deed absolute in form passes the legal title, although intended as security for a debt, and for most purposes treated as a mortgage. Stall v. Jones, 47 Neb. 706 (66 N. W. 653); (1896) First Nat. Bank of Plattsmouth v. Tighe, 49 Neb. 299 (68 N. W. 490).

12. (1896.) That grantee's possession under a deed claimed to be a mortgage is adverse may be inferred from the exercise of acts of ownership. Stall v. Jones, 47 Neb. 706 (66 N. W. 653).

13. (1896.) The true test in determining whether a conveyance absolute in form should be treated as a sale or as a mortgage is whether the relation of the parties toward each other as debtor and creditor continues. If it does so continue, the transaction will be treated as a mortgage and the conveyance as a security only. Riley v. Starr, 48 Neb. 243 (67 N. W. 187).

14. (1899.) A quitclaim deed given to secure an indebtedness is in legal effect a mortgage. Huston v. Canfield, 57 Neb. 345 (77 N. W. 763).

15. (1901.) Whether a deed absolute on its face it in fact a mortgage, depends on the intention of the parties, gathered from their declarations and conduct, as well as from the papers signed. Sanders v. Ayres, 63 Neb. 271 (88 N. W. 526).

16. (1901.) Where in an action to have a deed absolute on its face declared a mortgage, evidence showing a debt existing between plaintiff and defendant at the date of the deed, a cancelation of the evidence of the debt by defendant, a contract to reconvey the premises to plaintiff within six months for a sum equal to the amount of the debt and six months' interest, retention of the premises by plaintiff without paying rent, and making of improvements thereon by him without objection from defendant and that the premises were worth perhaps double the amount of the debt, is sufficient to justify the court in declaring the deed merely security for the debt. Sanders v. Ayres, 63 Neb. 271 (88 N. W. 526).

17. (1902.) In equity an unrecorded deed absolute in form, given to secure a debt with parol defeasance, is a mortgage. Decker v. Decker, 64 Neb. 239 (89 N. W. 795).

18. (1903.) Where a deed, absolute in form, is given to secure payments of an indebtedness existing between the grantor and grantee therein, and the relation of debtor and creditor continues after the execution of the conveyance, the deed should be treated as a mortgage. Tannyhill v. Pepperl, 70 Neb. 31 (96 N. W. 1005).

19. (1904.) Where a party acquires the legal title by purchase of land at a sheriff's sale, in pursuance of a parol agreement with a judgment debtor that he is to hold the title thus obtained as a security for the loan of the money paid to relieve the land from the judgment lien, and that he will reconvey when the money is refunded, the case is not distinguishable from any other, where the deed though absolute in terms was designated simply as security for a loan; and parol evidence is admissible to show the transaction to be of that character. Dickson v. Stewart, 71 Neb. 424 (98 N. W. 1085; 115 Am. St. Rep. 596).

20. (1905.) Where a tract of land has been conveyed by a deed absolute in form to satisfy and pay the mortgage liens existing thereon, a subsequent parol promise to reconvey it to the grantor, without any consideration to support it, will not sustain an action to declare the deed a mortgage and redeem from the liens which have been canceled and treated as paid. Samuelson v. Mickey, 73 Neb. 856 (106 N. W. 461).

21. (1907.) Where the parties sustain the relation of debtor and creditor, and the grantee surrenders to the grantor the evidence of indebtedness held against him to the full amount of the consideration for such conveyance, and such indebtedness is understood by the parties to be fully paid and satisfied thereby, the transaction will in the absence of fraud be regarded as an unconditional conveyance. Harrah v. Smith, 79 Neb. 51 (112 N. W. 337).

——— Evidence as to character.

22. (1873.) A formal conveyance may be shown to be a mortgage by extrinsic evidence. Schade v. Bessinger, 3 Neb. 140.

23. (1873.) To vary the legal import of an absolute deed, especially when fraud, accident, mistake, or surprise, is not alleged, the evidence in reference to the understanding and intention of the parties, at the time of the execution of the writing, must be clear, certain, and conclusive, before a court of equity will determine such deed to be a mortgage security only. Schade v. Bessinger, 3 Neb. 140.

24. (1875.) Evidence that a deed absolute in its terms was intended to be a mortgage must be clear, consistent and satisfactory. Devoin v. Jennings, 4 Neb. 97.

25. (1889.) A deed, absolute in its terms, may be shown by parol to have been given for the purpose of securing the payment of money; in which case, as betweeen the parties, such deed will be construed to be a mortgage only. Tower v. Fetz, 26 Neb. 706 (42 N. W. 884; 18 Am. St. Rep. 795).

26. (1891.) Held, That the deeds and bill of sale, referred to in the opinion, were given as security and were not intended as an absolute transfer of the property therein described. Kemp v. Small, 32 Neb. 318 (49 N. W. 169).

27. (1894.) A deed of real estate, absolute in form, may be shown by parol to have been intended by the parties to it as a security for a debt or loan, and as between such parties, at least, the instrument will be construed to be a mortgage merely. Morrow v. Jones, 41 Neb. 867 (60 N. W. 369).

28. (1896.) While a preponderance of the evidence in sufficient to establish an issue in any civil action, and while the supreme court will not, in the exercise of its appellate jurisdiction, weigh conflicting evidence, still, in order to sustain a finding for the plaintiff in an action to have a deed absolute in form declared a mortgage, the evidence on behalf of plaintiff, when taken together, and without regard to the contradicting evidence, should present a state of facts consonant with reason and consistent in its different parts. Stall v. Jones, 47 Neb. 706 (66 N. W. 653).

29. (1896.) Under the evidence an absolute deed held a mortgage, there being no intention to make an absolute transfer of the premises described. Names v. Names, 48 Neb. 701 (67 N. W. 751).

30. (1901.) Evidence examined, and held to sustain the finding that a conveyance absolute in form was intended as a security only. Fahay v. State Bank of O'Neill, 1 Unof. 89 (95 N. W. 505).

31. (1902.) Evidence examined, and held sufficient to show that a deed absolute in form was intended as a mortgage. First Nat. Bank of David City v. Sargeant, 65 Neb. 594 (91 N. W. 595; 59 L. R. A. 296).

32. (1904.) In an action to have a deed declared to be a mortgage and to have the same canceled on the ground that it had been satisfied, the evidence held to sustain a judgment for plaintiff. Faulkner v. Powell, 72 Neb 474 (100 N. W. 937).

32*a*. (1907.) Evidence showing a grantor who conveys the absolute title to a business block to a creditor in consideration of the latter surrendering all obligations of the grantor held by him, which amounts to the approximate value of the building, and it is agreed that the grantor shall have sixty days in which to sell the premises and all over the amount of grantee's claims shall be retained by the grantor, is an absolute conveyance and not a mortgage. Harrah v. Smith, 79 Neb. 51 (112 N. W. 337).

32*b*. (1907.) Whether a conveyance absolute in form is intended as an unconditional conveyance or as a security, must be determined by a consideration of the peculiar circumstances of each case. Harrah v. Smith, 79 Neb. 51 (112 N. W. 337).

33. (1907.) Evidence examined, and held to negative the claim that a certain deed, absolute in form, was intended as a mortgage. Lemke v. Lemke, 78 Neb. 525 (111 N. W. 138).

Consideration.

Sufficiency of consideration as against creditors of grantors, see Fraudulent Conveyances.

34. (1889.) Where a deed given for a sufficient consideration is lost without having been recorded, a second deed, executed at a later date for the purpose of taking the place of the former, is founded on a sufficient consideration. Steel v. Coone, 27 Neb. 586 (43 N. W. 411; 20 Am. St. Rep. 705).

35. (1891.) When voluntary a deed without consideration is valid as to subsequent purchasers without notice. Keeling v. Hoyt, 31 Neb. 453 (48 N. W. 66).

36. (1899.) A deed, for which no valuable consideration has been given, is not entitled to take precedence of a prior unrecorded mortgage of which the grantee in such deed had no actual notice. Fisk v. Osgood, 58 Neb. 486 (78 N. W. 924).

37. (1901.) The assumption by the grantee of an incumbrance upon property conveyed to him, is a valuable consideration for the conveyance. Home Fire Ins. Co. v. Collins, 61 Neb. 198 (85 N. W. 54).

38. (1903.) Evidence contained in the bill of exceptions examined and held, that the consideration for the conveyance sought to be set aside for fraud and undue influence, was adequate. Tichy v. Simicek, 4 Unof. 597 (95 N. W. 629).

Operation and effect of defective deed.

39. (1876.) A deed defective in form by reason of a failure to comply with the requirements of the statute in force at the place of execution may convey the equitable title, and be sufficient to authorize a court of equity to grant appropriate relief, but such deed will not pass the legal title to the grantee. Hoadley v. Stephens, 4 Neb. 431.

Persons entitled to question validity.

40. (1888.) While it is true that the homestead cannot be conveyed or incumbered unless the instrument is executed and acknowledged by both husband and wife, yet this section is intended as a protection to the person not signing the instrument, and a third party could not question the validity of a conveyance, when it is signed and acknowledged by both, as against the interest of the persons making the conveyance. Cobbey v. Knapp, 23 Neb. 579 (37 N. W. 485.

B. Form and Contents of Instruments.

Necessity and sufficiency of writing in general.

41. (1890.) A paper purporting to be an article of agreement stating that one conveys and assigns all of his interests in certain lands to another, undated save as to the acknowledgment, and showing evidence of having been hastily drawn, does not convey the title to the land described. Norman v. Waite, 30 Neb. 302 (46 N. W. 639).

42. (1904.) The right of one person holding lands may be transferred to another verbally. City of South Omaha v. Meehan, 71 Neb. 230 (98 N. W. 691).

Forms and parts of deeds in general.

43. (1876.) An habendum is that part of a deed which usually declares what estate or interest is granted by it, its certainty, duration and to what use. Mills v. Miller, 4 Neb. 441.

Designation and description of parties.

44. (1878.) A mistake or abbreviation in the name of a grantee in a deed does not necessarily invalidate the deed, but such mistake or abbreviation may be explained and made certain and definite by extrinsic evidence. Aultman & Taylor Mfg. Co. v. Richardson, 7 Neb. 1.

Recitals.

45. (1896.) A correct designation of the statute under which a deed was executed held not essential to the validity of the deed. Green v. Barker, 47 Neb. 934 (66 N. W. 1032).

46. (1907.) The word "quitclaim" in what purports to be a deed of conveyance to real estate is sufficient to convey the interest of the grantor therein. Bannard v. Duncan, 79 Neb. 189 (112 N. W. 353).

Description of property.

47. (1877.) Where one entered a certain tract of land in the land office of this state, and afterward executed a deed conveying a tract of land of the same description without designating the county or state in which the land is situated, it is to be presumed that the deed conveys the land in this state. Butler v. Davis, 5 Neb. 521.

48. (1884.) A description "all that land lying in the bend of the Blue river, described as follows: commencing at a point in the center of the river about 5 rods west of the point where it crosses the east line of section 7, T. 9, R. 1, thence nearly due west along the top or brow of the bluff on the south side of said river and past a stake on said bluff, until this line strikes the center of the river at a point about 30 rods west from the place of beginning, thence along the center of said river towards the point of beginning, containing 4¾ acres, more or less," is sufficiently definite. Smith v. Dean, 15 Neb. 432 (19 N. W. 642).

49. (1892.) Real estate is sufficiently described in a conveyance when the deed refers for identification to another deed specifically mentioned therein, which contains an accurate description of the property sold. Rupert v. Penner, 35 Neb. 587 (53 N. W. 578; 17 L. R. A. 824).

50. (1901.) A deed which describes land conveyed as "all accretions of lands and parcels of lands belonging to government lot number ten (10) in section number one (1) in township number fifteen (15) north, range number thirteen (13) east; said accretions lying south of the meander-line of the state of Nebraska, according to the government survey," is not void for uncertainty of description. Delong v. Olsen, 63 Neb. 327 (88 N. W. 512).

51. (1906.) A deed purporting to convey a half of a government quarter section of land that has not been previously subdivided by plat or survey, or otherwise, is operative as a conveyance of a quantitative half of the tract without regard to the rules of the United States land department with reference to the subdivision of such tracts. Kirkpatrick v. Schaal, 77 Neb. 661 (110 N. W. 730).

C. Execution.

Signature.

52. (1877.) If the deed is signed in his presence, by his direction, an oral request is all that is required. But when the deed is to be made in his absence the authority must be given by an instrument under the hand of the principal, and duly acknowledged. McMurtry v. Brown, 6 Neb. 368.

53. (1892.) In the body of a deed and in the certificate of acknowledgment the grantor was correctly described as Archibald T. Finn. The deed was signed as Arch T. Finn. The certificate of acknowledgment identified the party mentioned as grantor as known to the officer to be the person whose name is affixed to the instrument and who executed the same. Held, That it sufficiently appeared that "Archibald T." and "Arch. T." were one and the same person. Rupert v. Penner, 35 Neb. 587 (53 N. W. 598; 17 L. R. A. 824).

54. (1896.) The title to real estate appeared from the record to be in Joel S. Smith. A deed which purported to convey such real estate and which in its recitals and also in the acknowledgment designated the grantor as "Joel S. Smith," but which was signed "John S. Smith," held not competent evidence to prove a conveyance of the title of Joel S. Smith in the absence of other proof establishing that the person who signed the deed, John S. Smith, and Joel S. Smith were one and the same person. Omaha Real Estate & Trust Co. v. Kragscow, 47 Neb. 592 (66 N. W. 658).

55. (1896.) Deeds were executed purporting to be conveyances of real property by the trustees of the city of Grand View, which were signed "A. B. Moore, chairman." Held, That without proof that A. B. Moore who signed the deeds was chairman of the board of trustees of the city of Grand View, the deeds did not evidence the transfer purported to be made. Green v. Barker, 47 Neb. 934 (66 N. W. 1032).

Attestation.

56. (1875.) The presence of the attesting witness to a deed or mortgage, at the time it is subscribed by the parties thereto, is not essential, if he is immediately afterwards told by them that such instrument is their agreement, and is by them requested to subscribe the same as a witness. Mulloy v. Ingalls, 4 Neb. 115.

57. (1881.) A deed executed in this state must be signed by the grantor in the presence of at least one competent witness, who shall subscribe his name thereto as a witness. Green v. Gross, 12 Neb. 117 (10 N. W. 459).

58. (1888.) Witnesses to a deed must be persons having no direct, certain, legal interest in the deed. Child v. Baker, 24 Neb. 188 (38 N. W. 725).

59. (1894.) A deed executed, acknowledged, and delivered is valid between the parties and those having knowledge of its existence, although not witnessed. Pearson v. Davis, 41 Neb. 608 (59 N. W. 885).

60. (1896.) While it is customary to make use of the word "witness" or "witnessed" in attesting the execution of deeds and other instruments affecting the title to real estate, such practice is neither necessary nor universal. Any expression from which it appears that the subscriber in fact witnessed the execution by the grantor sufficiently answers the requirements of section 1, chapter 73, Compiled Statutes. Link v. Connell, 48 Neb. 574 (67 N. W. 475).

61. (1896.) A deed executed within the state and conveying realty situate therein must, under section 1, chapter 73, Compiled Statutes, be witnessed. Schields v. Horback, 49 Neb. 262 (68 N. W. 524).

62. (1896.) A deed executed and acknowledged in Kansas, conveying land in Nebraska, is admissible in evidence in ejectment though not witnessed. Schields v. Horbach, 49 Neb. 262 (68 N. W. 524).

63. (1896.) Conveyances of real estate executed within this state, conveying real estate situate within this state, are required to be witnessed. (Comp. Stat., sec. 1, ch. 73.) Dorsey v. Conrad, 49 Neb. 443 (68 N. W. 645).

64. (1906.) A deed to real estate, executed, acknowledged, and delivered by the grantor, is valid as between the parties thereto and those having knowledge of its existence, although the conveyance be not witnessed. Adams v. Dennis, 76 Neb. 682 (107 N. W. 865).

——— What law governs.

65. (1881.) A deed of lands in this state, made in another state, must be executed according to the laws of such state, and if no witness to the deed is required by the laws of such state the deed is effectual to pass title without being so attested. Green v. Gross, 12 Neb. 117 (10 N. W. 459).

66. (1896.) A deed executed and acknowledged in Kansas, conveying land in Nebraska, may be recorded in the latter state, though not witnessed. Shields v. Horbach, 49 Neb. 262 (68 N. W. 524).

67. (1896.) A deed to Nebraska land executed in Iowa, and there acknowledged before a notary public who attached his official seal, is presumed to have been executed and acknowledged in conformity with the laws of Iowa, and may be recorded, or read in evidence, in Nebraska without further proof of execution, though it was not witnessed. Dorsey v. Conrad, 49 Neb. 443 (68 N. W. 645).

68. (1896.) A deed of land situate in this state, executed in the state of Iowa and acknowledged there before a notary public who attached his official seal to the certificate of acknowledgment, is presumed to have been executed in accordance with the laws of the state of Iowa; and though not witnessed, is entitled to be recorded and read in evidence in this state without further proof that the grantors therein actually executed and delivered the deed. Dorsey v. Conrad, 49 Neb. 443 (68 N. W. 645).

Acknowledgment.

See, also, Acknowledgment.

69. (1876.) Where a deed is executed and acknowledged in another state before a commissioner of deeds of this state, a notary public, or other officer using an official seal, the law presumes a compliance with the law of the place of execution, and no further authentication is necessary. But in all other cases there must be attached thereto a certificate of the clerk of a court of record or other certifying officer, under his official seal. Hoadley v. Stephens, 4 Neb. 431. [Overruled as to commissioner. 47 Neb. 592-612.]

70. (1876.) A deed executed and acknowledged by a justice of the peace, in Virginia, offered in evidence to prove that the grantors had parted with the legal title to certain real estate therein mentioned, is properly excluded, there being no evidence that it was executed and acknowledged according to the laws of Virginia. Hoadley v. Stephens, 4 Neb. 431.

71. (1876.) An instrument, purporting to be the deed of a feme covert, without her acknowledgment, is void as to her. It is no deed. Roode v. State, 5 Neb. 174 (25 Am. Rep. 475).

72. (1876.) A deed of conveyance of land must be executed and acknowledged as directed by the statutes of the state in which the land is situated; if the deed is executed in another state and the statute provides that it shall be executed and acknowledged according to the laws of such state, it must be so executed. Roode v. State, 5 Neb. 174 (25 Am. Rep. 475).

73. (1878.) The function of an acknowledgment is twofold—to authorize the deed to be given in evidence without further proof of its execution, and to entitle it to be recorded. The acknowledgment is no part of the deed itself. Burbank v. Ellis, 7 Neb. 156; (1896) Horbach v. Tyrrell, 48 Neb. 514 (67 N. W. 485; 37 L. R. A. 434).

74. (1881.) A deed, when executed, witnessed and delivered, is effectual to pass title, though not lawfully acknowledged. Harrison v. McWhirter, 12 Neb. 152 (10 N. W. 545).

75. (1883.) The objection to a deed, that the acknowledgment was taken before a county clerk, is cured by the second section of the act approved February 24, 1883. Davis v. Huston, 15 Neb. 28 (16 N. W. 820).

76. (1893.) A deed in other respects sufficient and regular is effective, as between the grantor and grantee therein, to pass complete title even though executed in a foreign state it is there acknowledged before only a purported justice of the peace as to whose genuine signature, official character and power, there is no accompanying certificate of a proper officer having a seal. Connell v. Galligher, 36 Neb. 749 (55 N. W. 229).

77. (1894.) The grantee in a deed of real estate acquires the legal title thereto on the execution and delivery to him of such deed, though said deed be neither acknowledged nor recorded and be afterwards lost; and a sheriff's deed, made in pursuance of a levy upon, and sale of, such real estate to satisfy a judgment against such grantee, will pass the legal title of such real estate to the grantee in such sheriff's deed. Connell v. Galligher, 39 Neb. 793 (58 N. W. 438).

78. (1896.) Section 5 of an act entitled "Of real estate and the alienation thereof by deed," and relating to acknowledgment of deeds passed January 26, 1856, as amended February 13, 1864, was in direct and irreconcilable conflict with the provisions of section 44 of chapter 31 of the same statute, passed at the same time, and, consequently, operated its repeal by implication. Omaha Real Estate & Trust Co. v. Kragscow, 47 Neb. 592 (66 N. W. 658).

79. (1896.) Sections 5 and 41 of chapter 43, Revised Statutes of 1866, entitled "Real Estate," relating to acknowledgment of deeds, were enacted at the same time, as parts of the same statute, and being in some of their provisions so repugnant that both could not be executed, inasmuch as they conflicted, the last section, 41, prevailed and the other was repealed. Omaha Real Estate & Trust Co. v. Kragscow, 47 Neb. 592 (66 N. W. 658).

80. (1896.) Where a deed to a homestead from a husband and wife to a third person, the grantee to reconvey to the wife, was actually acknowledged by a notary in Nuckolls county, but by mistake he certified that he was a notary of Webster county where the deed was recorded, the rights of a judgment creditor of the husband are not thereby affected, and the deed having been actually signed, acknowledged and delivered, conveys the legal title. Roberts v. Robinson, 49 Neb. 717 (68 N. W. 1035; 59 Am. St. Rep. 567).

81. (1897.) As between the parties an acknowledgment is not essential to the validity of a conveyance, unless the property be a homestead, or for the purpose of barring dower. Linton v. Cooper, 53 Neb. 400 (73 N. W. 731); (1906) Martin v. Martin, 76 Neb. 335 (107 N. W. 580).

82. (1897.) A conveyance by a married woman of her separate property, not her homestead, is valid between the parties although not acknowledged. Linton v. Cooper, 53 Neb. 400 (73 N. W. 731).

83. (1897.) A valid acknowledgment permits a conveyance to be received in evidence without further proof; but one not acknowledged may be received in evidence if its execution and delivery be otherwise proved. Linton v. Cooper, 53 Neb. 400 (73 N. W. 731).

84. (1899.) A United States commissioner has no authority to take acknowledgments of real estate conveyances executed in Nebraska. Interstate Savings & Loan Ass'n v. Strine, 58 Neb. 133 (78 N. W. 377).

85. (1901.) Under section 6, chapter 73, Compiled Statutes, providing for the execution of deeds in a foreign country the word "consul" means any person invested by the national government with the functions of consul-general, vice-consul-general, consul or vice-consul. Morris v. Linton, 61 Neb. 537 (85 N. W. 565).

——— Certificate of officer.

86. (1878.) A certificate of acknowledgment is sufficient if it shows that the requirements of the statute have been complied with in substance. Burbank v. Ellis, 7 Neb. 156.

87. (1878.) A certificate which shows that "On the 29th day of September, 1862, personally appeared before me, David Dorrington, mayor of Falls City," etc., held, a sufficient statement of the identity of the grantor. Burbank v. Ellis, 7 Neb. 156.

88. (1881.) When a deed is made in another state the certificate of acknowledgment of a notary public thereto, duly attested by his official seal, entitles such deed to be recorded without further authentication. Green v. Gross, 12 Neb. 117 (10 N. W. 459).

89. (1883.) The certificate of acknowledgment of a notary public, with his official seal attached, is sufficient proof of the due execution in another state of a deed of real estate lying in this state. Galley v. Galley, 14 Neb. 174 (15 N. W. 318).

90. (1886.) Deed executed in another state before an officer having no seal, to be admissible in evidence, must be certified in the manner provided by statute. O'Brien v. Gaslin, 20 Neb. 347 (30 N. W. 274).

91. (1888.) Although a conveyance of a homestead recites that it is made by the husband, he only being mentioned in the body of the instrument, yet if it is signed by his wife and acknowledged by her before the proper officer, the certificate of acknowledgment stating that she appeared with her husband, and that they acknowledged the instrument to be their voluntary act and deed, it is sufficient. Cobbey v. Knapp, 23 Neb. 579 (37 N. W. 485).

92. (1892.) A certficate of acknowledgment to a deed which states that "personally came Catherine Tozier, to me known to be the identical person whose name is affixed to the above instrument as grantor, and acknowledged the same to be her voluntary act and deed," which certificate is signed by an officer authorized to take acknowledgments, and attested with his official seal, held, valid. Gregory v. Kenyon, 34 Neb. 640 (52 N. W. 685).

93. (1892.) A certificate of acknowledgment of a deed or mortgage, in proper form, can be impeached only by clear, convincing, and satisfactory proof that the certificate is false and fraudulent. Phillips v. Bishop, 35 Neb. 487 (53 N. W. 375); (1893) Barker v. Avery, 36 Neb. 599 (54 N. W. 989).

94. (1894.) The record of a deed is not admissible in evidence unless the certificate of acknowledgment is substantially in accordance with the statute. Maxwell v. Higgins, 38 Neb. 671 (57 N. W. 388).

95. (1901.) The certificate of an officer having authority to take the acknowledgment of a deed cannot be impeached except for fraud, collusion or imposition. Boldt v. Becker, 1 Unof. 75 (95 N. W. 509).

96. (1907.) Failure of a notary to write under his official signature the date when his commission expires does not render his certificate void. Sheridan County v. McKinney, 79 Neb. 223 (115 N. W. 548).

Execution in blank.

97. (1888.) Where a wife executes a deed of her real estate, leaving the name of the grantee, the amount of consideration, and the date blank, and delivers such deed to her husband for the purpose of enabling him to sell and convey said real estate, such deed duly filled up in the hands of a bona fide grantee, who purchased the land from the husband and paid the consideration therefor, will be sustained. Reed v. Morton, 24 Neb. 760 (40 N. W. 282; 8 Am. St. Rep. 247; 1 L. R. A. 736).

D. Delivery.

Record as evidence of delivery, see post, § 219.

Delivery of deed as taking contract out of statute of frauds, see Frauds, Statute of, § 112.

Necessity.

98. Delivery is essential to the validity of a deed, and it takes effect only from the delivery. (1879) Roberts v. Swearingen, 8 Neb. 363; (1880) Patrick v. McCormick, 10 Neb. 1 (4 N. W. 312); (1896) Brown v. Westerfield, 47 Neb. 399 (66 N. W. 439; 53 Am. St. Rep. 532); (1904) Schneider v. Vogler, 5 Unof. 246 (97 N. W. 1018).

Sufficiency.

99. (1882.) No particular act or form of words is necessary to constitute a delivery of a deed. Anything done by the grantor from which it is apparent that a delivery was intended, either by words or acts, or both combined, is sufficient. And a delivery may be presumed from the grantee's possession of the instrument, in the absence of proof to the contrary. Brittain v. Work, 13 Neb. 347 (14 N. W. 421).

100. (1896.) Delivery is purely a question of intent to be determined by the facts and circumstances of each particular case. Brown v. Westerfield, 47 Neb. 399 (66 N. W. 439; 53 Am. St. Rep. 532).

101. (1901.) The delivery of an instrument is a question of fact to be determined by ascertaining the intention of the parties thereto. Home Fire Ins. Co. v. Collins, 61 Neb. 198 (85 N. W. 54).

102. (1901.) Where it is intended that a deed shall operate as a transfer of title, in contemplation of law it has been delivered. Home Fire Ins. Co. v. Collins, 61 Neb. 198 (85 N. W. 54).

——— Delivery to third person.

Delivery in escrow, see Escrow.

103. (1880.) Where a deed is given to a stranger, to be held by him until the grantee shall perform certain conditions, and the deed is delivered, without the consent or knowledge of the grantor, to the grantee, who wholly failed to perform any of the conditions, no title passes to such grantee. Patrick v. McCormick, 10 Neb. 1 (4 N. W. 312).

104. (1896.) It is not essential to the validity of a deed that it should be delivered to the grantee personally. It is sufficient, if the grantor delivers it to a third person unconditionally for the use of the grantee, the grantor reserving no control over the instrument. Brown v. Westerfield, 47 Neb. 399 (66 N. W. 439; 53 Am. St. Rep. 532).

105. (1896.) A mother signed and acknowledged a deed before a justice of the peace, conveying to her minor daughter certain real estate, and delivered the deed to the justice for the use and benefit of the grantee, without any reservation of control, with the intention and understanding that the justice should retain the custody of the instrument until the grantor's death, when he was to file it for record. The mother subsequently told the daughter that the property belonged to the latter, and that it had been fixed so she would have a home. Held, That the delivery to the justice was sufficient to pass the title to the property to the grantee at the date of such delivery. Brown v. Westerfield, 47 Neb. 399 (66 N. W. 439; 53 Am. St. Rep. 532).

106. (1899.) A delivery of a deed to an agent appointed by the vendee therein to receive it is a delivery to such vendee. Sowards v. Moss, 58 Neb. 119 (78 N. W. 373).

107. (1899.) A deed placed in the hands of the grantor's agent to be held until the consideration is paid, is not a delivery to the vendee. Soward v. Moss, 59 Neb. 71 (80 N. W. 268).

108. (1905.) Where the agent of a vendor receives a deed for the purpose of delivery upon payment of the consideration, without disclosing that he is also agent for the purchaser, and places the deed upon record after he has been notified by the vendor that the contract has been rescinded for nonperformance, no legal delivery of the deed has been made, and the grantee acquires no title thereby. Mason v. Strickland, 73 Neb. 783 (103 N. W. 458).

109. (1906.) A delivery of a deed by the grantor to a third person for the grantee, with directions to deliver it to such grantee, constitutes a sufficient delivery of a deed of conveyance. Martin v. Martin, 76 Neb. 335 (107 N. W. 580).

Record or delivery for record.

110. (1896.) Where a mother executes a deed to her son, and voluntarily places the same upon record for the purpose, and with the intent, of passing title to the grantee, actual manual delivery and formal acceptance are not essential to the validity of the conveyance. Issitt v. Dewey, 47 Neb. 196 (66 N. W. 288).

111. (1899.) An instrument transferring property, even though recorded before delivery, cannot be given effect to the prejudice of third parties who acquired rights in the property before the actual delivery of the conveyance. Barnes v. Cox, 58 Neb. 675 (79 N. W. 550).

112. (1901.) The recording of a deed by the grantor is evidence both of delivery and acceptance, if the conveyance is beneficial to the grantee. Home Fire Ins. Co. v. Collins, 61 Neb. 198 (85 N. W. 54).

113. (1906.) Where a grantor places his deed on record for the purpose and with the intent of passing title to his grantee pursuant to a valid agreement between them, actual manual delivery and formal acceptance are not essential to the validity of the conveyance. Fryer v. Fryer, 77 Neb. 293 (109 N. W. 175).

——— Conditional delivery.

114. (1882.) It is only where the deed is delivered to a third person, to be held until some condition be performed on behalf of the grantee, that it can properly be said to be an escrow. If it be delivered to the grantee, although with the understanding that the wife of the grantor shall afterwards execute it also, this being solely for the benefit of the grantee, he may waive it, and the delivery is complete. Brittain v. Work, 13 Neb. 347 (14 N. W. 421).

Ratification of defective delivery.

115. (1902.) The owner of real estate signed and acknowledged a deed of conveyance thereof, and at the same time took back a lease, executed by the grantee, for a life estate in the same premises; he retained possession of both instruments; his grantee obtained possession of the deed and filed it for record, without his knowledge or consent. After the death of the grantee, the grantor, on learning that the deed had been taken from his possession and recorded, filed the lease for record. The deed purports to have been given for a valuable consideration. Held, That his conduct rendered the deed as effective as though formally delivered. Palmer v. Mizner, 2 Unof. 899 (90 N. W. 637).

Operation and effect.

116. (1899.) Where a deed is delivered to the grantee by the grantor, it at once becomes operative as a conveyance, if such was the intention of the parties, even though the instrument was not to be recorded during the lifetime of the grantor. Brown v. Hartman, 57 Neb. 341 (77 N. W. 776).

E. Validity.

Capacity and assent of parties.

What constitutes mental incapacity, see Insane Persons, §§ 21-25.

117. (1872.) Weakness of understanding alone is not sufficient to avoid a deed, but it is a material circumstance in establishing an inference of unfair practices and imposition. Franklin v. Kelley, 2 Neb. 79.

118. (1875.) In the absence of fraud, mere imbecility or weakness of mind in a grantor, however great, will not avoid his deed, unless there be evidence to show a total want of reason or understanding. Mulloy v. Ingalls, 4 Neb. 115; (1877) Johnson v. Phifer, 6 Neb. 401; (1903) Tichy v. Simicek, 4 Unof. 597 (95 N. W. 629).

119. (1382.) A deed executed by one while he is non compos mentis, for no consideration, is invalid and may be canceled. Fisher v. Fisher, 12 Neb. 416 (11 N. W. 864).

120. (1896.) While mere imbecility or weakness of mind in a grantor will not, in the absence of fraud, avoid his deed, insanity will do so if of such a character as to induce the conveyance, although such insanity may not amount to a complete dethronement of reason and understanding upon all subjects. Hay v. Miller, 48 Neb. 156 (66 N. W. 1115).

121. (1902.) Although mental weakness may fall short of entire incompetency to transact business, if it is taken advantage of to procure a conveyance by inequitable means, the conveyance may be set aside. Bennett v. Bennett, 65 Neb. 432 (91 N. W. 409).

122. (1902.) A court of equity will scrutinize jealously a transaction as to which there is ground for holding that influence has been acquired over a person of weak mind, and has been abused. Bennett v. Bennett, 65 Neb. 432 (91 N. W. 409).

123. (1902.) The acts and contracts of a person of weak understanding will be set aside by a court of equity, when the nature of the acts or contracts justify the conclusion that the party has not exercised a deliberate judgment, but that he has been imposed upon, circumvented or overcome by cunning, artifice or undue influence. Meyer v. Fishburn, 65 Neb. 626 (91 N. W. 534).

Mistake.

124. (1902.) A husband against whom divorce proceedings had been instituted conveyed a valuable farm, upon which the family resided, to the wife, relying upon representations that the consideration for the deed was to be a home with his wife, permanent reconciliation, and a life annuity of $200. The husband could neither read nor write the English language. The deed as finally executed gave the wife the option of receiving the husband into the home, or excluding him upon the payment of the $200 annuity. Held, That the deed could not be upheld. Brun v. Brun, 64 Neb. 782 (90 N. W. 860).

Fraud.

125. (1885.) A deed from a mother to a daughter, induced by false and fraudulent representations by the daughter, will be set aside in a suit by the mother. Kleeman v. Pettzer, 17 Neb. 381 (22 N. W. 793).

126. (1888.) Where a vendor and purchaser stand on an equal footing, the expression of opinions as to the value of property will not usually be considered so material that misstatements will constitute fraud. Where, however, the purchaser resides near the property, and has knowledge of its value, and the owner is a resident of another state, and has no knowledge on that subject, statements of the purchaser representing the property to be greatly beneath its true value, and that the vendor's title has been conveyed by sale for taxes, will be sufficient to avoid the deed given to such purchaser. Morgan v. Dinges, 23 Neb. 271 (36 N. W. 544; 8 Am. St. Rep. 121).

127. (1888.) Where a person desiring to purchase real estate knows its value, and when asked by the vendor, a resident of another state, and who has no knowledge of such value, as to the worth of such property, designates a sum greatly beneath its worth, as he well knows, and such statement is relied upon by the vendor and a sale effected, it may be sufficient to authorize a cancelation of the deed at the suit of the vendor. Morgan v. Dinges, 23 Neb. 271 (36 N. W. 544; 8 Am. St. Rep. 121).

Duress.

128. (1886.) Where an old woman has been induced through coercion, though not amounting to fraud, to deed her property to her son, who agreed to care for her and husband, but, after securing the deed, mistreats her and the father and does not properly provide for them, the deed will be set aside. Munson v. Carter, 19 Neb. 293 (27 N. W. 208).

129. (1903.) A deed for the conveyance of land, if obtained by duress, may be avoided by the entry of the grantor or his heirs within the statutory period of limitation. Hovorka v. Havlik, 68 Neb. 14 (93 N. W. 990; 110 Am. St. Rep. 387).

www.libtool.com.cn

Undue influence.

130. (1886.) Undue influence exerted upon an uncle by his niece, by reason of which he conveyed to her certain real estate upon a promise to reconvey, may be sufficient to justify a court of equity in setting aside the deed. Hansen v. Berthelsen, 19 Neb. 433 (27 N. W. 423).

131. (1892.) In an ejectment suit the jury was warranted in finding that the deed of plaintiff's grantor was obtained by fraud and undue influence where the testimony showed that the maker was a drinking man, old, feeble, and childish; that he conveyed the land while sick and delirious, without lawful consideration, to a young, vigorous, and attractive woman, who had unlawfully cohabited with him, and promised to stay with him while he lived, and afterward abandoned him. Staley v. Housel, 35 Neb. 160 (52 N. W. 888).

132. (1894.) Equity will grant relief against persons procuring transfer of property by coercion and undue social or domestic force exerted on a party which controls the free action of his will and prevents a voluntary act. Hartnett v. Hartnett, 42 Neb. 23 (60 N. W. 362).

Illegality.

133. (1902.) A deed from a husband to wife conveying the farm upon which they both reside, the consideration being a home for the husband and cohabitation for an indefinite period, or exclusion of the husband from the home, at the will of the wife, upon the payment of a $200 annuity for life, is opposed to sound principles of public policy, as being a contract calculated to bring about a separation which has not yet taken place. Brun v. Brun, 64 Neb. 782 (90 N. W. 860).

Ratification of voidable deed.

134. (1892.) The ratification of a deed procured by fraud and undue influence must be with full knowledge of all facts affecting its validity. Staley v. Housel, 35 Neb. 160 (52 N. W. 888).

II. RECORDING AND REGISTRATION.

Necessity and effect as to third persons, see Vendor and Purchaser.

Record as notice to subsequent purchasers, see Vendor and Purchaser.

Recording deed as a delivery, see ante, §§ 110-113.

Effect of failure to record as against subsequent purchasers, see Vendor and Purchaser, §§ 271-323.

Priorities between unrecorded deed and creditors of grantor, see Vendor and Purchaser, §§ 222-234.

Purpose and scope of requirements.

135. (1877.) The policy of our law is to discourage secret liens, and to require all instruments affecting the title of real estate to be entered of record. Edminster v. Higgins, 6 Neb. 265.

Necessity as between parties to instrument.

136. (1880.) It is not the recording of the deed that passes the title, but it only secures the title from being defeated by a subsequent sale of land to an innocent purchaser. Kittle v. St. John, 10 Neb. 605 (7 N. W. 271).

137. (1881.) A deed when executed, witnessed and delivered, is effectual to pass title, though not lawfully acknowledged or recorded. Harrison v. McWhirter, 12 Neb. 152 (10 N. W. 545).

138. (1891.) An unrecorded deed is good against everybody except creditors of the grantor, and subsequent purchasers without notice of the first conveyance. Keeling v. Hoyt, 31 Neb. 453 (48 N. W. 66).

Sufficiency.

139. (1886.) A deed wrongly described in the records is as an unrecorded deed, as to subsequent grantees. Hubbart v. Walker, 19 Neb. 94 (26 N. W. 713).

Effect as between parties to instrument.

140. (1902.) The mere record of an instrument, signed and acknowledged by the owner of real estate, but not delivered, which is taken from his possession and filed for record, without his knowledge or consent, by the grantee named therein is not notice to such owner that such grantee asserts some right or title under the deed. Palmer v. Mizner, 2 Unof. 899 (90 N. W. 637).

III. CONSTRUCTION AND OPERATION.

A. General Rules of Construction.

Intention of parties.

141. (1888.) In the construction of deeds the intention of the grantor must be carried into effect. McCulloch v. Valentine, 24 Neb. 215 (38 N. W. 854).

Digitized by Google

142. (1900.) In a suit between others than original parties, the description in a deed, if unambiguous, governs, and the intention of the parties to the conveyance cannot take the place of calls. Pohlman v. Evangelical Lutheran Trinity Church, 60 Neb. 364 (83 N. W. 201).

Construing instruments together.

143. (1907.) Where a deed given in January recites that it was made in lieu of one for the same property executed in the preceding October, and there is neither evidence nor allegation of any new consideration or change of circumstances between the parties during the interval, the two deeds are to be considered as a part of the same transaction. Rihner v. Jacobs, 79 Neb. 742 (113 N. W. 220).

Conflicting clauses.

144. (1878.) The habendum in a deed cannot divest the estate vested by the grant in the deed; and when it is repugnant to the grant it must be treated as of no validity or effect. Aultman & Taylor Mfg. Co. v. Richardson, 7 Neb. 1.

145. (1889.) The certificate of acknowledgment as shown by the record of a deed, was dated on the 16th day of August, 1872, while the deed itself bore date of the 16th day of October of the same year. It was held that the date of the certificate of acknowledgment would prevail over that of the deed, and that the district court did not err in admitting a copy of the record in evidence, when objected to on account of the discrepancy in dates. Buck v. Gage, 27 Neb. 306 (43 N. W. 110).

146. (1892.) Under the provisions of section 53, chapter 73, Compiled Statutes, in construing an instrument conveying real estate, when by any reasonable interpretation the granting clause and the habendum can be reconciled, effect must be given both. Rupert v. Penner, 35 Neb. 587 (53 N. W. 598; 17 L. R. A. 824).

Extrinsic circumstances.

147. (1903.) The description in a deed may be aided by extrinsic circumstances. Keplinger v. Woolsey, 4 Unof. 282 (95 N. W. 1008).

148. (1905.) The construction of an ambiguous deed is ascertained from the language used and from a consideration of the situation and circumstances of the transaction of which it was a part. Hart v. Saunders, 74 Neb. 818 (105 N. W. 709).

Construction as to parties.

149. (1905.) "Grantee" as used in a party wall agreement means persons to whom the real estate might be conveyed by deed. Loyal Mystic Legion v. Jones, 73 Neb. 342 (102 N. W. 621).

Conclusiveness of recitals.

150. (1902.) When recitals in a deed are of the essence of the contract, neither party is permitted to deny them. McNaughton v. Burke, 63 Neb. 704 (89 N. W. 274).

B. Property Conveyed.

Property included in description in general.

151. (1884.) Where there is a call in a deed, which was in fact not intended by the parties, and is unambiguous, the intention of the parties cannot be made to take the place of the call, neither is parol proof competent to locate the land. Gillespie v. Sawyer, 15 Neb. 536 (19 N. W. 449); (1900) Pohlman v. Evangelical Lutheran Trinity Church, 60 Neb. 364 (83 N. W. 201).

152. (1900.) A definite description of lands in a deed designating the initial point, courses and distances, and followed by a statement of the number of acres conveyed, passes the quantity of land embraced in the specific boundaries, though greater or less than the number of acres stated. Pohlman v. Evangelical Lutheran Trinity Church, 60 Neb. 364 (83 N. W. 201).

153. (1903.) Where the owner of two adjoining tracts of land sells one of them, the purchaser takes the tract sold, with all the benefits and burdens which appear, at the time of the sale, to belong to it, as between it and the tract which the vendor retains. Znamanacek v. Jelinek, 69 Neb. 110 (95 N. W. 28; 111 Am. St. Rep. 533).

154. (1904.) A conveyance of land bounded in part by a river which has receded leaving accretions to the land, without describing such lands by metes and bounds, but by the number or numbers by which the same are designated in the government survey, passes the title, not only to the land originally constituting the grant from the United States, but to the accretions thereto. Topping v. Cohn, 71 Neb. 559 (99 N. W. 372).

154*a*. (1907.) Deed construed, and held to convey the land in dispute. Lamson v. Village of Elm Creek, 80 Neb. 369 (114 N. W. 277).

154*b*. (1907.) In a description of land

by metes and bounds a point of the compass named in a survey may be construed to mean a different or opposite direction, when it appears to have been written by clerical error, and is so inconsistent with the remaining parts of the description as to demonstrate that the different or opposite direction was intended. Hart v. Murdock, 80 Neb. 274 (114 N. W. 268).

References to plats.

155. (1901.) Where the official plat of the survey of government lands shows a river as one boundary of a certain lot, a subsequent patent for the lot, describing it by number, and referring to the plat on which it is marked as containing a certain amount, and deeds, describing the lot by number, passes all accretion to the lot up to their respective dates. Delong v. Olsen, 63 Neb. 327 (88 N. W. 512).

After-acquired property or title.

156. (1894.) The state of Nebraska sold certain land to Arnold & Abbott and gave them a contract for a deed. They platted the land into an addition, and sold and conveyed by warranty deed lots 3 and 4 in block 18 of said addition to one McCarthy, and he conveyed said lots to one Pillsbury. Arnold & Abbott then assigned their state contract to one Thomas, and the state of Nebraska conveyed the legal title of all said land to him. Thomas then conveyed the said lots 3 and 4 to Abbott. Held, That the legal title of said lots acquired by Abbott, by his conveyance from Thomas, passed at once by operation of law to, and vested in, Pillsbury, the grantee of McCarthy. Pillsbury v. Alexander, 40 Neb. 242 (58 N. W. 859).

157. (1898.) The general rule is that an ordinary quitclaim deed vests only in the grantee such title or estate as the grantor was at the time of the execution and delivery of the deed possessed of; and if a grantor in such a deed subsequently acquires the title to the real estate thereby conveyed, that title does not inure to the grantee in the quitclaim deed. Hagensick v. Castor, 53 Neb. 495 (73 N. W. 932).

158. (1899.) An after-acquired title does not inure to the benefit of the grantee, where the deed of conveyance under which he claims has been canceled and annulled by a decree of court. Troxell v. Stevens, 57 Neb. 329 (77 N. W. 781).

159. (1899.) By virtue of section 51, chapter 73, Compiled Statutes, an after-acquired interest in real estate by a grantor inures to the benefit of the grantee when the deed purports to convey a greater interest or estate than the grantor owns at the time of the conveyance. Troxell v. Stevens, 57 Neb. 329 (77 N. W. 781).

160. (1899.) Grantee in a quitclaim deed takes only the grantor's existing interest, and the after-acquired title of his grantor in the property does not pass to grantee. Troxell v. Stevens, 57 Neb. 329 (77 N. W. 781).

161. (1905.) If a grantor of quitclaim obtains an instrument that evidences and fortifies the very estate or interest which his deed purports and was intended and effectual to convey, such instrument inures to the benefit of his grantee. Ford v. Axelson, 74 Neb. 92 (103 N. W. 1039).

Appurtenances.

162. (1888.) On the 29th of April, 1885, A executed to B a lease to certain real estate, for a term of one year from March 1, 1885, and while the tenant was in possession, crop, to be delivered on or before January 1, 1886. Under this lease, B took possession of the premises. On the 30th day of April 1885, and while the tenant was in possession, A sold the real estate to C, conveying the same by warranty deed "subject to a lease which expires March 1, 1886." Held, That C was entitled to the rent reserved; the limitation in the deed only being intended as a recognition of the rights of the lessee, and a limitation upon the covenants of warranty contained in the deed. Eiseley v. Spooner, 23 Neb. 470 (36 N. W. 659; 8 Am. St. Rep. 128).

Evidence.

163. (1884.) In an action between others than the original parties to a deed, the intention of the parties to the conveyance cannot be inquired into for the purpose of ascertaining the land sought to be conveyed, if the calls in the deed refer to fixed monuments or points, nor is parol proof competent to locate the land. Gillespie v. Sawyer, 15 Neb. 536 (19 N. W. 449).

164. (1894.) Where the description in a deed contains a call to and along a line, the true location of which is uncertain, maps proved to be in common and accepted use in the community at the time of the conveyance are admissible to show that a particular line was in the community generally recognized by the name used in the deed. Hanlon v. Union P. R. Co., 40 Neb. 52 (58 N. W. 590).

165. (1894.) Where the description in a deed contains a call to and along a line, the true location of which is uncertain, parol evidence is admissible to show that at the time of the conveyance a particular line was in the community generally recognized by the name used in the deed. Hanlon v. Union P. R. Co., 40 Neb. 52 (58 N. W. 590).

166. (1903.) The description in a deed may be aided by extrinsic evidence. Keplinger v. Woolsey, 4 Unof. 282 (93 N. W. 1008).

C. Estates and Interests Created.

Effect of conveyance subject to mortgage, see Mortgages, §§ 300-302.

Reformation of deed to cover property intended to be conveyed, see Reformation of Instrument, § 2.

Operation of quitclaim deed.

Effect as to after-acquired title, see ante, §§ 160, 161.

167. (1889.) A husband and wife being in possession of a homestead which was heavily mortgaged, and the husband, being sick and about to die, executed a quitclaim deed of said homestead to his brother for the purpose of enabling him to settle up the estate without expense. The wife at first refused to sign the deed, alleging that it would deprive her of her rights in the estate, but upon the assurance of persons employed by the grantee to procure the deed, in effect that she would lose none of her rights thereby, she was induced to sign and acknowledge the deed. Held, That the grantee was bound by the representations of the persons obtaining the deed for him. Barker v. Barker, 27 Neb. 135 (42 N. W. 889).

168. (1897.) Covenants of warranty not broken when made pass with the title, unaffected by the fact that the conveyances are by quitclaim deed. Walton v. Campbell, 51 Neb. 788 (71 N. W. 737); (1899) Troxell v. Stevens, 57 Neb. 329 (N. W. 781).

169. (1898.) A quitclaim deed for realty passes all the interest of grantor at date of delivery, in absence of a contrary intent. Leavitt v. Bell, 55 Neb. 57 (75 N. W. 524).

170. (1898.) A deed of quitclaim passes only the interest of the grantor, subject to any equities which might be enforced against him. Arlington Mill & Elevator Co. v. Yates, 57 Neb. 286 (77 N. W. 677).

171. (1903.) The quitclaim deed of an owner, purporting to convey all his interest in land, carries not only his interest in possession, but also any reversionary rights in the same land which he holds subject to a then existing dower estate. Curtis v. Zutavern, 67 Neb. 183 (93 N. W. 400).

172. (1903.) Owners of land who have given quitclaim deeds to all their interest in the land, and have suffered a decree in partition against them that their grantee holds title to the land so conveyed and have allowed in such action of partition one-third of the net proceeds of the sale to be paid to the purchaser of the dower estate, to be held by him during the life of the doweress, are estopped to assert any claim accruing before the partition proceedings to the reversion of the dower. Curtis v. Zutavern, 67 Neb. 183 (93 N. W. 400).

Particular words or terms.

173. (1876.) Where a judgment creditor conveys his interests to his son and the debtor as tenants in common, and the judgment debtor is to buy in an outstanding title in himself and the other as tenants in common, such deed conveys only the interests of the grantor in the premises, and does not assign any interest in the judgments. Mills v. Miller, 4 Neb. 441.

174. (1885.) Where land was conveyed by husband and wife by warranty deed to trustees appointed by the will of her father, for the "sole and separate use and benefit" of the wife, etc., the consideration being derived from the father's estate, a provision in the deed that the husband "shall have the right to occupy, farm, and control said lands for her (the wife)" does not create any estate in him, where there is no fraud. Pemberton v. Pollard, 18 Neb. 435 (25 N. W. 582).

175. (1903.) A conveyance, before the partition proceedings, by one of the owners of the land to a brother, though purporting to convey all his interest, where by its other terms and the circumstances it is clear that only a transfer of an interest obtained by purchase was intended, and where the decree of partition so finds, will be held to convey the purchased interest only, and not the one inherited. Curtis v. Zutavern, 67 Neb. 183 (93 N. W. 400).

Life estates.

176. (1892.) The premises of a deed were "do hereby grant, sell, and convey unto J. P. C." The habendum clause was "to have and to hold said premises, with the appurtenances, unto the said J. P. C. for and during the term of his natural life, and at his decease the same shall descend in equal shares to his children," naming them. Held, That the deed conveyed a life estate to J. P. C., with remainder to his children therein mentioned. Rupert v. Penner, 35 Neb. 587 (53 N. W. 598; 17 L. R. A. 824).

Estoppel to deny estate conveyed.

177, 178. (1898.) Whatever be the form or nature of the conveyance of real property, if the grantor therein sets forth on the face of such instrument by way of recital or averment, either in express terms or by necessary implication, that he is seized or possessed of a particular estate in the premises conveyed, then such grantor and all persons claiming under him are ever afterward estopped from denying that he was so seized and possessed at the time he made such conveyance. Such an estoppel operates upon the estate and binds an after-acquired title as between parties and privies. Hagensick v. Castor, 53 Neb. 495 (73 N. W. 932); (1903) Omaha B. & T. R. Co. v. Whitney, 68 Neb. 399 (99 N. W. 525).

179. (1898.) In 1887 the children of George H. Ohler, believing him dead, partitioned among themselves his real estate, by quitclaim deeds from one to another, each deed reciting that the grantor "being one of the three heirs of George H. Ohler." In 1891 Ohler died owning this real estate and it descended to his heirs, the three children who had already partitioned it. Held, That the recital in the quitclaim deeds, "being one of the three heirs of George H. Ohler," was not a mere descriptio personæ of the grantor, but an assertion by such grantor that he was then an heir at law of Ohler, and the grantors had by such recital estopped themselves and those claiming under them from asserting that they were not heirs of George H. Ohler in 1887, and from asserting the title to the land which they acquired by his death in 1891, against the grantees in said quitclaim deeds and those claiming under them. Hagensick v. Castor, 53 Neb. 495 (73 N. W. 932).

D. Exceptions and Reservations.

Construction and operation of exceptions.

180. (1902.) A recital in a deed of conveyance that it is subject to certain mortgages, described therein, is notice to all persons claiming through or under such deed of such facts as might be ascertained reasonably by investigation of the record and following up the information imparted thereby. Carter v. Leonard, 65 Neb. 670 (91 N. W. 574).

181. (1902.) A recital in a deed that it is subject to a certain mortgage is not less constructive notice because contained in and a part of an agreement to pay the mortgages referred to. Carter v. Leonard, 65 Neb. 670 (91 N. W. 574).

182. (1902.) Where a mortgage is of record, which might reasonably be taken to be one of those referred to in a recital, in a deed that it was subject to the mortgage, one claiming through the deed is bound to inquire, and cannot avoid such duty because of an error in the description, which renders it somewhat doubtful what tract is intended. Carter v. Leonard, 65 Neb. 670 (91 N. W. 574).

Validity of reservations.

183. (1899.) A reservation in a deed is ineffectual to create title in a stranger to the conveyance, but may, when so intended by the parties, operate as an exception to the grant. Buchard v. Walther, 58 Neb. 539 (78 N. W. 1061).

184. (1899.) A conveyance by warranty deed to B, with a reservation of a life estate in the grantor, and after the death of the latter a life estate to C, a stranger to the deed, conveys no estate to C, since a reservation in a deed is ineffectual to create title in a stranger to the conveyance. Buchard v. Walther, 58 Neb. 539 (78 N. W. 1061).

E. Conditions and Restrictions.

Conditions running with the land.

185. (1903.) A condition in a deed conveying real estate by which it is provided "That no malt, spirituous or vinous liquors shall be kept or disposed of on the premises conveyed, and that any violation of this condition, either by the grantee or any person claiming rights under him or her, shall render the conveyance void, and cause the premises to revert to the grantor, his heirs and assigns," is a valid condition subsequent which, until broken, runs with the land. Jetter v. Lyon, 70 Neb. 429 (97 N. W. 596).

Effect of breach.

186. (1884.) A purchased of B a certain lot, paying therefor $50 in cash, and agreeing in the deed as part of the consideration to erect a building of a certain description thereon. Held, That B was entitled to the performance of the contract, and in case of the failure of A, after a reasonable time upon tendering back the money received, to a rescission. Willard v. Ford, 16 Neb. 543 (20 N. W. 859).

187. (1903.) On breach of a condition in a deed that no intoxicating liquors should be kept or sold on the premises, the grantor, if living, or, if dead, his heirs, may claim a reversion of the estate and can maintain an action in ejectment to recover it. Jetter v. Lyon, 70 Neb. 429 (97 N. W. 596).

Release or waiver of condition.

188. (1903.) A condition in a deed against the sale of intoxicating liquors on the premises held not waived by the grantor by subsequent conveyances of other property withiuo similar conditions. Jetter v. Lyon, 70 Neb. 429 (97 N. W. 596).

F. Loss or Relinquishment of Rights.

Redelivery of deed to grantor.

189. (1886.) Where a deed of conveyance of real estate is executed and delivered to a purchaser, such execution and delivery vests the title of the grantor in the grantee and a redelivery or surrender of the deed unaccompanied with the purpose of rescinding and annulling the contract of purchase will neither divest the grantee of the title nor operate as an estoppel against him. Bunz v. Cornelius, 19 Neb. 107 (26 N. W. 621).

190. (1899.) The surrender of an unrecorded deed by the grantee to the grantor will not reinvest the title in the latter. Brown v. Hartman, 57 Neb. 341 (77 N. W. 776).

Destruction or loss of deed.

191. (1896.) The loss or destruction of a deed after delivery thereof, does not divest the title of the grantee. Brown v. Westerfield, 47 Neb. 399 (66 N. W. 439; 53 Am. St. Rep. 532).

192. (1899.) The destruction of a deed, after its delivery, does not divest the title of the grantee. Brown v. Hartman, 57 Neb. 341 (77 N. W. 776).

IV. PLEADING AND EVIDENCE.

Pleading.

193. (1896.) An allegation in a pleading that the grantor "made and executed" a deed, includes all acts essential to the completion of the muniment of title,—the delivery of the instrument to the grantee as well as the signature of the grantor. Brown v. Westerfield, 47 Neb. 399 (66 N. W. 439; 53 Am. St. Rep. 532).

195. (1898.) In an action for damages for a breach of the covenant against incumbrances contained in a deed, an answer charging that the deed executed by the grantors does not contain a correct expression of the intention of the parties in regard to the transaction sufficiently alleges the mutuality of the mistake. Hotaling v. Tecumseh Nat. Bank, 55 Neb. 5 (75 N. W. 242)

195. (1902.) In a suit to cancel a conveyance by an old man alleged to have been of weak mind, allegations that the defendant represented that the grantor's son and son-in-law were conspiring to defraud him of his land; that they were intending to bring an action against him and would be able to procure a judgment by false evidence, and cause the land to be sold to satisfy it unless conveyed to the defendant; that the defendant promised to hold the land in trust and reconvey it; that such representations were false; that the conveyance was without consideration; and that it was procured by said false representations in consequence of the extreme old age, mental weakness and childishness of the grantor, state a cause of action. Bennett v. Bennett, 65 Neb. 432 (91 N. W. 409).

Presumptions and burden of proof.

196. (1879.) The possession of a deed by the grantee, in the absence of opposing circumstances, is prima facie evidence of delivery, and the burden of proof is on him who disputes this presumption. Roberts v. Swearingen, 8 Neb. 363.

197. (1892.) When a deed, which is beneficial in its character to the grantee named therein, is properly acknowledged and recorded, the presumption of law is that it was delivered by the grantor and accepted by the grantee. Bowman v. Griffith, 35 Neb. 361 (53 N. W. 140).

198. (1892.) Identity of the name of a grantor or grantee is prima facie evidence of identity of the person. Rupert v. Penner, 35 Neb. 587 (53 N. W. 578; 17 L. R. A. 824).

199. (1902.) The circumstances under which a conveyance was made, the condition of the grantor at the time, and the injustice to him and his heirs if it is upheld, may be such as to cast upon the grantee the burden of showing that it is untainted with undue influence, imposition, or fraud, but is the intelligent and deliberate act of the grantor. Bennett v. Bennett, 65 Neb. 432 (91 N. W. 409).

www.libtool.com.cn

Admissibility of evidence.

200. (1892.) Where a deed, beneficial to the grantee, recites that it is executed for the purpose of correcting an error in a prior deed between the same parties, the record thereof is evidence of the facts therein recited. Bowman v. Griffith, 35 Neb. 361 (53 N. W. 140).

——— Execution, existence and identity.

201. (1884.) When a deed is introduced in evidence, and it is shown by sufficient testimony that the alleged grantor has been absent from the state and his whereabouts unknown for more than ten years, and a claim of title under such deed is made for the first time, the alleged deed having existed more than twenty-three years, the admission of evidence impeaching the deed as a forgery held competent. Snyder v. Jennings, 15 Neb. 372 (19 N. W. 501).

202. (1892.) When attesting witnesses are absent from the county in which the action is pending, the execution of the instruments in question may be proved by any other competent evidence. Buchanan v. Wise, 34 Neb. 695 (52 N. W. 163).

203. (1892.) The absence of the attesting witnesses to an instrument may be established like any other facts. It is sufficient to prove facts from which a presumption will arise that they are absent from the county. Buchanan v. Wise, 34 Neb. 695 (52 N. W. 163).

204. (1892.) Testimony of an old resident of the county that he had never heard of the witnesses to a certain deed in controversy, coupled with the fact that their attestation was made in another state, is sufficient to raise a presumption that such witnesses are absent from the county and to authorize proof of the execution of the deed by other evidence. Buchanan v. Wise, 34 Neb. 695 (52 N. W. 163).

——— Capacity of grantor.

205. (1906.) The fact that the attending physician prescribed certain drugs for a patient which are used in the treatment of mental disorders is not competent evidence tending to establish the insanity of the patient. Ames v. Ames, 75 Neb. 473 (106 N. W. 584).

206. (1906.) In a suit by one of the representatives of a deceased person to set aside a conveyance made by the deceased on the ground that he was mentally incompetent to execute such conveyance, an answer filed by the deceased in a suit pending in his lifetime, in which he averred that at the time of executing the contract then in suit he was suffering from mental and physical prostration, and non compos mentis, is inadmissible in evidence on the question of the mental capacity of the grantor. Ames v. Ames, 75 Neb. 473 (106 N. W. 584).

207. (1906.) On the trial of the cause, where a non-expert witness was asked to state whether the grantor was able to converse intelligently on any particular subject for any length of time, the witness having given the conversations and described the conduct of the grantor, it was for the court to draw inferences therefrom as to his inability to converse intelligently. Ames v. Ames, 75 Neb. 473 (106 N. W. 484).

——— Fraud.

208. (1872.) Fraud may be shown in an action of ejectment to avoid a deed. Franklin v. Kelley, 2 Neb. 79.

——— Performance or breach.

209. (1902.) In an action by a grantee of a deed against his grantor to recover for a breach of covenant against incumbrances, parol evidence is inadmissible to show that taxes were, by contemporaneous oral agreement, excepted from the terms of the deed. Stanisics v. McMurtry, 64 Neb. 761 (90 N. W. 884).

Weight and sufficiency.

210. (1893.) A recital in a deed of recent date that the grantors are the heirs at law of a former owner of the lands therein described, is not sufficient evidence, as against a stranger to the instrument, of the death of the supposed ancestor, or that the persons who executed the deed are his heirs, and hence is insufficient to prove title in the grantee. McMurtry v. Keifner, 36 Neb. 522 (54 N. W. 844).

211. (1901.) A deed, unaided by other proof, is not ordinarily evidence of title to land described therein. Lesieur v. Custer County, 61 Neb. 612 (85 N. W. 892).

——— Execution.

212. (1899.) Evidence examined, and held to sustain a finding that a deed was forged. Lindsay v. Palmer, 58 Neb. 168 (78 N. W. 371).

213. (1902.) Evidence examined, and held to sustain the findings of the trial court that the premises in controversy were the homestead of the appellee, and that she did not voluntarily execute the deed of conveyance. Blumer v. Albright, 64 Neb. 249 (89 N. W. 809).

214. (1907.) Evidence examined, and found insufficient to support a finding that the name of a grantee was inserted without authority in a deed regular upon its face, and that the same was intended as a mortgage. Butler v. Peterson, 79 Neb. 715 (116 N. W. 515).

——— Delivery and acceptance.

215. (1888.) Where the evidence as to the delivery of a deed is conflicting and nearly equally balanced, and the court below found in favor of delivery, such finding will not be set aside as being against the weight of evidence. Smith v. Mesarvey, 22 Neb. 756 (36 N. W. 137).

216. (1893.) Where by the terms of a deed a grantee assumes a debt secured by a mortgage on the land and the grantee denies the debt and the delivery of the deed, to bind such grantee the proof must show an actual delivery, from which, if he retains the deed, an acceptance may be presumed. Very clear proof will be required where the property conveyed is of much less value than the incumbrance which it is alleged the grantee assumed. Stuart v. Hervey, 36 Neb. 1 (53 N. W. 1032.)

217. (1893.) The finding of the trial court that the deed executed by the plaintiff and deposited in escrow with a third person, to be delivered to the vendee on the performance by the latter of certain conditions, was delivered by the depository in escrow by instructions of the vendor before the conditions of the holding had been complied with, considered to be sustained by the evidence in the case. Eggleston v. Pollock, 38 Neb. 188 (56 N. W. 805).

218. (1898.) The mere circumstance that a deed was found among the papers of the deceased grantor named in it held to be without significance, in view of the fact that such grantor—a resident of Nebraska—had, since the making of the deed, been constituted by the grantee—a resident of New York—his attorney in fact to sell, manage, and convey the property described in such deed. Gustin v. Michelson, 55 Neb. 22 (75 N. W. 153).

219. (1898.) The fact that a deed of conveyance has been recorded affords prima facie evidence of its delivery, which is a question of fact. Gustin v. Michelson, 55 Neb. 22 (75 N. W. 153).

220. (1898.) The introduction in evidence of a recorded deed by the grantee mentioned therein in support of his claim of title to the property is sufficient to establish his acceptance of such deed. American Fire Ins. Co. v. Landfare, 56 Neb. 482 (76 N. W. 1068).

221. (1901.) The presumption of law of the delivery of a deed of conveyance on the date of its execution is overcome by proof of a manual delivery and acceptance by the grantee at a subsequent date, where there is nothing warranting a conclusion that a delivery was intended by the grantor prior to the time of the manual delivery. Blair State Bank v. Bunn, 61 Neb. 464 (85 N. W. 527).

222. (1903.) Evidence examined, and found sufficient to sustain the conclusions of the trial court that the deed in question was a forgery. Mavity v. Stover, 68 Neb. 602 (94 N. W. 834).

222*a*. (1908.) In an action to set aside a conveyance on the ground that the deed had not been delivered, the evidence held sufficient to sustain a judgment for plaintiff. Wetherell v. Adams, 80 Neb. 584 (114 N. W. 778).

——— Consideration.

223. (1895.) An alleged agreement to pay an existing mortgage, as part of the consideration for the conveyance of mortgaged premises, is not established by recitations in the deed of conveyance that such deed is subject to said mortgage, nor a mere recitation that said mortgage is part of the consideration or purchase price. Green v. Hall, 45 Neb. 89 (63 N. W. 119).

224. (1895.) A binding assumption of the payment of a mortgage by the grantee in a deed which merely recites the existence of such mortgage on the premises conveyed, and that such mortgage is a part of the consideration or purchase price, cannot be established by proof that subsequent to the execution of such deed the grantee therein named, orally, and without consideration, promised the mortgagee that he would pay such mortgage. Green v. Hall, 45 Neb. 89 (63 N. W. 119).

——— Validity.

225. (1881.) Evidence held sufficient to show that deed executed by person under arrest, was obtained by duress. McCulley v. Jones, 11 Neb. 513 (9 N. W. 695).

226. (1892.) Upon the facts stated, held, that the deed for the plaintiff's land was obtained by fraudulent professions of friendship and undue influence, and the judgment of the court below, setting it aside, was right. Kithcart v. Larimore, 34 Neb. 273 (51 N. W. 768).

227. (1892.) In an action to set aside a deed made by a father in his dotage to his youngest son, held, that the testimony tended to show undue influence on the part of the son, and that the father was not in a mental condition to transact important business. Loder v. Loder, 34 Neb. 824 (52 N. W. 814).

228. (1895.) Evidence discussed held insufficient to show plaintiff's right to have a conveyance executed by her canceled on account of fraud, duress, and undue influence. Firestein v. Horwich, 43 Neb. 453 (61 N. W. 592).

229. (1896.) Evidence in an action to cancel a deed from a mother to a son held to sustain a decree for defendant. Issitt v. Dewey, 47 Neb. 196 (66 N. W. 288).

230. (1896.) Evidence held to sustain a decree that a deed was not procured by fraud and duress. Stochl v. Caley, 48 Neb. 786 (67 N. W. 783).

231. (1904.) Evidence in an action to set aside certain deeds made by an old man to a woman claiming to be his wife held not to show such total want of understanding, or such mania, affecting the transactions in question, as to avoid the deeds and marriage of the grantor for insanity, in the absence of fraud or undue influence. Aldrich v. Steen, 71 Neb. 33 (98 N. W. 445).

232. (1904.) Evidence held sufficient to avoid, for undue influence, the deeds concerning all his property, of the value of many thousand dollars, made by a frail old man, who had shown symptoms of dementia, to his housekeeper, without consideration. Aldrich v. Steen, 71 Neb. 33 (98 N. W. 445).

233. (1905.) Evidence in an action to cancel a deed in blank, delivered to a real estate broker, who was to obtain the signature of plaintiff's wife, held to sustain a decree for defendant. Lucas v. Cass County Recorder, 75 Neb. 351 (106 N. W. 217).

Compelling deposit of public funds, see Mandamus, §§ 169, 170.

Nature of contract.

1. (1897.) A deposit of public moneys by a state treasurer in a legally constituted depository for public funds, in compliance with the provisions of the depository law is in substance and legal effect a loan of the moneys so deposited. In re State Treasurer's Settlement, 51 Neb. 116 (70 N. W. 532; 36 L. R. A. 746).

Statutory provisions.

2. (1897.) The state depository law is not amendatory of subdivision 8, section 2, article IV, chapter 83, Compiled Statutes, in such a sense as to render it inimical to section 11, article III of the constitution. In re State Treasurer's Settlement, 51 Neb. 116 (70 N. W. 532; 36 L. R. A. 746).

3. (1898.) Depository law (Session Laws 1891, p. 347, ch. 50) held valid. Holt County Bank v. Holt County, 53 Neb. 827 (74 N. W. 259).

Appointment and designation.

4. (1894.) Under the provisions of chapter 50, Session Laws of 1891, it is the duty of the county board to act on the propositions of each bank to become a depository of current funds of the county, as well as to approve the bond incident to that relation. State, ex rel. First Nat. Bank, v. Owen, 41 Neb. 651 (59 N. W. 886).

5. (1900.) When a county board has acted upon the propositions of different banks applying to be made depositories of county funds, and approved or rejected the bonds presented for that purpose, its powers and authority in the premises cease, and it is without power or authority to control the action of the county treasurer, and direct in which of the depositories, or in what amount, the depositing of county funds shall be had; and when an attempt is made to designate one bank as a preferred depository, such action is a nullity, and without force or effect. State, ex rel. Irrigators Bank, v. Whipple, 60 Neb. 650 (83 N. W. 921).

6. (1900.) A board of county commissioners is without authority to make one of two or more banks, designated as depositories of county funds, a preferred depository, in which county funds are to be first deposited by the county treasurer until the sum of such deposit shall reach the amount allowed under the law and depository bond of such bank. State, ex rel. Irrigators Bank, v. Whipple, 60 Neb. 650 (83 N. W. 921).

Bond.

7. (1894.) The mere fact that a county treasurer has assumed to designate the bank in which he shall deposit current funds of the county, and to fix the penal bond, confers upon the bank designated no right by mandamus to compel the county board to approve the sufficiency of the bond. State, ex rel. First Nat. Bank of Stanton, v. Owen. 41 Neb. 651 (59 N. W. 886).

8. (1894.) Under the provisions of chapter 50, laws of 1891, it is the duty of the county board to act on the propositions of each bank to become county depositories, and to approve the bond incident to that relation. State, ex rel. First Nat. Bank of Stanton, v. Owen, 41 Neb. 651 (59 N. W. 886).

9. (1897.) To constitute a bank a state depository of public funds it must give a bond for the safe keeping and payment of such deposits and the accretions thereof, conditioned as required by law, and approved by the governor, secretary of state, and attorney general, or any two of them, where all were present and conferred upon the subject. In re State Treasurer's Settlement, 51 Neb. 116, (70 N. W. 532; 36 L. R. A. 746).

10. (1902.) Under the terms of the statute providing for the depositing of public funds by the county treasurer in depository banks, a depository bond of such bank is a continuing liability, which can be discharged only by the paying out of the funds deposited on account of the giving of the bond. Hall County v. Thomsen, 63 Neb. 787 (89 N. W. 393).

11. (1902.) The delivery of checks, drawn by an out-going county treasurer on county funds in a depository bank that had given the proper bond as such depository, by the incoming treasurer who had such checks certified instead of drawing out the cash, after which the bank failed, is not a redeposit of the funds as a general deposit, as will relieve the bank from liability on the depository bond. Hall County v. Thomsen, 63 Neb. 787 (89 N. W. 393).

11*a*. (1907.) The cashier of a bank is the proper officer to execute a bond on its behalf to secure a deposit of public money made therein, and the bank will be bound by such execution, in the absence of some rule or regulation adopted by the directors or stockholders requiring special authority on the part of the cashier to execute such bonds, and notice of such fact brought to the attention of the obligee therein. Johnson County v. Chamberlain Banking House, 80 Neb. 96 (113 N. W. 1055).

Liability of depositary in general.

12. (1903.) Where a warrant drawn upon the general fund "For to reimburse for state sinking fund" and registered for payment, is unlawfully sold by the state treasurer, who afterwards in payment thereof draws his check on a state depository in whose hands the warrant was for collection, the latter will be protected in paying such check, unless it had actual notice of the unlawful purpose. State v. Omaha Nat. Bank, 66 Neb. 857 (93 N. W. 319).

13. (1905.) If money belonging to the state in the hands of a county treasurer is by him deposited in a bank that has been designated as a depository of county funds, and is lost by a failure of the bank, it is not the duty of the treasurer to use the money of the county to make good the loss to the state, and his action in doing so without authority from the county board will not estop the county to recover the money from the state. Lancaster County v. State, 74 Neb. 215 (107 N. W. 388).

Right to take in general.

1. (1895.) Provisions for the taking of testimony in one state for use in the courts of another, and the enforced attendance of witnesses for that purpose, are founded upon comity, and are, in the absence of express statutory provision to the contrary, extrajudicial as to the courts of the state where such evidence is sought. Stratton v. Dole, 45 Neb. 472 (63 N. W. 875).

www.libtool.com.cn

Right to take second deposition.

2. (1903.) In this state the taking of depositions is regulated by statute, and there is no provision which requires leave of court to entitle a party to take a second deposition of the same witness for use in the same case. Peycke v. Shinn, 68 Neb. 343 (94 N. W. 135).

Persons authorized to take depositions.

3. (1876.) Unless authorized by special commission, the clerk of a court out of the state has no authority to take depositions. Starring v. Mason, 4 Neb. 367.

4. (1902.) Section 1750, Revised Statutes of the United States, confers on consular officers the power "to perform any notarial act which any notary public is required or authorized by law to do within the United States." Held, That such consular officer is a notary public within the meaning of our statute, and authorized to take and certify affidavits of depositions for use in the courts of the state. Browne v. Palmer, 66 Neb. 287 (92 N. W. 315).

5. (1904.) A county judge in this state has the same jurisdiction and powers in taking depositions that are conferred by law upon a notary public, including full authority to commit a witness for refusing to be sworn or give testimony in a proper case. Olmstead v. Edson, 71 Neb. 17 (98 N. W. 415).

Persons whose depositions may be taken.

6. (1887.) A party plaintiff who is a non-resident of the county where the trial is held need not appear personally to testify in the case, but his deposition may be taken as in the case of other non-resident witnesses. Sells v. Haggard & Co., 21 Neb. 357 (32 N. W. 66).

Time for taking.

7. (1894.) Either party may commence taking depositions any time after service of summons. Kansas City, W. & N. W. R. Co. v. Conlee, 43 Neb. 121 (61 N. W. 111).

8. (1902.) In the absence of a statute or standing court rule forbidding the taking of depositions during a term time of the court in which the cause is pending, the fact that they are so taken is not ground for suppressing them. Donovan v. Hibbler, 3 Unof. 652 (92 N. W. 637).

Notice to take.

——— Certainty of place.

9. (1886.) In a notice to take the deposition of witnesses therein named, "at the office of M. C. Little in the town of Tonica, county of La Salle and state of Illinois," held, to contain a sufficient description of the place of taking such depositions prima facie. Britton v. Berry, 20 Neb. 325 (30 N. W. 254).

——— Reasonable time.

10. (1883.) A notice served on the 24th to take depositions on the 28th of a month, a Sunday intervening, at a place requiring two days' travel to reach by the usual route, gives one day less than the statute requires. Cool v. Roche, Hall & Ray, 15 Neb. 24 (17 N. W. 119).

11. (1883.) The notice to take depositions shall be served so as to allow the adverse party sufficient time by the usual route of travel to attend, and one day for preparation, exclusive of Sunday and the day of service. Cool v. Roche, Hall & Ray, 15 Neb. 24 (17 N. W. 119).

——— Names of witnesses.

12. (1896.) Under our statute requiring a notice to take depositions to "specify the names of witnesses to be examined," the deposition of "G. A. Hollem" cannot be taken under a notice specifying the name of "Gus Hahn" or "Gus Halin," such names not being idem sonans. Miller v. Frey, 49 Neb. 472 (68 N. W. 630).

——— Service.

13. (1896.) Section 378, code of civil procedure, requires notice of the taking of depositions (unless taken under a special commission) to be served upon the adverse party, his agent or attorney of record, or left at his usual place of residence. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Meek, 49 Neb. 295 (68 N. W. 509).

14. (1896.) Service of notice to take depositions upon a station agent, who is not the attorney of record of the adverse party, a railroad company, whose employment in nowise relates to the particular controversy, and who is without authority to accept or waive service in its behalf in any suit or proceeding to which it may be a party, does not satisfy the requirement of the statute. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Meek, 49 Neb. 295 (68 N. W. 509).

Use of deposition on appeal.

15. (1896.) Depositions taken in a case pending before a justice and by stipulation used in said case and another pending before said justice, may be used on the trial of both cases in the appellate court, the stipulation in the meantime not having been set aside. Keens v. Robertson, 46 Neb. 837 (65 N. W. 897).

Place of taking.

16. (1878.) Whether it is proper to take depositions in the office of one of the parties or of his attorney, or before an officer who is also the clerk or student of such party or attorney, quære. Payne v. Briggs, 8 Neb. 75.

17. (1887.) The fact that a notary before whom a deposition is taken has his office in a room occupied by the attorneys who represented the party taking the deposition, is not of itself sufficient to warrant the exclusion of the deposition when offered to be read upon the trial. The practice of taking depositions in the office of an attorney interested in the cause is objectionable, yet there is no law to prohibit it. Singer Mfg Co. v. McAllister Bros., 22 Neb. 359 (35 N. W. 181).

18. (1906.) When depositions are to be taken in a large city, designation of the place by giving the name of the building or block in which the same are to be taken is sufficient without giving the street number. Sheibley v. Fales, 75 Neb. 823 (106 N. W. 1032).

Presence of parties or counsels.

19. (1888.) Where depositions of certain witnesses on behalf of the defendant in a criminal case are taken by a commission appointed by a judge of the district court, such judge has the power under section 460 of the criminal code to prescribe the manner of taking such depositions, the usual mode being by interrogatories and cross-interrogatories, but this will not prevent the attorney of either or both parties from appearing and further examining or cross-examining the witnesses. Gandy v. State, 24 Neb. 716 (40 N. W. 302).

Functions of officer taking.

20. (1906.) In the taking of depositions notaries public are not exercising judicial functions, and do not constitute a law court. Their powers are derived solely from the statute. In re Butler, 76 Neb. 267 (107 N. W. 572.

Examination of witness.

21. (1902.) An answer of a witness in a deposition is not to be stricken out because in answer to a proper question he gives the effect of a conversation, instead of the very terms thereof. If the other party desires to know what transpired in more detail, he should cross-examine. Bowman v. Wright, 65 Neb. 661 (91 N. W. 580).

22. (1904.) Where the testimony of a person having a direct legal interest in the result of an action, where the adverse party is a representative of a deceased person is taken by deposition, and his testimony as to transactions with the deceased is objected to upon that ground, the adverse party may cross-examine. By so doing he does not waive his objections to the competency of the witness, but may urge the same at the trial. If the evidence in chief is admitted at the trial the cross-examination should also be admitted; but, if the evidence in chief is excluded upon the objections of defendant as to competency, the cross-examination should also be excluded upon the defendant's objection, and the plaintiff is not entitled to use it to establish his case. Bentley v. Estate of Bentley, 72 Neb. 803 (101 N. W. 976).

——— On subsequent deposition.

23. (1895.) Where a deposition was wrongfully transmitted and never filed a subsequent deposition of the same witness taken on proper notice before the same notary in the same case will not be quashed on the ground that the notary failed to propound the cross-interrogatories originally filed. City of Chadron v. Glover, 43 Neb. 732 (62 N. W. 62).

Subscription by witness.

24. (1886.) Depositions with the names of the witnesses respectively attached thereto, with a cross between the Christian and surname, and the word "his" written above and the word "mark" written below the cross, and followed by the words, "subscribed and sworn to before me and in my presence. M. C. Little, Notary Public," is a sufficient compliance with the statute requiring depositions to be "subscribed by the witness." Britton v. Berry, 20 Neb. 325 (30 N. W. 254).

Punishment of witness for misbehavior.

25. (1887.) A notary public has power to commit for contempt a witness who refuses to give his deposition in a proper case. Dogge v. State, 21 Neb. 272 (31 N. W. 929).

26. (1891.) Notaries public, under section 7 of chapter 61, Compiled Statutes, are not authorized to punish by fine or imprisonment persons guilty of misdemeanor, or misbehavior during the taking of depositions. Courtnay v. Knox, 31 Neb. 652 (48 N. W. 763).

Requisites and sufficiency of return and certificate.

——— Time, place, and before whom taken.

27. (1878.) The certificate of the officer taking a deposition ought to show on its face the county and state or country where the same is taken, as well as the state or country from which the officer derived his official character. Payne v. Briggs, 8 Neb.75.

28. (1889.) To entitle a deposition to be read in evidence the certificate must show that the deposition was taken at the place, room, or office, named in the notice, and the certificate or deposition on its face must show that the taking of the deposition was commenced on the day named in the notice. Dawson v. Dawson, 26 Neb. 716 (42 N. W. 744).

29. (1897.) The caption of a deposition may be read in connection with the certificate at the end thereof for the purpose of determining whether the deposition discloses that it was taken at the time and place and before the officer mentioned in the notice. McClintock v. State Bank of Table Rock, 52 Neb. 130 (71 N. W. 978).

30. (1906.) A certificate to a deposition, which fails to show that the deposition was reduced to writing by the officer, or by the witness, or by a disinterested person, in the presence of the officer, and which further fails to show that the deposition was taken at the time and place named in the notice, is fatally defective. American Bonding Co. v. Pulver, 77 Neb. 211 (109 N. W. 156).

——— Venue.

31. (1883.) If the venue of a deposition apears in the body of the certificate, it is not a fatal defect that the notary has failed to place it at the head of the certificate. Glidden v. Moore, 14 Neb. 84 (15 N. W. 226; 45 Am. Rep. 98).

——— Reading to witness.

32. (1886.) It is unnecessary that the certificate appended to a deposition should contain a statement that the deposition was read to the witness, even where the witness subscribes the deposition by mark. Britton v. Berry, 20 Neb. 325 (30 N. W. 254).

——— Oath.

33. (1871.) A certificate to depositions, showing that the witnesses were sworn to testify the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, without naming the cause or matter in or about which they were sworn, and showing the other facts prescribed by the statutes, is sufficient. Jameson v. Butler, 1 Neb. 115.

34. (1902.) It is not a sufficient objection to the reading of a deposition in evidence that the officer before whom it was taken does not certify that the witnesses were sworn as well after as before testifying. Donovan v Hibbler, 3 Unof. 652 (92 N. W. 637).

——— Authentication.

35. (1875.) Depositions taken in Illinois by a notary public, certified to under his hand and official seal, may be read in evidence here without further authentication. Martin v. Coppock, 4 Neb. 173.

——— Transcribing.

36. (1897.) Unless the annexed certificate of the officer before whom the deposition of a witness has been taken affirmatively shows that the deposition of such witness was written in the presence of such officer it is incompetent evidence. (Code of civil procedure, secs. 380, 385.) New Kentucky Coal Co. v. Union P. R. Co., 52 Neb. 127 (71 N. W. 948).

37. (1906.) A deposition to be admitted in evidence must be reduced to writing by the officer taking the deposition, or by the witness giving the testimony, or by a disinterested person, in the presence of the officer. American Bonding Co. v. Pulver, 77 Neb. 211 (109 N. W. 156).

——— Transmission.

38. (1898.) Depositions filed in a lower court are presumed, in the absence of proof to the contrary, to have been transmitted to the district court within the time limited by the statute for that purpose. Thomas v. Nebraska Moline Plow Co., 56 Neb. 383 (76 N. W. 876).

Admissibility in evidence.

——— In general.

39. (1871.) Depositions taken in a cause instituted by one plaintiff with whom others are afterwards joined, may be read in evidence, if applicable to the case, after the amendment as to parties. Holmes v. Boydston, 1 Neb. 346.

40. (1903.) The plaintiff gave notice to the attorney of the defendant of the taking of depositions in the state of Ohio. The defendant at the time was confined in a jail in Ohio, and his attorney, immediately on receipt of the notice, sent the same to him through the mail. The notice never reached him, and he was unrepresented at the taking of the plaintiff's depositions, and her witnesses were not cross-examined in his interest. These depositions were taken three months or more before the trial of the case, and no effort was made to secure a cross-examination of the witnesses prior to the trial. Held, That the court properly refused to suppress the depositions. Diedrichs v. Diedrichs, 68 Neb. 534 (94 N. W. 536).

41. (1905.) In the case of alienation of lands pendente lite, depositions of witnesses taken after the alienation and before the alienee becomes a party to the cause may be used against the alienee the same as they might have been used against the party under whom he claims. Morris v. Linton, 74 Neb. 411 (104 N. W. 927).

42. (1906.) Depositions cannot be used as evidence against parties who were not notified of the time and place of taking the same, and did not participate therein. State v. Omaha Elevator Co., 75 Neb. 654 (106 N. W. 979).

——— Right of adverse party to use.

43. (1901.) Where a deposition is taken by one party to a suit, and is not used by him, his opponent may use it in evidence. Hamilton Brown Shoe Co. v. Milliken, 62 Neb. 116 (86 N. W. 913).

44. (1901.) A deposition, regularly taken and filed in a cause, not used by the party taking it, may be offered and read by the other party, whether he participated in taking it or not. Ulrich v. McConaughey, 63 Neb. 10 (88 N. W. 150).

45. (1907.) A deposition, and exhibit thereto attached, when properly identified by the deponent, may, when material to the case, be given in evidence by the party not taking the deposition. Keller v. Chicago B. & Q. R. Co., 78 Neb. 604 (111 N. W. 384).

——— Use of part only.

46. (1883.) When in the taking of a deposition of a witness, the adverse party has appeared and cross-examined, he is entitled to the benefit of the deposition, and may read such portions of it as he chooses, without being compelled to read the whole. Converse v. Meyer, 14 Neb. 190 (15 N. W. 340).

47. (1901.) If the witness has been examined as to different transactions, a party may introduce only that part of the deposition which relates to one or more transactions; but should not be permitted to introduce a portion of his testimony on any given subject, while declining to introduce all the witness has said on that subject. Hamilton Brown Shoe Co. v. Milliken, 62 Neb. 113 (86 N. W. 913).

——— Irrelevancy of matter.

48. (1884.) A deposition offered in a case which is wholly irrelevant to the matter in issue between the parties should be ruled out on objection. Charlton Plow Co. v. Davidson, 16 Neb. 374 (20 N. W. 256).

——— Absence of deponent.

49. (1892.) Under section 372 of the code the deposition of a witness may be used only in the following cases: "First—When the witness does not reside in the county where the action or proceeding is pending, or is sent for trial by change of venue, or is absent therefrom. Second—When, from age, infirmity, or imprisonment, the witness is unable to attend the court, or is dead. Third—When the testimony is required upon a motion, or in any other case where the oral examination of a witness is not required." Everett v. Tidball & Fuller, 34 Neb. 803 (52 N. W. 816).

50. (1892.) When a deposition is offered to be read in evidence, it must appear to the satisfaction of the court that for any cause specified in section 372 the attendance of the witness cannot be procured. If the witness is openly within the county at the time of the trial and is not prevented by age, infirmity, or imprisonment from appearing in court, his deposition cannot be substituted for his personal presence to give testimony if the adverse party object to such deposition. Everett v. Tidball & Fuller, 34 Neb. 803 (52 N. W. 816).

51. (1894.) The deposition of a witness, who resides in the county where an action originated and is being tried, cannot be read in evidence until it is made to appear that such witness is absent from the county, or by reason of age, infirmity, imprisonment, or death is unable to attend in person at the trial. Munro v. Callahan, 41 Neb. 849 (60 N. W. 97).

52. (1894.) Whether or not the deposition of a witness should be received in evidence must be determined from the facts in existence at the time of the trial, and if at that time it is shown that the witness does not reside in, or has removed from, the county wherein the trial is proceeding, his deposition, otherwise unobjectionable, is receivable in evidence. Grimes Dry Goods Co. v. Shaffer, 41 Neb. 112 (59 N. W. 741).

——— Exhibits attached.

53. (1901.) Exhibits sufficiently identified by marks of a notary and testimony of witness, who saw them used, may be considered in connection with deposition though not attached as recited. Black v. Webber, 1 Unof. 468 (96 N. W. 606).

——— Sufficiency of showing of absence.

54. (1887.) Where from the deposition of certain witnesses it appears that they are non-residents of the state, it is unnecessary for the party offering the depositions in evidence to prove they are not present in court. Sells v. Haggard & Co., 21 Neb. 357 (32 N. W. 66).

55. (1896.) Where a deposition shows that the witness is a non-resident of the county, it is unnecessary for the party offering it to prove that the witness is not present in court. Lowe v. Vaughan, 48 Neb. 651 (67 N. W. 464).

56. (1904.) Where from the deposition of a witness it appears that he is a non-resident of the county, it is unnecessary for the party offering the deposition in evidence to prove that such witness is not present in court or in the county. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Krayenbuhl, 70 Neb. 766 (98 N. W. 44).

——— Sufficiency of authentication.

57. (1897.) Unless the certificate of the officer taking a deposition affirmatively shows that it was written in the presence of the officer it is not admissible. New Kentucky Coal Co. v. Union P. R. Co., 52 Neb. 127 (71 N. W. 948).

58. (1897. It is reversible error to overrule a motion to suppress a deposition that does not show it was taken in the presence of the officer authenticating, and permit it to be read to the jury when it tends to support the contention of the party offering it as to a material issue. New Kentucky Coal Co. v. Union P. R. Co., 52 Neb. 127 (71 N. W. 948).

59. (1898.) Depositions held inadmissible where the notary failed to authenticate them by his seal. Welton v. Atkinson, 55 Neb. 674 (76 N. W. 473; 70 Am. St. Rep. 416).

——— Mistake in notice to take.

60. (1906.) Where an action was pending in the county court and depositions taken in relation thereto, but which notice, by mistake, referred to an action pending in the district court, were by consent of parties read in evidence, it was not error on appeal to the district court to admit them in evidence. Union P. R. Co. v. Thompson, 75 Neb. 464 (106 N. W. 598).

——— Effect of absence of revenue stamp.

61. (1902.) The federal congress is not authorized to prescribe rules governing the admissibility of evidence in the courts of this state; and hence absence of a revenue stamp from a deposition will not render it inadmissible. Sulpho-Saline Bath Co. v. Allen, 66 Neb. 295 (92 N. W. 354).

Defects and objections.

——— Time for making and filing.

62. (1882.) Objections to the admission of depositions in evidence, except for incompetency or irrelevancy, must be "made and filed before the commencement of the trial," or they come too late. Dietrichs v. Lincoln & N. W. R. Co., 13 Neb. 43 (13 N. W. 13).

63. (1884.) Objections to depositions, except upon the grounds of incompetency or irrelevancy, must be reduced to writing and filed before the commencement of the trial or they must be disregarded by the court. Sioux City & P. R. R. Co. v. Finlayson, 16 Neb. 578 (20 N. W. 860; 49 Am. Rep. 724).

64. (1898.) No exception to depositions other than for incompetency or irrelevancy shall be regarded unless made and filed before the commencement of the trial. Poske v. Stearns, 56 Neb. 541 (76 N. W. 1078; 71 Am. St. Rep. 688; 42 L. R. A. 427).

65. (1899.) An exception other than for incompetency or irrelevancy, made to a deposition, must be filed before the trial commences, but unless one of the parties so demands, it need not be ruled on prior to the trial. Union P. R. Co. v. Vincent, 58 Neb. 171 (78 N. W. 457).

66. (1899.) To secure a reversal error must affirmatively appear. Therefore, when it appears that exceptions to depositions were filed the day the trial began, it will not be presumed that they were filed after the commencement of the trial, although it appears they were not called to the attention of the court until the jurors had been called into the box. Union P. R. Co. v. Vincent, 58 Neb. 171 (78 N. W. 457).

67. (1901.) Objections to depositions other than for incompetency or irrelevancy must be presented to the court before the commencement of the trial. Woodard v. Cutter, 2 Unof. 84 (96 N. W. 54).

——— Objection to part only, time for.

68. (1901.) Where an entire deposition is not asked to be suppressed, the customary method of procedure is to wait until the deposition is offered in evidence before objections to certain questions and answers, contained in the deposition as passed upon; but this is not an inflexible rule, and where nothing but irrelevant and improper testimony is stricken from a deposition the action is without prejudice, whether done before or after it is actually offered in evidence. Stull v. Stull, 1 Unof. 389 (96 N. W. 196).

——— Non-attendance of witness.

69. (1883.) An objection to the reading of a deposition, on the ground that it has not been shown that the personal attendance of the witness could be procured, to be availing must be made before the deposition is read. Converse v. Meyer, 14 Neb. 190 (15 N. W. 340).

——— Failure of clerk's file mark of filing.

70. (1898.) An objection to the reading of depositions, based on the fact that they did not bear the clerk's file mark showing that they had been filed more than one day before the trial, was properly overruled where it appeared that such depositions had been taken and used in the lower court and had been for a long time among the files of the case in the district court. Thomas v. Nebraska Moline Plow Co., 56 Neb. 383 (76 N. W. 876).

——— On appeal to district court.

71. (1901.) Where depositions are filed, but not used, in a case pending in the county court, on an appeal to the district court, exceptions to such depositions may be filed at any time before the trial in the appellate court. Collier v. Gavin, 1 Unof. 712 (95 N. W. 842).

——— Saving exceptions.

72. (1889.) Where a motion to suppress a deposition has been erroneously overruled, in order to make such error available, the party against whom such ruling is made, must, when such deposition is offered in evidence, object thereto and save his exception. Dawson v. Dawson, 26 Neb. 716 (42 N. W. 744).

——— Statement of conclusions of witness.

73. (1895.) It is not reversible error for the trial court to refuse to strike out a portion of the answer of a witness in a deposition because the answer stated the witness' conclusion as to the effect of the language used by one whose conversation is related, instead of repeating the language itself, the answer being probative in its character and material to the issues, and no objection having been made until the deposition was read at the trial. Woodworth v. Thompson, 44 Neb. 311 (62 N. W. 450).

——— Waiver of objection.

74. (1876.) Although a court may commit error in refusing to suppress a deposition, yet if the moving party fail to object to its being read to the jury at the trial, he cannot complain of such error in the appellate court. Starring v. Mason, 4 Neb. 367.

——— Sufficiency of objection.

75. (1884.) The rulings of the district court denying the objections of the defendant to certain depositions, on the ground that the deponents did not disclose the ground or source of their knowledge of the facts to which they deposed, and the defendant, being present by counsel, failed to cross-examine said deponents, upheld. Frederick v. Ballard, 16 Neb. 559 (20 N. W. 870).

76. (1881.) Where depositions were taken in breach of an agreement for the taking thereof, and the agreement is denied and it is clear that no advantage was taken of the complaining party, and it is proper evidence, such depositions are admissible. Dale v. Hunneman, 12 Neb. 221 (10 N. W. 711).

77. (1895.) It is not a sufficient objection to depositions that the cross-interrogatories, as originally filed, were asked a witness on subsequent taking of depositions. City of Chadron v. Glover, 43 Neb. 732 (62 N. W. 62).

78. (1897.) Where an answer in a deposition contained both competent and incompetent testimony, an objection to the entire answer was held properly sustained. Brinckle v. Stitts, 53 Neb. 10 (73 N. W. 223).

79. (1898.) Since a party is not required to make out his entire case, or any particular branch thereof, by a single witness. An objection to a deposition on the ground that the witness did not testify to all the elements of a valid contract is without merit. Zobel v. Bauersachs, 55 Neb. 20 (75 N. W. 43).

Refiling.

80. (1903.) Where depositions are withdrawn from a case, to entitle them to be read on the trial they must be refiled in accordance with the provisions of section 387, code of civil procedure. Peycke v. Shinn, 68 Neb. 343 (93 N. W. 135).

What law governs.

1. (1882.) The distribution of an estate of an intestate is made in accordance with the laws of his domicile. Minkler v. Woodruff, 12 Neb. 267 (11 N. W. 296).

Statutory provisions.

2. (1893.) Chapter 57, Session Laws of 1889, providing for the descent of real property and the distribution of personal property of intestates, the disposition of homesteads of intestates, the barring of an insane wife's interest in the lands of her husband by deed of her guardian, and the abolition of the estates of dower and curtesy, is void, because it contains more than one subject. Trumble v. Trumble, 37 Neb. 340 (55 N. W. 869).

3. (1898.) Under the provisions of section 30 and section 176, chapter 23, Compiled Statutes, the personal property of a childless intestate, after the payment of his debts, descends to his widow, to the exclusion of his brothers and sisters who survive him and the children of other brothers and sisters whom he had survived. Hinds v. Hinds, 56 Neb. 545 (76 N. W. 1087).

4. (1898.) The curative act of 1895 (Session Laws, ch. 32) was intended to legalize orders, judgments, and findings of the county court which depended for their validity on the decedents' act of 1889 (Session Laws, ch. 57) and has no relation to orders, judgments, and findings which were valid independent of that act. Boales v. Ferguson, 55 Neb. 565 (76 N. W. 18).

5. (1899.) "Baker's Decedent's Law" was never in force, and notwithstanding its adoption by the legislature and approval by the governor, it did not change, or affect in any way, the statutes regulating the descent and transmission of testate or intestate estates. Finders v. Bodle, 58 Neb. 57 (78 N. W. 480).

6. (1900.) The purpose of the curative act of 1895 (Session Laws, 1895, ch. 32) was to legalize findings, orders, judgments and decrees made under the provisions of the decedent's law which was held to be unconstitutional in Trumble v. Trumble, 37 Neb. 340 (55 N. W. 869). Motley v. Motley, 60 Neb. 593 (83 N. W. 830).

Persons entitled to inherit.

7. (1882.) The phrase "next of kin" includes such persons as are entitled to inherit the personal estate of a deceased person. Under our statute of descent and distribution a husband does not inherit his wife's personal estate, and is not the next of kin. Warren v. Englehart, 13 Neb. 283 (13 N. W. 401).

8. (1889.) Where a party, having a daughter by a former marriage, devised his realty to a trustee for the use of his second wife so long as she should remain his widow, but she afterward remarried, the estate of the son, who was the sole issue of the second marriage, and died unmarried and without issue, under section 30, chapter 23, Compiled Statutes, descended in equal proportions to his mother and half-sister. Rice v. Saxon, 28 Neb. 380 (44 N. W. 456).

9. (1889.) The fact that a widow had elected to take under the will instead of claiming dower in the estate, merely precludes her from claiming aught against the heirs not provided for in the will, and did not debar her of an estate of inheritance from the son, of the property mentioned in the will. Rice v. Saxon, 28 Neb. 380 (44 N. W. 456).

10. (1890.) Where it cannot be gathered from the pleadings that an estate left by a married woman is ancestral, but it was apparently acquired by purchase, section 33, chapter 23, Compiled Statutes, is not applicable; and if one of decedent's two children, who have inherited the estate, dies, the surviving father normally takes the interest of such child. Shellenberger v. Ransom, 31 Neb. 61 (47 N. W. 700; 28 Am. St. Rep. 500; 10 L. R. A. 810). [Overruled. Veeder v. McKinley-Lanning Loan Co., 61 Neb. 892.]

11. (1892.) Under the statute in force in 1880, a widowed mother inherited the lands of an only son, dying intestate and without issue. Gwyer v. Hall, 34 Neb. 589 (52 N. W. 372).

12. (1892.) Held, That on the death of a married woman, in 1880, all the real estate of which she died seized descended, subject to the husband's right of curtesy, to intestate's daughter. Deming v. Miles, 35 Neb. 733 (53 N. W. 665; 37 Am. St. Rep. 464).

13. (1896.) A. died intestate, leaving surviving him neither issue, nor father, mother, brother, or sister. There were surviving four children of a deceased brother, eight children of a deceased sister, and three children of a deceased daughter of such sister. Held, That under our statute of descent the twelve surviving nephews and nieces took each one-twelfth part of the intestate's land, per capita, and that the grand-nephews and grand-nieces took nothing. Such a case falls within the fifth subdivision of section 30, chapter 23, Compiled Statutes, and not within the third subdivision. Douglas v. Cameron, 47 Neb. 358 (66 N. W. 430).

14. (1902.) G. died intestate, leaving surviving her neither issue nor husband, father, mother, brother, sister, nephew, niece, grandfather, grandmother or grandchildren; her nearest relatives being two uncles, an aunt, cousins and second cousins. Under our statute of descent, the two uncles and the aunt took the entire estate, to the exclusion of cousins and second cousins. Clary v. Watkins, 64 Neb. 386 (89 N. W. 1042).

15. (1906.) The right of heirship in an estate can only be established in an action in equity; an action at law cannot be maintained to recover the value of an undivided half of an unsettled estate on the ground that the decedent agreed in his lifetime to make the claimant his heir. Peterson v. Estate of Bauer, 76 Neb. 661 (107 N. W. 993).

Inheritance per stirpes.

16. (1896.) Inheritance per stirpes does does not obtain except where affirmatively provided. Douglas v. Cameron, 47 Neb. 353 (66 N. W. 430).

17. (1896.) The rule of inheritance per stirpes is in general applied only from necessity, as where the heirs are of unequal degree of kinship to the intestate. Where they are of equal degree, they take as principals. Douglas v. Cameron, 47 Neb. 358 (66 N. W. 430).

18, 19. (1896.) It is the object of our statute to cut off inheritance per stirpes among collaterals where at any point beyond the children of brothers and sisters the surviving kindred are of unequal degrees. In such case those nearest in degree take the estate to the exclusion of those more remote. Douglas v. Cameron, 47 Neb. 358 (66 N. W. 430); (1902) Clary v. Watkins, 64 Neb. 386 (89 N. W. 1042).

Expectancy to inherit as a property.

20. (1899.) A mere hope of succession to an estate is not property. Kocher v. Cornell, 59 Neb. 315 (80 N. W. 911).

Relation of heir to administrator.

21. (1898.) There is no privity between an administrator and an heir so far as regards the decedent's estate. Eayrs v. Nason, 54 Neb. 143 (74 N. W. 408).

Widow's right to possession.

22. (1905.) The widow's right to possession is by virtue of the marital relation, and will not be construed to be independent and hostile to that of her husband's heirs, unless by some means she brings to their attention the fact that she claims to own the property in her own right and adversely to any right derived through her husband. Larson v. Anderson, 74 Neb. 361 (104 N. W. 925).

Title acquired by heirs.

23. (1881.) Where the estate is solvent the heir has a beneficiary interest in the trust as distributee. Becker v. Anderson, 11 Neb. 493 (9 N. W. 640).

Vesting of right or title in heirs.

24. (1892.) On the death of an intestate his lands immediately descend to his heirs subject to the right of possession by the administrator, pending administration, and to his power to sell the real estate to pay the debts of the estate, in case the personal property is insufficient for that purpose. Rakes v. Brown, 34 Neb. 304 (51 N. W. 848).

25. (1897.) The lands of an intestate descend to his heirs subject to his unsecured debts. Motley v. Motley, 53 Neb. 375 (73 N. W. 738; 68 Am. St. Rep. 608).

26. (1898.) The personal property descends in equal proportions between the widow and children. Hinds v. Hinds, 56 Neb. 545 (76 N. W. 1087).

27. (1898.) Undivided lands of which one dies seized descend to the heirs, and title vests in them subject to the ancestor's debts. Lewon v. Heath, 53 Neb. 707 (74 N. W. 274).

28. (1902.) Real estate, other than the homestead of an intestate decedent, descends to his heirs and the title vests immediately in them subject to the administrator's right of possession and to its application in payment of decedent's debts. Security Investment Co. v. Lottridge, 2 Unof. 489 (89 N. W. 298).

29. (1904.) Newly discovered assets of an insolvent estate are a trust fund in the hands of an administrator for the payment of debts and costs of administration, and do not descend to the heirs and distributees until such claims are paid. Sharp v. Citizens Bank of Stanton, 70 Neb. 758 (98 N. W. 50).

——— Time of vesting title.

30. (1889.) O. was the owner of a homestead on which he lived with his wife and her several grown sons and daughters by a former marriage. Owing to ill treatment by O. of the family, and especially of the daughters, the family left the homestead and went to a distant part of the county, where they remained, the wife and mother going with them and remaining with them for the most part until the death of O., but several times returning and remaining at the homestead for longer or shorter lengths of time; at one time, when O. was sick, for about three weeks. O. remained on the homestead for a year, more or less, after the departure of the family, when on account of illness he was removed to a hospital at the county seat, where he died. Held, That upon the death of O. the widow, Bridget O'Brien, became vested with a life estate in the homestead. Lamb v. Wogan, 27 Neb. 236 (42 N. W. 1041).

31. (1897.) Where an ancestor dies intestate his lands descend instantly to his heirs. It does not require settlement of his estate or a probate order declaring heirship to vest the title. Johnson v. Colby, 52 Neb. 327 (72 N. W. 313).

32. (1892.) Lands of an intestate descend immediately upon his death to his heirs. Rakes v. Brown, 34 Neb. 304 (51 N. W. 848).

33. (1894.) Our statute of descent is plain and unambiguous, and by its own operation, and solely in accordance with its own terms, vests in the heir such estate as he is thereby entitled to, eo instanti, upon the death of the intestate from whom the inheritance comes. Shellenberger v. Ransom, 41 Neb. 631 (59 N. W. 935). [Overruled. Veeder v. McKinley-Lanning Loan Co., 61 Neb. 892.]

Advancements.

34. (1900.) Advancements made by a father to a son may be deducted from the distribute share of the latter. McClave v. McClave, 60 Neb. 464 (83 N. W. 668).

35. (1902.) Where, pending the settlement of a decedent's estate, advancements have been made in good faith to an heir by the administrator with the assent of the coheirs, which were accepted by the recipient as in full of his share and as entitling the other heirs to his proportion of the remaining estate, the heir who has under such arrangement received his full share of the estate, has not thereafter an attachable interest in real property of the deceased. Security Investment Co. v. Lottridge, 2 Unof. 489 (89 N. W. 298).

36. (1903.) Evidence held sufficient to sustain finding that the conveyance from father to son was upon an oral agreement that it should be an advancement, and a release and relinquishment of grantee's interest in the father's estate. Riddell v. Riddell, 70 Neb. 472 (97 N. W. 609).

37. (1904.) Evidence examined, and held insufficient to show that the consideration for the promissory note executed by a daughter and her husband to the father was intended as an advancement. Lodge v. Fitch, 72 Neb. 652 (101 N. W. 338).

38. (1904.) Section 34, chapter 23, Compiled Statutes, provides: "All gifts and grants shall be deemed to have been made in advancement, if they are expressed in the gift or grant to be so made, or if changed in writing by the intestate as an advancement, or acknowledged in writing as such by the child or other descendant." In an action to adjust advancements, held, that oral testimony is incompetent to prove the advancements. Boden v. Mier, 71 Neb. 191 (98 N. W. 701).

39. (1904.) To constitute an advancement as defined in section 37, chapter 23, Compiled Statutes, 1903, it is necessary either that the ancestor express in the gift or grant his intention that it be an advancement, or that he charge it in writing as an advancement, or that the child or other descendant acknowledge in writing the gift or grant as an advancement. Lodge v. Fitch, 72 Neb. 652 (101 N. W. 338).

40. (1904.) A debt from an heir to an ancestor may be converted by the ancestor, with the consent of the heir, into an advancement, but when such debt is evidenced by note or bond this fact raises a strong presumption that the transaction was intended as a loan and not as an advancement. Lodge v. Fitch, 72 Neb. 652 (101 N. W. 338).

Relinquishment in interest by heirs.

41. (1903.) A relinquishment by a son of his interest in his father's estate, to be effectual as to lands must be in writing signed by the party to be charged. Riddell v. Riddell, 70 Neb. 472 (97 N. W. 609).

42. (1903.) Receipt and rentention of lands from the father in consideration of an oral agreement to relinquish the son's interest in the father's estate, is not such a part performance of it as to take it out of the statute of frauds. Riddell v. Riddell, 70 Neb. 472 (97 N. W. 609).

Disqualification of heir by murder of intestate.

43. (1890.) Where a child was murdered by the father, he does not acquire the estate of the former. Shellenberger v. Ransom, 31 Neb. 61 (47 N. W. 700; 28 Am. St. Rep. 500; 10 L. R. A. 810). [Overruled. Shellenberger v. Ransom, 41 Neb. 631.]

44. (1894.) The murder of an interstate by one to whom ordinarily his property would descend as heir will not prevent the property from so descending. Shellenberger v. Ransom, 41 Neb. 631 (59 N. W. 935; 25 L. R. A. 564). [See 61 Neb. 892.]

Dedications from distributee's share.

45. (1904.) In the distribution or partition of an estate, a debt due the estate from a distributee, or some person through whom he inherits by right of representation, which is barred by the statute of limitations, cannot be deducted from the share of such distributee. Boden v. Mier, 71 Neb. 191 (98 N. W. 701).

46. (1907.) After the death of one to whom has been made a gift or loan, the distributive shares of the children of the debtor or donee, as heirs at law of the creditor or donor, cannot without their consent be diminished by charging a gift or loan as an advancement to their ancestor, which has not acquired that character during the lifetime of the latter. In re Estate of Hessler, 79 Neb. 691, (113 N. W. 147).

Liability of heir for debts of decedent.

47. (1902.) A claim on a simple contract debt, for which a man's heirs as such are not liable, cannot be prosecuted against them. Buck v. Hogeboom, 63 Neb. 672 (88 N. W. 857).

48. (1939.) Where a county has a claim against the estate of a deceased insane person for her support, it must be presented during administration, and cannot be recovered after distribution of the estate, by a suit against the distributees. Richardson County v. Smith, 25 Neb. 767 (41 N. W. 774).

Rights of heir to maintain ejectment.

49. (1898.) An heir may bring and maintain an action of ejectment relative to lands of which his ancestor died seized against any and all persons except the administrator of the estate and such as have a right or rights thereto deprived from the administrator, and this the heir may do during the pendency of the administration proceedings and prior to final settlement or any decree of distribution. Leivon v. Heath, 53 Neb. 707 (74 N. W. 274).

Actions for distribution.

——— Right of heir to partition and distribution of estate.

50. (1889.) An heir or devisee of an estate cannot maintain an action for distribution or partition until the debts, allowances, and expenses against said estate have been paid or provided for, unless he give a bond with approved sureties to pay for the same. Alexander v. Alexander, 26 Neb. 68 (41 N. W. 1065); (1890) Reckewey v. Waltemath, 28 Neb. 492 (44 N. W. 659).

51. (1889.) Where a widow has a life estate in all the lands of which her husband died seized, the heirs cannot maintain an action of partition against her and disturb her possession. Alexander v. Alexander, 26 Neb. 68 (41 N. W. 1065).

——— Sufficiency of petition.

52. (1882.) Petition alleged that A. R. M. died at Beatrice, Gage county, Nebraska, intestate; that plaintiff was duly appointed his administrator, and has paid all funeral charges, debts of the deceased, and costs and expenses of administration; that deceased left no issue or widow; that plaintiff is his father and sole heir at law; that deceased left real estate in Indiana and Minnesota, and personal estate in Ohio, which estate is in the possession of the defendant; but the petition does not state that the deceased was at any time domiciled in Nebraska. Held, That a general demurrer to the petition was rightly sustained by the district court. Minkler v. Woodruff, 12 Neb. 267 (11 N. W. 296).

——— Parties.

53. (1903.) In a contest between rival claimants seeking to establish heirship and have distribution of the estate of a decedent, the administrator of such estate has no official interest. As the representative of the deceased person he is not an adverse party to any of the claimants in the controversy. Sorensen v. Sorensen, 68 Neb. 500 (100 N. W. 930).

——— Proof of heirship.

54. (1903.) Brothers, and children of deceased brothers and sisters, of an intestate are not prima facie heirs and distributees, and must allege and prove that there are no persons of the several classes which would take before them and exclude them, under the statute, before they can obtain an order for distribution of the estate. Sorensen v. Sorensen, 68 Neb. 483 (94 N. W. 540).

55. (1903.) Proof of heirship is not confined to the records of the probate court alone, but may be established by the testimony of any one who knows the facts constituting such relation. Jetter v. Lyon, 70 Neb. 429 (97 N. W. 596).

——— Right to open and close.

56. (1903.) In a proceeding for the distribution of the estate of an intestate, in a contest between parties, each claiming as next of kin and heir at law, to the exclusion of the other and all other persons, the right to open and close rests in the discretion of the court. Sorensen v. Sorensen, 68 Neb. 490 (98 N. W. 837).

Inspection and view by jury, see Trial, §§ 55-60.

1. (1886.) Section 394 of the code, for the inspection of books, papers, or documents in the hands of the adverse party, does not apply to copies of a public record open to the inspection of both parties; and a copy of which may be obtained by either or both parties upon payment of the necessary fees. Spielman v. Flynn, 19 Neb. 342 (27 N. W. 224).

2. (1893.) There is no statutory provision which requires that a party shall either pay or tender fees in order to entitle him to an inspection of a book or paper in the possession of his adversary. First Nat. Bank of Dorchester v. Smith, 36 Neb. 199 (54 N. W. 254).

3. (1893.) The plaintiff in a civil action made a written demand upon the defendant for an inspection and copy, or permission to take a copy, of certain specified entries in a certain book belonging to, in the possession of, and under the control of the latter, relating to the merits of the suit, which demand was not complied with within four days. Held, That under section 394 of the code the court in which the action is pending, or the judge thereof in vacation, has the power, on motion and notice to the defendant, to order that an inspection and copy, or permission to take a copy, of such entries shall be given within a specified time, and on a failure of the defendant to comply with such order, the court may exclude the entries from being given in evidence, or if wanted as evidence by the plaintiff, may direct the jury to presume them to be such as the plaintiff by affidavit alleges them to be. First Nat. Bank of Dorchester v. Smith, 36 Neb. 199 (54 N. W. 254). [Reversed on rehearing. 39 Neb. 90.]

4. (1894.) The making of an order requiring plaintiff to submit his body to a personal examination by physicians, is not sufficient ground for reversing a judgment where the plaintiff has acquiesced therein by selecting a physician to act as a member of such board of examiners, by submitting to an examination without objecting thereto, and by permitting the testimony of said physicians to be given without raising the want of power of the judge to make the order. Ellsworth v. City of Fairbury, 41 Neb. 881 (60 N. W. 336).

5. (1903.) Under section 394, code of civil procedure, the granting of orders for inspection of books or papers is left to the discretion of the trial court, and it is also left to the discretion of the court whether or not to exclude such books or papers at the trial if inspection is not permitted. *Chamberlain v. I. VOLUNTARY.

Dismissal without prejudice.

1. (1889.) An action may be dismissed without prejudice to a future action by a plaintiff before the final submission of the case to the jury or court where the trial is to the court (sec. 430 of the civil code); and such dismissal may be made at the option of the plaintiff without leave of the court. It is a right specially given by statute which the court has no power to refuse. Grimes v. Chamberlain, 27 Neb. 605 (43 N. W. 395).

2. (1896.) The plaintiff may, as a matter of right, under section 430 of the civil code, dismiss his action without prejudice at any time before its final submission to the court or jury. Sharpless v. Giffen, 47 Neb. 146 (66 N. W. 285).

3. (1906.) Where the plaintiff in a civil action appeals from the judgment of the county court to the district court, he has the same right to dismiss his action without prejudice as though it had originated in the district court. Thornhill v. Hargreaves, 76 Neb. 582 (107 N. W. 847).

——— After submission for trial.

4. (1884.) After the introduction of the testimony of the plaintiff to a jury impaneled to try the cause, the court has no authority to dismiss a case and discharge the jury without a verdict upon the merits. Smith v. Sioux City & P. R. Co., 15 Neb. 583 (19 N. W. 638).

5. (1888.) Under section 430 of the code the plaintiff cannot as a matter of right dismiss an action after the final submission of the case to the court. State, ex rel. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., v. Scott, 22 Neb. 628 (36 N. W. 121).

6. (1888.) Where a cause was submitted to the court on a demurrer to the petition and a decision rendered sustaining the demurrer, but no opinion filed, and afterwards, and before the preparation of the opinion the plaintiff attempted to dismiss the action, to which the defendant objected, held, that the attempt to dismiss was unavailing, and that the cause having been finally submitted final judgment in the case would be rendered. State, ex rel. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., v. Scott, 22 Neb. 628 (36 N. W. 121).

7. (1889.) After the introduction of the testimony of the plaintiff to a jury impaneled to try a cause the court has no authority to dismiss a case and discharge the jury without a verdict upon the merits. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., v. Richardson, 28 Neb. 118 (44 N. W. 103).

8. (1892.) After a cause is submitted to the court the right of the plaintiff to dismiss the cause without prejudice without leave of court is at an end. Sharp v. Brown, 34 Neb. 406 (51 N. W. 1030).

9. (1894.) A plaintiff cannot, as a matter of right, dismiss his action after the final submission of the case to the court or jury. State, ex rel. Holt County, v. Hazelet, 41 Neb. 257 (59 N. W. 891).

10. (1903.) The district court may, in the just exercise of its discretionary power, permit plaintiff to dismiss his case after it has been finally submitted to the court or jury. But where the discretionary power of the court is not invoked and the application to dismiss after final submission is made and allowed as a demandable right, the order of dismissal will not be upheld unless a denial of the application would amount to an abuse of discretion. Bee Building Co. v. Dalton, 68 Neb. 38 (93 N. W. 930).

11. (1903.) When a case has been submitted upon a demurrer to the evidence, plaintiff's absolute right to dismiss without prejudice is lost. Bee Building Co. v. Dalton, 68 Neb. 38 (93 N. W. 930).

12. (1903.) A plaintiff can not dismiss his action without prejudice, after there has been a final submission of it either to the court or jury. Bee Building Co. v. Dalton, 68 Neb. 38 (93 N. W. 930).

13. (1903.) Where a case has been submitted upon a demurrer to the evidence, plaintiff's absolute right to dismiss without prejudice is lost. Fronk v. Evans City

Steam Laundry Co., 70 Neb. 75 (96 N. W. 1053).

Parties entitled to dismiss.

14. (1898.) A case cannot be dismissed at the instance of a party who may be liable to a judgment therein, against the objection of his adversary, although the recovery might be only for nominal damages. Houck v. Linn, 56 Neb. 743 (77 N. W. 51).

15. (1902.) Three plaintiffs, who were heirs of a deceased party and who had joined with each other in an action to set aside the probated will and declare the same revoked, may dismiss the case as to themselves upon payment of their proportionate share of accrued costs even though they had entered into contracts with attorneys to prosecute their suit for a portion of whatever recovery may be had. Williams v. Miles, 63 Neb. 851 (89 N. W. 455).

Discretion of court.

16. (1901.) Discretion to dismiss a cause depends upon the existence of rights which would be jeoparded by dismissal, not upon the manner in which the court may become cognizant of them and is not conditioned upon some formal claim or assertion of them in the record. Horton v. State, ex rel. Hayden, 63 Neb. 34 (88 N. W. 146).

17. (1901.) The right of a plaintiff to dismiss his action is not absolute in the sense that the court has no power over or discretion with respect to its exercise. Whenever justice to the court or its officers or to any of the parties requires imposition of terms or retention of the cause upon the docket, the court, in its discretion, may impose such terms or refuse to permit dismissal. Horton v. State, ex rel. Hayden, 63 Neb. 34 (88 N. W. 146).

18. (1901.) The rule that the court has full power and control over its judgments and orders during the term at which they are rendered applies to an order of dismissal entered at the instance of a plaintiff. Horton v. State, ex rel. Hayden, 63 Neb. 34 (88 N. W. 134).

Dismissal by agreement.

19. (1886.) The parties to a cause may dismiss at any time, by agreement. Wilcox v. Brown, 20 Neb. 355 (30 N. W. 264).

Dismissal as to one co-plaintiff.

20. (1898.) Where two persons joined as plaintiffs in an action of replevin and took the property under the writ, claimed a concurrent right of possession, but by several titles, and one recovered judgment, the other could not thereupon dismiss the case as to himself, without the consent of the defendant. Houck v. Linn, 56 Neb. 743 (77 N. W. 51).

Dismissal as to one defendant.

21. (1888.) In a personal action against two defendants, a summons was served on one in the county where the action was pending, and another summons was issued therein to the sheriff of another and different county, and served on the other defendant in such other county, of which other county he was an inhabitant, and before a general appearance of the party served as last aforesaid in the action, the plaintiff voluntarily dismissed the case as to the defendant served in the county where the said cause was pending. Held, That the court thereby lost jurisdiction of the other defendant. Cobbey v. Wright, 23 Neb. 250 (36 N. W. 505).

22. (1886.) Although the answer of one defendant is a plea in abatement for misjoinder of the other defendant, plaintiff may dismiss as to the latter pending the trial, without re-empaneling or reswearing the jury. Morrissey v. Schindler, 18 Neb. 672 (26 N. W. 476).

Dismissal as to part of cause of action.

23. (1897.) It appeared that one item in the suit, as to which there was a distinct paragraph, separately numbered, in the petition, was not due at the time the action was commenced. Held, That the court did not err, at the time of rendering judgment, in sustaining a motion by plaintiff to dismiss the suit as to such item, without prejudice. Grotte v. Nagle, 50 Neb. 363 (69 N. W. 973).

23*a*. (1908.) In case of misjoinder of two causes of action in the same petition, the plaintiff may dismiss one of such causes of action and proceed to trial upon the other. McCague Savings Bank v. Croft, 80 Neb. 702 (115 N. W. 315).

Order for dismissal.

24. (1887.) A paper filed by plaintiff to the effect that he does not want the cause to be prosecuted longer, and that the allegations in the petition are not true, does not operate as a dismissal unless called up in open court, and a ruling obtained on it. Cole v. Cole, 21 Neb. 84 (31 N. W. 493).

Proceedings in another county.

25. (1877.) It is no objection to the exercise of the right of dismissal that it was done to enable plaintiff to proceed with another action, fraudulently instituted in another county. Banks v. Uhl, 6 Neb. 145.

Payment of costs as condition.

26. (1895.) The right of a plaintiff to dismiss an action at any time he so desires is not an absolute unqualified right, but conditions precedent, such as payment of costs, may be imposed by the court in its discretion. Sheedy v. McMurtry, 44 Neb. 499 (63 N. W. 21).

27. (1898.) A plaintiff has an absolute right to dismiss his action at any time before the final submission of the cause, subject alone to compliance with conditions precedent, such as the payment of costs, etc., as may be imposed by the court. Beals, Torrey & Co. v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 53 Neb. 601 (74 N. W. 54).

28. (1905.) Under our practice the common law rule, making the payment of costs in the action dismissed a prerequisite to the prosecution of another, is one which the trial court in the exercise of a sound discretion may or may not apply. Yates v. Jones Nat. Bank, 74 Neb. 734 (105 N. W. 287); Yates v. Utica Bank, Id.; Yates v. Bailey, Id.; Yates v. Bank of Staplehurst, Id.

Operation and effect.

29. (1877.) A voluntary dismissal of an action by the plaintiff is, practically, a final disposition of the case, except as to unpaid costs, for which the court may enter judgment against him. Banks v. Uhl, 6 Neb. 145.

30. (1885.) Where a cause has been dismissed in vacation by the party plaintiff, who paid all costs, an intervention at a subsequent term cannot be had in the same cause. Harris v. Cronk, 17 Neb. 475 (23 N. W. 341).

31. (1889.) An entry of dismissal terminates the jurisdiction of the court over the cause of action presented by plaintiff, except for the purpose of entering the order of dismissal and rendering judgment for costs. Grimes v. Chamberlain, 27 Neb. 605 (43 N. W. 395).

32. (1896.) In an action wherein the defendant has not appeared, a dismissal filed by plaintiff, as provided by statute, ends the case, and litigation therein cannot be continued. Sims v. Davis, 48 Neb. 720 (67 N. W. 765).

33. (1898.) A dismissal which does not involve the merits of the case is not a bar to another suit upon the same cause of action nor to presentation of the claim against the estate of deceased defendant. Bank of Maywood v. Estate of McAllister, 56 Neb. 188 (76 N. W. 552).

34. (1903.) The commencement of a suit in replevin which was immediately dismissed without prejudice, and the property in question returned to the officer, to be delivered by him to the defendant, will not operate as a bar to the bringing of a subsequent action. Cinfel v. Malena, 67 Neb. 95 (93 N. W. 165).

35. (1903.) When a suit is dismissed as to one of two or more defendants without prejudice, such defendant ceases to be a party to the record, and the effect of the dismissal is to leave such defendant in the same position as if he had never been a party to the action. Agnew v. Omaha Nat. Bank, 69 Neb. 654 (96 N. W. 189).

36. (1903.) If, before an order of dismissal, as to one defendant, there has been a decision or decree upon one of several issues made by the pleadings, but such decision does not fix or determine the liability of the defendant who is subsequently dismissed, such preliminary decree does not estop the defendant dismissed from litigating in a subsequent action the same issue. Agnew v. Omaha Nat. Bank, 69 Neb. 654 (96 N. W. 189).

37. (1905.) The voluntary dismissal of an action before final submission does not operate as an estoppel, and is without prejudice to a future action. Yates v. Jones Nat. Bank, 74 Neb. 734 (105 N. W. 287); Yates v. Utica Bank, Id.; Yates v. Bailey, Id.; Yates v. Bank of Staplehurst, Id.

38. (1906.) A dismissal of an appeal from a county court does not operate as an affirmance of the judgment of the inferior court, and such judgment is not available in bar of a future action on the demand. Thornhill v. Hargreaves, 76 Neb. 582 (107 N. W. 847).

——— As to set-off and counter-claim.

39. (1882.) When an action is dismissed without prejudice before submission, a defense of usury to a promissory note is not such a set-off as can be retained and tried by the court. New England Mortgage Co. v. Angle, 12 Neb. 504 (11 N. W. 753).

40. (1884.) If after a set-off is filed the plaintiff dismisses his action and pays the costs, the justice after the entry of dismissal should docket the set-off under its proper title—the claimant as plaintiff and the adverse party defendant. Rawalt v. Brewer, 16 Neb. 444 (20 N. W. 391).

41. (1898.) A plaintiff has the right, before final submission of his cause of action, to dismiss the same, but this right does not control defendant's right to proceed to trial of a set-off or counter-claim properly pleaded in the answer. Adams v. Osgood, 55 Neb. 766 (76 N. W. 446).

42. (1907.) Upon appeal to the district court from a judgment against a plaintiff upon a set-off rendered in a justice of the peace court, the plaintiff cannot defeat the judgment by a dismissal of his action. Hess v. Hess, 78 Neb. 347 (110 N. W. 999).

Questions determined on motion to dismiss.

43. (1902.) The liability of plaintiffs moving to dismiss their action of contest of a probated will to attorneys, who had a contract to prosecute such action to the end on a contingent fee, and who had expended considerable money in the prosecution of the suit, for the value of their services cannot be litigated or determined on a motion to dismiss. Williams v. Miles, 63 Neb. 851 (89 N. W. 455).

Reinstating cause.

44. (1889.) The supreme court, in the exercise of its appellate jurisdiction, has no authority to reinstate a cause in the district court which has been there voluntarily dismissed by the plaintiff. Where it is claimed that a dismissal was obtained by fraud, an application to reinstate must be made in the court where the cause was pending at the time the dismissal was entered. Grimes v. Chamberlain, 27 Neb. 605 (43 N. W. 395).

45. (1901.) The denial by a district court of a motion to reinstate an action, voluntarily dismissed at the same term at which the motion is made, will not be reversed in the absence of evidence that the party making the application was laboring under some mistake or misaprehension of fact at the time of the dismissal. Tighe v. Winger, 2 Unof. 155 (95 N. W. 1053).

Dismissal in county or probate court.

46. (1877.) The dismissal of actions in the probate courts, now county courts, is governed by the rules applicable to cases before justices of the peace. Banks v. Uhl, 6 Neb. 145.

47. (1877.) The voluntary dismissal by the plaintiff, of a cause in the county court, practically disposes of the case. Banks v. Uhl, 6 Neb. 145.

48. (1877.) The plaintiff in an action brought in the probate court could, at any time before the case was finally submitted, and on his own motion, dismiss it. And the failure to pay the costs that had then accrued will not prevent him from exercising this right. Banks v. Uhl, 6 Neb. 145.

49. (1877.) It is no objection to a dismissal of a cause in a county court, by plaintiff, that it is done in order to enable plaintiff to proceed with another action concerning same subject-matter, fraudulently instituted in another county. Banks v. Uhl, 6 Neb. 145.

II. INVOLUNTARY.

Jurisdiction to dismiss suit pending in another county.

50. (1898.) A district court has no jurisdiction to render a judgment in an action pending in one county dismissing such action from the district court of another county. Lefferts v. Bell, 57 Neb. 248 (77 N. W. 680).

51. (1898.) An order of dismissal rendered by the district court of one county dismissing an action pending in the district court of another county, is void. Lefferts v. Bell, 57 Neb. 248 (77 N. W. 680).

Notice of motion to dismiss.

52. (1888.) In the district court, where a motion is filed to dismiss an action for want of prosecution, it is the duty of the moving party to serve notice of such motion upon the adverse party. If the action is dismissed for want of prosecution without notice, the appellant may have the cause re-instated. Berggren v. Berggren, 24 Neb. 764 (40 N. W. 284).

Grounds for dismissal.

——— Fraud by plaintiff during trial.

52*a*. (1907.) Fraud or imposition upon the court and against defendant, practiced by a plaintiff during the progress of the trial of his cause, does not justify the dismissal of his action without a determination of its merits. Fitch v. Martin, 80 Neb. 60 (113 N. W. 796).

——— Disobedience of order of court.

53. (1907.) Under section 430 of the code, it is within the sound discretion of the district court to dismiss a petition without prejudice for disabedience by the plaintiff of a reasonable order concerning the proceedings in the action. Howell v. Malmgren, 79 Neb. 16 (112 N. W. 313).

www.libtool.com.cn

——— Restraint of action by federal court.

54. (1901.) It is no valid ground for the dismissal of an action brought by the state against a corporation that the federal court has granted an injunction to restrain the attorney general from the prosecution thereof. State v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 62 Neb. 123 (87 N. W. 188).

www.libtool.com.cn

——— Failure to plead.

55. (1891.) Where new matter is set up in the answer, and no reply is filed by plaintiff, a motion to dismiss should be sustained. Hamilton Loan & Trust Co. v. Gordon, 32 Neb. 663 (49 N. W. 699).

55*a*. (1902.) In an action for an accounting, wherein the answer in addition to a general denial pleads a final settlement between the parties, and plaintiff demurs to such answer on the ground that it does not state facts sufficient to constitute a defense, and after an adverse ruling elects to stand on his demurrer, refusing to plead further, a judgment of dismissal by the trial court is proper. Brown v. Houghton, 2 Unof. 425 (89 N. W. 251).

——— Action barred by statute of limitations.

56. (1884.) When the summons served on the defendant was issued after the statute of limitations had barred the action, held, that a motion to dismiss on that ground was properly sustained. Aultman & Taylor Co. v. Cole, 16 Neb. 4 (19 N. W. 783).

——— Insecurity of costs.

57. (1889.) A cause was instituted in the district court, by a non-resident of the state, who failed to give security for costs at the commencement of the action. Upon motion of the defendant to dismiss the cause for that reason, the district court, upon an application of plaintiff, entered an order permitting plaintiff to file the necessary security for costs within thirty days, "and in default thereof the cause to stand dismissed." The required security was not given until after the expiration of the thirty days. The cause was placed upon the docket of the next term of the district court, when defendant moved to strike it therefrom, for the reason that the action had been dismissed by the prior order of the court, and the default of the plaintiff, which motion was sustained. Held, That the decision of the district court was erroneous. King Bros. v. Jackson, 25 Neb. 466 (41 N. W. 448).

58. (1892.) Under the common law, where an action is dismissed for want of prosecution, at the costs of the plaintiff, the plaintiff is required to pay such costs before prosecuting a second action for the same cause. In equity procedure, however, this rule is not enforced. A court of equity will be governed by the circumstances of each case, and where there is a valid excuse given for the failure to pay the costs in the former suit, will not compel such payment as a condition of permitting the second to proceed. Union P. R. Co. v. Mertes, 35 Neb. 204 (52 N. W. 1099).

——— Defects of pleadings or filings.

59. (1877.) Failure to sign and verify a petition is not grounds for dismissing an action. Fritz v. Barnes, 6 Neb. 435.

60. (1886.) Failure to entitle papers in a case, or properly entitle them, if it is apparent to what case they relate, is not sufficient to justify a dismissal of the cause. Jansen & Co. v. Mundt, 20 Neb. 320 (30 N. W. 53).

——— Transfer of plaintiff's interest.

61. (1882.) A transfer by a plaintiff of his interest in the action to a co-plaintiff during the pendency of the suit will not justify a court in dismissing the action. Magemau v. Bell, 13 Neb. 247 (13 N. W. 277).

——— Defect as to parties.

62. (1890.) Where a demurrer is sustained on the ground of non-joinder of parties defendant, the court should not dismiss the action without giving the plaintiff an opportunity to bring in the absent party. Alexander v. Thacker, 30 Neb. 614 (46 N. W. 828).

63. (1894.) An action should not be dismissed because the plaintiff's full first name is omitted from the title of the cause, until an opportunity has been given the party to correct the defect by amendment. Real v. Honey, 39 Neb. 516 (58 N. W. 138).

64. (1895.) A suit by an heir and devisee against an executor for the construction of a clause in a will devising real estate may be dismissed, where it appears that the latter has no interest in the adjudication and that an interpretation will not assist him in administering the estate. Kennedy v. Merrick, 46 Neb. 260 (64 N. W. 960).

——— Defect of process.

65. (1891.) A motion objecting to the jurisdiction of the court over the person of the defendant on the grounds: "First, that no service of summons has been made upon the defendant as required by law; second, that no return of summons has been made as required by law," is too general to be considered. Forbes v. McHaffie, 32 Neb. 742 (49 N. W. 721).

www.libtool.com.cn

Requisites and sufficiency of motion to dismiss.

66. (1891.) When a party files a motion objecting to the jurisdiction of the court over his person, he must specifically state in his motion the grounds of objection. Forbes v. McHaffie, 32 Neb. 742 (49 N. W. 721).

Operation and effect.

67. (1883.) Where an action is dismissed by the court, without a hearing upon the merits, the order of dismissal will not be a bar to a future action. Cheney v. Cooper, 14 Neb. 415 (16 N. W. 471).

68. (1901.) Where a defendant is sued and summons served on her by her true full name, and she is also mentioned in the pleadings and summons by the initials of her given name, the court does not lose jurisdiction over her by dismissing the action as to the person named and designated by the initial letters of the defendant's given name. Nebraska Loan & Trust Co. v. Krosner, 63 Neb. 289 (88 N. W. 499).

Questions determined on dismissal.

69. (1905.) A court has no power or jurisdiction, upon dismissing a cause without prejudice to a new action, to adjudge that such new action shall not be subject to the defense that it is barred by the statute of limitations. Linton v. Cooper, 75 Neb. 167 (106 N. W. 170).

Setting aside and reinstating.

70. (1872.) A petition to reinstate a cause dismissed at a term prior to filing the same for want of prosecution, alleging as excuse a change by general statute of the time of holding the court, of which the petitioner had no knowledge, does not show unavoidable causualty or misfortune entitling him to relief. Smith v. Pinney, 2 Neb. 139.

71. (1872.) In an appeal from a justice's judgment to the district court, the defendant's death was suggested, and his administrator substituted, and the cause continued. At next term, the plaintiff neither filed his petition, nor appeared; and, on defendant's motion, the cause was dismissed for want of prosecution. At the following term, the plaintiff filed his petition to reinstate, alleging that he was ignorant of the time at which the preceding term was held, the same having been changed by recent statute not published, although grand and petit jurors were summoned from the body of the county, and all the machinery of a court put in operation. Held, That a case was not alleged. Smith v. Pinney, 2 Neb. 139.

72. (1890.) On a contingent and alternative agreement between attorneys of record to an action pending in a county court, for the continuance of the cause for trial to a day certain, by which the plaintiffs' attorneys were misled as to the consent and fact of postponement of the trial, which was called in their absence and dismissed, and a motion to reinstate the case upon affidavits of the facts, and of merits, overruled, and which was subsequently reversed on error in the district court, held, that the evidence presented to the county court was sufficient to sustain the last judgment. Brusa v. Sandwich Mfg. Co., 28 Neb. 827 (45 N. W. 250).

73. (1892.) Where a case is dismissed for want of prosecution on the first regular call, and a new action would be barred as to many of the claims, a motion to reinstate, supported by two uncontradicted affidavits, should be sustained. Flannagan v. Elton, 34 Neb. 355 (51 N. W. 967).

74. (1892.) When affidavits filed in support of a motion to reinstate a case are not denied, for the purpose of the motion they will be taken as true. Flannagan v. Elton, 34 Neb. 355 (51 N. W. 967).

75. (1893.) In the district court, on motion of defendants, and in absence of plaintiff and his attorney, the suit was dismissed for want of prosecution. On the same day, counsel for plaintiff, as soon as he learned of the order of dismissal, moved to set the same aside and reinstate the suit, supported by affidavit, which is uncontradicted, showing that he was not guilty of laches in failing to appear and prosecute the cause when called for trial, and that plaintiff had a meritorious case. Held, That the showing was sufficient to entitle plaintiff to have the judgment of dismissal vacated and the case reinstated. Lundaren v. Erik, 38 Neb. 363 (56 N. W. 992).

76. (1896.) Where there was a stipulation for a continuance, and a dismissal at the same term, the order of dismissal cannot be reviewed in absence of a record showing the grounds of the court's ruling. School District v. Bishop, 46 Neb. 850 (65 N. W. 902).

77. (1901.) A suit in equity may be maintained for the purpose of reinstating a case erroneously dismissed, when there is no adequate legal remedy therefor. Edney v. Baum, 2 Unof. 173 (96 N. W. 167).

78. (1901.) After his employment had been terminated, an attorney who had been employed to bring an action dismissed it contrary to his client's desire. The statutory period of limitation for actions of that nature had elapsed pending suit. Held, That a motion, made at the same term, to set aside the order of dismissal and reinstate the case should have been sustained. Steinkamp v. Gaebel, 1 Unof. 480 (95 N. W. 684).

79. (1905.) Where neither the plaintiff nor his attorney are in attendance when the cause is reached for trial, a judgment of dismissal should not be set aside, in the absence of a showing of due diligence. Poggensee v. Feddern, 75 Neb. 584 (106 N. W. 654).

1. (1880.) Where a city passed an ordinance to "restrain, prohibit, and suppress" houses of prostitution while a former ordinance to suppress such houses was in full force and effect, the second does not repeal the existing ordinance. In re Hall, 10 Neb. 537 (7 N. W. 287).

2. (1883.) To authorize a conviction under section 210 of the criminal code, for permitting a house to be used as one of ill-fame or for purposes of prostitution, it must be shown that the house is a house of ill-fame in fact, or, in other words, a house resorted to for purposes of prostitution; that the prisoner was the owner, or had control of the house, and that he knowingly permitted it to be occupied as a house of ill-fame. Drake v. State, 14 Neb. 535 (17 N. W. 117).

3. (1883.) The bawdy character of the house may be shown by its general reputation and that of the persons frequenting it, together with other facts and circumstances which lead satisfactorily to that conclusion. It is not necessary to show particular acts of prostitution. Drake v. State, 14 Neb. 535 (17 N. W. 117).

4. (1895.) Evidence examined, and held to sustain a conviction under section 210, criminal code, for the knowingly owning, using, and occupying of a house in this state for the purpose of prostitution. Wright v. State, 45 Neb. 44 (63 N. W. 147).

5. (1893.) Before a person can be lawfully convicted of being an inmate of a house of prostitution there must be introduced in evidence a valid ordinance forbidding persons from being inmates of such houses. Perry v. State, 37 Neb. 623 (56 N. W. 315).

6. (1893.) The mayor and council of a city of the second class have authority to prohibit by ordinance persons from being inmates of houses of prostitution, and to punish them for the violation of such ordinance. Perry v. State, 37 Neb. 623 (56 N. W. 315).

I. NATURE AND FORM OF REMEDY.

Nature of action.

1. (1879.) An action for a divorce is in its nature a proceeding in rem. Atkins v. Atkins, 9 Neb. 191 (2 N. W. 466).

Contracts for divorce.

2. A contract intended to facilitate the procuring of a divorce at the suit of either of the parties thereto is void. (1893) Wilde v. Wilde, 37 Neb. 891 (56 N. W. 724); (1895) Davis v. Hinman, 73 Neb. 850 (103 N. W. 668).

3. (1893.) The enforcement of a contract between a husband and wife to separate will be refused, even though the illegality of consideration is not shown on its face. Wilde v. Wilde, 37 Neb. 891 (56 N. W. 724).

Construction of statutes.

4. (1894.) Our divorce laws are liberal and should be liberally construed; but they are not designed for, and should not be used to enable designing husbands, without cause, to legally discard their wives whether domiciled in this or other states, or to escape the performance of their marriage contracts. Cochran v. Cochran, 42 Neb. 612 (60 N. W. 942).

II. GROUNDS.

In general.

5. (1881.) The marriage relation should not be severed for slight and trivial causes. A party seeking a divorce should be required to bring his case clearly within the provisions of the statutes. If he does so he is entitled to a divorce. Brotherton v. Brotherton, 12 Neb. 72 (10 N. W. 543).

6. (1884.) A decree of divorce should not be granted for light and trivial causes, but every party seeking a decree of divorce should be required to bring himself clearly within the provisions of the statute. Swan v. Swan, 15 Neb. 453 (19 N. W. 639).

7. (1889.) The marriage relation is designed to continue so long as both the parties entering into it shall live; and the relation will not be dissolved except for adequate legal cause. Dunn v. Dunn, 26 Neb. 136 (42 N. W. 279).

8. (1907.) It is not ground for divorce in this state that a man asserts and exercises the right to govern his own household, or that he indulges in the habitual, if moderate, use of intoxicating liquors. Bain v. Bain, 79 Neb. 711 (113 N. W. 141).

Discretion of court.

9. (1904.) Under the provisions of section 7, chapter 25, Compiled Statutes, whether a plaintiff shall be granted a divorce from bed and board, or a divorce from the bonds of matrimony, is vested in the sound discretion of the trial court. This discretion is not an arbitrary one, either form of relief to be granted according as the applicant may ask for one or the other; but the court will look primarily to the conduct of the parties, an absolute divorce being granted where the separation has been brought about wholly through the fault of the defendant, the plaintiff being without reproach. McKnight v. McKnight, 5 Unof. 260 (98 N. W. 62).

Cruelty.

10. (1884.) Mere austerity of temper and petulance of manners of the wife are not sufficient to defeat a divorce on the ground of extreme cruelty of the husband by blows inflicted by him on her. Boeck v. Boeck, 16 Neb. 196 (20 N. W. 223).

11. (1884.) Mere rudeness of language, petulance of manners, austerity of temper, or even occasional sallies of passion, if they do not threaten personal violence, do not constitute legal cruelty. Gleason v. Gleason, 16 Neb. 15 (19 N. W. 784).

12. (1898.) A decree of divorce may be granted in this state for "extreme cruelty, whether practiced by using personal violence, or by any other means." Berdolt v. Berdolt, 56 Neb. 792 (77 N. W. 399).

13. (1898.) A false charge of physical incompetency or disqualification to consummate the marriage or fully perform marital duties may, under certain circumstances, and if thereby such mental disquietude or suffering is caused as to impair the health or threaten its injury, or as to render the further continuance of the marriage contract and life intolerable and impracticable, constitute extreme cruelty within the meaning of the words as they are employed in our statutes on the subject of divorce. Berdolt v. Berdolt, 56 Neb. 792 (77 N. W. 399).

14. (1898.) A husband who falsely, and without reasonable cause therefor, charges his wife with unchastity, accuses her on the public streets with being criminally intimate with other men, calls her vile, opprobrious, and degrading names, beats and chokes her, is guilty of extreme cruelty within the meaning of section 7, chapter 25, Compiled Statutes. Walton v. Walton, 57 Neb. 102 (77 N. W. 392).

15. (1901.) A husband who requires his wife to live with him in the home of his mother who treats the wife with extreme cruelty, cannot defend an action for divorce brought by the wife on the ground that he himself was not guilty of the acts of cruelty complained of. By allowing third parties to abuse and mistreat his wife and refusing to provide her with another home, he becomes legally answerable for the cruel treatment. Dakin v. Dakin, 1 Unof. 457 (95 N. W. 781).

16. (1902.) Any unjustifiable conduct on the part of either the husband and wife, which so grievously wounds the mental feelings of the other, or so utterly destroys the peace of mind of the other, as to seriously impair the bodily health and endanger the life of the other, or such as utterly destroys the legitimate ends and objects of matrimony, constitutes "extreme cruelty" as defined in section 7, chapter 25, Compiled Statutes, although no physical or personal violence may be inflicted or even threatened. Ellison v. Ellison, 65 Neb. 412 (91 N. W. 403).

17. (1902.) While the habitual use of rough or vile language may amount to cause of divorce, much must depend upon the character of the parties, their situation in life, and the degree of cultivation and refinement they exhibit. Shuster v. Shuster, 3 Unof. 610 (92 N. W. 203).

18. (1906.) Continued threats of personal violence indulged in by a husband toward his wife, and accusations of crime and the use of profane language, such as is described in the opinion, are sufficient to support the wife's petition for a divorce on the grounds of cruelty. Griffith v. Griffith, 77 Neb. 180 (108 N. W. 981).

Desertion or abandonment.

19. (1884.) To sustain an action for divorce on the ground of abandonment, an intent to desert or abandon the plaintiff must actually exist in the mind of the defendant. Swan v. Swan, 15 Neb. 453 (19 N. W. 639).

20. (1888.) A husband who brings an action against his wife for a divorce, on the ground of abandonment, will not be entitled to a decree of divorce if it is made to appear on the trial that she was compelled to leave the home of the plaintiff, by reason of his cruel treatment of her. Kikel v. Kikel, 25 Neb. 256 (41 N. W. 180).

21. (1893.) Cruel and brutal treatment of a wife by a husband justifies her abandoning him, and instituting divorce proceedings. McConnell v. McConnell, 37 Neb. 57 (55 N. W. 292).

Effect of collusion of parties.

22. (1906.) An agreement between the parties to a pending suit for a divorce for the collusive rendition of a decree therefor will defeat the action, and it is immaterial that one of the parties may have supposed such agreement to be free from legal or moral wrong. Branson v. Branson, 76 Neb. 780 (107 N. W. 1011).

III. DEFENSES.

Insane temperament.

23. (1898.) A husband's conduct in charging his wife with unchastity, and calling her vile names, and in choking and beating her, is not deprived of its legal character of "extreme cruelty" because his conduct was the result of his insanely jealous temperament, actual insanity not appearing. Walton v. Walton, 57 Neb. 102 (77 N. W. 392).

www.libtool.com.cn

Provocation.

24. (1887.) Words, no matter how violent or ill advised, afford no justification to a husband to inflict blows upon his wife. Brotherton v. Brotherton, 12 Neb. 75 (10 N. W. 544).

25. (1898.) If the husband's cruelty was disproportionate to his wife's offense, her conduct affords him no justification, and the cruelty entitles the wife to relief. Walton v. Walton, 57 Neb. 102 (77 N. W. 392).

26. (1898.) Whether the cruelty inflicted by a husband upon his wife because of her disobedience, impropriety, or misconduct was so far disproportionate to her offense as to be unjustifiable is a mixed question of law and fact, to be determined in any case from the particular facts and circumstances in evidence therein. Walton v. Walton, 57 Neb. 102 (77 N. W. 392).

27. (1898.) No conduct on the part of a wife that does not threaten great and immediate bodily injury will justify her husband in beating or choking her. Walton v. Walton, 57 Neb. 102 (77 N. W. 392).

28. (1898.) No conduct on the part of a wife, short of notorious and shameless unchastity,—if that does,—justifies her husband in calling her a "whore." Walton v. Walton, 57 Neb. 102 (77 N. W. 392).

29. (1898.) It is a general rule that a husband's cruelty caused by the conjugal misconduct of his wife does not invest her with a cause of action for a divorce. Walton v. Walton, 57 Neb. 102 (77 N. W. 392).

Condonation.

30. (1889.) Where the wife, in a cross-bill, was charged by the husband with certain acts of cruelty committed against him, and it appeared that after such alleged acts he freely cohabited with the plaintiff as his wife, he will be held to have condoned the offenses. Dunn v. Dunn, 26 Neb. 136 (42 N. W. 279).

31. (1893.) Condonation is not necessarily to be inferred from the fact alone that the wife continued to live with the husband after an alleged cruelty. McConnell v. McConnell, 37 Neb. 57 (55 N. W. 292).

32. (1896.) Condonation of extreme cruelty may be avoided by abusive language and the use of opprobrious epithets. Heist v. Heist, 48 Neb. 794 (67 N. W. 790).

33. (1896.) Condonation is forgiveness for the past upon condition that the wrongs shall not be repeated. It is dependent upon future good conduct, and the repetition of the offense revives the wrong condoned. Heist v. Heist, 48 Neb. 794 (67 N. W. 790).

34. (1896.) Conduct of a husband towards his wife which would not alone support a decree of divorce on the ground of extreme cruelty may, nevertheless, be sufficient to avoid a condonation extended to the husband by the wife for such cruelty. Heist v. Heist, 48 Neb. 794 (67 N. W. 790).

35. (1903.) Condonation is a question of fact to be determined from the evidence. Diedrichs v. Diedrichs, 68 Neb. 534 (94 N. W. 536).

36. (1906.) The absence of a plea of condonation does not prevent the court from considering the same. Griffith v. Griffith, 77 Neb. 180 (108 N. W. 981).

37. (1906.) The condonation of a wife's wrongs, not subsequently repeated, will bar the husband from obtaining a divorce therefor. Griffith v. Griffith, 77 Neb. 180 (108 N. W. 981).

IV. JURISDICTION, PROCEEDINGS AND RELIEF.

A. Jurisdiction.

In general.

38. (1903.) Jurisdiction of the court in matters relating to divorce and alimony is given by the statute, and every power exercised by the court with reference thereto must look for its source in the statute, or it does not exist. Cizek v. Cizek, 69 Neb. 800 (99 N. W. 28); (1906) Cizek v. Cizek, 76 Neb. 797 (107 N. W. 1012).

Jurisdiction of district court.

39. (1904.) The district courts of this state have no jurisdiction of the subject of divorce except such as is given them by the statute providing for divorce and alimony. Aldrich v. Steen, 71 Neb. 57 (100 N. W. 311).

Residence of parties.

40. (1879.) When it appears that the defendant cannot be served with process in the state, the records, in the absence of an appearance, must show how jurisdiction was acquired. Atkins v. Atkins, 9 Neb. 191 (2 N. W. 466).

41. (1879.) The action for divorce can only be maintained by a party who has resided in this state at least six months, unless the marriage was solemnized in this state, and the applicant shall have continued to reside therein from the time of the marriage until the time of filing the complaint. Atkins v. Atkins, 9 Neb. 191 (2 N. W. 466).

www.libtool.com.cn

42. (1886.) To give the court jurisdiction in an action for divorce at least one of the parties must be a bona fide resident of the state or territory where the action was brought. Smith v. Smith, 19 Neb. 706 (28 N. W. 296).

43. (1893.) In a proceeding for a divorce the statutes of Nebraska recognize the right of each party to reside in a county different from that in which the other resides; whether or not they so reside, is a question of fact to be determined upon the evidence. McConnell v. McConnell, 37 Neb. 57 (55 N. W. 292).

44. (1897.) Proof of the law of Colorado, in evidence, relating to the jurisdiction of county courts of that state to decree divorces, examined, and held not to satisfactorily establish such jurisdiction. Clemons v. Heelan, 52 Neb. 287 (72 N. W. 270).

45. (1904.) The residence of one of the parties in the county in which the action is brought is necessary to the jurisdiction of the court. Aldrich v. Steen, 71 Neb. 57 (100 N. W. 311).

46. (1905.) Section 6, chapter 25, Compiled Statutes, 1903, confers jurisdiction upon the district court to hear and determine an action for divorce in any county in the state where the parties, or one of them, reside. Eager v. Eager, 74 Neb. 827 (105 N. W. 636).

46*a*. (1908.) The record in a divorce case disclosing that neither of the parties to the action had resided in this state either continuously since the marriage or continuously for six months immediately preceding the filing of the petition, held, that the district court was without jurisdiction to grant a divorce. Keil v. Keil, 80 Neb. 496 (114 N. W. 570).

47. (1907.) In an action by a wife for alimony and support of her child, against her husband who deserted his family and became a non-resident of the state, where the only relief sought is the appropriation of real estate of the husband, situated in the state, residence of the wife in the county where the property of the husband is situated is not required. Rhoades v. Rhoades, 78 Neb. 495 (111 N. W. 122).

B. Parties, Process.

Parties.

48. (1896.) Section 10, chapter 25, Compiled Statutes, confers upon the wife the right to commence an action of divorce in her own name and without the intervention in the suit of a next friend as was formerly required, and not to authorize the granting of alimony or maintenance to the husband, to be paid from the estate of the former wife. Greene v. Greene, 49 Neb. 546 (68 N. W. 947; 59 Am. St. Rep. 560; 34 L. R. A. 110).

Process.

Process in general, see Process.

——— In general.

49. (1905.) By section 902 and 903 of the code, the action for a divorce is taken out of the general provisions of the code for the prosecution of other actions therein mentioned. Eager v. Eager, 74 Neb. 827 (105 N. W. 636).

——— Service by publication.

50. (1907.) In an action by a wife for alimony and support of her child, against the husband who deserted his family and became a non-resident of the state, jurisdiction to subject property, within the territorial jurisdiction of the court, to its judgment may be acquired by the service of process by publication and the placing of the property in the hands of a receiver. Rhoades v. Rhoades, 78 Neb. 495 (111 N. W. 122).

51. (1907.) Service by publication is authorized by section 77 of the code in an action by a wife for alimony and support of her child against the husband, who deserted his family and because a non-resident of the state, where the only relief sought is the appropriation of the real estate of the husband, situated in the county where the action is brought, to the payment of the amount that should be allowed for such alimony and support. Such an action is substantially one in rem, and the court has jurisdiction upon the completion of the service by publication to decree the relief sought. Rhoades v. Rhoades, 78 Neb. 495 (111 N. W. 122).

——— Service of, out of county.

52. (1880.) Where an action for divorce is commenced in Gage county, the residence of plaintiff, and service was had on defendant in Nuckolls county, such service gives the court jurisdiction over the defendant. Brown v. Brown, 10 Neb. 349 (6 N. W. 397).

53. (1905.) Where the plaintiff resides in one county and the defendant in another, summons may issue from the county where the plaintiff resides and the action is commenced to any other county in the state where the defendant resides. Eager v. Eager, 74 Neb. 827 (105 N. W. 636).

www.lihtopi.com.cn

——— Affidavit for publication.

54. (1879.) The affidavit for service by publication in a divorce case is jurisdictional, and unless it conform substantially to the statutory requirements the court will not acquire jurisdiction. Atkins v. Atkins, 9 Neb. 191 (2 N. W. 466).

55. (1880.) Where service is had by publication the affidavit must show that the case is one in which service may be had by publication, and service cannot be made within this state on the defendant. O'Connell v. O'Connell, 10 Neb. 390 (6 N. W. 467).

56. (1880.) It is not necessary to state in the affidavit for publication that the plaintiff is resident of the state or that the marriage was solemonized therein. All that is necessary is to state facts sufficient to show the case is one in which service by publication may be had. O'Connell v. O'Connell, 10 Neb. 390 (6 N. W. 467).

57. (1887.) An affidavit for service by publication in an action for divorce: "Nettie B. Shedenhelm, plaintiff in the above action, being first duly sworn, on oath says: She has this day caused a petition to be filed in said court against the said defendant, the object and prayer of which are to obtain a divorce, with alimony, from said defendant; that the defendant is a non-resident of the state of Nebraska, and that service of a summons cannot be had on him in this state. Wherefore plaintiff prays for service upon said defendant by publication," is sufficient. It is unnecessary to set forth the particular cause or causes upon which a divorce is sought, and the affiant may state or omit the same at his option. Shedenhelm v. Shedenhelm, 21 Neb. 387 (32 N. W. 170).

——— Effect of defective notice.

58. (1889.) In an action for divorce, where service was had by publication only, the publication of a notice requiring the defendant to answer on or before the second Monday after completed service, instead of the third, as provided by section 110 of the civil code, would not prevent the court from acquiring jurisdiction, and a decree rendered in such case would be subject to be set aside on motion, as having been irregularly entered, under the provisions of section 602 et seq. of the civil code. Wilkins v. Wilkins, 26 Neb. 235 (41 N. W. 1101).

C. Pleading.

Pleading in general, see Pleading.

Sufficiency of allegations.

59. (1901.) A petition or cross-petition for a divorce is sufficient to support a decree entered thereon, if the allegations of extreme cruelty or other cause relied on, are set forth with sufficient fullness to allow of the introduction of evidence in its support where no objection thereto is made. Dakin v. Dakin, 1 Unof. 457 (95 N. W. 781).

Answer.

60. (1877.) A general denial is a good plea to an allegation of adultery, and the verdict of the jury finding the defendant not guilty is conclusive, unless upon proper grounds shown it is set aside and vacated. Oades v. Oades, 6 Neb. 304.

61. (1886.) A denial in the language of the petition that the defendant "denies that said marriage was unlawful and wrongful, and denies that he has cohabited with L. W. S., etc., in a state of adultery," is not a denial of the cohabitation. Smith v. Smith, 19 Neb. 706 (28 N. W. 296).

Demurrer.

62. (1903.) In an action brought by the wife for a divorce on the ground of cruelty, a demurrer to the petition on the ground that it shows condonation of the offense charged will not be sustained unless the statements of the petition plainly show acts and conduct on the part of the wife amounting to condonation. Diedrichs v. Diedrichs, 68 Neb. 534 (94 N. W. 536).

Cross-petition.

63. (1898.) The charges made in a petition in a suit for divorce do not furnish proper and forceful grounds to be pleaded and urged in the cross-petition in the same action. Berdolt v. Berdolt, 56 Neb. 792 (77 N. W. 399).

64. (1898.) It is competent in this state, in an action for divorce, for the defendant to file a cross-petition, in effect a cross-action for divorce, and the defendant may be accorded affirmative relief. Berdolt v. Berdolt, 56 Neb. 792 (77 N. W. 399).

Misjoinder of causes.

65. (1904.) An action to determine property rights not growing out of the marriage relation can not be joined with an action for divorce, and where such causes of action are joined in a petition, a demurrer thereto for misjoinder of causes of action should be sustained. Reed v. Reed, 70 Neb. 775 (98 N. W. 76).

66. (1904.) Where a petition for a divorce contains a second cause of action for the settlement and adjudication of property rights, not growing out of the marriage relation, a demurrer thereto for misjoinder of causes of action should be sustained. Reed v. Reed, 70 Neb. 779 (98 N. W. 73).

67. (1902.) The determination of property rights not growing out of the marriage relation should not be joined with an action for divorce, but when such rights are asserted in the petition for a divorce and no objection is made to the misjoinder, the court should hear and determine the controversy. Reed v. Reed, 65 Neb. 849 (91 N. W. 857).

D. Evidence.

Presumptions.

68. (1889.) Condonation may be inferred from cohabitation with knowledge of the offense, after the conduct complained of. Dunn v. Dunn, 26 Neb. 136 (42 N. W. 279).

69. (1893.) Condonation is not necessarily to be inferred from the fact alone that the wife continued to live with the husband after an alleged cruelty. McConnell v. McConnell, 37 Neb. 57 (55 N. W. 292).

70. (1906.) The law presumes that a man does not intend to abandon his family, in the absence of cogent proof to the contrary. Price v. Price, 75 Neb. 552 (106 N. W. 657).

Burden of proof.

71. (1878.) A plaintiff in a divorce suit on the grounds of cruelty must show by a preponderance of the evidence treatment amounting to extreme cruelty at the time she left defendant. Callahan v. Callahan, 7 Neb. 38.

72. (1893.) A wife may condone the cruelty of her husband, but the husband, to avail himself of such condonation, must establish the same by clear and satisfactory proofs. McConnell v. McConnell, 37 Neb. 57 (55 N. W. 292).

73. (1905.) In case of the separation of husband and wife, it is incumbent upon the spouse first repudiating marital obligations to establish freedom from fault and justification or excuse for such conduct. Chapman v. Chapman, 74 Neb. 388 (104 N. W. 880).

Admissibility.

74. (1889.) Where two actions for divorce between the same parties, each being plaintiff in one case and defendant in the other, were commenced in the district court in the year 1883, and trial had upon the merits, no evidence relative to circumstances previous to that year can be considered. Paden v. Paden, 28 Neb. 275 (44 N. W. 228).

Proof of divorce.

75. (1899.) To prove a divorce the record of the decree, or a duly authenticated copy thereof, is the appropriate and only competent evidence. Reynolds v. State, 58 Neb. 49 (78 N. W. 483).

Weight and sufficiency of evidence.

——In general.

76. (1889.) In an action for divorce, where two actions are consolidated, each party seeking the decree, the evidnce and testimony being conflicting, a decree for the wife is set aside and one for the husband sustained. Paden v. Paden, 28 Neb. 275 (44 N. W. 228).

77. (1907.) In an action for a divorce by a wife on the grounds of extreme cruelty and failure to support, the court will not consider evidence of the husband's alleged cruelty and failure to support prior to a judgment of dismissal in a former suit between the same parties based on the same grounds, when there was a trial on the merits and no appeal taken. Whitney v. Whitney 78 Neb. 240 (110 N. W. 555).

——On default of defendant.

78. (1896.) In an action for divorce, even where there is no appearance by the defendant, the trial judge must be satisfied that the case is prosecuted in good faith and without collusion, and that a cause of action exists. He is not bound to accept as conclusive, in all cases, the testimony of the plaintiff, although corroborated in some minor details. Cummins v. Cummins, 47 Neb. 872 (66 N. W. 858).

79. (1896.) Where the testimony, when taken in connection with all the circumstances, is weak and open to suspicion, through a failure to corroborate it on points admitting of corroboration, the action of the district judge in denying a divorce will not be set aside, although the evidence may have been such that it would have sustained a decree for plaintiff, and in cases of a different character might have required it. Cummins v. Cummins, 47 Neb. 872 (66 N W. 858).

——— Abuse and acts of disrespect.

80. (1886.) Evidence of constant use of profane language to a wife, with evidence of other abusive acts will support a decree for divorce and alimony. Powers v. Powers, 20 Neb. 529 (31 N. W. 1).

81. (1901.) Evidence showing a husband who, with his wife lived with his parent's family, permitted his mother to abuse the wife and that the mother and sister were teaching the wife's children to disrespect her, is sufficient to sustain a decree of divorce. Dakin v. Dakin, 1 Unof. 457 (95 N. W. 781).

——— Adultery.

82. (1890.) On the evidence contained in the record, the charge of adultery against the defendant was fully proved, while a like charge against the plaintiff was not sustained and a divorce granted. Small v. Small, 28 Neb. 843 (45 N. W. 248).

83. (1890.) In an action for divorce evidence examined and held not to sustain charge of adultery. James v. James, 29 Neb. 533 (45 N. W. 777).

——— Physical incompetency.

84. (1898.) The evidence adjudged insufficient to warrant a finding for the plaintiff upon the ground of physical incompetency of defendant. Berdolt v. Berdolt, 56 Neb. 792 (77 N. W. 399).

——— Desertion.

85. (1884.) Evidence held insufficient to sustain a decree of divorce for desertion. Swan v. Swan, 15 Neb. 543 (19 N. W. 629).

86. (1904.) Evidence in an action for divorce showing the wife, who filed a cross-petition, has absolutely and without cause refused to live with the husband, sustains a decree for the latter, and an award that each pay one-half of the costs. Isaacs v. Isaacs, 71 Neb. 537 (99 N. W. 268).

87. (1904.) Evidence examined, and held that plaintiff was entitled to an absolute divorce on the ground of cruelty and desertion. McKnight v. McKnight, 5 Unof. 260 (98 N. W. 62).

88. (1906.) The evidence examined and held to sustain the decree of the district court granting a divorce on the ground of desertion. Bascombe v. Bascombe, 75 Neb. 495 (106 N. W. 468).

89. (1906.) Where a wife goes to a town near that which is the domicile of her husband, and makes her residence there for the purpose of educating her children, evidence showing the husband visited her frequently and cohabited with her, and acquiesced in her living apart from him but complained of keeping up two places, though she owned the property she lived in, and also evidence showing her willingness to live with him when he would provide a home, does not show a voluntary abandonment by the wife. Price v. Price, 75 Neb. 552 (106 N. W. 657).

——— Cruelty.

90. (1884.) Evidence examined, and held sufficient to entitle plaintiff to a decree of divorce for cruelty. Vocacek v. Vocacek, 16 Neb. 453 (20 N. W. 635).

91. (1898.) The evidence in this case held to sustain a finding of extreme cruelty by the plaintiff toward the defendant. Berdolt v. Berdolt, 56 Neb. 792 (77 N. W. 399).

92. (1900.) Evidence examined, and found to support the decree of the trial court granting a divorce from the bonds of matrimony, on the ground of extreme cruelty practiced by the husband towards the wife. Tietken v. Tietken, 60 Neb. 138 (82 N. W. 367).

93. (1902.) Where the testimony in a suit for divorce tends to show that each party was addicted to the use of profane language about the home and in addressing the other, the court is justified in refusing to grant a divorce to either on that ground. Shuster v. Shuster, 3 Unof. 610 (92 N. W. 203).

94. (1905.) Evidence showing defendant slapped plaintiff in the presence of bystanders does not show such cruelty that amounts to grounds for divorce. Loomer v. Loomer, 73 Neb. 359 (102 N. W. 759).

95. (1906.) Evidence examined, and held to justify a decree of divorce on the ground of extreme cruelty and an order giving the plaintiff custody of the children. Hays v. Hays, 75 Neb. 728 (106 N. W. 773).

96. (1907.) Evidence examined, and held insufficient to sustain the allegations of extreme cruelty and failure to support. Whitney v. Whitney, 78 Neb. 240 (110 N. W. 555).

97. (1907.) It is not error to deny a divorce from the bonds of matrimony on the charge of extreme cruelty on the part of the wife, where the evidence of the husband as to alleged misconduct is not corroborated, and discloses, at most, occasional ill temper. Haines v. Haines, 79 Neb. 684 (113 N. W. 125).

——— Condonation.

98. (1889.) Condonation may be inferred from cohabitation with knowledge of the offense, after the conduct complained of. Dunn v. Dunn, 26 Neb. 136 (42 N. W. 279).

99. (1889.) An action for a legal separation on the ground of abandonment, brought by the wife against her husband, cannot be maintained where the uncontradicted testimony shows that about the time the action was instituted the plaintiff and defendant had freely cohabited together as husband and wife. Dunn v. Dunn, 26 Neb. 136 (42 N. W. 279).

E. Dismissal, Trial or Hearing.

Dismissal.

99*a*. (1906.) When the parties become reconciled and resume marital relations before issue joined, it is not error for the court to dismiss the suit at the instance of the plaintiff, and such a dismissal carries with it a pending application for temporary alimony, which the plaintiff's attorney is not entitled to revive, by means of intervention, and prosecute for his own benefit. Petersen v. Petersen, 76 Neb. 282 (107 N. W. 391).

99*b*. (1906.) Evidence in a suit for divorce wherein a cross-petition was filed by defendant held to sustain a dismissal without relief to either. Judkins v. Judkins, 76 Neb. 213 (107 N. W. 254).

Entry of decree before elapse of time for answer.

100. (1871.) A decree of divorce, entered before the elapse of time given defendant to answer a supplemental bill, without defendant's consent, and before he had pleaded to the supplemental bill, is reversed. Orr v. Orr, 1 Neb. 359.

Questions for trial court.

101. (1902.) Whether the alleged improper language of the husband was provoked by indiscreet actions of the wife, unless the language used was entirely disproportionate to the occasion, is a question for the trial court. Shuster v. Shuster, 3 Unof. 610 (92 N. W. 203).

New trial.

102. (1904.) A petition for a new trial, in a divorce after the expiration of six months from the granting of a decree to the wife, that states the applicant had no knowledge of the proceeding; that the wife was not a bona fide resident of this state when she procured her decree; and that she had procured the decree by fraud, states a cause within section 602 of the code. Schafer v. Schafer, 71 Neb. 708 (99 N. W. 482).

F. Judgment, Review, Costs.

Scope and extent of relief.

103. (1904.) When the plaintiff in a divorce suit has resided in this state the full statutory period and the defendant has appeared in the cause, the court has jurisdiction over the parties, and the right to dispose of all the issues between them upon their merits and according to equity, even if, in order to do so, it is necessary to grant a divorce to a non-resident defendant upon a cross-petition. Pine v. Pine, 72 Neb. 463 (100 N. W. 938).

Modification and vacating.

As to allowance to alimony, see post, §§ 190-196.

As to custody of children, see post, §§ 213-215.

——— In general.

104. (1886.) Decree in case stated modified to correspond with special findings of fact by trial court. Roehl v. Roehl, 20 Neb. 55 (29 N. W. 357).

——— Statutory provisions.

105. (1880.) Section 82 of the code, providing for opening judgments rendered upon constructive service, has no application to actions for divorce. O'Connell v. O'Connell, 10 Neb. 390 (6 N. W. 467).

106. (1904.) The provisions of section 602 of the code apply to divorce proceedings as well as to other proceedings in which it is sought, upon the grounds therein mentioned, to vacate or modify a decree or judgment after the term. Schafer v. Schafer, 71 Neb. 708 (99 N. W. 482).

——— Petition.

107. (1893.) A petition that states that plaintiff's husband, eleven years before the commencement of this suit, obtained a decree of divorce in this state by measure of fraud and perjured testimony; that plaintiff was a resident of Pennsylvania and had no notice of the divorce proceedings and had no knowledge of the whereabouts of the defendant, her husband, states a cause of action to vacate such decree of divorce and the court which allowed the decree may, in the exercise of its general equity powers, vacate it upon the proper showing of fraud and imposition. Smithson v. Smithson, 37 Neb. 535 (56 N. W. 300; 40 Am. St. Rep. 504).

108. (1897.) Petition examined, and held to state a cause of action for the vacation of a decree of divorce on account of fraud practiced by the successful party. Hard v. Hard, 51 Neb. 412 (70 N. W. 1122).

www.libtool.com.cn

——— Grounds for application.

109. (1906.) An application to change a decree for alimony at a subsequent term must be founded on facts arising subsequently to the decree. Chambers v. Chambers, 75 Neb. 850 (106 N. W. 993).

——— Jurisdiction and right.

110. (1880.) Where the evidence introduced is clearly insufficient to warrant a finding of cruelty on the part of the defendant, a decree for divorce on the grounds will be set aside. Faller v. Faller, 10 Neb. 144 (4 N. W. 1036).

111. (1882.) Where a decree ordering defendant to convey property to plaintiff by way of alimony has not been discharged by compliance, the court has power, at a subsequent term, to alter such decree so as to allow plaintiff a sum of money in lieu of the property. Ellis v. Ellis, 13 Neb. 91 (13 N. W. 29).

112. (1888.) Courts of general jurisdiction have power to set aside or vacate decrees of divorce after the term at which the decree was rendered, when obtained by fraud. Wisdom v. Wisdom, 24 Neb. 551 (39 N. W. 594: 8 Am. St. Rep. 215).

113. (1893.) The district court of Douglas county has no jurisdiction to set aside and vacate a decree of divorce obtained in Fillmore county eleven years before on the ground that the decree was obtained by fraud, the defendant's wife residing in Pennsylvania. Smithson v. Smithson, 37 Neb. 535 (56 N. W. 300; 40 Am. St. Rep. 504).

Collateral attack.

114. (1904.) A decree of divorce obtained without collusion by a defendant on a cross-bill in a suit begun in a county where neither party resided, but by a resident of the state, whose motion to dismiss the cross-bill for want of jurisdiction was denied, and who contested its allowance at the trial but took no appeal, is not open to collateral attack by his heirs in claiming his property. Aldrich v. Steen, 71 Neb. 33 (98 N. W. 445).

Conclusiveness of adjudication.

115. (1901.) A decree of divorce obtained by publication, without appearance of defendant, in a foreign state is a bar to an action by her for alimony in this state. Eldred v. Eldred, 62 Neb. 613 (87 N. W. 340).

116. (1905.) When both parties to the divorce proceedings in the state of Washington have appeared before the court, being a court of general jurisdiction, and have asked the court to distribute their property, including land in this state, and the court by its decree has done so, its decree is conclusive of the equities of the parties in the real estate situated in this state. Fall v. Fall, 75 Neb. 104 (106 N. W. 412).

Appeals.

117. (1881.) An appeal will lie to the supreme court from a decree of a district court granting a divorce. Brotherton v. Brotherton, 12 Neb. 72 (10 N. W. 543).

118. (1886.) An application to modify a decree of divorce is a special proceeding within the meaning of section 581 of the civil code, and an order made therein affecting a substantial right may be reviewed on error. In such case it is not necessary to a review that the order complained of terminates the action or prevents a judgment. O'Brien v. O'Brien, 19 Neb. 584 (27 N. W. 640).

119. (1887.) The admission of incompetent evidence in an action of divorce tried to the court, is not alone grounds for reversal of a decree. McConahey v. McConahey, 21 Neb. 463 (32 N. W. 300).

120. (1894.) The supreme court will not disturb a decree granting a divorce where no question of law is involved and the finding of the trial court is based upon conflicting testimony. Nygren v. Nygren, 42 Neb. 408 (60 N. W. 885).

121. (1896.) In a suit for a divorce, objections not made below to adjudicating the husband's rights in land, the title being in the wife, will be disregarded on review. Greene v. Greene, 49 Neb. 546 (68 N. W. 947; 59 Am. St. Rep. 560; 34 L. R. A. 110).

122. (1896.) When the record presented to the supreme court does not disclose that any objections were made in the district court to its trial and adjudication in this, an action for divorce, of the alleged rights of a husband in real estate, the title to which rested in the wife, the questions will not be considered in the supreme court. Greene v. Greene, 49 Neb. 546 (68 N. W. 947; 59 Am. St. Rep. 560; 34 L. R. A. 110).

V. ALIMONY, ALLOWANCE, AND DISPOSITION OF PROPERTY.

Effect of dismissal of suit on application for alimony, see ante, § 99*a*.

Definition of alimony.

124. (1896.) Alimony may be defined to be such sum as is ordered by the court to be paid to the wife by the husband, for her support during the time she lives separate from him, or to be paid by her late husband for her maintenance after divorce from the marriage tie. This latter is a creation of modern law and is what is known as permanent alimony. Greene v. Greene, 49 Neb. 546 (68 N. W. 947; 59 Am. St. Rep. 560; 34 L. R. A. 110).

Jurisdiction to award.

125. (1889.) Courts of equity have authority to enforce the duty of a husband to support his wife and family, in a suit by the wife, whether or not the suit is for divorce. Earle v. Earle, 27 Neb. 277 (43 N. W. 118; 20 Am. St. Rep. 667).

126. (1889.) Whether or not a court of equity has authority to award alimony in an action for divorce, when not asked for, by implication, quære. Earle v. Earle, 27 Neb. 277 (43 N. W. 118; 20 Am. St. Rep. 667).

127. (1895.) In an action for divorce, where the husband is a non-resident served only by publication of notice and he does not appear, the court has no jurisdiction to render a personal judgment, as for alimony. Dillon v. Starin, 44 Neb. 881 (63 N. W. 12).

128. (1903.) Jurisdiction of the courts in matters relating to alimony is given by statute, and every power so exercised must look for its source in the statute. Cizek v. Cizek, 69 Neb. 800 (99 N. W. 28).

129. (1906.) Where a court has jurisdiction of the parties, its authority to grant a divorce carries with it authority to adjust the property rights of the parties with respect to personal property within its jurisdiction. Hays v. Hays, 75 Neb. 728 (106 N. W. 773).

——— Authority of referee to award.

130. (1883.) A referee in a divorce suit has no power to decree alimony and make the same a lien upon defendant's real estate. Brotherton v. Brotherton, 14 Neb. 186 (15 N. W. 347). [Overruled. Nygren v. Nygren, 42 Neb. 408.]

Action for alimony alone.

131. (1894.) A court of equity will entertain an action brought for alimony alone, and will grant the same, although no divorce or other relief is sought, where the wife is separated from the husband without her fault. Cochran v. Cochran, 42 Neb. 612 (60 N. W. 942).

132. (1894.) Where a husband leaves his wife and children in Wisconsin and comes to this state where he obtains a divorce on the ground of desertion, service is had by publication and the wife had no knowledge of the proceedings, and two years after brings suit for alimony, such suit is a separate and independent action for support based on the legal obligation of the husband to support his family, and the wife need not allege that she is destitute or in actual need of support. Cochran v. Cochran, 42 Neb. 612 (60 N. W. 942).

133. (1907.) A court of equity will entertain an action brought for alimony, and will grant the same, although no divorce or other relief is sought, where the wife is separated from the husband without her fault. Rhoades v. Rhoades, 78 Neb. 495 (111 N. W. 122).

Right of husband to recover alimony.

134. (1896.) A husband cannot, in this state, whether he or the wife be granted the divorce, recover alimony to be paid out of the divorced wife's separate estate Greene v. Greene, 49 Neb. 546 (68 N. W 947; 59 Am. St. Rep. 560; 34 L. R. A. 110).

Property liable and disposition thereof.

135. (1891.) Property within jurisdiction of court will be subjected to alimony, even where divorce is obtained ex parte against a non-resident defendant, if he enters a personal appearance in the suit to have the property subjected to the payment of the alimony. Johnson v. Johnson, 31 Neb. 385 (47 N. W. 1115).

136. (1894.) The value of property acquired by a husband, after obtaining a decree of divorce from his wife, by exchanging for it other property which he owned at the time of obtaining such divorce, should be taken into consideration by the court in determining the amount of alimony to which the wife is entitled. Cochran v. Cochran, 42 Neb. 612 (60 N. W. 942).

137. (1895.) Section 18, chapter 25, Compiled Statutes, providing that on dissolution of a marriage the court may make a decree restoring to the wife personal estate that shall have come to the husband by reason of the marriage or awarding to her the value thereof, refers to property which the law gives the husband by reason of the marriage and not to property obtained by the husband from the wife by gift or contract. Dillon v. Starin, 44 Neb. 881 (63 N. W. 12).

138. (1895.) A petition alleging that a certain sum had come to the husband by reason of the marriage and praying restitution thereof is not supported by proof of money voluntarily advanced by the wife to the husband after the marriage. Dillon v. Starin, 44 Neb. 881 (63 N. W. 12).

139. (1903.) Where a petition for divorce alleged that defendant owned several parcels of real estate, specifying them, and that one was occupied by plaintiff as a homestead, and that defendant is in debt to the full value of his property except the homestead, and prays that she may be awarded such homestead as alimony, not asking for a decree as to the other property, the court has no jurisdiction to award her the other property. Banking House of A. Castetter v. Dukes, 70 Neb. 648 (97 N. W. 805).

140. (1905.) The statute of the state of Washington, as construed by the courts of that state, gives the courts jurisdiction in the trial of a divorce case to make distribution between the parties of all of the property possessed jointly or severally by the parties upon principles of general equity, "having regard to the respective merits of the parties, and to the condition in which they will be left by such divorce, and to the party through whom the property was acquired." Fall v. Fall, 75 Neb. 104 (106 N. W. 412).

141. (1907.) In a suit for divorce and alimony, a district court has jurisdiction to award to the wife specific articles of personal property from the estate of the husband in addition to alimony. Washington v. Washington, 78 Neb. 741 (111 N. W. 787). 787).

——Award of the fee to realty.

142. (1903.) In a suit arising under the provisions of chapter 25, Compiled Statutes, the district court has not jurisdiction to award real estate of the husband to the wife in fee as alimony, and a decree in so far as it attempts so to do is void and subject to collateral attack. Cizek v. Cizek, 69 Neb. 800 (99 N. W. 28).

——Order of sale of realty.

143. (1894.) The decree of the lower court, in so far as it orders the sale of specific real estate for the payment of alimony, is reversed. Nygren v. Nygren, 42 Neb. 408 (60 N. W. 885).

Attorney fees and expenses pending suit.

144. (1878.) A reasonable allowance of alimony, during the pendency of an action for divorce brought into the supreme court upon appeal, will be made. Callahan v. Callahan, 7 Neb. 38.

145. (1886.) Where the divorced wife seeks a modification of the decree for alimony, alleging that the decree was obtained by the fraud of the husband and his agents, the district court has authority to require the husband to pay into court a reasonable sum of money, to enable her to prosecute her action. O'Brien v. O'Brien, 19 Neb. 584 (27 N. W. 640).

146. (1891.) Section 12, chapter 25, Compiled Statutes, authorizes the court in a divorce suit "to require the husband to pay any sum necessary to enable the wife to carry on or defend the suit during its pendency." Held, That the remedy here given for attorney fees for the wife is exclusive, and that the attorney cannot afterwards maintain an action against the husband for fees in addition to those allowed by the court and paid. Burnham v. Tizard, 31 Neb. 781 (48 N. W. 823).

147. (1896.) It is within the discretion of the court to postpone until the final hearing of the case allowances of alimony for expenses made and then render a decree against the husband therefor. Brasch v. Brasch, 50 Neb. 73 (69 N. W. 392).

148. (1896.) What sum a husband may be required to pay to his wife for her support during the pendency of a divorce suit for her "expenses" in prosecuting or defending the action, for counsel fees, and whether such sums shall be paid before the final hearing of the action and as a condition precedent to the right of the husband to further prosecute or defend, are matters within the discretion of the district court. Brasch v. Brasch, 50 Neb. 73 (69 N. W. 392).

149. (1896.) Within the meaning of section 12, chapter 25, Compiled Statutes, an action is pending from its commencement until its final determination on appeal or error, or until the time fixed by statute for prosecuting an appeal or an error proceeding has expired. Brasch v. Brasch, 50 Neb. 73 (69 N. W. 392).

150. (1897.) Under section 12, chapter 25, Compiled Statutes, the allowance of attorney's fees to the counsel of the wife is ancillary to or an incident of the action for divorce, and a separate suit cannot be maintained against the husband by such attorney to recover for his professional services therein rendered to the wife. Yeiser v. Lowe, 50 Neb. 310 (69 N. W. 847).

151. (1906.) On an application at a subsequent term for custody of children, the court may require the husband to pay a reasonable sum as costs to enable the wife to prosecute such application. Chambers v. Chambers, 75 Neb. 850 (106 N. W. 993).

Reference to ascertain defendant's income.

152. (1881.) Upon affirming a decree for divorce a reference was ordered to take additional testimony and report on the question of the income of the husband. Brotherton v. Brotherton, 12 Neb. 75 (10 N. W. 544).

153. (1907.) Where the record is not sufficient to inform the court of the value of the husband's property, and it appears that the alimony awarded the wife is grossly in excess of what should be allowed, the case will be remanded for further finding as to the value of the husband's property. Yaryan v. Yaryan, 79 Neb. 574 (113 N. W. 138).

Permanent alimony.

——— Right to, in general.

154. (1880.) When a man and woman, each having children by a former marriage, were married and the wife refused to go to the home of the husband, abandoning him entirely after two years, in an action for divorce a decree for permanent alimony is erroneous. Shafer v. Shafer, 10 Neb. 468 (6 N. W. 768).

155. (1889.) Under section 22, chapter 25, Compiled Statutes, a district court or supreme court, upon appellate proceedings may, after a divorce is granted at the suit of the husband, make a decree for alimony in favor of the wife, out of the property of the husband, even though the decree of divorce be against the wife, for any of the enumerated causes except the adultery of the wife. Dickenson v. Dickenson, 26 Neb. 318 (42 N. W. 9).

156. (1904.) When a wife, without cause, refuses to live with her husband, and the evidence shows that she did not assist in or contribute to the accumulation of any of his property, but that it was all accumulated by him prior to their marriage, the husband, on obtaining a divorce on the ground of desertion, will not be required to pay alimony. Isaacs v. Isaacs, 71 Neb. 537 (99 N. W. 268).

157. (1904.) A judgment for alimony is the legal method for enforcing the husband's moral obligation to provide sustenance for his wife, the amount thereof to be determined primarily by consideration of the wife's need and the husband's ability. So, where a husband abandoned his wife and two minor children, having first deeded to his wife half of the property, and in a subsequent suit for divorce it appeared that the wife, who was in poor health, was in need, and that the husband, in addition to an income amply sufficient to support him, had made an arrangement with the property retained by him in the settlement by which he received his support for life, held that the settlement was not an adequate discharge of the husband's obligations to provide for his wife, and that further provision should be made for her out of his estate. McKnight v. McKnight, 5 Unof. 260 (98 N. W. 62).

——— Settlement as bar.

158. (1904.) A settlement between husband and wife in contemplation of a separation, although equitable, is not a bar to a judgment for alimony in a subsequent suit by the wife for divorce; but it may be considered in determining the amount of alimony to be awarded. McKnight v. McKnight, 5 Unof. 260 (98 N. W. 62).

——— Determination of amount.

159. There is no fixed rule for determining what portion of a husband's estate should be decreed to his wife for alimony. The amount should be just and equitable, due regard being had for the rights of each party, the ability of the husband, the estate of the wife, and the character and situation of the parties. (1894) Cochran v. Cochran, 42 Neb. 612 (60 N. W. 942); (1890) Small v. Small, 28 Neb. 843 (45 N. W. 248); (1896) Heist v. Heist, 48 Neb. 794 (67 N. W. 790); (1898) Walton v. Walton, 57 Neb. 102 (77 N. W. 392); (1899) Zimmerman v. Zimmerman, 59 Neb. 80 (80 N. W. 643); (1900) Smith v. Smith, 60 Neb. 273 (83 N. W. 72); (1902), McKee v. McKee, 2 Unof. 322 (96 N. W. 489).

160. (1894.) In estimating the value of a husband's property for determining the amount of alimony to be awarded the wife, the court should take the value of the husband's estate at the date of the rendition of the decree for alimony. Cochran v. Cochran, 42 Neb. 612 (60 N. W. 942).

161. (1902.) While there is no fixed rule for determining the amount of alimony to be awarded under section 22, chapter 25, Compiled Statutes, such award should bear a reasonable relation to the husband's ability to pay, as disclosed by the evidence McKee v. McKee, 2 Unof. 322 (96 N. W. 489).

162. (1905.) In awarding alimony the court should consider the condition, situation and standing of the parties, financially and otherwise, the duration of their marriage, the amount and value of the husband's estate, the source from which it came and how far, if at all, the wife contributed thereto. Metcalf v. Metcalf, 73 Neb. 79 (102 N. W. 79).

——— Discretion of court as to amount.

163. (1893.) In the allowance of alimony upon the awarding of a divorce much discretion is necessarily conferred upon the district court, and this court will not interfere on the grounds that the amount allowed is excessive unless there appears to have been a clear abuse of discretion. Wilde v. Wilde, 37 Neb. 891 (56 N. W. 724).

164. (1904.) What sum the husband may be required to pay his wife during the pendency of a divorce suit as temporary alimony, expense money and counsel fees, to enable her to properly defend the action, are matters within the discretion of the district court. Reed v. Reed, 70 Neb. 779 (98 N. W. 73).

165. (1904.) It is entirely within the sound discretion of the district court to require the husband to pay the sums of money allowed the wife as temporary alimony and counsel fees in a divorce case, to enable her to make a proper defense, as a condition precedent to the right to further prosecute his action. And an order requiring such payment does not conflict with any right guaranteed him by our constitution. Reed v. Reed, 70 Neb. 779 (98 N. W. 73).

166. (1907.) The court, in awarding permanent alimony, will not speculate upon a future income from a continuous and persistent career of vice and criminality, and adopt as a basis for its decree a division of the anticipated spoils of iniquity. King v. King, 79 Neb. 852 (113 N. W. 538).

——— Excessiveness of award.

167. (1882.) Decree for alimony modified by reducing the same from $5,500 to $3,000, and an allowance for attorney fees and expenses from $2,000 to $1,000. Atkins v. Atkins, 13 Neb. 271 (13 N. W. 285).

168. (1886.) Where a husband's property is valued at $15,000, and the wife has received as temporary alimony $2,000 and has $800 of her own, a permanent decree of $6,000 will be reduced to $4,000. Smith v. Smith, 19 Neb. 706 (28 N. W. 296).

169. (1887.) Where it was shown that the husband was possessed of property of the value of $2,200, and the wife was possessed of $500 worth of property in her own right, it was held that a decree allowing the wife $800 of alimony and $150 attorney's fees, was excessive, and the decree for alimony was modified, and the sum of $500 allowed in addition to the attorney's fees, it not appearing that the wife had contributed to the common fund. McConahey v. McConahey, 21 Neb. 463 (32 N. W. 300).

170. (1890.) A decree for $20 monthly allowance in addition to the homestead is excessive. Small v. Small, 28 Neb. 843 (45 N. W. 248).

171. (1893.) An award of $2,000 alimony is not excessive when it is shown the husband is worth over $8,000, saved since his marriage, and earned with money furnished by the wife. Wilde v. Wilde, 37 Neb. 891 (56 N. W. 724).

172. (1896.) Where the wife was awarded the custody of the minor children, and the husband's unincumbered property was valued at $4,500, an allowance to the wife of $2,250 as alimony was held not excessive. Heist v. Heist, 48 Neb. 794 (64 N. W. 790).

173. (1898.) The permanent alimony ordered paid in the sum of $5,000 adjudged excessive, defendant in error allowed to file a remittitur of $3,500, and the decree thus changed affirmed. If remittitur is not filed, the decree of divorce is affirmed, and the branch of the cause in regard to permanent alimony reversed and remanded. Berdolt v. Berdolt, 56 Neb. 792 (77 N. W. 399).

174. (1898.) In the case at bar the parties had been married six months. The wife was 38 years of age and healthy. She had no one depending upon her for support. The husband was worth $24,000, no part of which the wife had contributed. The marriage was dissolved because of extreme cruelty practiced by the husband. Held, That an award of $5,000 permanent alimony and $700 counsel fees should be affirmed. Walton v. Walton, 57 Neb. 102 (77 N. W. 392).

175. (1899.) Excessive alimony should not be allowed. Zimmerman v. Zimmerman, 59 Neb. 80 (80 N. W. 643).

176. (1900.) Evidence examined, and held to support a judgment rendered, awarding the wife permanent alimony in the sum of $1,000 out of a husband's estate worth $9,670. Tietken v. Tietken, 60 Neb. 138 (82 N. W. 367).

177. (1905.) An award of $500 alimony to a wife against whom the husband has procured a divorce is not excessive. Metcalf v. Metcalf, 73 Neb. 79 (102 N. W. 79).

178. (1905.) Alimony in gross of $5,500 is excessive when it appears that the husband's estate was valued at $25,000. Kimbro v. Kimbro, 73 Neb. 171 (102 N. W. 271).

179. (1906.) The allowance of alimony of $1,000 from an estate of $2,200 is not unreasonable on granting a divorce for cruelty. Hays v. Hays, 75 Neb. 728 (106 N. W. 773).

——— Mode of allowance.

180. (1903.) Provisions of chapter 25, Compiled Statutes, relative to alimony, its allowance and the mode of its enforcement, held excessive. Cizek v. Cizek, 69 Neb. 800 (99 N. W. 28).

——— Award in gross or instalments.

181. (1894.) An award of alimony in gross sustained. Cochran v. Cochran, 42 Neb. 612 (60 N. W. 942). [Overruled. Chapman v. Chapman, 74 Neb. 388 (104 N. W. 880).]

182. (1895.) Alimony should not be awarded a wife in instalments during her life. McGechie v. McGechie, 43 Neb. 523 (61 N. W. 692). [Overruled. Chapman v. Chapman, 74 Neb. 388 (104 N. W. 880).]

183. (1906.) Where the situation of the parties and the contingencies are such that the amount of alimony cannot be placed at a lump sum without danger that such allowance may prove unjust or inequitable to one or other of the parties, it is proper for the court to provide for the payment of a stated sum at fixed periods for a given length of time, or until the further order of the court. Hays v. Hays, 75 Neb. 728 (106 N. W. 773).

——— Lien of judgment.

184. A decree, declaring alimony a lien upon real estate is erroneous. (1881) Swansen v. Swansen, 12 Neb. 210 (10 N. W. 713); (1883) Brotherton v. Brotherton, 14 Neb. 186 (15 N. W. 347). [Overruled. Nygren v. Nygren, 42 Neb. 408.]

185. (1886.) Fraudulent conveyance made by husband to wife, set aside after divorce, and is subject to lien for alimony. Roehl v. Roehl, 20 Neb. 55 (29 N. W. 257).

186. (1894.) Since the enactment of section 4*a*, chapter 25, Compiled Statutes, a decree for alimony is a lien upon real estate the same as a judgment at law, and is enforceable in the same manner. Nygren v. Nygren, 42 Neb. 408 (60 N. W. 885).

187. (1898.) In a suit by a wife for a divorce a decree for alimony in her favor is a lien on the family homestead, the title to which is in the husband. Best v. Zutavern, 53 Neb. 604 (74 N. W. 64).

188. (1900.) A decree for alimony is a lien upon real estate the same as a judgment at law and is enforceable in like manner. Dufrene v. Johnson, 60 Neb. 18 (82 N. W. 107).

189. (1902.) A judgment for alimony in favor of a wife, rendered in an action for divorce against the husband, is a lien upon the family homestead, the title whereof is in the husband. Fraaman v. Fraaman, 64 Neb. 472 (90 N. W. 245; 97 Am. St. Rep. 650).

——— Modification of judgment or award.

Of decree for divorce, see ante, §§ 104-113.

190. (1897.) A district court has jurisdiction to hear and determine an application for the modification of a decreee for permanent alimony. State, ex rel. Beard, v. Cook, 51 Neb. 822 (71 N. W. 733).

191. (1897.) Where an order on an application to modify a decree for permanent alimony directs the payment of money, whether it may be superseded is not a matter resting in the discretion of the district court. Such order may be superseded as a matter of right, on the execution of a supersedeas bond as required by the first subdivision of section 677 of the code of civil procedure. State, ex rel. Beard, v. Cook, 51 Neb. 822 (71 N. W. 733).

192. (1899.) Where, in a divorce proceeding, a decree is entered dissolving a marriage, and awarding the wife a judgment against the husband for $—— in full of all her claims upon him or his property by reason of their former marriage relations, it seems that the courts have no jurisdiction to vacate or modify such a judgment, after the term at which rendered, solely because of a change in the circumstances, financial or otherwise, of either of the parties thereto. Beard v. Beard, 57 Neb. 754 (78 N. W. 255).

193. (1899.) If, by reason of a change in the circumstances or conditions of either or both the parties, the courts have jurisdiction to vacate or modify a judgment awarding the wife a certain sum in full of all her claims against the husband, after term, the fact that the property of the husband has depreciated in value, because of drouths and crop failures since the entry of the judgment, is not sufficient to support a decree modifying or vacating such judgment. Beard v. Beard, 57 Neb. 754 (78 N. W. 255).

194. (1906.) Where a husband seeming a divorce fails to prove any alleged infidelity on the part of his wife, and a decree is rendered, requiring him to pay a monthly sum to the wife and, also, to furnish electric light, he being employed by an electric light company, the latter part of the decree is modified upon the wife's removal from that town. Russell v. Russell, 77 Neb. 136 (108 N. W. 149).

195. (1906.) Under section 27, chapter 25, Compiled Statutes 1905, the district court has a continuing power, after a decree of divorce and alimony has been granted, to review and revise the provisions for alimony at its subsequent terms on petition of either of the parties. Cizek v. Cizek, 76 Neb. 797 (107 N. W. 1012).

196. (1906.) If the decree of the trial court awarding alimony in a divorce proceeding is void for want of jurisdiction, the court may at a subsequent term award suitable alimony upon application and a sufficient showing. Cizek v. Cizek, 76 Neb. 797 (107 N. W. 1012).

Enforcement of order or decree.

197. (1898.) A decree awarding permanent alimony is enforceable in the same manner as judgments at law. Leeder v. State, 55 Neb. 133 (75 N. W. 541).

198. (1888.) The provisions of section 4, chapter 25, Compiled Statutes, providing for the payment of alimony, afford a just and reasonable remedy, and, except in extraordinary cases, none other will be resorted to for the enforcement of judgments or orders in cases of alimony or maintenance. Segear v. Segear, 23 Neb. 306 (36 N. W. 536).

Effect of obtaining release of decree by fraud.

199. (1892.) Where a divorced husband induced his former wife to again marry him and they go to Kansas where an alleged minister performs a marriage ceremony which is solemnized in the full belief of its validity by the persons so married, and the wife receipts for a judgment obtained for alimony in her divorce action, she cannot recover damages on the ground of fraud, but may recover the amount of the judgment for alimony. Haggin v. Haggin, 35 Neb. 375 (53 N. W. 209).

Conclusiveness of adjudication.

200. (1899.) A judgment in divorce proceedings awarding the wife $5,000 in full of all her claims upon the husband or his property, is a judicial determination of the share of the husband's property to which the wife is entitled as permanent alimony, and is final and conclusive unless modified or vacated in a direct proceeding. Beard v. Beard, 57 Neb. 754 (78 N. W. 255).

Contempt for non-payment.

201 (1898.) Ordinarily the non-compliance with an order for payment of permanent alimony is not punishable as for contempt of court. Leeder v. State, 55 Neb. 133 (75 N. W. 541).

Award of alimony as bar to dower.

202. (1898.) A wife, by praying for a reasonable sum as permanent alimony, elects to take such sum in lieu of dower in her husband's lands. Walton v. Walton, 57 Neb. 102 (77 N. W. 392).

203. (1885.) Upon a divorce being granted, a decree in favor of the wife for permanent alimony will bar her right to any further claims against the estate of the husband. Tatro v. Tatro, 18 Neb. 395 (25 N. W. 571; 54 Am. Rep. 820).

204. (1885.) Under section 23 of chapter 25, Compiled Statutes, entitled "Divorce and Alimony," a wife, upon obtaining a divorce for the cause of misconduct, etc., of the husband, is entitled to dower in his lands in the same manner as if he were dead. Tatro v. Tatro, 18 Neb. 395 (25 N. W. 571; 54 Am. Rep. 820).

Appeal.

205. (1885.) An order in an action for divorce awarding the wife alimony and suit money pendente lite to be paid by the husband, cannot be taken by appeal or error to the supreme court before judgment or decree granting or denying a divorce. Aspinwall v. Aspinwall, 18 Neb. 463 (25 N. W. 623); Aspinwall v. Sabin, 22 Neb. 73 (34 N. W. 72; 3 Am. St. Rep. 72).

206. (1897.) An order made on application to modify a decree for permanent alimony is appealable. State, ex rel. Beard, v. Cook, 51 Neb. 822 (71 N. W. 733).

207. (1907.) The findings of a trial judge as respects the value of real property situated in localities with which he is familiar, and made, after hearing conflicting testimony of witnesses, and will not be disregarded upon appeal, unless it is made to appear that inferences from the evidence drawn by the supreme court are more likely to be correct than were his. King v. King, 79 Neb. 852 (113 N. W. 538).

——— Bond.

208. (1896.) Neither the district court nor the judge thereof has the power to fix the amount of the penalty of the bond to be given on appeal from a decree awarding alimony, since the amount is prescribed by statute. State, ex rel. Walton, v. Cornish, 48 Neb. 614 (67 N. W. 481).

209. (1896.) The penalty of a supersedeas bond for appeal from a decree awarding alimony must be double the amount of the decree, and the bond must be conditioned according to subdivision 1, section 677 of the code. State, ex rel. Walton, v. Cornish, 48 Neb. 614 (67 N. W. 481).

210. (1897.) Where an order on an application to modify a decree for permanent alimony directs the payment of money, whether it may be superseded is not a matter resting in the discretion of the district court. Such an order may be superseded as a matter of right, on the execution of a supersedeas bond as required by the first subdivision of section 677 of the code of civil procedure. State, ex rel. Beard, v. Cook, 51 Neb. 822 (71 N. W. 733).

VI. CUSTODY AND SUPPORT OF CHILDREN.

In general.

211. (1890.) Where the evidence shows her to be the proper person, the custody of the children will be given to the mother. Small v. Small, 28 Neb. 843 (45 N. W. 248).

212. (1890.) Where a decree of divorce, obtained in a foreign state, contains no provision for the custody of a minor child, and the mother who has the care of it removes to this state, in an action by the father to obtain possession of the child, the best interests of the child will control the court in the award; and on a showing that the father has no permanent home the child should be given to the mother. Giles v. Giles, 30 Neb. 624 (46 N. W. 916).

Modifying decree.

Of decree in general, see ante, §§ 104-113.

213. (1898.) When a decree of divorce has settled the custody of children in one of the parents, the court should not, in habeas corpus proceedings, in effect give them into the custody of the other, by committing them to the care of strangers with whom that other makes his home. Norval v. Zinsmaster, 57 Neb. 158 (77 N. W. 373; 73 Am. St. Rep. 500).

214. (1890.) The plaintiff obtained a decree of divorce on the grounds of numerous acts of adultery committed by the wife. The children were awarded to the custody of their grandparents who reside in Colorado, and with whom the erring wife makes her home. Held, On the proof, that the decree be modified by committing the children to the care of the father. Eckhard v. Eckhard, 29 Neb. 457 (45 N. W. 466).

215. (1906.) Where the circumstances require it, the court may at a subsequent term enter a supplemental decree with respect to the custody of the children, although the original decree contains no provision therefor. Chambers v. Chambers, 75 Neb. 850 (106 N. W. 993).

VII. OPERATION AND EFFECT OF DIVORCE.

Conclusiveness of foreign divorces.

216. (1886.) A divorce procured in Salt Lake City while neither of the parties were residents of that territory is null and void. Smith v. Smith, 19 Neb. 706 (28 N. W. 296).

217. (1901.) A decree of divorce obtained by a wife upon service by publication without appearance of defendant, in a foreign state, is a bar to an action by her for alimony in this state. Eldred v. Eldred, 62 Neb. 613 (87 N. W. 340).

Effect of foreign decree on land in this state.

218. (1905.) A decree of divorce rendered in a sister state, and setting aside lands in this state to the wife, has no effect as to the title to such land. Fall v. Fall, 75 Neb. 120 (106 N. W. 412).

Right of husband in wife's property.

219. (1903.) After decree of divorce, the husband has no right of possession in the separate property of the wife, occupied as a homestead while the marriage relation subsisted. Cizek v. Cizek, 69 Neb. 797 (96 N. W. 657).

In general.

1. (1895.) The domicile of a defendant is that place where he has his fixed and permanent home, and to which, when absent, he has the intention of returning. Wood v. Roeder, 45 Neb. 311 (63 N. W. 853).

2. (1895.) The words "residence," and "usual place of residence," as employed in statutes, are generally synonymous with the term "domicile." Wood v. Roeder, 45 Neb. 311 (63 N. W. 853).

3. (1896.) The question of residence is one of intention. Johnson v. May, 49 Neb. 601 (68 N. W. 1032).

4. (1898.) One's residence is where he has his established home, and to which, when absent, he intends to return. State, ex rel. Vale, v. School District, 55 Neb. 317 (75 N. W. 855).

What constitutes.

5. (1905.) A box-stall at a fair ground provided with inside fastenings to its doors, which is prepared and used by a man as his office and sleeping apartment, the place where he resides, he having no other place of abode, and which contains his clothing, his money, and all of his belongings, is in legal effect his home or domicile, within the rule that one may take life if necessary to repel an attack upon his domicile. Young v. State, 74 Neb. 346 (104 N. W. 867).

Change of domicile.

6. (1898.) To effect a change of domicile there must not only be a change of residence, but an intention to permanently abandon the former home. State, ex rel. Vale, v. School District, 55 Neb. 317 (75 N. W. 855).

Digitized by Google

7. (1895.) To effect a change of domicile there must not only be a change of residence, but an intention to permanently abandon the former home. The mere residing at a different place, although evidence of the required intention, does not per se constitute a change of domicile. Wood v. Roeder, 45 Neb. 311 (63 N. W. 853).

8. (1882.) The test of residence, when a party removes from one state to another, seems to be, did he remove from his former residence with the intention of abandoning the same? If a party, in pursuance of that intention, actually went beyond the borders of the state, he will become a non-resident of that state, and upon going into another state, with the intention of residing there, he will become a resident thereof. Swaney v. Hutchins, 13 Neb. 266 (13 N. W. 282).

Effect of temporary removal.

9. (1898.) Where one who owns a farm, which has been his domicile for many years, moves his family and a portion of his furniture to a neighboring city during the fall, temporarily, for the purpose of educating his children, and not with the intention of gaining a new home, and returns to the farm at the end of each school year with his family and furniture, his legal residence remains at the farm. State, ex rel. Vale, v. School District, 55 Neb. 317 (75 N. W. 855).

10. (1895.) Where one with his family goes to a foreign state, leaving his household goods in a rented house, and in charge of servants in this state and he continues to pay rent on such place, and writes to the owner for a renewal lease for the ensuing year, stating that business will keep him away a few weeks longer, and the servants in the house understood the absence to be merely temporary, such absence is not a change of domicile and summons served at the place maintained in this state was at the usual place of residence. Wood v. Roeder, 45 Neb. 311 (63 N. W. 853).

11. (1887.) The cause of action accrued in 1875. In 1877 defendant, who was in business in O., in this state, changed his place of business to D., in Dakota territory. From that time until 1880 his family remained in O., when his wife joined him in Dakota, and remained there about four months. In 1881 his family all joined him in Dakota. The principal part of the time from 1877 until 1881 his family resided in the place occupied by him previous to his departure. He occasionally visited O., but did not make that his usual place of abode. Held, Sufficient to sustain a finding that his "usual place of residence" was not in O., and that the statute of limitations did not run. Forbes v. Thomas, 22 Neb. 541 (35 N. W. 411).

Husband.

12. (1904.) The general rule is that the domicile of the husband is the domicile of the wife. Isaacs v. Isaacs, 71 Neb. 537 (99 N. W. 268).

Married women.

13. (1882.) The wife's domicile is that of her husband. Swaney v. Hutchins, 13 Neb. 266 (13 N. W. 282).

14. (1886.) The general rule is that the domicile of the wife follows that of the husband. This is based upon the unity of husband and wife, and generally implies continuing, though temporarily interrupted, cohabitation. Proof of the domicile of the husband is sufficient prima facie to establish that of the wife. Smith v. Smith, 19 Neb. 706 (28 N. W. 296).

Minors.

15. (1901.) An emancipated minor may acquire a residence of his own. Russell v. State, 62 Neb. 512 (87 N. W. 344).

16. (1907.) The domicile of the parents is presumably the residence of their minor children, but that presumption may be overcome by facts and circumstances showing a different condition. Wirsig v. Scott, 79 Neb. 322 (112 N. W. 655).

Allegation of residence.

17. (1901.) Allegation that defendant has continuously resided in Nebraska ever since "on or about January 13, 1888," sufficiently indicates such a residence on and after January 24, 1889, as against a motion, after verdict in favor of defendant, for judgment for plaintiff. Connor v. Becker, 62 Neb. 856 (87 N. W. 1065).

Right of widow to possession, see Descent and Distribution, § 22.

Right to homestead, see Homesteads.

Dower as supporting partition suit, see Partition, § 5.

Nature of right.

1. (1898.) The dower right of a wife in the real estate of her husband, while inchoate, is not a possessory right, but is a present, subsisting right or interest of a legal character, and can only be extinguished by the voluntary release or act of the wife or operation of law. Adler & Sons Clothing Co. v. Hellman, 55 Neb. 266 (75 N. W. 877).

Statutory provisions.

2. (1905.) The assignment of dower is not the settlement of an estate nor any part of a settlement of the estate of a deceased person. It is not a matter of probate, for it has nothing whatever to do with the probate of a will. Swobe v. Marsh, 73 Neb. 331 (102 N. W. 619).

Property subject to dower.

3. (1885.) Where a husband conveys lands in this state while his wife is a non-resident thereof, she has no dower interest in the lands thus conveyed. Atkins v. Atkins, 18 Neb. 474 (25 N. W. 724).

4. (1886.) In this state a widow is entitled to dower, or the use, during her natural life, of one-third part of all the lands whereof her husband was seized, of all estate of inheritance at any time during the marriage, unless she is lawfully barred thereof. Horste v. Hotaling, 20 Neb. 178 (29 N. W. 299).

5. (1891.) The wife of an assignee of a purchaser of a contract of sale of school land executed by the state upon payment of one-tenth of the purchase price, has no dower interest in the land as against a purchaser from her husband. Crawl v. Harrington, 33 Neb. 107 (49 N. W. 1118).

6. (1895.) When lawful marriage of a man and woman and the ownership of real estate by the former concur, an inchoate dower right attaches in the nature of a charge or incumbrance upon the real estate of the husband; and when such right has once attached, it means and continues a charge or incumbrance upon the real estate, unless released by the voluntary act of the wife or be extinguished by operation of law, and is consummate upon the death of the husband. Butler v. Fitzgerald, 43 Neb. 192 (61 N. W. 640; 47 Am. St. Rep. 741; 27 L. R. A. 252).

Digitized by Google

7. (1895.) The statute of this state, prescribing in what real estate of the husband a wife shall be entitled to dower, is but declaratory of the common law. Butler v. Fitzgerald, 43 Neb. 192 (61 N. W. 640; 47 Am. St. Rep. 741; 27 L. R. A. 252).

8. (1897.) The lands of a husband during his life are subject to his wife's inchoate right of dower therein; and, at the instant of his death intestate, the law transmutes the inchoate dower lien into an absolute dower estate, subtracts it from the lands of the intestate and vests the right thereto in his widow. Motley v. Motley, 53 Neb. 375 (73 N. W. 738; 68 Am. St. Rep. 608).

9. (1898.) A widow in this state is entitled to dower in all lands whereof her husband was seized of an estate of inheritance at any time during marriage, unless she has been lawfully barred thereof. Pinkham v. Pinkham, 55 Neb. 729 (76 N. W. 411).

10. (1900.) A widow is entitled to dower in the lands owned by her intestate husband at the time of his death unless barred therefrom in the manner prescribed by the statute. Motley v. Motley, 60 Neb. 593 (83 N. W. 830).

11. (1903.) The wife of a devisee has an inchoate right of dower in his share of the lands devised, and a decree in partition, which bars her of any right, title or interest in such lands, is erroneous. Schick v. Whitcomb, 68 Neb. 784 (94 N. W. 1023).

12. (1904.) The heirs of a vendee in possession under a contract of sale of real estate are not possessed of "an estate of inheritance" at common law; hence, the widow of the deceased is not legally entitled to be endowed thereof. Cutler v. Meeker, 71 Neb. 732 (99 N. W. 514).

Dower not subject to debts.

13. (1897.) The lands of an intestate descend to his heirs subject to his unsecured debts; but his widow's dower estate in such lands is not incumbered with such debts. Motley v. Motley, 53 Neb. 375 (73 N. W. 738; 68 Am. St. Rep. 608).

14. (1904.) An unassigned dower interest in land is not the subject of a leasehold contract conveying any interest in the lands. Jackson v. O'Rorke, 71 Neb. 418 (98 N. W. 1068).

Bar and release.

——— Statutory provisions.

15. (1893.) Chapter 57, Session Laws of 1889, providing for the descent of real property and the distribution of personal property of intestates, the disposition of homesteads of intestates, the barring of an insane wife's interest in the lands of her husband by deed of her guardian, and the abolition of the estates of dower and curtesy, is void, because it contains more than one subject. Trumble v. Trumble, 37 Neb. 340 (55 N. W. 869).

16. (1897.) The statutes of the state expressly provide how a widow may be lawfully barred of dower in the lands of which her husband died seized, and this bar is made to depend upon her voluntary act. Motley v. Motley, 53 Neb. 375 (73 N. W. 738; 68 Am. St. Rep. 608).

17. (1900.) The fact that the husband died after "Baker's Decedent Law" (Session Laws 1889, ch. 57) was adopted and before it was adjudged to be unconstitutional, does not in any way affect the widow's right to dower. Motley v. Motley, 60 Neb. 593 (83 N. W. 830).

——— Ante-nuptial settlement or agreement.

18. (1898.) The manner in which dower may be barred by an antenuptial arrangement between the parties concerned is regulated by statute, and in the absence of any contravening equitable considerations the method prescribed by statute is exclusive. Fellers v. Fellers, 54 Neb. 694 (74 N. W. 1077).

19. (1898.) An alleged antenuptial contract whereby each party agreed to claim no interest in the property of the other after marriage, and by which the proposed husband was required after the making of the antenuptial contract to make his will in such terms that his intended wife, thereunder, would be entitled to a certain estate in his real property, held to be an entirety; that the two above provisions were interdependent, and that, therefore, the alleged antenuptial agreement was but an executory contract, which, in view of the statute prescribing the method of barring dower in this state, is unenforceable. Fellers v. Fellers, 54 Neb. 694 (74 N. W. 1077).

——— Divorce and alimony.

20. (1885.) Upon a divorce being granted, a decree in favor of the wife for permanent alimony will bar her right to any further claims against the estate of the husband. Tatro v. Tatro, 18 Neb. 395 (25 N. W. 571; 54 Am. Rep. 820).

Digitized by Google

21. (1885.) Under section 23 of chapter 25, Compiled Statutes, entitled "Divorce and Alimony," a wife, upon obtaining a divorce for the cause of misconduct, etc., of the husband, is entitled to dower in his lands in the same manner as if he were dead. Tatro v. Tatro, 18 Neb. 395 (25 N. W. 571; 54 Am. Rep. 820).

22. (1885.) If the wife make no demand for dower, and the court in making a division of the property of the husband, in the nature of permanent alimony, awards a sum in gross to her, it will be deemed to include all her interest in the husband's estate, and will bar her claim for dower, unless a contrary intent is shown in the decree. Tatro v. Tatro, 18 Neb. 395 (25 N. W. 571; 54 Am. Rep. 820).

23. (1898.) A wife, by praying for a reasonable sum as permanent alimony, elects to take such sum in lieu of dower in her husband's lands. Walton v. Walton, 57 Neb. 102 (77 N. W. 392).

——— Execution of mortgage.

24. (1885.) A married woman who has not joined with her husband in the execution of a mortgage upon real estate not the homestead, if made a party defendant in an action to foreclose the mortgage, must assert her inchoate right of dower in the mortgaged premises or she will be barred by the decree. Miller v. Boehme, 17 Neb. 377 (22 N. W. 797).

25. (1885.) Where a husband alone executed a mortgage upon real estate, and in a second mortgage the wife joins, and on a foreclosure of the second mortgage the premises are sold but the proceeds are insufficient to satisfy the first mortgage the wife's right of dower is barred. Miller v. Boehme, 17 Neb. 377 (22 N. W. 797).

26. (1898.) The wife may make her release of her dower interest, or by signature to a mortgage that it be subjected to the lien and operation thereof, matter of forceful consideration for the conveyance to her of other property. Adler & Sons Clothing Co. v. Hellman, 55 Neb. 266 (75 N. W. 877).

——— Estoppel.

27. (1897.) A widow made party to a proceeding by her husband's administrator to sell the lands of which he died seized, to pay debts allowed against his estate does not estop herself from claiming her dower estate in the lands sold solely because she neglected to appear in such proceeding. Motley v. Motley, 53 Neb. 375 (73 N. W. 738; 68 Am. St. Rep. 608).

28. (1897.) A widow does not estop herself from claiming her dower estate in lands sold by her husband's administrator because she attended the administrator's sale, made no objections thereto, and neglected to advise the bidders thereat that she had a dower estate in such lands. Motley v. Motley, 53 Neb. 375 (73 N. W. 738; 68 Am. St. Rep. 608).

29. (1897.) A widow is not estopped from claiming her dower estate in the lands sold at administrator's sale because she received a part of the proceeds of such sale as her "distributive share of such estate"; such payment not having been made to nor received by her in lieu of her dower estate. Motley v. Motley, 53 Neb. 375 (73 N. W. 738; 68 Am. St. Rep. 608).

——— Judicial sale of property.

30. (1895.) The sale of the real estate of the husband under execution on a judgment against him alone, followed by judicial confirmation and conveyance, does not extinguish the inchoate dower right of the wife in such real estate, and upon the death of her husband the wife is entitled to have her dower assigned out of such real estate. Butler v. Fitzgerald, 43 Neb. 192 (61 N. W. 640; 47 Am. St. Rep. 741; 27 L. R. A. 252).

31. (1395.) Real estate which has been sold under execution on a judgment against the husband alone, such sale followed by judicial confirmation and conveyance, is real estate aliened by the husband, within the meaning of section 7, chapter 23, Compiled Statutes 1893. Butler v. Fitzgerald, 43 Neb. 192 (61 N. W. 640; 47 Am. St. Rep. 741; 27 L. R. A. 252).

32. (1395.) The phrase "enhanced in value," found in section 7, chapter 23, Compiled Statutes 1893, is limited in its meaning to appreciation in the value of real estate by reason of improvements put thereon by the alienee. Butler v. Fitzgerald, 43 Neb. 192 (61 N. W. 640; 47 Am. St. Rep. 741; 27 L. R. A. 252).

33. (1897.) The sale of the lands of his intestate by an administrator, made in pursuance of a license therefor to pay debts allowed against his estate, does not, of itself, divest the widow's dower estate in such lands. Motley v. Motley, 53 Neb. 375 (73 N. W. 738; 68 Am. St. Rep. 608).

34. (1897.) Where the record of a proceeding, which resulted in a district court's licensing an administrator to sell the lands of his intestate, discloses that such intestate left a widow, this is, of itself, notice to a purchaser at such sale of such widow's dower estate in such lands. Motley v. Motley, 53 Neb. 375 (73 N. W. 738; 68 Am. St. Rep. 608).

35. (1901.) The sale of real estate of the husband under an execution on a judgment against him alone, does not extinguish the wife's inchoate right of dower. Martin v. Abbott, 1 Unof. 59 (95 N. W. 356).

Assignment of dower.

——— In general.

36. (1885.) When a widow is entitled to dower in the lands of which her husband died seized, and her right to dower is not disputed by the heirs or devisees, or any person claiming under them or either of them, it may be assigned to her in whatever county the lands may lie, by the county court of the county in which the estate of the husband is settled, upon the application of the widow. Guthman v. Guthman, 18 Neb. 98 (24 N. W. 435).

37. (1889.) The acceptance by the probate judge of the assignment of dower as set-off by commissioners, and recording the same, is, under section 9, chapter 23, Compiled Statutes, equivalent to a confirmation of the assignment. Serry v. Curry, 26 Neb. 353 (42 N. W. 97).

38. (1895.) In estimating the value of real estate, aliened by the husband during his marriage, for the purpose of assigning his widow dower therein, the value of the real estate is to be estimated as it is at the time of the assignment of dower, excluding the increase in value of the real estate resulting from improvements made thereon by the alienee subsequent to the date of alienation. Butler v. Fitzgerald, 43 Neb. 192 (61 N. W. 640; 47 Am. St. Rep. 741; 27 L. R. A. 252).

39. (1905.) The assignment of dower is not the settlement of an estate nor any part of a settlement of the estate of a deceased person. It is not a matter of probate for it has nothing whatever to do with the probate of a will. Swobe v. Marsh, 73 Neb. 331 (102 N. W. 619).

——— Petition for assignment.

40. (1889.) In a petition filed by a widow in the probate court to have dower in the lands of which her husband died seized, assigned to her, the failure to allege in such petition that her right to dower "is not disputed by the heirs or devisees" is not fatal to the jurisdiction of the court. Serry v. Curry, 26 Neb. 353 (42 N. W. 97).

41. (1889.) When a petition for dower is filed, it is proper for the judge to enter an order directing the manner of service of notice; but the failure to enter such order does not oust the court of jurisdiction and render its proceedings void. Serry v. Curry, 26 Neb. 353 (42 N. W. 97).

——— Notice of assignment.

42. (1889.) The manner of giving notice of the assignment of dower interest to the widow by the probate court is largely discretionary with such court; and when such notice is read to the children by the widow and explained by her to them, and approved by the probate court, it is sufficient. Serry v. Curry, 26 Neb. 353 (42 N. W. 97).

——— Limitation of action.

43. (1901.) An action for dower in the district court is within the statute of limitations and must be brought within ten years from the time it accrued. Beall v. McMenemy, 63 Neb. 70 (88 N. W. 134; 93 Am. St. Rep. 427).

——— Jurisdiction to assign.

44. (1885.) In order to oust the county court of jurisdiction to assign dower the right of the applicant to such dower must be disputed by presenting an issue of fact which, if established by proof, would defeat her claim of dower, and such issue must be one which the county court by its organization is unable to try. Guthman v. Guthman, 18 Neb. 98 (24 N. W. 435).

45. (1897.) Where the right of dower of a widow is not disputed, it may be assigned by the county court, under the provisions of sections 8-11, chapter 23, Compiled Statutes. If such a right is disputed, it may be established by a decree of the district court. Clemons v. Heelan, 52 Neb. 287 (72 N. W. 270).

46. (1904.) In order to oust the county court of jurisdiction to assign a dower or homestead the right of the widow must be disputed by presenting an issue of fact which, if established by proof, would defeat her claim of dower or homestead, and such issue must be one which the county court by its organization is unable to try. Tyson v. Tyson, 71 Neb. 438 (98 N. W. 1076).

47. (1904.) When a widow is entitled to dower and homestead in lands of which her husband died seized, and the facts upon which her right of homestead and dower depend are not in dispute, the county court of the county in which the estate of the husband is settled has jurisdiction to assign such dower and homestead. Tyson v. Tyson, 71 Neb. 438 (98 N. W. 1076).

48. (1905.) The county court has jurisdiction to assign dower only when the right to dower is not disputed by the heirs and devisees or any persons claiming under them or either of them. Swobe v. Marsh, 73 Neb. 331 (102 N. W. 619).

49. (1905.) The district court has jurisdiction in proceedings to assign dower. Swobe v. Marsh, 73 Neb. 331 (102 N. W. 619).

Liability of purchaser pending action for dower.

50. (1904.) One who purchases real estate from a defendant in an action brought to recover dower, after a decree of the district court in favor of such defendant and while the case is duly pending in the supreme court on appeal, with actual notice of the plaintiff's claim of dower, takes his title subject to such claim. Martin v. Abbott, 72 Neb. 89 (100 N. W. 142).

51. (1904.) Where an appeal is taken from a decree for defendant, in an action to recover dower, where no supersedeas bond is provided for by statute and none is filed, the decree appealed from will not protect a purchaser who takes the title with actual notice of its condition and of the pendency of the appeal. Martin v. Abbott, 72 Neb. 89 (100 N. W. 142).

Sale and conveyance of dower.

52. (1839.) Where a widow after dower has been assigned, and she is in possession, conveys her interest to another, the assignee will take her dower interest in the estate. Gerry v. Curry, 26 Neb. 353 (42 N. W. 97).

53. (1903.) Assignment of an interest in a reversion fund may be oral and may be proved by oral testimony. Curtis v. Zutavern, 67 Neb. 183 (93 N. W. 400).

54. (1903.) A quitclaim deed of lands, made after the confirmation of a partition sale to the purchaser at such sale, may or may not be evidence of an assignment of the reversion of the widow's dower, but it would not of itself constitute such an assignment. Curtis v. Zutavern, 67 Neb. 183 (93 N. W. 400).

55. (1903.) Where one-third of the net proceeds of a partition sale has been delivered to the assignee of the widow's dower for his use during her life only, and on his bond conditioned for its repayment into court at her death, it will come back into court for distribution in the same proportions as originally decreed for the remainder of the estate unless transfers have intervened. Curtis v. Zutavern, 67 Neb. 183 (93 N. W. 400).

56. (1906.) Where a wife joins her husband in a conveyance of their realty by warranty deed in form, but in fact as security for a debt which is paid by the husband, the wife has a dower interest in the land as against a subsequent purchaser with notice. Wild v. Storz Brewing Co., 77 Neb. 94 (108 N. W. 145).

I. ESTABLISHMENT AND MAINTENANCE.

Drainage and reclamation districts and commissions.

1. (1904.) The drainage and reclamation of large tracts of swamp and overflow or submerged lands is a matter of general public utility and concern, for which the legislature may provide by the creation of local administrative organizations or political corporations. Neal v. Vansickle, 72 Neb. 105 (100 N. W. 200).

1*a*. (1907.) The act of 1905 (laws 1905, ch. 161), relative to "the organization and government of drainage districts; for the reclamation and protection of swamps, overflowed or submerged lands," does not contemplate the inclusion of a railroad company's right of way, depot grounds and appurtenances as a part of the district. Barnes v. Minor, 80 Neb. 189 (114 N. W. 146).

1*b*. (1907.) The power of the legislature over the subject of procedure, within limits not impairing the inherent powers or jurisdiction of the courts, is not restricted; and it is competent to require, by statute, a preliminary judicial ascertainment of facts, the existence of which is made a condition precedent to the creation of a public corporation. Barnes v. Minor, 80 Neb. 189 (114 N. W. 146).

1*c*. (1907.) The term "marsh or swamp lands," as used in laws 1881, ch. 51, has a wider significance than the terms "marsh" or "swamps." The power is conferred by this act to drain lands which are not strictly speaking "marshes" or "swamps," but which are "marsh or swamp lands," meaning thereby lands which are so situated as to be rendered difficult or incapable of successful cultivation by reason of retaining in the soil or carrying on the surface an excessive quantity of water during certain portions of the year, even though at other times they may be as solid, dry and firm as lands in general. Campbell v. Youngson, 80 Neb. 322 (114 N. W. 415).

1*d*. (1907.) The drainage act of 1881 (laws 1881, ch. 51) confers the power upon county authorities to create drainage districts for the purpose of draining "marsh or swamp lands" alone, and does not confer power to change the channel or divert the flow of running streams or natural surface water drains for the purpose of relieving the lands of riparian proprietors lower down the stream from periodical overflows in seasons of freshet. Campbell v. Youngson, 80 Neb. 322 (114 N. W. 415).

1*e*. (1907). Under the facts set forth in the opinion, held that the county board of Kearney county is without jurisdiction to change the channel and divert the waters of the streams mentioned in the opinion from their natural flow for the purpose of preventing overflows, nor has it the authority to take part of the plaintiff's land against his will for the purpose of draining the lands embraced within the proposed drainage district. Campbell v. Youngson, 80 Neb. 322 (114 N. W. 415).

1*f*. (1908.) The constitution does not prohibit contemporary legislative acts providing different modes for the formation of drainage districts. State, ex rel. Harris, v. Hanson, 80 Neb. 724 (115 N. W. 294).

1*g*. (1907.) Chapter 153, laws 1907, providing for the formation of drainage districts, and requiring the county commissioners to fix the boundaries thereof "with a view to promoting the interest of said drainage district," and providing that the district may condemn private property for its use in constructing drains, dykes, or levees, is not open to the objection that it permits the organization of a corporation in furtherance of private interests, and permits the taking of property for private purposes. State, ex rel. Harris, v. Hanson, 80 Neb. 724 (115 N. W. 294).

1*h*. (1908.) From the language used in chapter 153, laws 1907, it is apparent that the legislature intended that the provisions of the act should not be applied except that the county board should prescribe a district which, if organized and improved, would in fact promote the public health, convenience or welfare. State, ex rel. Harris, v. Hanson, 80 Neb. 738 (117 N. W. 412).

Establishment by landowners over lands of others.

2. (1881.) Three individuals, by forming a corporation, may locate and open a drain across the property of others without their consent, under section 19, article IV, chapter 39, Compiled Statutes. Jenal v. Green Island Draining Co., 12 Neb. 163 (10 N. W. 547).

3. (1881.) Drains or levees for the reclamation of wet or overflowed lands can be constructed across the lands of others, and the cost assessed thereon, except by consent, only in cases where the public welfare will be subserved. Jenal v. Green Island Draining Co., 12 Neb. 163 (10 N. W. 547).

Proceedings for establishment.

4. (1887.) In a proceeding to establish a drain or ditch, under chapter 89 of Compiled Statutes, the jurisdictional facts are, first, a petition signed by one or more owners of land to be affected by the proposed ditch; second, the bond provided by statute; third, that the proposed improvement is necessary, and will be conducive to the health, convenience, and welfare of the public; and fourth, the statutory notice, and the failure of the county board to find that the signers of the petition are owners of lands to be affected is not jurisdictional. Dakota County v. Cheney, 22 Neb. 437 (35 N. W. 211); (1891) Darst v. Griffin, 31 Neb. 668 (48 N. W. 819); (1901) Dodge County v. Acom, 61 Neb. 376 (85 N. W. 292).

5. (1897.) In a proceeding to establish a drainage ditch under article 1, chapter 89 of the Compiled Statutes, one of the jurisdictional facts which the county board is required to find and enter upon its journal is whether the line described in the petition for the proposed ditch is the best route for the improvement. State, ex rel. Union P. R. Co., v. Colfax County, 51 Neb. 28 (70 N. W. 500).

6. (1900.) The provisions of section 4, article I, chapter 89, Compiled Statutes, relating to drainage of swamp lands, must be strictly complied with before a county board can acquire jurisdiction to establish and construct a drain thereunder; and a bond that fails to comply with the provisions of said section 4 is void, and confers no jurisdiction upon the board to act, although such bond may be a good common-law bond. Casey v. Burt County, 59 Neb. 624 (81 N. W. 851).

6*a*. (1908.) The establishment of the boundaries of a proposed drainage district is prima facie evidence that the county commissioners proceeded regularly in the establishment thereof and that all conditions precedent have been complied with. State, ex rel. Harris, v. Hanson, 80 Neb. 724 (115 N. W. 294).

——— Petition.

7. (1901.) A petition which describes with certainty the point of beginning of a drainage ditch and the direction in which the same is to run, giving the sections through which it passes, and the place where terminating, and providing that the line may vary from a straight line to avoid improvements and take advantage of the ground, but not more than 160 rods, is a sufficient compliance with the provisions of the statute to give the board jurisdiction to act in respect to the same. Dodge County v. Acom, 61 Neb. 376 (85 N. W. 292).

——— Submission of question to popular vote.

7*a*. (1908.) Section 22 of the bill of rights (Const., art. I), providing that "all elections shall be free, and there shall be no hindrance or impediment of the right of a qualified voter to exercise the elective franchise," does not apply to an election upon the formation of a drainage district, nor one for the election of officers therefor. State, ex rel. Harris, v. Hanson, 80 Neb. 724 (115 N. W. 294).

7*b*. (1908.) After the county board has fixed the boundaries of a district the reclamation or protection of which would be of public utility, it is competent for the legislature to permit the property owners within the proposed district to determine by vote whether or not they will avail themselves of the benefits of the act, and the provisions permitting none but property owners to vote, and authorizing each owner of real estate to cast a vote for every acre of land or town lot which he owns within the proposed district, and permitting non-resident owners and foreign corporations owning real estate therein to vote upon the question of organization and for the officers of the district, are not unlawful, nor does such election call for the exercise of the elective franchise secured to all electors by section 22 of the bill of rights. State, ex rel. Harris, v. Hanson, 80 Neb. 738 (117 N. W. 412).

——— Hearing and determination of questions.

8. (1895.) Where a petition is filed for the construction of a county ditch, and the county commissioners on the same day adjourned and, without any special session being called, two of the members met a few days later and ordered the proposed ditch constructed, and special assessment levied for that purpose, such proceedings are void and of no effect. Morris v. Merrell, 44 Neb. 423 (62 N. W. 865).

9. (1901.) Where the record shows that a county board adjourned its sitting at the court house, and went in a body to view the proposed ditch and that they made such view, and afterwards resumed their sitting, such act is a compliance with the statute, and the view made will be regarded as the act of the board and not of individuals. Dodge County v. Acom, 61 Neb. 376 (85 N. W. 292).

10. (1907.) Whether a drainage ditch proposed to be constructed pursuant to article I, chapter 89, Compiled Statutes 1905, will be conducive to the public health, convenience or welfare, or whether the route thereof is practicable, are questions of governmental or administrative policy, and are not of judicial cognizance, and jurisdiction over them by appeal or otherwise cannot be conferred upon the courts by statute. Tyson v. Washington County, 78 Neb. 211 (110 N. W. 634).

10*a*. (1908.) Chapter 153, laws 1907, provides that, "whenever it will be conducive to the public health, convenience or welfare either to drain * * * any land which will be improved by drainage, or to build or construct any dyke or levee to prevent overflow by water, * * * a drainage district may be formed," the boundaries of which are to be fixed by the county board upon the filing of a petition by interested property owners, and providing that the county board shall fix the boundaries "with a view to promoting the interest of said drainage district, if formed, and with a view to doing justice and equity to all persons." Held, That it is a necessary inference from the language used that the board shall determine the public utility of the proposed district, and that it is not the imperative duty of the board to fix the boundaries if the reclamation and improvement of the district would not promote the public health, convenience or welfare. State, ex rel. Harris, v. Hanson, 80 Neb. 738 (117 N. W. 412).

——— Effect of irregularities.

11. (1891.) Where the county board has jurisdiction, irregularities in the proceedings will not render the assessment void. Darst v. Griffin, 31 Neb. 668 (48 N. W. 819).

12. (1901.) Where, in proceedings under the provisions of article I, chapter 89, Compiled Statutes 1899, for the establishment of a drainage ditch, a county board acquires jurisdiction over the subject-matter under consideration, any mere irregularity or want of exact compliance with all of the statutory provisions will be deemed insufficient to render void the whole proceedings taken regarding such matters. Dodge County v. Acom, 61 Neb. 376 (85 N. W. 292).

13. (1901.) An irregularity in not apportioning and reporting the number of lineal feet and cubic yards to each lot or tract of land according to benefits, is a harmless error, since the parties complaining made no effort to bid on the work of construction. Dodge County v. Acom, 61 Neb. 376 (85 N. W. 292).

14. (1905.) When a person files a claim for damages to his premises caused by the location of a proposed drainage ditch, he thereby waives objection to any irregularities in the proceedings to establish the same. Gutschow v. Washington County, 74 Neb. 794 (105 N. W. 548).

14*a*. (1907.) In a proceeding to establish a drainage ditch, if the county board possesses jurisdiction and authority to act in the premises, injunction will not lie on account of mere irregularities in the exercise of the powers conferred. Campbell v. Youngson, 80 Neb. 322 (114 N. W. 415).

Reconstruction of insufficient drain.

15. (1904.) Where a ditch constructed jointly by two counties has proved insufficient to drain properly the lands it was intended to benefit, the county board of one of the counties has the power to adopt a new system of drains of which the old ditch, straightened, widened, altered or deepened, shall form a part, and assess the cost of location and construction upon the lands benefited, upon the proper proceedings for that purpose being taken; and the fact that prior to the adoption of the new scheme of drainage it had failed to clean out the old ditch for several years is immaterial. Morris v. Washington County, 72 Neb. 174 (100 N. W. 144).

Location.

16. (1901.) Where an engineer is appointed by the board, makes a final survey, sets grade stakes, notes intersections, and makes a profile and plat, fixes the dimensions and slopes of the banks, etc., and his report is confirmed by the board, the action taken will be deemed to be that of the board and in compliance with the statute. The fact that the line as finally established varies from that described in the petition, but for a less distance than is allowed by the petition and by statute, does not affect the validity of such proceedings. Dodge County v. Acom, 61 Neb. 376 (85 N. W. 292).

Proceedings for construction.

17. (1901.) Where the engineer divided the proposed ditch into working stations, and showed in each the distance, and the number of cubic feet to be removed, together with the cost of removal, at the estimate upon which the total cost is arrived at, this, with the report of the assessment to be levied on each parcel or tract of land for special benefits, imparts all the information that would be necessary in case of an apportionment of the number of lineal feet and cubic yards to each lot or tract of land according to the benefits which will result to each from the improvement, and is a sufficient compliance with the provisions of the statute in that respect. Dodge County v. Acom, 61 Neb. 376 (85 N. W. 292).

Contracts for construction.

18. (1894.) The provision of section 20, chapter 89, Compiled Statutes, for the reletting of contracts where contractors for drainage ditches have failed to complete their work within the time specified, is designed for the benefit of the persons whose property is chargeable with such improvements, and is not the exclusive method of determining the amount of damage on account of such failure. McDonald & Penfield v. Dodge County, 41 Neb. 905 (60 N. W. 366).

19. (1894.) An engineer, who examined the work two months after it was abandoned by the contractors and found the original stakes showing the depth of the ditch and was able to verify his estimate from such stakes, held competent to testify to the cost of completing such work in accordance with the contract. McDonald & Penfield v. Dodge County, 41 Neb. 905 (60 N. W. 366).

20. (1905.) A contract which has never been begun is a contract "not completed within the time specified," under the provisions of section 20, article I, chapter 89, Compiled Statutes 1903, providing for the reletting of such contracts. Gutschow v. Washington County, 74 Neb. 378 (104 N. W. 602).

21. (1905.) The fact that the person to whom a contract is let under the provision of section 1, article I, chapter 89, Compiled Statutes 1903, requiring the contract to be let to the "lowest responsible bidder," is the only bidder, does not render the contract illegal, in the absence of fraud or collusion, or of any showing that the price is excessive or unreasonable. Gutschow v. Washington County, 74 Neb. 378 (104 N. W. 602).

22. (1905.) A bid which proposes "to construct, excavate and complete by working sections" at a fixed price per cubic yard of earth responds to a notice that required bids to be made "by each working section," since the proposal means at the same price per yard for each working section or for the whole work. Gutschow v. Washington County, 74 Neb. 378 (104 N. W. 602).

Mandamus to compel construction.

23. (1897.) A mandamus will not issue to a county board to compel the construction of a drainage ditch under article I, chapter 89, Compiled Statutes, where the relator is not shown to be interested in the improvement, independent of that which he has in common with the public at large. Van Horn v. State, ex rel. Allen, 51 Neb. 232 (70 N. W. 941).

Payment from general fund.

24. (1898.) The provisions of article I, chapter 89, Compiled Statutes, examined, and held to require the formation of a special ditch fund, which alone is available for payments for improvements made entirely within a single county, under the provisions of said article, and for the purpose of making such payments moneys can only be obtained from the county general fund by borrowing as provided by section 26 of the said article. Hall v. State, ex rel. Renard, 54 Neb. 280 (74 N. W. 590).

Damages from construction or maintenance.

25. (1895.) The owner of land appropriated by a county for a drainage ditch is entitled to recover the value of the land taken and any damage to the land not appropriated less special benefits to the latter. Martin v. Fillmore County, 44 Neb. 719 (62 N. W. 863).

26. (1895.) Where a petition against a county for damages alleges that a county ditch has been constructed through and across plaintiff's land, and the county in its answer admits that fact without pleading payment, a verdict for defendant is contrary to law. Martin v. Fillmore County, 44 Neb. 719 (62 N. W. 863).

27. (1903.) A county is not liable to landowners for injuries caused by the discharge of surface water from ditches constructed by the county authorities diverting such water from its natural course. Stocker v. Nemaha County, 4 Unof. 230 (93 N. W. 721).

——— Set-off of special benefits.

28. (1905.) Where an action is brought to recover damages occasioned by the construction of a drainage ditch, and it appears that the special benefits received by any particular tract of land exceed that portion of the cost of the ditch apportioned to it, the special benefits in excess of the cost may be set off against consequential damages. Gutschow v. Washington County, 74 Neb. 800 (107 N. W. 127).

29. (1905.) Where an assessment to the amount of the special benefits he has received has already been assessed against the owner of lands over which a drainage ditch is proposed to be constructed, the value of such special benefits should not be deducted from any damages accruing to the land not actually taken for the construction of the proposed improvement. Gutschow v. Washington County, 74 Neb. 794 (105 N. W. 548).

II. ASSESSMENTS AND SPECIAL TAXES.

Constitutional and statutory provisions.

30. (1891.) The provisions of section 6, article IX of the constitution, that "the legislature may vest the corporate authority of cities, towns and villages, with power to make local improvements by special assessments or by special taxation of the property benefited," do not prohibit the legislature from conferring the power to make local improvements by special assessment or taxation of property benefited. Darst v. Griffin, 31 Neb. 668 (48 N. W. 819).

31. (1901.) The statute providing for the establishment of drainage ditches is not in violation of any of the provisions of sections 3, 13, 21, or 24 of article I of the constitution. Dodge County v. Acom, 61 Neb. 376 (85 N. W. 292).

32. (1904.) The provisions of the drainage law, sections 1-28, article I, chapter 89, Compiled Statutes, confer power upon the county board to provide means for raising a fund from which to compensate landowners whose property has been taken or damaged in the construction of the proposed improvement, and its provisions do not violate section 21, article I of the constitution, providing that the property of no person shall be taken or damaged for public use without just compensation therefor. Morris v. Washington County, 72 Neb. 174 (100 N. W. 144).

Estoppel or waiver as to objections.

33. (1887.) A party objecting to the construction of a proposed ditch should act with reasonable promptness in urging his objection, and should not wait until the completion of the improvement before alleging an entire want of authority to make the same. Dakota County v. Cheney, 22 Neb. 437 (35 N. W. 211).

34. (1891.) A party who sees a public improvement being carried on calculated to benefit his property, cannot wait until it is completed and the expenditure has been made and his property received the benefit before proceeding to avoid the tax, but must, as a condition of relief by injunction, do equity by paying the amount thereof justly chargeable against such property. Darst v. Griffin, 31 Neb. 668 (48 N. W. 819).

Benefit to property.

35. (1901.) In determining special benefits accruing to land by reason of the construction of a drainage ditch, it is proper to take into consideration whatever will come to the land from the drain to make it more valuable for tillage, or more desirable as a place of residence, or more valuable in the general market, the true and final test being what will be the influence of the proposed improvement on the market value of the property. Dodge County v. Acom, 61 Neb. 376 (85 N. W. 292).

36. (1904.) Assessments upon private property to defray the cost of local improvements are void if in excess of the benefits conferred. Neal v. Vansickle, 72 Neb. 105 (100 N. W. 200).

Proceedings for assessment.

37. (1901.) Evidence examined, and held to support the finding and order of the county board levying special assessments for benefits received by reason of the construction of a drainage ditch. Dodge County v. Acom, 61 Neb. 376 (85 N. W. 292).

38. (1904.) The county board, in fixing the assessments to pay for the construction of a drainage ditch, under the provisions of article I, chapter 89, Compiled Statutes, 1899, acts judicially. Dodge County v. Acom, 72 Neb. 71 (100 N. W. 136).

39. (1904.) Assessments upon private property to defray the cost of local improvements are void if levied without notice to persons upon whose property they are imposed, or affording them an opportunity to be heard. Neal v. Vansickle, 72 Neb. 105 (100 N. W. 200).

Review, correction or setting aside of assessment.

40. (1891.) Where objections are made to certain assessments on the ground of irregularities, the court, as a condition of granting relief, may require the property owner to do equity by paying the amount which his property is benefited by the improvement. Darst v. Griffin, 31 Neb. 668 (48 N. W. 819).

41. (1901.) The provisions of section 28, to the effect that assessments shall not be set aside in consequence of any error or irregularity committed or appearing in any of the proceedings, must be given the force and effect fairly justified by the language used when applied to errors, irregularities or non-compliance with the strict letter of every provision of the statute not going to the question of jurisdiction. Dodge County v. Acom, 61 Neb. 376 (82 N. W. 292).

42. (1904.) From the judgment and orders of the county board, fixing assessments to pay for a drainage ditch, error will lie to the district court, and the judgment of that court may be reviewed on such proceedings in the supreme court. Dodge County v. Acom, 72 Neb. 71 (100 N. W. 136).

43. (1904.) On a petition in error from the judgment of the county board in a proceeding to fix assessments for the construction of a drainage ditch, its findings and orders are entitled to the same weight as the verdict of a jury, or the findings and judgment of a court, and will not be reversed or set aside unless it appears that the evidence is insufficient to sustain them and they are clearly wrong. Dodge County v. Acom, 72 Neb. 71 (100 N. W. 136).

DRUGGISTS.

Sale of intoxicating liquors.

See, also, Intoxicating Liquors, §§ 231-236.

1. (1879.) The general law relating to licensing the sale of intoxicating liquors at retail is general and applies to all persons including druggists. Brown v. State, 9 Neb. 189 (2 N. W. 214).

2. (1885.) A druggist without a permit is absolutely prohibited from selling intoxicating liquors upon any pretext. Such druggist with a permit is equally prohibited from selling except in the best of faith, and strictly for the purposes specified by law. Warrick v. Rounds, 17 Neb. 411 (23 N. W. 785).

3. (1892.) Druggists having permits for the sale of liquors for medical, mechanical, chemical, or sacramental purposes are exempted from the operation of chapter 50 of Compiled Statutes, making it unlawful to keep intoxicating liquors for the purpose of sale without a license. State v. Cloyd, 34 Neb. 600 (52 N. W. 579).

4. (1897.) The prohibiting features of the statute in regard to the sale of intoxicating liquors apply to druggists. Wilson v. Parrish, 52 Neb. 6 (71 N. W. 1010).

Liability for negligence.

6. (1907.) The unlawful sale of a poisonous drug to a minor eighteen years of age, a quantity of which was by said minor administered to another minor to his injury, does not create a cause of action in favor of the father of the latter for loss of his son's services and the expense of medicines and doctor's bills. McKibbin v. Bax & Co., 79 Neb. 577 (113 N. W. 158).

Consideration for mutual grant.

1. (1896.) Adjoining lot owners in a city may, by grant, impose mutual and corresponding restrictions and conditions upon the land owned by each, the mutuality of the covenant in such case being a sufficient consideration for the respective grants. Barr v. Lamaster, 48 Neb. 114 (66 N. W. 1110).

Effect of grant as against mortgagee.

2. (1907.) While an easement in real property cannot be granted by the owner thereof so as to affect the rights of a prior mortgagee, the party claiming the easement has the same rights as any other subsequent incumbrancer. If the easement has attached by lapse of time, he must be made a party to the foreclosure proceeding, and, if not, the purchaser at foreclosure sale must take action to dispute his claimed right before the statute has fully run. Jensen v. Showalter, 79 Neb. 544 (113 N. W. 202).

Acquisition by adverse possession.

3, 4. (1894.) An easement in real estate may be acquired by open, notorious, peaceable, uninterrupted, adverse possession for a period of ten years. Omaha & R. V. R. Co. v. Rickards, 38 Neb. 847 (57 N. W. 739).

5, 6. (1897.) To acquire an easement or way on another's land there must be a use of the way for the length of time which will bar an action for the recovery of title to land, and which is under claim of right, or adverse. Engle v. Hunt, 50 Neb. 358 (69 N. W. 970).

7. (1903.) One who seeks to acquire an easement of maintaining a ditch over another's land by adverse user must maintain it without material change of location for the full statutory period. That he may have had a ditch somewhere upon the land for ten years does not give him a right to maintain it in a new location, or to use an extension thereof made within the period. Dunn v. Thomas, 69 Neb. 683 (96 N. W. 142).

8. (1906.) An easement by prescription can be acquired only by an adverse user for ten years, and the commencement of the time required for the prescription to ripen dates from the time when the party was damaged or had a cause of action arising from the adverse user. Roe v. Howard County, 75 Neb. 448 (106 N. W. 587).

9. (1907.) An easement, being an interest in real estate, can be acquired only by deed; but, by user for the statutory time necessary to gain title to real estate by adverse possession, a grant will be presumed and an easement by prescription established. Jensen v. Showalter, 79 Neb. 544 (113 N. W. 202).

10. (1907.) Where adjoining owners agree to and set apart and stake off each six feet of land on their lot line as an alley or driveway, and use the same for over ten years, each acquires an easement by prescription to the land included in such alley. Jensen v. Showalter, 79 Neb. 544 (113 N. W. 202).

11. (1907.) An easement in real estate may be acquired by open, notorious, uninterrupted, adverse possession for the statutory period of ten years. Agnew v. City of Pawnee City, 79 Neb. 603 (113 N. W. 236).

12. (1907.) An easement in a city street could be acquired by open, notorious, uninterrupted, adverse possession for the statutory period of ten years prior to the statute of 1899. Agnew v. City of Pawnee City, 79 Neb. 603 (113 N. W. 236).

13. (1907.) An easement by prescription may be acquired in a homestead as in other property. Jensen v. Showalter, 79 Neb. 514 (113 N. W. 202).

Extent of right acquired.

14. (1899.) The citizen is entitled to the use and enjoyment of the light and the air over, and the water beneath, the surface of his premises, and, in order that his neighbor may devote his property to a particular use, cannot be compelled to surrender those rights, even if fully paid therefor. Lowe v. Prospect Hill Cemetery Ass'n, 58 Neb. 94 (78 N. W. 488; 46 L. R. A. 237).

15. (1902.) Only a right to enjoy the privilege and no fee title nor right to exclude the owner, can, in any case, be established by mere user of a privilege of flowage. Johnson v. Sherman County Irrigation Co., 63 Neb. 510 (88 N. W. 676).

16. (1902.) A subsequent use for less than ten years of real estate for flowage of water by gradual encroachment without agreement with the owners, and without compensation to them, and not contemplated at the time of the subscription, will not create an interest in the real estate so flowed, nor establish an irrevocable license to so use it. Johnson v. Sherman County Irrigation Co., 63 Neb. 510 (88 N. W. 676).

17. (1902.) Where a mill is erected and a water power obtained by the aid and co-operation of adjoining landowners, any right of flowage over their premises of water for the mill arranged for and contemplated by the owners, as subscribers towards its construction, becomes appurtenant to the mill. Johnson v. Sherman County Irrigation Co., 63 Neb. 510 (88 N. W. 676).

18. (1904.) An easement consisting of the right to maintain a mill-pond upon the land of another does not deprive the owner of the land of any use thereof which does not interfere with the employment of the easement. Johnson v. Sherman County Irrigation, Water Power and Improvement Co., 71 Neb. 452 (98 N. W. 1096).

19. (1904.) The ruling made on the former appeal, that, "Where a mill is erected and a water-power obtained by the aid and co-operation of adjoining landowners, any right of flowage over their premises of water for the mill arranged for and contemplated by the owners, as subscribers toward its construction, becomes appurtenant to the mill," reannounced. Johnson v. Sherman County Irrigation, Water Power and Improvement Co., 71 Neb. 452 (98 N. W. 1096).

Abandonment.

20. (1907.) Nonuser of an easement for a less period than the statutory period of ten years will not of itself work an abandonment of the right. Agnew v. City of Pawnee City, 79 Neb. 603 (113 N. W. 236).

21. (1907.) The burden of proof is on the party alleging it to show abandonment of an easement, and such abandonment must be pleaded. Agnew v. City of Pawnee City, 79 Neb. 603 (113 N. W. 236).

Rights as against purchaser.

22. (1903.) Where an owner of land by any artificial arrangements effects an advantage for one portion as against another, upon severance of the ownership the grantees of the two portions take them respectively charged with the easement and entitled to the benefit openly and visibly attaching at the time of the severance. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Gayton, 67 Neb. 263 (93 N. W. 163).

23. (1907.) An easement will pass by a deed or grant of conveyance, even if the word "appurtenance," or a similar expression, is not used in the instrument, if it is apparent to an ordinary observer, and naturally and necessarily belonged to the premises. Agnew v. City of Pawnee City, 79 Neb. 603 (113 N. W. 236).

Obstructions and encroachments.

24. (1903.) Injunction is a proper remedy to protect against an interference with the enjoyment of an easement. Keplinger v. Woolsey, 4 Unof. 282 (93 N. W. 1008).

25. (1903.) A party aggrieved may peacefully remove an obstruction from the enjoyment of an easement without committing an illegal act. Keplinger v. Woolsey, 4 Unof. 282 (93 N. W. 1008).

26. (1906.) The easement of view from every part of the public street belongs, as a valuable right, to one owning property, abutting on the street, and will be protected by the courts against unlawful encroachments. Bischof v. Merchants Nat. Bank, 75 Neb. 838 (106 N. W. 996).

27. (1907.) Injunction will lie to protect the owner of an easement in its enjoyment. Agnew v. City of Pawnee City, 79 Neb. 603 (113 N. W. 236).

Enforcement of grant.

28. (1896.) A court of equity will give effect to a parol grant of an easement where there has been a valid consideration, where the grant is certain in its terms, and where there has been such a performance on the part of the grantee as would, in the case of a contract for the sale of the fee, take the case out of the statute of frauds. Gilmore v. Armstrong, 48 Neb. 92 (66 N. W. 998).

29. (1896.) Mutual covenants imposing upon adjoining lot owners rights or restrictions will be construed as the grant of reciprocal easements which may, when the remedy at law is insufficient, be enforced and protected by a court of equity. Barr v. Lamaster, 48 Neb. 114 (66 N. W. 1110).

I. RIGHT OF ACTION AND DEFENSES.

Nature and scope of remedy.

1. (1887.) The remedy for the recovery of real estate by one claiming the legal title thereto against one in possession claiming an estate therein, is an action of ejectment in which the facts may be submitted to a jury; and an action to quiet title, if properly objected to, will not lie. Snowden v. Tyler, 21 Neb. 199 (31 N. W. 661).

2. (1889.) An action of ejectment against one holding land under an execution sale is a direct and not a collateral attack on the execution sale, and hence is a proper remedy. Gue v. Jones, 25 Neb. 634 (41 N. W. 555); Noyce v. Jones, 25 Neb. 643; Gilbert v. Jones, 25 Neb. 644.

3. (1907.) The essential elements of the action of ejectment are legal estate, a right of possession in the plaintiff, and unlawful detention by defendant; and the plaintiff cannot recover where the latter element is lacking. Bridenbaugh v. Bryant, 79 Neb. 329 (112 N. W. 571).

Form of action.

4. (1890.) Where defendant is in actual occupation of land, claiming title thereto, an action of ejectment and not a suit to quiet title, is the proper remedy. Lejeune v. Harmon, 29 Neb. 268 (45 N. W. 630).

5. (1892.) A plaintiff out of possession may change his petition to quiet title so as to state a cause of action in ejectment. Homan v. Hellman, 35 Neb. 414 (53 N. W. 369).

6. (1893.) When both parties to a suit by their pleadings claim title to the same tract of land, and each asks to have his title quieted, it is too late, after decree, for the losing party to urge for the first time that the proper remedy was by an action of ejectment. Baumann v. Franse, 37 Neb. 907 (56 N. W. 395).

Existence of other remedy.

7. (1901.) The grantee in a sheriff's deed executed on a confirmation of sale, in a proceeding to foreclose a tax lien, may maintain ejectment against an adverse claimant to the lands described therein; the proceeding by forcible entry and detainer being a cumulative and not an exclusive remedy for such relief. Abbott v. Coates, 62 Neb. 247 (86 N. W. 1058).

Property which may be subject of action.

8. (1887.) Although the remedy given by statute to landowners for injuries sustained by taking the land for railroad purposes is exclusive, yet where a railroad company without consent of the owner takes real estate as a part of its right of way without pursuing the statutory method of appraisement and condemnation, and thus making its possession rightful, it is a trespasser, and the common law remedies are available to the owner. Hull v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 21 Neb. 371 (32 N. W. 162).

9. (1887.) The constitutional guaranty that "the property of no person shall be taken or damaged for public use without just compensation therefor" makes it incumbent upon a railroad company, or other governmental agency, exercising the right of eminent domain, to render such compensation before the right to appropriate the property will exist; and in case of failure to agree upon the damages accruing from the taking, the railroad company must proceed to condemn under the forms of law (unless such proceedings are instituted by the landowner); and in case of failure so to do the possession of the real estate by the company for railroad or other purpose will be illegal, and ejectment may be maintained by the landowner. Hull v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 21 Neb. 371 (32 N. W. 162).

10. (1899.) The owner cannot maintain ejectment for land upon which a corporation has, with his prior assent or subsequent acquiescence, constructed and put in operation a railroad used by it in its business as a common carrier. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Englehart, 57 Neb. 444 (77 N. W. 1092)

Title to support action.

11. (1876.) A plaintiff in ejectment must recover, if at all, on the strength of his own title; he cannot rely on the weakness of the title of his adversary. Butler v. Davis 5 Neb. 521; (1892) Gregory v. Kenyon, 34 Neb. 640 (52 N. W. 685); (1894) Bigler v. Baker, 40 Neb. 325 (58 N. W. 1026; 24 L. R. A. 255); (1896) Omaha Real Estate & Trust Co. v. Kragscow, 47 Neb. 592 (66 N. W. 658); (1889) Buck v. Gage, 27 Neb. 306 (43 N. W. 110); (1898) Comstock v. Kerwin, 57 Neb. 1 (77 N. W. 387); (1901) Abbott v. Coates, 62 Neb. 247 (86 N. W. 1058); (1905) Smith v. Curtice, 73 Neb. 167 (102 N. W. 241; 106 N. W. 460).

12. (1881). A plaintiff in ejectment must possess a legal estate, and be entitled to the possession of the premises sought to be recovered. Dale v. Hunneman, 12 Neb. 221 (10 N. W. 711).

13. (1885.) A tax certificate alone is no evidence of title to land, nor is it even when connected with proof of a demand upon the proper officer for a deed. Ludden v. Hansen, 17 Neb. 354 (22 N. W. 766).

14. (1894.) The plaintiff in ejectment need not prove title as against the whole world. It is sufficient if he prove a title good as against the defendant. Carson v. Dundas, 39 Neb. 503 (58 N. W. 141).

15. (1895.) One tenant in common cannot maintain an action of ejectment in his own name for the entire premises. Johnson v. Hardy, 43 Neb. 368 (61 N. W. 624; 47 Am. St. Rep. 765).

16. (1896.) A plaintiff in ejectment must recover upon the strength of his own title, but this does not mean that he is required to prove a title as against the whole world; it is sufficient if he prove title good as against the defendant. Lantry v. Wolff, 49 Neb. 374 (68 N. W. 494).

17. (1896.) A plaintiff in ejectment, to recover, must show a legal estate to the premises for which he sues, but the evidence of this legal estate need not be a perfect legal paper title. Lantry v. Wolff, 49 Neb. 374 (68 N. W. 494).

18. (1897.) Where a father has a life estate of curtesy in land, with remainder in his son, and falsely represents himself as guardian for his son and sells the premises under a license thus obtained, giving a deed purporting to convey the whole estate, and afterwards executes a quitclaim deed to his son, the son, since he claimed through the quitclam instead of as heir to the remainder, cannot on becoming of age maintain ejectment against the purchaser at the alleged guardian sale. Wells v. Steckelberg, 52 Neb. 597 (72 N. W. 865; 66 Am. St. Rep. 529).

19. (1906.) A bolting branch of a church organization has not such interest in the church property as will support ejectment, against the remaining body that is fulfilling the trust under which it holds the property. Zion Evangelical Lutheran Church v. St. John Evangelical Lutheran Church, 75 Neb. 774 (106 N. W. 1010).

20. (1907.) In an action of ejectment, when the plaintiff's testimony shows defendant in possession of the disputed lands under a claim of ownership, plaintiff must then recover on the superiority of his title, and, if he relies on a record or paper title, he must show a regular chain of title from the government, or from some grantor in possession, or from a common source from which each of the litigants claims. Runkle v. Welty, 78 Neb. 571 (111 N. W. 463).

21. (1907.) Where, in an action in ejectment, the plaintiff's chain of paper title does not reach back to the sovereign, or to a common source from which both parties claim, he must prove that he, or at least one of the grantors in his chain of title, had at some time been in possession of the premises before he can recover. Runkle v. Welty, 78 Neb. 574 (113 N. W. 160).

——— Adverse possession.

22. (1893.) A plaintiff in ejectment, claiming title to the lands sued for by reason of ten years' adverse possession thereof, to prevail, must prove a continuous possession of said property under a claim of ownership in himself, and that such possession was actual, visible, notorious, exclusive, and adverse to the owner of the legal title. Smith v. Hitchcock, 38 Neb. 104 (56 N. W. 791).

23. (1901.) Actual prior possession alone is sufficient to entitle one to maintain ejectment against another who is a mere trespasser. Robinson v. Gantt, 1 Unof. 51 (95 N. W. 505).

24. (1901.) Evidence that shows a plaintiff in ejectment has had actual possession, under a void tax deed, for more than the statutory period, shows such prior possession as will entitle him to maintain his action against a mere trespasser. Robinson v. Gantt, 1 Unof. 51 (95 N. W. 506).

25. (1902.) A naked trespasser can gain no right as against one in peaceable possession, and former peaceable possession is sufficient evidence of title to maintain ejectment. McBride v. Whitaker, 65 Neb. 137 (90 N. W. 966).

——— Title by forfeiture.

26. (1903.) On breach of a condition in a deed that no intoxicating liquors should be kept or sold on the premises, the grantor, if living, or, if dead, his heirs, may claim a reversion of the estate and can maintain an action in ejectment to recover it. Jetter v. Lyon, 70 Neb. 429 (97 N. W. 596).

——— Equitable title.

27. (1872.) An action for the recovery of real property under the code can only be supported by showing a legal title in the plaintiff as contra-distinguished from an equitable title. Morton v. Green, 2 Neb. 441.

28. (1872.) The holder of a receiver's certificate cannot, after the entry upon which the paper was issued has been canceled, maintain an action of ejectment; for he has only an equitable title; and this notwithstanding section 411 of the code of civil procedure, making such certificate proof of title equivalent to a patent against all but the holder of an actual patent. Morton v. Green, 2 Neb. 441; (1893) Headley v. Coffman, 38 Neb. 68 (56 N. W. 701).

29. (1892.) A mortgage cannot maintain ejectment to recover possession of real estate. Malloy v. Malloy, 35 Neb. 224 (52 N. W. 1197).

30. (1892.) A party who holds under a contract for the purchase of real estate is not in law deemed possessed of a legal estate in the premises, and, unless authorized by statute, cannot maintain ejectment. Malloy v. Malloy, 35 Neb. 224 (52 N. W. 1197).

31. (1893.) Where the entry upon which a receiver's certificate was issued, has been canceled, the authority of the commissioner of the land office to cancel the entry is not material. The refusal of the government, whether rightful or wrongful, to convey the legal title to the entryman, prevents him from maintaining ejectment against one in possession under a subsequent entry. Headley v. Coffman, 38 Neb. 68 (56 N. W. 701).

——— Title from common source.

32. (1888.) Evidence that a plaintiff purchased from the same source as did the defendant, but some time after and for a valuable consideration, but before defendant recorded his deed, is sufficient to sustain a finding for plaintiff. Kennard v. Dibble, 24 Neb. 179 (38 N. W. 793).

33. (1902.) Where title is derived from a common source, plaintiff in an action of ejectment need only show title from this common source to enable him to recover on the strength of his own title. McCarthy v. Birmingham, 2 Unof. 724 (89 N. W. 1003).

——— Administrator.

34. (1889.) Under section 202 of chapter 23 of Compiled Statutes, an administrator of an intestate's estate may maintain an action of ejectment for the recovery and possession of real property for the necessary purposes of administration. Dundas v. Carson, 27 Neb. 634 (43 N. W. 399).

35. (1894.) An administrator may, during the period of administration, maintain ejectment against the grantees of his decedent's heirs. His possessory interest under chapter 23, section 202, Compiled Statutes, is sufficient to sustain such action. Carson v. Dundas, 39 Neb. 503 (58 N. W. 141).

——— Heir or devisee.

36. (1886.) Where real estate is devised to take effect upon the death of a party named, who has a life estate in the premises, a party claiming under the will in an action of ejectment must prove the termination of the life estate. Kirk v. Bowling, 20 Neb. 260 (29 N. W. 928).

37. (1898.) An heir may bring and maintain an action of ejectment relative to lands of which his ancestor died seized against any and all persons except the administrator of the estate and such as have a right or rights thereto derived from the administrator, and this the heir may do during the pendency of the administration proceedings and prior to final settlement or any decree of distribution. Lewon v. Heath, 53 Neb. 707 (74 N. W. 274).

38. (1901.) A devisee may prosecute ejectment, for the lands devised to him, during the pendency of probate proceedings. Beer v. Plant, 1 Unof. 372 (96 N. W. 348).

Right of plaintiff to possession.

39. (1906.) An action in ejectment, denominated by the code "an action for the recovery of real property," can be maintained only by one who has both a legal estate in and a right to the immediate possession of the demanded lands. Zion Evangelical Lutheran Church v. St. John's Evangelical Lutheran Church, 75 Neb. 774 (106 N. W. 1010).

Defenses.

40. (1881.) Where defendant entered into the possession of real property under a lease, remained in possession for several years, and an offer of sale was made and accepted, but no part of the consideration paid or tendered, the mere fact that he had made valuable improvements upon the premises constitutes no defense to an action for the possession. If his case is within the provisions of the occupying claimants' act, he may still apply for relief as to the value of such improvements. Dale v. Hunneman, 12 Neb. 221 (10 N. W. 711).

41. (1882.) Ejectment will not lie against the holder of a mortgage who purchases from an appraiser of the premises, who bought at a sum greatly below the actual value, although collusion between such parties is shown. McKeighan v. Hopkins, 14 Neb. 361 (15 N. W. 711).

42. (1887.) Where proceedings to condemn real estate, instituted and carried through by a railroad company, are so defective as to be void for want of jurisdiction, such proceeding will afford no defense to an action of ejectment instituted by the landowners to recover the possession of the land taken and occupied by the railroad for right of way purposes. Hull v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 21 Neb. 371 (32 N. W. 162).

43. (1895.) The defendant in an action of ejectment may interpose any defense, legal or equitable, the effect of which is to negative the plaintiff's right of possession. Wanser v. Lucas, 44 Neb. 759 (62 N. W. 1108).

——— Adverse possession.

44. (1888.) Where plaintiffs in ejectment claim title through their father, his death and their minority will not arrest the running of the statute. Hardy v. Riddle, 24 Neb. 670 (39 N. W. 841).

45. (1890.) An action for the recovery of the title or possession of lands, tenements or hereditaments can only be brought within ten years after the cause of such action shall have accrued. Fitzgerald v. Brewster, 31 Neb. 51 (47 N. W. 475).

46. (1894.) Where, in an action of ejectment, title has been adjudicated in the plaintiff, but the defendant in possession decreed to have a lien upon the land and the land ordered sold to satisfy it, the purchaser at a sale under such decree cannot, in a subsequent action of ejectment against him, tack the prior possession of the lienors to his own possession, subsequent to the sale, for the purpose of establishing a title by adverse possession against another who claims under the same source of title as the plaintiff in the action where the sale was had. Carson v. Dundas, 39 Neb. 503 (58 N. W. 141).

——— Equitable defenses.

47. (1872.) Fraud may be shown in an action of ejectment to avoid a deed. Franklin v. Kelley, 2 Neb. 79.

48. (1877.) Under the code, an equitable defense may be set up in an action of ejectment. Stalnaker v. Morrison, 6 Neb. 364.

49. (1881.) In an action by the holder of the title in fee for the recovery of real property, the defendant may interpose an equitable defense. But to avail him his equity must be superior to that of the plaintiff. Blazier v. Johnson, 11 Neb. 404 (9 N W. 543).

50. (1893.) Where the evidence shows that defendant bought a city lot from plaintiff in the belief that a street was to be eighty feet in width, and would border on one side of the lot, and was so represented by plaintiff, the grantor, when in fact the street was reduced to sixty-six feet in width, a judgment, in ejectment, for plaintiff will be set aside. Emery v. Johnson, 37 Neb. 53 (55 N. W. 225).

51. (1907.) An equitable defense may be interposed in an action in ejectment, but one who seeks the intervention of a court of equity must offer to do equity before he is entitled to equitable relief, whether he be plaintiff or defendant. Union Stock Yards Nat. Bank v. Day, 79 Neb. 845 (113 N. W. 530).

——— Estoppel.

52. (1884.) Where a director and large stockholder in a railroad company knowingly permitted said company to construct its track across his land, and, without objecting or seeking to have compensation therefor, allowed it to remain for seven years, during which time bonds were issued by the company and foreclosed and the property of the company sold thereunder, he cannot maintain an action of ejectment against the purchaser. Omaha & N. W. R. Co. v. Redick, 16 Neb. 313 (20 N. W. 309).

53. (1893.) Where one in possession of land under an executory contract for the purchase of the same conveys to a railroad company a strip of said land for its right of way, and afterwards by mesne assignments of the interest of the respective holders of said executory contract, the right to a deed thereunder vests in one who takes such an assignment and a deed thereunder with full knowledge of the conveyance of said right of way and of the operation of a railroad line thereon for almost ten years, with full acquiescence of all parties concerned, it was properly adjudged by the district court that ejectment would not lie in favor of the holder of such deed against said railroad company for the possession of said right of way strip. Stratton v. Omaha & R. V. R. Co., 37 Neb. 477 (55 N. W. 1058).

——— Set-off and counter-claim.

Pleading set-off or counter-claim, see post, §§ 72, 73.

54. (1890.) A counter-claim based on a contract of purchase, being in the nature of a cross-action, the defendant is not compelled to interpose it in an action of ejectment as a defense. If he so elect he may bring a separate action to enforce the contract, subject, however, to a liability to pay the costs in the second case. Uppfalt v. Woermann, 30 Neb. 189 (46 N. W. 419).

55. (1903.) In an action of ejectment an offset for board and maintenance of the plaintiff by the defendants cannot properly be introduced; it being pleaded merely as an account and not shown to have any direct connection with plaintiff's cause of action for possession of land and for rents and profits. White v. Whitney, 68 Neb. 739 (94 N. W. 1012).

Pendency of other action or proceeding.

56. (1902.) An action in ejectment can not be maintained during the pendency of a prior action in equity between the same parties, in which plaintiff alleges that defendant wrongfully holds possession of the same property from the plaintiff and asks to enjoin the defendant from excluding the plaintiff therefrom. Shaughnessy v. St. Andrew's Church, 63 Neb. 798 (89 N. W. 263).

Joinder of causes of action or proceedings.

57. (1882.) A cause of action to recover the possession of land, and for rents and profits, may be joined. Harrall v. Gray, 12 Neb. 543 (11 N. W. 851).

58. (1892.) An action of ejectment under our practice, may be joined with one to recover rents and profits. Fletcher v. Brown, 35 Neb. 660 (53 N. W. 577).

II. PARTIES AND PROCESS.

Right of administrator to maintain ejectment, see Executors and Administrators, § 255.

Parties plaintiff.

59. (1880.) In ejectment by a tenant in common against a mere disseizor to recover possession of undivided premises he may maintain the action in his own name, if no objection is made for defect of parties. As the recovery of possession inures to the benefit of all, a failure to plead a defect of parties plaintiff is a waiver of that objection. Crook v. Vandevoort, 13 Neb. 505 (14 N. W. 470).

60. (1886.) Tenants in common may join in an action for the possession of real estate held by one without title, or they may sue severally and recover according to their several interests. Mattis v. Boggs, 19 Neb. 698 (28 N. W. 325).

Parties defendant.

61. (1889.) In an action of ejectment to recover the possession of real estate all occupants of the premises must be made defendants, to be concluded by the judgment unless some of such occupants are so in privity with one or more co-defendants that a judgment against such co-defendant will be conclusive upon them. Tarkington v. Link, 27 Neb. 826 (44 N. W. 35).

62. (1892.) An action to recover the possession of land may be brought against those in possession thereof although some of the parties may be absent from the state.

III. PLEADING AND EVIDENCE.

Petition.

64. (1879.) In a petition to recover real property it is not necessary to use the very expressions declared by section 626 of the code of civil procedure to be sufficient in stating the cause of action, but any other language of equivalent import may be employed. Dunn v. Remington, 9 Neb. 82 (2 N. W. 230).

65. (1892.) In an action of ejectment to recover certain real estate which the petition described by metes and bounds, commencing at the southeast corner of the northwest quarter of the northwest quarter of a specified section, town, and range, a motion to make the petition more definite and certain, by requiring the plaintiff to set forth therein by some definite landmark or survey where said corner is situated, was held properly overruled. Mills v. Traver, 35 Neb. 292 (53 N. W. 67).

66. (1896.) In an action of ejectment under the provisions of the code of civil procedure it must be alleged in the petition that the plaintiff is entitled to the possession of the premises sought to be recovered. George v. McCullough, 48 Neb. 680 (67 N. W. 758).

67. (1903.) Where the petition in an ejectment suit contains a particular description, by courses and distances, of the land sought to be recovered, such description will prevail over a general statement that the land is a part and parcel of a certain lot. Cushing v. Conness, 4 Unof. 669 (95 N. W. 855).

Answer.

68. (1894.) In an action of ejectment an answer denying plaintiff's title, averring title in the answering defendant, and alleging that defendant's title had been divested by legal proceedings and a judicial sale, and that the purchaser had been put in possession and defendant ousted, amounts to a disclaimer of title and a denial of possession. Carson v. Dundas, 39 Neb. 503 (58 N. W. 141).

69. (1902.) An answer denying that plaintiff's testatrix on a date named "was the owner in fee simple and entitled to possession" of the land in controversy, and denying that she died "on or about" said date, being consistent with ownership after said date and before she died, and also with ownership before and at said date, subject to a right of possession in someone else, does not put the plaintiff upon proof of title. Knight v. Denman, 64 Neb. 814 (90 N. W. 863).

70. (1903.) The denial of an allegation that "Helena V. W. Knight, on and prior to the 25th day of April, 1898, was the owner in fee simple and entitled to the possession of" certain premises, in ipsis verbis, accompanied by a plea that prior to October 25, 1898, defendant had acquired title to the premises by adverse possession, and accompanied by a denial that the plaintiff, who was claiming as executor of Helena V. W. Knight, had title or right of possession, and accompanied by specific denials of plaintiff's alleged executorship, of the death of Helena V. W. Knight, and of plaintiff's right in the premises, does not deny the antecedent title of Helena V. W. Knight. Knight v. Denman, 68 Neb. 383 (94 N. W. 622).

71. (1907.) The action was ejectment, the plaintiff claiming a legal estate in, and a right to, the possession of the premises. The answer alleged facts constituting adverse possession of the premises for more than ten years prior to the commencement of the action, but contained no express denial of plaintiff's title. The case was tried without objection made in any way to the sufficiency of the answer to put in issue the plaintiff's legal title. Held, That, if the facts set out in the answer were not in themselves a sufficient denial of the plaintiff's title, the further fact that the case was tried on its merits, without objection made by the plaintiff, and on the theory that his legal title was put in issue by the pleadings, should now estop him from raising the question. Dredla v. Patz, 78 Neb. 506 (111 N. W. 136).

——— Set-off and counter-claim.

72. (1881.) If a defendant in ejectment seek affirmative relief, such as to enforce a contract which does not give him the right to the possession, but does give him the right to demand a specific execution of the contract, upon which the right to continue in possession depends, he must plead the facts entitling him to such relief. Dale v. Hunneman, 12 Neb. 221 (10 N. W. 711).

73. (1900.) A defendant, in answer to a petition in ejectment, may show, by his pleading, that he is the equitable owner of the property and entitled to affirmative relief. Sutton v. Sutton, 60 Neb. 400 (83 N. W. 200).

www.libtool.com.cn

Amendments.

74. (1886.) A petition in ejectment may be amended to be a petition to redeem, the object in both cases being to recover the land. McKeighan v. Hopkins, 19 Neb. 33 (26 N. W. 614).

75. (1888.) Where a judgment is rendered, in ejectment, for plaintiff, leaving a lien to defendant for any taxes he may have paid, such defendant may amend his answer so as to present such equities. Griffey v. Kennard, 24 Neb. 174 (38 N. W. 791).

76. (1895.) Plaintiff brought an action in ejectment, and the defendant pleaded a contract entered into by plaintiff for the sale for the premises and demanded affirmative equitable relief. The plaintiff was permitted to file an amended pleading, changing the form of the action from ejectment to that of foreclosure of the contract. Held, Not reversible error. Scroggin v. Johnson, 45 Neb. 714 (64 N. W. 236).

Evidence admissible under pleadings.

77. (1888.) In ejectment by vendee against vendor, the only defenses presented by the answer were a general denial of the allegations of the petition, and a plea of statute of limitations. On the trial defendant sought to prove that he had not been paid the consideration for which he sold the land. The testimony was excluded. Held, Correct as said issue was not raised, and no equities were presented by the answer. Colvin v. Republican Valley Land Ass'n, 23 Neb. 75 (36 N. W. 361; 8 Am. St. Rep. 114).

78. (1890.) In ejectment under the statute the defendant under a general denial may prove an equity which negatives the plaintiff's right to the possession. Uppfalt v. Woermann, 30 Neb. 189 (46 N. W. 419).

79. (1892.) In an action of ejectment, under a general denial, the defendant may show that a deed in plaintiff's chain of title was procured by fraud and undue means. Staley v. Housel, 35 Neb. 160 (52 N. W. 888).

80. (1897.) In an action of ejectment, under an answer denying plaintiff's title and right of possession to the premises, the defendant may show title in himself by adverse possession. Fink v. Dawson, 52 Neb. 647 (72 N. W. 1037).

81. (1897.) Evidence to prove adverse possession is admissible under a general denial of plaintiff's title. Oldig v. Fisk, 53 Neb. 156 (73 N. W. 661); (1900) Murray v. Romine, 60 Neb. 94 (82 N. W. 318); (1904) Link v. Campbell, 72 Neb. 310 (104 N. W. 939)

82. (1901.) A defendant in the actual occupancy of land may show under a general denial that he is the equitable owner. Pinkham v. Pinkham, 61 Neb. 336 (85 N. W. 285).

Burden of proof.

83. (1887.) In an action of ejectment, where defendant relies upon the statute of limitations, the burden is on him to show that his possession has been continuous, adverse, hostile and exclusive, during the ten years last preceding the commencement of the action. Weeping Water v. Reed, 21 Neb. 261 (31 N. W. 797).

84. (1902.) In an action of ejectment, where the defendant pleads adverse possession, and the plaintiff in reply pleads the insanity of his ancestor to defeat the statute, plaintiff must show by a preponderance of the evidence that his ancestor was insane with reference to the subject matter of the controversy, and that, owing to the insanity, his ancestor allowed others to assert title to his property, taking no precaution to protect the same, and that such insanity was continuous from the time defendant went into possession until a time less than ten years prior to the commencement of the action. Clarke v. Irwin, 63 Neb. 539 (88 N. W. 783).

85. (1901.) In an action of ejectment, where plaintiff claims under a sheriff's deed resulting from a mortgage foreclosure, to which defendant was not a party, and defendant in possession claims under a prior unrecorded deed made by the mortgagor, the burden is upon the plaintiff to show that he took his mortgage for value and without notice, actual or constructive, of defendant's title; and an instruction placing the burden on defendant to show want of bona fides and of notice on the part of the plaintiff, is prejudicial error. Smith v. White, 62 Neb. 56 (86 N. W. 930).

Admissibility of evidence.

86. (1888.) In action of ejectment, where the defense consisted of proceedings under the statute for the condemnation of the property to the use of a railroad, the fact of said real estate being necessary to said railroad, as affecting its power to condemn, is ancillary to that of actual legal condemnation, and that the latter not being proved, evidence that said property was necessary to said railroad was properly excluded. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Hull, 24 Neb. 740 (40 N. W. 280).

87. (1889.) Where a defendant in ejectment prayed as alternative relief that he be subrogated to the right of his grantor, who held the land under a tax title, to a return of the money paid by him for such tax title, and all subsequent taxes paid by him in case of failure of his title, the tax title or deed and receipts for subsequent taxes paid are admissible to establish the amount of such recovery. Wise v. Newatney, 26 Neb. 88 (42 N. W. 339).

88. (1906.) In an action of ejectment rejection of certain questions put to plaintiff calling forth statements as to his possession, when such question is indefinite as to time, is not error. Flanagan v. Fabens, 77 Neb. 705 (110 N. W. 655).

89. (1907.) In an action of ejection as to part of a military reservation a plat made by a witness at the instance of an attorney is properly rejected from the evidence. Oldfather v. Ericsson, 79 Neb. 1 (112 N. W. 356).

——— Title and right to possession.

Copy of record of deed, as evidence of title, see Evidence, §§ 168-170.

90. (1885.) In an action of ejectment, a certificate of sale of the land in question for taxes was offered in evidence in connection with an offer of proof that a tax deed on such certificate had been demanded of the county treasurer and refused, was properly excluded. Ludden v. Hansen, 17 Neb. 354 (22 N. W. 776).

91. (1892.) Permitting the introduction in evidence of records of deeds duly recorded, instead of requiring the originals, in ejectment trials for the purpose of proving title, rests largely in the discretion of the trial court. Rupert v. Penner, 35 Neb. 587 (53 N. W. 598; 17 L. R. A. 824).

92. (1894.) When both plaintiff and defendant claim title from a common source evidence of the derivation of title antecedent to that common source is immaterial. Carson v. Dundas, 39 Neb. 503 (58 N. W. 141).

93. (1894.) In an ejectment suit, where the defendant claims title by virtue of a guardian's sale and conveyance, the fact of the approval of the bond by the judge of the court granting the guardian a license to sell may be proved by the best evidence attainable. Myers v. McGavock, 39 Neb. 843 (58 N. W. 522; 42 Am. St. Rep. 726).

94. (1895.) In an action of ejectment admissions of defendant's grantor, that he knew a certain fence was not on the line, is not admissible against defendant. Consolidated Tank Line Co. v. Pien, 44 Neb. 887 (62 N. W. 1112).

95. (1896.) A deed executed and acknowledged in Kansas, conveying land in Nebraska, is admissible in evidence in ejectment though not witnessed. Schields v. Horbach, 49 Neb. 262 (68 N. W. 524).

Weight and sufficiency of evidence.

Sufficiency of evidence as to value of improvements, see post, § 168.

——— Identity and description of property.

96. (1888.) In order that a plaintiff may recover real estate in an action of ejectment, his description of the land in dispute must be such as would enable a competent surveyor to locate it by referring to deeds, writings, or known objects by which the exact land can be identified. Lane v. Abbott, 23 Neb. 489 (37 N. W. 82).

97. (1888.) Plaintiff claimed the possession of certain lots and blocks in Lane's addition to Pleasant Hill, describing them by their numbers. The addition was surveyed and platted in 1871, after which the proprietor sold the lots described in plaintiff's petition, and which had, by mesne conveyances, been transferred to plaintiff. The plat is described by the record as being south and west of the original town of Pleasant Hill, "on south-east ¼ of section 9, town seven (7), range three (3) east, Saline county, Nebraska." No other description, location, or monuments are given. There is no plat of the original town of Pleasant Hill. The certificate of the surveyor described it as "part N. E. ¼ S. E. ¼, Sec. 9, T. 7, R. 3 east. * * W. C. 50 links, S. N. E. corner of S. E. ¼. walnut stake 2 inches square, one foot long, var. 10 degrees, 30 minutes east." No other description or monuments are given. In 1877 the proprietor sold and conveyed to defendant the land on which the survey had been made, describing it by the government survey, and not as a platted town. At that time, and prior thereto, the land was used as a farm, and has been so used by defendant since his purchase, until the commencement of this action. It was held that, as the lots were incapable of identification, plaintiff could not recover. Lane v. Abbott, 23 Neb. 489 (37 N. W. 82).

98. (1893.) In an action of ejectment, the question involved being the location of a corner as located by the government survey, surveys from known government corners both north and south and east and west of the corner in dispute, by which it was located on a line with other corners on both of said lines, and each landowner would thereby be given the full amount of land called for by his patent, would be preferred to a survey which was not begun at a known government corner and lacked many of the elements of certainty, and which gave one of the landowers much more than he was entitled to under his patent, and the other less. Woods v. West, 37 Neb. 400 (56 N. W. 30).

99. (1896.) In an action of ejectment the evidence as to the boundary line, though conflicting, will sustain a judgment for defendant. Blomgren v. Holmquest, 49 Neb. 49 (68 N. W. 382).

100. (1903.) Evidence of ownership and right to the possession of the south twenty feet of lot 155 in the village of Grafton will not sustain a judgment for the possession of a tract of land described therein as commencing eighteen feet north of the southeast corner of lot 155, running thence east forty feet, thence north two feet, thence west forty feet, thence south on the west line of said lot two feet to the place of beginning, although there is a general statement therein that the tract is a part and parcel of said lot. Cushing v. Conness, 4 Unof. 669 (95 N. W. 855).

100*a*. (1908.) It is a general rule that only a preponderance of evidence is required to establish an issue in civil actions; and boundary disputes furnish no exception to this rule. Bock v. Porterfield, 80 Neb. 523 (114 N. W. 597).

——— Title and right to possession.

Sufficiency of evidence to show title by prescription, see Adverse Possession, §§ 156-175.

101. (1882.) Where the evidence shows a tax deed from the county treasurer and a claim of conveyance to the plaintiff and actual possession for a term of years, except for a triangular strip, in possession of defendant, and no evidence of defendant's title, the plaintiff is entitled to a judgment in ejectment. Simmons v. Minick, 12 Neb. 536 (11 N. W. 849).

102. (1882.) In a real action brought by the heirs at law of a deceased person against one holding simply under an invalid tax deed, the seizin of the deceased ancestor is sufficiently proved to warrant a recovery, by showing his actual possession of the premises at the time of his death. Spitznagle v. Vanhessch, 13 Neb. 338 (14 N. W. 417).

103. (1883.) In ejectment, where both parties claim under the same third person, it is sufficient prima facie to prove the derivation of title from him, without proving his title. Barton v. Erickson, 14 Neb. 164 (15 N. W. 206).

104. (1886.) Where in an action for the recovery of real property the answer of the defendant put in issue the title of the plaintiff, but alleged no equitable defense, a finding and judgment for the plaintiff upheld, on evidence showing title in plaintiff, nothwithstanding there was evidence which, under proper allegations, would have tended to establish an equitable defense. Uppfalt v. Nelson, 18 Neb. 533 (26 N. W. 362). [Overruled in part. Staley v. Housel, 38 Neb. 160.]

105. (1886.) Where the defendant relies on a deed of a sheriff on judicial sale, and produces evidence to show such a sale but a failure to deliver the deed, but it is shown, also, that the deed had been executed by the sheriff several years after and the purchase price paid, a finding for such defendant is sustained. Kingman v. Appleget, 20 Neb. 605 (31 N. W. 235).

106. (1887.) In case stated held that plaintiff had not shown title to land in question, and judgment affirmed. Methodist Protestant Church v. Johnson, 22 Neb. 163 (34 N. W. 221).

107. (1889.) In an ejectment action, the evidence failing to support the defendant's title, a finding for the plaintiff is sustained. Dawson v. Dawson, 26 Neb. 716 (42 N. W. 744).

108. (1891.) In an action of ejectment, where a deed was omitted in the chain of the defendant's title, but there was proof tending to show that such a deed had, in fact, been executed but not recorded, held, that a judgment in favor of the defendant conformed to the testimony and is affirmed. Billingsley v. Ricketts, 32 Neb. 438 (49 N. W. 443).

109. (1892.) Although the evidence, in ejectment, is conflicting as to possession of the land in question, by reason of plowing and setting out trees thereon, a finding that possession by the defendant had not been exclusive for the statutory period is sustained. Mills v. Traver, 35 Neb. 292 (53 N. W. 67).

110. (1901.) Evidence examined, and held conclusively to establish plaintiff's right to a verdict. Nelson v. City of Omaha, 62 Neb. 823 (88 N. W. 154).

111. (1901.) When, in an action for the trial of the title to the land, the deeds, or authenticated copies of them, constituting parts of the chain of title of one of the parties, are not contained in the record, an attempt to supply the deficiency by an "abstract of title" will be ineffectual unless the recitals in the latter document are sufficiently full and complete to enable the court to make out, without guess or inference, the substantial nature and purport of the instrument supposed to be abstracted from. Cullen v. Casey, 1 Unof. 344 (95 N. W. 605).

112. (1904.) In ejectment, where the only defense is the statute of limitations without showing of any claim of right, and the evidence tends to show that defendant went into possession as tenant of the true owner to whose rights the plaintiff had succeeded, a verdict for the plaintiff will be sustained. Nelson v. Brisbin, 5 Unof. 496 (98 N. W. 1057).

113. (1905.) A plaintiff in ejectment who shows title only through a sheriff's deed, but fails to show any title of the execution debtor, cannot recover. Smith v. Curtice, 73 Neb. 167 (102 N. W. 241; 106 N. W. 460).

114. (1907.) On the trial of an action in ejectment, the usual duplicate receipt of a receiver of a United States land office, in full force and unimpeached, is sufficient evidence of title, except as against one having a patent to the same land or some person or persons claiming under him. Oldfather v. Ericsson, 79 Neb. 1 (112 N. W. 356).

115. (1907.) In an action of ejectment by a grantee from the original owner against one claiming under a contract of purchase from the owner's son, evidence held to sustain a judgment for plaintiff. Union Stock Yards Nat. Bank v. Day, 79 Neb. 845 (113 N. W. 530).

IV. TRIAL, JUDGMENT AND REVIEW.

Right to jury trial.

116. (1900.) Where the answer to a petition in ejectment presents an equitable counterclaim which is traversed by a reply, the issues of fact thus arising are triable to the court without a jury. Jewett v. Black, 60 Neb. 173 (82 N. W. 375).

117. (1902.) A waiver of a jury at the first trial in ejectment will not have the effect of precluding either party from demanding a jury at the second trial, after the judgment rendered at the first trial has been set aside under section 630, code of civil procedure. Schumacher v. Crane-Churchill Co., 66 Neb. 440 (92 N. W. 609).

118. (1902.) Where an action in ejectment has been transferred to the equity docket, going to trial upon all the issues, without demanding a jury as to any of them, is a waiver of a jury as to that trial. Schumacher v. Crane-Churchill Co., 66 Neb. 440 (92 N. W. 609).

119. (1902.) An order transferring an action in ejectment to the equity docket because of equitable defenses raised in an answer, will not preclude the moving party from demanding that the purely legal issues be tried by jury, if his request for a jury trial is timely and is insisted upon. Schumacher v. Crane-Churchill Co., 66 Neb. 440 (92 N. W. 609).

Appointment of receiver.

120. (1901.) A receiver will not be appointed in an action of ejectment to take charge of the property and to collect rents and profits before judgment entered. Smith v. White, 62 Neb. 56 (86 N. W. 930).

Instructions.

121. (1886.) In an action of ejectment an instruction wholly disregarding the manner in which the deed in question was obtained, and where the court has already instructed on that point, is properly refused. Kingman v. Appelget, 20 Neb. 605 (31 N. W. 235).

122. (1889.) In an ejectment suit an instruction that deeds and the records of the county are sufficient evidence to vest the title in the plaintiff, unless there has been an actual adverse possession by the defendant for at least ten years immediately preceding the commencement of this action is proper. Obernalte v. Edgar, 28 Neb. 70 (44 N. W. 82).

123. (1892.) In ejectment, where it is claimed a deed to the premises was procured by fraud and duress, an instruction that if the jury find the deed was procured by fraud but that a valuable consideration was paid, and the grantee's assignees took without notice, the verdict should be for him, was properly refused. Staley v. Housel, 35 Neb. 160 (52 N. W. 888).

124. (1894.) In an action of ejectment where the plaintiff attempts to show that an alleged conveyance of the premises from plaintiff's grantors to defendant was in fact executed by such grantors by mistake and fraud, they believing they were signing other papers, it is reversible error to refuse to charge the jury that if they find defendant's deed of conveyance to have been obtained by fraud they should find for plaintiff. Waldrof v. Haggins, 39 Neb. 735 (58 N. W. 278).

125. (1902.) Instructions, in an action of ejectment in which, to a defense of adverse possession, plaintiff pleads insanity to stop the running of the statutes, held not to present the material issue to the jury. Clarke v. Irwin, 63 Neb. 539 (88 N. W. 783).

126. (1902.) Where in an action of ejectment defendants rely on a paper title, and also, as an alternative defense, upon adverse possession, an instruction which defines the latter, though it ignores the former defense, is not prejudicial to plaintiff. Baty v. Elrod, 66 Neb. 735 (92 N. W. 1032).

127. (1903.) The fact that the jury were told that an "equitable right" would be no defense against a "legal right" of the plaintiff, if it was found that she had one, is not prejudicial error where no equitable right to the premises is either pleaded or offered to be proved. White v. Whitney, 68 Neb. 739 (94 N. W. 1012).

128. (1903.) An instruction which tells the jury that they shall allow "rental value" of the premises as "damages for withholding possession" is not prejudicial error, although the petition of plaintiff makes no claim for any damage aside from rents, issues and profits. White v. Whitney, 68 Neb. 739 (94 N. W. 1012).

129. (1904.) In an ejectment case, title by adverse possession may be proved under a general denial, and, when such title is one of the defenses relied upon by the defendant, he is entitled to have the jury instructed with reference to the same, if any competent evidence has been introduced to support that issue, even though the evidence may be contradicted or may be considered insufficient by the jury. Link v. Campbell, 72 Neb. 310 (104 N. W. 939).

130. (1904.) In an ejectment case, where the defendant's answer is a general denial, it is not error to instruct the jury that the plaintiff must recover, if at all, upon the strength of his own title to the property, and that he cannot rely upon the weakness of the defendant's title. Link v. Campbell, 72 Neb. 310 (104 N. W. 939).

131. (1907.) In ejectment as to a military reservation an instruction that persons not surveyors who testify as to existence of government corners are entitled to consideration, is not erroneous. Oldfather v. Ericsson, 79 Neb. 1 (112 N. W. 356).

Right to open and close.

132. (1903.) In an action of ejectment where the answer is a general denial, an offer by defendant to admit that plaintiff has the record title, basing his claim to judgment on a title by adverse possession, does not entitle defendant to open and close. Zweibel v. Myers, 69 Neb. 294 (95 N. W. 597).

Conduct of jury.

133. (1894.) In ejectment, where the genuineness of a signature to a deed is in issue, it is error for the jury to take and keep in their room during the consideration of the case a note signed by the alleged forger, the note not having been introduced in evidence. La Bonty v. Lundgren, 41 Neb. 312 (59 N. W. 904).

Verdict.

134. (1897.) In an action for the recovery of real property, where the plaintiff shows a right to recover at the time the action was commenced, but it appears that his right has terminated during the pendency of the action, the verdict and judgment must be according to the fact, and the plaintiff may recover for withholding the property. Orr v. Broad, 52 Neb. 490 (73 N. W. 850).

135. (1899.) A verdict for the plaintiff in ejectment, finding that he was the owner erty described in the petition," is sufficient as to description when the property is clearly and accurately stated in such pleading. Cervenna v. Thurston, 59 Neb. 343 (80 N. W. 1048).

www.libtool.com.cn

Statutory new trial.

136. (1882.) A party is entitled as a matter of right to two trials in an action of ejectment. Gregory v. City of Lincoln, 13 Neb. 352 (14 N. W. 423).

137. (1883.) Demand for new trial in ejectment must be made at same term at which first trial was had. Shawang v. Love, 15 Neb. 142 (17 N. W. 264).

138. (1898.) Where defendant in ejectment refuses to plead further, but permits judgment to go against him on demurrer to plaintiff's reply in an action of ejectment, he is not as of course entitled to have the judgment set aside and a new trial ordered under section 630 of the code. Whiteman v. Perkins, 56 Neb. 181 (76 N. W. 547).

New trial for cause.

139. (1888.) Where the judgment in ejectment is rendered for plaintiff, a new trial will be granted defendant for alleged newly discovered evidence that will tend to show plaintiff grantor had no title to the premises at the time of the grant, and that plaintiff had knowledge that his grantor claimed no interest in the land. Smith v. Graves, 24 Neb. 545 (39 N. W. 594).

Judgment.

140. (1886.) In ejectment by a tenant in common against a person in possession without right, the plaintiff can recover only to the extent of his title. Mattis v. Boggs, 19 Neb. 698 (28 N. W. 325).

141. (1892.) Where in an action of ejectment it appears that the conveyance by which plaintiff holds title was given as security for advancements of money which the grantor had agreed to repay, the defendant in possession, as heir of such grantor, will be required to pay the sum due plaintiff, and a decree of foreclosure and sale for the amount due should be entered in plaintiff's favor. Malloy v. Malloy, 35 Neb. 224 (52 N. W. 1197).

142. (1895.) In ejectment by a tenant in common against a person in possession without right, the plaintiff can recover only to the extent of his title. Mattis v. Boggs, 19 Neb., 698, and Kirk v. Bowling, 20 Neb. 260, reaffirmed. Johnson v. Hardy, 43 Neb. 368 (61 N. W. 624; 47 Am. St. Rep. 765).

——— Conclusiveness and effect.

143. (1884.) After the adjournment of the term, a judgment on the first trial in an action in the nature of ejectment is final. Bryant v. Estabrook, 16 Neb. 217 (20 N. W. 245).

144. (1902.) A judgment in ejectment is binding upon all parties to the action. Van Etten v. Test, 64 Neb. 407 (89 N. W. 1052).

145. (1903.) A judgment in an action in ejectment, in favor of one holding the paper title to real estate, against one claiming by adverse possession, is not binding on the wife of the latter, if not a party thereto, in a subsequent action brought by her to protect her homestead rights in such premises, where it appears that the adverse possession had ripened into a title in fee before the action against her husband was brought. Silk v. McDonald, 4 Unof. 34 (93 N. W. 212).

146. (1903.) With the exception that parties are entitled to two trials in ejectment suits, the judgments in such actions are as conclusive as in any other. Miles v. Ballantine, 4 Unof. 171 (93 N. W. 708).

Restraining enforcement of judgment.

147. (1889.) A recovered judgment in ejectment against B for the possession of certain real estate and thereupon caused a writ of restitution to be issued against B and C; C thereupon filed a petition in the case, in which he alleged in substance that he was in possession of the premises adversely to the plaintiff when the action was brought but was not made a party defendant, and that he was still in possession, and asking the court to restrain the plaintiff from ousting him from the estate. Held, That the proof sustained the finding of the court below in favor of the injunction, and that C could not be divested of his possession without a trial, and judgment to that effect. Tarkington v. Link, 27 Neb. 826 (44 N. W. 35).

Appeal and error.

148. (1881.) Where a party in an action of ejectment elects to institute proceedings under the "act for relief of occupying claimants" he is estopped from seeking relief by proceedings in error against the judgment in the former action. Buchanan v. Dorsey, 11 Neb. 373 (9 N. W. 546).

149. (1881.) In an action of ejectment where the plaintiff in his reply pleaded a tender of the amount paid by the defendant for taxes due on the premises, but the court on the trial excluded proof of the amount, held, that the judgment in ejectment being right, the supreme court will order a reference to ascertain the amount due for taxes, and require the payment of the same as a condition of affirming the judgment. Howard v. Lamaster, 11 Neb. 582 (10 N. W. 497).

150. (1882.) Where a party in ejectment elects to proceed under the "act for the relief of occupying claimants," he is estopped from seeking relief by proceedings in error against the judgment in the former or principal action. Strong v. Irwin, 12 Neb. 446 (11 N. W. 877).

151. (1895.) Where the evidence shows that plaintiff has no interest in the land, questions of law suggested by him on error from a judgment in favor of defendant will not be examined. Wildman v. Shambaugh, 43 Neb. 371 (61 N. W. 578).

152. (1903.) Error in sustaining a demurer to an allegation of taxes paid, made by way of cross-demand, is without prejudice where plaintiff subsequently remits from the amount of her recovery the full alleged amount of such taxes. White v. Whitney, 68 Neb. 739 (94 N. W. 1012).

153. (1903.) Error in sustaining a demurrer to a counter-claim for improvements in an action for rents and profits as well as for possession of land, is without prejudice where it appears from the record that all such improvements were permitted to be shown to the jury under the name of necessary repairs, and the jury were instructed to allow a reduction of damages in the amount of all necessary repairs. White v. Whitney, 68 Neb. 739 (94 N. W. 1012).

V. DAMAGES, MESNE PROFITS, IMPROVEMENTS AND TAXES.

Rents and profits.

154. (1888.) In an action in ejertment, where the evidence shows that the defendant was not in the actual possession of the real estate in dispute, receiving no profits therefrom, and that it was uninclosed and unimproved prairie land, no damages can be awarded for use and occupation. Griffey v. Kennard, 24 Neb. 174 (38 N. W. 791).

155. (1892.) Damages for rents and profits may be recovered in an action of ejectcent for the statutory period, prior to service of summons. The special provision of the occupying claimants' act, chapter 63, Compiled Statutes, applies only to rents and profits subsequent to service of summons in ejectment. Fletcher v. Brown, 35 Neb. 660 (53 N. W. 577).

Rights as to improvements and taxes in general.

156. (1882.) When the occupying claimant is a vendee of the land under a contract, providing for a forfeiture of all his improvements in case of non-performance on his part, he is not, in case of eviction at the suit of the vendor, entitled to the benefits of the act for the relief of occupying claimants. Vance v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., 12 Neb. 285 (11 N. W. 334).

157. (1889.) In an action of ejectment, where there is proof tending to show that the defendants were in possession under an execution sale made several years before the bringing of the suit, and that they had made certain improvements on the real estate, paid taxes thereon, etc., held, that before a writ of restitution will be issued the plaintiffs below must pay the value of such improvements and the amount paid for taxes, with interest thereon. Dvorak v. More, 25 Neb. 735 (41 N. W. 777).

158. (1889.) Occupying claimants of land who have made lasting and valuable improvements thereon, but have afterwards been evicted, are entitled to compensation for such improvements in all cases where they, or the persons under whom they claim title, derived the same from lawful public authority. Page v. Davis, 26 Neb 670 (42 N. W. 875).

159. (1892.) Where one goes into possession of land under a title bond, whereby the grantor agreed to convey by a good and sufficient deed upon the payment of the last installment of the purchase money ten years later, and before such payment a third party brings ejectment against him to recover possession of the premises, the purchaser cannot recover from the plaintiff taxes paid by his own grantor. Fletcher v. Brown, 35 Neb. 660 (53 N. W. 577).

160. (1892.) One who goes into possession of property under a title bond, with an agreement by the maker who holds under a void tax certificate, must show affirmatively that improvements made by him were so done in good faith, relying upon such title bond to acquire a title to the premises, before he can recover, upon eviction for such improvements as an occupying claimant. Carter v. Brown, 35 Neb. 670 (53 N. W. 580).

Digitized by Google

161. (1892.) To entitle defendant on eviction to recover under the occupying claimants' act for improvements and taxes paid while in possession, it must appear that the improvements were made and money expended while he was in good faith claiming title derived from some public office, or from the state or the United States. Carter v. Brown, 35 Neb. 670 (53 N. W. 580).

162. (1895.) The statute of limitations relating to the foreclosure of tax liens is no bar to the recovery of taxes under the provisions of the occupying claimants' act. Lothrop v. Michaelson, 44 Neb. 633 (63 N. W. 28).

Statutory provisions.

163. (1889.) The words, "such tax titles," and "such tax deeds," in the proviso of section 11, chapter 63, Compiled Statutes 1887, do not relate to words of like import previously occurring in the chapter; and the word "such" being restrictive in its meaning, was evidently designed to apply to a particular class of tax deeds not described, and not to tax deeds generally. A person claiming title under a tax deed and making lasting and valuable improvements on the land, paying taxes, etc., is entitled to compensation for the same. Page v. Davis, 26 Neb. 670 (42 N. W. 875).

164. (1899.) Defendant cannot avail himself of the provisions of the occupying claimants' act (Comp. Stats., ch. 63) where all his interests in the improvements have been divested by judicial sale prior to the request for a jury to assess the value of the improvements. La Bonty v. Lundgren, 58 Neb. 648 (79 N. W. 551).

Measure of compensation.

165. (1892.) Where an occupant of real estate is allowed for valuable and lasting improvements, the measure of his recovery is the amount such improvements add to the value of the premises. Evidence of cost of improvements, irrespective of their effect upon the value of the land, is inadmissible. Fletcher v. Brown, 35 Neb. 660 (53 N. W. 577).

166. (1895.) Where an occupying claimant is allowed for valuable and lasting improvements made while in possession, the measure of his recovery is the amount the real estate increased in value by reason of such improvements, and not the cost of making the same. Lothrop v. Michaelson, 44 Neb. 633 (63 N. W. 28); (1904) Gombert v. Lyon, 72 Neb. 319 (100 N. W. 414).

167. (1899.) In proceedings under the occupying claimants' act the successful claimant may recover rents and profits subsequent to the commencement of ejectment suit, but not those which accrued prior to that time. La Bonty v. Lundgren, 58 Neb. 648 (79 N. W. 551).

Evidence as to value.

168. (1892.) In an action of ejectment a finding of the value of improvements erected by the occupying claimant is sustained by the evidence. Fletcher v. Brown, 35 Neb. 660 (53 N. W. 577).

Proceedings for allowance.

169. (1881.) To proceed regularly under the "act for the relief of occupying claimants," no step should be taken until final judgment in the action against such claimant has been entered. Buchanan v. Dorsey, 11 Neb. 373 (9 N. W. 546).

170. (1882.) The fourth section of the occupying claimants' act does not repeal the law authorizing a recovery for rents and profits in an action for the recovery of real property. If, in the ejectment trial, a recovery is had for rents and profits up to the time of trial, the jury selected to appraise the improvements should not include in its estimate rents and profits for the period after the action commenced. Harrall v. Gray, 12 Neb. 543 (11 N. W. 851).

171. (1885.) Whether in case of the assessment of the value of improvements under section 5 of the act of 1883, the remedy is exclusive and the failure to object to the verdict of the appraisers within the time fixed by said section is a waiver of the right, quære. Burlington & M. R. R. Co. v. Dobson, 17 Neb. 450 (23 N. W. 353).

172. (1885.) Where one in possession has been ejected from real estate and, after affirmation of the judgment on appeal a request for jury to assess the value of lasting improvements filed in the district court at the first term thereafter is in time, and the district court should order such jury impaneled. Burlington & M. R. R. Co. v. Dobson, 17 Neb. 455 (23 N. W. 511).

173. (1889.) While the intention of the law is that compensation shall be made for improvements before a writ of restitution will be issued, yet where the application was properly filed, and an amended application made within six months afterwards, it will not debar a party from recovering. Page v. Davis, 26 Neb. 670 (42 N. W. 875).

174. (1895.) The appraisers appointed under the occupying claimant law are required to make their appraisement from a view of the premises. They have no authority to take the testimony of witnesses. Lothrop v. Michaelson, 44 Neb. 633 (63 N. W. 28).

175. (1895.) The court may permit objections against appraisers' report to be filed out of time, but it is not reversible error to refuse so to do, where no abuse of discretion is shown. Lothrop v. Michaelson, 44 Neb. 633 (63 N. W. 28).

176. (1895.) Objections to appraisers' report made under the occupying claimants' act (Comp Stats., ch. 63), should be filed on on before the second day of the term of the district court next after the filing of the appraisement, where such report is made and filed in vacation. Lothrop v. Michaelson, 44 Neb. 633 (63 N. W. 28).

1. (1875.) A party who has been damaged by the location of a railroad through his premises, where the damages awarded have not been deposited with the probate judge, as provided by section 97, General Statutes, 191, may bring his action for the amount of the award, to enjoin the operating of the road across his premises until payment is made, or he may sue in trespass for the unauthorized entry thereon. Omaha & N. W. R. Co. v. Menk, 4 Neb. 21.

2. (1890.) Where a party hires a boar under a contract to return it within a short time, but fails to do so and sells the animal, the owner may elect to bring his action either in tort or on the contract. Reeves v. Nye, 28 Neb. 571 (44 N. W. 736).

Compelling election.

3. (1892.) In case stated there was not sufficient cause shown to justify the court to require a cross-appellant to elect as to the form of his action. Shickle v. Kent, 34 Neb. 568 (52 N. W. 286).

Inconsistent remedies.

4. (1899.) The doctrine of election between inconsistent remedies has no application to a case where a party declares upon an express contract and demands whatever relief he may be entitled to thereunder. Henry & Coatsworth Co. v. Halter, 58 Neb. 685 (79 N. W. 616).

5. (1900.) Before a case can arise for the application of the principle of election of remedies, there must be two co-existing remedies inconsistent with each other. State v. Bank of Commerce of Grand Island, 61 Neb. 22 (84 N. W. 406).

6. (1901.) The principle of election of remedies applies only where there are two or more co-existing remedies so inconsistent that a party cannot choose one without re-

7. (1904.) An action for the conversion of chattels and one for the possession thereof are not inconsistent remedies; and one who has sued for conversion may dismiss such action and recover in replevin, if his right is otherwise good. Moss v. Marks, 70 Neb. 701 (97 N. W. 1031).

8. (1906.) The doctrine of election of remedies applies when a party who actually has at hand two inconsistent remedies, with full knowledge of such fact, proceeds to enforce one of these remedies. Turner v. Grimes, 75 Neb. 412 (106 N. W. 465).

9. (1906.) The doctrine of election of remedies cannot be successfully invoked against a party, unless it appear that he has pursued one of two co-existing remedies, so inconsistent that the choice of one necessarily amounts to an abandonment of the other. Schlitz Brewing Co. v. Nielsen, 77 Neb. 868 (110 N. W. 746).

Finality of election.

——In general.

10. (1895.) A grantee who received a conveyance and agreed to pay a debt of the grantor cannot defend a suit by the latter's creditor on the ground that plaintiff previously sued the grantor for the debt and attached the property conveyed as belonging to him. Davis v. National Bank of Commerce, 45 Neb. 589 (63 N. W. 852).

11. (1897.) Where an owner whose property has been condemned and taken for street purposes sues for the value of the property he thereby elects to pursue that remedy and is estopped to call in question the title of the city to the street. Hawver v. City of Omaha, 52 Neb. 734 (73 N. W. 217).

12. (1900.) In a suit against the auditor and the sureties on his official bond the state recovered a judgment for a sum which was inclusive of the fees paid to him by insurance companies which should have been paid directly to the state treasurer instead, the subject of the present litigation. In an error proceeding to the supreme court on behalf of the sureties the judgment was reversed, and it was decided that they were not liable; that the reception of the fees by Moore was not an official act, and, if it be conceded (it is not decided) he became a bailee or trustee of the money for the company, the suit by the state against him cannot be treated as an election to consider him as the debtor and to seek a recovery against him to the exclusion of any remedy against the company, the one primarily liable. State v. Home Ins. Co., 59 Neb. 524 (81 N. W. 443).

13. (1901.) If the law affords but a single remedy, a party is not precluded from resorting thereto merely because he sought to avail himself of another remedy to which he was not entitled. State v. Bank of Commerce of Grand Island, 61 Neb. 22 (84 N. W. 406); City of Omaha v. Redick, 61 Neb. 163 (85 N. W. 46).

14. (1901.) A suit having been brought for the malicious attachment of the plaintiff's property, did not constitute an election of remedies so as to preclude plaintiff from subsequently bringing action on the attachment bond. Simons v. Fagan, 62 Neb. 287 (87 N. W. 21).

15. (1901.) One who is entitled to a choice of remedies, and takes such action as in law amounts to an election, is by such election precluded from pursuing the other remedy, but a mistaken and unsuccessful attempt to do so will not annul the former election nor bar the right to pursue the remedy first selected. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Bigley, 1 Unof. 225 (95 N. W. 344); (1903) Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Olsen, 70 Neb. 559 (97 N. W. 831).

16. (1902.) Prosecution to final judgment of a suit against the person to whom money on deposit was paid by a bank is an election to treat the payment by the bank as proper and authorized, and will bar a subsequent suit against the bank for the amount of the deposit. Jones v. First Nat. Bank of Lincoln, 3 Unof. 73 (90 N. W. 912).

17, 18. (1903.) The right given a member, by the regulations of the relief department of the defendant company, to "elect to accept the benefits in pursuance of these regulations, or to prosecute such claims as he may have at law against the company," when construed with the contract and regulations as a whole, requires the application of the well settled rule of law in regard to election of remedies. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Olsen, 70 Neb. 559 (97 N. W. 831).

19. (1903.) A party cannot adopt one theory of his case, proceed to judgment thereon, and if such judgment is adverse, relitigate his case upon a new theory; but this principle does not apply to a suit in equity on the ground that the plaintiff has commenced an action at law, where the object and purpose of the equity suit are to stay the prosecution of the law action until the contract there sued upon can be reformed on account of mistake; the two actions not being inconsistent, but one is auxiliary to and dependent upon the other. Lansing v. Commercial Union Assurance Co., 4 Unof. 140 (93 N. W. 756).

20. (1905.) When the certificate of membership in a railway relief department expressly provides that the indemnity therein provided shall be waived or forfeited by an action for damages against the railway company itself, the terms of the contract, and not the general rules of law relative to the election of remedies, will determine the consequences of such an election. Walters v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 74 Neb. 551 (104 N. W. 1066).

21. (1906.) A suit by an administrator of a deceased employee of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad Company, who was a member of the relief department of that company, to recover damages, under the statute, for wrongfully or negligently causing the death of such emplyee, is a bar to a subsequent action upon the membership certificate in said department, when the administrator is the same person named as beneficiary in the contract. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Healy, 76 Neb. 783 (107 N. W. 1005).

22. (1906.) Under a contract of membership in the relief department of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad Company, which provided that the receipt of benefits by the beneficiary should bar all actions for damages arising from the death of the member, the beneficiary, after receiving the benefit provided for in the certificate of membership, cannot maintain an action to recover damage for herself caused by such death; but the receipt of such benefit will not bar her action as administratrix of the estate of the deceased for the benefit of her minor children. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Healy, 76 Neb. 786.

23, 24. (1906.) Where a plaintiff sets up a conversion of a team of horses by a bailee, and pleads the execution of a bill of sale by him to the bailee for such team upon the agreement of the bailee to pay a fixed and definite amount therefor, he cannot afterwards, if unsuccessful in this action, in another action claim that the title to the horses never passed from him, and that they were killed by the negligence of the bailee. He had the right to elect as to whether he would treat the title to the property as having passed and sue in assumpsit upon the promise, or he had the right, upon the theory that the title never passed, to sue for the wrong. He did not have the right to do both. Turner v. Grimes, 75 Neb. 412 (106 N. W. 465).

——— Mistake or ignorance of fact.

25. (1902.) If, in attempting and designing to make an election, one puts forth an act or commences an action in ignorance of substantial facts which proffer an alternate remedy, and the knowledge of which is essential to an intelligent choice of procedure, his act or action is not binding; but he may, when informed, adopt a different remedy. Pekin Plow Co. v. Wilson, 66 Neb. 115 (92 N. W. 176).

26. (1904.) One who by action pursues one remedy without being chargeable with notice of facts entitling him to a different one, is not thereby estopped to pursue the latter upon discovery of such facts, if he then discontinues his action for the former. Moss v. Marks, 70 Neb. 701 (97 N. W. 1031).

27. (1904.) If, in attempting and designing to make an election, one puts forth an act or commences an action in ignorance of substantial facts which proffer an alternate remedy, and the knowledge of which is essential to an intelligent choice of procedure, his act or action is not binding. He may, when informed, adopt a different remedy. Lamb v. Rooney, 72 Neb. 322 (100 N. W. 410; 117 Am. St. Rep. 795).

I. ORDERING OR CALLING ELECTION, AND NOTICE.

Special election.

Compelling call of special election, see Mandamus, §§ 175, 176.

1. (1889.) Where a county board calls a special election, in a township, for the purpose of voting bonds in aid of a railroad, it acts as agent for the county and not the township. Kearney County v. Stein, 26 Neb. 132 (40 N. W. 1071).

Petition and proceedings thereon.

2. (1887.) A finding of a board of county commissioners, that a petition for a special election for the relocation of a county seat was not signed by the requisite number of lawful petitioners for the reason that a portion of the signers were minors and non-residents, is not subject to collateral attack, but if erroneous must be reviewed on error. State, ex. rel. Hymer, v. Nelson, 21 Neb. 572 (32 N. W. 589).

3. (1887.) Under the provisions of section 14, chapter 45, Compiled Statutes of 1885, to authorize the county commissioners to call a special precinct election for the purpose of voting bonds in a precinct in aid of works of internal improvements, etc., a petition signed by not less than fifty freeholders of such precinct must be presented to such county commissioners, setting forth the nature of the work contemplated, the amount of bonds sought to be voted, the rate of interest, and the date when the principal and interest shall become due. An election called and held without such petition is of no validity. State v. Babcock, 21 Neb. 187 (31 N. W. 682).

4. (1893.) To entitle a county board to call an election for the removal of a county seat a petition must be presented to it by resident electors of the county equal in number to three-fifths of all the votes cast in the county at the last general election. Crews v. Coffman, 36 Neb. 824 (55 N. W. 265).

5. (1893.) Where objections are made to a petition for an election for the relocation of a county seat, by any resident elector on oath charging that a certain number of the petitioners are minors, certain other number are not electors, certain names are fictitious, a certain number have been bribed, the aggregate of which will reduce the number of petitioners below three-fifths of the votes cast at the preceding general election, it is the duty of the board to set a reasonable time for a hearing of said objections to enable parties to offer proof in support of their charges. Crews v. Coffman, 36 Neb. 824 (55 N. W. 265).

6. (1893.) Persons interested in the removal of a county seat are entitled to examine the original petition in the office of the county clerk before the election is called and should have a reasonable time for that purpose. It is not sufficient to furnish a certified copy as such parties have the right to see the purported signature of the petitioners. Crews v. Coffman, 36 Neb. 824 (55 N. W. 265).

7. (1893.) The petition for an election for the relocation of a county seat must show the section, township and range on which, or the town or city in which a petitioner resides, together with his age and time of residence in the county. Crews v. Coffman, 36 Neb. 824 (55 N. W. 265).

8. (1904.) Where the law requires a petition of a certain character in order to confer power upon a board to call an election for the purpose of issuing bonds or authorizing a tax, the determination of that board is not conclusive as to the sufficiency of the petition or the qualifications of the petitioners. But these subjects are open to inquiry in judicial proceedings to nullify the action, where the parties complaining have not, by acquiescence or laches, estopped themselves from contesting the question. Fullerton v. School District, 41 Neb. 593 (59 N. W. 896).

9. (1895.) Under section 14, chapter 45, Compiled Statutes, it is necessary, to confer jurisdiction upon county commissioners to order the holding of an election on a proposition to vote bonds by a township in aid of a work of internal improvement, that a petition should be presented to such commissioners signed by not less than fifty freeholders of such township. Hoxie v. Scott, 45 Neb. 199 (63 N. W. 387).

Time for holding election.

10. (1905.) Sections 4, 10, 15, 20 and 21, article VI, constitution, and sections 13 and 20, article XVIII, fixing the terms of office of supreme judges, district judges, and regents of the university, provide for a regular succession of and continuity in such terms of office, the force and effect of which are to make it mandatory that a general election shall be held in each of the odd numbered years. State, ex rel. Polk, v. Galusha, 74 Neb. 188 (104 N. W. 197).

11. (1905.) The provision of section 13, article XVI of the constitution, wherein it is provided, "The general election of this state shall be held on the Tuesday succeeding the first Monday of November of each year, except the first general election, which shall be on the second Tuesday in October, 1875," construed, and held, that it is not of itself an imperative command that general elections shall be held annually at the time stated. Whether annual elections are required depends upon the offices created by the fundamental law, and the time as therein provided at which an election must be held to fill such offices. State, ex rel. Polk, v. Galusha, 74 Neb. 188 (104 N. W. 197).

12. (1905.) Where by the fundamental law certain offices are created, the terms of office of which are fixed at certain definite periods of time, and the beginning and termination thereof prescribed, as well as the time for the election of a successor, the legislature is without authority to postpone the election of such successors until the succeeding general election held in the next year, and to extend the term of office of the incumbents during the intervening time, and to provide for an election in a different year in which to elect such successors, and a different time for the beginning of such term of office. State, ex rel. Polk, v. Galusha, 74 Neb. 188 (104 N. W. 197).

Notice or proclamation.

13. (1878.) In ordering an election on the question of the relocation of a county seat, thirty days' notice is required. But even if the notice be for a less time than this, a court of equity will not, for this reason alone, declare the election void at the suit of a party who participated therein, especially where it is not shown that a different result would probably have been obtained if the full statutory notice had been given. Ellis v. Karl, 7 Neb. 381.

14. (1882.) In April, 1881, one M. was elected treasurer of the city of Omaha for the term of two years. In December of the same year M. died, whereupon the mayor of said city appointed B. to fill the vacancy. The appointment was confirmed by the council. B. qualified, and took possession of the office. At the city election in April, 1882, certain voters of said city, without any resolution of the city council or proclamation of the mayor, cast their ballots for S. and D., S. having a majority of all the votes cast. In a proceeding by quo warranto to oust B. from the office of treasurer and install S. therein held, that as the city election in April, 1882, was not a general election in said city, votes cast to fill a vacancy in the office of treasurer, without a resolution of the city council or proclamation of the mayor were nugatory. State, ex rel. Sexauer, v. Buck, 13 Neb. 273 (13 N. W. 406).

15. (1889.) Where a county board calls a special election, in a township of the county, for the purpose of voting upon a proposition for the issuance of the bonds of such township in aid of the construction of a railroad, and gives notice of the election in a newspaper published in the county, the county is liable for the expenses of publishing the notice for the special election. Kearney County v. Stein, 26 Neb. 132 (40 N. W. 1071).

16. (1890.) The provision of law requiring the governor, thirty days previous to an election at which any state officer is to be chosen, to issue his proclamation therefor is directory merely. Under our constitution and laws the elective franchise is vested in the electors, and its exercise regulated by law. It is not deposited in the executive to be doled out by proclamation. State, ex rel. Bates, v. Thayer, 31 Neb. 82 (47 N. W. 704).

17. (1895.) The validity of an election does not depend upon the publication of the election notice. If, under existing circumstances, a particular office is to be filled, an election for that office is not invalid because the filing thereof was not included in the published notice of election, at least where it appears that the electors generally were apprised of the fact and voted on the question. State, ex rel. Berge, v. Lansing, 46 Neb. 514 (64 N. W. 1104; 35 L. R. A. 124).

Effect of unauthorized election.

18. (1886.) Votes cast at an election unauthorized by law are nullities. State, ex rel. Osgood, v. Kinzer; State, ex rel. Lichty, v. Musselman, 20 Neb. 174 (29 N. W. 307).

II. ELECTION DISTRICTS AND OFFICERS.

Creation and alteration of districts.

19. (1892.) It is not within the power of the board of county commissioners to disfranchise legal voters by subdividing a county for election purposes in such manner as to leave them without any opportunity to participate in the election of county off-cers. Peard v. State, ex rel. Huering, 34 Neb. 372 (51 N. W. 828).

20. (1893.) Boundaries of Holt county being clearly defined by law and not including any part of the territory organized as Boyd county, there could be no de facto attachment of the latter to the former so as to entitle the voters thereof to participate in elections in Holt county. State, ex rel. Norton, v. Van Camp, 36 Neb. 91 (54 N. W. 113).

www.uptool.com.cn

Qualifications of officers.

21. (1892.) While under section 2, chapter 54, laws 1889, a candidate for office is not eligible to be supervisor of registration, yet one who holds the latter position is not thereby disqualified from election to office. State, ex rel. Roche, v. Cosgrove, 34 Neb. 386 (51 N. W. 974).

Compensation for serving election notices.

22. (1892.) The only compensation for serving election notices, to which a sheriff is entitled, is five cents a mile for each mile actually and necessarily traveled. Logan County v. Doan, 34 Neb. 104 (51 N. W. 598).

23. (1892.) Where a sheriff at the same time and places posts notices of two elections, he is only entitled to mileage for one trip. Logan County v. Doan, 34 Neb. 104 (51 N. W. 598).

III. QUALIFICATIONS OF VOTERS.

Statutory provisions.

23*a*. (1908.) After the county board has fixed the boundaries of a drainage district the reclamation or protection of which would be of public utility, it is competent for the legislature to permit the property owners within the proposed district to determine by vote whether or not they will avail themselves of the benefits of the act, and the provisions permitting none but property owners to vote, and authorizing each owner of real estate to cast a vote for every acre of land or town lot which he owns within the proposed district, and permitting non-resident owners and foreign corporations owning real estate therein to vote upon the question of organization and for the officers of the district are not unlawful, nor does such election call for the exercise of the elective franchise secured to all electors by section 22 of the bill of rights. State, ex rel. Harris, v. Hanson, 80 Neb. 738 (117 N. W. 412).

Race or color.

24. (1889.) Under the provisions of the first clause of section 6 of the act of congress entitled "An act to provide for the allotment of lands in severalty to Indians," etc., approved February 8, 1887, in order to establish an Indian's right to citizenship, and hence to vote at an election in this state, it must be proven that such Indian was born within the territorial limits of the United States, and that an allotment of land, in fact, has been made to such Indian by the government of the United States in pursuance of said act, or of like authority of law, or treaty of the United States. State, ex rel. Fair, v. Frazier, 28 Neb. 438 (44 N. W. 471).

Sex.

25. (1884.) The act allowing women possessing the qualifications therein prescribed to vote at school meetings is not in conflict with the constitution, and is valid. Women are eligible also to the office of school trustees. State, ex rel. Crosby, v. Cones, 15 Neb. 444 (19 N. W. 682).

Residence.

26. (1876.) Persons residing in an unorganized county are not legal voters in an adjoining organized county, and such votes are illegal. State, ex rel. Valentine, v. Griffey, 5 Neb. 161.

27. (1876.) The military post in Valley county is not a military reservation reserved by the United States on the admission of Nebraska as a state, nor is the land ceded by the state since its admission, but is a part of and subject to the laws of the state, and persons who remove to such lands are residents of the county in which it is located and are entitled to the rights of suffrage therein. State, ex rel. Valentine, v. Griffey, 5 Neb. 161.

28. (1888.) A single man who had a room within the city limits, and took his meals with a family also living within the city limits, but who, a few days before a city election temporarily removed his boarding place to that of a family living outside the limits by reason of the fact that he could not for the time being be accommodated at his usual boarding place, is not disqualified to vote at the election. State, ex rel. Crawford, v. Graham, 23 Neb. 68 (36 N. W. 372).

29. (1888.) One who owns and lives upon a farm during the summer and who considers that his home, but who comes into a village during the winter, and had been boarding within the village limits for more than ninety days prior to a village election, is not qualified to vote at such election. State, ex rel. Crawford, v. Graham, 23 Neb. 68 (36 N. W. 372).

30. (1895.) One's residence is where he has his established home, the place where he is habitually present, and to which, when he departs, he intends to return. Berry v. Wilcox, 44 Neb. 82 (62 N. W. 249; 48 Am. St. Rep. 706).

——— Students.

31. (1895.) The fact that one is a student in a university does not entitle him to vote where the university is situated, nor does it of itself prevent his voting there. He may vote at the seat of the university if he has his residence there and is otherwise qualified. Berry v. Wilcox, 44 Neb. 82 (62 N. W. 249; 48 Am. St. Rep. 706).

32. (1895.) Persons otherwise qualified as voters who come to the seat of a university mainly for the purpose of obtaining an education, who are not dependent upon their parents for support, who have not the intention of returning to their parental home upon the completion of their studies are entitled to vote at the seat of the university. Berry v. Wilcox, 44 Neb. 82 (62 N. W. 249; 48 Am. St. Rep. 706).

Property qualifications.

33. (1900.) Under the provisions of section 4, subdivision 2, chapter 79, Compiled Statutes 1899, defining the qualifications of voters at a meeting of the voters of a school district as follows, "Every person, male or female, who has resided in the district forty days and is twenty-one years old, and who owns real property or personal property that was assessed in the district in his or her name at the last annual assessment, in the district, * * * shall be entitled to vote at any district meeting," held, that the wife of a person owning a homestead on which the family were residing was not, by reason of her homestead interest, or "estate of homestead" in said land, an owner of real estate in said district within the meaning of said section. McLain v Maricle, 60 Neb. 353 (83 N. W. 85).

Forfeiture of citizenship.

34. (1880.) A person convicted of a felony under the laws of the state, or the United States, is not a qualified voter. Gandy v. State, 10 Neb. 243 (4 N. W. 1019).

IV. REGISTRATION OF VOTERS.

Constitutional and statutory provisions.

35. (1887.) Under the constitution of Nebraska, which prescribes the qualifications of voters, and provides that all elections shall be free, and there shall be no hindrance or impediment to the right of a qualified voter to exercise the elective franchise, a registration law which absolutely deprives an elector of the right to vote unless registered on one of the four days, the last one being ten days prior to the election, is void. State, ex rel. Stearns, v. Corner, 22 Neb. 265 (34 N. W. 499; 3 Am. St. Rep. 267).

36. (1887.) A registry law, so far as it provides for a register of qualified electors to be made, and which constitutes such registration one mode of proof of the elector's right, and so far as it might require an elector whose name is not upon such register to make other reasonable proof of his right to the judges of election at the time of offering his vote, would be valid. But where it absolutely deprives the elector of his vote unless previously registered upon certain days named in the law, it is void. State, ex rel. Stearns, v. Corner, 22 Neb. 265 (34 N. W. 499; 3 Am. St. Rep. 267).

Validity of votes without registration.

37. (1885.) The registration law is to be used as a shield and not as a sword; as a means to prevent illegal voting, and not to disfranchise the voters of a county or its subdivisions; therefore, where a statute limits the time for holding an election to a less number of days than is required for the registration of voters, and no registration is had, the votes cast at such election will not on that account be illegal. State, ex rel. Harvey, v. Piper, 17 Neb. 614 (24 N. W. 204).

V. NOMINATIONS AND PRIMARY ELECTIONS.

Constitutional and statutory provisions.

38. (1902.) Chapter 27, Session Laws 1899—the primary election law—being an original enactment and complete in itself, does not contravene section 11, article III of the constitution, although section 6 operates indirectly as an amendment of section 1 of the general registration law. De France v. Harmer, 66 Neb. 14 (92 N. W. 159).

39. (1905.) The provisions of the primary act (laws 1905, ch. 66), which are found to be invalid, are held not to affect the remainder of the act. State, ex rel. Adair, v. Drexel, 74 Neb. 776 (105 N. W. 174).

40. (1905.) The title of the act (laws 1905, ch. 66) providing for the selection of certain candidates for public office and certain delegates at a primary election, and regulating such primary, does not embrace nor comprehend legislation concerning the registration of voters for general elections, and which is, in substance and effect, amendatory of existing registration laws, and is not broad enough to permit legislation concerning the form and makeup of the official ballots provided for by law to be used at a general election. State, ex rel. Adair, v. Drexel, 74 Neb. 776 (105 N. W. 174).

41. (1906.) Section 118*h*, chapter 26, Compiled Statutes 1907, of the "Australian ballot law" is not in conflict with the constitution, and confers power upon county courts and upon judges of the district and supreme courts at chambers to summarily review the action of the officer with whom an original certificate of nomination is filed, and to make such order therein as the law requires. State, ex rel. Offill, v. Hallowell, 77 Neb. 610 (110 N. W. 717).

Party divisions and conflicting nominations.

42. (1895.) It is not the province of the secretary of state to determine which of two rival state conventions of the same party is entitled to recognition as the regular convention. State, ex rel. Sturdevant, v. Allen, 43 Neb. 651 (62 N. W. 35); (1896) Phelps v. Piper, 48 Neb. 724 (67 N. W. 755; 33 L. R. A. 53); (1896) State, ex rel. Dahlman, v. Piper, 50 Neb. 25, 39 (69 N. W. 378).

43. (1896.) The question as to which one of two factions of a political party is the true representative of such political party is rather a political than a judicial question. Phelps v. Piper, 48 Neb. 724 (67 N. W. 755; 33 L. R. A. 53).

Nominations by primary election.

44. (1905.) The provisions found in the primary act (laws 1905, ch. 66) limiting the right of parties to participate in a primary election and to have the names of candidates for nomination to appear on the primary ballots to those casting at least one per cent. of the total vote cast at the last election, is a reasonable classification of parties and does not conflict with the constitution guaranteeing freedom in the exercise of the elective franchise. State, ex rel. Adair, v. Drexel, 74 Neb. 776 (105 N. W. 174).

45. (1905.) It is not competent for the legislature to provide in a primary election law that, before a person eligible to office can be voted for at a primary and have his name appear on a primary ballot, he shall pay a fee for filing nomination papers, computed at one per cent. of the emoluments authorized by law for the office to which such candidate aspires during the term for which he would serve, if elected, since such provisions are an unwarranted hindrance and impediment to the exercise of the elective franchise, and in conflict with section 22, article I of the constitution. State, ex rel. Adair, v. Drexel, 74 Neb. 776 (105 N. W. 174).

46. (1905.) The provisions of the primary act (laws 1905, ch. 66) making the right of an elector to participate in a primary election to depend upon his party affiliation, is a legitimate exercise of legislative power, in no way conflicting with the fundamental law guaranteeing freedom in the exercise of the elective franchise. State, ex rel. Adair, v. Drexel, 74 Neb. 776 (105 N. W. 174).

46*a*. (1907.) If an individual has filed the application required by section 5 of the primary election law (laws 1907, ch. 52) and has duly qualified himself to be the candidate of a political party, and the requisite number of members of another party file a petition complying with section 45 of that act, asking that the name of the same person be also placed upon the ballot of their party, it is the duty of the officer making up the ballot to place the name of the person so designated upon the ballots of both political parties. State, ex rel. Sundean, v. Junkin, 80 Neb. 1 (113 N. W. 801).

46*b*. (1907.) The same person may be the candidate of more than one political party for nomination at a primary election, but he cannot be the nominee of any party unless he receives the requisite number of votes cast by that party. State, ex rel. Dickinson, v. Sheldon, 80 Neb. 4 (113 N. W. 802).

Nomination by convention.

47. (1898.) A nomination to public office made by four out of twenty-eight members of a county committee chosen by a political party is invalid, where previous notice of the time and the place of the meeting of the meeting of the committee has not been given to the other members thereof. State, ex rel. Whedon, v. Smith, 57 Neb. 41 (77 N. W. 384).

Certificate of nomination.

48. (1898.) Failure of the secretary of a county convention to certify the name of a nominee, creates a vacancy which the county central committee of the party was authorized to fill under the provisions of the Australian Ballot Law. State, ex rel. Fox, v. Clark, 56 Neb. 584 (77 N. W. 87).

49. (1905.) In the absence of a special provision in the election laws the general statute applies, and under section 136, chapter 26, Compiled Statutes, the eight days' time should be computed by excluding the day of filing the certificate of nomination and including the day of election. State, ex rel. Eastham, v. Dewey, 73 Neb. 396 (102 N. W. 1015).

Nominations to fill vacancies.

50. (1905.) If all the parties interested agree that one nominated for office by a political convention shall decline such nomination and the committee appoints another in his place, eight days before the election, it is a compliance with section 136, chapter 26, Compiled Statutes, and the person so selected for the vacancy is entitled to a place on the ballot. State, ex rel. Eastham, v. Dewey, 73 Neb. 396 (102 N. W. 1015).

Objections and contests.

51. (1893.) An objection that the "convention," "primary meeting," "committee," or "electors" nominating a candidate for a public office had not the legal authority to make such nomination, must be made before the election and in the manner provided by section 136, chapter 26, of the Compiled Statutes; and if not so made, the legal authority of such "convention," etc., to make such nomination—the certificate thereof being in apparent conformity with the provisions of the election law—will, in the absence of fraud, be conclusively presumed. State, ex rel. Crawford, v. Norris, 37 Neb. 299 (55 N. W. 1086).

52. (1896.) The provisions of the statute (Comp. Stat., ch. 26, sec. 136) known as the "Australian Ballot Law," requiring objections to a certificate of nomination of candidates for office to be filed within three days after the filing of such certificate, are mandatory, and must be strictly followed, else said certificate, if in conformity with law, will be deemed valid. State, ex rel. Casper, v. Piper, 50 Neb. 40 (69 N. W. 383).

——— Determination by public officers.

53. (1895.) It is provided by the Australian Ballot Law, act of March 4, 1891, that all certificates of nomination which are in apparent conformity therewith shall be deemed valid unless objection is made thereto; that in case objections are made candidates shall be notified and the officer with whom the certificate is filed shall pass on such objections, and his decision will be final unless a further order is made by the county court, a judge of the district court, or a justice of the supreme court. Held, That such officer, in the consideration of objections, is not confined to mere formal matters relating to the certificate of nomination, but may determine from extrinsic evidence whether the candidates therein named were in fact nominated by the convention or assemblage of voters or delegates claiming to represent a party which cast the requisite number of votes at the last election. State, ex rel. Sturdevant, v. Allen, 43 Neb. 651 (62 N. W. 35); (1896) State, ex rel. Dahlman, v. Piper, 50 Neb. 25, 39 (69 N. W. 378).

54. (1896.) An appeal or proceeding in error will not lie directly to the supreme court to review the decisions of the secretary of state under the Australian Ballot Law. State, ex rel. Dahlman, v. Piper, 50 Neb. 25, 39 (69 N. W. 378).

55. (1896.) The secretary of state in passing upon objections to a certificate of nomination for a public office is not confined alone to the consideration of objections as to matters of form, but has the power to decide from extrinsic evidence whether the candidate named in such certificate was in fact nominated by a convention called and held in accordance with the precedents and usages of a political party which cast one per centum of the votes of the state at the last general election, or by a faction in good faith claiming to represent a party casting such a percentum of the vote of the state. State, ex rel. Rose, v. Piper, 50 Neb. 42 (69 N. W. 384).

Certification of nomination by public officer.

56. (1895.) Where two factions of a political party nominate candidates and certify such nominations to the secretary of state in due form of law, the latter will not inquire into the regularity of the convention held by either faction, but will certify to the several county clerks the names of the candidates nominated by each, such practice being in harmony with the rule which requires courts, in case of doubt, to adopt that construction which affords the citizen the greater liberty in casting his ballot. State, ex rel. Sturdevant, v. Allen, 43 Neb. 651 (62 N. W. 35); (1896) Phelps v. Piper, 48 Neb. 724 (67 N. W. 755; 33 L. R. A. 53); (1896) State, ex rel. Dahlman, v. Piper, 50 Neb. 25, 39 (69 N. W. 378).

57. (1896.) The finding of facts made by the secretary of state in passing upon objections filed against certificates of nomination, if not conclusive, are at least prima facie right. State, ex rel. Dahlman, v. Piper, 50 Neb. 25, 39 (69 N. W. 378).

58. (1896.) Upon the facts in this case it was held that the secretary of state properly refused to certify to the county clerks the names of certain candidates for office. State, ex rel. Rose, v. Piper, 50 Neb. 42 (69 N. W. 384).

VI. BALLOTS.

Compelling placing names on ballot, see Mandamus, §§ 171-173.

Constitutional and statutory provisions.

59. (1893.) Provisions of the election law which are not essential to a fair election will be held to be formal and directory only unless declared to be mandatory by the law itself. State, ex rel. Norton, v. Van Camp, 36 Neb. 91 (53 N. W. 113).

Form and contents.

60. (1893.) Votes for representative will not be rejected because the number of the district is not designated upon the official ballot in counties included in one district only. State, ex rel. Norton, v. Van Camp, 36 Neb. 91 (53 N. W. 113).

61. (1901.) The form of ballots should be uniform throughout the state. State, ex rel. De France, v. Frye, 62 Neb. 817 (88 N. W. 149).

——— Order and arrangement of tickets and names.

62. (1895.) An officer charged with the preparation of official ballots is allowed some discretion in the arrangement of party names. Woods v. State, ex rel. McNerney, 44 Neb. 430 (63 N. W. 23).

63. (1895.) In the absence of an abuse of discretion on the part of the officer preparing the arrangement of the names of the candidates for office, the courts will not interpose. Woods v. State, ex rel. McNerney, 44 Neb. 430 (63 N. W. 23).

——— Party names.

64. (1900.) The People's Independent party having been generally and popularly known in this state as the "Populist Party," that name cannot be adopted and used by a new political organization. Porter v. Flick, 60 Neb. 773 (84 N. W. 262).

65. (1900.) Section 131 of the Australian Ballot Law (Comp. Stat., 1899, ch. 26) forbids a new political organization from using an old party name, although such name is the one by which it is generally and popularly known, and not the name which the officers of its convention have certified to the secretary of state for use upon the official ballot. Porter v. Flick, 60 Neb. 773 (84 N. W. 262).

66. (1900.) The authority given by the Australian Ballot Law (Comp. Stat. 1899, ch. 26, sec. 137) to the county court and to the judges of the district and supreme courts is, in its nature, judicial; and the orders made by such court or judge may be reviewed by error proceeding. Porter v. Flick, 60 Neb. 773 (84 N. W. 262).

67. (1900.) The legislative purpose in forbidding the adoption and use of an old party name by a new political organization (Comp. Stats. 1899, ch. 26, sec. 131) was to avoid confusion in voting and to prevent fraud at elections; to enable the elector to express, with certainty, his real choice of candidates, and to eliminate, as far as possible, from the ballot, whatever might tend to deceive him into casting a vote contrary to his intention and for persons to whom he is opposed. Porter v. Flick, 60 Neb. 773 (84 N. W. 262).

68. (1901.) It is the duty of the proper officer, in preparing all official ballots, to put at the top and left side of the ballot, in black-faced capital type, not less than one-eighth of an inch high, the name of each party having candidates on the ballot, and to the right of each party a circle one-half inch in diameter, with leaders connecting the party name to such circle. State, ex rel. De France, v. Frye, 62 Neb. 817 (88 N. W. 149).

——— Names and designation of offices.

69. (1876.) A ballot voted at a legal election without any designation of an office, and also a ballot voted with two or more names on it, when the tenure of the office is limited to one person only, are illegal and void. State, ex rel. Valentine, v. Griffey, 5 Neb. 161.

——— Names and designation of candidates.

70. (1890.) Ballots cast at an election for justice of the peace, in the Third district of the city of Lincoln for P. for the office of justice of the peace are not invalidated as to him because they also contain the name of B. "For justice of the peace of the First district" and that of C. "For justice of the peace of the Second district." State, ex rel. Stearns, v. Foxworthy, 29 Neb. 341 (45 N. W. 632).

71. (1890.) Ballots cast at an election for justice of the peace in the Third district of the city of Lincoln containing the names of three persons, when but one person is to be elected to that office, are, under section 40, chapter 26, Compiled Statutes, void, and cannot be counted for any one for that office. State, ex rel. Stearns, v. Foxworthy, 29 Neb. 341 (45 N. W. 632).

72. (1893.) The vote of B. county for the relator as representative should not be rejected, for the reason that his name was written on the sample and official ballots by the clerk after they had been printed and were ready for distribution. State, ex rel. Norton, v. Van Camp, 36 Neb. 91 (53 N. W. 113).

73. (1895.) The act approved March 4, 1891, commonly called the "Australian Ballot Law," contemplates that the name of each candidate shall be printed once only on the official and sample ballot, accompanied by such political or other designations as correspond to the nomination papers on file with the officers charged with the duty of printing and distributing such ballots. State, ex rel. Sturdevant, v. Allen, 43 Neb. 651 (62 N. W. 35.

——— Proposed constitutional amendment.

74. (1907.) It is not necessary that the entire proposed amendment be printed upon the official ballot. If enough is printed upon the ballot to identify the amendment and show its character and purpose, it is sufficient. State, ex rel. Thompson, v. Winnett, 78 Neb. 379 (110 N. W. 1113).

——— Indorsement.

75. (1899.) The requirement of the Australian ballot law, that the names of two judges of election shall be written on the back of each ballot used, and the provision that a ballot not indorsed as aforesaid shall not be counted are mandatory, and are not inimical to the constitution. Orr v. Bailey, 59 Neb. 128 (80 N. W. 495).

76. (1899.) The statutory provision requiring the names of two judges to be indorsed upon a ballot is mandatory and is not sufficiently complied with by the indorsement of the name of one judge. Mauck v. Brown, 59 Neb. 382 (81 N. W. 313).

77. (1905.) A voter who has complied with the statute by obtaining from the election board a ballot indorsed in writing with the names of two members of the board, both of whom are ostensibly and, as he honestly supposes, are really judges, will not be deprived of his vote by the mere fact that one of such names is that of a clerk of the election. Bingham v. Broadwell, 73 Neb. 605 (103 N. W. 323).

——— Objections.

78. (1893.) By the provisions of section 141, chapter 26 of the Compiled Statutes, a candidate may make objections to the ballots as printed by the county clerk, and invoke the power of the courts to correct any error or omission in the name or description of his competitor; but if such candidate neglects to make such objection until after the election, he cannot then object to the result because of any error in the political designation of his competitor on said ballots, without a showing of fraud and that the error by deceiving the electors prevented a full and fair expression of the voters' will. State, ex rel. Crawford, v. Norris, 37 Neb. 299 (55 N. W. 1086).

Indication of choice of voter.

79. (1893.) The provision in section 20 of the act approved March 4, 1891, known as the "Australian Ballot Law," for the marking of ballots with ink, is directory only, and ballots, if in other respects regular, will, in the absence of fraud, be counted, although marked with a pencil. State, ex rel. Waggoner, v. Russell, 34 Neb. 116 (51 N. W. 465; 33 Am. St. Rep. 625; 15 L. R. A. 740).

80. (1893.) While the statute requires that the cross which signifies the preference of the elector shall, in ink, be placed in a space designated for that purpose, a ballot upon which such preference is indicated by a cross made with a lead pencil, outside the space designated, but opposite the name of the choice of the elector, should be counted according to such manifest intention. Spurgin v. Thompson, 37 Neb. 39 (55 N. W. 297).

81. (1896.) The provision of section 20, act of 1891 ("Australian Ballot Law"), for the expressing of the voter's intention by a mark opposite the name of the candidate of his choice, is mandatory, and the manner thus prescribed is exclusive of all others; and such is the rule whether the names of candidates be printed on the ballot or written thereon by the voter. Martin v. Miles, 46 Neb. 772 (65 N. W. 889).

82. (1899.) That the cross be in the circle or square is not of the essentials of a valid ballot or vote. If the proper mark is made either on the right or left of, and opposite to, the name of a candidate, it may indicate the choice of an elector. And on a straight party ticket, if the cross is placed within the space which contains the circle, although not within or touching the latter, it may suffice to indicate the intention of the voter. Mauck v. Brown, 59 Neb. 382 (81 N. W. 313).

Irregularities.

83. (1897.) The intention of an elector must be ascertained from his ballot, and any inaccuracies in the preparation thereof cannot be urged for the first time after election, to defeat the clearly expressed intention of the voter. Tutt v. Hawkins, 53 Neb. 367 (73 N. W. 692).

Distinguishing marks.

84. (1893.) The indorsement of the name "Eagleham," he not being one of the election judges, upon a ballot, was within the inhibition of the statute forbidding the marking of a ballot by an elector, and vitiates said ballot. Spurgin v. Thompson, 37 Neb. 39 (55 N. W. 297).

85. (1899.) That an elector shall place no mark upon his ballot by which it may afterwards be identified as the one voted by him, and that he shall not make any mark on the ballot except as directed in the law, are mandatory provisions, and a violation of either will invalidate the ballot as to which it occurs. Mauck v. Brown, 59 Neb. 382 (81 N. W. 313). [Overruled. 73 Neb. 605; 73 Neb. 622.]

86. (1905.) Irregular and defective or unauthorized markings of a ballot, apparently the result of innocent awkwardness, inattention or ignorance, and apparently not intended or made use of for the purpose of subsequent identification, will not justify the rejection of such ballots, if the intent of the voter can be ascertained therefrom. Bingham v. Broadwell, 73 Neb. 605 (103 N. W. 323).

87. (1905.) On the trial of a contested election ballots will not be treated as void simply because of irregular or unauthorized markings or mutilations which appear to have been innocently made as the result of awkwardness, inattention, mistake or ignorance, if the lawful intent of the voter can be ascertained therefrom. Griffith v. Bonawitz, 73 Neb. 622 (103 N. W. 327).

VII. CONDUCT OF ELECTION.

Constitutional and statutory provisions.

88. (1887.) The act "To amend the election laws for metropolitan cities, and cities of the first class in the state of Nebraska," being in contravention of that clause of the constitution that "no bill shall contain more than one subject, which shall be clearly expressed in its title, and no law shall be amended unless the new act contains the section or sections so amended, and the section or sections so amended shall be repealed," is void. State, ex rel. Stearns, v. Corner, 22 Neb. 265 (34 N. W. 499; 3 Am. St. Rep. 267).

89. (1903.) An election provided for and required to take place by the constitution may be held at the required time without special legislation providing therefor. State, ex rel. Gordon, v. Moores, 70 Neb. 48 (96 N. W. 1011).

89*a*. (1908.) Section 22 of the bill of rights (const., art. I), providing that "all elections shall be free, and there shall be no hindrance or impediment of the right of a qualified voter to exercise the elective franchise," does not apply to an election upon the formation of a drainage district, nor one for the election of officers therefor. State, ex rel. Harris, v. Hanson, 80 Neb. 724 (115 N. W. 294).

Polling places.

90. (1886.) Where a city is under control of county organization and the wards of the city are established under the town's organization, the county has control over the voting places at a general election. State, ex rel. Wagner, v. Emery, 20 Neb. 301 (30 N. W. 57).

91. (1891.) It is the duty of the county board to provide a suitable number of polling places to accommodate the voters of the county, and no doubt the board may be compelled, in a proper proceeding, to provide proper facilities. State, ex rel. Eble, v. Leavitt, 33 Neb. 285 (49 N. W. 1097).

92. (1891.) Every legal voter of the precinct is entitled to vote at the place provided for that purpose by the county board, although such place may be within the limits of a city of the second class; and where there is more than one voting place in such city he may vote at any one of them. State, ex rel. Eble, v. Leavitt, 33 Neb. 285 (49 N. W. 1097).

93. (1891.) A legal voter in a precinct containing a city of the second class over 2,500, but who resides outside the city limits, cannot be registered by the board of registration in such city, but where no polling places are provided for such precinct, outside the city limits, such voter is entitled to vote at any one of those situated within the city. State, ex rel. Eble, v. Leavitt, 33 Neb. 285 (49 N. W. 1097).

94. (1892.) Where a county commissioner district includes part of a city ward whose polling place is outside the district, the votes of resident electors of both district and ward, cast at such polling place for commissioner, should be countd, since the voting by said electors outside of the commissioner district is a mere irregularity not affecting the merits of the case. Peard v. State, ex rel. Huering, 34 Neb. 372 (51 N. W. 828).

95. (1893.) The vote of a precinct should not be rejected because the polling place was located within an Indian reservation. State, ex rel. Crawford, v. Norris, 37 Neb. 299 (55 N. W. 1086).

Time for voting.

96. (1900.) Where it affirmatively appears that an election was fairly conducted; that it was held on the day and within the hours fixed by law; that due notice was given and that a majority of the electors entitled to vote voted in favor of the proposition submitted, the failure to keep the polls open for the entire time required by the statute will be deemed a harmless irregularity. Baltes v. Farmers Irrigation District, 60 Neb. 310 (83 N. W. 83).

Use of voting machines.

97. (1906.) An inscription on the ballot label of a voting machine used in elections upon questions may be abbreviated to meet the requirements of the limited space. The inscription, "Shall the city issue $60,000 fire-engine house bonds to run 20 years at 4%?" upon the ballot label of the voting machines used at the election in controversy, as an abbreviation of the proposition quoted in the last paragraph, is a sufficient statement of the question submitted. Linn v. City of Omaha, 76 Neb. 553 (107 N. W. 983).

Irregularities and errors.

98. (1893.) Innocent irregularities of election officers which are free from fraud and have not prevented a free and fair expression of the popular choice, will not vitiate the result of an election unless the legislature has expressly so declared. State, ex rel. Crawford, v. Norris, 37 Neb. 299 (55 N. W. 1086).

99. (1905.) Minor irregularities by members of an election board, voters and bystanders at a polling place, unaccompanied by fraud or conduct affecting the integrity of the ballot, will not operate to quash the election. Bingham v. Broadwell, 73 Neb. 605 (103 N. W. 323).

Bribery.

100. (1892.) No form of bribery to secure votes will be sanctioned by the courts This rule is equally as important in county seat elections as in other cases. The design of the law is to secure the free and voluntary expression of each voter of his choice for the county seat. Ayers v. Moan, 34 Neb. 210 (51 N. W. 830).

VIII. COUNT OF VOTES, RETURNS, AND CANVASS.

Parol evidence to contradict election returns, see Evidence, § 393.

Compelling canvass of returns, see Mandamus, §§ 179-188.

Sufficiency of petition in mandamus to compel canvass of returns, see Mandamus, § 260.

Number of votes necessary to choice.

101. (1897.) The requirements of section 30, article I, chapter 18, Compiled Statutes, in regard to the proportion of votes which must have been cast in favor of a proposition submitted at an election, to work its adoption, held applicable to the submission of a proposition to sell the public grounds of a county. Sternberg v. State, ex rel. Keller, 50 Neb. 127 (69 N. W. 849).

102. (1897.) A proposition to authorize the issuance of funding bonds was submitted to the electors of a city, pursuant to the provisions of such section of the statutes, at the same time and place as the general city election. Held, Under the facts shown, to be but one election; that the presumption is that all the electors voted at such election; and the proposition, to work its adoption, must have received a majority of all the votes cast at such election. Bryan v. City of Lincoln, 50 Neb. 620 (70 N. W. 252; 35 L. R. A. 752).

Tie votes.

103. (1888.) In an application for a mandamus against the incumbent of a county office, requiring him to deliver the books, papers, and moneys of the office to the relator, who claimed the office by virtue of a tie vote at the election, and a determination of such tie in his favor by lot, held that the certificate should show specifically the manner in which such lot was determined; and where it is shown that the respondent was not present, and took no part in such determination, the certificate should show that the county clerk drew for him, and that in such drawing and the determining of such lot, the said clerk, for the respondent, was an actor, equally with the relator, and that such lot was conducted and determined in such manner as to preclude the possibility of forethought or design on the part of any of the actors or canvassers by which the determination of the lot might have been influenced to the disadvantage of the respondent. State, ex rel. Davey, v. Wilkinson, 23 Neb. 710 (37 N. W. 617).

104. (1895.) A petition for mandamus to compel judges of election to assemble and determine a tie vote by lot, under section 45, chapter 26, Compiled Statutes, must allege that the city clerk has notified the candidate to appear at his office for that purpose. State, ex rel. Shaffer, v. Bowman, 45 Neb. 752 (64 N. W. 223).

Votes to be counted.

105. (1892.) A peremptory mandamus will not be allowed, requiring the judges and clerks of election to count ballots rejected by them, after such ballots have been returned to the county clerk and are beyond their control. State, ex rel. Waggoner, v. Russell, 34 Neb. 116 (51 N. W. 465; 33 Am. St. Rep. 625; 15 L. R. A. 740).

106. (1896.) Where there were cast upon the question of relocation of the county seat of Red Willow county 867 votes for Indianola, and for McCook 1,339 votes, and the return of county canvassers showed ballots to have been rejected or not to have been voted or accounted for, held, that McCook, having received more than three-fifths of the numbers above given, became the county seat of said county. State, ex rel. Hocknell, v. Roper, 47 Neb. 417 (66 N. W. 539).

107. (1896.) Under the provisions of the act for the relocation of county seats, there being no requirement that abortive ballots shall be certified to the county canvassing board, such ballots cannot be counted for the purpose of making up the grand total, of which a place other than the existing county seat must receive three-fifths to be entitled to the relocation of the county seat, merely because in the certified return of the county election board such ballots were referred to as "ballots not reported or accounted for," or as "rejected" or "blank ballots." State, ex rel. Hocknell, v. Roper, 47 Neb. 417 (66 N. W. 539).

108. (1907.) The act of 1901 (laws 1901, ch. 29), amending various sections of the general election law so as to provide for counting straight party votes for a constitutional amendment, when such party has indorsed such amendment, does not violate the constitution, and it is within the power of the legislature to provide such regulations. State, ex rel. Thompson, v. Winnett, 78 Neb. 379 (110 N. W. 1113).

Returns.

109. (1876.) Extrinsic evidence of a public nature, including the circumstances surrounding an election, may be received in evidence to correct a mistake in the return of the canvassers of the vote, in respect to the designation of an office voted for at such election. State, ex rel. Valentine, v. Griffey, 5 Neb. 161.

110. (1892.) Under the provisions of section 20, chapter 26, Compiled Statutes, it is the duty of judges and clerks of election to return a true list of the persons voting at that election and certify the same. It is also the duty of the judges and clerks to certify the aggregate number of votes cast for each person voted for, but it is no part of their duty to certify that certain persons received a specified number of votes as democrat and a certain number as people's independent, or otherwise, and such certification has no force or effect. State, ex rel. Christy, v. Stein, 35 Neb. 848 (53 N. W. 999).

111. (1896.) Election returns consist of the certificate of election officers, the list of those voting, and the tally list of the number of votes cast for the different persons. State, ex rel. Welty, v. McFadden, 46 Neb. 668 (65 N. W. 800).

112. (1896.) Where it appears that an unauthorized alteration has been made in the return of the vote after the return has been delivered to the county clerk, the canvassers should disregard the alteration, and make the count according to the original and true return. State, ex rel. Welty, v. McFadden, 46 Neb. 668 (65 N. W. 800).

——— Publication.

113. (1891.) The publication of the returns of the election of officers of the executive department, by the speaker of the house of representatives, immediately upon the organization of the house, is a ministerial duty in regard to which he has no discretionary power, and can be enforced by mandamus. State, ex rel. Benton, v. Elder, 31 Neb. 169 (47 N. W. 710; 10 L. R. A. 796).

Digitized by Google

114. (1891.) The joint convention provided for in section 4, article V, constitution, cannot relieve the speaker of the house of his duty to open and publish the returns of election of officers of the executive department immediately, and mandamus lies to compel the performance of such duty. State, ex rel. Benton, v. Elder, 31 Neb. 169 (47 N. W. 710; 10 L. R. A. 796).

115. (1891.) The speaker of the house of representatives may be compelled by mandamus to publish election returns as prescribed by section 4, article V, constitution, notwithstanding a resolution of the joint convention directing him to postpone such duty pending a contest of such election. State, ex rel. Benton, v. Elder, 31 Neb. 169 (47 N. W. 710; 10 L. R. A. 796).

Preservation or disposition of ballots.

116. (1892.) In a contest of election the ballots at the election constitute the primary evidence to determine the rights of the respective parties. It must appear, however, that they have been preserved substantially in the manner and by the officers prescribed by the statute. If they have been placed in a position to be tampered with by interested parties, the burden of proof is on the party offering them in evidence to show that they are in the same condition as when sealed up by the several election boards. Albert v. Twohig, 35 Neb. 563 (53 N. W. 583); (1894) Martin v. Miles, 40 Neb. 135 (58 N. W. 732).

117. (1894.) Where the testimony in a contested case showed that the ballots offered in evidence had been by the county clerk sent to the secretary of state, by whom, about a month afterwards, they had been returned to such county clerk in a grain sack tied with a string and not sealed or in any other way fastened so as to afford evidence that the same had not been tampered with, and there was no evidence negativing the possibility that the string fastening said grain sack might have been untied and its contents altered, held, that such ballots should not have been considered. Martin v. Miles, 40 Neb. 135 (58 N. W. 732).

Canvass of returns.

118. (1888.) It is the duty of the board of canvassers to canvass the returns as they found them, in the absence of any proof that they had been mutilated or changed after being certified by the election board. State, ex rel. Romig, v. Wilson, 24 Neb. 139 (38 N. W. 31).

119. (1891.) The canvass of the votes in a county is to be made within six days after the closing of the polls. Sawyer v. Sweet, 33 Neb. 630 (50 N. W. 954).

120. (1896.) Where there is a discrepancy between the certificate of the election board and the tally list as to the number of votes cast for a candidate, the canvassers should determine which is correct, after comparing them with the list of voters returned, and declare the result accordingly. State, ex rel. Welty, v. McFadden, 46 Neb. 668 (65 N. W. 800).

121. (1896.) The tally list required to be sent to the county clerk is a part of the election returns and is proper to be considered by the canvassing officers, and where there is a discrepancy between the certificate of the election board and tally list as to the vote cast for any person, it is for the canvassers to determine which correctly states the vote, after making comparisons with the list of those purporting to have voted, and they should make the abstract of the vote and declare the result accordingly. State, ex rel. Bartow, v. Eastman, 46 Neb. 675 (65 N. W. 805).

122. (1904.) The duty of an election board to canvass the votes cast at the election is a political duty plainly prescribed by a positive statute, and cannot be enjoined by the courts. State, ex rel. Ellingsworth, v. Carlson, 72 Neb. 837 (101 N. W. 1004).

123. (1906.) A city election will not be annulled by the courts because the city council delegated to persons not members thereof the ministerial duty of assisting the city clerk in tabulating the election returns, in the absence of fraud or mistake. Linn v. City of Omaha, 76 Neb. 552 (107 N. W. 983).

——Powers and proceedings of canvassers.

124. (1879.) No power is given by statutes to the canvassers of an election to reject or throw out votes for the reason that non-residents had voted at the election. State, ex rel. Reed, v. Ramsey, 8 Neb. 286.

125. (1880.) A board of canvassers have no judicial power whatever under the law of 1873 (G. S., 352), and their duty is simply to count the votes returned and declare the result. They cannot look beyond the returns. Hagge v. State, 10 Neb. 51 (4 N. W. 375).

126. (1880.) Election canvassers have no power to inquire into the qualifications of judges or clerks of election or to reject or throw out returns actually received. State, ex rel. Townsend, v. Hill, 10 Neb. 58 (4 N. W. 514).

www.libtool.com.cn

127. (1881.) On the organization of N. county, the special commissioners appointed by the governor called an election for the election of officers and the location of the county seat, and in canvassing the votes cast at such election threw out forty votes cast for a certain point as county seat, thereby giving F. a majority of all the votes cast. Held, That the commissioners had no authority to reject votes, and that a mandamus would lie to compel them to canvass all the votes cast, and that the remedy by contest was not exclusive and in many cases was not an adequate remedy. State, ex rel. Willard, v. Stearns, 11 Neb. 104 (7 N. W. 743).

128. (1884.) A board of canvassers of the returns of an election possess no authority to throw out the returns of election from certain precincts and refuse to canvass such votes, and if they do so, they may be compelled by mandamus to reassemble and complete the canvass. State, ex rel. Whittemore, v. Peacock, 15 Neb. 442 (19 N. W. 685).

129. (1886.) It is the duty of board of canvassers to canvass votes returned and to correct error in adding up the votes cast for a candidate. State, ex rel. Wood, v. Hill, 20 Neb. 119 (29 N. W. 258).

130. (1893.) The canvassing board has no authority to go behind the returns and inquire into legality of votes. State, ex rel. Norton, v. Van Camp, 36 Neb. 91 (53 N. W. 113); (1886) State, ex rel. Wood, v. Hill, 20 Neb. 119 (29 N. W. 258).

131. (1896.) The duties of canvassers of election returns are ordinarily ministerial, and as a general rule they are not clothed with either discretionary or quasi-judicial powers. State, ex rel. Welty, v. McFadden, 46 Neb. 668 (65 N. W. 800).

132. (1900.) A county canvassing board has no authority to find and declare the total vote polled at an election; and a finding in that respect, made by it, will be rejected as surplusage. State, ex rel. Saunders, v. Clark, 59 Neb. 702 (82 N. W. 8).

——— Compelling canvass.

133. (1876.) If the canvassers of the vote of an election neglect or refuse to count all the votes and fully perform their duty, they may be compelled by mandamus to discharge that duty. State, ex rel. Birmingham, v. Dinsmore, 5 Neb. 145.

134. (1880.) A county clerk may be compelled by mandamus to complete the canvass of an election. State, ex rel. Townsend, v. Hill, 10 Neb. 58 (4 N. W. 514).

135. (1886.) If sections 64 et seq. of the statute (1879, p. 240) be held to apply to cases where the canvassers have neglected to make correct and proper returns, etc., and be further held to be a complete remedy at law, said provisions could only apply to a case where the relator has an opportunity to avail himself of the benefit of the said act, with all of its privileges as to time. State, ex rel. Townsend, v. Hill, 10 Neb. 58 (4 N. W. 514).

136. (1881.) A citizen of the county, being interested in the execution of the laws, may apply for a writ of mandamus to compel commissioners to canvass votes cast at one election to locate a county seat. State, ex rel. Willard, v. Stearns, 11 Neb. 104 (7 N. W. 743).

137. (1885.) Where there are but one set of papers purporting to be the returns of an election from a given precinct delivered to the county clerk, or his deputy, or in his office, within the time limited by law for the canvassing of the returns, it is the duty of such clerk to canvass such returns in the manner provided by statute, although such returns may not have been sealed up, marked, bound together or directed as provided by law. And such duty will be enforced by mandamus. Long v. State, ex rel. Hoxie, 17 Neb. 60 (22 N. W. 120).

138. (1896.) Mandamus will lie to compel a canvassing board to reconvene and make a correct canvass of the election returns, where it adjourned without fully performing its duty. State, ex rel. Welty, v. McFadden, 46 Neb. 668 (65 N. W. 800).

——— Irregularities and errors.

139. (1880.) An error, if any, by the county commissioners in rejecting certain votes cast at an election for the relocation of a county seat, cannot be reviewed by proceedings in mandamus. State, ex rel. Morgan, v. Nemaha County, 10 Neb. 32 (4 N. W. 373).

——— Recanvass.

140. (1879.) Mandamus will not lie to compel county commissioners to recanvass an election for alleged illegal votes cast at such election, as such commissioners were not in default. State, ex rel. Reed, v. Ramsey, 8 Neb. 286.

www.libtool.com.cn

——— Enforcing right established by canvass.

141. (1896.) In an appropriate case the court will by mandamus enforce the prima facie right established by the canvass, but it will not determine the ultimate right. State, ex rel. Hocknell, v. Roper, 46 Neb. 730 (65 N. W. 802).

Certificate of election.

142. (1892.) It is the duty of a county clerk to issue a certificate of election to the person receiving the highest number of votes cast at an election, and he has no authority to classify the votes cast for a candidate as people's independent, democratic, or otherwise. State, ex rel. Christy, v. Stein, 35 Neb. 848 (53 N. W. 999).

143. (1892.) By section 46, chapter 26, Compiled Statutes, it is made the duty of a county clerk, upon the reception of the returns from each election precinct, ward, etc., and within six days after the closing of the polls, together with two disinterested electors chosen by himself, to open the poll books and make abstracts of the votes cast * * * for members of the legislature from the county alone on one sheet, and "of votes for members of the legislature by districts comprising more than one county, on another sheet," and by section 48 the clerk is required to make out a certificate of election to the person having the highest number of votes. State, ex rel. Christy, v. Stein, 35 Neb. 848 (53 N. W. 999).

144. (1893.) While each house of the legislature is, by the constitution, made the judge of the election and qualification of its members, the courts will, by mandamus, compel the proper canvassing officers to discharge their duties and issue certificates of election to the parties who, from the returns, appear to have been elected thereto, but the awarding of a certificate of election in obedience to the mandate of the court will not conclude the legislature in determining the question in proceedings by contest. State, ex rel. Norton, v. Van Camp, 36 Neb. 91 (53 N. W. 113).

145. (1893.) Court in mandamus proceeding to require county clerk to issue certificate of election will not inquire into the regularity of the nomination, or certificates of nomination of the candidates. State, ex rel. Norton, v. Van Camp, 36 Neb. 91 (53 N. W. 113).

146. (1898.) Where a candidate for a public office has received and holds the certificate of election, such certificate is conclusive evidence of his right to the office until it is judicially determined that some other person has a better title. State, ex rel. Barton, v. Frantz, 55 Neb. 167 (75 N. W. 546).

147. (1898.) In an action of mandamus to force the proper officer to issue to the relator a certificate of his election to fill an office, the question of the propriety or validity of an election at the alleged time to fill the office may be litigated. Kokes v. State, ex rel. Koupal, 55 Neb. 691 (76 N. W. 467).

IX. CONTESTS.

Compelling taking depositions in contest of, see Mandamus, § 178.

Nature and form of remedy.

148. (1885.) A proceeding to contest an election is substantially an action, and must be exhausted before relief by mandamus will be granted. State, ex rel. Graber, v. Matley, 17 Neb. 564 (24 N. W. 200).

149. (1889.) The statute has provided an adequate remedy, either by contest or quo warranto, for the settlement of the rights of parties in election cases, and those remedies are exclusive. State, ex rel. Hunt, v. City of Kearney, 28 Neb. 103 (44 N. W. 90).

150. (1889.) In an action upon an information, in the nature of quo warranto, wherein it is claimed that the relator and plaintiff was elected to the office of county attorney, and the defendant had, during the term, intruded and usurped the said office, held that the provision of the election law entitled "Contesting Elections" is cumulative and is not an exclusive remedy. State, ex rel. Fair, v. Frazier, 28 Neb. 438 (44 N. W. 471).

Constitutional and statutory provisions.

151. (1891.) The last clause of section 4 and section 15 of article V of the constitution, and the last clause of section 77, chapter 26, Compiled Statutes, held, applicable to the procedure contesting the election of persons declared elected to the offices of governor and lieutenant governor, who have qualified and entered upon their duties, and applicable to all other executive officers. In re Contest Proceedings, 31 Neb. 262 (47 N. W. 923; 10 L. R. A. 803).

152. (1907.) Section 10 of the general election law of 1879 (laws 1879, p. 240) providing that "A county treasurer shall be ineligible to office for more than two consecutive terms" is not unconstitutional, since the subject of the section is germane to the act and is sufficiently expressed in the title, "An act to provide a general election law," the procedure relative to contested elections, and the filling of vacancies in office. Dodson v. Bowlby, 78 Neb. 190 (110 N. W. 698).

Persons entitled to bring proceedings.

153. (1889.) In an action in the nature of quo warranto to contest the right to the office of county attorney, the information may be filed by the complaining party when, if brought in the supreme court, the attorney general, or, if in the district court, the county attorney, having been requested, shall refuse to appear and file it. State, ex rel. Fair, v. Frazier, 28 Neb. 438 (44 N. W. 471).

154. (1894.) Chapter 26, Compiled Statutes, confers no authority upon an elector of a county to contest in his own name an election for the relocation of the county seat, and such a proceeding should be dismissed. Thomas v. Franklin, 42 Neb. 310 (60 N. W. 568).

155. (1894.) The proceeding for contesting an election provided for by chapter 26, Compiled Statutes 1893, is, strictly speaking, neither an action at law nor in equity. It is a summary proceeding of a political character, and the proceeding cannot be maintained by any person unless authority therefor is found in the statute itself. Thomas v. Franklin, 42 Neb. 310 (60 N. W. 310).

Jurisdiction.

156. (1882.) A county court has no jurisdiction of election contest held in city on question of voting aid to works of internal improvement. Foxworthy v. Lincoln & F. R. Co., 13 Neb. 398 (14 N. W. 394).

157. (1889.) A county attorney is a county officer, and the county court of the proper county has original jurisdiction in a proceeding to contest the election of such attorney, and the supreme court has not original jurisdiction. Bell v. Templin, 26 Neb. 249 (41 N. W. 1093).

158. (1892.) There is no power in the legislature to constitute the supreme court a board to try contests of elections, as the powers and duties of the court are essentially judicial in their nature and cannot be perverted from that purpose. Miller v. Wheeler, 33 Neb. 765 (51 N. W. 137).

159. (1892.) In an action to contest the election of certain judges of the district courts. Held, That the limitation in section 2, article VI of the constitution, of the original jurisdiction of the supreme court to cases relating to the revenue, civil cases in which the state shall be a party, mandamus, quo warranto, and habeas corpus was a prohibition upon the power of the court to entertain original jurisdiction in other cases, and that a contest of election is essentially a judicial proceeding. Miller v. Wheeler, 33 Neb. 765 (51 N. W. 137).

160. (1892.) The district court has jurisdiction in case of contested election in relation to township organization. Albert v. Twohig, 35 Neb. 563 (53 N. W. 582).

161. (1894.) The jurisdiction conferred upon county courts in section 71, chapter 26, Compiled Statutes of 1893, to hear and determine contests of election of certain officers therein stated, does not include an action to contest the election of a school district officer. Laird v. Leap, 42 Neb. 834 (60 N. W. 1043).

162. (1899.) The jurisdiction of statutory contests of election of county officers is placed in the county courts, and as term cases. The prescriptions of the code of civil procedure in regard to time within which a justice of the peace must render judgment are not applicable, and judgments may be announced in contests in the county courts at any time during the term at which the trials occur. Orr v. Bailey, 59 Neb. 128 (80 N. W. 495).

Joint meeting of legislative houses to determine contests.

163. (1891.) The last clause of section 4, and section 15 of article V of the constitution, and the last clause of section 77 of chapter 26 of Compiled Statutes construed, and held, that the passage and adoption by the legislature, in the manner provided by law, of a concurrent resolution fixing a day for the uniting of both houses to determine by joint vote contested elections for officers of the executive departments, its signing by the presiding officer of each house, its presentation to and approval by the governor, or in case of his return of the same with objections within five days, Sundays excepted, its reconsideration and approval by three-fifths of the members elected to each house, are indispensable proceedings to the legality of a joint meeting of the two houses to determine contested elections. In re Contest Proceedings, 31 Neb. 262 (47 N. W. 923; 10 L. R. A. 803).

Limitations.

164. (1891.) Where neither the pleading nor proof shows an earlier date, the twenty days in which to file a complaint in the county court will not commence until the expiration of the time limited in which the canvass may be made. Sawyer v. Sweet, 33 Neb. 630 (50 N. W. 954).

165. (1891.) In a contest of election for a county office the complaint may be filed at any time within twenty days after the votes of the county are canvassed. The county clerk is required, with two disinterested electors of the county, to canvass the votes within six days after the closing of the polls. Sawyer v. Sweet, 33 Neb. 630 (50 N. W. 954).

Parties.

166. (1889.) In a contest of an election to locate the county seat, those having interests may intervene and be made parties, or the district court may order them brought in. Burke v. Perry, 26 Neb. 414 (42 N. W. 401).

167. (1889.) A contest of an election is an adversary proceeding, and, where the election to be contested is one upon the question of relocating a county seat, persons or localities having an interest adverse to the contestant, or some of them, are necessary parties to the contest, and such interests must be shown by the complaint. Burke v. Perry, 26 Neb. 414 (42 N. W. 401).

Notice of contest.

168. (1881.) A notice of contest of election which states that the contestant was an elector of the district, the points of contest, the office contested, and the date at which its duties commenced, the person selected to take depositions, and the time and place of taking the same, is sufficient. State, ex rel. Ballentine, v. Peniston, 11 Neb. 100 (7 N. W. 753).

Pleading.

169. (1884.) In a proceeding in the district court to contest an election held for the purpose of locating a county seat, it is competent for the contestee or any other party to the action to plead by way of answer any facts which would show a want of jurisdiction on the part of the county commissioners to call said election. Laws v. Vincent, 16 Neb. 208 (20 N. W. 213).

170. (1889.) A complaint filed in an election contest will be held sufficient in substance if the statute which prescribes what its contents shall be, is followed. Burke v. Perry, 26 Neb. 414 (42 N. W. 401).

171. (1890.) In contesting an election in court the allegations of the petition and proof must correspond; in other words, the plaintiff must set forth in his petition the names of the persons whose votes are claimed to be illegal, in order that issue may be taken thereon. If such names are unknown at the time of bringing the action, the contestant afterward should obtain leave of court to amend his petition, giving a list of the names of voters claimed to be illegal, and it is the duty of the court to designate from the evidence the particular persons who have voted unlawfully. Todd v. Cass County, 30 Neb. 823 (47 N. W. 196).

172. (1893.) In an election contest the incumbent, having dismissed before judgment a paragraph of his answer alleging the improper refusal to count certain ballots, cannot by an original amendment in the district court, over the contestant's objection, set up the same matters as to which he had entered a dismissal in the county court. Spurgin v. Thompson, 37 Neb. 39 (55 N. W. 297).

173. (1907.) In a contest of an election to the office of county treasurer under sections 80 and 81, chapter 26, Compiled Statutes 1907, it is necessary to allege and prove that the contestant is an elector of the county in and for which the contestee is declared elected. Dodson v. Bowlby, 78 Neb. 190 (110 N. W. 698).

Evidence.

——— Presumptions.

174. (1879.) All votes cast and received at an election are presumed to be legal until their illegality is proved in some manner provided by law. State, ex rel. Reed, v. Ramsey, 8 Neb. 286.

——— Admissibility.

175. (1876.) In a contested election where it appeared from the poll books and returns of the judges that the relator had a majority of all the votes cast, but that the canvassers had opened the ballot boxes and made a pretended recount, and declared respondent elected, an abstract of the recount and packages of ballots so opened is inadmissible in evidence, as the canvassers had no authority to open the books or ballot boxes. Kane v. People, 4 Neb. 509.

176. (1890.) Under section 40, chapter 26, Compiled Statutes, extrinsic evidence is not admissible to explain a ballot containing a greater number of names for an office, than the number of persons required to fill the office. State, ex rel. Stearns, v. Foxworthy, 29 Neb. 341 (45 N. W. 632).

177. (1891.) One of the modes of proving that illegal or fraudulent votes were cast in a ward of a city or other subdivision is to call a resident of one of the blocks in said ward and prove by him who were residents and voters residing on the lot on which he resides. If he is acquainted with all the residents and voters on such or other blocks, he may testify thereto. Otherwise witnesses from the several houses, lots, or blocks must be called to show who are occupants and voters in the several buildings on said block or blocks at the time of the election. The proof may be extended in this manner over the disputed territory, and the fraudulent names deducted from the whole vote cast in such ward or other division. Held, Insufficient in case under discussion. Todd v. Cass County, 31 Neb. 150 (47 N. W. 748).

178. (1894.) In a contest of an election of a county judge where it appeared there were fourteen spoiled and unused ballots that had been tied on a string and separated from the good ballots, but on the recount such ballots had been counted with the good ones and so mixed as to be indistinguishable, the recount did not establish the result of the election, and the intermingling of the spoiled ballots rendered them incompetent as evidence of the election result, the returns made to the county clerk, being prima facie evidence of the choice of the voters, were competent and should have been considered by the court. Hendee v. Hayden, 42 Neb. 760 (60 N. W. 1034).

179. (1898.) In an election contest declarations made by illegal voters as to the nature of votes cast by them are not admissible unless the declarations are part of the res gestæ or fall within an exception to the rule excluding hearsay evidence. Dean v. State, ex rel. Miller, 56 Neb. 301 (76 N. W. 555).

——— Weight and sufficiency.

180. (1890.) Where ballots have been cast in the mode provided by law, the presumption is that they are legal, and this presumption cannot be overturned by vague, indefinite, and uncertain testimony. Todd v. Cass County, 30 Neb. 823 (47 N. W. 196).

181. (1890.) In order to establish the fact that illegal votes were cast at an election in a specified voting precinct, proof must be offered by one or more witnesses having actual knowledge of such fact that persons who were not legal voters did actually vote at such election, and such witness or witnesses must designate such illegal voters. When the proof merely tends to show that the witnesses do not know all the legal voters in the precinct, and therefore fails to designate certain voters as illegal, it is insufficient to authorize the rejection of such votes as illegal. Todd v. Cass County, 30 Neb. 823 (47 N. W. 196).

182. (1891.) Where it is sought to have an election declared fraudulent because the votes cast are grossly in excess of those cast at previous and succeeding elections, the proof should show the number of votes cast at the last two general elections preceding, as well as those cast at the elections following, together with any explanation tending to show the cause, or the want of it, for the increase, and if fraud is clearly established in the excessive votes the court may reduce the vote to the average number theretofore cast or in case of gross fraud reject it altogether. Todd v. Cass County, 31 Neb. 150 (47 N. W. 748).

183. (1891.) An election was held in the county of C. to issue the bonds of the county, at which the city of P. cast more than 2,200 votes. The election was held in June, 1889, and to prove that the election was fraudulent the contestant introduced the number of votes cast at the city election in said city in the spring of 1889 and also at the election in November, 1889, being about 1,300 votes; but did not introduce the number of votes cast at the general election in 1888, nor at the general election in 1887. The court found the number of legal voters in the city at the time of the bond election to be 1,928. Held, That without proof that the votes cast at the general elections of 1888 and 1887 were greatly less than the number of votes cast at the bond election, the court could not reject votes at the latter election as being excessive and therefore fraudulent and unknown voters. Todd v. Cass County, 31 Neb. 150 (47 N. W. 748).

Dismissal.

184. (1903.) The contestant in a proceeding to contest an election may voluntarily dismiss the proceedings at any time before issue is joined. Moore v. Waddington, 69 Neb. 615 (96 N. W. 279).

185. (1903.) After a motion to set aside a voluntary dismissal of an election contest, and an application for leave to intervene was made by the plaintiff in error, the incumbent challenged the jurisdiction of the court to set aside the dismissal, or to allow the intervention. Held, that contestant is a necessary party to proceedings in error to review such order. Moore v. Waddington, 69 Neb. 615 (96 N. W. 279).

186. (1903.) When a voluntary dismissal of an election contest has been entered, the trial court has no authority to set aside the dismissal without notice to the contestant. Moore v. Waddington, 69 Neb. 615 (96 N. W. 279).

187. (1903.) When a voluntary dismissal of an election contest has been entered, the court, until it is set aside, is without jurisdiction to allow another party to intervene and be substituted as contestant. Whether such dismissal can be set aside, quære. Moore v. Waddington, 69 Neb. 615 (96 N. W. 279).

Scope of inquiry and powers of court.

188. (1891.) The stipulation of the parties set out in the opinion, held, to have submitted to the trial court only the twenty-one scratched ballots, and the questions arising as to counting or rejecting them, confined to the form and substance of the ballots at the time of filing the stipulation by the parties. Barnd v. Hunt, 32 Neb. 116 (49 N. W. 222).

189. (1894.) Where spoiled and unused ballots have, on the recount, been counted and so mixed with the good ballots as to be indistinguishable, it is error, on a contest to apportion the "spoiled" ballots between the contestant and contestee and deduct from the vote of each one a share of such ballots, proportioned according to the whole number of votes cast for him. Hendee v. Hayden, 42 Neb. 760 (60 N. W. 1034).

190. (1905.) The record of a popular election is made up and finally completed at the polls and nothing can afterwards be taken therefrom or added thereto, and a trial judge cannot exclude any part of it from evidence in the trial of an election contest. Mauck v. Brown, 59 Neb. 382, so far as inconsistent herewith, overruled. Griffith v. Bonawitz, 73 Neb. 622 (103 N. W. 327).

Trial or hearing.

191. (1881.) The persons selected to take depositions in an election contest, if they refuse to take testimony offered relating to the points of contest, may, after entering upon their duties, be compelled by mandamus to proceed. State, ex rel. Ballentine, v. Peniston, 11 Neb. 100 (7 N. W. 753).

Judgment.

192. (1889.) Where, in a contest of election, the district court declares the party contesting entitled to the office of councilman of a city, a supersedeas bond, although duly filed and approved, will not stay the judgment, there being no provision of statute for such suspension of judgment. State, ex rel. Hunt, v. City of Kearney, 28 Neb. 103 (44 N. W. 90).

193. (1891.) The finding and judgment of the trial court held to be in accordance with the provisions of sections 80 to 100, inclusive, chapter 26, Compiled Statutes, in the absence of any record evidence to the contrary. Barnd v. Hunt, 32 Neb. 116 (49 N. W. 222).

194. (1903.) A judgment establishing the invalidity of an election attempted to be made at the general election in 1899, does not render res judicata between the same parties the power to make such an election at the general election in 1901, even if there be no change in the law affecting the validity of such election. State, ex rel. Gordon, v. Moores, 70 Neb. 48 (96 N. W. 1011).

——— Review.

195. (1875.) A party aggrieved by any alleged error of the board of justices, chosen to hear contests relative to the election of any county officer, has his remedy by appeal to the district court, and a writ of mandamus from the supreme court, to compel the correction of such error, does not lie against them. The statute regulating appeals in ordinary civil actions governs such appeal, and the appellate court has ample jurisdiction, though the cause must be tried by the judge without the aid of a jury. People v. Martin, 4 Neb. 49.

196. (1875.) The board of justices chosen under section 26 of the general election law (Gen. Stat., 359), in case of the contested election for any county office, should reduce all the evidence given before them to writing, in order to make the same available in case of an appeal to the district court; and though the statute is silent as to whom the custody and control of such testimony shall be entrusted, there is ample inherent power in the appellate court, to compel its production upon consideration of the case there. The trial in the appellate court should be confined to the testimony so taken, though in case of its loss or destruction, neither party would be debarred from introducing necessary evidence to supply such omission. People v. Martin, 4 Neb. 49.

197. (1879.) The supreme court has jurisdiction to correct errors of the district court in administering the law for contesting elections. Miller v. Rolph, 8 Neb. 438.

198. (1883.) In an appeal in a contested election suit it is error to dismiss because the appeal bond was not signed by the appellant. Clark v. Strong, 14 Neb. 229 (15 N. W. 236).

199. (1889.) Where, in a contest of election, the district court declares the party contesting entitled to the office of councilman of a city, a supersedeas bond, although duly filed and approved, will not stay the judgment, there being no provisions of statute for such suspension of judgment. State, ex rel. Hunt, v. City of Kearney, 28 Neb. 113 (44 N. W. 90).

200. (1891.) An election contest brought to the supreme court on petition in error, which is in fact an appeal, will not be remanded for want of a motion for a new trial. Barnd v. Hunt, 32 Neb. 116 (49 N. W. 222).

201. (1892.) Proceedings in district court, to contest an election to locate county seat, will not be reviewed by the supreme court in the absence of bill of exceptions. Peters v. Morey, 34 Neb. 82 (51 N. W. 312).

202. (1894.) In a special proceeding founded solely upon a statute it is not only the privilege, but it is the duty, of the supreme court, on its own motion, to look into the record of the proceeding and determine whether such proceeding is authorized by such statute, and whether the party prosecuting the proceeding is by the statute authorized to do so. Thomas v. Franklin, 42 Neb. 310 (60 N. W. 568).

203. (1899.) The word "appeal" in section 98, chapter 26, Compiled Statutes 1899, is used in a distinctive and not generic sense and indicates an appeal and not a proceeding in error. Mauck v. Brown, 59 Neb. 382 (81 N. W. 313).

204. (1899.) Ballots which have been used in evidence, in an election contest, can be made part of a bill of exceptions though not physically attached to such bill at the time of the settlement. Mauck v. Brown, 59 Neb. 382 (81 N. W. 313).

205. (1899.) The questions presented on an election contest based on irregularity of ballots, determined not to be those for the presentment of which a petition in error is the exclusive remedy, but of the weight and sufficiency of evidence to sustain findings of the trial court and proper in an appeal. Mauck v. Brown, 59 Neb. 382 (81 N. W. 313).

206. (1905.) On appeal from the decision of a district court in a contested election, the entire record should be brought up, and it will be considered by the supreme court de novo. Griffith v. Bonawitz, 73 Neb. 622 (103 N. W. 327).

207. (1905.) On an appeal from the decision of a county court in a contested election, it is not requisite to file new pleadings in the district court. Griffith v. Bonawitz, 73 Neb. 622 (103 N. W. 327).

X. VIOLATIONS OF ELECTION LAWS.

Illegal voting.

208. (1891.) Illegal voting at village elections is not a crime in this state and is not punishable under sections 181 and 182 of the criminal code. State v. Chichester, 31 Neb. 325 (47 N. W. 934; 11 L. R. A. 104).

Offenses by officers.

209. (1901.) It is official misconduct for a county clerk to permit ballots committed to his official care to be abstracted from his office. He cannot urge as a defense to a proceeding to remove him from office that the ballots so abstracted possessed no evidential value. Stewart v. Bole, 61 Neb. 193 (85 N. W. 33).

Regulation of rates and charges.

1. (1900.) A city of the second class, having less than 5,000 inhabitants, has no authority to regulate the rates and charges which an electric light company may charge its customers for lights. Wabaska Electric Co. v. City of Wymore, 60 Neb. 199 (82 N. W. 626).

Injuries from electric current.

See, also, Negligence.

2. (1903.) An electric light company is under the duty to exercise all reasonable precautions against passing a dangerous current of electricity through a guy-wire attached to a pole on a vacant and uninclosed lot in a densely peopled part of a city. New Omaha Thomson-Houston Electric Light Co. v. Johnson, 67 Neb. 393 (93 N. W. 778).

3. (1905.) A lineman of the electric light company, while acting at fires under the direction of the city authorities in pursuance of an ordinance, cannot render the company liable by his words or acts in the absence of special authority. New Omaha Thomson-Houston Electric Light Co. v. Anderson, 73 Neb. 84 (102 N. W. 89).

4. (1905.) The furnishing of electric currents for power and lighting purposes is a recognized business which must be conducted with due regard to the safety of both employees and the public in view of the dangerous character of such currents, but their furnishers are not insurers against all dangers from them. Blameless casualties may arise from their operation. New Omaha Thomson-Houston Electric Light Co. v. Anderson, 73 Neb. 84 (102 N. W. 89).

5. (1905.) Section 1 of ordinance numbered 4363 of the city of Omaha, held to impose no duty on the defendant light company except to furnish a competent lineman to act under the city authorities' direction in disconnecting wires. New Omaha Thomson-Houston Electric Light Co. v. Anderson, 73 Neb. 84 (102 N. W. 89).

6. (1905.) A claim for injury by an electric shock cannot be sustained by a mere hypothetical claim that such shock was only rendered possible by a ground current negligently permitted at some other point in the circuit by defendant, it not appearing that any usual precautions to prevent such "grounding" had been omitted or that defendant had or under the circumstances ought to have had knowledge of it. New Omaha Thomson-Houston Electric Light Co. v. Anderson, 73 Neb. 84 (102 N. W. 89).

7. (1905.) A member of a truck company, who assists to hoist a ladder with metallic corners against an electric light wire, cannot, in the absence of invitation or permission of the owner, complain that the wires were not properly insulated and that he was injured because of such lack of insulation. New Omaha Thompson-Houston Electric Light Co. v. Anderson, 73 Neb. 84 (102 N. W. 89).

8. (1907.) Where a city is engaged in the operation of an electric lighting plant for commercial purposes, and one of its wires is negligently left in a position to cause injury to one who is without fault on his part, the fact that such wire was not in use at the time the accident occurred constitutes no defense to an action for damages. Todd v. City of Crete, 79 Neb. 671 (113 N. W. 172).

9. (1907.) Where an electric light company places highly charged wire through the branches of a tree and within 26 inches of low potential wires, when it is undisputed that such wires should be at least five feet apart, the company is guilty of negligence. Grimm v. Omaha Electric Light & Power Co., 79 Neb. 387 (112 N. W. 620).

10. (1907.) An ordinarily bright and intelligent boy 12 years old, living in a city in which electric light and power wires are in constant use on nearly all of the principal streets and highways, who, having knowledge of the danger but not of its extent, purposely takes hold of such a wire in order to obtain a shock, and is injured thereby, is, as a matter of law, guilty of contributory negligence. Johnston v. New Omaha Thomson-Houston Electric Light Co., 78 Neb. 27 (113 N. W. 526).

11. (1907.) An electric light company which had strung its wire on posts erected along the edge of a viaduct, at a height of 18 to 30 inches from the railway of such viaduct, such wire being erected in compliance with the regulations of the city authorities, the company having no notice of a defect in the insulation of the wire, was held not liable for an injury to a 12-year-old boy who climbed on the railing and touched the wire for the purpose of seeing if he would get a shock. Johnston v. New Omaha Thomson-Houston Electric Light Co., 78 Neb. 24 (110 N. W. 711).

——— Evidence as to negligence.

12. (1901.) Evidence that deceased, a lad of 17 years, knew that a guy-wire of an electric-light post carried an electric current, and that he voluntarily laid his hands upon it after being told by a younger companion to watch out and get away, does not conclusively establish contributory negligence where it also appears that the current had been running over this guy-wire for several days, with notice to defendant, and that the wire had been handled, pulled and shaken frequently by various parties during that time, and, a few minutes previously to the fatal occurrence, by deceased, and by others in his presence, without harm. South Omaha Water-Works Co. v. Vocasek, 62 Neb. 710 (87 N. W. 536).

13. (1903.) Evidence in an action to recover for the death of plaintiff's husband, who was killed by coming in contact with a guy-wire of defendant company, showing that the deceased while walking through a vacant lot was killed, without evidence showing he came in contact with the live wire as charged, does not support a verdict for plaintiff. New Omaha Thomson-Houston Electric Light Co. v. Johnson, 67 Neb. 393 (93 N. W. 778).

14. (1903.) In an action against an electric light company to recover for the death of plaintiff's husband, evidence showing that if deceased came in contact with a guy-wire of one of defendant's poles, that was heavily charged with electricity located on a vacant lot, such contact was voluntary and he was guilty of contributory negligence. New Omaha Thomson-Houston Electric Light Co. v. Johnson, 67 Neb. 393 (93 N. W. 778).

Prosecution of state treasurer for, by county attorney, see County Attorney, § 14.

Right of private citizen to sue on behalf of city for embezzlement, see Municipal Corporations, §§ 1073, 1074.

Instruction defining embezzlement in slander suit, see Libel and Slander, § 122.

Nature of offense.

1. (1895.) Embezzlement is the fraudulent appropriation by an agent of the property of another. Hamilton v. State, 46 Neb. 284 (64 N. W. 965).

Statutory provisions.

2. (1895.) The terms "shall embezzle" and "convert to his own use," found in section 121 of the criminal code, are synonymous. Hamilton v. State, 46 Neb. 284 (64 N. W. 965).

3. (1895.) Under section 121, criminal code, providing for the crime of embezzlement, the exception as to the persons within the act relating to apprentices and those within the age of eighteen does not apply to officers, agents, attorneys, clerks, or servants of incorporated companies. McAleer v. State, 46 Neb. 116 (64 N. W. 358).

4. (1896.) The term "loan" is employed in a restricted sense in section 124, criminal code 1873, and includes those transactions only in which the conventional relation of borrower and lender exists, and has no application to the deposit in bank, for safe-keeping, of public funds by the custodian thereof who so far retains his control over them that they may be by him at any time reclaimed. State v. Hill, 47 Neb. 456 (66 N. W. 541).

5. (1896.) So much of section 124, criminal code 1873, defining embezzlement of public funds, as provides that if any officer charged with the collection, safe-keeping, or disbursement of public funds "shall loan, with or without interest, * * * any portion of the public money, * * * every such act shall be deemed * * * an embezzlement of so much of the said moneys * * * as shall be thus * * * loaned" (Gen. Stats. 1873, p. 749, sec. 124), was intended to prevent the unlawful use by officers, and others with their knowledge and consent, of money committed to their custody, and not as an amendment of existing statutes regulating the means of preserving and accounting for of public funds. State v. Hill, 47 Neb. 456 (66 N. W. 541).

6. (1896.) The act of the legislature of 1891, entitled "An act to provide for the depositing of state and county funds in banks" (Session Laws 1891, p. 347, ch. 50), did not repeal so much of section 124 of the criminal code as is in relation to loaning county funds, and constitutes such loaning by an officer entrusted with their care and disbursement an embezzlement. Korth v. State, 46 Neb. 631 (65 N. W. 792).

7. (1897.) The law for depositing state and county funds in banks (Session Laws 1891, p. 347, ch. 50) did not repeal section 124 of the criminal code relating to the embezzlement of public money. Whitey v. State, 53 Neb. 287 (73 N. W. 696).

8. (1898.) Section 124 of the criminal code, relating to embezzlement of public moneys, applies only to officers or persons charged by law with the collection, receipt, safe-keeping, transfer, or disbursement of such moneys and to those who aid or abet such officers or persons. Moore v. State, 53 Neb. 831 (74 N. W. 319).

Defenses.

9. (1897.) One who served his entire term cannot be heard to urge as a defense to the charge of embezzlement of public moneys that when the embezzlement took place he was not an officer de jure. Bartley v. State, 53 Neb. 310 (73 N. W. 744).

Persons liable.

10. (1897.) Under section 124 of the criminal code, any person who advises, aids, or participates in an officer's embezzlement of public money is himself guilty of embezzlement. Mills v. State, 53 Neb. 263 (73 N. W. 761).

Abatement.

11. (1897.) In a prosecution for embezzlement, the pendency of a former information in another county, charging accused with the embezzlement of the same property, within that county, is no ground for abatement. Bartley v. State, 53 Neb. 310 (73 N. W. 744).

Venue.

12. (1905.) The venue is properly laid in the county where the purpose is formed to convert the right in action, and the decisive steps taken to carry out that purpose, although the subject of the right in action is situated in another county. Higbee v. State, 74 Neb. 331 (104 N. W. 748).

Elements of crime.

13. (1885.) To constitute embezzlement it is essential that the owner should be deprived of the property alleged to be embezzled by an adverse use or holding. Chaplin v. Lee, 18 Neb. 440 (25 N. W. 609).

14. (1895.) To constitute embezzlement the owner must be deprived of his property by an actual adverse use or holding. McAleer v. State, 46 Neb. 116 (64 N. W. 358).

15. (1895). To constitute embezzlement under section 121, criminal code, it is essential that the money or thing charged to have been embezzled should have come into the possession or care of the defendant by virtue of his employment. McAleer v. State, 46 Neb. 116 (64 N. W. 358).

16. (1896.) It is essential to the crime of embezzlement that the owner be deprived of the property alleged to have been embezzled. State v. Hill, 47 Neb. 456 (66 N. W. 541).

17. (1905). Under section 121, criminal code, converting rights in action to one's own use is an essential element of the crime of embezzlement. Higbee v. State, 74 Neb. 331 (104 N. W. 748).

Embezzlement by particular classes of persons.

——— Agent.

18. (1884.) Plaintiff in error was indicted or the embezzlement, as agent, of certain noneys belonging to the M. M. company, a orporation, received by him on sales of heir machinery. The contract of agency, ntroduced in evidence on the part of the tate, contained the following clause: "To remit to the said party of the first part the proceeds of each and every sale as early as the day following the delivery of the machinery to the purchaser. If the said sale was for all cash, the full commissions, as per article 3d, may be retained; or if a time sale, the full settlement for the same shall be remitted less the proportion of commissions due on the cash received; the balance of the commission shall be due pro rata as the cash is paid on the notes. If any cash received on sales of machines is not remitted as agreed in this section, the party of the second part shall not only be legally liable, but agrees that the settlement shall be made on the time sale basis, and ten per cent. interest shall be paid on all cash so retained." Held, That money so retained was not embezzled, and that no conviction could be had therefor. Miller v. State, 16 Neb. 179 (20 N. W. 253).

19. (1892.) An agent who, having received property of another to sell on commission on certain prescribed terms, fraudulently, and without the knowledge and consent of the owner thereof, pledges it for money borrowed by the agent for his own use and benefit, with the intent to deprive the owner of his property, is guilty of embezzlement. Morehouse v. State, 35 Neb. 643 (53 N. W. 571).

20. (1904.) The gravamen of the crime of embezzlement by an agent is the fraudulent and felonious intent to convert the property of the principal to his own use. State v. Culver, 5 Unof. 238 (97 N. W. 1015).

21. (1904.) Where an agent converts property of his principal to his own use under an honest but mistaken claim of right, such act does not constitute the crime of embezzlement. State v. Culver, 5 Unof. 238 (97 N. W. 1015).

22. (1905.) In a prosecution for embezzlement of a "right in action" under section 121 of the criminal code, it is not necessary to show that the defendant was at the time of the alleged embezzlement in the manual possession of the money or property which was the subject of the right in action. If the agent of a corporation so uses the rights in action of his employer as to prevent his employer from asserting those rights, and so deprives the employer of the property or money involved, and by so doing appropriates the property or money to his own use, without the assent of the employer, and with the faudulent intent to so appropriate the same, he is guilty of embezzlement under the statute. Higbee v. State, 74 Neb. 331 (104 N. W. 748).

——— Public officer.

Statutory provision as to, see ante, §§ 2-8.

23. (1895.) A sheriff is an officer elected to an office of public trust in this state, and for the conversion to his own use of any moneys that shall come into his hands by virtue of his office may be prosecuted for embezzlement under section 121 of the criminal code. Conley v. State, 46 Neb. 187 (64 N. W. 708).

24. (1897.) The disbursement of public funds by a city treasurer, except upon a warrant drawn by proper authority, constitutes embezzlement. Bolin v. State, 51 Neb. 581 (71 N. W. 444).

25. (1897.) A state treasurer who, for an unauthorized purpose, draws a check on a state depository bank having money of the state therein, which he delivers to the payee with intent to defraud the state, and the bank on presentation of the check places the amount thereof to the credit of a third party whom the payee represents in the transaction, and at the same time charges the account of the state with a like sum, is guilty of the embezzlement of the money of the state, within the meaning of section 124 of the criminal code. Bartley v. State, 53 Neb. 310 (73 N. W. 744).

26. (1897.) The mere depositing of county funds in depository banks by a county treasurer in strict compliance with the requirements of section 6, chapter 50, laws 1891, is not an embezzlement of such funds by the treasurer. Whitney v. State, 53 Neb. 287 (73 N. W. 696).

27. (1898.) The auditor of public accounts is not as an officer charged with the collection, receipt, safe-keeping, transfer, or disbursement of any part of the public moneys, and is therefore not within the descriptive terms of section 124 of the criminal code. Moore v. State, 53 Neb. 831 (74 N. W. 319).

——— Attorneys.

28. (1888.) An attorney at law is not liable to a prosecution for embezzlement of his client's money in his hands, until his attorney's lien has been discharged. Van Etten v. State, 24 Neb. 734 (40 N. W. 289; 1 L. R. A. 669).

29. (1888.) An attorney has a lien for a general balance of compensation upon money in his hands belonging to his client, and until such lien is discharged he is not liable to a prosecution for the embezzlement of such money. Van Etten v. State, 24 Neb. 734 (40 N. W. 289; 1 L. R. A. 669).

Indictment and information.

——— In general.

30. (1885.) A complaint charging a treasurer of a school district with unlawfully, fraudulently, and feloniously embezzling certain school money which came into his possession by virtue of his office, sufficiently charges the crime of embezzlement. State, ex rel. Bryant, v. Knox, 17 Neb. 65 (24 N. W. 382).

31. (1897.) An information for embezzlement is sufficient if it sets forth the crime in the language of the state, without averring the particular acts in which the offense consisted. Bartley v. State, 53 Neb. 310 (73 N. W. 744).

31*a*. (1908.) An indictment for embezzlement is sufficient if it sets forth the crime in language equivalent to that contained in the statute creating and defining that crime, without averring the particular acts in which the offense consists. Chamberlain v. State, 80 Neb. 812 (115 N. W. 555).

32. (1897.) An indictment against a state treasurer, which charges the embezzlement to his own use of a certain sum of money belonging to the state, is sufficient without an allegation that a demand for the money was made upon him by his successor in office. Bartley v. State, 53 Neb. 310 (73 N. W. 744).

——— Certainty.

33. (1897.) The word "embezzle" includes within its import the "conversion to his own use" as alleged in an information against one accused of embezzlement, and it does not constitute an information fatally defective, for uncertainty as a plea that the two are joined by the copulative "and." The same is also true of the first and any other word or set of words used to express a manner of the commission of the crime. Mills v. State, 53 Neb. 263 (73 N. W. 761).

——— Fiduciary relation of attorney.

34. (1892.) In a prosecution under section 121 of the criminal code, for embezzlement as an attorney at law, the fiduciary character of the accused, which is the distinguishing feature of the crime of embezzlement, should be distinctly charged. Zink v. State, 34 Neb. 37 (51 N. W. 294).

——— Ownership of property.

35. (1885.) An indictment against a treasurer of a school district sufficiently alleges ownership of the property by charging the defendant, as treasurer of such school district, with duties to collect and receipt for money, which he unlawfully and feloniously embezzled and converted to his own use. State, ex rel. Bryant, v. Knox, 17 Neb. 683 (24 N. W. 382).

36. (1895.) Where a sheriff by virtue of an order of sale issued upon a decree of foreclosure had sold the lands therein described and collected the amount of the bid of the purchaser, which, before an order of the court directing to whom it should be paid out had been made, he had converted to his own use, it was not essential in an information against such officer to allege to whom such money belonged, and an allegation of that kind should be rejected as surplusage when the information independently of such allegation fully stated the facts above indicated. Conley v. State, 46 Neb. 187 (64 N. W. 708).

36*a*. (1907.) The estate of a deceased person, pending administration, is a legal entity; and, in charging a violation of section 121 of the criminal code, it is sufficient as to the matter of ownership, to allege that the money or property embezzled belonged to such an estate. Hendee v. State, 80 Neb. 80 (113 N. W. 1050).

37. (1897.) Information for embezzlement of funds by a county treasurer held to sufficiently designate the owner of the money embezzled to be the county. Whitney v. State, 53 Neb. 287 (73 N. W. 696).

37*a*. (1907.) In a prosecution for embezzlement under section 124 of the criminal code it is not necessary to allege in the information that the city whose funds are embezzled is an organized city. Bode v. State, 80 Neb. 74 (113 N. W. 996).

——— Allegation of official capacity of defendant.

37*b*. (1907.) Information examined, its substance stated, and held not vulnerable to the objection that "it fails to allege that the accused embezzled and converted the public money in question while holding it as city treasurer." Bode v. State, 80 Neb. 74 (113 N. W. 996).

37*c*. (1907.) An information based on the provisions of section 121 of the criminal code, which charged, in the language of the statute, that the property in question came into the possession of the defendant "by virtue or under color of his relation as an officer," is not void for duplicity, and is sufficient in that respect to sustain a conviction. Hendee v. State, 80 Neb. 80 (113 N. W. 1050).

——— Character of employer.

38. (1895.) The corporate character of the employer is an essential element of embezzlement by an agent, where employment by a corporation is charged in the information. McAleer v. State, 46 Neb. 116 (64 N. W. 358).

——— Kind of money.

39. (1885.) It is not necessary to allege the particular kind of money with which one is charged with embezzling. State, ex rel. Bryant, v. Knox, 17 Neb. 683 (24 N. W. 382).

39*a*. (1907.) In charging the embezzlement of a certificate of deposit belonging to an estate, it is sufficient to describe the instrument as it appeared at the time it came into the possession of the accused, and subsequent indorsements, procured by him, need not be set forth in the information. Hendee v. State, 80 Neb. 80 (113 N. W. 1050).

——— Value of property.

40. (1885.) Where the money defendant is charged with embezzling is legal tender it is not necessary to allege its value. State, ex rel. Bryant, v. Knox, 17 Neb. 683 (24 N. W. 382).

41. (1897.) An allegation of the information that the embezzlement was of the sum of $6,000 in money, held a sufficient expression of value. Mills v. State, 53 Neb. 263 (73 N. W. 761).

——— Variance.

42. (1896.) An information for embezzlement which described defendant as "secretary of the board of education" held not at variance with a complaint describing him as "secretary of the school board." Hockenberger v. State, 49 Neb. 706 (68 N. W. 1037).

43. (1896.) The plaintiff in error was arrested on a complaint charging him with having embezzled certain money belonging to "the school district of the city of Grand Island, Hall county, Nebraska." The information on which he was tried charged him with having embezzled certain money belonging to "the school district of the city of Grand Island, of the county of Hall, in the state of Nebraska." Held, No material variance between the complaint and the information. Hockenberger v. State, 49 Neb. 706 (68 N. W. 1037).

44. (1897.) Under an information against a public officer charging embezzlement on a certain date, evidence of a continuous series of conversions of money by the defendent at different times and in different amounts before that date will support a verdict finding the aggregate sum as the amount of a single embezzlement. Bolln v. State, 51 Neb. 581 (71 N. W. 444).

Election of counts.

45. (1896.) Where one is charged with embezzlement of county funds while he was county treasurer, the information containing several counts charging several distinct acts of embezzlements, the withholding of a ruling on a motion requiring the state to elect under which count the complaint would proceed, until after the close of the state's evidence, when the motion was sustained, there is no error. Korth v. State, 46 Neb. 631 (65 N. W. 792).

Admissibility of evidence.

46. (1896.) Where one who was county treasurer and also secretary of a board of education was tried for having, as such secretary, embezzled $1,000 of school funds, his defense being that, as secretary, he receipted to himself as county treasurer for $3,000, though the actual amount was only $2,000, which sum he turned over to the proper officer, it was error to refuse to instruct that the receipts for $3,000 were only prima facie evidence of such payment, and that the receipts might be explained and the truth shown. Hockenberger v. State, 49 Neb. 706 (68 N. W. 1037).

47. (1897.) A receipt of deposit of money in a bank by a county treasurer is admissible in a prosecution for embezzlement of such treasurer when shown that the address was in the handwriting of the cashier and acknowledged by defendant. Mills v. State, 53 Neb. 263 (73 N. W. 761).

47*a*. (1907.) In a prosecution for embezzlement or other crime, where the books, records, papers and entries are voluminous and of such a character as to render it difficult for the jury to arrive at a correct conclusion as to amounts, an expert accountant may be allowed to examine such books, etc., and testify as to the result of his examination, and as to particular entries therein, shown to be in the handwriting of the defendant, when such books are in the court-room subject to inspection by the accused and the particular entries are also introduced in evidence. Bode v. State, 80 Neb. 74 (113 N. W. 996).

48. (1897.) Correspondence of a bank in negotiating for the state treasurer a warrant owned by the state held admissible in evidence in a prosecution against him for the embezzlement of the amount subsequently used to take up the warrant. Bartley v. State, 53 Neb. 310 (73 N. W. 744).

48*a*. (1908.) Under an indictment charging a bank officer with embezzling its funds on a certain date, evidence tending to show embezzlement of different amounts at different times before that date, and the manner in which he conducted the business of the bank, is admissible for the purpose of assisting the jury in determining the defendant's guilt or innocence of the charge set forth in the indictment. Chamberlain v. State, 80 Neb. 812 (115 N. W. 555).

Weight and sufficiency of evidence.

49. (1892.) In a prosecution for embezzlement, evidence showing that an agent for a piano factory, selling on commission, with title to all the property in the principal, executed a bill of sale on the goods in his possession, is sufficient to sustain a verdict of guilty. Moorehouse v. State, 35 Neb. 643 (53 N. W. 571).

50. (1895.) A secreting with intent to convert to one's own use does not prove the offense under an information charging an actual embezzlement. McAleer v. State, 46 Neb. 116 (64 N. W. 358).

51. (1895.) That the relation of debtor and creditor exists between a principal and his agent, and that on balancing the account the agent would be found indebted to his principal, are not alone sufficient to sustain a verdict finding the agent guilty of embezzling or converting to his own use the property of his principal. Hamilton v. State, 46 Neb. 284 (64 N. W. 965).

52. (1895.) To sustain the conviction of an agent for embezzling or converting to his own use the property of his principal, the facts must warrant the conclusion that such conversion was made by the agent with a felonious intent. Hamilton v. State, 46 Neb. 284 (64 N. W. 965).

54. (1897.) Under section 124 of the criminal code the failure of any public officer to account to, or make settlement of his official accounts with, the proper legal authority within reasonable time after notice so to do, as well as the refusal of such officer to promptly pay over to his successor any public moneys or securities on the legal requirement of any authorized officer, is made prima facie evidence of embezzlement. Bolln v. State, 51 Neb. 581 (71 N. W. 444).

55. (1897.) The evidence in the case is sufficient to sustain a conviction for the embezzlement of the moneys of the state. Bartley v. State, 53 Neb. 310 (73 N. W. 744).

56. (1897.) Failure and refusal of a county treasurer to promptly pay to his successor any of the public moneys is prima facie evidence of embezzlement. Whitney v. State, 53 Neb. 287 (73 N. W. 696).

57. (1898.) To sustain a conviction for embezzlement of public moneys proof that specie was used in the transactions held unnecessary. Bartley v. State, 55 Neb. 294 (75 N. W. 832).

58. (1904.) That the relation of debtor and creditor exists between a principal and his agent, and that on balancing the account the agent would be found indebted to his principal, are not alone sufficient to sustain a verdict finding the agent guilty of embezzling or converting to his own use the property of his principal. State v. Culver, 5 Unof. 238 (97 N. W. 1015).

59. (1905.) Evidence that the party against whom the right in action existed was solvent, and actually paid the money involved as directed by the defendant in adjustment of the right in action, is sufficient prima facie evidence of value. Higbee v. State, 74 Neb. 331 (104 N. W. 748).

59*a*. (1907.) Evidence examined, and held sufficient to sustain the verdict. Bode v. State, 80 Neb. 74 (113 N. W. 996).

59*b*. (1907.) Bill of exceptions examined and evidence found sufficient to sustain the conviction. Hendee v. State, 80 Neb. 80 (113 N. W. 1050).

60. (1905.) The allegation of the information that the party injured is a corporation is sufficiently sustained by proof that it is a de facto corporation. Proof of the regularity of the proceedings to incorporate is not necessary. Higbee v. State, 74 Neb. 331 (104 N. W. 748).

Instructions.

61. (1896.) The defense of the defendant in error was, and the evidence offered in his behalf tended to establish it, that on said date, while secretary of the board of education, he receipted to himself as county treasurer for $3,000; that as a matter of fact on said date he, as secretary of the school board, only received from himself as county treasurer $2,000, which sum, on said date, he paid over to the city treasurer. The refusal to submit, by an instruction, this defense to the jury was error. Hockenberger v. State, 49 Neb. 706 (68 N. W. 1037).

62. (1897.) In a prosecution for embezzlement against one who borrowed public money from the officer having custody thereof, the instructions set out in the opinion, held proper. Mills v. State, 53 Neb. 263 (73 N. W. 761).

62*a*. (1908.) Instructions must be predicated on the evidence; and in the prosecution of a bank officer for embezzlement it is error to submit to the jury the fact of his having overdrawn an account with the bank as proof of guilt, unless the evidence is sufficient to establish every element necessary to make the transaction criminal in its nature. Chamberlain v. State, 80 Neb. 812 (115 N. W. 555).

63. (1905.) In a prosecution against an agent for embezzling the rights in action of his employer, an instruction that if defendant "received credit in his individual capacity" for a right in action of the employer, he would be guilty of embezzlement, is erroneous. Unless the act is done with a felonious intent, and results in depriving the employer of his money or property, it is not embezzlement. Higbee v. State, 74 Neb. 331 (104 N. W. 748).

Verdict.

64. (1897.) A verdict finding the amount of money embezzled to be a specified number of dollars is a sufficient finding of value, under an information charging defendant with the embezzlement of money. Bartley v. State, 53 Neb. 310 (73 N. W. 744).

65. (1902.) It is not necessary that a jury in a criminal case should in their verdict fix the value of money stolen or embezzled. Courts will take judicial notice of the worth of a dollar. Reed v. State, 66 Neb. 184 (92 N. W. 321).

Sentence and punishment.

66. (1902.) The legislature has authority in a criminal action to authorize a judgment which shall operate in favor of the party whose money or effects have been embezzled, as compensation for the value of the thing embezzled, and liquidated damages for the injury sustained. Everson v. State, 66 Neb. 154 (92 N. W. 137).

67. (1902.) While section 124, criminal code, denominates the judgment, for double the amount embezzled, a fine, it is in reality allowed as compensation to the injured party, and is not a fine or penalty within the meaning of section 5, article VIII of the constitution. Everson v. State, 66 Neb. 154 (92 N. W. 137).

68. (1902.) The provision of section 124 of the criminal code, directing the assessment of a fine in double the amount embezzled, in addition to the imprisonment imposed in case of conviction, is not open to the objection that it inflicts a double penalty or punishment upon the defendant, or awards the injured party double damages. Everson v. State, 66 Neb. 154 (92 N. W. 137).

I. NATURE, EXTENT AND DELEGATION OF POWER.

Property exempt from, for road purposes, see Highways, § 62.

Statutory provisions.

1. (1895.) The word "if" in the first line of section 8, article II of the "Rayner Irrigation Law" (act of March 27, 1889) is evidently an interpolation, having no relation to the body of the section, without sensible meaning, and should accordingly be disregarded in giving effect to the provisions of the act. Paxton & Hershey Irrigating Co. v. Farmers & Merchants Irrigating Co., 45 Neb. 884 (64 N. W. 343; 50 Am. St. Rep. 585; 29 L. R. A. 853).

2. (1904.) The provisions of the drainage law, sections 1-28, article I, chapter 89, Compiled Statutes, confer power upon the county board to provide means for raising a fund from which to compensate landowners whose property has been taken or damaged in the construction of the proposed improvement, and its provisions do not violate section 21, article I of the constitution, providing that the property of no person shall be taken or damaged for public use without just compensation therefor. Morris v. Washington County, 72 Neb. 174 (100 N. W. 144).

Power of state in general.

3. (1894.) The constitutional provision, "The property of no person shall be taken or damaged for public use without just compensation," prohibits, by implication, the taking of private property for any private use whatever without the consent of the owner. Welton v. Dickson, 38 Neb. 767 (57 N. W. 559; 41 Am. St. Rep. 771; 22 L. R. A. 496).

4. (1894.) The want of power in a legislature to transfer to one man the property of another without his consent, either with or without compensation, does not depend upon constitutional restriction, but upon the fact that it is not the exercise of the power of making laws or rules of civil conduct, which is the branch of the sovereign power committed to the legislature. Welton v. Dickson, 38 Neb. 767 (57 N. W. 559; 41 Am. St. Rep. 771; 22 L. R. A. 496).

5. (1898.) Property is not taken for a public use without due process of law when an opportunity is afforded the owner to have his damages ascertained by adequate and appropriate judicial proceedings, and provision is made for the payment of the amount thereof prior to the time the property is taken. Howard v. Board of Supervisors of Clay County, 54 Neb. 443 (74 N. W. 953).

6. (1903.) The power of eminent domain is an attribute of sovereignty, and, under the provision of the constitution, can only be exercised in the taking of private property for a public use, and then only after just compensation. The power is only coextensive with the necessity of the use. McLucas v. St. Joseph & G. I. R. Co., 67 Neb. 603 (93 N. W. 928).

Right of leased company.

7. (1907.) A leased railroad cannot exercise the right of eminent domain on behalf of another company. Beckman v. Lincoln & N. R. Co., 79 Neb. 89 (112 N. W. 348).

Taking for private use.

8. (1871.) The constitutional provision that private property shall not be taken for public use without just compensation, implies that it shall not be taken for private use at all, either with or without compensation. This is the same as the axiom of natural justice, that the state shall not take A's property and give it to B. Bradshaw v. City of Omaha, 1 Neb. 16.

9. (1881.) The legislature possesses no authority to take the property of one citizen and transfer it to another, even where full compensation is made. Jenal v. Green Island D. Co., 12 Neb. 163 (10 N. W. 547).

10. (1899.) Neither courts nor legislatures, except on the demand of the state and for its use, can compel one citizen to sell his property, even for its full value, to his neighbor for the latter's private use. Lowe v. Prospect Hill Cemetery Ass'n, 58 Neb. 94 (78 N. W. 488; 46 L. R. A. 237).

11. (1894.) Sections 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, and 52 of chapter 78, Compiled Statutes 1893, authorize the taking of private property for private use, the roads therein mentioned being essentially private and beyond the public control, and said sections are therefore unconstitutional and void. Welton v. Dickson, 38 Neb. 767 (57 N. W. 559; 41 Am. St. Rep. 771; 22 L. R. A. 496).

Taking property for boulevards.

12. (1907.) The appropriation of private lands for boulevard purposes is governed by section 101*b*, chapter 12*a*, Compiled Statutes 1897. State v. Several Parcels of Land, 79 Neb. 638 (113 N. W. 248).

Rights of foreign corporations.

13. (1888.) Under article XI, chapter 72, Compiled Statutes 1887, only railroad companies organized under the laws of this state have the right to condemn right of way across lots owned by the state. State, ex rel. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., v. Scott, 22 Neb. 628 (36 N. W. 121).

14, 15. (1887.) Under section 8, article XI of the constitution, no foreign railroad corporation doing business in this state can exercise the right of eminent domain or have power to acquire right of way or real estate for depot or other uses unless it organize as a corporation under the laws of this state. State, ex rel. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., v. Scott, 22 Neb. 628 (36 N. W. 121); (1888) Trester v. Missouri P. R. Co., 23 Neb. 242 (36 N. W. 502).

16, 17. (1888.) The C., B. & Q. R. Co. and the L. & N. W. R. Co. were joined as relators in an application for mandamus to compel the proper authorities to condemn and convey certain lots belonging to the state. Held, That the C., B. & Q. R. Co., being a foreign corporation, was not entitled to the relief, and that as a foreign corporation it is prohibited from acquiring a right of way or real estate for depot or other uses, therefore it cannot do indirectly what it is prohibited from doing directly. State, ex rel. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., v. Scott, 22 Neb. 628 (36 N. W. 121).

18. (1888.) Since a railroad company, not incorporated in this state, has no authority to take real estate for a right of way, neither the county court, nor the district court on appeal from the assessment of damages, has any authority or jurisdiction to take any action in the matter, and an order of the district court removing the cause to the circuit court of the United States was void, and conferred no jurisdiction on that court, and the district court erred in not reinstating the cause and dismissing it for want of jurisdiction. Trester v. Missouri P. R. Co., 23 Neb. 242 (36 N. W. 502).

19. (1888.) Any proceedings instituted by a foreign railroad corporation to exercise the right of eminent domain, in the condemnation of real estate for the purpose of right of way, are void, and even if prosecuted to a termination can confer no rights to such real estate upon such corporation. In such case, as soon as it is made to appear that the corporation is not incorporated "pursuant to and in accordance with the laws of this state," it is the duty of the court wherein the proceeding is pending to dismiss the same for want of jurisdiction. Trester v. Missouri P. R. Co., 23 Neb. 242 (36 N. W. 502).

20. (1888.) By virtue of a consolidation of the C., B. & Q. R. Co., an Illinois corporation, and the Burlington & Missouri R. R. Co., a Nebraska corporation, in compliance with the laws of this state, the corporation so created became a body corporate in accordance with the laws of this state, and is not a foreign corporation. State, ex rel. Leese, v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 25 Neb. 156 (41 N. W. 125; 2 L. R. A. 564*n*).

21. (1888.) While section 8 of article XI of the constitution of this state provides that no railroad corporation organized under the laws of another state, or of the United States, and doing business in this state shall be entitled to exercise the right of eminent domain, or have power to acquire the right of way or real estate for depot or other uses, until it shall have become a body corporate, pursuant to, and in accordance with, the laws of this state, it does not prohibit existing railroad companies, one of which is a domestic corporation, from becoming a body corporate by consolidation, instead of by the formation of a new corporation, providing such consolidation is made pursuant to the laws of this state permitting the same, and by which it becomes "a body corporate pursuant to, and in accordance with, the laws of this state." State, ex rel. Leese, v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 25 Neb. 156 (41 N. W. 125; 2 L. R. A. 564*n*); State, ex rel. Leese, v. Missouri P. R. Co., 25 Neb. 164; State, ex rel. Leese, v. Chicago, St. P., M. & O. R. Co., 25 Neb. 165.

22. (1889.) A foreign railroad corporation can neither exercise the right of eminent domain, nor does it possess power to acquire the right of way or real estate for depot or other uses, until it shall have become a body corporate pursuant to and in accordance with the laws of the state. And, as it cannot do indirectly what it is prohibited from doing directly, it cannot acquire and hold a leased line and thus evade a plain constitutional prohibition. Koenig v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 27 Neb. 699 (43 N. W. 423).

Amount of property a railroad may take.

23. (1888.) The right of eminent domain gives the legislature control of private property for public uses, and for public uses only, and in case of a railway this right is restricted to "so much real estate as may be necessary for the location, construction, and convenient use of its road." Forney v. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co., 23 Neb. 465 (36 N. W. 806).

24. (1907.) The railroad company seeking to condemn land can only do so when the land is necessary for the construction of its road. Beckman v. Lincoln & N. R. Co., 79 Neb. 89 (112 N. W. 348).

25. (1907.) A railroad company cannot exercise the right of eminent domain, except to take, hold and appropriate so much real estate as may be necessary for the location, construction and convenient use of its own road, and it has no authority to take land for the use of another company in the construction of the road of the latter. Beckman v. Lincoln & N. R. Co., 79 Neb. 89 (112 N. W. 348).

Acts constituting appropriation.

26. (1895.) To constitute an appropriation of land it is not necessary that the owner be deprived of the fee. Land is appropriated when it is so taken as to deprive the owner of the use thereof. It is only when the owner is not deprived of the occupancy of the land, but merely suffers an incidental damage thereto because of the proximity of the improvement, that benefits may be set off against such damage. Martin v. Fillmore County, 44 Neb. 719 (62 N. W. 863).

Person exercising right not agent of state.

27. (1905.) A railway company in condemning land for its right of way and depot grounds is not the agent of the state. The state has no ownership in the lands by virtue of condemnation proceedings. State v. Missouri P. R. Co., 75 Neb. 4 (105 N. W. 983).

Exhaustion of further exercise of power.

28. (1882.) In the exercise of the right of eminent domain by a railroad company for right of way, depot and other grounds under the statute of this state, one appropriation does not exhaust its power, but new appropriations may be made from time to time as the necessities of the road may require. Dietrichs v. Lincoln & N. W. R. Co., 13 Neb. 361 (13 N. W. 624).

Necessity of a hearing.

29. (1896.) "Due process of law," as the term is used in the state and federal constitutions, does not necessarily imply a hearing, by one whose property is taken or damaged for public use, according to the established practice in courts of common law or equity, but is satisfied whenever an opportunity is afforded to invoke the equal protection of the law by judicial proceedings appropriate for the purpose and adequate to secure the end and object sought to be attained. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. State, ex rel. City of Omaha, 47 Neb. 549 (66 N. W. 624; 53 Am. St. Rep. 557; 41 L. R. A. 481).

www.libtool.com.cn

Particular uses or purposes.

30. (1895.) Section 8 of article II of the "Rayner Irrigation Law" confers upon irrigating companies organized under the laws of this state power to acquire the right of way for necessary canals, reservoirs, etc., by condemnation. Paxton & Hershey Irrigating Co. v. Farmers & Merchants Irrigation Co., 45 Neb. 884 (64 N. W. 343; 50 Am. St. Rep. 585; 29 L. R. A. 853).

31. (1895.) The use of water for the purpose of irrigating contemplated by the act of March 27, 1889, known as the "Rayner Irrigation Law," is a public use within the meaning of the constitution. Paxton & Hershey Irrigating Co. v. Farmers & Merchants Irrigation Co., 45 Neb. 884 (64 N. W. 343; 50 Am. St. Rep. 585; 29 L. R. A. 853).

Determination of necessity of appropriation.

32. (1882.) The decision of the general manager of a railroad company is prima facie, and in the absence of all evidence to the contrary, a just measure of what is essential to the convenient and proper conduct of its business, and sufficient to warrant the exercise the power of eminent domain in its behalf. Dietrichs v. Lincoln & N. W. R. Co., 13 Neb. 361 (13 N. W. 624).

33. (1894.) When the public exigencies demand, the exercise of the power of taking private property for the public use is solely a question for the legislature, upon whose determination the courts cannot sit in judgment; but what is such a public use as will justify the exercise of the power of eminent domain is a question for the courts to decide. But if the public use be declared by the legislature, the courts will hold the use public, unless it manifestly appears from the provisions of the act that they can have no tendency to advance and promote such public use. Welton v. Dickson, 38 Neb. 767 (57 N. W. 559; 41 Am. St. Rep. 771; 22 L. R. A. 496).

34. (1895.) There is no arbitrary standard by which to determine whether the purpose to which property is appropriated possesses the element of public utility. Public use, in a constitutional sense, may be confined to the inhabitants of a restricted locality or neighborhood, but the use must be common, and not to a particular individual. Paxton & Hershey Irrigating Co. v. Farmers & Merchants Irrigation Co., 45 Neb. 884 (64 N. W. 343; 50 Am. St. Rep. 585; 29 L. R. A. 853).

35. (1895.) To the legislature, and not to the courts, has been committed the power to determine when the exigencies of the public demand the taking of private property, the limit of judicial interference being the duty to declare void acts clearly in conflict with the constitution. Paxton & Hershey Irrigating Co. v. Farmers & Merchants Irrigation Co., 45 Neb. 884 (64 N. W. 343; 50 Am. St. Rep. 585; 29 L. R. A. 853).

Public land subject to.

36. (1901.) Under the provisions of section 2477, U. S. Revised Statutes, lands of the general government not reserved for public purposes may be taken for public roads. Streeter v. Stalnaker, 61 Neb. 205 (85 N. W. 47).

37. (1907.) The taking of private property only is authorized by statutes providing for the exercise of the power of eminent domain, unless there is express or clearly implied authority to extend them to public property. State v. Boone County, 78 Neb. 271 (110 N. W. 629).

38. (1907.) The statutes of this state relating to the establishment of public roads do not authorize the taking of public lands for road purposes not on section lines. State v. Boone County, 78 Neb. 271 (110 N. W. 629).

Rights in waterways.

39. (1896.) A county or city in exercising the right of eminent domain may divert water in a manner which would be unlawful if done by an individual; but, in such case, just compensation must be made for all damage inflicted. Churchill v. Beethe, 48 Neb. 87 (66 N. W. 992; 35 L. R. A. 442).

40. (1903.) Under the constitution and statutes of this state, condemnation is authorized of the right of the private riparian proprietor to the use and enjoyment of a natural stream flowing past his lands, or its impairment by an appropriation of such water for irrigation purposes, and such riparian proprietor may recover damages in the same way and subject to the same rules as a person whose property is affected injuriously by the construction and operation of a railroad. McCook Irrigation & Water Power Co. v. Crews, 70 Neb. 115 (102 N. W. 249).

41. (1903.) The statute governing the subject of the appropriation of water flowing in the streams, for the purposes of irrigation, is constitutional. McCook Irrigation & Water Power Co. v. Crews, 70 Neb. 115 (102 N. W. 249).

42. (1903.) The property right in water by a riparian owner is subject to condemnation and appropriation for public use in the manner provided by law. Crawford Co. v. Hathaway, 67 Neb. 325 (93 N. W. 781; 108 Am. St. Rep. 647; 60 L. R. A. 889).

43. (1903.) The provisions of section 41, article II, chapter 93*a*, Compiled Statutes 1901, and of section 21, article I of the constitution, authorize the condemnation of the right of a private riparian proprietor to the use and enjoyment of a natural stream flowing past his land, or its impairment by an appropriation of such water for irrigation purposes; and such riparian proprietor may recover damages in the same way and subject to the same rules as a person whose property is affected injuriously by the construction and operation of a railroad. Crawford Co. v. Hathaway, 67 Neb. 325 (93 N. W. 781; 108 Am. St. Rep. 647; 60 L. R. A. 889).

II. COMPENSATION.

A. Necessity and Sufficiency.

Liability in general.

44. (1891.) Where the county board appropriates a private bridge and locates a road over it upon petition duly signed, the county is liable to the owner for compensation. Blaine County v. Brewster, 32 Neb. 264 (49 N. W. 183); Douglas County v. Taylor, 50 Neb. 535 (70 N. W. 27).

45. (1896.) In this state, private property cannot be taken or damaged for public use without compensation therefor, and this rule applies to municipalities and counties exercising the right of eminent domain. Hodges v. Board of Supervisors of Seward County, 49 Neb. 666 (68 N. W. 1027).

46. (1906.) Under the provisions of the charter of South Omaha in force in 1901, that city was entitled to at least nominal damages in an action by a railway corporation to condemn a right of way over portions of its streets and alleys. City of South Omaha v. Omaha B. & T. R. Co., 76 Neb. 718 (107 N. W. 988).

47. (1906.) Under the constitutional provision that "the property of no person shall be taken or damaged for public use without just compensation therefor," where there has been a disturbance of a right which the owner of real estate possesses in connection with his estate and which gives to it an additional value, by reason of which disturbance he sustains special damages in respect to such property in excess of that sustained by the public at large, he is entitled to recover damages. Stehr v. Mason City & Ft. D. R. Co., 77 Neb. 641 (110 N. W. 701).

Necessity of payment before taking.

48. (1881.) The law guarantees to everyone the free use and enjoyment of his property, and he can be required to surrender it only when it is required for public use, and upon full compensation being made Jenal v. Green Island Draining Co., 12 Neb. 163 (10 N. W. 547).

49. (1885.) While the statute authorizes a railroad corporation to go upon the land of an individual, if need be, and locate its line of road over such land, and permits either the corporation or the landowner to institute proceedings to condemn the right of way, yet, before the corporation can appropriate such right of way by entering upon the land and constructing its road across the same, the damages must have been appraised and the amount thereof paid to the landowner or deposited with the county judge. Republican V. R. Co. v. Fink, 18 Neb. 82 (24 N. W. 439); (1887) Hull v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 21 Neb. 371 (32 N. W. 162).

50. (1891.) Before a county can appropriate lands to public use for a public road it must provide for the payment of damages for the right of way either by the appropriation of money from the proper fund for that purpose, or the levy of sufficient taxes to pay the damages upon which a warrant may be drawn. In either case the compensation must be sure, and the landowner may enjoin the use of his property by the public until such compensation is made. Zimmerman v. Kearney County, 33 Neb. 620 (50 N. W. 1126).

51. (1894.) The just compensation required to be made for taking private property for public use, by section 21 of article I of the constitution, must, before such taking, be ascertained and payment made accordingly, whether the appropriation of such property is by municipal or other corporation. Livingston v. County Commissioners of Johnson County, 42 Neb. 277 (60 N. W. 555).

52. (1896.) The proceedings by which a highway is opened call for settlement and payment of all damages which may arise from the proper construction and maintenance of the highway. Churchill v. Beethe, 48 Neb. 87 (66 N. W. 992; 35 L. R. A. 442).

53. (1896.) An action will lie at the suit of a landowner to enjoin the opening of a public road across his premises, where the damages resulting from the appropriation have not been ascertained, and no provision has been made for the payment thereof. Hodges v. Board of Supervisors, 49 Neb. 666 (68 N. W. 1027).

54. (1898.) Under section 21 of article I of the constitution, declaring that "the property of no person shall be taken or damaged for public use without just compensation therefor," a landowner cannot be required to surrender his land for public use until his damages are first ascertained and either paid or proper provision made for their payment. Lewis v. City of Lincoln, 55 Neb. 1 (75 N. W. 154); (1903) Hogsett v. Harlan County, 4 Unof. 310 (97 N. W. 316).

55, 56. (1901.) Before a section line road can be opened and worked, the damages suffered by the owners whose lands are taken must be ascertained and paid. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Douglas County, 1 Unof. 247 (95 N. W. 339).

57, 58. (1903.) The fact that the person who owned the land when the resolution was adopted by a board of county commissioners establishing a highway, without proper notice, asked leave to present a claim for damages, which request was refusal by the board, and an attempted appeal from such refusal has been dismissed, is no defense to an action, by the owner of the land at the time the road was actually opened, to recover his damages therefor. Hogsett v. Harlan County, 4 Unof. 310 (97 N. W. 316).

59. (1904.) The owner of land attempted to be taken for a public road may enjoin the use of the same for such purpose until his damages for the taking have been ascertained and paid, or provision made for their payment, provided such injunction is sought before the public have acquired a prescriptive right to the land taken. Kime v. Cass County, 71 Neb. 677 (99 N. W. 546).

60. (1905.) Real estate cannot be taken by condemnation proceedings unless payment therefor to the owners is first made or secured. All parties having an interest in the land are "owners" within the meaning of the statute. State v. Missouri P. R. Co., 75 Neb. 4 (105 N. W. 983).

61. (1907.) Section 21, article I of the constitution, does not require that payment shall precede the taking of the land for public use. It is left to the legislature to determine the manner of the taking and the time and manner of payment. State v. Several Parcels of Land, 79 Neb. 638 (113 N. W. 248).

Waiver of compensation, and damages from construction.

62. (1896.) A lot owner by signing the petition set out in the opinion waived his right to payment of an award at the time his property was taken for a street, and also waived his right to collect interest on the award. West v. City of Omaha, 48 Neb. 466 (67 N. W. 439).

63. (1897.) A release sufficient to estop the landowner from claiming damages resulting from an exercise of the right of eminent domain would also estop one claiming under him. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Harlin, 50 Neb. 698 (70 N. W. 263; 61 Am. St. Rep. 578; 36 L. R. A. 417).

64. (1890.) Where a landowner files a claim for damages caused by the location of a public road over his land, he thereby waives all objections on the ground of irregularities in locating the road. Davis v. Boone County, 28 Neb. 837 (45 N. W. 249)

65. (1904.) Under the constitution of 1866, as well as that of 1875, mere passive acquiescence by a landowner in the taking of his property for a public use, unaccompanied by any conduct indicative of an affirmative assent thereto, and not continued for the statutory period of limitations, is not a waiver of his right to compensation therefor and cannot be made so by statute. Kime v. Cass County, 71 Neb. 680 (101 N. W. 2).

66. (1904.) Where one files a claim for damages caused by the location of a public road, and accepts the allowance made him by the county board, he cannot thereafter maintain an action against the county for damages caused by opening such road, unless the same be negligently and unskillfully constructed and maintained. Stocker v. Nemaha County, 72 Neb. 255 (100 N. W. 308).

www.libtool.com.cn

67. (1905.) A landowner who has united in a petition for the establishment of a public road, expressly waiving compensation for damages arising therefrom, may withdraw such waiver by filing a claim for compensation before the establishment of the road. Ashley v. Burt County, 73 Neb. 159 (102 N. W. 272).

Damage for placing electric railway poles in street, see Street Railroads, §§ 12, 13.

Elements of compensation.

——— In general.

68. (1881.) Damages incident to the taking of land for right of way for a railroad, and for which compensation must be made to the owner, independently of the portion actually appropriated, are the result of facts and circumstances susceptible of proof, and they must be proved before the damages are allowed. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Lamb, 11 Neb. 592 (10 N. W. 493).

69. (1889.) Where there is a stone quarry upon the right of way which will be destroyed by reason of the grading and roadbed, witnesses familiar with the value of such quarry may be interrogated in regard to the same, as its value is a proper element of damages for the consideration of the jury. So where a dwelling house is situated on the right of way and will become the property of the company condemning the land. Burlington & M. R. R. Co. v. White, 28 Neb. 166 (44 N W 95).

——— Excavations, embankments, and inconvenience in general.

70, 71. (1883.) In making an assessment for damages for right of way of a railroad, it is proper to consider the way in which the road cuts the land, the inconvenient shape in which the residue is left, the excavations and embankments, and the exposure of the owner's property to particular injuries from its proximity to the road, which may result from its proper construction and operation. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Hays, 15 Neb. 224 (18 N. W. 51); (1889) Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Meeker, 28 Neb. 94 (44 N. W. 79).

72. (1899.) The jury in fixing the damages sustained by a landowner in consequence of the appropriation, or injury, of his property for a public use may take into account every element of annoyance and disadvantage resulting from the improvement which would influence an intending purchaser's estimate of the market value of such property. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. O'Neill, 58 Neb. 239 (78 N. W. 521).

——— Diversion of waters.

73. (1884.) In condemnation proceedings by a railroad company, to obtain a strip of land along its right of way to dig a channel for the waters of a stream already diverted by the railroad embankment, such embankment having already been constructed on a right of way granted by the owner of the condemned land, damages for the diversion of the water by the embankment cannot be allowed, but only the value of the land taken for the channel. Jackman v. Missouri P. R. Co., 15 Neb. 524 (19 N. W. 497).

——— Necessity for crossings.

74. (1881.) The want of means for crossing a railroad, the watching of cattle to keep them from the danger of passing trains, being provided for by statute, have no proper place in a trial of the question of damages for the right of way. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Lamb, 11 Neb. 592 (10 N. W. 493).

——— Abutting property.

75. (1883.) Where a lot abuts upon an alley in which a railroad is built with the consent of the city authorities, if the owner of the lot is thereby deprived of a public right which he has enjoyed in connection with his premises, and in consequence thereof he sustains damage in excess of that shared by the public generally, he may recover for such excess. Gottschalk v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 14 Neb. 550 (16 N. W. 475).

76. (1886.) In awarding damages for appropriating land for a highway, the jury cannot consider the possible injuries to the landowner's fences from runaway teams. Otoe County v. Heye, 19 Neb. 289 (27 N. W. 145).

77. (1893.) Where a railroad is built upon a public road the landowner cannot recover damages to his land by reason of the additional burden placed thereon. Hastings & G. I. R. Co. v. Ingalls, 15 Neb. 123 (16 N. W. 762).

78. (1907.) In determining the amount of damages to abutting property for erecting a viaduct in a street, the jury may consider diversion of travel, inconvenience of access, and diminution of business carried on upon said property, not as independent items of damage, but for the purpose of determining the market value of the property before and after the construction of such improvement. Gillespie v. City of South Omaha, 79 Neb. 441 (112 N. W. 582).

——— Danger of personal injuries.

79. (1896.) Such contingencies as frightening horses and injury to persons and property by passing trains are proper subjects of inquiry in determining to what extent the value of the property has been impaired by the construction and operation of a railroad, but should not be considered as distinct elements of damage. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Shafer, 49 Neb. 25 (68 N. W. 342).

——— Obstruction of access to property.

80. (1889.) Where town lots abut upon a street, along which a railroad is constructed so near as to cause an embankment in the street upon either side of the lot, so as to deprive the lot owner of the free use of the streets adjacent to and abutting on the lot, the lot being thereby depreciated in value to the damage of the owner, he may recover his damages from the railroad company, even though no part of the lot be taken, and no part of the street in front thereof be occupied by the railroad. Chicago, K. & N. R. Co. v. Hazels, 26 Neb. 364 (42 N. W. 93).

——— Expense of filling lots.

81. (1897.) The necessary expense of filling residence lots to grade is a proper subject of inquiry in condemnation proceedings. Farwell v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 52 Neb. 614 (72 N. W. 1036).

Improvements by company during temporary occupancy.

82. (1903.) Where the railway company, before constructing its track, has settled a dispute as to the boundaries with the owner of the land, by the terms of which settlement deeds are to be made by each party to the other of their respective holdings, the fact that the deed executed by the company is not made until after the construction of the track, and by its terms conveys the land "and all appurtenances thereto belonging," will not prevent the railway company or its grantees with notice of the true state of the title when the track was built; nor will such deed carry the ownership of the tracks, they not being expressly mentioned, and not being legally appurtenant to the owner's estate, and hence in subsequent condemnation proceedings by the company to acquire the right of way, the value of the track should not be added to the amount awarded to the grantee. Omaha B. & T. R. Co. v. Whitney, 68 Neb. 389 (94 N. W. 513). [Modified on rehearing. 68 Neb. 399.]

83. (1903.) Where a railroad company constructs a road-bed and tracks upon the land of another under a contract, arrangement or agreement with third parties, to be used for private purposes, the law relative to the seizure of property for a public use does not apply, and the rights of the parties are to be measured and determined by legal principles generally applicable to improvements in the nature of trade fixtures by a tenant or licensee in the possession and use of the real estate on which the improvements are made. Omaha B. & T. R. Co. v. Whitney, 68 Neb. 399 (99 N. W. 525).

84. (1903.) Ordinarily, when a railroad company enters upon land of another and constructs a road-bed and tracks thereon, and occupies the land for right of way purposes, and thereafter condemnation proceedings are had to appropriate the land on which the road-bed is constructed, under the law of eminent domain the landowner cannot in such proceedings have the value of such improvements included in his award. Omaha B. & T. R. Co. v. Whitney, 68 Neb 399 (99 N. W. 525).

New and additional use.

85. (1890.) Where one executes a deed to a railroad to property for right of way purposes, upon representations that only the main line would be built thereon, he may recover for any excess of damages sustained by reason of the construction of side tracks. Donisthorpe v. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co., 30 Neb. 142 (46 N. W. 240; 27 Am. St. Rep. 387).

C. Measure and Amount.

Damages for opening public road, see Highways, §§ 88-121.

Measure of damage for taking property by cities, see Municipal Corporations, §§ 370-379.

In general.

86. (1881.) The damages for which the law provides, and proper to be included in the assessment for right of way, are simply those which it can be said with reasonable certainty the owner of the land will sustain by reason of its appropriation; in other words, such damages as are necessarily incident to the proper construction and careful management of the road, leaving injuries resulting from negligence to be compensated for by actions whenever they occur. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Whalen, 11 Neb. 585 (10 N. W. 491); Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Lamb, 11 Neb. 592 (10 N. W. 493); Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Ward, 11 Neb. 597 (10 N. W. 524).

87. (1874.) The measure of damages to be awarded a landowner, on account of the location of a public highway through his land, is the fair market value of the land actually taken, while special benefits may be set off against incidental damages to the residue of the tract. Wagner v. Gage County, 3 Neb. 237.

88. (1883.) An award of damages, under the statute, for right of way for a railroad, embraces only those damages which may reasonably be anticipated upon the assumption that the road will be built and operated with due care and skill, and with no unnecessary injury to property outside of the right of way. Burlington & M. R. R. Co. v. Schluntz, 14 Neb. 421 (16 N. W. 439).

89. (1888.) The right of a railway company to condemn buildings situated on real estate necessary for its use is an incident to such right to condemn, and the owner must be paid full value for the land and the buildings Forney v. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co., 23 Neb. 465 (36 N. W. 806).

90. Where property has been taken or damaged for a public use, the owner is entitled to recover as compensation the difference between the value of such property immediately before and immediately after the completion of the improvement from which the injury results. (1895) Atchison & N. R. Co. v. Boerner, 45 Neb. 453 (63 N. W. 787); (1899) Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. O'Neill, 58 Neb. 239 (78 N. W. 521).

91. (1899.) The jury in fixing the damages sustained by a landowner in consequence of the appropriation of his land for railroad purposes may take into account every element of annoyance and disadvantage which will influence an intending purchaser's estimate of the market value of such property. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. O'Neill, 58 Neb. 239 (78 N. W. 521).

92. (1904.) The measure of damages to property taken on eminent domain proceeding is the fair market value thereof, which is the highest price the property will bring, at the time of the taking, for any and all uses for which it is available. Union P. R. Co. v. Stanwood, 71 Neb. 150 (91 N. W. 191).

93. (1906.) Compensatory damages should be allowed for the land taken from the right of way for a public road. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Cass County, 76 Neb. 396 (107 N. W. 773).

Taking part of tract.

See post, §§ 96-116.

94. (1881.) Where land is condemned for railroad purposes the owner is entitled to have as one item of damage the fair market value of the part actually taken. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Whalen, 11 Neb. 585 (10 N. W. 491).

95. (1892.) The rule for assessing damage where a railroad constructs its track in a street is, first, the value of the land actually taken (in this case twenty-five feet next to the alley); second, the depreciation in value, if any, of the remaining part of the tract caused by the construction of the railroad. Atchison & N. R. Co. v. Forney, 35 Neb. 607 (53 N. W. 585; 37 Am. St. Rep. 450).

——— Damage to residue.

See, also, post, 109-116.

96. (1881.) Where a portion of the tract remains, if it can be said with reasonable certainty that the road, properly constructed and carefully operated, will injure it, he is also entitled to recover for that. But injuries merely speculative and contingent upon the improper construction or negligent operation of the road are too remote and uncertain to be considered. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Whalen, 11 Neb. 585 (10 N. W. 491).

97. (1885.) In proceedings in ad quod damnum the landowner is entitled to compensation for the land overflowed and rendered useless by reason of the erection of the dam; and for the diminution in the value of the residue of the land by reason of the increased depth of the stream. Sutliff v. Johnson, 17 Neb. 575 (24 N. W. 217).

97a. (1888.) The true rule for damages for land taken under eminent domain proceedings is to estimate the value of land actually taken with the depreciation in value of what remains. Blakeley v. Chicago, K. & N. R. Co., 25 Neb. 207 (40 N. W. 956).

98, 99. (1889.) The landowner is entitled to full compensation for the land actually taken, and for such damages to the residue of the land as are equivalent to the diminution in value thereof, general benefits not considered. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Meeker, 28 Neb. 94 (44 N. W. 79); (1889) Chicago, K. & N. R. Co. v. Wiebe, 25 Neb. 542 (41 N. W. 297).

100. (1890.) The landowner is entitled to full pay for the land actually taken, and, in addition, to such damages to the residue of the land as are equivalent to the diminution of the value thereof caused by the taking, and if the value of the land actually taken is first enhanced by the value of the improvements on the remainder of the land, then to get this enhanced value and, in addition, the damages to the remainder actually improved, including the damages to the improvements, would seem to result in a multiplicity of damages uncertain to the measure of justice required. Smith v. Crete, M. & W. R. Co., 29 Neb. 142 (45 N. W. 287).

101. (1892.) The measure of damages for land taken is the actual value of the part actually taken with the depreciation of the value of what remains. Atchison & N. R. Co. v. Boerner, 34 Neb. 240 (51 N. W. 842; 33 Am. St. Rep. 637).

102. (1894.) The damages to which a landowner is entitled by reason of the construction of a railway across his farm are (1) the actual value of the land taken at the time of the taking, without diminution on account of any benefit or other set-off whatsoever; (2) the depreciation in value of the remainder of the farm, caused by the appropriation of a part thereof for railway purposes, and the construction and permanent operation and occupation of the railroad thereon, excluding general benefits. Omaha S. R. Co. v. Todd, 39 Neb. 818 (58 N. W. 289).

103. (1895.) In addition to the value of the land taken, the owner should be awarded any damages sustained by that portion not taken. Martin v. Fillmore County, 44 Neb. 719 (63 N. W. 863).

104. (1895.) Where land is appropriated for public use the owner thereof is entitled to recover the value of the land appropriated without any deduction for benefits. In addition thereto he should recover any damages sustained by that portion of the land not appropriated and, as against the latter item, special benefits but not general benefits may be set off. Martin v. Fillmore County, 44 Neb. 719 (63 N. W. 863).

105. (1897.) An action for damages or injuries to the remaining portion of land, not appropriated, by the construction of a highway, will lie against a county. Douglas County v. Taylor, 50 Neb. 535 (70 N. W. 27).

106. (1898.) The elements of damage for the construction of a railroad across a farm are the actual value of the portion taken and the depreciation in value of the remainder, excluding general benefits. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Buel, 56 Neb. 205 (76 N. W. 571).

107. (1901.) Where a schoolhouse has been erected upon mortgaged land, the authorities may, after the erection thereof, condemn the land required for a site; and the measure of damages is the value of the land taken, exclusive of the value of the building, and the damage to the remainder. Burns v. School District No. 18 of Rock County, 61 Neb. 351 (85 N. W. 284).

108. (1904.) The provisions of section 21, article I of the constitution, allow a person whose property has been taken for a highway, not only the fair market value of the land actually taken, but also such additional damages as accrue to the remainder of the tract by reason of the opening of the road. Scace v. Wayne County, 72 Neb. 162 (100 N. W. 149).

——— Deduction of benefits.

See, also, ante, §§ 94-108.

109. (1874.) A landowner through whose land a highway is located is entitled to the market value of the land taken with the benefits deducted. Wagner v. Gage County, 3 Neb. 237.

110. (1881.) Special benefits may go to reduce the damages to what remains of the land, but cannot be set off against the value of the part taken. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Whalen, 11 Neb. 585 (10 N. W. 491).

111. (1888.) In awarding just compensation for property damaged for public use, general benefits shared by the public at large cannot be considered, while special benefits to the property damaged may be. Schaller v. City of Omaha, 23 Neb. 325 (36 N. W. 533); (1894) Dayton v. City of Lincoln, 39 Neb. 74 (57 N. W. 754).

112. (1889.) The landowner is entitled to damages for the diminution in the value of the land not taken, general benefits not considered. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Meeker, 28 Neb. 94 (44 N. W. 79).

for public use, as for opening a street, the owner is entitled to the fair market value of the land actually taken, and special benefits to the residue of the tract cannot be set off against such value, but may be against incidental damages to the residue of the tract. City of Omaha v. Howell Lumber Co., 30 Neb. 633 (46 N. W. 919).

114. (1890.) Where land is taken by a municipality for the opening of a street, the owner is entitled to the value of the land taken, without a deduction for benefits. City of Omaha v. Cochran, 30 Neb. 637 (46 N. W. 920).

115. (1894.) An owner of land taken by eminent domain may recover for depreciation in value of the land not taken, excluding general benefits. Omaha S. R. Co. v. Todd, 39 Neb. 818 (58 N. W. 289).

116. (1895.) Special benefits but not general benefits may be set off against damages recoverable. Martin v. Fillmore County, 44 Neb. 719 (63 N. W. 863); (1898) Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Buel, 56 Neb. 205 (76 N. W. 571).

Depreciation of value.

117. (1888.) It is competent for the witness, in estimating the value of the real estate after the location of the road, to take into consideration all elements caused by the construction of the road which would tend to diminish the value of the property. Blake'ey v. Chicago, K. & N. R. R. Co., 25 Neb. 207 (40 N. W. 956); (1895) Atchison & N. R. Co. v. Boerner, 45 Neb. 453 (63 N. W. 787).

118. (1889.) The words "or damage," in section 21, article I of the constitution, include all damages arising from the exercise of the right of eminent domain which causes a diminution in the value of private property. Chicago, K. & N. R. Co. v. Hazels, 26 Neb. 364 (42 N. W. 93).

119. (1889.) Damages arising from the exercise of the right of eminent domain include all damages which cause a diminution in value of property taken. City of Omaha v. Kramer, 25 Neb. 489 (41 N. W. 295; 13 Am. St. Rep. 504).

120. (1889.) The measure of damages recoverable for the construction of a railroad contiguous or adjacent to lands is the difference in the value before and after the construction, regardless of the increase or depreciation of its general value. Omaha Belt R. Co. v. McDermott, 25 Neb. 714 (41 N. W. 648).

121. (1889.) For the purpose of arriving at the diminution of the value of real estate damaged by the construction of a railroad, in estimating the value of the property after the construction of such road, it is proper to take into consideration all elements of damage caused by such construction, which tend to diminish the value of the property. Chicago, K. & N. R. Co. v. Hazels, 26 Neb. 364 (42 N. W. 93).

122. (1891.) A city is not liable to a lot owner for the diminution in value of his property by reason of the construction of a sewer, built by the city near his lot, on which a brick building was erected before the sewer grade was established. City of Plattsmouth v. Boeck, 32 Neb. 297 (49 N. W. 167).

123. (1904.) Where a highway is laid out by which a tract of land is divided into two parts, the depreciation in value, if any, of the entire tract, after deducting any special benefits which may accrue by reason of the opening of the road, is a proper element of damage. Scace v. Wayne County, 72 Neb. 162 (100 N. W. 149).

124. (1906.) The damages recoverable for property taken on eminent domain proceedings properly include all damages arising from the exercise of eminent domain which cause a diminution in the value of the property. Stehr v. Mason City & Ft. D. R. Co., 77 Neb. 641 (110 N. W. 701).

125. (1907.) The word "damage" in the constitution includes all actual damages resulting from the exercise of the right of eminent domain which diminish the market value of private property. Gillespie v. City of South Omaha, 79 Neb. 441 (112 N. W. 582).

126. (1907.) The measure of damage to an abutting property owner for diminishing the convenience of access to his property by reason of vacating a street and erecting a viaduct on such street, is the difference in value of the property before and immediately after such change, unaffected by any change in value of property values in general in the same vicinity. Gillespie v. City of South Omaha, 79 Neb. 441 (112 N. W. 582).

Deducting liens.

Land constituting a single tract.

127. (1888.) Where a number of tracts of land as described by the government surveys are used together as one farm or body of land, in determining the owner's damage by reason of the location of a railway across one or more of the tracts, the injury to the whole farm or body of land should be considered. Northeastern N. R. Co. v. Frazier, 25 Neb. 42 (40 N. W. 604).

128. (1892.) Where several contiguous town lots are used and treated by the owner as one property, in estimating his damages occasioned by the appropriation by a railroad company of one of such lots and parts of two others for its right of way, the injury to the entire property should be considered, although the petition filed by the railroad company for the appointment of commissioners only describes the lots across which the railroad is located. Atchison & N. R. Co. v. Boerner, 34 Neb. 240 (51 N. W. 842; 33 Am. St Rep. 637).

129. (1894.) Where a number of tracts of land, as described by government surveys, are used together as one farm or body of land, in determining the owner's damage by reason of the location of a railway across one or more of the tracts the injury to the whole farm or body of land should be considered. Omaha S. R. Co. v. Todd, 39 Neb. 818 (58 N. W. 289).

Time with reference to which compensation to be made.

130, 131. (1883.) The valuation of property taken for right of way for a railroad should be made as of the time of the filing of the petition for the assessment of damages to the land. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Hays, 15 Neb. 224 (18 N. W. 51); (1894) Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Bates, 40 Neb. 381 (58 N. W. 959).

132. (1881.) While the date of filing a petition to condemn real estate for right of way of a railroad is deemed the time when the appropriation takes place for the purpose of assessing damages, yet proof is not limited to that particular day; and where the petition was filed in June, and a witness testified to the value in the following August, the evidence was held admissible. Northeastern N. R. Co. v. Frazier, 25 Neb. 53 (40 N. W. 609).

Excessiveness of award.

133. (1884.) When testimony shows that land taken by a railroad, for a right of way, was of the value of $261.75, a verdict for defendant, whose land was rendered inaccessible by reason of cuts and fills, for $400 is sustained. Sioux City & P. R. Co. v. Weimer, 16 Neb. 272 (20 N. W. 349).

134. (1888.) When it is shown that land taken under the right of eminent domain was used as a brick yard, and filled up for that purpose, a verdict for $1,000 as damages is not excessive. Omaha Belt R. Co. v. Johnson, 24 Neb. 707 (40 N. W. 134).

Improvements.

135 (1903.) Where a railroad company enters into an agreement with a land company to furnish the latter with certain trackage facilities and the company enters upon lands of another in pursuance of such agreement and builds road-beds and tracks, in subsequent condemnation proceedings the road-beds so constructed are a part of the land and an element of compensation, but the tracks laid thereon are not and should not be included in the award. Omaha B. & T. R. Co. v. Whitney, 68 Neb. 399 (99 N. W. 525).

Rental value.

136. (1893.) When rented property is injured by a public improvement it is proper in estimating the damages to inquire to what extent, if any, the rental value is affected. City of Omaha v. Hansen, 36 Neb. 135 (54 N. W. 83).

137. (1898.) In estimating the value of real estate taken on eminent domain proceedings, its rental value may be taken into consideration. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Sturey, 55 Neb. 137 (75 N. W. 859).

D. Persons Entitled, and Payment.

In general.

138. (1902.) The constitutional provision that the property of no person shall be taken or damaged for public use without just compensation is mandatory; and this right cannot be impaired or modified by legislation or otherwise. It is not competent for either the legislature or the courts to appoint some person without his consent to receive the money in payment. The right of the property owner to payment is unqualified. Brown v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 64 Neb. 62 (89 N. W. 405).

139. (1897.) Where an inebriate husband conveyed realty to his wife to be preserved for the benefit of the family, it was held that the title was in her, and that there was no trust relation created under which he could release the damages for a portion of the land subsequently taken by a county for a highway. Propst v. Cass County, 51 Neb. 736 (71 N. W. 748).

140. (1888.) Where the interest in certain lands across which a right of way is sought by a railway company is in two persons, and before the appraisement of damages takes place, but after the filing of the petition one of such persons acquires the interest of the other, and the award is made to the former, he will be entitled to the full amount thereof. Northeastern N. R. Co. v. Frazier, 25 Neb. 42 (40 N. W. 604).

Funds liable for payment.

141. (1907.) The provisions of section 101*b*, chapter 12*a*, Compiled Statutes 1897, providing for the payment for property appropriated for parks, parkways and boulevards, are not exclusive, and the provisions of said section, together with the general liability of the municipality, provide for a safe and adequate fund, to which the owners of property appropriated for boulevard purposes in cities of the metropolitan class may look for payment. State v. Several Parcels of Land, 79 Neb. 638 (113 N. W. 248).

Rights of lienholders.

142. (1903.) In proceedings for the condemnation of land under the power of eminent domain, the money awarded by the freeholders, or by the district court on appeal, stands in place of the land and belongs to lienholders to the extent of the value of their liens. Omaha B. & T. R. Co. v. Reed, 69 Neb. 514 (96 N. W. 276).

143. (1905.) One holding a tax lien holds such an interest in the land as entitles him to compensation where taken on eminent domain proceedings. State v. Missouri P. R. Co., 75 Neb. 4 (105 N. W. 983).

Sufficiency of payment.

144. (1902.) An agreement duly carried out that the county shall expend a stipulated sum in improving a road at the claimant's request and for his benefit in lieu of damages, constitutes due compensation for land taken in laying out the road. Welch v. Tippery, 66 Neb. 604 (92 N. W. 582).

145. (1902.) The deposit of money by a railway company with a county judge, during the progress of proceedings to obtain a right of way, does not, unless it is withdrawn by the property owner, discharge the obligation of the company to make just compensation for the property taken or damaged. Brown v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 64 Neb. 62 (89 N. W. 405).

146. (1902.) Nothing short of actual payment, or its equivalent, to the owner, of damages assessed, constitutes compensation for property wrested from him under the power of eminent domain, and a deposit with the county judge will not discharge the obligation. Brown v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 66 Neb. 106 (92 N. W. 128).

147. (1905.) County authorities in laying out and establishing a public road may proceed against one in possession and apparent sole ownership of the land sought to be taken, and will be discharged from liability upon making compensation to such person in good faith and pursuant to a judgment of the court. Cedar County v. Lammers, 73 Neb. 744 (103 N. W. 433).

Apportionment of payment.

148. (1886.) Condemnation money found due to the owner of land should be applied first, to the payment of amount due upon a mortgage, and the remainder to the holder of the legal title. Dodge v. Omaha & S. W. R. Co., 20 Neb. 276 (29 N. W. 936).

III. PROCEEDINGS TO TAKE PROPERTY AND ASSESS COMPENSATION.

In general.

149. (1897.) If private property is to be appropriated to public use, steps must be taken in the manner prescribed by law to appraise the damages and provide for their payment. Propst v. Cass County, 51 Neb. 736 (71 N. W. 748).

Exclusiveness of remedy.

150. (1892.) Where the statutory remedy for the condemnation of land is once instituted it is exclusive as to all damage for the proper construction of the road. Atchison & N. R. Co. v. Forney, 35 Neb. 67 (53 N. W. 585; 37 Am. St. Rep. 450).

151. (1892.) In this state the special remedy provided by statute for determining by condemnation proceeding, the damage to land when a part thereof is taken for right of way purposes by a railroad company is exclusive. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Mattheis, 35 Neb. 48 (52 N. W. 698).

Parties.

152. (1882.) Where a lease of a railroad expressly provides that the defendant shall

"do and perform any and every corporate act which may be necessary, useful or appropriate to" secure to its lessee "the full enjoyment of * * * every franchise, right, easement, power, and privilege" which it then possessed or might thereafter acquire, and that it would also to this end "maintain its corporate organization," a condemnation proceeding is properly brought in the name of the lessor. Dietrichs v. Lincoln & N. W. R. Co., 13 Neb. 361 (13 N. W. 624).

153. (1882.) Where one of the grounds upon which it was sought to enjoin the condemnation of land was that the company, in whose name the proceedings were conducted, had leased its road for a term of years not yet expired, held that the proceedings were properly taken in the name of such company. Dietrichs v. Lincoln & N. W. R. Co., 13 Neb. 361 (13 N. W. 624).

154. (1883.) The word "owner" as used in the statute applies to any person having an interest in the estate. Gerrard v. Omaha, N. & B. H. R. Co., 14 Neb. 270 (15 N. W. 231).

155. (1883.) The fact that proceedings to condemn land to the use of a railroad were taken and prosecuted by direction of the lessee of the road, but in the name of the lessor, is a sufficient ground for enjoining them at the suit of the owner. Gottschalk v. Lincoln & N. W. R. Co., 14 Neb. 389 (15 N. W. 695).

156. (1886.) Where a railroad company, in the exercise of its right of eminent domain, seeks to appropriate private property to its own use for the purpose of right of way, by condemnation and appraisement, all persons having an interest in the property, including mortgagees, should be made parties to the proceeding by proper notice, and if such company fail so to do, and pay the money to a person not entitled thereto, such proceeding and payment are void as to all persons not parties thereto. Dodge v. Omaha & S. W. Ry. Co., 20 Neb. 276 (29 N. W. 936).

157. (1903.) If the landowner is not brought into the district court by the mortgagee's appeal in condemnation proceedings, the corporation, at whose instance the condemnation proceeding was initiated, may bring him in, if it is necessary to do so for the protection of its rights. Omaha B. & T. R. Co. v. Reed, 69 Neb. 514 (96 N. W. 276).

158. (1907.) A railroad company which has leased its lines may, if the lease so provide, extend its lines for the benefit of its lessee, and for this purpose may maintain condemnation proceedings in its own name Beckman v. Lincoln & N. R. Co., 79 Neb. 89 (112 N. W. 348).

——— Substitution of indemnitor.

159. (1893.) A railroad company which has appropriated private property for right of way purposes, on appeal to the district court from an award of damages, is not entitled to have a third party substituted and made a party in its stead, on the ground that such person has agreed to indemnify it for money expended for right of way. Omaha S. R. Co. v. Beeson, 36 Neb. 361 (54 N. W. 557).

Process or notice.

——— Necessity of notice.

160. (1891.) The statute does not provide for the giving of notice except where the proposed line runs through the land of non-resident owners. State, ex rel. Farmer, v. Grand Island & W. C. R. Co., 31 Neb. 209 (47 N. W. 857).

161. (1891.) Before a railroad company can have the damages of a resident landowner appraised, ten days' notice in writing must be given the owner or guardian, either by personal service, or by leaving a copy thereof, at his usual place of residence, unless waived. Trester v. Missouri P. R. Co., 33 Neb. 171 (49 N. W. 1110).

162. (1893.) The word "non-resident," in section 100, chapter 16, Compiled Statutes, relating to condemnation proceedings for right of way for a railroad, means a non-resident of the state and not of the land affected, or of the county where it is situate. Pacific R. Co. v. Perkins, 36 Neb. 456 (54 N. W. 845).

163. (1894.) Any exercise of the power of eminent domain which damages property must be with the same formalities and requirements in regard to notice, etc., of the different steps taken, as in cases where the whole of the property is to be, or is, subjected to public use. McGavock v. City of Omaha, 40 Neb. 64 (58 N. W. 543).

——— Service by publication.

164. (1887.) Where, in a proceeding to condemn the right of way through or over the real estate of a non-resident, notice is given by publication in a newspaper, that if the owner fails to apply for an assessment of damages by a date named, then the railroad company will apply therefor, and that the appraisement will be made at the premises on a day and hour named in the notice, such publication will give no authority for the assessment of damages nine months after the day fixed therefor in the notice. Hull v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 21 Neb. 371 (32 N. W. 162).

165. (1887.) Where it is sought to exercise the right of eminent domain in the condemnation of the real estate of a non-resident and notice of such intention is given by publication, the publication must be made in one newspaper four successive weeks. The publication of such notice in a daily newspaper a part of the time and the remainder of the time in a weekly (the papers being sent to different sets of subscribers in different localities), will not confer jurisdiction and all proceedings thereunder will be void. Hull v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 21 Neb. 371 (32 N. W. 162).

——— Waiver by appeal.

166. (1891.) Where a landowner takes an appeal from the award of commissioners appointed to assess damages for right of way, he waives all objection as to notice and that the appraisers were not properly sworn. Trester v. Missouri P. R. Co., 33 Neb. 171 (49 N. W. 1110).

Pleading.

——— Sufficiency in general.

167. (1888.) Where a railway company, in its petition to condemn real estate for right of way, sets forth the necessary facts to show that it is a corporation duly organized under the laws of this state, and there is no denial of that fact, the petition will be prima facie sufficient to authorize the company to condemn real estate without proof of its incorporation. Clarke v. Chicago, K. & N. R. Co., 23 Neb. 613 (37 N. W. 484).

168. (1892.) A petition for the appointment of a commission to appraise damages for taking property for right of way, which sets forth that the petitioner desires to acquire a strip 100 feet wide through a particular tract, and refers to an accompanying plat for a more particular description, is sufficient. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Mattheis, 35 Neb. 48 (52 N. W. 698).

——— Description of property.

169. (1894.) In proceedings to condemn land of an individual for the use of a railroad, the petition must accurately describe the tract affected by the proceedings. Where the petition describes the land by government subdivision, the description is insufficient to authorize the condemnation of real estate within the limits of an incorporated city, which real estate has been laid out and platted into lots and blocks. Omaha & R. V. R. Co. v. Rickards, 38 Neb. 847 (57 N. W. 739).

170. (1894.) Where a petition for appraisers to assess damage on account of the appropriation for right of way purposes of a strip 100 feet wide through a particular tract of land, refers for a more specific description to an accompanying plat, which shows the location of the road through such tract, but without letters or figures to indicate courses and distances, such description will be held sufficient when assailed in a collateral proceeding. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Mateheis, 39 Neb. 98 (57 N. W. 987).

171. (1894.) Condemnation proceedings are not void merely because a particular fraction sought to be taken is not described with technical accuracy. Reference to plat showing location of railroad is sufficient, when assailed in action of trespass, though courses and distances are not marked thereon. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Mattheis, 39 Neb. 98 (57 N. W. 987).

——— Requiring amendment.

172. (1894.) A county judge, in a proceeding by a railroad company to acquire the right of way by condemnation, may require the petition presented to him to be amended so as to contain a more specific description of the property which it is sought to appropriate. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Mattheis, 39 Neb. 98 (57 N. W. 987).

Mode of assessing damages.

173. (1883.) The mode provided by statute for assessing damages for right of way does not apply where property is damaged but no portion thereof taken. Burlington & M. R. Co. v. Reinhackle, 15 Neb. 279 (18 N. W. 69; 48 Am. Rep. 342).

174. (1885.) The statutory mode of acquiring the right of way and ascertaining the damages therefor is exclusive as to the manner of assessing the value of the land taken with damages to the possession caused by the wrongful entry upon the land before condemnation. Republican V. R. Co. v. Fink, 18 Neb. 82 (24 N. W. 439).

Assessment by commissioners.

175. (1902.) In the exercise of the right of eminent domain the statute should be strictly followed, and held that an appraisement of damages by the bridge committee of the county board which was to settle and determine the amount to be allowed was such a departure from the method of ascertaining the plaintiff's damage as to invalidate the proceeding. Nelson v. Harlan County, 2 Unof. 537 (89 N. W. 458).

www.libtool.com.cn

——— Application.

176. (1891.) Application to the county judge for the appointment of commissioners to appraise the damages sustained by a landowner by reason of the location of a railroad across his premises is required to be in writing, and should state the name of the corporation, the landowner, if known, a description of the real estate over which the road is located, the width required for right of way, and that the owner refuses to grant the same. The application must be signed by some person empowered by the corporation so to do, but it need not be dated nor verified, nor is it essential to jurisdiction that it should aver the act of incorporation of the railroad company. Trester v. Missouri P. R. Co., 33 Neb. 171 (49 N. W. 1110).

——— Appointment.

177. (1891.) The duty of selecting the six freeholders to serve as a jury in the appraisement of damages, by section 97 of chapter 16, Compiled Statutes, is one to be performed by a county judge, upon the ex parte application, either of the railroad company or the landowner, and the statute does not provide for the giving of notice in any case except where the railroad runs through the land of nonresident owners. State, ex rel. Farmer, v. Grand Island & W. C. R. Co. 31 Neb. 209 (47 N. W. 857).

Assessment by county judge.

178. (1898.) A proceeding to condemn real estate for a railroad right of way is conducted by the county judge, the sheriff, and the appraisers selected by the former. These constitute a tribunal, not to try a civil action pending between the landowner and the railway company, not to pronounce a judgment, but simply to assess the damages which the landowner will sustain by reason of the appropriation of his land for the railroad's right of way. Mattheis v. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co., 53 Neb. 681 (74 N. W. 30).

179. (1898.) The powers conferred upon the county judge and the duties required of him by section 97, chapter 16, Compiled Statutes, to assess damages are not judicial powers and duties but purely ministerial ones. Mattheis v. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co., 53 Neb. 681 (74 N. W. 30).

Assessment by jury.

——— Question for jury.

180. (1888.) Amount of damages sustained by the owner of land taken for right of way of railroad is a question for jury. Omaha Belt R. Co. v. Johnson, 24 Neb. 707 (40 N. W. 134).

——— Instructions.

181. (1881.) An instruction that the jury are to allow the difference between the value of the land before the road was laid through it, and its value afterwards, is insufficient. Fremont. E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Whalen, 11 Neb. 585 (10 N. W. 491).

182. (1883.) The instructions copied at length in the opinion held to present the case fairly to the jury. Republican V. R. Co. v. Linn, 15 Neb. 234 (18 N. W. 35).

183. (1886.) An instruction to the jury as to incidental elements of damages without stating what constitutes the same is erroneous. Otoe County v. Heye, 19 Neb. 289 (27 N. W. 145).

184. (1889.) Instructions relative to damages for right of way considered, and held substantially correct. Chicago K. & N. R. Co. v. Wiebe, 25 Neb. 542 (41 N. W. 297).

185. (1889.) In an action for damages for right of way taken by a railroad company, instructions examined and discussed. Burlington & M. R. R. Co. v. White, 28 Neb. 166 (44 N. W. 95).

186. (1893.) Instructions set out in opinion held to state the law correctly. Omaha S. R. Co. v. Beeson, 36 Neb. 361 (54 N. W. 557).

187. (1895.) An instruction as to damages resulting to property by taking land for railroad purposes, held correct. Atchison & N. R. Co. v. Boerner, 45 Neb. 453 (63 N. W. 787).

188. (1894.) The action of the court in giving certain instructions and refusing to give others requested in eminent domain proceedings by defendants reviewed, and held no error in either the giving or refusing. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Bates, 40 Neb. 381 (58 N. W. 959).

189. (1898.) Where land has been appropriated for a public highway, an instruction which directs the jury to allow the owner full compensation for land actually taken and such damages to the residue of the tract as are equivalent to the diminution of the value thereof is not unfavorable to him. Howard v. Board of Supervisors of Clay County, 54 Neb. 443 (74 N. W. 953).

Evidence.

www.libtool.com.cn

Opinion evidence as to value and damages, see Evidence, XII.

——— Presumption and burden of proof.

190. (1902.) To warrant a finding and decree that an award made by the appraisers of damages caused by taking property for street purposes, should have been in favor of plaintiff's assignor instead of another who was named in it, proof of the assignor's ownership of the premises must be produced. City of Omaha v. Clarke, 66 Neb. 33 (92 N. W. 146).

191. (1905.) When, after the lapse of 30 years or more, the record of proceedings in the exercise of the power of eminent domain is shown to be such that they would have been valid under any circumstances, and where both parties have treated them as valid, such circumstances will, if necessary, and in the absence of evidence to the contrary, be presumed to have existed. Roberts v. Sioux City & P. R. Co., 73 Neb. 8 (102 N. W. 60; L. R. A. (n. s.) 272).

——— Admissibility.

192. (1881.) To show the value of land taken for a right of way, evidence of what the owner paid for it at an administration sale three years before is inadmissible. Dietrichs v. L. & N. R. Co., 12 Neb. 225 (10 N. W. 718).

193. (1883.) Evidence of the validity of a tax deed is admissible for the purpose of showing a lien on the premises, and of plaintiff's title. Gerrard v. Omaha, N. & B. H. R. Co., 14 Neb. 270 (15 N. W. 231).

194. (1883.) On the trial of a right of way case a witness may state that the taking of a right of way across plaintiff's farm in a diagonal direction from the N. E. corner to the S. W. corner is a damage to the remaining and several pieces of land, and may state in what such damage consists. Republican V. R. Co. v. Linn, 15 Neb. 234 (18 N. W. 35).

195. (1883.) A tax deed, under which the owner claims, is admissible in a proceeding to condemn lands for a right of way. Gerrard v. Omaha, N. & B. H. R. Co., 14 Neb. 270 (15 N. W. 231).

196. (1893.) On trial of a condemnation proceeding it was not error to admit evidence tending to prove that the property in question (a tract of twenty-one acres adjoining the city of Plattsmouth) was susceptible of subdivision into smaller lots, by reason of which it was more valuable, and that in consequence of the construction of the railroad track subdivision thereof was rendered impossible, whereby the value of the tract was greatly impaired. Omaha S. R. Co. v. Beeson, 36 Neb. 361 (54 N. W. 557).

197. (1893.) Evidence referred to in opinion in trial of a condemnation proceeding held to prove a mere expression of opinion of parties named in the record, and not an offer of compromise, and is therefore admissible under the issues. Omaha S. R. Co. v. Beeson, 36 Neb. 361 (54 N. W. 557).

198. (1893.) On trial of a condemnation proceeding proof of annoyance by smoke and ashes from passing trains is admissible where the railroad track is constructed near the dwelling of the property owner, not as an independent element of damage, but as evidence tending to prove the value of the property after the construction of the track. Omaha S. R. Co. v. Beeson, 36 Neb. 361 (54 N. W. 557).

199. (1894.) On the trial of an appeal in the district court, from condemnation proceedings of right of way of a railroad through a farm, testimony of the rent, which could be obtained for the farm since the appropriation of the right of way, was competent, not as a basis for damages, but as tending to show whether such appropriation had depreciated the market value of the farm; and this is the rule whether the rent is, or had been, for a money consideration or a share of the crops. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Bates, 40 Neb. 381 (58 N. W. 959).

200, 201. (1894.) In an inquiry whether, and how much, the part of a farm not taken for railroad right of way is depreciated in value by the appropriation of a part, evidence as to the size of the farm; the purpose for which it is used; the improvements thereon, and how located; the direction of the road across the farm; the cuts and fills made or to be made in the construction of the road; the width of the right of way; the height of embankments; the depth of ditches; the inconvenience of crossing the track from one part of the farm to another; the liability of stock being killed; the danger from fire from passing trains, are all facts competent for the jury's consideration in determining the depreciation in value of the remainder of the farm. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Bates, 40 Neb. 381 (58 N. W. 959); (1894) Omaha S. R. Co. v. Todd, 39 Neb. 818 (58 N. W. 289).

202. (1894.) On the trial of an appeal from an award made by commissioners appointed to assess the damages sustained by a landowner by reason of the appropriation of a part of his land for railroad purposes, evidence as to what such landowner paid for the land is incompetent. Omaha S. R. Co. v. Todd, 39 Neb. 818 (58 N. W. 289).

203. (1895.) Error cannot be predicated upon the mere fact that witnesses under examination as to the value of several lots in the same immediate neighborhood in arriving at their value estimated that of one class, then, having considered wherein that class differed from another, qualified their estimates of the value of the latter class by taking into consideration the cost of removing such difference when such removal was by such witnesses deemed practicable and advisable. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Griffith, 44 Neb. 690 (62 N. W. 868).

204. (1895.) In showing the value of land taken for railroad purposes, error will not be presumed from the re-examination of a witness as to the price other land sold for, where the adverse party, on cross-examination, adopted that line of inquiry. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Griffith, 44 Neb. 690 (62 N. W. 868).

205. (1898.) On trial of an appeal from an award of damages for land appropriated for railroad purposes a correct map of the premises may be admitted in evidence. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Buel, 56 Neb. 205 (76 N. W 571).

206. (1904.) The value of real property cannot be shown by proof of independent sales. Union P. R. Co. v. Stanwood, 71 Neb. 158 (98 N. W. 656)

Purpose of witnesses in trial.

207. (1881.) In the trial of an action for damages incident to the taking of land for the right of way for a railroad, the use of witnesses is to acquaint the court and jury with the facts and circumstances, but not to measure their effect. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Whalen, 11 Neb. 585 (10 N. W. 491); Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Lamb, 11 Neb. 592 (10 N. W. 493); Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Ward, 11 Neb. 597 (10 N. W. 524).

Effect of withdrawing deposit.

208. (1887.) Where a railroad company condemns private property to public use and deposits the condemnation money with the county judge of the proper county, in accordance with law, and takes possession of the condemned land, the subsequent withdrawal of the deposit from the county judge, for the reason that the proceedings were illegal, will be an abandonment of all right to claim the possession of the real estate under such proceedings. Hull v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 21 Neb. 371 (32 N. W. 162).

Abandonment after judgment.

209. (1884.) After a judgment in the district court for the value of real estate condemned by a railroad company, it can not abandon the same and in that way avoid the payment of the judgment. Drath v. Burlington & M. R. Co., 15 Neb. 367 (18 N. W 717).

210. (1902.) A railway company, after having prosecuted proceedings to obtain a right of way to a final determination, is estopped to repudiate or abandon them, and is bound to pay the amount of the award to the landowner. Brown v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 64 Neb. 62 (89 N. W. 405).

Judgment or verdict on award.

211. (1875.) An award of damages for the location of right of way for a railroad, although not contemplated in the statute (Gen. Stats., p. 191, sec. 97), contained a provision that the party owning the premises, part of which were taken for right of way, might "move back his house" therefrom, is valid. Omaha & N. W. R. Co. v. Menk, 4 Neb. 21.

212. (1881.) In case of an appeal from the award of commissioners, appointed to assess the damages to land holders, caused by the taking of their lands for right of way, depot grounds, etc., it is the duty of the district court to render judgment on the verdict of the jury. Dietrichs v. Lincoln & N. W. R. Co., 12 Neb. 225 (10 N. W. 718).

213. (1881.) While the rendition of a judgment against a railroad company for the value of an easement in real estate will not pass title thereto before payment, yet, should the company never take possession of the easement, the damage sustained by the owner, in the cloud upon his title, will be a sufficient consideration for the judgment. Dietrichs v. Lincoln & N. W. R. Co., 12 Neb. 225 (10 N. W. 718).

214. (1896.) All damages, immediate or prospective, which may flow from the proper construction and maintenance of an improvement carried on under the power of eminent domain, must be compensated in the original condemnation proceedings. Churchill v. Beethe, 48 Neb. 87 (66 N. W. 992; 35 L. R. A. 442).

www.HBGBOL.COM.CN

Setting aside verdict.

215. (1885.) Where, in a trial to recover damages for right of way across a tract of land, the jury were permitted by the court to view the premises, the verdict will not be set aside unless it is clear that the jury erred. Omaha & R. V. R. Co. v. Walker, 17 Neb. 432 (23 N. W. 348).

216. (1885.) Where the evidence shows the value of property condemned to be in excess of the damages awarded, an objection that the evidence does not sustain the verdict is not well taken. Festner v. Omaha & S. W. R. Co., 17 Neb. 280 (22 N. W. 557).

217. (1888.) Where the principal ground for error is that the verdict is much less than it should have been from the evidence before the jury, and it appears that the jury based their verdict upon the testimony of the witnesses whose estimates were the lowest, instead of those whose estimates were the highest, the verdict ordinarily will not be set aside. Clarke v. Chicago, K. & N. R. Co., 23 Neb. 613 (37 N. W. 484).

218. (1888.) Where real estate has been condemned for public use, and damages awarded to the landowner by a jury, and the only error assigned in the supreme court is that the verdict is excessive, the court ordinarily will not vacate or modify the verdict if it is based on the testimony in the case. Omaha Belt R. Co. v. Johnson, 24 Neb. 707 (40 N. W. 134).

219. (1898.) Where there is a conflict in the evidence as to the amount of damages sustained by a landowner by reason of the appropriation of his land for a public road, the supreme court will not interfere with the verdict on the ground that the damages awarded by the jury are inadequate. Howard v. Board of Supervisors of Clay County, 54 Neb. 443 (74 N. W. 953).

220. (1898.) An award of damages should not be set aside as inadequate and obtained by fraud when the application is not made until five years later, and the railroad has been constructed and operating; the money paid to and held by, the county judge; and the application does not aver want of legal nctice of the proceedings, or whether he appealed or not. Mattheis v. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co., 53 Neb. 681 (74 N. W. 30).

221. (1898.) The county court has no jurisdiction of an action brought under section 602 of the code of civil procedure to vacate condemnation proceedings on the ground that the award of damages made therein was procured by fraud. Mattheis v. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co., 53 Neb. 681 (74 N. W. 30).

222. (1898.) The county court has no jurisdiction of a suit in equity to vacate a condemnation proceeding. Mattheis v. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co., 53 Neb. 681 (74 N. W. 30).

Interest on award or judgment.

223, 224. (1898.) Where, on an appeal from an award of damages for land taken for right of way purposes, the damages are found to exceed the award of the commissioners, it is proper to instruct the jury to allow interest from the time of condemnation at the rate of seven per cent per annum. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Buel, 56 Neb. 205 (76 N. W. 571); (1882) Sioux City R. Co. v. Brown, 13 Neb. 317 (14 N. W. 407).

225. (1889.) Where the amount of a verdict for damages exceeds the award of commissioners, a judgment for interest on the verdict from the date of condemnation, when entered with the consent of counsel for the railway company, given upon condition that the court should withhold an instruction to so compute interest, is error without prejudice. Burlington & M. R. R. Co. v. White, 28 Neb. 166 (44 N. W. 95).

——— Interest on dismissal of appeal.

226. (1888.) A railway company condemned certain real estate, and deposited the amount of the award with the county judge, and afterwards took an appeal from such award to the district court. After the case had been pending in the district court for more than a year, it filed a motion to dismiss the appeal, which motion was sustained. Held, That the motion to dismiss the appeal is equivalent to an admission of the correctness of the award, and as the company, by the appeal, has deprived the landowner of the use of the money, he is entitled to interest on the award. Berggren v. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co., 23 Neb. 620 (37 N. W. 470).

Conclusiveness of judgment or award.

Recovery of damages from construction of railroad after condemnation proceedings, see Railroads, §§ 70-72.

www.libtool.com.cn

227. (1892.) An assessment of damages for the appropriation of a portion of plaintiff's property should include damages for injury to the remainder of the property, and is conclusive, so that if plaintiff failed to have such damages awarded, he cannot afterwards maintain an action against the railroad company for such injuries, but he may sue for injuries from obstruction of a street at some distance from the premises. Atchison & N. R. Co. v. Boerner, 34 Neb. 240 (51 N. W. 842; 33 Am. St. Rep. 637).

228. (1892.) The judgment of a district court on appeal, from an award of damages in condemnation proceedings, is conclusive upon the parties as to all questions actually litigated therein, and as to all matters necessarily within the issue joined, although not formally litigated. Rule applied. Atchison & N. R. Co. v. Boerner, 34 Neb. 240 (51 N. W. 842; 23 Am. St. Rep. 637).

229. (1888.) Where real estate is necessary for the location, construction, and convenient use of a railway, and there is a building on such real estate, and the commissioners, in making the award of damages in condemnation proceedings, find the value of the real estate without the building, and an additional sum with the building, and give the owner an option to take the value of the real estate and the building, or the value of the real estate with the right to remove the building, the owner cannot, after receiving compensation in full for the land and the building, sue the company for the value of the building, upon the ground that it had misappropriated it by selling it to other parties who had removed it from the right of way. Forney v. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co., 23 Neb. 465 (36 N. W. 806).

230. (1892.) The judgment of the district court on appeal from an award in a condemnation proceeding for right of way is conclusive upon the parties thereto as to all matters actually litigated therein, and also as to all matters necessarily within the issues joined, although not formally litigated. Atchison & N. R. Co. v. Forney, 35 Neb. 607 (53 N. W. 585; 37 Am. St. Rep. 450).

231. (1903.) A landowner who fails to appeal from the freeholders' award in a condemnation proceeding is conclusively bound by it. Omaha B. & T. R. Co. v. Reed, 69 Neb. 514 (96 N. W. 276).

Appeal to district court.

Saving question for review, see Appeal and Error, § 96.

Appeal as waiver of notice of assessment, see ante, § 166.

——— Appellate jurisdiction.

232. (1887.) A paper headed "Transcript," but consisting of a certified copy only of the report of the commissioners appointed by the county judge to assess the damages, etc., containing their assessment and award of damages, held sufficient to give the appellate court jurisdiction of the cause. Nebraska & C. R. Co. v. Storer, 22 Neb. 90 (34 N. W. 69).

——— Right of mortgagee to appeal.

233. (1902.) A mortgagee who is a party to condemnation proceedings for right of way over premises has a right of appeal from an award of damages for the taking of such premises independently of the owner of the fee. Omaha B. & T. R. Co. v. Reed, 3 Unof. 793 (92 N. W. 1021).

234. (1903.) A mortgagee is an owner within the meaning of the statute providing for the taking of land under the power of eminent domain; and as such owner he has the right to prosecute an independent appeal from the freeholders' award. Omaha B. & T. R. Co. v. Reed, 69 Neb. 514 (96 N. W. 276).

——— Waiver of right to appeal.

235. (1902.) The right of appeal on behalf of a mortgagee from an award in condemnation proceedings is not lost nor suspended by the filing of a claim for payment of the mortgage against the estate of the mortgagor. Omaha B. & T. R. Co. v. Reed, 3 Unof. 793 (92 N. W. 1021).

——— Time for filing transcript.

236. (1886.) The right of appeal from the award of commissioners in the assessment of damages sustained by an owner of real estate by the appropriation of the same to the use of a railroad corporation, may be availed of and perfected by the filing of a transcript from the county judge of the condemnation proceedings in the district court, or the office of the clerk thereof, within sixty days after the filing of the report containing such award with the county judge. Gifford v. Republican V. R. Co., 20 Neb. 538 (31 N. W. 11).

237. (1887.) Under the statute, as it stood prior to the act of March 31, 1887, in order to appeal from the assessment of damages which the owner of any real estate had sustained by the appropriation of his land to the use of any railroad corporation, it was only necessary to file in the office of the clerk of the district court of the proper county, within sixty days after the filing of the report containing the award of such damages with the county judge, a transcript of the condemnation proceedings upon which such award of damages was made. Nebraska & C. R. Co. v. Storer, 22 Neb. 90 (34 N. W. 69).

——— Parties affected by appeal.

238. (1903.) An appeal by a mortgagee in a condemnation proceeding is not effective as to the landowner against whom no summons has been issued. Omaha B. & T. R. Co., v. Reed. 69 Neb. 514 (96 N. W. 276).

——— Questions reviewable.

239. (1882.) Where a railroad company condemns real estate as the property of a person named, it cannot on appeal from the award, at least without tendering an issue to that effect, disprove such ownership. Republican V. R. Co. v. Hayes, 13 Neb. 489 (14 N. W. 521).

240. (1883.) Where a railroad company has condemned certain real estate as the property of A, it cannot on appeal from the award of damages prove that he is not the owner without pleading such want of title. Dietrichs v. Lincoln & N. W. R. Co., 14 Neb. 355 (15 N. W. 728).

241. (1883.) An appeal from an award of commissioners takes to the district court only those matters covered by the award. It does not include damages from negligence to crops during the construction of a road. Burlington & M. R. R. Co. v. Schluntz, 14 Neb. 421 (16 N. W. 439).

242. (1883.) Where a railroad company institutes proceedings and condemns a right of way across real estate, it cannot, on appeal to the district court, disprove the title of the person to whom the damages were awarded without pleading his want of title. Gerrard v. Omaha N. & B. H. R. Co., 14 Neb. 270 (15 N. W. 231).

243. (1903.) On appeal by a mortgagee from an award made by freeholders in a condemnation proceeding, the question to be tried and determined is, the value of appellant's lien on the property appropriated. Omaha B. & T. R. Co. v. Reed, 69 Neb. 514 (96 N. W. 276).

——— Right to open and close.

244. (1885.) Where a railroad company has condemned real estate for right of way, and an appeal from the award of damages has been taken to the district court, the landowner on the trial is entitled to open and close. Omaha & R. V. R. Co. v. Walker, 17 Neb. 432 (23 N. W. 348).

——— Dismissal.

245. (1883). Where each party appealed to the district court from the assessment of damages by the commissioners appointed to assess the damages occasioned by the taking of the right of way over the lands of plaintiff for the railroad of defendant, held that a motion by defendant to dismiss the plaintiff's appeal for the want of notice of such appeal was rightfully denied. Republican V. R. Co. v. Linn, 15 Neb. 234 (18 N. W. 35).

246. (1885.) Where an appeal is taken from the appraisement of damages in eminent domain proceedings by a railroad company it is error to dismiss the appeal for the reason that the appellant company is in default for want of an answer, the landowner is plaintiff to the extent that he must prove his damages. Omaha, N. & B. H. R. Co. v. Umstead, 17 Neb. 459 (23 N. W. 350).

247. (1886.) In an appeal from a finding of commissioners in eminent domain proceedings when transcript is not filed, nor sufficient cause shown for such failure, without laches on the part of the appellant, the appeal will be dismissed. Gifford v. Republican V. R. Co., 20 Neb. 538 (31 N. W. 11).

248, 249. (1888.) When a railway company appeals from an award of damages for real estate condemned for right of way, and becomes satisfied of the correctness of the award and, therefore, does not desire to prosecute such appeal, the proper motion is to affirm the award, as such motion, if sustained, will carry interest and costs. Berggren v. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co., 23 Neb. 620 (37 N. W. 470); (1889) Robbins v. Omaha & N. P. R. Co., 27 Neb. 73 (42 N. W. 905).

——— Review in appellate court.

250. (1888.) The question of the amount of damages sustained by a landowner for a right of way condemned across his land is peculiarly of a local nature, proper to be determined by a jury of the county, and the supreme court ordinarily will not vacate or modify the verdict, if it is based upon the testimony in the case. Northeastern N. R. Co. v. Frazier, 25 Neb. 42 (40 N. W. 604).

251. (1897.) The method of bringing to the supreme court for review judgments of the district court in proceedings by railroads for the exercise of the right of eminent domain is by petition in error and not by appeal. Nebraska Loan & Trust Co. v. Lincoln & B. H. R. Co., 53 Neb. 246 (73 N. W. 546).

——— Necessity of new pleadings.

252. (1882.) Where on appeal the only question is the amount of damages, no pleadings are necessary; but if other issues are involved they must be pleaded to be available. Republican V. R. Co. v. Hayes, 13 Neb. 489 (14 N. W. 521).

253. (1889.) In an appeal to the district court from the award of damages by commissioners, where the only question is the amount of the recovery, new pleadings need not be filed in the district court. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Meeker, 28 Neb. 94 (44 N. W. 79).

254. (1891.) On appeal to the district court from the appraisement of damages, if other issues than the question of damages are involved, they must be presented by proper pleadings. Trester v. Missouri P. R. Co., 33 Neb. 171 (49 N. W. 1110).

255. (1877.) In taking an appeal from the assessment of damages for land appropriated by a railroad company, to the district court, the appellant is not required by the statute to execute an appeal bond. Nebraska R. Co. v. Van Dusen, 6 Neb. 160.

256. (1877.) In an appeal from the assessment of damages for land taken by a railroad company it is not necessary to file pleadings in the case in the district court—a jury is impaneled by the court to hear the proofs and assess the damages sustained by the owner of the land. Nebraska R. Co. v. Van Dusen, 6 Neb. 160.

Costs.

257. (1888.) In an appeal from an award for damages, for property taken for right of way, if appellant fail to obtain a more favorable judgment than was given by the commissioners who made award from which appeal is taken, such appellant will be liable for all costs occasioned by appeal. Atchison & N. R. Co. v. Plant, 24 Neb. 127 (38 N. W. 33).

258. (1888.) Where, on appeal from an award of damages for property taken for right of way of a railway, the verdict is less than the amount of the award, neither the railway company nor the landowner will be liable for all the costs of the appeal; but ordinarily such costs should be divided between the parties. Burlington & M. R. R. Co. v. Spere, 24 Neb. 125 (38 N. W. 35).

IV. REMEDIES OF OWNERS OF PROPERTY.

Recovery of possession of property.

259. (1887.) Although the remedy given by statute to landowners, for injuries sustained by taking the land for railroad purposes, is exclusive, yet where a railroad company without consent of the owner takes real estate as a part of its right of way without pursuing the statutory method of appraisement and condemnation, and thus making its possession rightful, it is a trespasser, and the common law remedies are available to the owner. Hull v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. R. Co., 21 Neb. 371 (32 N W. 162).

260. (1887.) The constitutional guaranty that "the property of no person shall be taken or damaged for public use without just compensation therefor" makes it incumbent upon a railroad company, or other governmental agency, exercising the right of eminent domain, to render such compensation before the right to appropriate the property will exist; and in case of failure to agree upon the damages accruing from the taking, the railroad company must proceed to condemn under the forms of law (unless such proceedings are instituted by the landowner); and in case of failure so to do the possession of the real estate by the company for railroad or other purpose will be illegal, and ejectment may be maintained by the landowner. Hull v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 21 Neb. 371 (32 N. W. 162).

261. (1891.) In an application for mandamus to compel a railway company to deposit with the county judge the amount of an award to the relator for damages on account of the location and operation of the railway across his premises, it appeared in evidence that the right of way had been appropriated and used and the award duly made under section 97, chapter 16, Compiled Statutes, from which no appeal had been taken, and the amount not deposited as required by statute. Held, That the relator take his writ to enforce the duty against the railway company. State, ex rel. Farmer, v. Grand Island & W. C. R. Co., 31 Neb. 209 (47 N. W. 857).

262. (1899.) The owner cannot maintain ejectment for land upon which a corporation has, with his prior assent or subsequent acquiescence, constructed and put in operation a railroad used by it in its business as a common carrier. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co v. Englehart, 57 Neb. 444 (77 N. W. 1092).

Compelling deposit of award.

263. (1889.) Mandamus will issue to compel a railroad company to deposit with the county judge the amount of an award on eminent domain proceedings. State, ex rel. Farmer, v. Grand Island & W. R. Co., 27 Neb. 694 (43 N. W. 419).

Recovery of compensation, and future damages.

264. (1899.) When a railroad has been constructed and operated an adjacent landowner may sue at once for consequential damages to his property and recover compensation for all injuries sustained, or which will afterward accrue, from a prudent and careful operation of the road. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. O'Neill, 58 Neb. 239 (78 N. W. 521).

265. (1901.) In the absence of a contract, one cannot maintain an action to recover the value of real estate taken for street purposes, while the legal title is in the defendant. City of Omaha v. Redick, 61 Neb. 163 (85 N. W. 46).

266. (1902.) One whose property has been taken by a railway company for a right of way by statutory proceedings for that purpose may, after the proceedings have terminated, recover the amount awarded to him by an action at law against the company, and he is not bound to resort to the fund deposited with the county judge during the proceedings, as required by statute. Brown v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 64 Neb. 62 (89 N. W. 405).

Right to sue for omitted damages.

267. (1892.) A landowner cannot, after an award by commissioners, maintain an action for damages omitted from the award by the commissioners. Atchison & N. R. Co. v. Boerner, 34 Neb. 240 (51 N. W. 842; 33 Am. St. Rep. 637).

Right of purchaser to sue.

268. (1890.) Where a municipality located and opened a street diagonally across lots that have been bought at tax sale, the value of the parts not taken by the city exceeding the lien, the purchaser cannot recover from the city for the damage done to the lots by reason of such condemnation. Alexander v. City of Plattsmouth, 30 Neb. 117 (46 N. W. 213).

269. (1899.) A railroad constructed upon land with the permission or acquiescence of the owner becomes a permanent structure, and the resulting right to compensation is a mere personal claim which will not pass to a purchaser of the land, except under the terms of an express grant. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Englehart, 57 Neb. 444 (77 N. W. 1092).

When suit for consequential damage may be brought.

270. (1899.) An action for consequential damages to property from the construction of a railroad need not be commenced immediately after its construction. A party may wait, within the period of limitation, until the extent and character of the injury to his property has been ascertained by experience and made susceptible of absolute proof. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. O'Neill, 58 Neb. 239 (78 N. W. 521).

Injunction.

271. (1875.) A party who has been damaged by the location of a railroad through his premises, where the damages awarded have not been deposited with the probate judge, as provided by section 97, page 191, General Statutes, may bring his action for the amount of the award, to enjoin the operating of the road across his premises until payment is made, or he may sue in trespass for the unauthorized entry thereon. Omaha & N. W. R. Co. v. Menk, 4 Neb. 21.

272. (1876.) A party who is damaged by the location of a railroad across his premises, where the damages awarded have not been paid or deposited with the probate judge, may enjoin the operation of the road, even where the company have appealed from the award of the commissioners to the district court. Ray v. Atchison & N. R. Co., 4 Neb. 439.

273. (1899.) Injunction will not lie, at the instance of a landowner, to enjoin the operation of a railroad across his land until a modified judgment against it has been paid, when such road has operated the road for a number of years and the judgment has become dormant. Dillon v. Chicago, K. & N. R. Co., 58 Neb. 472 (78 N. W. 927).

274. (1903.) In case property is not taken directly by a public undertaking, but an owner suffers some injury in an incidental right growing out of his peculiar situation or position, so that ordinary condemnation proceedings and payment of damages in advance are not practicable, the owner will be left to his remedy at law and is not entitled to an injunction, unless upon proof of insolvency or some other special circumstance. Bronson v Albion Telephone Co., 67 Neb. 111 (93 N. W. 201; 60 L. R. A. 609).

Conditions precedent.

275. (1902.) It is not necessary to sustain the entering of judgment against the city, as incident to a decree in an equitable action to correct an award, made and confirmed by the city authorities, of damages for the appropriation of land for street purposes, that a claim for the amount should have been filed with the city clerk and rejected by the council. City of Omaha v. Clarke, 66 Neb. 33 (92 N. W. 146).

Defenses.

276. (1885.) Where a railroad company applies to the county judge for the appointment of a commission to assess damages for condemning a right of way across certain land, alleging ownership in particular persons, it cannot, after an agreement to arbitrate the damages after construction of the road, deny the ownership of such persons, nor their right to damages. Omaha, N. & B. H. R. Co. v. Gerrard, 17 Neb. 587 (24 N. W. 279).

277. (1887.) Where proceedings to condemn real estate, instituted and carried through by a railroad company, are so defective as to be void for want of jurisdiction, such proceeding will afford no defense to an action of ejectment instituted by the landowners to recover the possession of the land taken and occupied by the railroad for right of way purposes. Hull v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 21 Neb. 371 (32 N. W. 162).

278. (1902.) While the city is in possession of and using property for street purposes, it will not be permitted to allege its own irregularities in procedure as a reason for not paying damages awarded the owner for the taking of his property. City of Omaha v. Clarke, 66 Neb. 33 (92 N. W. 146).

279. (1903.) The fact that the person who owned the land when the resolution was adopted by a board of county commissioners establishing a highway, without proper notice, asked leave to present a claim for damages, which request was refused by the board, and an attempted appeal from such refusal has been dismissed, is no defense to an action, by the owner of the land at the time the road was actually opened, to recover his damages therefor. Hogsett v. Harlan County, 4 Unof. 310 (97 N. W. 316).

Limitations and laches.

280. (1881.) The owner of the land condemned has no right to either the money or a judgment for it until such time as it may suit the convenience of the railroad company to take, or be about to immediately take, possession of the property. Dietrichs v. Lincoln & N. R. Co., 12 Neb. 225 (10 N. W. 718).

281. (1890.) A cause of action for damages from opening a street across city lots accrues at the time the street is opened and the statute of limitations runs in five years thereafter. Alexander v. City of Plattsmouth, 30 Neb. 117 (46 N. W. 213).

282. (1900.) Damages for lands appropriated for a highway accrue at the date of the condemnation proceedings, without regard to the time when the road is actually opened. Harlan County v. Hogsett, 60 Neb. 362 (83 N. W. 171).

283. (1902.) An action on an award of damages for the taking of land for street purposes, is not barred before five years from the making and confirmation of the award. City of Omaha v. Clarke, 66 Neb. 33 (92 N. W. 146).

284. (1903.) The city of Omaha having, by the exercise of the power of eminent domain, acquired the possession of a strip of ground and an easement therein for street purposes, upon an award of damages to the landowner, and having by an order of its mayor and council refused to pay the amount of such award in money and directed it to be applied in satisfaction of special assessments for local improvements, a cause of action against the city for the recovery of the money accrued, if at all, immediately upon the termination of such proceedings. Spalding v. City of Omaha, 4 Unof. 447 (94 N. W. 714).

285. (1903.) The right to recover damages for the appropriation of lands for a highway accrues at the time the road is actually opened. Hogsett v. Harlan County, 4 Unof. 310 (97 N. W. 316).

286. (1900.) Damages for lands appropriated for a highway accrue at the date of the condemnation proceedings, without regard to the time when the road is actually opened. Harlan County v. Hogsett, 60 Neb. 362 (83 N. W. 171; (1903) Hogsett v. Harlan County, 4 Unof. 309 (93 N. W. 1001). [Overruled. 4 Unof. 310.]

287. (1905.) Under the Omaha charter of 1893, a cause of action upon an award of damages to one whose property was taken for a public street, did not accrue until the lapse of a time reasonably sufficient for the creation of a special fund for the payment of such damages. Rogers v. City of Omaha, 75 Neb. 318 (107 N. W. 212).

Pleading.

288. (1894.) Petition for injunction to restrain a railroad company from using right of way until it obtains title or pays the damages under condemnation proceedings held sufficient to state a cause of action. Blakeslee v. Missouri P. R. Co., 43 Neb. 61 (61 N. W. 118).

289. (1895.) Where a petition against a county for damages alleges that a county ditch has been constructed through and across plaintiff's land, and the county in its answer admits that fact without pleading payment, a verdict for defendant is contrary to law. Martin v. Fillmore County, 44 Neb. 719 (62 N. W. 863).

Evidence.

——— Presumptions and burden of proof.

290. (1901.) In an action to recover damages resulting from the location of a public road, the burden is on the plaintiff to show that his land has been regularly condemned, or at least that it has been physically appropriated to the use of the public by the county authorities. Lesieur v. Custer County, 61 Neb. 612 (85 N. W. 892).

291. (1907.) Where a plaintiff, in an action to restrain a railroad company from entering upon his land and constructing a railroad, pleads that the defendant company has instituted condemnation proceedings and deposited the damages as required by law, and that the road is being constructed across his land pursuant to such proceedings, and that the proceedings are void because the road is in fact being constructed by and for another company, the burden is upon him to prove the latter allegation. Beckman v. Lincoln & N. R. Co., 79 Neb. 89 (112 N. W. 348).

——— Admissibility.

292. (1889.) In an action to recover for damages sustained to property by reason of the location of a railroad near the property in question, the defense to which was that all claims for such damage had been settled and paid, the voucher and receipt for the money paid, introduced in evidence, on offer of testimony by defendant, to show that plaintiff knew such settlement included all claim for the damage in issue, was properly excluded. Chicago, K. & N. R. Co. v. Hazels, 26 Neb. 364 (42 N. W. 93).

293. (1897.) In an action to recover damages for land taken for a highway the supervisor of the county is a competent witness. Lane v. Harlan County, 51 Neb. 641 (71 N. W. 302).

294. (1897.) In an action against a county for damages for the appropriation of plaintiff's land for a highway, where a supervisor who participated in the location testified on behalf of the county, the conduct of such supervisor in the premises is proper to go to the jury for the purpose of affecting the credibility of the witness or the weight to be given his evidence. Lane v. Harlan County, 51 Neb. 641 (71 N. W. 302).

295. (1902.) Where the record shows that a claim by a landowner for damages for land taken in laying out a road was rejected, and at the same time the sum claimed was appropriated to improving the road, parol evidence is admissible to prove an agreement to release the claim in consideration of the appropriation and improvements. Welch v. Tippery, 66 Neb. 604 (92 N. W. 582).

Execution and enforcement of judgment.

296. (1884.) Where a lot was condemned by a railroad company, the money deposited with the county judge, an appeal taken to the district court, and a verdict rendered in favor of the lot owner, it is the duty of the district court to render judgment on such verdict, and an execution may be issued thereon. Drath v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., 15 Neb. 367 (18 N. W. 717).

V. TITLE AND RIGHTS ACQUIRED.

In general.

297. (1901.) Where a city appropriates lands of an individual for a street and he recovers the value thereof, it invests the city with title. City of Omaha v. Redick, 61 Neb. 163 (85 N. W. 46).

298. (1902.) Conceding the interest acquired to lots by a railroad company by condemnation is only an easement, it could only be extinguished by adverse possession for the statutory period. Struve v. Republican V. R. Co., 2 Unof. 585 (89 N. W. 604).

299. (1902.) Where property condemned by a railroad company is, after judgment on appeal, deeded to the company, the latter acquires a fee simple title, and where the former owner erects a building thereon after executing the deed, he cannot complain because the company erects a high board fence around the lots cutting off access to such building. Struve v. Republican V. R. Co., 2 Unof. 585 (89 N. W. 604).

Liability to lienholders.

300. (1886.) When a railroad, by the exercise of its right of eminent domain, takes land upon which there is a mortgage it is subject to all the rights of the mortgagee. Dodge v. Omaha & S. W. R. Co., 20 Neb. 276 (29 N. W. 936).

301. (1905.) If a railway company in condemnation proceedings for its right of way and depot grounds fails to make all parties interested in the land parties to the proceedings or to give them notice of the proceedings so that their rights may be protected, it takes the land subject to such liens as are prior to the rights of the parties to the proceedings. State v. Missouri P. R. Co., 75 Neb. 4 (105 N. W. 983).

302. (1905.) When a city by the power of eminent domain acquires a strip of mortgaged land for street purposes without making the mortgagee a party to the proceedings, and pays the condemnation money to the mortgagor, in good faith and without objection, it is discharged from its obligation, but takes the land subject to the lien of the mortgage, if of record. Rieck v. City of Omaha, 73 Neb. 600 (103 N. W. 283).

A. Nature, Grounds, Subjects, and Extent of Jurisdiction in General.

Nature and source of jurisdiction.

1. (1876.) Although the distinction between actions at law and suits in equity have by statute been abolished, all purely legal claims must be determined by the rules of a law court, while claims of an equitable nature must be determined according to the rules of equity. Wilcox v. Saunders, 4 Neb. 569.

2. (1880.) Equity cannot attempt to prevent, any more than it will redress, all wrongs. It is not in ordinary but in extraordinary cases that this writ is properly invoked. Wood v. Helmer, 10 Neb. 65 (4 N. W. 968).

3. (1881.) All distinctions between actions at law and suits in equity are abolished except such as inhere in the nature of the case. Rhea v. Reynolds, 12 Neb. 128 (10 N. W. 549).

4. (1900.) Under our system of equity jurisprudence, the powers exercised are purely judicial, derived solely from the organic law, including the common law, and the statutes. St. James Orphan Asylum v. Shelby, 60 Neb. 796 (84 N. W. 273; 83 Am. St. Rep. 553).

5. (1906.) Equity seeks the real and substantial rights of the parties, and applies the remedy in such manner as to relieve those having the controlling equities. Weckerly v. Taylor, 77 Neb. 886 (110 N. W. 738).

6. (1907.) The district courts of this state are courts of general equity jurisdiction, and are not limited in the exercise of such jurisdiction by statute. Rhoades v. Rhoades, 78 Neb. 495 (111 N. W. 122).

Constitutional and statutory provisions.

7. (1876.) The nature and effect of the act of 1867 abolishing the distinction between law and equity. Wilcox v. Saunders, 4 Neb. 569.

8. (1876.) It was not the intention of the legislative enactments to abolish the distinction between actions at law and in equity, or of the forms of such actions and suits; in other words there was no merger of the two jurisdictions of the courts. Wilcox v. Saunders, 4 Neb. 569.

9. (1889.) Courts of general equity and common law jurisdiction are not necessarily limited in exercise thereof by statutory provisions. Earle v. Earle, 27 Neb. 277 (43 N. W. 118; 20 Am. St. Rep. 667)

10. (1894.) The district courts of this state, being courts of general equity jurisdiction, are not limited in the exercise of such jurisdiction by statute. Cochran v. Cochran, 42 Neb. 612 (60 N. W. 942).

11. (1897.) The general equity jurisdiction of the district courts, including authority to enjoin the collection of a void tax, cannot be taken away or impaired by the legislature. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Cass County, 51 Neb. 369 (70 N. W. 955).

Grounds of jurisdiction in general.

12. (1903.) A court of equity will not lend its aid to protect a suitor in maintaining a public nuisance, nor in the doing of an act punishable under the laws of the state. Nebraska Telephone Co. v. Western Independent Long Distance Telephone Co., 68 Neb. 772 (95 N. W. 18).

Mistake.

13. (1891.) Equity will grant relief against a mistake in the description of land in a deed, if the mistake is established by clear and satisfactory evidence. Gwyer v. Spaulding, 33 Neb. 573 (50 N. W. 681).

14. (1896.) The jurisdiction of equity to relieve against mutual mistakes is, in general, confined to cases where, because of such mistake, the minds of the parties never met, and there was therefore no contract, and to cases where the contract made was not correctly expressed by the instrument evidencing it. Relief cannot be given because of misapprehensions in regard to collateral matter, as in regard to a fact incidentally affecting the value of the subject matter of the contract, there being no deception or wrongful concealment. Moore v. Scott, 47 Neb. 346 (66 N. W. 441).

15. (1900.) A mistake of fact is a mistake not caused by the neglect of a legal duty on the part of the person making the mistake. Farrell v. Bouck, 60 Neb. 771 (84 N. W. 260).

16. (1904.) One who fails through culpable inertness to make inquiry when it is his duty to inquire, and by reason of such failure loses a valuable right, is not entitled to relief in equity on the ground of mistake. Farrell v. Bouck, 72 Neb. 875 (101 N. W. 1018).

Undue influence.

17. (1886.) Where coercion is not sufficient to amount to duress, but a social or domestic force is exerted on a party which controls the free action of his will, and prevents voluntary action in the making of a contract or execution of deed of real estate, equity may relieve against the same on the ground of undue influence. Munson v. Carter, 19 Neb. 293 (27 N. W. 208).

Fraud.

18. (1877.) A court of equity will relieve a party against contracts made by him while temporarily insane from the use of intoxicating liquor, where such contracts have been procured by the fraud or imposition of the other party. Johnson v. Phifer, 6 Neb. 401.

19. (1879.) A court of equity will not entertain a petition for relief on the ground of a fraud, from which no damage, either present or prospective, can result. Dunn v Remington, 9 Neb. 82 (2 N. W. 230).

19*a*. (1891.) Mere epithets and charges of fraud, etc., without stating facts showing fraud, do not form a basis for a court of equity to grant relief from the alleged fraud. Kansas & C. P. R. Co. v. Fitzgerald, 33 Neb. 137 (49 N. W. 1100).

www.libtool.com.cn

Conflicting rights to real property.

20. (1877.) The jurisdiction of a court of equity to determine the rights of parties in case of conflicting claims to a tract of land is undoubted. Stalnaker v. Morrison, 6 Neb. 364.

Political questions.

21. (1904.) Equity will not interfere to enforce a political right; a civil right is a right accorded to every member of a district, community or nation; a political right is one exercisable in the administration of government. Winnett v. Adams, 71 Neb. 817 (99 N. W. 681).

22. (1904.) A court of equity will not undertake to supervise the acts and management of a political party for the protection of a purely political right. Winnett v. Adams, 71 Neb. 817 (99 N. W. 681).

Retention of jurisdiction acquired.

23. (1886.) When a district court has gained jurisdiction of a cause for one purpose, it may, and should, retain it for general relief. Swift v. Dewey, 20 Neb. 107 (29 N. W. 254).

24. (1886.) A court of equity, having obtained jurisdiction of a cause, will retain it for all purposes, and render such decree as will protect the rights of the parties before it, and thus avoid unnecessary litigation. Buchanan v. Griggs, 20 Neb. 165 (29 N. W. 297).

25. (1893.) Where courts of equity have assumed jurisdiction of a particular class of cases their jurisdiction in such cases will continue notwithstanding, in the development of legal means, redress becomes attainable in courts of law. Smithson v. Smithson, 37 Neb. 535 (56 N. W. 300; 40 Am. St. Rep. 504).

26. (1895.) When a court of equity has acquired jurisdiction of a cause for any purpose, it may retain it for all purposes, and proceed to a determination of all of the matters put in issue by the pleadings. Disher v. Disher, 45 Neb. 100 (63 N. W. 368); (1895) Flentham v. Stewart, 54 Neb. 640 (63 N. W. 924); (1897) Fowler v. Brown, 51 Neb. 414 (71 N. W. 54); (1901) Bank of Stockham v. Alter, 61 Neb. 359 (85 N. W. 300).

27-30. (1895.) One who asked a court of equity to enforce his claim to the right to use his name as trustee, to the disadvantage of the beneficiary, cannot complain because the court, having taken jurisdiction of the subject matter for such purpose, administered complete relief as between all parties to the litigation. Tulleys v. Keller, 45 Neb. 220 (63 N. W. 388).

31. (1904.) When a court of equity has taken cognizance of a case involving the right of rival claimants to the possession of leased premises, with all parties interested in the premises in court, it has full power to do equity by placing the party whom it finds entitled thereto into possession of the premises. Gaffey v. Northwestern Mutual Life Ins. Co., 71 Neb. 304 (98 N. W. 826).

Waiver of equitable relief.

32. (1905.) A mere demand for a jury to try the issues of fact is not such an act as would warrant the court in assuming that the plaintiff has abandoned his claim to equitable relief, because, where the relief sought is equitable, a court in its discretion may submit the issues of fact to a jury. Ames v. Ames, 75 Neb. 473 (106 N. W. 584).

B. Remedy at Law and Multiplicity of Suits.

Demurrer as means of raising question of adequacy of legal remedy, see post, § 82.

Existence of remedy at law and effect in general.

33. (1881.) A party must first exhaust his legal remedies, or be without an adequate remedy at law, before he can resort to a court of equity. Palmer v. Maxwell, 11 Neb. 598 (10 N. W. 524).

34. (1889.) Where a court of law can grant no relief a court of equity will. Dundas v. Chrisman, 25 Neb. 495 (41 N. W. 449).

35. (1894.) A court of equity will not interpose an objection to its own jurisdiction on the ground that the plaintiff has an adequate remedy at law, but will retain the cause for trial and award the relief to which the parties would have been entitled in a court of law. Sherwin v. Gaghagen, 39 Neb. 238 (57 N. W. 1005); (1896) Taylor v. Ainsworth, 49 Neb. 696 (68 N. W. 1045).

36. (1904.) Equity has jurisdiction to supply the omissions and defects of legal procedure, when necessary to accomplish the ends of the law and to the due administration of justice. Wardell v. Wardell, 71 Neb. 774 (99 N. W. 674).

37. (1904.) Where an adequate remedy exists at law equity will not assume jurisdiction. Brown v. Reed, 72 Neb. 167 (100 N. W. 143).

38. (1906.) A suit in equity will not lie when the plaintiff has a plain, adequate and speedy remedy at law. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Douglas County, 76 Neb. 666 (107 N. W. 985).

Adequacy of legal remedy.

39. (1888.) A, who had a contract for the construction of a bridge across the Platte river, entered into an agreement with B, as follows: "I assign one-half interest in the within bridge contract of the net proceeds from the contract after all expenses are paid for value of labor and expense and other help, etc., no unnecessary outlay to be added, cost of working own labor to be $2.50 per day and board. S. S. Gouff." Held, That upon the completion of the contract B could maintain an action in equity for a division of the profits, it being the settlement of a partnership transaction. Daugherty v. Gouff, 23 Neb. 105 (36 N. W. 351).

40. (1894.) The absence of a plain and adequate remedy at law affords the only test of equity jurisdiction; and the application of this principle to a particular case must depend altogether upon the character of the case as disclosed in the proceedings. It is not enough that there is a remedy at law; it must be plain and adequate, or, in other words, as practical and efficient to the ends of justice and its prompt administration as the remedy in equity. Welton v. Dickson, 38 Neb. 767 (57 N. W. 559; 41 Am. St. Rep. 771; 22 L. R. A. 496).

41. (1895.) A court of equity has no jurisdiction to enjoin the transfer or collection of an altered note, since the maker has an adequate remedy at law. Erickson v. First Nat. Bank of Oakland, 44 Neb. 622 (62 N. W. 1078; 48 Am. St. Rep. 753; 28 L. R. A. 577).

42. (1897.) An adequate remedy at law is one that is as practical and efficient to the ends of justice and its prompt administration as the remedy in equity. Bankers Life Ins. Co. v. Robbins, 53 Neb. 44 (73 N. W. 269); (1898) Richardson Drug Co. v. Meyer, 54 Neb. 319 (74 N. W. 575).

43. (1901.) A suit in equity may be maintained for the purpose of reinstating a case erroneously dismissed, when there is no adequate legal remedy therefor. Edney v. Baum, 2 Unof. 173 (96 N. W. 167).

44. (1902.) The term "adequate remedy at law" means that the remedy at law must be plain and complete and as practical and efficient to the ends of justice and its prompt administration as the remedy in equity. Carter v. Warner, 2 Unof. 688 (89 N. W. 747).

45. (1905.) It is not enough to confer jurisdiction upon equity that the plaintiff has suffered damages special and peculiar to himself and in which the public do not share, but such damages must be of such character as to be incapable of being measured and compensated in damages. George v. Peckham, 73 Neb. 794 (103 N. W. 664).

46. (1906.) Where a nuisance is not permanent, and the damages caused thereby are not recoverable in one action, but would require successive actions, the injured party has no adequate remedy at law. Bischof v. Merchants Nat. Bank, 75 Neb. 838 (106 N. W. 996).

Multiplicity of suits.

47. (1878.) A court of equity has jurisdiction to compel the proper application of a specific fund, devoted to a particular use, whenever it becomes necessary to do so in order to prevent a great or irreparable injury, or to avoid a multiplicity of suits. Farmer v. Vollentine, 7 Neb. 498.

48. (1892.) Where many questions are in dispute between a lessor and lessee beside the mere right of possession, a court of equity will entertain jurisdiction and thus settle all matters between the parties relating to the subject in one action, and prevent a multiplicity of suits. Haynes v. Union Investment Co., 35 Neb. 766 (53 N. W. 979).

49. (1903.) Where a large number of persons claim rights to use or divert the waters of a stream by virtue of riparian rights, appropriations, prescription or otherwise, a suit in equity to determine such rights, and enjoin infringement, under color thereof, of rights acquired under the irrigation act, may be maintained to avoid multiplicity of suits. Crawford Co. v. Hathaway, 67 Neb. 325 (93 N. W. 781; 108 Am. St. Rep. 647; 60 L. R. A. 889).

Waiver of objections.

50. (1895.) A defendant who has answered to the merits and submits to the jurisdiction of a court of equity cannot object for the first time on appeal in the supreme court, on the ground that the plaintiff had an adequate remedy at law. Dorsey v. Nichols, 43 Neb. 241 (61 N. W. 584); (1897) Stahlhut v. Bauer, 51 Neb. 64 (70 N. W. 496).

Digitized by Google

51. (1897.) An objection to an equitable proceeding on the ground that there is an adequate remedy by garnishment cannot be first raised on appeal. Raymond v. Leinberger, 50 Neb. 815 (70 N. W. 400).

www.libook.com.cn

52. (1901.) The objection that an action which is begun in equity should have been in ejectment and tried by jury must be made before trial. It is too late to raise that question for the first time after the cause has been appealed to the supreme court. De Long v. Olsen, 63 Neb. 327 (88 N. W. 512).

C. Principles and Maxims of Equity.

Where equities are equal, the first in time will prevail.

53. (1905.) Where the equity of a person to have land purchased by his agent in his own name, charged with the trust, and that of a subsequent purchaser from the agent are equal, the former, being prior in time, will prevail. Johnson v. Hayward, 74 Neb. 157 (103 N. W. 1058).

He who seeks equity must do equity.

54. (1886.) He who seeks equity must do equity. McMurtry v. Edgerly, 20 Neb. 457 (30 N. W. 417); (1892) Redick v. City of Omaha, 35 Neb. 125 (52 N. W. 847).

55. (1887.) Where two heirs come into a court of equity to claim an interest in lands, which has not been conveyed, but which lands have been held adversely by other parties for a long period, they must do equity by paying a just proportion of the taxes and the interest due thereon. Snowden v. Tyler, 21 Neb. 199 (31 N. W. 661).

56. (1888.) The rule that he who seeks equity must do equity will be applied wherever the adverse equity grows out of the very transaction before the court, or where it is so connected with the subject matter of the action as to be presented in the pleadings and proofs, with full opportunity to the adverse party to explain or refute the claims. Loney v. Courtnay, 24 Neb. 580 (39 N. W. 616).

57. (1891.) Where objections are made to certain assessments on the ground of irregularities, the court, as a condition of granting relief, may require the property owner to do equity by paying the amount which his property is benefited by the improvement. Darst v. Griffin, 31 Neb. 668 (48 N. W. 819).

58. (1891.) A party who sees a public improvement being carried on calculated to benefit his property, cannot wait until it is completed and the expenditure has been made and his property received the benefit before proceeding to avoid the tax, but must, as a condition of relief by injunction, do equity by paying the amount thereof justly chargeable against such property. Darst v. Griffin, 31 Neb. 668 (48 N. W. 819).

59. (1894.) The maxim that "he who seeks equity must do equity" has no application to cases of actual fraud. Goble v. O'Connor, 43 Neb. 49 (61 N. W. 131).

60. (1898.) "He who seeks equity must do equity" and come into court with clean hands. Lewis v. Holdrege, 56 Neb. 379 (76 N. W. 890).

61. (1898.) A plaintiff who does not stand in conscientious relations towards his adversary, with reference to the claim which is the subject of the action, is not entitled to the aid of a court of equity, and will be denied affirmative relief, although such claim does not arise out of an illegal transaction and is not tainted with actual fraud. Lewis v. Holdrege, 56 Neb. 379 (76 N. W. 890).

62. (1898.) If the plaintiff, or his assignor, has been guilty of any misconduct in connection with the transaction out of which the claim in suit arose, so that the enforcement of such claim would be harsh, unconscionable, and oppressive, a court of equity will either decline to grant any relief whatever or grant it on such terms as may be just and equitable. Lewis v. Holdrege, 56 Neb. 379 (76 N. W. 890).

63. (1899.) Equity will not lend its aid to one who, in violation of an agreement, seeks to appropriate to his own use property which, according to the agreement, should be distributed among all the parties thereto. German Nat. Bank of Hastings v. First Nat. Bank of Hastings, 59 Neb. 7 (80 N. W. 48).

64. (1903.) Where a large number of persons claim rights to use or divert water from a stream by virtue of rights as riparian owners, a plaintiff in a suit in equity to determine such rights may offer to do equity by compensating riparian owners whose rights are affected by the construction and operation of a canal without leaving them to their actions at law; and in that way the amounts due the several parties by way of damages may become a proper subject of inquiry and adjudication therein. Crawford Co. v. Hathaway, 67 Neb. 325 (93 N. W. 781; 108 Am. St. Rep. 647; 60 L. R. A. 889).

65. (1905.) The mere fact that a creditor has been persistent and determined in his efforts to collect his debt, and has resorted to unnecessary expensive and vexatious means to that end, affords no just ground for denying him equitable relief in the enforcement of his debt. Anthes v. Schroeder, 74 Neb. 172 (103 N. W. 1072).

66. (1907.) An offer to do equity is only required to be made in the petition in those cases where an equitable duty or obligation rests upon the plaintiff, and where such duty or obligation could not be enforced by the court except for such offer. Platte Valley Milling Co. v. Malmsten, 79 Neb. 730 (113 N. W. 229).

66*a*. (1908.) Where, in a suit to enforce a contract by a plaintiff who has obtained the same by means of sharp, unconscionable and fraudulent practices, the defendants claim as affirmative relief an accounting for rents received by the plaintiff, the maxim "he who seeks equity must do equity" may be applied, and there may be deducted from the amount otherwise due the defendants for such rents the amount of money expended by the plaintiff in their behalf and the reasonable value of his services performed for their benefit. Blondel v. Bolander, 80 Neb. 531 (114 N. W. 574).

II. LACHES AND STALE DEMANDS.

Demurrer as means of raising objection of laches, see post, § 83.

Grounds and essentials of bar.

67. (1892.) It is not the policy of the law to enforce stale claims which are asserted after the witnesses are dispersed or dead. Streitz v. Hartman, 35 Neb. 406 (53 N. W. 215).

68. (1895.) Failure of the injured party to object after knowledge of the wrong is evidence of ratification, and may, especially when long continued, be sufficient of itself to warrant a finding for the party alleging such fact. Fitzgerald v. Fitzgerald & Mallory Construction Co., 44 Neb. 463 (62 N. W. 899).

69. (1907.) No arbitrary rule exists for determining when a demand becomes stale, or what delay will be excused, and the question of laches is to be decided upon the particular circumstances of each case. Harrison v. Rice, 78 Neb. 659 (114 N. W. 151).

—— Lapse of time.

70. (1895.) Mere lapse of time will not bar the right to rescind a voidable transaction. Fitzgerald v. Fitzgerald & Mallory Construction Co., 44 Neb. 463 (62 N. W. 899).

71. (1902.) Laches cannot usually be charged against a party for failing to bring an action to enforce an equitable claim if he acts within the time allowed by the statute of limitations for commencing a corresponding action at law. Michigan Trust Co. v. City of Red Cloud, 3 Unof. 722 (92 N. W. 900).

72. (1906.) Courts of equity have inherent power to refuse relief after undue and inexcusable delay independent of the statute of limitations. Hawley v. Van Lanken, 75 Neb. 597 (106 N. W. 456).

73. (1906.) Where a party protests or objects against the erection of a proposed obstruction, to the party about to erect it, and the latter proceeds over such protest and objection to complete the obstruction, he can not complain because the former delayed ten days in bringing suit to restrain the nuisance which had been completed in the meantime. Bischof v. Merchants Nat. Bank, 75 Neb. 838 (106 N. W. 996).

74. (1907.) Unreasonable delay alone, independently of any statute of limitations, may operate as a bar to equitable relief. Generally, however, when a statute of limitations is applicable, lapse of time alone, short of the period of limitation, will not operate as a bar. Harrison v. Rice, 78 Neb. 660 (114 N. W. 151).

Excuses.

75. (1894.) The defense of estoppel by laches or unreasonable delay in bringing an equitable suit is of itself an equitable defense, and cannot be successfully maintained when it appears that the delay complained of as unreasonable has been caused by, or contributed to by, the party interposing the defense. Richards v. Hatfield, 40 Neb. 879 (59 N. W. 777).

76. (1901.) Laches cannot be predicated of one whose delay is occasioned by constant assurances of his resident agent that legal proceedings would be useless and by frequent promises that payment will be procured without such proceedings. Cushing v. Schoenemann, 1 Unof. 482 (96 N. W. 346).

Application of doctrine.

77. (1894.) Whether complainants in equity have been guilty of laches in not suing sooner should be determined from the facts and circumstances of each case, there being no rule of law governing such matters. Richards v. Hatfield, 40 Neb. 879 (59 N. W. 777).

78. (1906.) In applying the doctrine of laches the true inquiry should be whether the adverse party has been prejudiced by the delay in bringing the action and whether a reasonable excuse is offered for the delay. Hawley v. Van Lanken, 75 Neb. 597 (106 N. W. 456); (1907) Harrison v. Rice, 78 Neb. 660 (114 N. W. 151).

79. (1907.) When the suit is brought within the time fixed by the analogous statute of limitations, the burden is on defendant to show the existence of circumstances amounting to laches. When the suit is brought after the statutory time, plaintiff must plead and prove that laches does not exist. Harrison v. Rice, 78 Neb. 660 (114 N. W. 151).

III. PARTIES AND PLEADING.

Necessary parties.

80. (1905.) When two or more parties claim the ownership of a fund in the hands of a third, an action in equity may be maintained to recover the fund and to litigate and determine the ownership of it, and all persons claiming the fund are necessary and proper parties to the action. Conservative Savings & Loan Ass'n v. City of Omaha, 73 Neb. 720 (103 N. W. 286).

Time for filing answer.

81. (1871.) Under the practice in chancery, before the equity and common law jurisdiction were blended by the amendments of the code of civil procedure, a defendant had until the fifth Monday after notice of the filing thereof to answer a supplemental bill. Orr v. Orr, 1 Neb. 359.

Grounds for demurrer to bill.

82. (1897.) The code recognizing no distinction of form between actions at law and suits in equity, the objection that a petition praying equitable relief states a case for a legal remedy cannot be raised by general demurrer. Lederer v. Union Savings Bank, 52 Neb. 133 (71 N. W. 954).

83. (1906). Where the laches of the plaintiff and the staleness of his claim are apparent from the petition, objection may be taken by demurrer. Hawley v. Van Lanken, 75 Neb. 597 (106 N. W. 456).

Issues and proof.

84. (1871.) The plaintiff in a bill in chancery cannot go to the answer for facts which, by his bill, he did not put in issue. Miller v. Finn, 1 Neb. 254.

IV. DISMISSAL BEFORE HEARING.

Involuntary dismissal.

85. (1902.) Where a bill discloses nothing of equity and still less of conscience a judgment of the lower court dismissing such bill will be affirmed. Phœnix Ins. Co. v. Boehl, 2 Unof. 272 (96 N. W. 633).

V. HEARING AND SUBMISSION OF ISSUES TO JURY.

Submission of issues to jury.

86. (1893.) A defendant in an equity suit is not entitled, as a matter of right, to a jury for the trial of a counterclaim for damages, which he has voluntarily pleaded in the case. Morrissey v. Broomcl, 37 Neb. 766 (56 N. W. 383).

87. (1897.) In an equity case the trial court may, in its discretion, impanel a jury and submit such issues of fact as it deems expedient. Omaha Fire Ins. Co. v. Thompson, 50 Neb. 580 (70 N. W. 30); (1901) Lewis v. North, 62 Neb. 552 (87 N. W. 331); (1902) Welch v. Tippery, 66 Neb. 604 (92 N. W. 582).

88. (1897.) In an action in equity where a question as to the value of real estate arises, the court is not bound to submit that question to a jury. Oliver v. Lansing, 51 Neb. 818 (71 N. W. 735).

89. (1897.) The issues in equity causes are, as a rule, triable to the court without a jury. (Code, sec. 281.) Smith v. Perry, 52 Neb. 738 (73 N. W. 282).

90. (1897.) A district court while sitting as a court of equity is clothed with the inherent power to submit to a jury any question of fact in the case. Alter v. Bank of Stockham, 53 Neb. 223 (73 N. W. 667).

91. (1901.) It is not prejudicial error to submit to a jury, for its finding generally, questions of fact on purely equitable issues raised by the pleadings in the case. Lewis v. North, 62 Neb. 552 (87 N. W. 331).

92. (1904.) Taking the verdict of a jury as to questions of fact in case where equitable defenses are interposed is not error. Humphrey Hardware Co. v. Herrick, 5 Unof. 524 (99 N. W. 233).

——— Instructions.

93. (1906.) In the trial of a suit to enforce a contract to bequeath property to an adopted child the functions of a jury, if one is called, are advisory only, and the court cannot commit reversible error in the giving or refusal of instructions. Peterson v. Estate of Bauer, 76 Neb. 652 (111 N. W. 361).

——— Conclusiveness and effect of verdict.

94. (1900.) A finding in an equity cause which does not respond to the issues, and which is, at plaintiff's instance, treated as, and declared to be, advisory only, will not warrant the court in rendering a personal judgment against the defendants; and in such case mandamus will not lie to compel the court to render a personal judgment in favor of the plaintiff on such finding. State, ex rel. Emerson, v. Dickinson, 59 Neb. 753 (82 N. W. 16).

95. (1901.) The verdict in an equity case on a finding of fact is advisory only and not binding and conclusive on the trial court. Bank of Stockham v. Alter, 61 Neb. 359 (85 N. W. 300).

——— Waiver of right to jury trial.

96. (1902.) An order transferring an action in ejectment to the equity docket because of equitable defenses raised in an answer, will not preclude the moving party from demanding that the purely legal issues be tried by jury, if his request for a jury trial is timely and is insisted upon. Schumacher v. Crane-Churchill Co., 66 Neb. 440 (92 N. W. 609).

97. (1902.) Where an action in ejectment has been transferred to the equity docket, going to trial upon all the issues, without demanding a jury as to any of them, it is a waiver of a jury as to that trial. Schumacher v. Crane-Churchill Co., 66 Neb. 440 (92 N. W. 609).

98. (1903.) When, in a suit in equity, the plaintiff tenders issues properly triable at law and by a jury only, but which are within the jurisdiction of the court, the defendant, upon raising such issues by answer, may, if he chooses, demand a jury for their trial, but if he neglect so to do he will be deemed to have waived his right. Horton v. Simon, 5 Unof. 172 (97 N. W. 604).

Findings by court.

99. (1903.) A finding by a trial court "that there are no equities with the defendants and that all the equities are with the plaintiffs," is not a finding of fact, but a conclusion of law, and standing alone it is insufficient to support a judgment. Ganow v. Denny, 68 Neb. 706 (94 N. W. 959).

100. (1903.) In case the pleadings are sufficient to bring the subject matter before the court, the decree may not be attacked collaterally merely for want of findings; such defect goes no further than to render the decree irregular or erroneous. Cizek v. Cizek, 69 Neb. 797 (96 N. W. 657).

VI. DECREE.

Sufficiency of recitals.

101. (1903.) The description in the decree, of the lands in controversy, held not sufficiently definite and certain. Egan v. Light, 4 Unof. 127 (93 N. W. 859).

Interlocutory decree.

102. (1898.) Where, after an entry of an interlocutory decree finding a defendant entitled to a foreclosure against property which had been conveyed to him, he withdrew his cross-petition and without objection introduced additional evidence upon, and took part in, the trial of the issue whether or not he held the property in dispute in fraud of the rights of creditors of his grantor, he could not complain that the court had no power to enter a decree on the issue last indicated without formally setting aside the interlocutory decree first entered. Ellis v. Harris, 56 Neb. 398 (76 N. W. 898).

Two decrees at same term.

103. (1901.) The rendition of two decrees in a case at the same term, but not on the same day, is not reversible error if the rights of the litigants have been correctly determined. Plummer v. Park, 62 Neb. 665 (87 N. W. 534).

Decree on conditions.

104. (1902.) Where, on a motion to make a decree absolute, which was contingent on the payment by the plaintiff of a certain sum and the costs in a certain action, it appeared that the plaintiff had complied with the decree on his part, save that through oversight he had omitted to pay a small item of costs which he thereupon tendered, the tender should have been accepted and the rule granted. Commercial State Bank of Crawford v. Ketchum, 3 Unof. 839 (92 N. W. 998).

105. (1904.) When a decree in equity requires the plaintiff to deposit money or securities in court as conditions precedent to enforcing the decree against the defendant, and defendant, within the time limited for making such deposit, appeals from said decree and supersedes the same, the time allowed for making the deposit is thereby extended until a like time after the decree becomes again enforceable. Ruzicka v. Hotovy, 72 Neb. 589 (101 N. W. 328).

Conformity to pleadings and proof and verdict.

106. (1895.) Where a defendant files no pleading except a demurrer to the petition on the ground that it does not state a cause of action, other defendants answering and presenting issues, a decree reciting that the case was heard on the pleadings and evidence, then finding the facts as alleged in the petition and granting to plaintiff the relief prayed, will be treated as an order overruling the demurrer and entering judgment thereon. Moore v. Kime, 43 Neb. 517 (61 N. W. 736).

107. (1897.) Where issues in an equity case have been submitted to a jury, the judgment need not strictly conform to the verdict, but the court may, on determining other issues, enter such judgment as the whole case demands. Omaha Fire Ins. Co. v. Thompson, 50 Neb. 580 (70 N. W. 30).

108. (1898.) The findings and decree in an action in equity should respond to all the material issues presented by the pleadings. Clark v. Neumann, 56 Neb. 374 (76 N. W. 892).

109. (1899.) Decree in equity must conform to the pleading and proof. Ross v. Sumner, 57 Neb. 588 (78 N. W. 264).

110. (1903.) A prayer for general equitable relief, coupled with that of one for specific relief, can not be extended so as to warrant the granting of relief not embraced within and comprehended by the allegations of fact contained in the pleading. Vila v. Grand Island Electric Light, Ice & Cold Storage Co., 68 Neb. 233 (97 N. W. 613).

Entry.

111. (1902.) In a suit for the foreclosure of a mechanic's lien, trial was had to the court, but before making findings of fact or pronouncing judgment, the district court adjourned to a certain date several days later, and the judge returned to his home in another county. Court did not reconvene on the day named, but on that date the clerk received by express from the judge memoranda of his findings and decree in the case, which he entered of record. At the next succeeding term an application on the part of defendants in the case to correct the record to show that no decree was in fact entered was overruled. Held, Error. Conover v. Wright, 3 Unof. 211 (91 N. W. 545).

112. (1903.) The signature of the presiding judge, to a decree or the record, is not essential to the validity of the decree. Gallentine v. Cummings, 4 Unof. 690 (96 N. W. 178).

——— Entry nunc pro tunc.

113. (1902.) In deciding a motion for a nunc pro tunc order, the district court may act upon any satisfactory competent evidence in support thereof, although minutes of the proceedings, or other writing appearing in or upon the records of the court are regarded as a better class of evidence. Harris v. Jennings, 64 Neb. 80 (89 N. W. 625; 97 Am. St. Rep. 635).

Lien.

114. (1904.) A decree wherein a party is directed to pay a specific fund in his hands into court for distribution among claimants thereto, will not be held to be a lien upon the real estate of such party in favor of the claimants, unless it is provided by the decree that the claimants recover of the party holding the fund, and that in default of payment execution may issue. Campbell v. Noyes, Norman & Co., 72 Neb. 201 (100 N. W. 205).

Collateral attack.

115. (1903.) Where the court had jurisdiction of the parties and of the subject matter, and such subject matter was brought before it by the pleadings, its decree is not open to collateral attack, although the jurisdiction may have been exercised and the subject matter dealt with erroneously or irregularly. Cizek v. Cizek, 69 Neb. 797 (96 N. W. 657).

Action on decree.

116. (1902.) One cannot maintain an action based solely on a decree of the district court, in a suit in equity to which he was not a party, and which decree had been superseded by an appeal to the supreme court at the time his action was commenced, where such decree was not affirmed but was reversed and the suit in which it was rendered was dismissed for want of equity. Riley Bros. Co. v. Melia, 3 Unof. 666 (92 N. W. 913).

Attempt to escape as admission of guilt, see Criminal Law, §§ 238-241.

1. (1886.) To constitute an escape there must be an actual arrest and a legal and continuing imprisonment. Krum v. State, 19 Neb. 728 (28 N. W. 278).

2. (1895.) A sheriff or other officer, in preventing the escape of a felon, may use such force as is reasonably necessary, even to the taking of life. Lamma v. State, 46 Neb. 236 (64 N. W. 956).

ESCHEAT.

1. (1876.) The administrator of the estate of a decedent with no heirs can convey no title to such lands, and has no right of possession to the same to deliver. State, ex rel. Roberts, v. Reeder, 5 Neb. 203.

2. (1876.) Upon the death of a tenant in fee with defect of heirs the title and right of possession to the lands, and also to his personal estate, eo instanti vest in the state, and by the operation of the laws of this state all such estate, real and personal, immediately becomes and constitutes a part of the general school fund of the state. State, ex rel. Roberts, v. Reeder, 5 Neb. 203.

3. (1876.) By the constitution the legislature is inhibited from diverting such school funds derived from escheats to any other special objects; and, therefore, the legislative act approved February 17, 1875, vesting in trustees the escheated estate of Henry Hooper, deceased, for a special purpose and object, is a nullity. State, ex rel. Roberts, v. Reeder, 5 Neb. 203.

4. (1904.) Lands purchased by a county, under the provisions of section 1, article IX, chapter 77, Compiled Statutes, are held in trust for itself, the state, and all other political subdivisions entitled to any portion of such delinquent taxes. Such lands are not acquired by the state by escheat or forfeiture, and do not belong to the permanent school fund. Woodrough v. Douglas County, 71 Neb. 354 (98 N. W. 1092).

Sufficiency of grantee's title to entitle him to sign for liquor license, see Intoxicating Liquors, § 40a.

Definition.

1. (1880.) An escrow is a conditional delivery to a stranger, to be kept by him until certain conditions are performed, and then to be delivered to the grantee. Patrick v. McCormick, 10 Neb. 1 (4 N. W. 312).

Sufficiency of deposit.

2. (1888.) The leaving of a deed by a grantor in the hands of his agents, awaiting the arrival of certain funds of the grantee, does not make such a deed an escrow. Wier v. Batdorf, 24 Neb. 83 (38 N. W. 22).

3. (1880.) Depositing a deed in escrow, pending performance of certain condition imposed upon the grantee, is a sufficient delivery of such deed. Cotton v. Gregory, 10 Neb. 125 (4 N. W. 939).

Conditional delivery.

4. (1880.) Where a deed is given to a stranger, to be held by him until the grantee shall perform certain conditions and the deed is delivered without the consent or knowledge of the grantor, to the grantee who wholly failed to perform any of the conditions, no title passes to such grantee. Patrick v. McCormick, 10 Neb. 1 (4 N. W. 312).

5. (1882.) It is only where the deed is delivered to a third person, to be held until some condition be performed on behalf of the grantee, that it can properly be said to be an escrow. If it be delivered to the grantee, although with the understanding that the wife of the grantor shall afterwards execute it also, this being solely for the benefit of the grantee, he may waive it, and the delivery is complete. Brittain v. Work, 13 Neb. 347 (14 N. W. 421).

6. (1893.) The finding of the trial court, that the deed executed by the plaintiff and deposited in escrow with a third person, to be delivered to the vendee on the performance by the latter of certain conditions, was delivered by the depository in escrow by instructions of the vendor before the conditions of the holding had been complied with, considered to be sustained by the evidence in the case. Eggleston v. Pollock, 38 Neb. 188 (56 N. W. 805).

Fraudulent or unauthorized delivery.

7. (1880.) A fraudulent delivery by, or procurement from, the depository of a deed deposited as an escrow will not operate to pass the title even in favor of a subsequent purchaser in good faith, without notice. Cotton v. Gregory, 10 Neb. 125 (4 N. W. 939).

8. (1901.) A deed or other similar instrument placed in the hands of a third person for delivery to the grantee when he shall perform some condition, is not legally effective, but is a mere nullity, if delivered by the depositary, or obtained from him in any way, without full compliance with the condition specified. Matteson v. Smith, 61 Neb. 761 (86 N. W. 472).

9. (1893.) Where a mortgage is executed and deposited in escrow with a third person to be delivered to the mortgagee on the performance by the latter of certain conditions, the delivery thereof by the custodian to the mortgagee, without the knowledge or consent of the mortgagor before the fulfillment of the conditions by the mortgagee, will not have the effect to confer any interest in the mortgaged property upon the latter, or upon an assignee with notice. A mortgage delivered to a third party in escrow, to be by him delivered upon the happening of some contingency, or upon the performance of some condition, does not become effectual as a delivered instrument until such second delivery. Roberson v. Reiter, 38 Neb. 198 (56 N. W. 877).

Actions.

10. (1906.) The depositary of funds in escrow is entitled to prove any facts which would defeat the plaintiff's claim thereto. Brockway v. Reynolds, 77 Neb. 225 (109 N. W. 154).

Nature and incidents.

1. (1891.) In its broad sense the word "estate" includes both real and personal property, but in its more limited sense it applies to land alone; and the term is used to denote the quality, quantity, and extent of the interest which the owner possesses in the land. Therefore estates are divided into such as are freehold and those less than a freehold. Crawl v. Harrington, 33 Neb. 107 (49 N. W. 1118).

www.libtool.com.cn

Estate of inheritance.

2. (1891.) An estate less than a freehold is not an estate of inheritance. Crawl v. Harrington, 33 Neb. 107 (49 N. W. 1118).

Freehold estates.

3. (1891.) All freehold estates are of inheritance except life estates. Crawl v. Harrington, 33 Neb. 107 (49 N. W. 1118).

4. (1898.) An estate less than a freehold is not an estate of inheritance, and a freehold estate is one of which possession, at the common law, could only be given by livery of seisin. Hall v. Crabb, 56 Neb. 392 (76 N. W. 865).

Derivative estates.

5. (1871.) Although it may be true, in the abstract, that a derivative title cannot be better than that from which it came, yet there are many exceptions to the rule. McAusland v. Pundt, 1 Neb. 211 (93 Am. Dec. 358).

Estate by entirety.

6. (1900.) The common law rule of estate by the entirety does not obtain in this jurisdiction. Kerner v. McDonald, 60 Neb. 663 (84 N. W. 92; 83 Am. St. Rep. 550).

Merger.

7. (1871.) There can be no merger unless a greater and a less estate meet in the same person holding in the same right; nor where intervening rights or estates interfere nor where the interests of the party in whom the estates meet so require. Miller v. Finn, 1 Neb. 254.

8. (1889.) Where the general owner of real property receives a deed therefor from a person holding a tax title to said property, the title conveyed by such deed will become merged in the title of such general owner. Wygant v. Dahl, 26 Neb. 562 (42 N. W. 735).

9. (1896.) Whenever a person acquires a greater and lesser estate in the same property and there is no intervening estate, the lesser does not further exist as a separate estate but is destroyed by or is considered in law as merged in the greater but when, in such a case, an intention that the estates remain separate and distinct is expressed or may be implied or inferred, no merger can ensue but the intention will prevail. Mathews v. Jones, 47 Neb. 616 (66 N. W. 622).

10. (1898.) It is a general rule that where two unequal estates vest in the same person at the same time, without an intervening estate, the smaller is thereupon merged in the greater. But merger does not always or necessarily result from such a coinciding of such estate. Petersborough Savings Bank v. Pierce, 54 Neb. 712 (75 N. W. 20).

11. (1898.) Whether two estates will be held to have coalesced will depend upon the facts and circumstances in the particular case, the then intention of the party acquiring the two estates, and the equities of the parties to be affected. Petersborough Savings Bank v. Pierce, 54 Neb. 712 (75 N. W. 20).

12. (1899.) Generally, if two unequal estates are vested in the same party at the one time, and there is no intervening estate, the inferior is merged in the superior. Oak Creek Valley Bank v. Helmer, 59 Neb. 176 (80 N. W. 891).

13. (1899.) The merger of an inferior in a superior estate is not an absolute effect of the vesting of the unequal titles in the one person at the same time. Whether such will be the effect may depend upon the intention of the party in whom the titles appear, either as directly expressed or as it may be inferred or implied from the facts and circumstances of the particular case. Oak Creek Valley Bank v. Helmer, 59 Neb. 176 (80 N. W. 891).

14. (1899.) Whether a merger results from the possession by the same person at the same time of two estates of different rank in the same property depends generally on the intention of the owner. Longfellow v. Barnard, 58 Neb. 612 (79 N. W. 255; 76 Am. St. Rep. 117).

15. (1902.) Where the owner of real estate, in whom apparently was merged the lesser into the greater estate, treats the two estates as having coalesced, and assumes to convey the full estate to another, this would be conclusive as to him on the question of merger, which would be held irrevocably to have taken place. Ames v. Miller, 65 Neb. 204 (91 N. W. 250).

16. (1906.) There can be no merger unless a greater and a less estate meet in the same person holding in the same right, nor where intervening rights or estates interfere, nor where the intention to keep the estates distinct may be inferred or has been expressed. Topliff v. Richardson, 76 Neb. 114 (107 N. W. 114).

——— Mortgage and fee title.

17. (1896.) Where the deed of the mortgaged property to the mortgagee recited that the title was passed "subject to a mortgage of $300 which grantee hereby assumes and agrees to pay," it was evident that the intention was to continue the life of the lien of the mortgage and no merger ensued as between the parties, or against a bona fide purchaser of the notes secured by the mortgage, and the deed, if recorded, was notice of the fact of such intention to parties who subsequently purchased the premises, and also afforded such notice to parties to whom it was so exhibited as to bring to their knowledge the existence of the clause in the deed, and who afterwards bought the property. Mathews v. Jones, 47 Neb. 616 (66 N. W. 622).

18. (1898.) Where the vendee of realty reconveys to the vendor who agrees to assume a mortgage on the premises executed by the vendee to a third person, such transaction held to be a merger of the vendee's original mortgage with his fee title. Goos v. Goos, 57 Neb. 294 (77 N. W. 687).

19. (1902.) Ordinarily, when one having a mortgage on real estate becomes the owner of the fee, the former estate is merged in the latter. Where, however, in such a case, an intention of the holder is expressed or may be implied or inferred that the two estates shall remain separate and distinct, the intention will prevail and no merger will result. Ames v. Miller, 65 Neb. 204 (91 N. W. 250); (1898) Wyatt-Bullard Lumber Co. v. Bourke, 55 Neb. 9 (75 N. W. 241).

20. (1902.) Under the facts and circumstances as disclosed by the record in this action, held, that the mortgage and legal estate had merged into one while held by the grantor of appellee, and that appellee, as a bona fide purchaser, obtained title to the property divested of the lien of the mortgage held by appellant as assignee, who had failed and neglected to have recorded his assignment of such mortgage. Ames v. Miller, 65 Neb. 204 (91 N. W. 250).

——— Tax title and fee.

21. (1906.) Where the holder of a tax sale certificate purchases and takes from the owner a conveyance of the patent title, his tax lien becomes merged in the legal title so conveyed to him, and he cannot assert it in hostility to the claim of a third party holding another tax lien against the premises. Mead v. Brewer, 77 Neb. 400 (109 N. W. 399).

I. BY RECORD.

Pleadings.

1. (1894.) A party is estopped from denying the truth of averments in his own pleadings. Foley v. Holtry, 41 Neb. 563 (59 N. W. 781). [Overruled. 43 Neb. 133.]

2. (1898.) A defendant signing and verifying as plaintiff's attorney a petition averring that he owed plaintiff a certain sum and praying for judgment against himself cannot, on appeal from a decree as prayed, be relieved in the supreme court. Troup v. Horbach, 53 Neb. 795 (74 N. W. 326).

Stipulations and admissions.

3. (1895.) A party who signs in a trial court a stipulation providing that an interlocutory order may be reviewed on error, and that a judgment on the merits of the case be entered in the error proceedings, is not thereby estopped from attacking the judgment of the appellate court for want of jurisdiction. Johnson v. Parrotte, 46 Neb. 51 (64 N. W. 363).

4. (1901.) A party will not be heard to complain in the supreme court of the action of the lower court in the trial of a civil cause if the action of the court was by the "mutual agreement" of the parties to the suit. Union Nat. Bank of Chicago v. Touzalin Improvement Co., 1 Unof. 116 (95 N. W. 489).

II. BY DEED.

Recitals as to estate or property conveyed.

5. (1884.) Where certain lands in an addition to a city, but not platted, were conveyed by metes and bounds, one of the calls in the deed being a certain number of feet to an alley, thence along said alley, etc., there being in fact no alley at the place indicated, as was well known to the purchaser, but a strip twenty feet in width was reserved for that purpose when the city in fact was extended to that point, held, that the alley was not a public one, and the purchaser could not enjoin the owner of the fee from erecting bars across the same. Bushman v. Gibson, 15 Neb. 676 (20 N. W. 106).

6. (1897.) In conveying a ward's interest in land a guardian, by a deed purporting to convey the entire estate, is estopped from afterward asserting his own interest in the land as against the purchaser at the guardian's sale. Wells v. Steckelberg, 52 Neb. 597 (72 N. W. 865; 66 Am. St. Rep. 529).

7. (1897.) Where a father falsely alleges that he is guardian for an infant son and obtains a license to sell the ward's realty, and executed a deed purporting to convey the fee, in an action of ejectment by the son, on attaining his majority, against the purchaser, the father is estopped from setting up his life estate as against the purchase. Wells v. Steckelberg, 52 Neb. 597 (72 N. W. 862; 66 Am. St. Rep. 529).

8. (1902.) When recitals in a deed are of the essence of the contract, neither party is permitted to deny them. McNaughton v. Burke, 63 Neb. 704 (89 N. W. 274).

9. (1903.) Whatever be the form or nature of the conveyance of real property, if the grantor therein sets forth on the face of such instrument, by way of recital or averment, either in express terms or by necessary implication, that he is seized or possessed of a particular estate in the premises conveyed, then such grantor and all persons claiming under him are ever afterward estopped from denying that he was so seized and possessed at the time he made such conveyance. Omaha B. & T. R. Co. v. Whitney, 68 Neb. 399 (99 N. W. 525).

Description of parties.

10. (1897.) The mere fact that a grantor in a conveyance of a family homestead is described therein as a single person, will not estop the grantor from asserting the homestead character of the premises included in the conveyance or the right of homestead therein as against a grantee or mortgagee. France v. Bell, 52 Neb. 57 (71 N. W. 984).

Assumption of incumbrances by grantee.

11. (1901.) Where property is conveyed "subject to incumbrances," generally, the grantee is not estopped from asserting the invalidity of an apparent lien. Batty v. City of Hastings, 63 Neb. 26 (88 N. W. 139).

12. (1904.) A grantee who, by valid contract, has assumed and agreed to pay an apparent lien upon real estate as a part of the purchase price therefor, cannot have her title quieted against such lien on the ground that it was not an enforceable lien against her grantor. McGregor v. Eastern Bldg. & Loan Ass'n, 5 Unof. 563 (99 N. W. 509).

Estates and rights subsequently acquired.

13. (1898.) Whatever be the form or nature of the conveyance of real property, if the grantor therein sets forth on the face of such instrument by way of recital or averment, either in express terms or by necessary implication, that he is seized or possessed of a particular estate in the premises conveyed, then such grantor and all persons claiming under him are ever afterward estopped from denying that he was so seized and possessed at the time he made such conveyance. Such an estoppel operates upon the estate and binds an after-acquired title as between parties and privies. Hagensick v. Castor, 53 Neb. 495 (73 N. W. 932).

14. (1898.) In 1887 the children of George H. Ohler, believing him dead, partitioned among themselves his real estate, by quitclaim deeds from one to another, each deed reciting that the grantor "being one of the three heirs of George H. Ohler." In 1891 Ohler died owning this real estate and it descended to his heirs, the three children who had already partitioned it. Held, That the recital in the quitclaim deeds, "being one of the three heirs of George H. Ohler," was not a mere descriptio personæ of the grantor, but an assertion by such grantor that he was then an heir at law of Ohler; and the grantors had by such recital estopped themselves and those claiming under them from asserting that they were not heirs of George H. Ohler in 1887, and from asserting the title to the land which they acquired by his death in 1891, against the grantees in said quitclaim deeds and those claiming under them. Hagensick v. Castor, 53 Neb. 495 (73 N. W. 932).

15. (1902.) Where one is entitled to a patent to land from the United States, but before it issues, conveys the land to another by deed purporting to convey the fee, and a patent subsequently issues to such grantor for the land, he will not be heard to assert title under such patent, as against such grantee. Lyon v. Gombert, 63 Neb. 630 (88 N. W. 774).

III. EQUITABLE ESTOPPEL.

A. Nature and Essentials in General.

Nature and elements of estoppel.

16. (1878.) Generally, whether acts or admissions of a party shall operate by way of estoppel or not, must depend upon the circumstances of each case, and therefore there can be no fixed and settled rules of general application to regulate estoppel in pais, as in technical estoppels. Campbell v. Nesbitt, 7 Neb. 300.

17. (1892.) Estoppel will not supply the want of power, or make valid an act prohibited by express provision of law. Whitlock v. Gosson, 35 Neb. 829 (53 N. W. 980); (1906) Weatherington v. Smith, 77 Neb. 363 (109 N. W. 381).

18-20. (1897.) Where one of two innocent persons must suffer it should be that one who misled the other into the contract. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Crowell Lumber & Grain Co., 51 Neb. 293 (70 N. W. 964); (1897) Porter v. Ourada, 51 Neb. 510 (71 N. W. 52); (1904) Humphrey Hardware Co. v. Herrick, 72 Neb. 878 (101 N. W. 1016).

21. (1906.) The doctrine of estoppel by construction is well established in this state. Royal Highlanders v. State, 77 Neb. 18 (108 N. W. 183).

22. (1907.) To constitute an equitable estoppel, there must exist a false representation or concealment of material facts; it must have been made with knowledge, actual or constructive, of the facts; the party to whom it was made must have been without knowledge or the means of knowledge of the real facts; it must have been made with the intention that it should be acted upon; and the party to whom it was made must have relied on or acted upon it to his prejudice. Walker v. Ehresman, 79 Neb. 775 (113 N. W. 218).

Intent and knowledge of facts.

23. (1893.) Knowledge of the existence of a right or defense, and the intention to relinquish it, must concur in order to estop a party by waiver. Henry & Coatsworth Co. v. Fisherdick, 37 Neb. 207 (55 N. W. 643); (1894) Hamilton v. Home Fire Ins. Co., 42 Neb. 883 (61 N. W. 93).

24. (1893.) Estoppel cannot be grounded on silence unless there is both the specific opportunity and the apparent duty to speak; the party omitting to speak must know that another is acting or about to act in reliance thereon. Scharman v. Scharman, 38 Neb. 39 (56 N. W. 704); (1901) Smith v. White, 62 Neb. 56 (86 N. W. 930).

25. (1894.) To constitute an equitable estoppel by silence or acquiescence, it must be made to appear that the facts, upon which it is sought to make the estoppel operate, were known to the party against whom the estoppel is urged and unknown to the party urging it. Nash v. Baker, 40 Neb. 294 (58 N. W. 706).

www.libtool.com.cn

26. (1896.) To constitute an estoppel in pais the person sought to be estopped must have conducted himself with the intention of influencing the conduct of another, or with reason to believe his conduct would influence the other's conduct, inconsistently with the evidence he proposes to give. Burke v. Utah Nat. Bank, 47 Neb. 247 (66 N. W. 295).

27. (1902.) An estoppel by representations does not arise, where there is no intention and could be no reasonable expectation, that such representation was to be acted upon. Laing v. Evans, 64 Neb. 454 (90 N. W. 246).

28. (1903.) An estoppel may be binding and effectual, even though there was no intention to deceive, and it is not necessary for the holder of an adverse interest to deny his interest, or expressly declare his intention to abandon it. Lydick v. Gill, 68 Neb. 273 (94 N. W. 109).

Reliance on adverse party.

29. (1899.) A party is not estopped by his acts or omissions which were in no manner or degree an element of or inducement to the acts of the one who seeks to invoke the estoppel. Oak Creek Valley Bank v. Helmer, 59 Neb. 176 (80 N. W. 891).

30. (1899.) Where credit was not obtained on the faith of property conveyed by an insolvent husband to his wife, there is, in an action by a creditor, no basis for an estoppel against her assertion of ownership of such property. Dunn v. Bozarth, 59 Neb. 244 (80 N. W. 811).

31. (1901.) In order to estop a party by mere silence, it must appear that the person claiming the benefit of the estoppel was ignorant of the rights of the party against whom the estoppel is alleged. Union State Bank v. Hutton, 62 Neb. 664 (87 N. W. 533).

32. (1902.) It is of the essence of estoppel that the estoppel asserter has relied to his disadvantage upon the conduct or silence of the other party. Decker v. Decker, 64 Neb. 239 (89 N. W. 795).

33. (1903.) Whatever a man's real intention may be, if he so conducts himself that a reasonable man would take the act or representation to be true, and believe that it was made to be acted on, and he did act upon it as true, the party making the representations will be precluded from contesting their truth. Lydick v. Gill, 68 Neb. 273 (94 N. W. 109).

Prejudice to person setting up estoppel.

34, 35. (1879.) It is a firmly established rule that, when one, by his words or conduct, wilfully causes another to believe in the existence of a certain state of things, and induces him to act on that belief so as to alter his own previous position, the former is concluded from averring against the latter a different state of things as existing at the same time. Grant v. Cropsey, 8 Neb. 205; (1884) Newman v. Mueller, 16 Neb. 523 (20 N. W. 843); (1894) Cain v. Boller, 41 Neb. 721 (60 N. W. 7); (1896) Brown v. Eno, 48 Neb. 538 (67 N. W. 434); (1905) Larson v. Anderson, 74 Neb. 361 (104 N. W. 925).

36, 37. (1895.) To create an estoppel in pais the party in whose favor the estoppel operates must have altered his position in reliance upon the words or conduct of the party estopped. Lingonner v. Ambler, 44 Neb. 316 (62 N. W. 486).

38. (1902.) The silence of one party does not operate as an estoppel in favor of another, unless it appear that such other party has been induced thereby to change his position to his inury. Columbus State Bank v. Carrig, 3 Unof. 592 (92 N. W. 324).

39, 40. (1905.) Where one by his conduct induces another to act on the supposition that certain conditions exist, he will not be heard to deny the existence of such conditions where the other would be prejudiced by such denial. Anthes v. Schroeder, 74 Neb. 172 (103 N. W. 1072).

Estoppel against estoppel.

41. (1871.) Every estoppel ought to be reciprocal, that is, to bind both parties. Towsley v. Johnson, 1 Neb. 95.

42. (1882.) It is of the essence of an estoppel that it be mutual. Van Sickel v.

Digitized by Google

Buffalo County, 13 Neb. 103 (13 N. W. 19; 42 Am. St. Rep. 753).

43. (1894.) The defense of estoppel by laches or unreasonable delay in bringing an equitable suit is of itself an equitable defense, and cannot be successfully maintained when it appears that the delay complained of as unreasonable has been caused by, or contributed to by, the party interposing the defense. Richards v. Hatfield, 40 Neb. 879 (59 N. W. 777).

www.lhstool.com.cn

Estoppel against public office.

44. (1901.) The rule of estoppel in pais will not ordinarily apply to the acts of municipal officers. Philadelphia Mortgage & Trust Co. v. City of Omaha, 63 Neb. 280 (88 N. W. 523; 93 Am. St. Rep. 442; 57 L. R. A. 150).

B. Grounds of Estoppel.

Inconsistency of conduct and claims.

45. (1891.) A party who refuses to perform a contract for a stated reason cannot, after suit commenced, be heard to adopt a different reason. Ballou v. Sherwood, 32 Neb. 666 (49 N. W. 790, 50 N. W. 1131).

46. (1898.) A national bank having given a transaction the form of one with an individual for the purpose of evading the liabilities peculiar to national banks, cannot be heard to assert its true nature for the purpose of evading the liabilities attaching to individuals and of claiming the privileges of national banks. Gadsden v. Thrush, 56 Neb. 565 (76 N. W. 1060).

47. (1899.) Where a party gives a reason for his decision and conduct touching anything involved in a controversy, he is estopped, after litigation has begun, from changing his ground and putting his conduct on another and different consideration. Frenzer v. Dufrene, 58 Neb. 432 (78 N. W. 719); (1900) State, ex rel. Seth Thomas Clock Co., v. County Commissioners of Cass County, 60 Neb. 566 (83 N. W. 733); (1904) Hixson Map Co. v. Nebraska Post Co., 5 Unof. 388 (98 N. W. 872); (1905) First State Bank of Overton v. Stephens Bros., 74 Neb. 616 (105 N. W. 43).

48. (1900.) The assignor of a partly executed contract of purchase of lumber who conditions that the assignee shall at once make settlement of the account of lumber already delivered is estopped, in an action against him for an unpaid balance, to set up as a set-off a claim due from the assignee. Blue Valley Lumber Co. v. Conro, 61 Neb. 39 (84 N. W. 402).

Assumption of capacity or authority.

49. (1906.) One cannot attack the validity of a delegate meeting of a society where he participates in the meeting and becomes a candidate for one of the offices to be filled. Burdick v. Sons and Daughters of Protection, 75 Neb. 460 (106 N. W. 466).

49*a*. (1907.) By correspondence, plaintiffs, who are real estate brokers, arranged with a landowner for a sale of his land to a stranger, and during the negotiation demanded a certain sum as their commission, which, upon consummation of the sale, was paid to them. Held, That the plaintiffs will not be heard to say that they were not the agents of the vendor. Northup v. Bathrick, 80 Neb. 36 (113 N. W. 808).

Assertion of title.

50. (1888.) A bailee of sheep who, for the purpose of obtaining credit for merchandise, informs the merchant that he owns the sheep, is estopped to allege that he has no interest therein subject to levy on an execution on a judgment for the value of the merchandise furnished him. Towne v. Sparks, 23 Neb. 142 (36 N. W. 375).

Claim or position in judicial proceeding.

51. (1883.) When a party appeals from a judgment of a justice of the peace, his undertaking executed in conformity to the statute estops him to deny that he had taken an appeal in an action brought on the undertaking. Gudtner v. Kilpatrick, 14 Neb. 347 (15 N. W. 708).

52. (1892.) When the authorities of a city change the grade of a street, appoint appraisers to assess the damages of abutting owners, and confirm the award when returned, the city, on the trial of an appeal taken by the landowner from the assessment of damages, cannot urge defects and irregularities in its own proceedings in changing the grade, to defeat a recovery. Second Congregational Church Society v. City of Omaha, 35 Neb. 103 (52 N. W. 829).

53. (1894.) Where the owner of a judgment, that has been paid, causes an execution to issue against real estate of the debtor and a sale and conveyance of the same, no release of the judgment having been recorded, in an action for damages

54. (1895.) An attachment having been issued against a defendant, the plaintiff claiming to have acquired a lien by virtue of a garnishment founded upon averments that the garnishee had property of the defendant in his possession, cannot be heard to insist that the defendant is without standing to move a discharge of the attachment because in fact he had no interest in the property. Kilpatrick-Koch Dry Goods Co. v. Bremers, 44 Neb. 863 (62 N. W. 1105).

55. (1896.) A plaintiff who has attached property as the property of defendants and obtained writs of garnishment to issue on allegations that the garnishee named has in his possession property, etc, owned by or belonging to the defendants, will not be heard to assert that defendants have not sufficient interest to be allowed to defend the attachments. Dayton Spice-Mills Co. v. Sloan, 49 Neb. 622 (68 N. W. 1040).

56. (1901.) An offer to prove payment is not in every case an implied admission that the plaintiff once had an actionable demand; its purpose may be to prove that a right of action never existed. Barker v. Wheeler, 62 Neb. 150 (87 N. W. 20).

57. (1903.) Where appellee procured a dismissal of the appeal on the ground that the undertaking was void, he is estopped to afterwards maintain a suit on such undertaking. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. Ettenheimer, 70 Neb. 144 (97 N. W. 227; 113 Am. St. Rep. 783)

Failure to assert title or right.

58. (1876.) Where the purchaser of a bill of lumber of a certain "quantity and quality" receives the lumber and gives a note in settlement of the balance due therefor, he is estopped from claiming damages for want of "quantity and quality," no fraud or mistake being alleged. Golby v. Lyman, 4 Neb. 429.

59. (1889.) A mortgagee of chattels who stands by and knowingly permits the goods to be sold is estopped to afterwards assert his title thereto. Gillilan v. Kendall, 26 Neb. 82 (42 N. W. 281; 18 Am. St. Rep. 766).

60. (1896.) Failure of a city to levy taxes during three years after a plat was vacated does not estop the city from making a subsequent levy. Kershaw v. Jansen, 49 Neb. 467 (68 N. W. 616).

61. (1903.) Owners of land who have given quitclaim deeds to all their interest in the land, and have suffered a decree in partition against them that their grantee holds title to the land so conveyed and have allowed in such action of partition one-third of the net proceeds of the sale to be paid to the purchaser of the dower estate, to be held by him during the life of the doweress, are estopped to assert any claim accruing before the partition proceedings to the reversion of the dower. Curtis v. Zutavern, 67 Neb. 183 (93 N. W. 400).

Disclaimer.

62. (1877.) If the cashier, on inquiry by a surety who is not an officer of the bank, states that the note upon which he is surety has been paid by the principal, the bank is estopped from denying the truth of such statement, when to do so would entail a loss upon the surety Merchants Bank v. Rudolf, 5 Neb. 527.

63. (1887.) Where the president of a bank without authority disposes of the property of the bank, and the bank is thereby damaged, and for the purpose of making good the loss, either temporarily or permanently, transfers to the bank promissory notes held by him in an amount equal to the loss sustained; and where afterwards he disposes of his interest in the bank and induces others to purchase a controlling interest in the stock upon the representation that he has no demand against the bank, he cannot afterwards recover of the bank the amount of the notes transferred to it for the purpose of making up the deficiency caused by the loss resulting from the sale of the bank's property. First Nat. Bank v. Lucas, 21 Neb. 280 (31 N. W. 805).

64. (1889.) An attorney selling real estate for his client, and representing the title to be good, which representation is relied on, cannot thereafter assert title in himself to any of the real estate so sold. Little v. Giles, 25 Neb. 313 (41 N. W. 186).

65. (1889.) One who, acting as agent for his father, makes representations and statements concerning lands, whereby another is induced to purchase the father's interest, in good faith and for value, he is estopped from afterwards setting up a superior title in himself. Wise v. Newatney, 26 Neb. 88 (42 N. W. 339).

66. (1892.) One who, by wilfully stating to another that he does not own certain property, leads the latter to purchase it, is estopped from averring a different state of facts. Blodgett v. McMurtry, 34 Neb. 782 (52 N. W. 706).

67. (1894.) Where a seller of goods, which had been purchased from him by fraudulent representatives of the buyer that he was a member of a certain firm, told a creditor of the buyer that he had no claim on the goods but proposed to look to the firm for payment, and such creditor relying on such statement sued out an attachment, the seller is estopped to afterwards claim that he had not parted with the title. Kirkendall, Jones & Co. v. Davis, 41 Neb. 285 (59 N. W. 915).

68. (1894.) One who is a mere licensee without consideration of a barn to store broom corn, promising to vacate for a prospective purchaser, is, in an action of replevin by such purchaser, estopped to claim a right of possession of the barn. Jameson v. Kent, 42 Neb. 412 (60 N. W. 879).

69. (1905.) The owner of a remainder who induces a person to purchase the property from a life tenant, by a representation that the latter could convey a complete title, is estopped to afterwards dispute the purchaser's title. Larson v. Anderson, 74 Neb. 361 (104 N. W. 925).

Clothing another with apparent title or authority.

70. (1874.) When a husband and wife convey, by an absolute deed, certain lands to another to secure a debt owing by them, and the land is sold by the grantee with consent of the husband and wife, after the husband's death the wife is estopped to deny the validity of the sale. Wamsley v. Crook, 3 Neb. 344.

71. (1880.) Where an agent of a railroad issues a bill of lading for five cars of wheat when in fact only one or two cars were actually shipped, as against a bank that discounted and paid the bill of lading, the railroad company is estopped from denying it had received the five cars of wheat. Sioux City & P. R. Co. v. First Nat. Bank, 10 Neb. 556 (7 N. W. 311; 35 Am. Rep 488).

72. (1886.) Where one of two innocent persons must suffer by the fraud of a third, he who trusted the third person and placed the means in his hands to commit the wrong must bear the loss. Hansen v. Berthelsen, 19 Neb. 433 (27 N. W. 423).

73. (1890.) The execution of assignments of land-grant contracts in blank, no assignee being named therein, and the delivery thereof to a broker, does not estop the owner from claiming the same as against one to whom the broker wrongfully pledged them. Folsom v. McCague, 29 Neb. 124 (45 N. W. 269).

74. (1893.) The fact that the holder of land contracts assigned them to her son as security for a loan, such assignments not being recorded, and the mother remaining in possession of the land, does not estop her from denying that such assignment was absolute, as against a creditor of the son, although her son, without her knowledge had, before the assignment, obtained the credit by representing that he owned the land. Scharman v. Scharman, 38 Neb. 39 (56 N. W. 704).

75. (1896.) Where one of two innocent persons must suffer through the misfeasance of the agent of one, that one who has placed the agent in a position to perpetrate the fraud must suffer. City Nat. Bank of Hastings v. Thomas, 46 Neb. 861 (65 N. W. 895); (1896) Bull v. Mitchell, 47 Neb. 647 (66 N. W. 632).

76. (1903.) The defendant in error gave his married daughter possession of certain domestic animals for use in her family; some months thereafter the daughter and her husband separated, after which the husband sold the animals, representing to the purchaser that he was the owner. Held, That defendant in error was not estopped from re-claiming the animals in the absence of proof that his son-in-law was claiming to own the property and by his acts, conduct or declarations, causing the public to believe that he was such owner and that such facts were brought to the knowledge of defendant in error prior to a sale being made. McGinley v. Brechtel, 4 Unof. 552 (95 N. W. 32).

77. (1905.) Where an indorsee of a note consents to, and ratifies, extension of the time of payment thereof made by the indorser, who was the original payee, such indorsee is estopped to recover on such note as against the maker who has paid the endorser, not knowing the note has been transferred. Swan v. Craig, 73 Neb. 182 (102 N. W. 471).

78. (1907.) Where a conveyance of real property is obtained from the owner by fraud, and a general creditor of the fraudulent grantee asserts that he gave credit upon faith in such apparent ownership, and claims that the owner should be estopped to deny the title of the fraudulent grantee, such estoppel will be denied where the reliance upon such apparent ownership is not clearly established, and the creditor appears to have been as negligent in extending credit as was the owner in the original transaction. Rihner v. Jacobs, 79 Neb. 742 (113 N. W. 220).

79. (1907.) In the application of the doctrine of equitable estoppel to a transaction where the true owner of property permits another to hold the legal title in trust for him, and credit is given the trustee personally upon the faith of such apparent ownership, cases, where the trust relation is between relatives and arises out of contract, distinguished from those where the trust arises ex maleficio and the relation is between strangers. Rihner v. Jacobs, 79 Neb. 742 (113 N. W. 220).

Dealing with person asserting title or exercising authority.

80. (1871.) The maker of a note which is in terms payable to a bank, cannot, in an action brought by it thereon, raise the question of its incorporation. He is estopped to deny it. Platte Valley Bank v. Harding, 1 Neb. 461.

81. (1873.) Where a husband conveys a tract of land to his wife, his afterwards taking a life lease from her is a conclusive recognition of his wife's title, and he is estopped from setting up any claim to the property. Courvoisier v. Bouvier, 3 Neb. 55.

82. (1896.) Where one enters into a contract with a body acting as a corporation, he is estopped from denying its corporate existence when sued on the contract. Livingston Loan & Building Ass'n v. Drummond, 49 Neb. 200 (68 N. W. 375); (1901) Otoe County & Driving Park Ass'n v. Doman, 1 Unof. 179 (95 N. W. 327); (1901) Crete Bldg. & Loan Ass'n v. Patz, 1 Unof. 768 (95 N. W. 793).

83. (1903.) A person is not estopped to deny the existence of a lawful public road by the fact that he demanded damages on account of the taking of his land therefor, which demand was wholly ignored by the public board authorized by law to ascertain such damages. Langan v. Whalen, 67 Neb. 299 (93 N. W. 393).

83*a*. (1907.) Where a surety company issues an indemnity policy insuring a fraternal beneficial association from loss by larceny or embezzlement of its officers, the contract not being illegal, the company will be estopped from denying the legal capacity of the association in an action on the policy by the association against the company. Union Pacific Lodge v. Bankers Surety Co., 79 Neb. 801 (113 N. W. 263).

Contracts.

84. (1876.) Where a stockholder in a railroad corporation has signed a contract disposing of its assets, knowing its contents, and voting at meetings of the company to carry it into effect, he cannot afterward repudiate it, or question the bona fides of the transactions, no fraud being shown. Clarke v. Omaha & S. W. R. Co., 4 Neb. 458.

85. (1886.) A county is estopped to deny the validity of county bonds in the hands of a bona fide holder. State, ex rel. Leese, v. Wilkinson, 20 Neb. 610 (31 N. W. 376).

86. (1892.) A mortgage on a homestead being void for want of power of the husband alone to incumber the homestead, neither the husband nor wife is estopped to deny its validity. Whitlock v. Gosson, 35 Neb. 829 (53 N. W. 980).

87. (1894.) Where the seller on a contract to sell a certain amount of corn at a certain fixed price, not being able to read or write, the buyer reduced the agreement to writting which the seller signed, the original agreement being to sell corn to the amount of $52 and the buyer in transcribing the same inserted 3,000 bushels, the seller is not estopped from denying his liability by reason of affixing his signature. Ward v. Spelts, 39 Neb. 809 (58 N. W. 426).

88. (1894.) The doctrine that the carelessness or negligence of a party in signing a writing estops him from afterwards disputing the contents of such writing, is not applicable in a suit thereon between the original parties thereto, where the defense is that such writing, by reason of fraud, does not embrace the contract actually made. Ward v. Spelts, 39 Neb. 809 (58 N. W. 426); (1897) Woodbridge v. DeWitt, 51 Neb. 98 (70 N. W. 506).

89. (1901.) One who agrees with a city to act as police matron, for a salary less than that prescribed by law, is not estopped from asserting her right to the full salary allowed by the statute. Gallaher v. City of Lincoln, 63 Neb. 339 (88 N. W. 505).

90. (1903.) In an action to recover a deposit made to secure a bid for public work the plaintiff is not estopped to deny the validity of the bid and its acceptance, nor does the maxim, Potior est conditio possidentis, apply in such a way as to defeat a recovery. Fairbanks, Morse & Co. v. City of North Bend, 68 Neb. 560 (94 N. W. 537).

Stipulations.

91. (1896.) A creditor who signed a stipulation authorizing the agent of a rival creditor to sell the debtor's goods and remit the proceeds to the principal, in the absence of fraud, was estopped from asserting a superior right to the proceeds of the sale. Commercial Nat. Bank v. Merchants Exchange Nat. Bank, 47 Neb. 217 (66 N. W. 273).

Rendition of bill.

92. (1898.) The rendition of a bill for services does not estop the person rendering it from claiming and recovering a larger amount in a subsequent action on a quantum meruit, when the other party did not accept or acquiesce in the bill, but refused at once to recognize it as correct. People's Nat. Bank v. Geisthardt, 55 Neb. 232 (75 N. W. 582).

Admissions.

93. (1883.) Admissions, whether of law or of fact, which have been acted upon by others, are conclusive against the party making them in all cases between him and the person he has thus influenced. Buckstaff v. Dunbar, 15 Neb. 114 (17 N. W. 345).

94. (1895.) A landowner who states to an intending purchaser of a judgment that it is a lien on the former's land is, as against the latter, estopped from asserting the contrary. Viergutz v. Aultman, 46 Neb. 141 (64 N. W. 693).

Acquiescence.

——— Assent to or ratification of acts of others in general.

95. (1873.) Where a party voluntarily surrenders the legal evidence by which his claim could be supported, and directs his grantor to make a deed to another person, he is estopped from introducing secondary evidence to defeat a title made with his own knowledge and consent, and for which he received a satisfactory consideration. Schade v. Bessinger, 3 Neb. 140.

96. (1899.) A lent money to B & C, partners. Certain moneys were thereafter paid by B to A. A receiver was appointed to wind up the partnership, and B, without authority from A and without her knowledge, proved her whole claim against the firm and secured its allowance without deduction of the moneys paid by B. A dividend was paid A on the claim, but she did not know when she received it that her claim had been so presented and allowed, and the payment made was, together with the moneys paid by B, less than the debt to her. In a suit by B to recover the moneys paid by him as moneys lent, held that A was not by the foregoing facts estopped to assert that such moneys had been paid by B to her as partial payments of the firm debt and not as a loan. Foss v. Streator, 57 Neb. 389 (77 N. W. 764).

97. (1901.) When the lender of money upon negotiable securities sells and transfers the latter before due, and upon their maturity receives payment therefor from the maker, who pays him in good faith, and the lender subsequently executes and delivers his own obligations to the holder for the amount so received, who, after having learned of the fact of such payment, retains such obligations for more than two years, without objection and without notifying the borrower that such transaction was unauthorized by or unsatisfactory to him, the holder will be held to have ratified the receipt of the money by the lender as being the act of his own agent and will be estopped from enforcing the securities against the borrower. Day v. Miller, 1 Unof. 107 (95 N. W. 359).

98. (1901.) Consent by one creditor that the debtor may mortgage a stock of goods to another creditor does not estop the former from attacking the validity of such mortgage when the mortgagor is permitted to dispose of the mortgaged goods for his own benefit. Brinker v. Ashenfelter, 1 Unof. 793 (95 N. W. 1124).

——— Assent to or participation in judicial proceedings.

99. (1882.) Where, after a judgment for plaintiff in ejectment, defendant seeks to have the amount of taxes he has paid on certain land ascertained, and paid by plaintiff, he is estopped to afterward seek relief by proceeding in error against the judgment in the original action. Strong v. Irwin, 12 Neb. 446 (11 N. W. 877).

100. (1886.) Where a defendant takes a stay of execution, he thereby waives the right to apply for a new trial, and is es-topped to attach the judgment in any manner. Banks v. Hitchcock, 20 Neb. 315 (30 N. W. 56).

101. (1898.) A defendant to an action in which an accounting is prayed, who consents to an order of reference and proceeds according to the analogies of a suit in equity, cannot on appeal be heard to say that the action was essentially of a legal character, and should have been so treated. Morris v. Haas, 54 Neb. 579 (74 N. W. 828).

102. (1898.) A subscriber to corporate stock who has paid off a deficiency judgment against the corporation is not estopped from maintaining a suit for contribution against his co-subscribers by the fact that he participated in a distribution made of the assets of the corporation by the stockholders, the debt discharged by him not being provided for in such distribution. Bennison v. McConnell, 56 Neb. 46 (76 N. W. 412).

103. (1901.) When defendants in a suit to foreclose a mortgage avail themselves of the statutory stay of judgment they are estopped from attacking such judgment in any manner. Gilbert v. Provident Life & Trust Co., 1 Unof. 282 (95 N. W. 488).

104. (1907.) Heirs at law of an entryman of a timber claim, the patent to which was not issued until after the death of the entryman, are not estopped from asserting claim to the same by reason of permitting a probate court to adjudge title to the land to vest in devisees. Walker v. Ehresman, 79 Neb. 775 (113 N. W. 218).

104*a*. (1907.) When the owner of property sold at judicial sale moves the court to deny confirmation because of inadequacy of price, and offers in event of re-sale to increase the bid thereat, he, by so doing, admits the jurisdiction of the court and confesses the justice of the decree of sale, and is estopped afterwards to dispute either. Prudential Real Estate Co. v. Hall, 79 Neb. 808 (116 N. W. 40).

104*b*. (1908.) When, in an action to set aside a conveyance of land as having been fraudulently procured, the plaintiff obtains a decree in his favor by means of a compromise and settlement, in which he agrees to pay and discharge a mortgage upon the premises executed by his fraudulent grantee, he is not entitled to object, in a subsequent action to foreclose that mortgage, that the same is for a sum in excess of the just indebtedness of the mortgagor to the mortgagee, or that prior to the settlement the mortgagee might have obtained a partial satisfaction from a source other than the land. Hannan v. Rihner, 80 Neb. 521 (114 N. W. 605).

——— Acceptance of benefits.

105. (1874.) One cannot be permitted to receive the purchase price for land and afterwards recover the land. Wamsley v. Crook, 3 Neb. 344.

106. (1877.) The receipt of purchase money with the knowledge that the purchaser is paying it upon an understanding that he is purchasing a good title, touches the conscience and binds the rights of the parties as effectually in a void as in a voidable proceeding; and the same principle applies when a party retains the benefits derived from an agency, and has ratified the acts of the agent. McMurtry v. Brown, 6 Neb. 368.

107. (1887.) A plan for the division of a tract of land among tenants in common thereof, is binding upon such tenants as have ratified it by accepting a conveyance of the portions assigned to them. Killinger v. Hartman, 21 Neb. 297 (31 N. W. 918).

108. (1897.) A payee suing on a note taken by his agent for the purchase price of a harvesting machine, is estopped to assert that a warranty made by the agent, as an inducement to procure the note, was unauthorized. Osborn Co. v. Jordan, 52 Neb. 465 (72 N. W. 479).

109. (1897.) A landowner by electing to pursue his remedy for the value of property appropriated by a city for a street, is estopped to call in question the title of the city to the land taken, in a subsequent action to restrain the city from collecting an assessment on his property for grading and improving the street. Hawver v. City of Omaha, 52 Neb. 734 (73 N. W. 217).

110. (1901.) A party who has received the benefits of an executed contract entered into with the county at a meeting of the county board is estopped from denying the legality of the session at which such contract was entered into. Green v. Lancaster County, 61 Neb. 473 (85 N. W. 439).

111. (1902.) One who, on a settlement with his principal of transactions by him as agent, writes a receipt in full of all demands and attaches it to a draft for the amount the other party has offered to pay for such a receipt, cannot, after taking the money, in the absence of fraud or mistake, renew a claim previously in dispute between the parties.

Connor v. Etheridge, 3 Unof. 555 (92 N. W. 135).

112. (1903.) One purchasing property and retaining title to it under a decree of foreclosure, will not be permitted to challenge the validity of such decree. City of Lincoln v. Lincoln Street R. Co., 67 Neb. 469 (93 N. W. 766).

113. (1906.) Where heirs accept a cash payment from the widow of a deceased in an endeavor to settle absolute title in the widow and mother to the homestead, they are, after ten years, estopped from asserting title to the homestead as against the widow's grantee. Staats v. Wilson, 76 Neb. 204 (107 N. W. 230).

114. (1907.) A person claiming title derived under a decree of court will not be heard to dispute the authority of the attorney to enter into the stipulation upon which the decree was based. Peterson v. Ramsey, 78 Neb. 235 (110 N. W. 728).

115. (1907.) A landlord is estopped to deny the authority of his attorney to compromise and settle a claim for rent, where he accepts and retains the amount received in settlement. Fenimore v. White, 78 Neb. 520 (111 N. W. 204).

——— Permitting improvements or expenditure.

116. (1877.) If a company, incorporated with the exclusive privilege to establish and keep a ferry and wagon bridge across a river, within a certain district, stand by and silently see and permit other parties to construct and complete another wagon bridge across the same river, within the same district—or acquiesce and consent to the erection thereof—it will, by reason of such silence or assent, be estopped from controverting, by injunction or otherwise, the right of the other parties to use and repair such bridge. Fremont Bridge Co. v. Dodge County, 6 Neb. 18.

117. (1884.) In an action of ejectment, where an equitable defense is pleaded, and under the allegations of the answer it is shown that the defendant bought the land in question in good faith for a valuable consideration, taking immediate possession thereof, and with the knowledge of the plaintiff made valuable and lasting improvements thereon, the plaintiff taking no steps to notify defendants of his claim, held, that he was estopped to set up his rights as against them. Gillespie v. Sawyer, 15 Neb. 536 (19 N. W. 449).

118. (1887.) If a party knowingly, though it be done passively by looking on, suffers another to purchase and expend money on land under an erroneous opinion of title, without making known his own claim, he will not afterwards be permitted to exercise his legal rights against such person. State, ex rel. Miller, v. Graham, 21 Neb. 329 (32 N. W. 142).

119. (1888.) A party who knowingly permits another to purchase land and expend money thereon, under the supposition that he is the owner, and without such party making known his own claim, will not be permitted afterwards to exercise his legal rights against the purchaser. Forbes v. McCoy, 24 Neb. 702 (40 N. W. 132).

120. (1893.) The owners of a tract of land, having platted it as an addition to an adjacent town, so as to show what appeared to be the prolongation of its streets, though not so designated, and having for the period of eight years acquiesced in the grading and public use of such apparent streets, the erection of sidewalks thereon, and the construction of costly improvements upon adjacent private property in such manner that if the existence of such streets is denied these improvements will be rendered comparatively useless; and having represented to one party, who, on the faith thereof, purchased a portion of said addition adjoining said apparent streets, that such portion would abut upon the same as streets, are estopped to deny the existence of the streets through such addition of which they have thus superinduced such belief, and the reliance thereon of the parties who have acted upon the faith of such appearances, acts, and representations. Likes v. Kellogg, 37 Neb. 259 (55 N. W. 878).

121. (1894.) Where stock in a corporation had been exchanged for land and the person receiving the stock learned that the representations inducing him to make the exchange were false, and thereafter, without notifying th other party of any intention to rescind, knowingly permitted such other party to make valuable improvements upon the land, and in the meantime acted as a director of the corporation and took part in its affairs, these acts constituted an election to abide by the contract and deprived him of the right to seek rescission in equity. Foley v. Holtry, 41 Neb. 563 (59 N. W. 781). [Overruled. 43 Neb. 133.]

122. (1903.) One who has not been guilty of laches will not be estopped to object to

123. (1903.) Where one man knowingly, though he does it passively, by looking on, suffers another to purchase and expend money on land under an erroneous opinion of title, without making known his own claim, he will not afterwards be permitted to exercise his legal right against such person. A wilful design to mislead and deceive is not necessary in such a case. Lydick v. Gill, 68 Neb. 273 (94 N. W. 109).

Silence.

124. (1904.) A purchaser at a judicial sale of lands offered subject to apparent liens, who makes no attempt to have the priority, validity or amount of the latter otherwise adjudicated until after confirmation and conveyance, is estopped to impeach them. Omaha Loan & Trust Co. v. City of Omaha, 71 Neb. 781 (99 N. W. 650).

125. (1906.) Where one purchases land at a tax sale and there is an apparent prior lien thereon that is not questioned by such purchaser, he is estopped thereafter from questioning such prior lien. State v. Several Parcels of Land, 75 Neb. 497 (106 N. W. 601.)

126. (1907.) In order to constitute an equitable estoppel by silence or acquiescence, it must be made to appear that the facts upon which it is sought to make the estoppel operate were known to the parties against whom the estoppel is urged. City of Lincoln v. McLaughlin, 79 Neb. 74 (112 N. W. 363).

Laches.

127. (1898.) Estoppel by laches in delaying the commencement of an action is not available as a defense unless pleaded. German Nat. Bank v. First Nat. Bank, 55 Neb. 86 (75 N. W. 531).

127*a*. (1907.) The courts, in a proper case, will apply the doctrine of laches to a case in which the state is a party plaintiff. The state, like individuals, may be estopped by its acts or laches, and should not be allowed to oust a corporation of its rights and franchises where, for a long series of years, it has stood silent and seen the corporation expend large sums in the acquisition of property and improvements made thereon under a claimed right so to do under its charter. State, ex rel. Caldwell, v. Lincoln Street R. Co., 80 Neb. 333 (114 N. W. 422).

Negligence.

128. (1904.) One who signs a release of a claim for damages for personal injuries without reading it, he having the capacity and opportunity to so do, is estopped by his own negligence from claiming that the release is not legal and binding because of fraudulent representation and deceit in obtaining his signature. Osborne v. Missouri Pacific R. Co., 71 Neb. 180 (98 N. W. 685).

129. (1904.) One who fails through culpable inertness to make inquiry when it is his duty to inquire, and by reason of such failure loses a valuable right, is not entitled to relief in equity on the ground of mistake. Farrell v. Bouck, 72 Neb. 875 (101 N. W. 1018).

C. Persons Affected and Matters Precluded.

Persons to whom estoppel is available.

130. (1898.) In a suit against the maker on a note transferred by indorsement to plaintiffs, it was held that defendant was not estopped to deny that plaintiffs were partners. Hoyt v. Kountze, 54 Neb. 368 (74 N. W. 585).

131. (1899.) An estoppel in pais is not available to a stranger to the transaction. Oliver v. Lansing, 59 Neb. 219 (80 N. W. 829).

Persons estopped.

132. (1890.) A husband and wife were in charge of a millinery store in the city of C. The plaintiffs sold goods on credit to the wife on the representations of the husband that she was the owner of the business. L., S. & Co. and R., T., W. & Co., not knowing of said representations, or that the wife claimed to own the business, sold on time goods to the husband, which went into the store. Afterwards, the husband absconded and the wife gave the plaintiffs a chattel mortgage on the stock to secure the balance of their claim, and the mortgagee took possession thereunder. L., S. & Co. and R., T., W. & Co. shortly afterwards attached the goods as the property of the husband. Held, In an action by the mortgagee against the sheriff for conversion, that the representations of the husband made to the plaintiff do not estop the officer from showing that the husband was the owner of the property when the mortgage was given. Oberfelter v. Kavanaugh, 29 Neb. 427 (45 N. W. 471).

133. (1899.) Where the subject matter in dispute is the present right of possession of real property, there is no estoppel established as against plaintiffs by merely showing that during their minority their guardian received a portion of the purchase price paid for said property by the defendant and used it for the maintenance and education of such minors. Rowe v. Griffith, 57 Neb. 488 (78 N. W. 20).

Extent of estoppel.

134. (1902.) An estoppel by conduct never extends beyond the reasonable inferences to be drawn from such conduct. Hall v. Moore, 3 Unof. 574 (92 N. W. 294).

D. Pleading and Evidence.

Necessity of pleading as defense.

135. (1888.) In an action of replevin, evidence of matter in estoppel may be given and availed of as a defense under a general denial and without being pleaded specially. Towne v. Sparks, 23 Neb. 142 (36 N. W. 375).

136. (1894.) An estoppel, to be available as a cause of action or defense, must be specially pleaded. Nebraska Mortgage Loan Co. v. Van Kloster, 42 Neb. 746 (60 N. W. 1016); (1898) German Nat. Bank v. First Nat. Bank, 55 Neb. 86 (75 N. W. 531).

137. (1895.) The facts constituting an estoppel in pais must be pleaded. Erickson v. First Nat. Bank of Oakland, 44 Neb. 622 (62 N. W. 1078; 48 Am. St. Rep. 753; 28 L. R. A. 577; (1895) Scroggin v. Johnston, 45 Neb. 714 (64 N. W. 236).

138. (1896.) A party entitled to an estoppel need not in all cases formally plead the estoppel. If the facts constituting the estoppel are in any way sufficiently pleaded, he is entitled to the benefit of the law arising therefrom. City Nat. Bank of Hastings v. Thomas, 46 Neb. 861 (65 N. W. 895).

139. (1879.) If an estoppel be relied on as a defense to an action, in order to be availing it must be pleaded. Burlington & M. R. R. Co. v. Harris, 8 Neb. 140; (1894) Salladin v. Mitchell, 42 Neb. 859 (61 N. W. 127); (1898) Boales v. Ferguson, 55 Neb. 565 (76 N. W. 18); (1900) Burwell Irrigation Co. v. Lashmett, 59 Neb. 605 (81 N. W. 617); (1901) Union State Bank v. Hutton, 1 Unof. 795 (95 N. W. 1061); (1902 Carnahan v. Brewster, 2 Unof. 366 (96 N. W. 590).

140. (1898.) The facts from which an estoppel in pais arises, to be available as such, must be pleaded, at least where there is an opportunity to so plead. Henderson v. Keutzer, 56 Neb. 460 (76 N. W. 881).

Joinder with general denial.

141. (1894.) A plea of estoppel may be joined with a general denial when the averments by way of estoppel are not inconsistent with such denial. Blodgett v. McMurtry, 39 Neb. 210 (57 N. W. 985).

Sufficiency of pleading.

142. (1887.) When a defendant in an action alleges by way of answer any matter in bar of the plaintiff's action, the plaintiff may, by way of reply, allege any fact or facts not inconsistent with the facts alleged in his petition, by reason of which the defendant may be estopped to avail himself of such defense. Paxton Cattle Co. v. First National Bank, 21 Neb. 621 (33 N. W. 271; 60 Am. Rep. 852).

143. (1901.) A party who pleads facts which would, if proved, preclude the assertion by his adversary of an equitable title to, or lien upon, the property in litigation, is not entitled, under such plea, to show that the party against whom the estoppel is alleged, is precluded from asserting the rights of an unsecured creditor. Plummer, Perry & Co. v. Rohman, 62 Neb. 145 (87 N. W. 11).

Burden of proof.

144. (1906.) Where a party pleads and relies on an estoppel, the burden of proof is upon him to establish the facts upon which the estoppel is based. Parkins v. Missouri P. R. Co., 76 Neb. 242 (107 N. W. 260).

Weight and sufficiency of evidence.

145. (1896.) The evidence examined, and held to sustain the finding of the district court, that the appellants had by their conduct estopped themselves from claiming or asserting a mortgage lien upon certain chattel property. Brown v. Eno, 48 Neb. 538 (67 N. W. 434).

146. (1898.) In a suit by a bank upon a note, a wife held not estopped from interposing, as a defense, her coverture and her signing as surety. Westervelt v. Baker, 56 Neb. 63 (76 N. W. 440).

Questions for jury.

147. (1898.) An estoppel in pais well pleaded presents a question of fact, which, as such, should be submitted to the jury. Gaylord v. Nebraska Savings & Exchange Bank, 54 Neb. 104 (74 N. W. 415; 69 Am. St. Rep. 705).

Matters of common knowledge.

1. (1892.) Courts will take notice, without proof, of events which are generally known within the limits of their jurisdiction. This will include changes in the office of the chief executive and such acts of public and general interest as may be said to be conspicuous events in the history of the state. State, ex rel. Thayer, v. Boyd, 34 Neb. 435 (51 N. W. 964).

2. (1901.) In the construction of a statute, courts will take judicial notice of events which are generally known, and matters of common knowledge within the limits of their jurisdiction. Redell v. Moores, 63 Neb. 219 (88 N. W. 243; 93 Am. St. Rep. 431; 55 L. R. A. 740).

3. (1902.) The rule that a court can take judicial notice that goods are of some value, should not be extended beyond such articles of personal property as are familiar to persons generally. Punteney-Mitchell Mfg. Co. v. Northwall Co., 66 Neb. 5 (91 N. W. 863).

4. (1906.) Courts will take judicial notice of the changed conditions during the past thirty-eight years as affecting the values of real estate, and of the probability that during that time many witnesses who were of mature years and discerning judgment in the year 1865 have either died or permitted the ordinary events of that period to pass from their memory. Hawley v. Van Lanken, 75 Neb. 597 (106 N. W. 456).

5. (1906.) Courts will consider that money is always in the market and may be had upon real estate security at a reasonable rate of interest. Bahr v. Manke, 77 Neb. 552 (110 N. W. 300).

Scientific facts.

6. (1901.) Courts do not take judicial notice of the fact that the possible period of gestation exceeds ten calendar months. Erickson v. Schmill, 62 Neb. 368 (87 N. W. 166).

Intoxicating effect of liquors.

7. (1901.) Courts will take judicial notice that whiskey and beer are intoxicating. Peterson v. State, 63 Neb. 251 (88 N. W. 549); (1902) Sothman v. State, 66 Neb. 302 (92 N. W. 303).

Phenomena of animal and vegetable life.

8. (1902.) Courts will take judicial cognizance of the fact that in this latitude potatoes, sugar beets and turnips are not spontaneous products of the soil. Meyers v. Menter, 63 Neb. 427 (88 N. W. 662).

Geographical facts.

9. (1883.) Judicial notice will not be taken of the incorrectness of the government surveys of an Indian reservation, although the court as individuals, may believe it incorrect. Minkler v. State, 14 Neb. 181 (15 N. W. 330).

10. (1887.) The court will take judicial notice that Sioux county, as it existed at the time of this trial, was directly north of Cheyenne county. Ex parte Carr, 22 Neb. 535 (35 N. W. 409).

11. The court will take judicial notice of the population of a certain city and of the class to which it belongs. (1888) State, ex rel. Grosshans, v. Gray, 23 Neb. 365 (36 N. W. 577); (1893) Brown v. Lutz, 36 Neb. 527 (54 N. W. 860).

12. (1892.) The courts of this state take judicial notice of the mode of the general government of surveying public land and that there is but one meridian line in this state. Devine v. Burleson, 35 Neb. 238 (52 N. W. 1112).

13. (1895.) Courts take notice, without proof, that the Republican river is unnavigable Clark v. Cambridge & Arapahoe Irrigation & Improvement Co., 45 Neb. 798 (64 N. W. 239).

14. (1896.) The supreme court will take judicial notice of the boundaries of a judicial district and of the counties therein. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Hyatt, 48 Neb. 161 (67 N. W. 8).

15. (1899.) Courts will not take judicial notice that certain land is arid and, for agricultural purposes, requires irrigation. Slattery v. Harley, 58 Neb. 575 (79 N. W. 151).

16. (1900.) Courts of this state will take judicial notice of the fact that the city of Omaha is situated in Douglas county. Green v. Paul, 60 Neb. 7 (82 N. W. 98).

Historical facts.

17. (1900.) Courts will take judicial cognizance of the political history of the state. Porter v. Flick, 60 Neb. 773 (84 N. W. 262).

Laws of the state.

18. (1878.) The supreme court will take judicial notice of the public laws of its own state or of the absence thereof. State v. Keim, 8 Neb. 63.

19. (1895.) Courts take judicial notice of the time of passage and approval of laws. O'Conner v. State, 46 Neb. 157 (64 N. W. 719).

www.libtool.com.cn

20. (1897.) The courts will take judicial notice of a general statute. North Platte Water-Works Co. v. City of North Platte, 50 Neb. 853 (70 N. W. 393).

21. (1901.) Courts will take judicial notice of legislative enactments and of legislative records. State, ex rel. Douglas County, v. Frank, 61 Neb. 679 (85 N. W. 956).

——Incorporation of municipality.

22. (1896.) Where a city or village is incorporated by a special act of the territorial legislature, the courts will take judicial notice of such incorporation, in case the legislature has in said act declared it to be a public law. Hornberger v. State, 47 Neb. 40 (66 N. W. 23).

23. (1907.) The courts will take judicial notice of the fact that a city is an incorporated city, of the time when it was incorporated, and of the salient facts of its geography and history. Agnew v. City of Pawnee City, 79 Neb. 603 (113 N. W. 236).

Laws of the United States.

24. (1898.) The courts of this state take judicial notice of the acts of congress providing for the appointment of a deputy comptroller of the currency and defining his powers and duties. Davis' Estate v. Watkins, 56 Neb. 288 (76 N. W. 575).

Laws of other states.

25. (1876.) No court takes judicial notice of the laws of a foreign country, but they must be proven as facts. Moses v. Comstock, 4 Neb. 516.

26. (1893.) The courts of this state will not take judicial notice of the laws of other states. Scroggin v. McClelland, 37 Neb. 644 (56 N. W. 208; 40 Am. St. Rep. 520; 22 L. R. A. 110); (1902) People's Bldg., Loan & Savings Ass'n v. Backus, 2 Unof. 463 (89 N. W. 315).

Municipal ordinances.

27. (1894.) Courts will not, as a rule, take notice of municipal ordinances, unless required to do so by special charter or general law. Foley v. State, 42 Neb. 233 (60 N. W. 574).

Existence and jurisdiction of courts and court officers.

28. (1888.) In an action founded upon a judgment, alleged to have been rendered by the Boone county circuit court in the state of Indiana, it was not necessary to allege in direct terms that such court was a court of general jurisdiction, since the courts of this state would take judicial notice of the fact that the circuit courts of sister states are courts of general jurisdiction. Specklemeyer v. Dailey, 23 Neb. 101 (36 N. W. 356; 8 Am. St. Rep. 119).

29. (1901.) A court will take judicial notice of its clerk. Trimble v. State, 61 Neb. 604 (85 N. W. 844).

Terms of court.

30. (1887.) The supreme court will take judicial cognizance of the time fixed under the provisions of law for holding the regular terms of the district courts in each county of the state. Clapp v. Bauman, 22 Neb. 198 (34 N. W. 362).

Rules of court.

31. (1907.) Rules of the district court cannot be judicially noticed by the supreme court, and where any right is claimed under such rules, they must be called to the attention of the court by being embodied in the bill of exceptions. Case Threshing Machine Co. v. Meyers, 78 Neb. 685 (111 N. W. 602).

Judicial records and proceedings.

32. (1894.) A former adjudication in the federal courts in the subject matter of a controversy cannot be taken notice of in the state courts unless properly presented by the pleadings and proofs. Kilpatrick v. Kansas City & B. R. Co., 38 Neb. 620 (57 N. W. 664; 41 Am. St. Rep 741).

33. (1897.) A court takes notice of its own records, including the signatures of its officers and the dates of proceedings. Fenton v. American Jewelry Co., 51 Neb. 395 (70 N. W. 931); (1902) Zug v. Forgan, 3 Unof. 149 (90 N. W. 1129).

34. (1899.) The supreme court will not take judicial notice of the rules of practice of the district court. To be considered, such rules must be made a part of the record. Dunn v. Bozarth, 59 Neb. 244 (80 N. W. 811); (1902) Bush v. Tecumseh Nat. Bank, 64 Neb. 451 (90 N. W. 236).

35. (1900.) The district court will not take judicial notice of the contents of a brief filed by one of the litigants in the supreme court when the cause was pending on appeal or error. Bennett v. McDonald, 60 Neb. 47 (82 N. W. 110).

36. (1902.) A court will take judicial notice of its own records; and the process by which it has acquired jurisdiction need not be introduced. Stewart v. Rosengren, 66 Neb. 445 (92 N. W. 586).

37. (1905.) Courts do not take judicial notice of the existence of judgments or decrees in cases other than the then pending case, and a decree rendered in receivership proceedings is no exception to the rule. Allison v. Fidelity Mutual Fire Ins. Co., 74 Neb. 366 (104 N. W. 753).

38. (1906.) The district court may take judicial notice of the time when an action was appealed from the justice of the peace, and base instructions as to the statute of limitations thereon. Van Burg v. Van Engen, 76 Neb. 816 (107 N. W. 1006).

Official proclamations and orders.

39. (1902.) Where a statute authorizes executive officers to make general rules for the conduct of public business, and such rules are duly made and published, the courts will take judicial notice of them. Larson v. First Nat. Bank of Pender, 66 Neb. 595 (92 N. W. 729).

Notarial seal.

40. (1881.) Courts take judicial notice of the seal of a notary public, and it proves itself prima facie, by its appearance upon the certificate. Green v. Gross, 12 Neb. 117 (10 N. W. 459).

Census and election returns.

41. (1898.) Courts will take judicial notice of a United States census and its results, a school census and its results; also of an authorized election and its results, and the number of votes cast thereat. Kokes v. State, ex rel. Koupal, 55 Neb. 691 (76 N. W. 467).

Customs and usages.

42. (1902.) While the revenue act provides for the assessment for tax purposes of all property at its fair cash value, the court will take judicial notice of the fact that for general revenue purposes the standard of valuation generally prevailing is far below the actual cash value of the property assessed. State, ex rel. Bee Building Co., v. Savage, 65 Neb. 714 (91 N. W. 716).

43. (1903.) The court will take judicial notice of the fact that since the early settlements of the western portions of the state, where irrigation has been found essential to successful agriculure, a custom or practice has existed of appropriating and diverting waters from the natural channels of such waters to the soil for agricultural purposes. Whether vested rights have been acquired thereby, must depend on the facts and circumstances as disclosed in any particular case. Crawford Co. v. Hathaway, 67 Neb. 325 (93 N. W. 781; 108 Am. St. Rep. 647; 60 L. R. A. 889).

Earnings of railroads.

44. (1900.) The supreme court does not take judicial cognizance of the net earnings of railroad companies, and cannot assume, without proof, that the "Maximum Rate Law" (Session Laws 1893, ch. 24) is now, or was at the time of its enactment, confiscatory legislation. Nebraska Telephone Co. v. Cornell, 59 Neb. 737 (82 N. W. 1).

Effect of judicial notice.

45. (1899.) Facts of which the court will take judicial notice, need not be given in evidence. State, ex rel. Bankers Reserve Life Ass'n, v. Scott, 59 Neb. 499 (81 N. W. 305).

II. PRESUMPTIONS.

Presumptions as to particular matters or in particular proceedings, see particular topics.

Presumptions in appellate court, see Appeal and Error, §§ 1560-1659.

Possession of note as evidence of ownership, see Bills and Notes.

Of negligence of carrier from loss of goods, see Carriers, §§ 86-89.

Baggage check as evidence of delivery of baggage to carrier, see Carriers, § 369.

Failure to file chattel mortgage evidence of fraud, see Chattel Mortgages, § 162.

Presumption of death from absence, see Deaths, §§ 1-6.

That mayor attended council meeting, see Municipal Corporations, § 102.

Presumption that sun time is used, see Time, § 6.

Instructions as to presumptions, see Trial, §§ 439-443.

That trustee has performed duty, see Trusts, § 139.

Knowledge of contents of contract.

46. (1904.) In the absence of fraud or imposition, persons of mature years and ordinary intelligence and education are presumed to have read the contracts executed by them, or to have otherwise made themselves acquainted with their contents. Bradley & Co. v. Basta, 71 Neb. 169 (98 N. W. 697).

www.libtool.com.cn

Continuance of fact or condition.

47. (1903.) Depositions given in the same action about five years previous to the final decision, showing next of kin to be then alive, carry a presumption of their existence at the time of the verdict. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Young, 67 Neb. 568 (93 N. W. 922).

Statute governing contract.

48. (1907.) In the absence of proof to the contrary, the constitution and laws in force in this state will be presumed to have been in force at the place of the making of the contract which is in issue. Cook v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 78 Neb. 64 (110 N. W. 718).

Laws of other states.

49. (1884.) The effect of national or state homestead laws that a judgment is not a lien on a homestead of the debtor until a patent is issued will not be presumed, but must be shown affirmatively. Messick v. McCarty, 16 Neb. 704 (21 N. W. 439).

50. (1885.) In the absence of evidence to the contrary, the statutes of Pennsylvania will be presumed to be like our own. Lord v. State, 17 Neb. 526 (23 N. W. 507).

51. (1892.) In the absence of pleading and proof to the contrary the laws of another state will be presumed to be like our own. Haggin v. Haggin, 35 Neb. 375 (53 N. W. 209); (1893) Scroggin v. McClelland, 37 Neb. 644 (56 N. W. 208; 40 Am. St. Rep. 520; 22 L. R. A. 110); (1902) People's Bldg., Loan & Savings Ass'n v. Backus, 2 Unof. 463 (89 N. W. 315); (1895) Chapman v. Brewer, 43 Neb. 890 (62 N. W. 320; 47 Am. St. Rep. 779); (1895) Smith v. Mason, 44 Neb. 610 (63 N. W. 41); (1897) East Omaha Street R. Co. v. Godola, 50 Neb. 906 (70 N. W. 491); (1898) Welton v. Atkinson, 55 Neb. 674 (76 N. W. 473; 70 Am. St. Rep. 416); (1900) Schmitt & Bro. Co. v. Mahoney, 60 Neb. 20 (82 N. W. 99); (1903) Staunchfield v. Jeutter, 4 Unof. 847 (96 N. W. 642); (1907) Bannard v. Duncan, 79 Neb. 189 (112 N. W. 353).

52. (1895.) In the absence of contrary evidence, laws of other states will be presumed to be the same as ours, and such presumption applies to both statutory and common law. Stark v. Olsen, 44 Neb. 646 (63 N. W. 37).

53. (1897.) The laws of sister states will, as a rule, in the absence of proof, be presumed to be the same as our own. There are, however, to that rule recognized exceptions, among which is that courts of general jurisdiction of other states will, unless there is proof to the contrary, be presumed to possess the authority they assume to exercise and that the methods of procedure pursued by them, although differing from the established practice of this state, are authorized by the laws of the state in which they act. Council Bluffs Savings Bank v. Griswold, 50 Neb. 753 (70 N. W. 376).

Official proceedings and acts.

54, 55. (1874.) The law will presume official acts of public officers to have been rightly done, unless the circumstances of the case overturn this presumption; and acts done which presupposes the existence of other acts to make them legally operative are presumptive proof of the latter. Tierney v. Cornell, 3 Neb. 267; (1884) Seward v. Didier, 16 Neb. 58 (20 N. W. 12); (1889) Bissell v. Fletcher, 27 Neb. 582 (43 N. W. 350).

56. (1884.) The law presumes that officers having been charged with the performance of a duty have discharged that duty correctly, and such presumption continues until the contrary is shown. Hastings School District v. Caldwell, Hamilton & Co., 16 Neb. 68 (19 N. W. 470); (1885) Taylor v. Wilson, 17 Neb. 88 (22 N. W. 119); (1896) Green v. Barker, 47 Neb. 934 (66 N. W. 1032); (1898) Spiech v. Tierney, 56 Neb. 514 (76 N. W. 1090); (1901) Brown v. Helsley, 2 Unof. 69 (96 N. W. 187).

57. (1884.) The signature of the county clerk or his deputy to the jurat to an oath lawfully filed in his office is presumed to be genuine, and no proof on that point prima facie is required. Merriam v. Coffee, 16 Neb. 450 (20 N. W. 389).

58. (1899.) The law presumes that a public officer faithfully performs official duty, and that the records of his office truly represent the business transactions entered therein. Paxton v. State, 59 Neb. 460 (81 N. W. 383; 80 Am. St. Rep. 689).

59. (1901.) Taxing officers are presumed to have done their duty in the manner provided by law. Carmen v. Harris, 61 Neb. 635 (85 N. W. 848).

Judicial proceedings and records.

60. (1886.) Legal presumptions are in favor of the regularity of the proceeding of courts established by law in matters over which they have jurisdiction. Van Sant v. Butler, 19 Neb. 351 (27 N. W. 299).

61. (1886.) It is a rule of law that every presumption is in favor of the correctness of the decisions of courts of general jurisdiction until the contrary is made affirmatively to appear. Saxon v. Cain, 19 Neb. 488 (26 N. W. 385).

62. (1898.) Where the journal entry of a ruling recites that a party noted an exception to the order, it will be presumed that he was present in person or by counsel. Royal Trust Co. v. Exchange Bank, 55 Neb. 663 (76 N. W. 425).

63. (1901.) In a court of general jurisdiction jurisdictional facts and the regularity of the proceedings therein will be presumed. Parsons v. State, 61 Neb. 244 (85 N. W. 65).

64. (1901.) Where the clerk of a state court for a certain county has possession of the records of the territorial court for the same county, both courts being of the same description, it will be presumed his possession was rightful. McPherson v. Commercial Nat. Bank, 61 Neb. 695 (85 N. W. 895).

65. (1906.) When the jurisdiction of a quasi-judicial tribunal is once established, its subsequent proceedings are presumed to be regular. Lancaster County v. Whedon, 76 Neb. 753 (108 N. W. 127).

Jurisdiction.

66. (1903.) Whenever it becomes necessary to invoke the record of proceedings of an official tribunal of limited powers for the purpose of establishing a substantive right or title, it is indispensable to the success of the party relying thereupon that it be shown affirmatively that the body had acquired jurisdiction of the subject of its action. If he fails so to do, the mere lapse of time will not supply the omission. Postal v. Martin, 4 Unof. 534 (95 N. W. 8).

Conduct of business.

67. (1902.) The presumption, if any there be, that business is conducted according to sun time will not overcome the presumption in favor of the regularity of official action. Iowa Loan & Trust Co. v. Estate of Devall, 63 Neb. 826 (89 N. W. 381).

Mailing and delivery of mail matter.

68. (1895.) Whether or not a letter duly stamped and addressed reached the addressee is a question of fact for the jury. National Masonic Accident Ass'n v. Burr, 44 Neb. 256 (62 N. W. 466).

69. (1899.) A letter duly addressed, stamped, and posted is presumed to have reached the addressee in the usual course of mails, but the presumption may be overcome by proper evidence that the letter was not received. National Masonic Accident Ass'n v. Burr, 57 Neb. 437 (77 N. W. 1098).

70. (1899.) Whether a letter mailed, with postage thereon prepaid, reached its destination in the usual course of the mails is a question of fact to be determined from all the evidence adduced. National Masonic Accident Ass'n v. Burr, 57 Neb. 437 (77 N. W. 1098).

Sending and delivery of telegrams.

71. (1897.) A presumption of delivery results from the entrusting to a telegraph company for transmission of a message properly addressed, similar to that which follows from the posting of a letter for transmission by the United States mail. Perry v. German-American Bank, 53 Neb. 89 (73 N. W. 538; 68 Am. St. Rep. 593).

Failure to allege facts.

72. (1889.) Where there is a failure in an answer to state a material fact—one necessary to show that the defendant is entitled to make a certain defense—the presumption is that such fact does not exist. Cheney v. Dunlap, 27 Neb. 401 (43 N. W. 178; 5 L. R. A. 465*n*).

III. BURDEN OF PROOF.

Burden of proof as to particular matters or in particular proceedings, see specific topics.

Burden of showing error, see Appeal and Error, §§ 1568-1578.

In action against partnership, see Partnership, §§ 228, 229.

Nature and scope in general.

73. (1907.) To say that a party adversary has the burden of proof means only that he has the burden to introduce a certain quantum of proof. Beckman v. Lincoln & N. R. Co., 79 Neb. 89 (112 N. W. 348).

Party asserting facts.

74. (1883.) Where a plaintiff admits in his reply that certain real estate was assessed, but alleges that such assessment was illegal, the burden of proof is upon him to show such illegality. Towle v. Holt, 15 Neb. 221 (15 N. W. 203).

75. (1892.) The burden of proof is upon the plaintiff to establish, by a preponderance of the evidence, every material averment in the petition which is controverted by the answer. McEvoy v. Swayze, 34 Neb. 315 (51 N. W. 824).

www.libtool.com.cn

76. (1899.) The burden of proof as to new matter pleaded by way of confession and avoidance of the allegations of an adversary's pleadings is on the party setting forth such new matter. Home Fire Ins. Co. v. Johansen, 59 Neb. 349 (80 N. W. 1047).

77. (1899.) Material averments in an answer, controverted by the reply, place the burden upon the defendant. Pennsylvania Co. v. Kennard Glass & Paint Co., 59 Neb. 435 (81 N. W. 372).

78. (1900.) The burden is upon the plaintiff to prove the material allegations of the petition not admitted by a preponderance of the evidence. Chamberlain Banking House v. Woolsey, 60 Neb. 516 (83 N. W. 729).

79. (1903.) Where a material allegation in the petition is denied by the answer, the plaintiff must prove the facts alleged, by some competent evidence, and failing to do so, he cannot maintain the action. Harker v. Burbank, 68 Neb. 85 (93 N. W. 949).

Shifting of burden.

80. (1904.) The burden of sustaining the affirmative of an issue involved in an action, does not shift during the progress of the trial, but is upon the party alleging the facts constituting the issue, and remains there until the end. Rapp v. Sarpy County, 71 Neb. 382 (98 N. W. 1042); (1905) Vertrees v. Gage County, 75 Neb. 332 (106 N. W. 331).

IV. RELEVANCY, MATERIALITY AND COMPETENCY IN GENERAL.

Admissibility under issues raised by pleadings, see Pleading, §§ 476-559.

Exclusion of cumulative evidence, see Trial, § 82.

A. Facts in Issue and Relevant to Issue.

Relevancy in general.

81. (1882.) In an action for fraud in inducing a creditor of a partnership to surrender a note, and in payment of such debt to accept several other notes payable to one member of the firm, which were secured by certain alleged mortgages, testimony of one partner as to the terms of the dissolution of the firm, and as to the solvency of the certain parties involved in the transactions, is not admissible. Gehling v. Hinton, 12 Neb. 554 (11 N. W. 878).

82. (1883.) Where evidence offered at a trial can have no legitimate bearing on any matter put in issue by the pleadings, it is immaterial, and its exclusion is proper. State Historical Ass'n v. City of Lincoln, 14 Neb. 336 (15 N. W. 717).

83. (1892.) In a cause tried to a jury the admission of opinion evidence which has no legitimate bearing on any matter in issue, and which is prejudicial to the party complaining, is good ground for reversal of the judgment. Darner v. Daggett, 35 Neb. 695 (53 N. W. 608).

84. (1900.) The test of the admissibility of evidence is upon the questions asked rather than the answers returned. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Fox, 60 Neb. 531 (83 N. W. 744).

85. (1902. Whether a particular fact sought to be proved is too remote is a question that cannot be determined according to any fixed and unvarying rule. The circumstances of the particular case and the relation of the fact in question to other evidence must be taken into account. Gandy v. Estate of Bissell, 3 Unof. 47 (90 N. W. 883).

86. (1903.) Where the evidence shows conclusively that all the negotiations for the purchase of the capital stock of an insurance company contemplated all the stock, it is not error to exclude, on cross-examination, the statement of a witness, who was the vendee, as to what he would have given per share for less than all the stock. Barber v. Martin, 67 Neb. 445 (93 N. W. 722).

87. (1903.) Evidence is not to be rejected necessarily because it does not bear directly upon the issue; if it tends reasonably to establish the fact in controversy by strengthening the probabilities upon one side, and is otherwise competent, it should be received. Chamberlain v. Chamberlain Banking House, 4 Unof. 278 (93 N. W. 1021).

88. (1905.) Where a case is tried upon an agreed stipulation of facts and oral and written evidence, it is proper for the jury to consider all the evidence, even though part of it may be inconsistent with the statement of facts. Hunt v. Van Burg, 75 Neb. 304 (106 N. W. 329).

Circumstantial evidence of facts in issue.

Proof of unlawful sale of liquor by circumstantial evidence, see Intoxicating Liquors, §§ 420-424.

89. (1884.) Where a defendant is charged with the execution of a fraudulent deed, it is proper to allow him to testify to "facts and circumstances" relative to the conveyance. Union Nat. Bank v. Harrison, 16 Neb. 635 (21 N. W. 446).

www.libtool.com.cn

90. (1907.) Where there is a direct conflict in the evidence of the witnesses relating to a material issue in the case, any collateral fact or circumstance tending in any reasonable degree to establish the probability or improbability of the fact in issue is relevant evidence and proper for the consideration of the jury. Shepherd v. Lincoln Traction Co., 79 Neb. 834 (113 N. W. 627).

Value or market price of property.

91. (1901.) In proving the value of property it is improper to admit testimony of an alleged offer of a particular price for the property as tending to show its value; this is a kind of proof that could be so easily manufactured that its admission would be too dangerous to be tolerated. Stewart v. James, 1 Unof. 507 (95 N. W. 778).

92. (1902.) In proving the value of land at a particular time it is not competent to show what a witness says he was authorized to bid for the land at that time; and the fact that he claims to have been authorized to bid for a party financially responsible would not change the rule. First Nat. Bank of Harvard v. Hockett, 2 Unof. 512 (89 N. W. 412).

93. (1904.) The value of real estate cannot be shown by proof of independent sales. Union P. R. Co. v. Stanwood, 71 Neb. 158 (98 N. W. 656).

Character or reputation.

Admissibility of character evidence in false imprisonment, see False Imprisonment, § 24.

94 (1882.) Evidence of good character in civil action is inadmissible. Dunbier v. Day, 12 Neb. 596 (12 N. W. 109).

Motive and intent.

95. (1875.) Where the defense to an action on a promissory note was that the note had been given to cover an overdraft by a depositor in a bank, testimony of one of the makers, as to his understanding of the purpose and object of giving the note, is inadmissible. Lacey v. Central Nat. Bank, 4 Neb. 179.

96. (1899.) Evidence is admissible which tends to show that a person had a motive for doing an act. German-American Bank of Milwaukee v. Stickle, 59 Neb. 321 (80 N. W. 910).

97. (1902.) A pleading drawn and filed by the attorney general on behalf of the state having been introduced in evidence as an admission, it is competent for him to testify to the theory of law upon which he drew and filed the same, for the purpose of explaining it and depriving it of its apparent force. State v. Paxton, 65 Neb. 110 (90 N. W. 983).

98. (1903.) Where a person's acts are ambiguous, and the effect thereof depends upon the intention with which they were done, he may testify as to his reason for doing them. McCormick Harvesting Machine Co. v. Hiatt, 4 Unof. 587 (95 N. W. 627).

Knowledge.

99. (1904.) A paper not signed by or binding upon a party but examined and rejected by him may be used as evidence of notice of a claim made apparent thereby, when such fact is in dispute. Epley v. Lovell, 5 Unof. 251 (97 N. W. 1027).

Matters explanatory of facts in evidence or of inferences therefrom.

100. (1894.) While evidence must be confined to the issues, it is not essential that it should always bear directly upon the precise point in issue, but is admissible if it affords a reasonable inference upon that point. Lincoln Pressed Brick Co. v. Buckner, 39 Neb. 83 (57 N. W. 749).

101. (1896.) Evidence of collateral facts corroborative of the statements of parties with respect to the principal contention is confined to such transactions as shed some real light upon the question at issue. As a rule, the circumstances surrounding the parties, their relations toward each other and the subject of the controversy at the time of the transaction involved, are proper subjects of proof. Blomgren v. Anderson, 48 Neb. 240 (67 N. W. 186).

102. (1902.) Evidence is not to be rejected, necessarily, because it does not bear directly upon the issue. If it forms a link in the chain of evidence or tends reasonably to establish the fact in controversy by strengthening the probabilities on one side or weakening those upon the other, it should be received. Gandy v. Estate of Bissell, 3 Unof. 47 (90 N. W. 883).

103. (1905.) Evidence of collateral facts corroborative of the statement of one party with respect to the main issue is admissible if confined to such matters as throw light upon the question. The jury are entitled to know all the circumstances surrounding the parties with reference to the property at the time of the transaction in order that they may judge which of them is telling the truth. Farmers State Bank of Central City v. Yenney, 73 Neb. 338 (102 N. W. 617).

Facts relevant to issues erroneously stricken from pleadings.

104. (1879.) Evidence offered in support of an alleged defense, which had been erroneously held bad on demurrer to the answer, was properly rejected on the ground of irrelevancy. The error in such case lies not in the rejection of such evidence, but back of this, and in the ruling on the demurrer. Nebraska City v. Gas Co., 9 Neb. 339 (2 N. W. 870).

105. (1898.) It is not error to exclude evidence irrelevant to the issues as made up, although the court may have erroneously stricken from the pleadings averments to which such evidence would be relevant. The error in such case would be in ruling upon the pleadings and not in ruling upon the evidence. Lonergan v. Lonergan, 55 Neb. 641 (76 N. W. 16).

B. Res Gestae.

Declarations of fraudulent grantor as to validity of conveyance, see post, §§ 239-243.

Statement of livery stable keeper's agent as to condition of horse after use as res gestæ, see Livery Stable Keepers, § 6.

Relation to issues in general.

106. (1893.) A declaration, to be a part of the res gestæ, need not necessarily be coincident in point of time with the main fact proved. It is enough that the two are so clearly connected that the declaration can, in the ordinary course of affairs, be said to be a spontaneous explanation of the real cause. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Baier, 37 Neb. 235 (55 N. W. 913); (1898) City of Friend v. Burleigh, 53 Neb. 674 (74 N. W. 62); (1905) City of Lexington v. Fleharty, 74 Neb. 626 (104 N. W. 1056).

107. (1898.) A declaration, to be competent as res gestæ, must be made at such time and under such circumstances as to raise the presumption that it is the unpremeditated and spontaneous explanation of the matter about which it is made. Union P. R. Co. v. Elliott, 54 Neb. 299 (74 N. W. 627); (1903) Pledger v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 69 Neb. 456 (95 N. W. 1057).

108. (1901.) Where a defendant is prosecuted for obtaining property by falsely representing that the maker of notes given as collateral was a man of wealth, notes given by the defendant are admissible in evidence as a part of the res gestæ. West v. State, 63 Neb. 257 (88 N. W. 503).

109. (1904.) Declarations, to be admissible as a part of the res gestæ, must accompany and be so connected as to be a part of the fact or transaction in controversy, and must tend to illustrate or explain it, such fact or transaction itself also being admissible in evidence. Horst v. Lewis, 71 Neb. 370 (103 N. W. 460).

Facts forming part of transaction.

110. (1899.) The testimony of a witness describing the positions of decedent and the engine shortly after the accident which resulted in the death of the plaintiff's intestate was admissible as res gestæ. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Oyster, 58 Neb. 1 (78 N. W. 359)

Acts and statements accompanying transaction.

111. (1875.) Demand for security for an overdraft by a depositor in a bank, made long after a note had been given and where there was an overdraft still due, does not constitute a part of the res gestæ. Lacey v. Central Nat. Bank, 4 Neb. 179.

112. (1884.) In an action by B against H. for the value of a horse which B. had left at the livery stable of H. with permission to occasionally let him to proper and careful drivers, and which had been let on the 4th day of July to an improper person, was overdriven and not properly cared for from the effect of which he died on the 8th of July following, a statement made to B by the agent of H. and foreman and general manager of said livery stable, as to the condition and appearance of the horse when returned to the stable July 4th, his symptoms since that time, and at the then present time, was properly admitted in evidence on the part of the plaintiff, having been made at the same time as the depending transaction, and constituting a part of the res gestæ. Homan v. Boyce, 15 Neb. 545 (19 N. W. 590).

113. (1890.) Declarations of an agent made after the completion of the transaction to which they relate are not admissible as a part of the res gestæ. Gale Sulky Harrow Co. v. Laughlin, 31 Neb. 103 (47 N. W. 638).

114. (1891.) Where, in the course of the canvassing and electioneering to induce a sufficient number of freeholders of a certain town to become signers of a petition to the county board for an election for the issuance of bonds to be donated to a railroad company, certain representations, promises, and inducements were falsely and fraudulently made and held out by the railroad company to such freeholders, and which resulted in such freeholders becoming signers to said petition, held, that such representations, promises, and inducements, although made at a time and meeting previous to the time at which said freeholders became signers, were nevertheless a part of the res gestæ. Wullenwaber v. Dunigan, 33 Neb. 477 (50 N. W. 428).

115. (1894.) Remarks by a brakeman, made at the time of an accident concerning the length of time of a stop, are admissible as res gestæ. Omaha & R. V. R. Co. v. Chollette, 41 Neb. 578 (59 N. W. 921).

116. (1889.) Public corporations act through their officers and agents, and the declarations of such officers and agents, made during, and in relation to, the transaction of official business, are, in a proper case, admissible in evidence as a part of the res gestæ. Paxton v. State, 59 Neb. 460 (81 N. W. 383; 80 Am. St. Rep. 689).

117. (1904.) Where an infant child of a guest at a hotel is injured by an employee of the hotel who pointed a revolver at the child, in an endeavor to frighten him from a room other than that occupied by his parents, and the revolver is discharged, an admission by a servant of the hotel, made the day after the accident, that the manager of the hotel had told the servants to keep the boy out of the halls and elevator, is not admissible as part of the res gestæ. Clancy v. Barker, 71 Neb. 83 (98 N. W. 440; 69 L. R. A. 642*n*).

118. (1906.) Declarations of parties made at a meeting where resolutions of a compromise of a claim against an officer of a school district was adopted, tending to show that they were intimidated and for that reason left the meeting and refrained from voting on the resolution, are properly receivable in evidence as a part of the res gestæ. Gering v. School District, 76 Neb. 219 (107 N. W. 250).

119. (1906.) In an action for the negligent killing of an employee by a railroad company, alleged as the result of a defective condition in the engine, evidence of a declaration of the engineer in charge regarding such defective condition, made at the time, and under such circumstances as to raise the presumption that it was an unpremeditated and spontaneous explanation of the casualty, is admissible as a part of the res gestæ. Union P. R. Co. v. Edmondson, 77 Neb. 682 (110 N. W. 650).

Acts and statements of person injured.

120. (1893.) Declarations of a party to the suit, explanatory of his physical condition at the time the declarations are made, are admissible where the circumstances warrant the inference that they were made spontaneously and not with a view to their effect upon the controversy. Whether or not they fall within this rule must be left largely to the discretion of the trial court. Hewitt v. Eisenbart, 36 Neb. 794 (55 N. W. 252).

121. (1893.) Where a woman starts to alight from a railroad train at a station where she is required to change cars, the train having stopped, and she starts to get off, at the instance of the conductor, who then instructs her to wait until the train again stops, and upon the next stop, after the train has moved up a short distance, she starts to alight and is injured by being thrown under the car by a sudden lurch of the train, a declaration as to how the accident occurred made to persons who came to her assistance upon hearing her screams is so closely connected with the accident as to form a part of the res gestæ. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Baier, 37 Seb. 235 (55 N. W. 913).

122. (1898.) Where the negligence of a city causes the death of a person, and his personal representative sues such city to recover for the benefit of the widow and next of kin of the deceased damages to compensate them for the pecuniary loss they have sustained by reason of his death, the exclusion from evidence of the declaration of the deceased that his injury was the result of his own carelessness, held not prejudicial. City of Friend v. Burleigh, 53 Neb. 674 (74 N. W. 50).

123. (1898.) In an action for damages for personal injuries, evidence of plaintiff's complaints of such sufferings as would probably be caused by the injuries may be admitted. Omaha Street R. Co. v. Emminger, 57 Neb. 240 (77 N. W. 675).

124. (1903.) Upon the face of the record in this case, held, that it was not an abuse of discretion to exclude the declarations of the injured party as to the cause of his injury offered in evidence as part of the res gestæ. Pledger v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 69 Neb. 456 (95 N. W. 1057).

125. (1905.) Statements of fact, fairly indicative of a relevant bodily condition of the declarant at the time of the declaration, are admissible as evidence of the existence of such condition, although made a considerable time after the injury was received. Western Travelers' Accident Ass'n v. Munson, 73 Neb. 858 (103 N. W. 688; 1 L. R. A. [n. s.] 1068).

126. (1905.) A statement by a person who fell on an alleged defective sidewalk, made immediately upon getting up, that he was hurt, is admissible as part of the res gestæ. City of Lexington v. Fleharty, 74 Neb. 626 (104 N. W. 1056).

C. Similar Facts and Transactions.

Experience of witness at place of accident to horse, see Livery Stable Keepers, § 3.

Showing intent or motive.

127. (1903.) In an action by a stockholder against the manager of an insurance company, charging the manager, as agent, with fraudulently concealing from plaintiff the actual consideration received for plaintiff's stock, sold by him as agent, evidence of representations made to other stockholders similarly situated is admissible when such representations are so related in character and point of time as to furnish a basis for a reasonable inference as to the main issue. Barber v. Martin, 67 Neb. 445 (93 N. W. 722).

Showing value.

128. (1896.) As a general rule, the prices which goods brought at a public auction are admissible as evidence of their market value. Imhoff v. Richards, 48 Neb. 590 (67 N. W. 483).

129. (1897.) In a suit by a plumber to recover the fair and reasonable value of certain plumbing material furnished to defendant, the price charged by other plumbers for such material is irrelevant, when standing alone. Thompson v. Gaffey, 52 Neb. 317 (72 N. W. 314).

130. (1904.) When a witness as to the value of real property has testified that he has based his opinion, in part, upon his information as to prices obtained upon sales of other specifically described property in the neighborhood of that in controversy, it is error to exclude evidence of what the prices obtained at such sales actually were. Union P. R. Co. v. Stanwood, 71 Neb. 150 (91 N. W. 191). [Overruled. 71 Neb. 158.]

D. Materiality and Competency.

Admissibility of immaterial evidence in general.

131. (1895.) The admission of a party sought to be charged that, at a certain time, he had a conversation in given terms by telephone, renders immaterial the objection that independently of such admission there was no direct evidence of the scope of such conversation. Nebraska Nat. Bank v. Burke, 44 Neb. 234 (62 N. W. 452).

132. (1898.) The admission of immaterial evidence, when prejudicial, is ground for reversal. Omaha Nat. Bank v. Robinson, 56 Neb. 590 (77 N. W. 73).

Competency in general.

133. (1898.) Competent evidence bearing on the issues cannot be excluded from the jury because it may incidentally arouse their sympathies or influence their prejudices. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Palmer, 55 Neb. 559 (76 N. W. 169).

134. (1898.) The incompetency of one as a witness, or the incompetency of his evidence, must be found in express law and not based on strict or technical construction. If there is reasonable doubt, the witness and the evidence are competent. Sorensen v. Sorensen, 56 Neb. 729 (77 N. W. 68).

135. (1903.) Where plaintiff testifies having had a telephone communication with defendant on a certain date, defendant, claiming he had had only one such communication, may testify as to such a communication had on a different date, although he could not identify the voice of the person with whom he communicated as that of plaintiff. Lincoln Mill Co. v. Wissler, 4 Unof. 675 (95 N. W. 857).

135*a*. (1907.) The courts of this state are not bound by the rules of evidence adopted in another jurisdiction, but must be governed in the admission of evidence by the law prescribed by our own legislature. Malcom Savings Bank v. Cronin, 80 Neb. 228 (114 N. W. 158).

Testimony as to intent or motive.

136. (1903.) While a person's intention is to be determined primarily from his acts, where such acts are ambiguous and good faith is in issue, he may testify what his intention was. Hackney v. Raymond Bros. Clarke Co., 68 Neb. 624 (94 N. W. 822).

Testimony as to character or reputation.

137. (1887.) The general reputation of a party to an action cannot be established by the proof of specific acts. Dorsey v. Clapp, 22 Neb. 564 (35 N. W. 389).

138. (1888.) When a witness is called for the purpose of testifying to the general reputation of a party for chastity, his examination-in-chief should be confined to general reputation, and not as to what particular persons, or how many, the witness may have heard speak of the person whose reputation is sought to be attacked. Brooks v. Dutcher, 22 Neb. 644 (36 N. W. 128).

Evidence admissible by reason of admission of similar evidence by adverse party.

139. (1871.) Competent evidence may be received on behalf of one party, to rebut incompetent evidence introduced by the other party without objection. McCartny v. State, 1 Neb. 121.

140. (1871.) Incompetent evidence cannot be admitted to rebut incompetent evidence. McCartny v. State, 1 Neb. 121.

141. (1889.) The introduction of illegal evidence by one party upon a trial, and its admission by the courts, is not sufficient justification for the admission of evidence otherwise inadmissible when offered by the other party. Dodge v. Kiene, 28 Neb. 216 (44 N. W. 191).

142. (1893.) A party cannot object that a wife was permitted to testify as to what her husband told her of the contract in issue, where the objecting party, on cross-examination of the wife, called out the matters objected to. Jones Nat. Bank v. Price, 37 Neb. 291 (55 N. W. 1045).

143. (1904.) Where one party to an action has introduced letters constituting a part of a correspondence between the other party to the action and a third party, such other party is entitled to show the entire correspondence upon the same subject. Gosnell v. Webster, 70 Neb. 705 (97 N. W. 1060).

144. (1904.) Section 339 of the code only requires that the entire conversation on "the same subject" may be inquired into, or one necessary to make the other fully understood. If the conversation relates to different subjects, introducing one of them in proof does not entitle the other party to inquire as to the entire conversation on other subjects, except so far as is necessary to make the part already in fully understood. Pettis v. Green River Asphalt Co., 71 Neb. 513 (99 N. W. 235).

V. BEST AND SECONDARY EVIDENCE.

Necessity and admissibility in general.

145. (1894.) The best evidence of the facts to be proved of which the case is susceptible is required, and especially where the question at issue indicates that there is better evidence than is sought to be elicited by a question put to a witness. American Bldg. & Loan Ass'n v. Mordock, 39 Neb. 413 (58 N. W. 107).

146. (1894.) That evidence only is secondary which of itself indicates the existence of more original sources of information. Gutta Percha & Rubber Mfg. Co. v. Village of Ogallala, 40 Neb. 775 (59 N. W. 513; 42 Am. St. Rep. 696).

147. (1896.) The law requires the production of the best evidence obtainable, and if the primary evidence is lost, then secondary evidence satisfies the rule. Regier v. Shreck, 47 Neb. 667 (66 N. W. 618).

148. (1898.) An answer should be excluded when it is clear from what preceded that it would be secondary evidence, and not a matter of personal knowledge, though the question apparently calls for matter within the knowledge of the witness. Pease Piano Co. v. Cameron, 56 Neb. 561 (76 N. W. 1053).

149. (1900.) In all judicial proceedings, disputed questions of fact must be established by the best evidence attainable, and evidence cannot be received which, on its face, indicates that it is secondary and that the original source of information is in existence and accessible. Bee Publishing Co. v. World Publishing Co., 59 Neb. 713 (82 N. W. 28).

150. (1900.) The best evidence of which a case is in its nature susceptible is always admissible to prove the fact in issue. Wittenberg v. Mollyneaux, 60 Neb. 583 (83 N. W. 842).

Discretion of court.

151. (1892.) Permitting the introduction in evidence of records of deeds duly recorded, instead of requiring the originals, in ejectment trials for the purpose of proving title, rests largely in the discretion of the trial court. Rupert v. Penner, 35 Neb. 587 (53 N. W. 598; 17 L. R. A. 824*n*).

What constitutes best evidence in general.

152. (1883.) The oral declarations of the commissioners of the state, who located, surveyed, and platted the city of Lincoln, are not competent evidence to prove the purpose for which the reservation of a block was made. This could be proved only by the plat and report of the commissioners, together with the act of the legislature confirming them. State Historical Ass'n v. City of Lincoln, 14 Neb. 336 (15 N. W. 717).

153. (1883.) A statement of a sheriff that an attachment has not been levied on certain goods is not the best evidence of that fact. Harrison v. Baker, 15 Neb. 43 (14 N. W. 541).

154. (1894.) A memorandum book kept by the manager of a brick yard and containing the signature of an employee to receipts for brick received and hauled by him is not admissible to show that such employee was laboring at the time, the statements of those who saw him being the best evidence. Omaha & R. V. R. Co. v. Brady, 39 Neb. 27 (57 N. W. 767).

155. (1900.) Blue prints of architectural plans offered are not subject to the objection that they are not the best evidence. School District v. Fiske, 61 Neb. 3 (84 N. W. 401).

156. (1901.) An agreement of accord and satisfaction, which has been performed, between a county board representing the county and those having claims against the county, may be proven by parol evidence in the absence of any written record or minutes of the county board of such agreement. Green v. Lancaster County, 61 Neb. 473 (85 N. W. 439).

157. (1903.) Where the record of a deed is primary evidence, by virtue of section 13, chapter 73, Compiled Statutes, the rule that there are no degrees of secondary evidence does not apply. Staunchfield v. Jeutter, 4 Unof. 847 (96 S. W. 642).

Fact of existence of writing.

158. (1888.) The rule as to proof of written instruments and records does not preclude that of oral testimony of the existence of such instruments and records, preliminary to their introduction or proof of loss. Village of Ponca v. Crawford, 23 Neb. 662 (37 N. W. 609; 8 Am. St. Rep. 144).

Laws of other states.

159. (1905.) The unwritten law of another state may be proved by parol evidence Rieck v. Griffen, 74 Neb. 102 (103 N. W 1061).

160. (1907.) The statute and constitution of another state or territory cannot be proved by parol, under the provisions of section 396 of the code. Cook v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 78 Neb. 64 (110 N. W. 718).

Municipal ordinances.

161. (1898.) Where a party desires to prove the existence of an ordinance of a city of the metropolitan class he may pursue the method pointed out by section 124 of the code, or he may resort to the common law method of proof. Johnson v. Finley, 54 Neb. 733 (74 N. W. 1080).

Ownership of property.

162. (1899.) It is competent to prove the ownership of a store building by parol evidence when it does not appear that such building is real estate. Knights v. State, 58 Neb. 225 (78 N. W. 508; 76 Am. St. Rep 78).

Existence and contents of records.

163. (1891.) Where papers in a case have been lost, as the license to sell real estate, proof that such license or other papers actually existed at the time of the sale may be shown by parol or other secondary evidence. Keller v. Amos, 31 Neb. 438 (48 N. W. 59).

164. (1896.) Where the files of a case have been lost,—such as papers in an attachment proceeding,—that such papers existed, and their contents, may be proved by parol, the proper foundation having been laid for the introduction of secondary evidence Regier v. Shreck, 47 Neb. 667 (66 N. W 618).

165. (1896.) A certified transcript of the record of a deed may, under section 13, chapter 73, Compiled Statutes, be read in evidence when the original is lost or not within the control of the party offering the proof Thams v. Sharp, 49 Neb. 237 (68 N. W. 474)

Contents of by-laws of corporation.

166. (1894.) In an action against a building and loan association to recover payments on shares of stock, parol evidence of the contents of the by-laws of the association is not admissible. American Bldg. & Loan Ass'n v. Mordock, 39 Neb. 413 (58 N. W. 107).

Contents of notices.

167. (1890.) Testimony as to the contents of a publication of a notice is inadmissible since it is not the best evidence. Salisbury v. Iddings, 29 Neb. 736 (46 N. W. 267)

Deeds and conveyances.

See, also, Deeds, IV.

168. (1888.) The question of permitting the introduction of records to prove the title of the plaintiff in an action for injury to crops and to the land itself, instead of requiring the production of the original evidence of title, rests to a great extent in the discretion of the trial court, and unless there is a clear abuse of that discretion error will not lie. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Marley, 25 Neb. 138 (40 N. W. 948; 13 Am. St. Rep. 482).

169. (1889.) Under the provisions of section 13 of chapter 73, Compiled Statutes 1887, the record of a deed duly recorded, or a transcript thereof duly certified, may be read in evidence with like force and effect as the original deed whenever, by the party's oath or otherwise, the original is known to be lost, or not belonging to the party seeking to use it, nor within his control; and therefore, in an action in ejectment, where the defendant seeks to prove title in a stranger as a defense, and it sufficiently appears that the original deed does not belong to him, a copy of the record will be competent evidence in the first instance, without proof of the loss of the original, or that it is not under the control of the party seeking to use it. Buck v. Gage, 27 Neb. 306 (43 N. W. 110).

170. (1903.) The record of a deed may be shown without inquiry as to the original whenever the evidence as a whole fairly indicates that the original is not in the possession or under the control of the party offering such proof. Staunchfield v. Jeutter, 4 Unof. 847 (96 N. W. 642).

Contents of private memoranda and writings.

171. (1896.) In an action on a subscription contract, parol evidence may be admitted to prove the contents of the subscription book after proof of its loss, though similar books not offered in evidence are in existence. Rawlings v. Young Men's Christian Ass'n, 48 Neb. 216 (66 N. W. 1124).

172. (1896.) An objection to a question calling for the contents of books, held properly sustained. Columbia Nat. Bank v. Rice & Co., 48 Neb. 428 (67 N. W. 165).

173. (1898.) In absence of fraud, mistake, or ambiguity the writing signed by the parties constitutes the best and only competent evidence of the contract originally made. State Bank of Ceresco v. Belk, 56 Neb. 710 (77 N. W. 58).

174. (1901.) A writing is the best evidence of what it contains. Peterson v. State, 63 Neb. 251 (88 N. W. 549).

175. (1904.) Where the question in issue was whether or not drafts had been paid for when issued, it is incompetent for an accountant, who had examined the books of the bank, to testify as to what the books showed in that regard. The books themselves are the best evidence. Mendel v. Boyd, 71 Neb. 657 (99 N. W. 493).

176. (1904.) An acknowledgment, by a husband and wife, of an instrument conveying a homestead, or placing an incumbrance thereon, should appear from the instrument itself in the form of a certificate of the officer before whom the acknowledgment was taken, and, in the absence of such certificate, it is not competent to show by parol that the instrument was in fact acknowledged. Bolt v. Anderson, 71 Neb. 826 (99 N. W. 678).

Preliminaries to admission of secondary evidence.

——— Proof as to existence or availability of primary evidence.

177. (1877.) To establish the existence of a grade for a street in a city the records and files pertaining thereto should be produced; and unless these be shown to be either lost or destroyed, secondary evidence will not be received. Nebraska City v. Lampkins, 6 Neb. 27.

178. (1878.) Where defendant offered parol testimony as to the contents of certain letters, proof that the agent of plaintiff produced the letters in another case, leaving them in the court where that trial took place, and never saw them afterward, and testimony of the judge of that court that the letters were produced in that trial, and that they were not returned to the witness, and that he had examined the files in the case and could not find the letters, was sufficient proof to let in the secondary evidence. Russell v. Wohlers, 7 Neb. 466.

179. (1880.) A letter-press copy of a letter cannot be read in evidence without first proof of the loss or non-possession of the original. Delaney v. Errickson, 10 Neb. 492 (6 N. W. 600; 35 Am. St. Rep. 487); (1883) Ward v. Beals, 14 Neb. 114 (15 N. W. 353); (1898) Westinghouse Co. v. Tilden, 56 Neb. 129 (76 N. W. 416).

180. (1883.) Where a paper is shown to have been destroyed, it is not necessary to prove that it has been searched for as a foundation for the introduction of parol testimony of its contents. Hawley v. Robeson, 14 Neb. 435 (16 N. W. 438).

181. (1884.) On the question whether there is sufficient proof of the loss of a letter to render admissible secondary evidence of its contents, a wide discretion is left to the trial court. Hapgood Plow Co. v. Martin, 16 Neb. 27 (19 N. W. 512).

182. (1886.) Where it is sought to prove by a member of a law firm after its dissolution that he has made search for certain instruments sent to the firm and that he cannot find them, in order to admit secondary evidence of their contents it must be made to appear that he retained the possession of the same, and that search was made in such places as the instruments, if in existence, in all probability would be found. Post v. School District No. 10, 19 Neb. 135 (26 N. W. 911).

183. (1886.) Before secondary evidence is admissible to prove the existence of contents of a paper claimed to have been attached to and a part of the files of a case in court, it must appear that diligent search has been made in the proper office for such paper, and that it is lost or destroyed and cannot be found. Murphy v. Lyons, 19 Neb. 689 (28 N. W. 328).

184. (1888.) In an action in ejectment it was stipulated between the parties that certified copies of the record of deeds should be used in evidence without proof of the loss of the originals, and that such copies contained all that the originals contained. Plaintiff offered in evidence a certified copy of a deed executed by the Lincoln Land Association, a corporation, which was objected to for the reason that the copy did not show that the original deed was under the seal of the corporation, that is, that no impression of the seal was thereon. The objection was overruled, and the copy admitted. Held, Correct, it being recited in the deed that the seal of the corporation was thereto affixed. Colvin v. Republican Valley Land Ass'n, 23 Neb. 75 (36 N. W. 361; 8 Am. St. Rep. 114).

185. (1888.) Proof of the contents of certain letters is not admissible without showing a loss or destruction of such letters. McClure v. Campbell, 25 Neb. 57 (40 N. W. 595).

186. (1890.) Before a copy of a letter is introduced in evidence, over objection, it should be shown that the original cannot be produced. Watson v. Roode, 30 Neb. 264 (46 N. W. 491).

187. (1890.) Before the contents of a written instrument can be established by oral testimony, the loss of the instrument must be accounted for. Meyers v. Bealer, 30 Neb. 280 (46 N. W. 479); (1896) Dempster Mill Mfg. Co. v. First Nat. Bank of Holdrege, 49 Neb. 321 (68 N. W. 477).

188. (1890.) Where the order of allowance to a bill of exceptions made by the trial judge has become detached and lost after the bill was filed in the trial court, but before its filing in the supreme court, a certificate of the clerk of the district court that the bill, together with the order, was filed in his office, that by some means unknown they became separated, and that he has made diligent and ineffectual search for the order, is sufficient to admit secondary evidence of the contents of the order. Warren v. Brown, 31 Neb. 8 (47 N. W. 633).

189. (1892.) One who has assisted in searching in the office of the county clerk, under the direction of the latter, for a deed left therein for record is a competent witness to prove the loss of such deed in order to lay a foundation for secondary evidence thereof. It is not necessary in such case to call the clerk in order to establish the loss of the deed prima facie. Buchanan v. Wise, 34 Neb. 695 (52 N. W. 163).

190. (1894.) One who has made an examination of the office or books where a record should be found, and shows sufficient knowledge of the subject, is competent to testify to the non-existence of the record. Gutta Percha & Rubber Mfg. Co. v. Village of Ogallala, 40 Neb. 775 (59 N. W. 513; 42 Am. St. Rep. 696).

191. (1894.) Proof that the charter of an association has been destroyed by fire is sufficient to authorize testimony of the secretary of such association as to its contents. Phenix Ins. Co. v. Rad Bila Hora Lodge, 41 Neb. 21 (59 N. W. 752).

192. (1895.) Courts have not attempted to define the precise degree of diligence essential in attempting to procure the primary evidence of a material fact in order to establish the foundation for secondary evidence. But it is sufficient, as a rule, if the party offering such proof has exhausted all the sources and means of discovery which the nature of the case would suggest, and which are accessible to him. Balduin v. Burt, 43 Neb. 245 (61 N. W. 601).

193. (1895.) Evidence examined, and held that a sufficient foundation had been established for the admission of secondary evidence of the mortgage alleged in petition. Baldwin v. Burt, 43 Neb. 245 (61 N. W. 601).

194. (1895.) The existence of a record must be proved by its production or by an authenticated copy. The non-existence of a record may be proved by the oath of any one who has made a search therefor. Smith v. First Nat. Bank of Chadron, 45 Neb. 444 (63 N. W. 796).

195. (1896.) In an action to set aside a sale of a stock of goods as fraudulent, the admission of parol testimony as to the bill of sale is erroneous, where the absence of the bill itself is not accounted for. Dempster Mill Mfg. Co. v. First Nat. Bank of Holdrege, 49 Neb. 321 (68 N. W. 477).

196. (1901.) Before secondary evidence can be introduced as to the contents of a private instrument, there must be some evidence that the paper once existed and that a bona fide and diligent search has been unsuccessfully made for it in the place where it is most likely to be found. Samuelson v. Gale Mfg. Co., 1 Unof. 815 (95 N. W. 809).

197. (1901.) Before the contents of a lost letter can be introduced in evidence there must be testimony of its loss and also testimony tending to prove the handwriting, or that it came from the alleged writer or his authorized agent, or was received in due course of mail in answer to letters previously mailed to the address of the alleged writer. Whitwell v. Johnson, 2 Unof. 66 (96 N. W. 272).

198. (1901.) Evidence examined, and held not to be sufficient identification to permit the contents of the letter to be received in evidence. Whitwell v. Johnson, 2 Unof. 66 (96 N. W. 272).

199. (1903.) When the loss or destruction of a written instrument is shown, secondary evidence of its contents is admissible. Larson v. Cox, 68 Neb. 44 (93 N. W. 1011).

200. (1903.) Ordinarily, to justify the reception of a copy of a private writing in evidence, it must appear that it is a true copy of some writing, admissible in evidence, which has been lost or destroyed, or which is in the possession of the adverse party, who refuses to produce it on due notice. Peycke v. Shinn, 68 Neb. 343 (94 N. W. 135).

——— Demand or notice to produce primary evidence.

201. (1877.) Where a defense to an action on a promissory note is a breach of a warranty in the sale of a threshing machine, and such written warranty was left with the plaintiff, the defendants cannot introduce parol evidence to show what the contract was, without first taking the necessary steps to require plaintiff to produce the written contract. Birdsall v. Carter, 5 Neb. 517.

202. (1890.) While the better practice is to serve notice on adverse party to produce private writings in his possession before evidence can be given of their contents, notice may be dispensed with on proof that such party has stated that the writings are lost. Barmby v. Plummer, 29 Neb. 64 (45 N. W. 277).

VI. DEMONSTRATIVE EVIDENCE.

Examination of person of injured party out of court, see Damages, §§ 142-146.

View by jury, see Trial, §§ 55-60, 683, 684.

In general.

203. (1904.) It is not error to permit the plaintiff, although crippled, to walk to the witness stand in the presence of the jury. City of Minden v. Vedene, 72 Neb. 657 (101 N. W. 330).

Exhibition of person to jury.

204. (1898.) In an action for personal injuries the right of plaintiff to exhibit an injured limb should not be denied on the ground that she is young, handsome, and attractive, and consequently that the sympathies of a jury composed of men would be unduly excited in her behalf. Omaha Street R. Co. v. Emminger, 57 Neb. 240 (77 N. W. 675).

205. (1902.) In an action for personal injuries it is not error to permit the plaintiff to exhibit the injured member to the jury after the introduction of evidence to the effect that it was permanently injured as and in the manner alleged in the petition, and that its condition at the time exhibited was wholly due to such injury. City of Crete v. Hendricks, 2 Unof. 847 (90 N. W. 215).

206. (1904.) In an action for personal injury it is not error to permit plaintiff to exhibit his injured limb to the jury. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Krayenbuhl, 70 Neb. 766 (98 N. W. 44).

207. (1904.) Although a plaintiff in an action to recover damages for personal injuries may be permitted to show his wounds and contusions to the jury, it may be reversible error to permit a dramatic exhibition by him in the presence of the jury as a demonstration of the extent of his physical disabilities. Felsch v. Babb, 72 Neb. 736 (101 N. W. 1011).

Experiments.

208. (1903.) Proof of an experiment, without establishing the fact that the person who made the experiment is competent to do so, and that the apparatus used was of the kind and in a condition suitable for the experiment, and that it was honestly and fairly made, is without probative force. Omaha Street R. Co. v. Larson, 70 Neb. 591 (97 N. W. 824).

Writings submitted for comparison.

209. (1881.) Defendant having denied the genuineness of the promissory note on which the action was brought, called his son as a witness, who testified in chief that certain words in the note which his father actually gave were written by himself. On cross-examination he was required to write the same words in the presence of the jury, for their inspection and comparison with the note in controversy. Held, Competent evidence and cross-examination. Huff v. Nims, 11 Neb. 363 (9 N. W. 548).

210. (1890.) Under section 344 of the code, school orders drawn by a party as treasurer are admissible to afford comparison of handwriting with the signature of a note which he denies having executed. Grand Island Banking Co. v. Shoemaker, 31 Neb. 124 (47 N. W. 696).

211. (1896.) Under section 344 of the code, the genuineness of handwriting may be determined by comparing the disputed writing with that proved to be genuine. Such genuine writings upon proof should be admitted in evidence for the purpose of permitting the jury as well as experts to make the necessary comparison. First Nat. Bank of Madison v. Carson, 48 Neb. 763 (67 N. W. 779).

212. (1901.) If writings offered as evidence of handwriting are admitted by a party to be his, but he claims that their form is the result of duress or fraud, the proper course is to show such fact for the purpose of affecting their weight. Schmuck v. Hill, 2 Unof. 79 (96 N. W. 158).

VII. ADMISSIONS.

A. Nature and Incidents in General.

Pleadings.

213. (1886.) When a cause is being tried upon an issue formed by an amended petition, answer, and reply, the original petition, if inconsistent with the amended petition, is competent evidence for the purpose of proving admissions inconsistent with the claim and testimony of plaintiff upon trial. Bunz v. Cornelius, 19 Neb. 197 (26 N. W. 621).

214. (1896.) No proper foundation having been laid for its introduction, a bill of particulars filed in a justice court is properly excluded, in an action by an agent for compensation for selling a threshing machine, which instrument showed plaintiff claimed less than in the present trial. Aultman v. Martin, 49 Neb. 103 (68 N. W. 340).

215. (1899.) Admissions made by a litigant in his pleading in a suit are competent evidence against those who subsequently come into the suit as his successors in interest to the matter in litigation. Miller v. Nicodemus, 58 Neb. 352 (78 N. W. 618).

216. (1899.) When a litigant files an amended pleading, the averments of which are inconsistent with the averments of his original pleading, the original is evidence in the case as an admission of the litigant contrary to his claim in the amended pleading but is not conclusive. Miller v. Nicodemus, 58 Neb. 352 (78 N. W. 618).

217. (1899.) Pleadings may be received in evidence in suits, other than those in which they were filed, as admissions or declarations against interest. Paxton v. State, 59 Neb. 460 (81 N. W. 383; 80 Am. St. Rep. 689).

218. (1899.) Pleadings, when not signed or verified by the party himself, are received in evidence only upon actual or presumptive proof that the admissions which they contain were either made by his direction or were afterwards sanctioned by him. Paxton v. State, 59 Neb. 460 (81 N. W. 383; 80 Am. St. Rep. 689).

219. (1900.) Pleadings may be introduced as evidence in actions other than those wherein they were filed, as admissions against interest. Paxton v. State, 60 Neb. 763 (84 N. W. 254).

220. (1903.) It is not reversible error to refuse to allow a defendant to introduce in evidence plaintiff's original petition, where there is no substantial difference in the statement of the facts contained therein, and in the one on which the suit is tried. School District of Omaha v. McDonald, 68 Neb. 610 (94 N. W. 829).

221. (1904.) A plea of guilty entered by the defendant in a criminal action may be used against him as an admission that he committed the acts charged against him, in any subsequent action to which he is a party and which involves the same subject matter. Wisnieski v. Vanek, 5 Unof. 512 (99 N. W. 258).

222. (1905.) An admission made in a pleading by either plaintiff or defendant may be proved by the pleading itself, although the pleading is subsequently discarded and an amended pleading filed. New Omaha Thomson-Houston Electric Light Co. v. Rombold, 73 Neb. 259 (102 N. W. 475; 106 N. W. 213).

Testimony at former trial.

See, also, Witnesses, §§ 396-399.

223. (1894.) The testimony of a witness in an action to which he was not a party may be proved in a subsequent action to which he is a party as an admission, but the fact of his having been a witness in such other action does not operate to estop him by the record thereof. German Nat. Bank of Hastings v. Leonard, 40 Neb. 676 (59 N. W. 107).

Offer of compromise and settlement.

See, also, Compromise and Settlement, §§ 39-47.

224. (1888.) In an action for the alleged conversion of mortgaged property, where the point in issue is as to the identity of the property taken by defendant with that covered by plaintiff's chattel mortgage, the fact that defendant took under consideration plaintiff's offer of compromise, without denying the identity of the property, is not an admission of such identity, and hence the offer and letters in response thereto are not admissible in evidence to prove such admission. Kierstead v. Brown, 23 Neb. 595 (37 N. W. 471).

225. (1888.) Letters written by defendant in response to plaintiff's proposal for a compromise of a disputed claim are not admissible as an admission. Kierstead v. Brown, 23 Neb. 595 (37 N. W. 471).

B. By parties or Others Interested in Event.

See, also, Witnesses, IV, C.

Admissibility in general.

226. (1879.) Oral declarations of a cashier of a bank, made subsequent to a conveyance of certain lands to him, are incompetent as evidence in an action against him to establish a trust to the lands. Merchants Bank v. McConiga, 8 Neb. 245.

227. (1886.) The statements or admissions of a party to a suit can be proved against him only when such statements or admissions are so connected with the main transactions involved in the litigation as to be material to the issue or issues in the case. Hooper v. Browning, 19 Neb. 420 (27 N. W. 419).

228. (1886.) The admissions of a party to an action can be proved against him when they are so connected with the main transactions involved in the litigation as to be material to the issue. Cummings v. Winters, 19 Neb. 719 (28 N. W. 302).

229. (1894.) Book entries, made by a party in the regular course of his business, are admissible in evidence on behalf of the adverse party when in the nature of admissions. German Nat. Bank of Hastings v. Leonard, 40 Neb. 676 (59 N. W. 107).

230. (1898.) Ordinarily, declarations against interest made by a party to a suit, or by one through whom he has derived title to the thing in controversy, are admissible as evidence against him; but one who has purchased property cannot be affected by statements made in relation thereto by his vendor after the latter had parted with his title and possession. Zobel v. Bauersachs, 55 Neb. 20 (75 N. W. 43).

231. (1898.) Admissions of a party against interest are receivable in evidence against him. Maul v. Drexel, 55 Neb. 446 (76 N. W. 163).

232. (1901.) Statements of parties directly relating to the issues are admissible on behalf of the opposing party as independent testimony. Carlson & Hanson v. Holm, 2 Unof. 38 (95 N. W. 1125).

233. (1902.) In a suit against a bank, book entries made by its officers or bookkeeper in the regular course of business are competent evidence as admissions against interest. Globe Savings Bank v. Bank of Commerce, 64 Neb. 413 (89 N. W. 1030).

C. By Grantors, Former Owners or Privies. Disparagement of title in general.

234. (1888.) In no case can admissions made by a vendor after he has parted with his title, and not connected with the transaction, be admissible against his vendee. Rogers v. Thurston, 24 Neb. 326 (38 N. W. 834).

235. (1889.) The declaration of one from whom a party obtains title to property, made after the transfer of title, and in derogation thereof, is inadmissible for the purpose of defeating such title. But where the vendor, being examined as a witness to prove a sale, was asked, on his cross-examination, whether he had not, at a time subsequent to the alleged sale, offered to sell the same property, as the owner thereof, to another, which he denied, it was held legitimate, for the purpose of impeachment only, to call other witnesses to prove the fact. Williams v. Eikenberry, 25 Neb. 721 (41 N. W. 770; 13 Am. St. Rep. 517).

236. (1890.) Statements of a mortgagor of personalty, made as to the latter after it had passed out of his possession, are not admissible against mortgagee. Farmers Loan & Trust Co. v. Montgomery, 30 Neb. 33 (46 N. W. 214).

237. (1895.) The declarations of a former owner of land are not admissible as against those claiming under him when made after he has conveyed the land. Consolidated Tank Line Co. v. Pien, 44 Neb. 887 (62 N. W. 1112).

238. (1898.) After conveyance of property, declarations of seller in disparagement of the buyer's title are not admissible in evidence, but an exception to the rule arises where the conveyance is assailed as fraudulent. Kyd v. Cook, 56 Neb. 71 (76 N. W. 524; 71 Am. St. Rep. 661).

Nature and validity of conveyance.

239. (1888.) Declarations of the seller tending to show that the sale was not bona fide, made after the sale was made and the purchaser took possession, are not admissible. Campbell v. Holland, 22 Neb. 587 (35 N. W. 871).

240. Declarations of a mortgagor of chattels as to his intent in making the mortgage, if made while the mortgagor remains in possession of the property, are admissible as part of the res gestæ. (1889) White v. Woodruff, 25 Neb. 797 (41 N. W. 785); (1892) Cunningham v. Fuller, 35 Neb. 58 (52 N. W. 836); (1894) McDonald v. Bowman, 40 Neb. 269 (58 N. W. 704).

241. (1890.) While the general rule is that the declarations of a party made after he has parted with his interest in the subject matter of the litigation cannot be received to disparage the right or title of one who acquired the same in good faith before such declarations were made, yet this rule does not apply to transfers of property made for the purpose of defrauding creditors. In such case, the fraudulent character of the transfer being proved, the declarations and acts of the vendor, made shortly after the alleged transfer, and before the rights of innocent parties intervened, may be shown as circumstances in corroboration, where transfer is fraudulent. Smith v. Boyer, 29 Neb. 76 (45 N. W. 265; 26 Am. St. Rep. 373). [Rehearing. 35 Neb. 46.]

242. (1894.) Declarations of a mortgagor of chattels, made after the execution of the mortgage, are admissible in an action between the mortgagee and creditors of the mortgagor for the purpose of establishing a fraudulent intent on the part of the mortgagor. McDonald v. Bowman, 40 Neb. 269 (58 N. W. 704).

243. (1898.) Declarations of the seller which tend to disparage the buyer's title, if the seller is in possession, are admissible as res gestæ. If not in possession, the declarations are admissible as tending to establish the intent with which he made the conveyance, but not for the purpose of disparaging the vendee's title. Kyd v. Cook, 56 Neb. 71 (76 N. W. 524; 71 Am. St. Rep. 661).

Location of boundaries.

244. (1895.) In an action of ejectment admissions of defendant's grantor, that he knew a certain fence was not on the line, is not admissible against defendant. Consolidated Tank Line Co. v. Pien, 44 Neb. 887 (62 N. W. 1112).

D. By Agent or Other Representative.

Admissions constituting part of res gestæ, see ante, §§ 111-119.

Agents or employees.

See, also, Principal and Agent, §§ 12-20.

245. (1890.) Where an agent had in his possession a chattel mortgage on certain cattle, and was, as the agent of the mortgagee, making investigations with a view of foreclosing the mortgage upon certain cattle then being shipped by the mortgagor to other parties, and expressed the opinion that the cattle to be shipped were the same cattle described in the mortgage; and in a subsequent action brought by a third party against the mortgagee for the possession of other cattle claimed by the mortgagee to be the cattle described in said mortgage, held, that such expression of opinion by the agent was not admissible in evidence against his principal. Wood River Bank v. Kelley, 29 Neb. 590 (46 N. W. 86).

246. (1892.) Statements of an agent with authority to collect rents and care for the property of his principal will not be received in disparagement of the title of the latter so as to work an estoppel in favor of one who purchased from a stranger claiming adversely to such principal. Bowman v. Griffith, 35 Neb. 331 (53 N. W. 140).

247. (1893.) In a case where a bank sues the makers of a note indorsed to it by the secretary of the payee, a corporation, the declarations of officers of such corporation, made after the transfer to the bank, are inadmissible, for the purpose of showing want of authority in the secretary to make the transfer. Commercial Nat. Bank of St. Paul v. Brill, 37 Neb. 626 (56 N. W. 382).

248. (1896.) The testimony on another trial of an officer of a corporation with relation to previous corporate acts cannot be proved as an admission binding upon the corporation. Columbia Nat. Bank v. Rice, 43 Neb. 428 (67 N. W. 165).

249. (1898.) Statements of an agent acting within his authority when made concerning the business in hand at the time of the transaction, are admissible in evidence against his principal; but such statements, when made subsequent to the transaction, not connected therewith, and not specially authorized by his principal, cannot be received in evidence against the latter. Union Life Ins. Co. v. Haman, 54 Neb. 599 (74 N. W. 1090).

——— To prove agency.

250. (1895.) Agency cannot be proved by the acts or declarations of the alleged agent not brought home to the principal. Richardson & Boynton Co. v. School District No. 11, 45 Neb. 777 (64 N. W. 218); (1896) Anheuser-Busch Brewing Ass'n v. Murray, 47 Neb. 627 (66 N. W. 635).

Husband or wife.

251. (1891.) Where the proof fails to show that the wife of the person in possession of a farm had authority to control the business in the absence of her husband, the admissions of such wife in regard to the business of the farm cannot be received, and an instruction submitting them to the jury is erroneous. Norfolk Nat. Bank v. Wood, 33 Neb. 113 (49 N. W. 958).

Conspirators and persons acting together.

252. (1887.) Where the cause of action, or ground of defense, is based upon a conspiracy by two or more persons to perpetuate a fraud, the acts and declarations of one of such company of conspirators in regard to the common design as affecting his fellows —a foundation having been laid by proof sufficient in the opinion of the court to establish prima facie the fact of conspiracy between the parties, or proper to be laid before the jury, as tending to establish such fact— in pursuance of the original concerted plan, and with reference to the common object, may be given in evidence. Brown v. Herr, 21 Neb. 113 (31 N. W. 246).

253. (1894.) Where testimony tends to prove conspiracy to defraud creditors, declarations of one of the parties to it, in disparagement of his title, are admissible in action of replevin by him against sheriff. Altschuler v. Coburn, 38 Neb. 881 (57 N. W. 836).

254. (1894.) Acts and declarations of conspirators which are parts of the res gestæ, and, therefore, admissible against their co-conspirators, include those only which are done and made during the pendency of the conspiracy and in furtherance of its objects. Stratton v. Oldfield, 41 Neb. 702 (60 N. W. 82).

255. (1902.) Statements of one of the parties to a joint enterprise, made while borrowing money to be used, and which was used in such enterprise, are admissible against the other parties thereto so far as they form a part of the transaction. Baker v. Union Stock Yards Nat. Bank, 63 Neb. 801 (89 N. W. 269; 93 Am. St. Rep. 484).

E. Proof and Effect.

Laying foundation for impeachment of testimony of party.

256. (1891.) The admissions or statements of a party to a suit against his interest upon a material matter, may be proved without laying the foundation required in case of impeaching a disinterested witness. Bartlett v. Cheesebrough, 32 Neb. 339 (49 N. W. 360); (1899) Churchill v. White, 58 Neb. 22 (78 N. W. 369; 76 Am. St. Rep. 64).

Construction.

257. (1898.) An admission by one of the parties, of the existence of a judgment which it was incumbent on his adversary to prove, held to imply that such judgment was valid. McCurdy v. Ryan, 56 Neb. 511 (76 N. W. 1079).

258. (1901.) An admission, when tax receipts are offered in evidence, "that the taxes described in the receipts were duly levied and assessed" is an admission that the assessments were made at the dates mentioned in the receipts. National Life Ins. Co. v. Butler, 61 Neb. 449 (85 N. W. 437; 87 Am. St. Rep. 462).

VIII. Declarations.

Declarations of brakeman as to injury of passenger, see Carriers, § 258.

Declarations to prove agency, see Principal and Agent, §§ 12-20.

Discretion of court.

260. (1903.) The admission or exclusion of declarations rests largely in the discretion of the trial court; such discretion is not an absolute discretion to be exercised arbitrarily, but a legal discretion, the abuse of which constitutes reversible error. Pledger v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 69 Neb. 456 (95 N. W. 1057).

Part of conversation.

261. (1893.) Where a person is called in by the parties to the contract as a witness to the bargain, and the conversation had in his presence is partly in English and partly in German, he not understanding the latter language, he may testify as to the portion which he understood, the rule that a person must give the whole of a conversation, and not a part, not applying. Roberson v. Reiter, 38 Neb. 198 (56 N. W. 877).

Self-serving declarations.

262. (1890.) The petition in the case on trial is not admissible in evidence, and one cannot take advantage of an oath thereon without himself being subject to a cross-examination. Johnson v. First Nat. Bank, 28 Neb. 792 (45 N. W. 161).

263. (1897.) An answer verified on belief is not substantive evidence of the allegations of facts therein set forth, and is not admissible as such in favor of the pleading party. If so received in evidence, and it is the only evidence on which a judgment in the cause is based, the judgment will be reversed as not sustained by the evidence. Bourke v. Falck, 52 Neb. 768 (53 N. W. 223).

264. (1898.) A party's own pleading in a cause is not substantive evidence in his own favor of the facts therein alleged. Stewart v. Demming, 54 Neb. 7 (74 N. W. 265).

265. (1899.) A pleading is not competent evidence, in favor of the party whose pleading it is, of the facts averred therein. Green v. Morse, 57 Neb. 391 (77 N. W. 925; 73 Am. St. Rep. 761).

266. (1905.) The admission of the testimony of the wife as to communications made to her by her husband in his last sickness, held not prejudicial error under the circumstances disclosed by the record in this case. Western Travelers' Accident Ass'n v. Munson, 73 Neb. 858 (103 N. W. 688; 1 L. R. A. [n. s.] 1068).

Declarations of person in possession of property.

267. (1892.) The declarations of a person in the possession of property, as to his title, are admissible evidence against him and all persons claiming under him. Cunningham v. Fuller, 35 Neb. 58 (52 N. W. 836).

268. (1898.) Where the bona fides of a transfer is assailed by creditors of transferor, his subsequent statements in relation to the transaction may be admitted on the issue of intent and to show the reason of his retention of possession of the property after the conveyance. Armagost v. Rising, 54 Neb. 763 (75 N. W. 534).

Declarations against interest.

See, also, Witnesses, IV, D.

269. (1902.) Statements made by a party to a suit, to a third person, may be received in evidence against him, and are not open to the objection that they are hearsay evidence. Allen v. Hall, 64 Neb. 256 (89 N. W. 803).

270. (1907.) A statement made by a party or his privy, suggesting any inference as to any fact in issue, or relevant fact unfavorable to the conclusion contended for by such party, is relevant, and should be permitted to go to the jury. Ogden v. Sovereign Camp, Woodmen of the World, 78 Neb. 806 (113 N. W. 524).

271. (1907.) The admissions and declarations of a party to an action against his own interest, upon a material matter, are admissible against him as original evidence, and, where he is examined as a witness in his own behalf, it is unnecessary to lay a foundation for the admission of such evidence by cross-examination. Young v. Kinney, 79 Neb. 421 (112 N. W. 558).

272. (1898.) It is not error to exclude a declaration of a deceased person to the effect that the injury was the result of his own carelessness in an action for damages for his death. City of Friend v. Burleigh, 53 Neb. 674 (74 N. W. 50).

www.tibtool.com.cn

273. (1901) Statements of a person since deceased, that his property was incumbered, that he could not pay his debts, are admissible to prove his insolvency at the time, as being declarations against interest. Quinby v. Ayers, 1 Unof. 70 (95 N. W. 464).

Counter-declarations.

273*a*. (1907.) Declarations against interest cannot be annulled or explained away by counter-declarations. Harrison v. Harrison, 80 Neb. 103 (113 N. W. 1042).

IX. HEARSAY.

See, also, specific topics.

Admissibility in general.

274. (1875.) Conversations between one party and a third person, in the absence of the adverse party and without his knowledge, are not admissible. Lacey v. Central Nat. Bank, 4 Neb. 179.

275. (1881.) Hearsay evidence, corroborating witness on a material point, is inadmissible. Clopper v. Poland, 12 Neb. 69 (10 N. W. 538).

276. (1901.) Hearsay evidence is inadmissible. Keeley Institute v. Wade, 61 Neb. 313 (85 N. W. 288).

What constitutes hearsay.

277. (1877.) Loose expressions made by officers of the city, indicating that they supposed such a grade to have been established, are but hearsay, by which the corporation is not bound. Nebraska City v. Lampkins, 6 Neb. 27.

278. (1877.) A conversion had between the vendee and a trustee merely to transfer the title concerning the consideration, in the absence of the vendor, is not admissible in evidence against such vendor. Reed v. Beardsley, 6 Neb. 493.

279. (1886.) Where, in an action for damages resulting from personal injuries, a physician, being a son of plaintiff, was permitted to testify, over the objection of defendant, to the opinions expressed by consulting physicians who were called to examine plaintiff as to the results of the injury, it was held to be error, the testimony being incompetent and hearsay. Village of Ponca v. Crawford, 18 Neb. 551 (26 N. W. 365).

280. (1889.) Where a witness was called upon to testify as to words spoken in a language which he did not understand, and which were interpreted to him into his own language by an interpreter known to him, and in whom he confided (in the presence of the speaker), such testimony is unobjectionable as hearsay evidence. Wise v. Newatney, 26 Neb. 88 (42 N. W. 339).

281. (1892.) A communication through the telephone from Schuyler to Omaha repeated by one operator at Fremont, an intermediate station, held admissible in evidence in an action for breach of contract in case stated in opinion. Oskamp v. Gadsden, 35 Neb. 7 (52 N. W. 718; 37 Am. St. Rep. 428; 17 L. R. A. 440).

282. (1894.) As against strangers thereto, a receipt is incompetent evidence of the payment thereby acknowledged; for, as against such strangers, such receipt is but the hearsay declaration of the party who signed it, made without opportunity for his cross-examination, and independently of the sanction of his oath. Ellison v. Albright, 41 Neb. 93 (59 N. W. 703; 29 L. R. A. 737).

283. (1902) The testimony of a witness as to a conversation had with, or declarations made by him to, others as to the sanity or insanity of a person is inadmissible on the question of insanity, on the ground that it is hearsay. Clarke v. Irwin, 63 Neb. 539 (88 N. W. 783).

Ready v. Rogers, 1 Neb. 124 (93 Am. Dec. 333).

285. (1876.) When a decree has been rendered in an action for specific performance, containing a provision that further suits must be brought for the recovery of any damages occasioned to the property, such decree is admissible in evidence, in a subsequent action for trespass, for the purpose of showing title to the premises, and that the damages had not been adjudicated. Wilcox v. Saunders, 4 Neb. 569.

286. (1879.) An approved journal entry is indisputable evidence of a recorded judgment. Findley v. Bowers, 9 Neb. 72 (2 N. W. 349).

287. (1880.) The pleadings and judgment in the action wherein an injunction against the sale of real estate under execution issued are competent evidence to show the grounds on which the sale was enjoined. Ryan v. State Bank, 10 Neb. 524 (7 N. W. 276).

288. (1889.) The failure of the clerk to mark the date of filing on the verdict of a jury will not prevent it from being introduced in evidence in a proper case. Baldridge v. Foust, 28 Neb. 259 (44 N. W. 110).

289. (1890.) A person not a stranger to a judicial proceeding is bound thereby, and the record of such proceeding is admissible in evidence against him. Dorsey v. McGee, 30 Neb. 657 (46 N. W. 1018).

290. (1894.) A judicial record of this state may be proved by the producing of the original, or by a copy thereof, certified by the clerk or the person having the legal custody thereof, authenticated by his seal of office, if he have one. Burge v. Gandy, 41 Neb. 149 (59 N. W. 359).

291. (1896.) The practice of introducing in evidence in a case on trial the papers and files belonging to another case, or the original records of an office, is not to be commended. If such files or records are needed as evidence certified copies should be procured for that purpose. Regier v. Shreck, 47 Neb. 667 (66 N. W. 618).

292. (1901.) Plaintiff commenced an action in the county court, which was afterward dismissed without prejudice; it afterward brought its action in the district court; on the trial, defendant, over plaintiff's objection, was permitted to introduce the petition, filed in the county court, in evidence. Held, Under the facts in the case, it should have been excluded. Hamilton Brown Shoe Co. v. Milliken, 62 Neb. 116 (86 N. W. 913).

293. (1901.) The authentication of a record of the queen's bench division of the high court of justice of England examined, and held to conform to the requirements of section 416 of the code. Linton v. Baker, 1 Unof. 896 (96 N. W. 251).

294. (1901.) A judicial record of another state, authenticated as provided in section 414 of the code, is admissible in evidence without further proof that the court from which it comes is one of record. Brown v. Collins, 2 Unof. 149 (96 N. W. 173).

295. (1903.) Where parties interested have been duly served with notice by a court having jurisdiction in a sister state to appear and show cause at a time stated why the final report of an executor should not be allowed and settled, such court having jurisdiction of person and subject matter, a properly authenticated transcript of the proceedings had will not be held inadmissible in the courts of this state, because it shows that a hearing was had and a judgment rendered at a subsequent term of such court. Tunnicliff v. Fox, 68 Neb. 811 (94 N. W. 1032).

Records of official acts and proceedings.

296. (1871.) The transcript is evidence of the highest character as to all the proceedings before the mayor, in hearing and determining the question of title upon which he rendered judgment. Newcomb v. Boulware, 1 Neb. 428.

297. (1890.) Where the engineers of the city have cross-sectioned certain grading to be done for the city, made estimates thereof and filed the same in the engineer's department, such estimates are admissible as prima facie evidence of the correctness of such estimates. Clarke v. Williams, 29 Neb. 691 (46 N. W. 82).

298. (1902.) A record kept under the ordinances of a city for the evident purpose of assisting the board of health in the conduct of the affairs of that office, is not such a public record as is entitled to admission in evidence to show the truth of the matters therein recited, and especially should it be rejected as evidence when offered to establish a fact which would not be admissible against a party because of its privileged character. Sovereign Camp of Woodmen of the World v. Grandon, 64 Neb. 39 (89 N. W. 448).

the district court is admissible in all cases where the original would be; and where the parties stipulate that the evidence of a witness on a former trial may be used instead of taking his deposition the stipulation should be enforced. Spielman v. Flynn, 19 Neb. 342 (27 N. W. 224). [Overruled in part. 19 Neb. 511; 42 Neb. 356.]

300. (1893.) A copy of letters of administration, when duly certified to be true and correct copies of such letters as appear from the original on file in the county court, wherein such letters of administration were granted, is admissible in evidence with the same effect as the original. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Baier, 37 Neb. 235 (55 N. W. 913).

301. (1895.) Where a case is appealed to the district court and the issue in another action is whether the case appealed was tried in the appellate court, a finding made or verdict returned, and a judgment pronounced thereon, such issue can be proved by a certified copy of the record of proceedings had in the case in the appellate court. Morrison v. Boggs, 44 Neb. 248 (62 N. W. 473).

302. (1896.) The transcript of a foreign judgment is not admissible unless authenticated according to section 414 of the code. Names v. Names, 48 Neb. 701 (67 N. W. 751); (1898) Comstock v. Kerwin, 57 Neb. 1 (77 N. W. 387).

303. (1901.) The record of the proceedings of the district court, as kept in the journal entries, is the legal and authentic evidence of judgments and orders of the court. Morrill v. McNeill, 1 Unof. 651 (91 N. W. 601).

304. (1902.) The transcript of the proceedings and judgment of the United States district court, duly certified, is competent in evidence, although it fails to show that the presiding judge signed the journal record of the proceedings. Stacks v. Crawford, 63 Neb. 662 (88 N. W. 852).

305. (1903.) The law makes no provision for the certification by the shorthand reporter of the proceedings of the district court, hence a transcript of his notes, although accompanied by a formal certificate, is not admissible as independent evidence. Jordan v. Howe, 4 Unof. 667 (95 N. W. 853).

306. (1905.) It is indispensable to the authentication of a judicial record of a sister state that it have attached thereto a certificate of the presiding judge that the attestation is "in due form" or "in due form of law." Chapman v. Chapman, 74 Neb. 388 (104 N. W. 880).

306*a*. (1906.) A transcript of a justice of the peace, to be receivable in evidence, need not be authenticated in accordance with the provisions of section 414 of the code, which relates to judgments of courts of record. It is receivable in evidence if it conforms to the requirements of section 415, which relates specifically to judgments of justices of the peace of another state. Gordon Bros. v. Wageman, 77 Neb. 185 (108 N. W. 1067).

Official records and proceedings.

307 (1897.) A copy of a sheriff's return which has not been attested according to the requirements of section 414 of the code, is incompetent for the purpose of proving a judicial sale in another state. Westerman v. Sheppard, 52 Neb. 124 (71 N. W. 950).

308. (1899.) A certified copy of a letter written by a public officer stating in a general way what the records of his office disclose is not competent evidence of the facts stated. Moore v. Parker, 59 Neb. 29 (80 N. W. 43).

Records of foreign courts.

309. (1898.) A transcript of the record of a foreign court is not admissible in evidence, unless authenticated according to the provisions of section 414 of the code of civil procedure. Comstock v. Kerwin, 57 Neb. 1 (77 N. W. 387).

Records of conveyances.

310. (1889.) The filing of a chattel mortgage in the office of the recording officer of the county, under the provisions of section 14, chapter 32, Compiled Statutes, makes such mortgage a part of the records of the county, and under section 408 of the civil code a copy thereof duly certified to by the proper officer is competent evidence of equal credibility to the original. Hall v. Aitkin, 25 Neb. 360 (41 N. W. 192).

311. (1899.) The certificate of acknowledgment, as shown by the record of a deed, was dated on the 16th day of August, 1872, while the deed itself bore date of the 16th day of October of the same year. It was held that the date of the certificate of acknowledgment would prevail over that of the deed, and that the district court did not err in admitting a copy of the record in evidence, when objected to on account of the discrepancy in dates. Buck v. Gage, 27 Neb. 306 (43 N. W. 110).

Books of account.

312. (1881.) The note register or collection register or book of bills receivable, kept by a bank or banker, is not a "book of account," in the sense in which that term is used, either in the statute or at common law, as it does not contain the "charges by one party against the other made in the ordinary course of business," and in no case are account-books evidence of any transactions, even between the parties, other than goods, wares, or merchandise, sold or delivered, and work, labor, or services performed. Martin v. Scott, 12 Neb. 42 (10 N. W. 532).

313. (1886.) Account books are admissible as evidence in an action only where they contain charges by one party against the other. Masters v. Marsh, 19 Neb. 458 (27 N. W. 438).

314. (1887.) Books of account are receivable in evidence only when they contain charges by one party against the other, and then only under the circumstances and verified in manner provided by statute. Van Every v. Fitzgerald, 21 Neb. 36 (31 N. W. 264; 60 Am. Rep. 835); (1887) Pollard v. Turner, 22 Neb. 366 (35 N. W. 192); (1889) Gilbert v. Saddlery Co., 26 Neb. 194 (41 N. W. 993; 42 N. W. 11).

315. (1891.) Collection or loan registers are not admissible as books of account. Labaree v. Klosterman, 33 Neb. 150 (49 N. W. 1102).

316. (1891.) A witness who at the time of purchasing a bill of goods entered each item in a book, together with the cost thereof, may use such book as a memorandum, and when it is shown by his testimony that he knows the entries therein to be correct and that they were made at the time of the transaction in question, such book may properly be introduced in evidence, not for the purpose of proving the purchase of the goods, but in corroboration of the witness and as a detailed statement of the items involved. St. Paul Fire Ins. Co. v. Gotthelf, 35 Neb. 351 (53 N. W. 137).

317 (1898.) In an action for an accounting by a member of a partnership who has had access to the books of account at all times, such books are competent evidence on behalf of either party. McDonald v. Buckstaff, 56 Neb. 88 (76 N. W. 476).

318. (1904.) Books of account, in order to be admissible in evidence, are not required to be in any particular language, or to conform to any particular system of bookkeeping, so long as they conform to the provisions of the statute regulating the reception of such books in evidence. Cather v. Damerell, 5 Unof. 490 (99 N. W. 35).

Conveyances and contracts.

319. (1876.) A paper offered in evidence to establish a tripartite contract, being signed by one party only, is inadmissible. Wilcox v. Saunders, 4 Neb. 569.

320. (1885.) In an action for the price of bricks furnished for a building, a contract with the building contractor is admissible in evidence to show that such contractor was to pay for the material, and that certain payments had been made by such contractor. Kiewit v. Harris & Fisher, 17 Neb. 249 (22 N. W. 417).

321. (1886.) A deed of real estate, executed in another state before an officer having no seal, to be admissible in evidence must be certified in the manner provided in the statute. O'Brien v. Gaslin, 20 Neb. 347 (30 N. W. 274).

322. (1886.) Where the defense to an action on a note is founded upon a certain printed warranty alleged to have been delivered to defendant by plaintiff's assignor at the time of the execution of the notes sued on, and the delivery of the warranty is denied, the alleged warranty is admissible in evidence. First Nat. Bank v. Erickson, 20 Neb. 580 (31 N. W. 387).

323. (1890.) Where the holder of a chattel mortgage, in the form of a bill of sale, with a defeasance clause, through ignorance and good faith, without intent to defraud, tore the same into two parts, thus separating the granting from the defeasance clause, and upon the trial presented the two parts as an entire instrument, it was receivable in evidence. Russell v. Longmoor, 29 Neb. 209 (45 N. W. 624).

324. (1894.) The record of a deed is not admissible in evidence unless the certificate of acknowledgment is substantially in accordance with the statute. Maxwell v. Higgins, 38 Neb. 671 (57 N. W. 388).

325. (1896.) A deed executed and acknowledged in Kansas, conveying land in Nebraska, is admissible in evidence in ejectment though not witnessed. Schields v. Horbach, 49 Neb. 262 (68 N. W. 524).

Private memoranda and statements.

327. (1887) A time book of defendant, used to keep the time of workmen employed by him in completing a job of railroad grading which he claimed plaintiff, his subcontractor, had abandoned, offered for the purpose of proving the cost of completing the job, is inadmissible where it does not purport to contain entries of charges against plaintiff or of dealings with him. Van Every v. Fitzgerald, 21 Neb. 36 (31 N. W. 264; 60 Am. Rep. 835).

328 (1893.) Ex parte affidavit referred to in the opinion held inadmissible under the rules of evidence, and that it was properly excluded from the jury. Barton v. McKay, 36 Neb. 632 (54 N. W. 968).

329. (1893.) In an action against a contractor on his promise to pay for materials furnished to a subcontractor, a bill for such material made out to the subcontractor is admissible to show that it had been O. K.'d by the subcontractor as required by the agreement. Barras v. Pomeroy Coal Co., 38 Neb. 311 (56 N. W. 890).

330. (1896.) A memorandum made contemporaneously with the facts of which it purports to be a record, when properly identified, is admissible as independent evidence. Imhoff v. Richards, 48 Neb. 590 (67 N. W. 483).

331. (1898.) Hotel registers, without proof that the names thereon are true entries of the guests, that they were paying guests, or the duration of their visits, are inadmissible to prove the extent of business of such hotel. Wittenberg v. Mollyneaux, 55 Neb. 429 (75 N. W. 835).

332. (1903.) Where a memorandum is kept in connection with a cash register, upon which, in the usual course of business, are entered all of the sales in a mercantile establishment, both cash and credit, at the time when such sales are made, it may be used by a witness to refresh his memory as to the amount of goods sold; and when he can testify, as a matter of fact, that such memorandum is correct, it may afterwards be put in evidence, not to prove anything of itself, but as a detailed statement of the items testified to by the witness. Gross v. Scheel, 67 Neb. 223 (93 N. W. 418).

Letters.

333. (1889.) Where papers or letters which are pertinent to the issue are offered in evidence on the trial of a case, they should be admitted, nor will the court form a collateral issue to determine how they were obtained. Sanford v. Sornberger, 26 Neb. 295 (41 N. W. 1102).

334. (1899.) To render admissible a self-explanatory letter, that to which it is an answer need not be offered in evidence. New Hampshire Trust Co. v. Korsmeyer Plumbing & Heating Co., 57 Neb. 784 (78 N W. 303).

Photographs.

335. (1893.) Where on a trial an inspection of the premises in question is proper, but impracticable or impossible, a photographic view thereof is admissible. Omaha S. R. Co. v. Beeson, 36 Neb. 361 (54 N. W. 557).

336. (1902.) Under the proper precautions and with necessary explanations, what are known as "X-ray pictures" are admissible in evidence for the purpose of showing the condition of the internal tissues of the body. City of Geneva v. Burnett, 65 Neb. 464 (91 N. W. 275; 101 Am. St. Rep. 628; 58 L. R. A. 287).

337. (1902.) The discretion of the trial judge, in the reception of an X-ray photograph in evidence, is not absolute. Its exclusion on the ground that sufficient foundation has not been laid, where there can be no question as to the accuracy of the photograph, is error. Carlson v. Benton, 66 Neb. 486 (92 N. W. 600).

338. (1902.) To constitute a foundation for the introduction of an X-ray photograph in evidence, it is not essential that it appear that it was taken by a competent person, nor that the condition of the apparatus with which it was taken, and the circumstances under which it was taken, were such as to insure an accurate picture, where it has been shown by the evidence of competent witnesses that it truly represents the object it is claimed to represent. Carlson v. Benton, 66 Neb. 486 (92 N. W. 600).

Mortality tables and tables of expectancy of life.

In action for loss of support against saloon-keeper, see Intoxicating Liquors, §§ 416-417.

www.libtool.com.cn

See, also, Damages, §§ 135-138a.

339. The Carlisle tables of mortality are admissible to show expectancy of life. (1879) Roose v. Perkins, 9 Neb 304; (1882) King v. Bell, 13 Neb. 409 (14 N. W. 41); (1890) City of Lincoln v. Smith, 28 Neb. 762 (45 N. W. 41); (1894) City of Friend v. Ingersoll, 39 Neb. 717 (58 N. W. 281); (1898) City of Friend v. Burleigh, 53 Neb. 674 (74 N. W. 62).

340. (1890.) A table showing the expectancy of life in healthy persons of different ages, printed in a law book of general acceptance and authority in the courts of this state, as the Carlisle tables of expectancy, is admissible in evidence in cases where such evidence is applicable. Sellars v. Foster, 27 Neb. 118 (42 N. W. 907); (1902) Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Hambel, 2 Unof. 607 (89 N. W. 643).

341. (1890.) The Carlisle tables of expectancy of life were properly admitted in evidence, in an action to recover for injuries sustained by falling on a defective sidewalk, it appearing that the injuries are permanent. City of Lincoln v. Smith, 28 Neb. 762 (45 N. W. 41).

342. (1894.) Carlisle tables are competent though not conclusive evidence as to the expectancy of life. They are to be received and treated as any other evidence. City of Friend v. Ingersoll, 39 Neb. 717 (58 N. W. 281).

343. (1898.) Carlisle tables held admissible in evidence in an action for death by wrongful act. City of Friend v. Burleigh, 53 Neb. 674 (74 N. W. 50).

344. (1898.) Where a personal injury is permanent in its character, though plaintiff be a minor, evidence as to his expectancy of life, from experience tables, must be based on his actual age and not on the age of majority. Swift v. Holoubek, 55 Neb. 228 (75 N. W. 584).

345. (1904.) The Carlisle table of mortality or life expectancy is properly admissible in evidence for the consideration of the jury in determining the probable duration of the life of the deceased, the proper foundation as to age and general health being first proved. Horst v. Lewis, 71 Neb. 370 (103 N. W. 460).

346. (1907.) In an action for personal injuries, the Carlisle table of expectancy may be given in evidence after the introduction of credible evidence tending to show the permanent character of the injury. Howard v. McCabe, 79 Neb. 42 (112 N. W. 305)

Statutes and law books.

347. (1901.) The written laws of a sister state cannot be proved by Hubbell's Legal Directory. Johnson v. Hesser, 61 Neb. 631 (85 N. W. 894).

Scientific and technical works.

348. (1884.) Books of science or art are competent evidence when shown to be reputable or standard works. Sioux City & P. R. Co. v. Finlayson, 16 Neb. 578 (20 N. W. 860; 49 Am. Rep. 724)

349. (1897.) In a suit for damages against a surgeon for alleged negligence in operating upon and treating plaintiff's fractured kneecap, text-books on surgery, though standard authority, cannot be read to the jury as independent evidence. Van Skike v. Potter, 53 Neb. 28 (73 N. W. 295).

Market reports.

350. (1905.) Market reports in journals, such as the commercial world relies upon, are competent evidence of the state of the market. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Todd, 74 Neb. 712 (105 N. W. 83).

D. Production, Authentication and Effect.

Inspection by adverse party.

351 (1903.) Under section 394, code of civil procedure, the granting of orders for inspection of books or papers is left to the discretion of the trial court, and it is also left to the discretion of the court whether or not to exclude such books or papers at the trial if inspection is not permitted. Chamberlain v. Chamberlain Banking House, 4 Unof. 278 (93 N. W. 1021).

Preliminary evidence for authentication.

352. (1902.) Where there is evidence tending to show the authenticity of a document sufficient, if believed, to establish it, the jury should pass upon it and its admission is no error. Skow v. Locke, 3 Unof. 176 (91 N. W. 204).

——— Official records.

353. (1891.) The journal of a school district clerk, though not received from a predecessor, is sufficiently authenticated if identified by a former clerk, and may be accepted as evidence of regular notice of a district meeting. Maher v. State, ex rel. Allen & Jenkins, 32 Neb. 354 (49 N. W. 436).

354. (1895.) A record of the adoption of a resolution by a city council is sufficiently authenticated as having been adopted at a regular meeting, so as to be admissible in evidence, where it recites "The council met in regular session." City of Wahoo v. Tharp, 45 Neb. 563 (63 N. W. 840).

www.libtool.com.cn

——— Corporate records.

355. (1896.) A page of a book was identified as a part of the records of the minutes of the meetings of the "Grandview Company." Held, Not an identification or foundation for its introduction as showing proceedings had by the board of trustees of the "City of Grandview." Green v. Barker, 47 Neb. 934 (66 N. W. 1032).

——— Execution of instruments in general.

356. (1892.) The absence of the attesting witnesses to an instrument may be established like any other fact. It is sufficient to prove facts from which a presumption will arise that they are absent from the county. Buchanan v. Wise, 34 Neb. 695 (52 N. W. 163).

357. (1892.) When attesting witnesses are absent from the county in which the action is pending, the execution of the instruments in question may be proved by any other competent evidence. Buchanan v. Wise, 34 Neb. 695 (52 N. W. 163).

358. (1894.) In case a subscribing witness is absent from the county in which the suit is pending, or if he denies or does not recall the execution of the instrument to which his name is subscribed as such witness, its execution may be established by other competent evidence. Jewell v. Chamberlain, 41 Neb. 254 (59 N. W. 784).

359. (1897.) When there is no other disputed question the signatures of defendants are sufficiently proved to allow of the receipt in evidence of a note alleged to have been signed by them, when a witness, duly qualified to testify on that question, gives it as his opinion that the alleged signatures are genuine. Mosher v. Farmers & Merchants Nat. Bank, 51 Neb. 55 (70 N. W. 540).

360. (1898.) In order to render written instruments admissible in evidence, their execution or genuineness, unless admitted, must be established by proof, except in cases within statutory exceptions. Sloan v. Fist, 53 Neb. 691 (74 N. W. 45).

360*a*. (1907.) Where an instrument is attested, the subscribing witness should be produced at the trial to prove the execution, unless his absence or disability is accounted for, or the execution of the instrument admitted by the adverse party. Nason v. Nason, 79 Neb. 582 (113 N. W. 139).

361. (1901.) An acknowledged instrument, of a kind permitted to be acknowledged and recorded, is admissible in proof without evidence of the authenticity of the signatures. Brown v. Collins, 2 Unof. 149 (96 N. W. 173).

——— Deeds, mortgages and leases.

362. (1887.) Where a lease purporting to have been executed by and between strangers and a party to the suit is offered in evidence, and its execution is not admitted by the opposite party, such execution must be proved. Where such lease purports to be signed by a subscribing witness, proof of such signature being the genuine handwriting of the witness is sufficient. Oberfelder v. Kavanaugh, 21 Neb. 483 (32 N. W. 295).

363. (1892.) Testimony of an old resident of the county that he had never heard of the witnesses to a certain deed in controversy, coupled with the fact that their attestation was made in another state, is sufficient to raise a presumption that such witnesses are absent from the county and to authorize proof of the execution of the deed by other evidence. Buchanan v. Wise, 34 Neb. 695 (52 N. W. 163).

364. (1896.) A deed to Nebraska land executed in Iowa, and there acknowledged before a notary public who attached his official seal, is presumed to have been executed and acknowledged in conformity with the laws of Iowa, and may be recorded or read in evidence in Nebraska without further proof of execution, though it was not witnessed. Dorsey v. Conrad, 49 Neb. 443 (68 N. W. 645).

365. (1903.) A mortgage bearing a certificate of the proper officer showing that it was duly acknowledged before him by the mortgagor may be read in evidence without further proof. McKenzie v. Beaumont, 70 Neb. 179 (97 N. W. 225).

——— Wills and testaments.

366. (1882.) A will is not admissible as evidence of title to real estate, unless it has been admitted to probate. Pettit v. Black, 13 Neb. 142 (12 N. W. 841).

——— Telegrams and letters.

367. (1895.) A letter identified as being in the handwriting of a party to the action may be admitted in evidence though the signature thereto is denied by the person charged with writing it. Burgess v. Burgess, 44 Neb. 16 (62 N. W. 242).

www.lihtool.com.cn

368. (1898.) The genuineness of a letter ter is sufficiently established to permit its introduction in evidence when it is shown that it was received in due and regular course of mail in response to a letter addressed to the supposed writer. People's Nat. Bank v. Geisthardt, 55 Neb. 232 (75 N. W. 582).

369. (1899.) It is error to admit a letter in evidence until the proper foundation therefor has been laid. Norberg v Plummer, 58 Neb. 410 (78 N. W. 708).

370. (1902.) The contents of letters and telegrams, which pass between parties in the course of a business transaction, not otherwise identified than by a witness who has a direct legal interest in the result of the suit, are not competent evidence as against the personal representative of a deceased person. Harte v. Reichenberg, 3 Unof. 820 (92 N. W. 987).

371. (1903.) Where it is sought to establish a contract by letters, there must be evidence tending to prove that they are in the handwriting of the defendant, or that they came from him or his authorized agent, or were received in due course of mail, in answer to letters duly mailed to the address of the party sought to be bound. Peycke v. Shinn, 68 Neb. 343 (94 N. W. 135).

372. (1903.) A copy of a telegram received at the office of its destination is not admissible in evidence without proof of its authenticity. Yeiser v. Cathers, 5 Unof. 204 (97 N. W. 840).

373. (1906.) It is a sufficient foundation for the introduction of letters showing authority of an agent in evidence to show that they were received in due course of mail in answer to letters written by the agent to the principal and duly mailed to the address of the party sought to be bound Peycke v. Shinn, 76 Neb. 364 (107 N. W. 386).

——— Books of account.

374. (1881.) Where a wife testifies to the identity of her husband's book account, that the charges therein were in his hand writing, and made by him at or near the date of the services charged, it is error to exclude the book from the evidence. Martin v. Scott, 12 Neb. 42 (10 N. W. 532).

375. (1888.) Where entries in books of account are made by and in handwriting of a clerk, such clerk, if living and within reach of a subpœna, must be produced and entries verified by him, or such entries will not be admissible in evidence. Holland v. Commercial Bank, 22 Neb. 571 (36 N. W 113).

376. (1889.) Under section 346 of the code, books of account which in other respects are unobjectionable, may be introduced in evidence without calling the party or clerk who made the entries to prove the same, where a sufficient reason is given for not calling such witness. Volker v. First Nat. Bank, 26 Neb. 602 (42 N. W. 732).

377. (1889.) When books are identified as the books of original entries of the party, and the items and entries therein of the adverse party's account are given in evidence without objection, it is too late to object that the person who made the entries was not called to prove the same. Volker v. First Nat. Bank, 26 Neb. 602 (42 N. W. 732).

378. (1898.) Under section 346, code of civil procedure, books of account are not admissible, unless it affirmatively appears that the essential requirements of said section are complied with. Atkins v. Seeley, 54 Neb. 688 (74 N. W. 1100).

379. (1899.) It is error to admit in evidence a book account until the proper foundation therefor has been laid. Norberg v. Plummer, 58 Neb. 410 (78 N. W. 708).

380. (1902.) One party may introduce the books of his adversary without the preliminary proof necessary in other cases Globe Savings Bank v. Bank of Commerce, 64 Neb. 413 (89 N. W. 1030).

381. (1905.) An admission by a deceased person that an account kept in a certain book is correct is not sufficient to warrant the admission in evidence of a copy of his account in another book. Fitch v. Martin, 74 Neb. 538 (104 N W. 1072).

——— Memoranda and statements.

382. (1891.) A memorandum made at or near the time the transaction took place is admissible without the corroborating testimony of the person who made the same, if beyond the reach of the process of the court, his whereabouts being unknown, upon proof of his handwriting. Labaree v. Kostermann, 33 Neb. 150 (49 N. W. 1102).

383. (1903.) Where a party, while on the witness-stand, properly identifies a series of scale or weight checks as having been executed and delivered by himself, or some one authorized by him to do so, they may be introduced in evidence by the opposite party to rebut his testimony without further identification. Matoushek v. Dutcher, 67 Neb. 627 (93 N. W. 1049).

——— Law books and statutes.

384. (1902.) A book purporting to contain the written laws of a foreign jurisdiction, proves itself and is admissible as evidence without other authentication. Hewitt v. Bank of Indian Territory, 64 Neb. 468 (92 N. W. 741).

385. (1902.) The authenticity of a volume which it is claimed contains the statutes of a foreign state or territory, cannot be established by the mere declaration of counsel as to what the volume is. Hewitt v. Bank of Indian Territory, 64 Neb. 468 (92 N. W. 741). [Overruling same case. 64 Neb. 463.]

386. (1905.) The public seal of another state affixed to a copy of a written law of that state is admissible as evidence of such law. Rieck v. Griffen, 74 Neb. 102 (103 N. W. 1061).

Necessity of revenue stamp.

387. (1901.) The admission of an unstamped instrument in a trial without the intervention of a jury, there being sufficient evidence to sustain the judgment aside from such instrument, is not prejudicial in any event and calls for no ruling as to the effect of the United States revenue law of 1898. Armstrong v. Mayer, 1 Unof. 119 (95 N. W. 483).

388. (1902.) The federal congress is not authorized to prescribe rules governing the admissibility of evidence in the courts of this state, and hence absence of a revenue stamp from a deposition will not render it inadmissible. Sulpho-Saline Bath Co. v. Allen, 66 Neb. 295 (92 N. W. 354).

Conclusiveness and effect.

389. (1903.) If a message to be sent by telegraph is not reduced to writing by the sender, he makes the company his agent for that purpose, but he is not thereby estopped to deny that a paper offered in evidence was in fact reduced to writing by the telegraph company, or delivered as his message. Peycke v. Shinn, 68 Neb. 343 (94 N. W. 135).

390. (1904.) While the Carlisle and other mortuary tables of accepted accuracy and in general use are always properly admissible in evidence for the purpose of aiding a court or jury in determining the probable expectancy of life, when such fact is in issue, yet, when admitted, these mortuary tables are not binding upon the estimate of the triers of such fact. They may, without such tables, make their own estimate from the age, health, habits, physical condition and appearance of the person whose expectancy is at issue. City of South Omaha v. Sutliffe, 72 Neb. 746 (101 N. W. 997).

Parol evidence to show trust, see Trusts, §§ 37-40.

A. Contradicting, Varying or Adding to Terms of Written Instruments.

Judicial records.

391. (1882.) Judge's minutes are prima facie evidence of proceedings, but may be shown to differ from judgment actually rendered, and court cannot be compelled to correct its journal from such minutes. Sullivan Savings Institution v. Clark, 12 Neb. 578 (12 N. W. 103).

392. (1895.) Where an officer fails to attach his jurat to an affidavit for service by publication, parol evidence, in a proper case, may be admitted to prove that affiant did in fact swear to the affidavit. Bantley v. Finney, 43 Neb. 794 (62 N. W. 213).

Election returns.

393. (1891.) Parol evidence is admissible to show that the count of a vote at a school meeting, as reported by a teller, is incorrect, the district records to the contrary notwithstanding. State, ex rel. Bates, v. Hutchins, 33 Neb. 335 (50 N. W. 165).

www.libtool.com.cn

Contracts in general.

394. (1876.) Parol proof cannot be received in evidence to contradict, vary, or modify the legal import of written agreements. Where there is no latent ambiguity to be explained the agreement alone must speak for itself. Mills v. Miller, 4 Neb. 441.

395. (1889.) Where a written agreement was signed and placed in the possession of a custodian to be held until certain conditions were to be complied with, the failure of the conditions can be proved by parol testimony, and such evidence would not be open to the objection that it contradicted or varied the terms of the written agreement. Gregory v. Littlejohn, 25 Neb. 368 (41 N. W. 253).

396. (1889.) Where a contract has been reduced to writing without any uncertainty as to its terms and meaning, the presumption of law is that the entire contract is contained in the writing, and parol testimony of declarations made by the parties at the time it was made is not admissible in evidence. Dodge v. Kiene, 28 Neb. 216 (44 N. W. 191).

397. (1896.) It is not competent to change or vary the terms of a written contract by parol evidence. Stoner v. Keith County, 48 Neb. 279 (67 N. W. 311).

398. (1898.) Where negotiating parties reduce their agreement to writing, and sign and deliver the same, the writing, in absence of fraud, mistake, or ambiguity, constitutes the best and only competent evidence of the contract originally made. Sylvester v. Carpenter Paper Co., 55 Neb. 621 (75 N. W. 1092).

399. (1898.) A written contract, the meaning of which is certain and patent from its terms, may not be varied by direct explanation or interpretation in oral testimony. Latenser v. Misner, 56 Neb. 340 (76 N. W. 897); (1898) Thomas v. Nebraska Moline Plow Co., 56 Neb. 383 (76 N. W. 876); (1904) Agnew v. Montgomery, 72 Neb. 9 (99 N. W. 820).

400. (1901.) Parol evidence is inadmissible to contradict or alter a written contract or to inject into it provisions it does not contain, and which cannot be implied from its terms. Norfolk Beet Sugar Co. v. Berger, 1 Unof. 151 (95 N. W. 336).

Evidence of prior or contemporaneous oral agreement in general.

401. (1878.) When the parties have reduced their contract to writing, the law presumes that all previous and contemporaneous negotiations and conversations leading to the contract are merged in it, and cannot be varied by parol testimony. Hamilton v. Thrall, 7 Neb. 210.

402. (1882.) A written contract of warranty of a machine cannot be varied by proof of oral agreements made before the writing was executed. Sycamore Marsh Harvester Co. v. Sturm, 13 Neb. 210 (13 N. W. 202).

403. (1887.) When a contract has been reduced to writing, verbal evidence of what passed between the parties either before the written instrument was made or during the time of its preparation, so as to add to or subtract from or in any manner to vary or qualify the written contract, is not admissible. Delaney v. Linder, 22 Neb. 274 (34 N. W. 630).

404. (1888.) Taxes become a lien upon real estate on and after the first day of April in each year, and a party who executes a conveyance with a covenant against incumbrances, in effect assumes the payment of taxes on the land sold for that year, and parol evidence of a contract made with the vendee before the making of the deed to pay such taxes, is not admissible to vary the terms of the covenant. McClure v. Campbell, 25 Neb. 57 (40 N. W. 595).

405. (1891.) A written contract cannot be waived, qualified, or contradicted by parol evidence of a prior or contemporaneous agreement between the parties. Koserman v. Fries, 33 Neb. 427 (50 N. W. 269); (1899) Te Poel v. Shutt, 57 Neb. 592 (78 N. W. 288); (1901) Faulkner v. Gilbert, 61 Neb. 602 (85 N. W. 843); (1901) Norfolk Beet Sugar Co. v. Berger, 1 Unof. 151 (95 N. W. 336); (1903) Peterson v. Ferbrache, 4 Unof. 249 (93 N. W. 1011).

406. (1894.) In the absence of fraud or mistake all previous verbal understandings are merged in the written contract of insurance, which is conclusively presumed to contain the entire engagements of the parties with all the conditions of their fulfillment. McLaughlin v. Equitable Life Assurance Society, 38 Neb. 725 (57 N. W. 557).

407. (1894.) Parol evidence is incompetent to prove a contemporaneous oral agreement by which it is sought to change or alter the terms of a written contract and the result of which would be to change the effect of the written contract in a material portion and to insert or read into it a condition or reservation not contained in it, or implied by its terms. Mattison v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 42 Neb. 545 (60 N. W. 925).

408. (1896.) Parol evidence of prior or contemporaneous conditions modifying a written proposition afterwards submitted and acted upon cannot be received in evidence to vary the terms of the writing. Commercial State Bank of Neligh v. Antelope County, 48 Neb. 496 (67 N. W. 465).

409. (1906.) If a written memorandum confirmatory of a previous oral agreement does not purport to recite the whole of the latter, oral testimony is admissible to supply omitted covenants not inconsistent with the writing. De Laval Separator Co. v. Jelinek, 77 Neb. 192 (109 N. W. 169).

410. (1907.) Evidence of a verbal agreement by a landlord with his tenant to construct a drain for the protection of a part of the land leased made without consideration, and evidence of damage by reason of the failure to construct such drain, is incompetent in an action for an accounting, the agreement being omitted from a written lease between the parties. Gandy v. Wiltse, 79 Neb. 280 (112 N. W. 569).

Conveyances.

411. (1890.) Where land is deeded to a railway company for purposes of a right of way, upon the representations of its agent that main line only should be built thereon, and sidetracks are laid, the purpose for which the deed was executed may be shown in an action to enjoin the maintenance of such side-tracks. Donisthorpe v. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co., 30 Neb. 142 (46 N. W. 240; 27 Am. St. Rep. 387).

412. (1893.) Assignments of land contracts may be shown by parol to be securities in the nature of mortgages, even though formally and absolutely assigned in writing, upon payment of debt, or lien of assignee ceases. Scharman v. Scharman, 38 Neb. 39 (56 N. W. 704).

413. (1894.) A deed of real estate, absolute in form, may be shown by parol to have been intended by the parties to it as a security for a debt or loan, and as between such parties, at least, the instrument will be construed to be a mortgage merely. Morrow v. Jones, 41 Neb. 867 (60 N. W. 369).

414. (1896.) In an action by creditors, to set aside as fraudulent a chattel mortgage executed, by their debtor, to defendant, parol evidence is admissible to show that the transaction is different from that evidenced by a written memorandum. Bacon v. Brockman Commission Co., 48 Neb. 365 (67 N. W. 304).

415. (1902) In an action by a grantee of a deed against his grantor to recover for a breach of covenant against incumbrances, parol evidence is inadmissible to show that taxes were, by contemporaneous oral agreement, excepted from the terms of the deed. Stanisics v. McMurtry, 64 Neb. 761 (90 N. W. 884).

416. (1904.) Where a party acquires the legal title by purchase of land at a sheriff's sale, in pursuance of a parol agreement with a judgment debtor that he is to hold the title thus obtained as a security for the loan of the money paid to relieve the land from the judgment lien, and that he will reconvey when the money is refunded, the case is not distinguishable from any other, where the deed, though absolute in terms, was designated simply as security for a loan; and parol evidence is admissible to show the transaction to be of that character. Dickson v. Stewart, 71 Neb. 424 (98 N. W. 1085; 115 Am. St. Rep. 596).

Bills and notes.

417. (1889.) Where a note has no date of payment, the legal intendment, that it is payable upon demand, cannot be changed by parol proof any more than could the express terms of a written instrument be changed. Roberts v. Snow, 27 Neb. 425 (43 N. W. 241).

418. (1894.) Evidence of a parol agreement entered into by the makers and payee of a promissory note contemporaneously with or previous to its execution, whereby it was attempted to be shown that such note was not to become due according to its plain terms, but that its collectibility depended upon the happening of an event in the future, was incompetent, and the jury was properly instructed to give it no consideration. Van Etten v. Howell, 40 Neb. 850 (59 N. W. 389).

419. (1895.) Parol evidence is not admissible to establish a contemporaneous oral agreement not to negotiate a negotiable instrument. Waddle v. Owen, 43 Neb. 489 (61 N. W. 731).

420. (1896.) Evidence contradictory of the terms of a promissory note cannot furnish a defense to such note when it is admitted by defendants that such note was duly executed by them. Miller v. Gunderson, 48 Neb. 715 (67 N. W. 769).

www.hdtool.com.cn

421. (1898.) A promissory note or contract cannot be varied, qualified, or contradicted by evidence of a prior or contemporaneous agreement resting in parol. Western Mfg. Co. v. Rogers, 54 Neb. 456 (74 N. W. 849); (1901) Garneau v. Cohn, 61 Neb. 500 (85 N. W. 531); (1903) Aultman, Miller & Co. v. Hawk, 4 Unof. 582 (95 N. W. 695).

422. (1903.) Where the rights of innocent third parties are not involved it is permissible to show by parol evidence that the contract between the indorser and indorsee of a promissory note was different from that which results by legal implication from a blank indorsement. Jaster v. Currie, 69 Neb. 4 (94 N. W. 995).

Contracts of sale.

423. (1891.) Where parties enter into a written contract for the purchase of land, the price to be paid as soon as deed is executed and abstract furnished, parol evidence is inadmissible that the grantee paid grantor $30, which the former was to repay if he failed to comply with the contract, or if the latter failed he was to forfeit that amount, while it was to be deducted from the purchase price in case he took the property. Kasermann v. Fries, 33 Neb. 427 (50 N. W 269).

424. (1902.) Where a contract of sale has been consummated by writing, the presumption is that the writing contains the whole contract, and in absence of fraud, istake, or ambiguity of expression in the ntract itself, parol evidence is inadmissible to change or vary its terms Nebraska Land & Feeding Co. v. Trauerman, 70 Neb. 795 (98 N. W. 37).

425. (1903.) Where a contract to sell machinery and put it in place is in writing and free from ambiguity, evidence as to a prior or contemporaneous parol warranty is inadmissible. Kummer v. Dubuque Turbine and Roller Mills Co., 4 Unof. 347 (93 N. W. 938).

426. (1905.) Where a contract of sale has been consummated by writing, the presumption is that the writing contains the whole contract, and, in the absence of fraud, mistake or ambiguity of expression in the contract itself, parol evidence is inadmissible to change or vary its terms. Apking v. Hoefer, 74 Neb. 325 (104 N W. 177).

Receipts.

427. (1893.) A written receipt may be explained or contradicted by parol testimony; but when it embodies a contract it cannot be contradicted, but is conclusive upon the parties in the absence of fraud or mistake. Morse v. Rice, 36 Neb. 212 (54 N. W. 308).

428. (1902.) Where neither fraud nor mistake is alleged, parol evidence to contradict or vary a written receipt must be clear and unequivocal. Rouss v. Goldgraber, 3 Unof. 424 (91 N. W. 712).

Indorsement.

429. (1893.) A blank indorsement of a negotiable instrument before due, where the transfer is to a bona fide holder in the due course of business, establishes a liability which cannot be varied by parol evidence. But between the original parties a blank indorsement may be modified by parol. The entire transaction may be shown by reason of which the indorsement was made, and parol evidence is admissible for the purpose of proving the same. Holmes v. First Nat. Bank of Lincoln, 38 Neb. 326 (56 N. W. 1011; 41 Am. St. Rep. 733).

430. (1896.) As between the original parties to the indorsement, the words "without recourse," following the name of the first, and preceding the name of the second, indorser of a bill or note, may be shown by parol evidence to apply to the former instead of the latter. Corbett v. Fetzer, 47 Neb. 269 (66 N. W. 417).

431. (1896.) As against a subsequent bona fide holder, the liability created by the indorsement in blank of a bill or note cannot be varied by parol evidence; but, as between the original parties to such an indorsement, the terms of the contract is a proper subject of inquiry, and may be established by parol evidence. Corbett v. Fetzer, 47 Neb. 269 (66 N. W. 417).

432. (1897.) A general indorsement of commercial paper may, except as against a bona fide holder, be explained and the precise terms of the agreement shown by parol evidence. Whitney v. Spearman, 50 Neb. 617 (70 N. W. 240).

433. (1897.) As between the immediate parties the form of an indorsement is not conclusive, but the nature of the contract may be proved by parol evidence. United States Nat. Bank v. Geer, 53 Neb. 67 (73 N. W. 266; 41 L. R. A. 439). [Rehearing. 55 Neb. 462.]

www.libtool.com.cn

434. (1898.) A restrictive indorsement in unambigious language cannot be contradicted or explained by evidence resting in parol. United States Nat. Bank v. Geer, 55 Neb. 462 (75 N. W. 1088; 70 Am. St. Rep. 390; 41 L. R. A. 444).

435. (1898.) Where commercial paper is indorsed in blank, the terms of the contract may be shown by parol evidence to be different from those which the law implies in such case. United States Nat. Bank v. Geer, 55 Neb. 462 (75 N. W. 1088; 70 Am. St. Rep. 390; 41 L. R. A. 444).

436. (1898.) As between original parties to a note and those not innocent purchasers it may be shown by parol that one signing his name in blank on the back of the note was an accommodation indorser. Drexel v. Pusey, 57 Neb. 30 (77 N. W. 351).

437. (1898.) A certificate of deposit indorsed by the payee, "Pay to the order of R. C. O., Cash, for account" of the indorser, is a restrictive indorsement, vests no general property to the paper in the indorsee, but merely constitutes him an agent for the purpose of collecting; and parol evidence is not admissible to establish that the transfer of title was absolute. United States Nat. Bank v. Geer, 55 Neb. 462 (75 N. W. 1088; 70 Am. St. Rep. 390; 41 L. R. A. 444)

Guaranty.

438. (1895.) In an action against a guarantor to recover the purchase price of goods, the terms of the written guaranty cannot be varied by parol evidence that the credit had been limited to a certain fixed period. Maxwell v. Burr, 44 Neb. 31 (62 N. W. 236).

439. (1895.) In an action on a written guaranty to pay for certain goods sold to a third person, evidence of an oral agreement that the goods should be of a certain kind, is inadmissible as tending to vary the terms of the written contract. Quinn v. Moss, 45 Neb. 614 (63 N. W. 931).

Insurance contract.

440. (1895.) Actual representations as to the existence of safeguards against fire which were made to the agent of the insurer may be proved by parol evidence, notwithstanding the fact that such representations, incorrectly reduced to writing by such agent, were attested as true by the signature of the insured, even though by the terms of the policy issued it is provided that such representations shall be deemed a warranty, and as such a part of the policy itself. German-American Ins. Co. v. Hart, 43 Neb. 441 (61 N. W. 582).

441. (1897.) Parol testimony is competent to reform an insurance policy so as to make it recite the actual agreement between the parties. Slobodisky v. Phenix Ins. Co., 52 Neb. 395 (72 N. W. 483).

Subscription contracts.

442. (1895.) In an action on a written contract agreeing to donate a certain sum if an opera house of a certain house should be built, parol evidence that the donee agreed orally that the building should be of certain material, tends to contradict, rather than explain, the written contract, and hence is not admissible. Gerner v. Clark, 43 Neb. 690 (62 N. W. 51).

443. (1896.) In an action upon a written subscription parol evidence is not admissible to add conditions to those expressed in the contract. Nebraska Exposition Ass'n v. Townley, 46 Neb. 893 (65 N. W. 1062).

444. (1902.) Where neither fraud nor misrepresentation is practised in securing a subscription contract, its terms cannot be changed or modified by parol evidence. Mefford v. Sell, 3 Unof. 566 (92 N. W. 148)

Nature of consideration.

445. (1892.) In an action on a promissory note, parol evidence is admissible that the amount of the note is part of a debt assumed by the holder as part consideration for the sale of a farm to him by the makers. Fall v. Glover, 34 Neb. 522 (52 N. W. 168).

446. (1901.) While parol testimony may not be received to vary or contradict the terms of a promissory note, yet the considerations for which it was given may be established by parol testimony. Gifford v. Fox, 2 Unof. 30 (95 N. W. 1066).

447. (1902.) Where a deed is assailed by third parties as fraudulent, and proof by them is introduced to impeach the recited consideration, the grantee may show by parol evidence the actual consideration, though different from the one recited in the deed. Columbia Nat. Bank v. Baldwin, 64 Neb. 732 (90 N. W. 890).

448. (1902.) A bill of sale of a reversionary interest in funds belonging to an estate, which recites a consideration of one dollar, does not prevent evidence by parol that the real consideration was that the assignee should hold the funds on the same terms, and for the same purposes as an executor had previously done. Wolf v. Haslach, 65 Neb. 303 (91 N. W. 283).

449. (1901.) Parol testimony is admissible in an action upon a promissory note to show that it was given to secure the performance of an agreement whereby the payee conveyed to the maker certain lands in consideration that the maker should support the payee during his lifetime, and that the maker had performed the conditions of the agreement. Gifford v. Fox, 2 Unof. 30 (95 N. W. 1066).

450. (1902.) Where a promissory note in the usual form calls for the payment of money, evidence that it was to be paid in work and labor cannot be received against the objection of the holder. Vradenburg v. Johnson, 3 Unof. 326 (91 N. W. 496).

451. (1904.) The defendant in an action for damages for breach of a covenant may prove the real consideration by parol regardless of the recital in the deed. Holmes v. Seaman, 72 Neb. 300 (100 N. W. 417).

Effect of writing as to third persons.

452. (1888.) Only as between the parties to the instrument, must an agreement stand as written; as to all others extrinsic evidence is admissible to show the real agreement. Rosewater v. Hoffman, 24 Neb. 222 (28 N. W. 857).

453. (1894.) Persons claiming mechanics' liens as against a vendor's lien are not restricted by the terms of the written contract of sale, but may, by parol evidence, establish the true terms of the contract so as to show a requirement that a building be constructed on the land. Sheehy v. Fulton, 38 Neb. 691 (57 N. W. 395; 41 Am. St. Rep. 767).

454. (1894.) In establishing the contract between the broker and his principal the parties are not bound by the terms of the written contract between the principal and purchaser, although it may evidence a portion of the broker's contract. In such a case parol evidence may be introduced, even if it operate to contradict or vary the terms of the written contract between the principals. Barber v. Hildebrand, 42 Neb. 400 (60 N. W. 594).

455. (1902.) Doctrine as to inadmissibility of oral evidence to vary a contract has no application as between a party to it and a stranger where there appears no estoppel against showing the truth. Crockett v. Miller, 2 Unof. 292 (96 N. W. 491).

456. (1903.) The rule that parol testimony canot be admitted to vary or contradict the terms of a written contract applies only to the parties and their privies. Accordingly, in an action by a principal against an agent for the recovery of the true consideration received by the agent for the sale of stock owned by the principal, under a contract in the agent's name, the principal is not estopped by the stated consideration in the contract between the agent and a third party. Barber v. Martin, 67 Neb. 445 (93 N. W. 722).

457. (1903.) Where the controversy is between a party to a written contract and one who is neither a party nor a privy to it, the rule excluding parol evidence tending to vary, modify or contradict the writing does not apply. First Nat. Bank of Wayne v. Tolerton & Stetson Co., 5 Unof. 43 (97 N. W. 248).

B. Invalidating Written Instrument.

Want of consideration.

458. (1894.) Want of consideration for a bond to indemnify a sheriff on execution, signed by a party's attorney, or its invalidity, may be shown by parol. Luce v. Foster, 42 Neb. 818 (60 N. W. 1027).

Usury.

459. (1891.) Parol evidence is admissible to show usurious consideration of a note. Koehler v. Dodge, 31 Neb. 328 (47 N. W. 913; 28 Am. St. Rep. 518).

460 (1907.) The defense of fraud and want of consideration may be shown by parol, not to contradict or vary, but to destroy the legal and binding effect of a written contract. Minneapolis Threshing Machine Co. v. Otis, 78 Neb. 233 (110 N. W. 550).

Fraud.

461. (1894.) It is competent for a party, when sued upon a written contract, to show by parol that he was induced to execute the contract by the fraud or material false representation of the party seeking to enforce it. Gerner v. Church, 43 Neb. 690 (62 N. W. 51).

462. (1894.) It is competent for a party, when sued upon a written contract, to show by parol that he was induced to execute the contract by the fraud or material false representation of the party seeking to enforce it. Gerner v. Church, 43 Neb. 690 (62 N. W. 51).

C. Separate or Subsequent Oral Agreement.

Prior or contemporaneous collateral agreement.

463. (1890.) The existence of a written contract or instrument, duly executed between the parties to an action and delivered, does not prevent the party apparently bound thereby from pleading and proving that conteporaneously with the execution and delivery of such contract or instrument the parties had entered into a distinct oral agreement which constitutes a condition on which the performancee of the written contract or agreement is to depend. Norman v. Waite, 30 Neb. 302 (46 N. W. 639).

464. (1893.) An employee brought suit against the purchaser of his employer's business to recover wages due from his employer at the time of the sale, alleging that in part consideration for the purchase price the defendant agreed to pay employer's debt to the plaintiff; that the agreement was omitted from an instrument in the form of a receipt set out in the petition, and containing other terms of the transfer; and that the omission was to prevent a third person from learning of the promise. Held, That such a promise may be proved by parol where the promisee was induced to execute the writing on the faith of the oral promise. Barnett v. Pratt, 37 Neb. 343 (55 N. W. 1050).

465. (1902.) Parol evidence tending to establish a separate oral agreement between the parties to a written contract, as to matters upon which such contract is silent, and not against its terms is admissible. Huffman v. Ellis, 64 Neb. 623 (90 N. W. 552).

466. (1902.) A written building contract provided that the work was to be done according to certain plans and specifications to the satisfaction of one of the parties "in design, workmanship, and finish." The plans and specifications contained no details as to certain materials required, and nothing was specified as to where they were to be obtained. Held, That parol evidence was admissible to show that at the time the contract was made such party insisted that said materials must be obtained in the east, because he considered the eastern designs, workmanship and finish superior, and to show that a subsequent purchase of such materials in the east was in pursuance of the understanding when the contract was made and to comply with the requirements he was empowered to make by its express terms. Creedon v. Patrick, 3 Unof. 459 (91 N. W. 872).

467. (1904.) If a written agreement is incomplete upon its face, parol evidence not in conflict therewith is admissible to supply its deficiencies. Bell v. Wiltson, 5 Unof. 486 (98 N. W. 1049).

468. (1904.) If out of the purchase price of a chose in action the assignor has agreed to discharge an obligation against the same, his agreement so to do may be shown by parol, although a contract of assignment making no mention of such agreement or of the purchase price may be in writing. Bell v. Wiltson, 5 Unof. 486 (98 N. W. 1049).

469. (1905.) The admission of oral evidence to explain the possession of and to prove that the delivery of a written contract was conditional, and that such delivery was not to become effective until the happening of some other event, is not a violation of the rule which would prohibit the introduction of oral evidence to contradict or vary the terms of the contract. Dodd v. Kemnitz, 74 Neb. 634 (104 N. W. 1069).

Subsequent agreements.

470. (1886.) It is competent to prove by parol a change or modifications in the terms of a written contract made by the parties to such contract at a time subsequent to the execution thereof; and the consideration for the contract may be a sufficient consideration for such change or modification. Morrissey v. Schindler, 18 Neb. 672 (26 N. W. 476).

471. (1887.) After a contract has been reduced to writing, it is competent for the parties, at any time before breach of it, by a new contract, not in writing, either altogether to waive, dissolve, or annul the former agreement, or in any manner to add to, or subtract from, or vary or qualify the terms of it; which is to be proved partly by the written agreement and partly by the subsequent verbal terms, engrafted upon what will be thus left of the written agreement. Delaney v. Linder, 22 Neb. 274 (34 N. W. 630).

472. (1891.) S. and B. entered into a written contract for the exchange of certain real estate, and in addition B. agreed to pay S. $25,000 in cash. After the execution of the contract S. stated to B. that he had negotiated a loan of $25,000 from C. upon the property agreed to be exchanged with B. and suggested that B. carry out the arrangement for the purpose of the cash payment, to which B. agreed. Since C. required interest from that date, and the papers for the exchange not being ready, it was mutually agreed that S. make the mortgage and receive the $25,000 from C. and that B. assume the mortgage in lieu of a cash payment. Held, That such transaction was no variance of the contract, and proof of it did not tend to establish the contract by parol but only to prove the performance of the agreement to pay $25,000 in cash. Ballou v. Sherwood, 32 Neb. 666 (49 N. W. 790, 50 N. W. 1131).

473. (1894.) Parol evidence is competent to show that services rendered after expiration of a term of hiring were not rendered under the terms of the original contract of employment. Hale v. Sheehan, 41 Neb. 102 (59 N. W. 554).

474. (1894.) A written contract for the construction of a line of railroad only does not preclude the introduction of parol evidence of a subsequent contract for supply of cattle yards, telegraph line, and other extras necessary to equipment and operation of the road, and not within the terms of the written contract. Fitzgerald v. Fitzgerald & Mallory Construction Co., 41 Neb. 374 (59 N. W. 838).

475. (1903.) Parol evidence of a subsequent agreement whereby the seller made further and different warranties, in order to induce the buyer to execute notes for the purchase price, notwithstanding he claimed the original warranty was not complied with, is admissible. McCormick Harvesting Machine Co. v. Hiatt, 4 Unof. 587 (95 N. W. 627).

D. Construction or Application of Language of Written Instrument.

Admissibility in general.

476. (1873.) Parol evidence is admissible to supply an ommission in a written contract, which, in case of a disagreement between the parties, would otherwise be ambiguous and wholly inexplicable. Goodrich v. McClary, 3 Neb. 123.

477. (1877.) Where there is no ambiguity in the description of property in a deed, parol testimony is not admissible to show what was in fact conveyed. Frey v. Drake, 6 Neb. 1 (29 Am. Rep. 353).

478. (1888.) Parol evidence is admissible to explain that the word "Excepted" written on a draft was intended as an acceptance. Cortelyou v. Maben, 22 Neb. 697 (36 N. W. 159; 3 Am. St. Rep. 284).

479. (1899.) Where the description of property in a chattel mortgage is clear, and free from all ambiguity, parol proof is inadmissible to show the extent and meaning of the language employed. Drexel v. Murphy, 59 Neb. 210 (80 N. W. 813).

480. (1901.) Extrinsic evidence may not be received to contradict the legislative journals, but such evidence is competent to supply missing portions of the journals which had become detached through accident or design. State, ex rel Douglas County, v. Frank, 61 Neb. 679 (85 N. W. 956).

481. (1903.) Oral testimony may be introduced for the purpose of explaining an ambiguity in a written instrument. Fidelity Mutual Fire Ins. Co. v. Murphy, 4 Unof. 578 (95 N. W. 702).

482. (1907.) In the absence of ambiguity, and of fraud, accident or mistake, parol evidence is not admissible to assist in the interpretation of a written contract. Wheeler v. Moore, 78 Neb. 484 (111 N. W. 120).

Identification of subject matter.

483. (1894.) Where the description in a deed contains a call to and along a line, the true location of which is uncertain, parol evidence is admissible to show that at the time of the conveyance a particular line was in the community generally recognized by the name used in the deed. Hanlon v. Union P. R. Co., 40 Neb. 52 (58 N. W. 590).

484. (1894.) Where a written contract of dissolution of partnership requires a partner to pay certain liabilities not itemized, parol evidence may be admitted to show the items intended. Peaks v. Lord, 42 Neb. 15 (60 N. W. 349).

485. (1891.) Where property is correctly but indefinitely described in a contract, parol evidence is admissible to identify that intended. Ballou v. Sherwood, 32 Neb. 666 (49 N. W. 790, 50 N. W. 1131).

486. (1891.) B. contracted in writing to convey real property by the description of "B.'s lot 14, B. 5, and lot 11, B. 2, Boggs and Hill's addition, Omaha." Upon proof of two additions known as Boggs and Hill's, one of which was known as Boggs and Hill's second addition, that B. owned lot 14 in block 5 and lot 11 in block 2 in Boggs and Hill's second addition, but did not own or claim to own any lots in the other addition, held that the contract was not void under the statute of frauds; and held, also, that parol evidence was properly received to prove the ownership by B. of lots answering the general description contained in the contract. Ballou v. Sherwood, 32 Neb. 666 (49 N. W. 790, 50 N. W. 1131).

A. Conclusions and Opinions of Witnesses in General.

Conclusions and matters of opinion or facts.

488. (1875.) A witness testifying must state facts. His understanding of the purpose and object of a transaction is not evidence. Lacey v. Central Nat. Bank, 4 Neb. 179.

489. (1877.) A witness must testify to facts. His understanding or impression of the purpose and object of a transaction is not evidence. Clarke v. Omaha & S. W. R. Co., 5 Neb. 314.

490. (1877.) It is not competent for a witness to give an opinion as to what was appurtenant to property conveyed, and a question which in effect called for such an opinion was rightly excluded. Frey v. Drahos, 6 Neb. 1 (29 Am. Rep. 353).

491. (1882.) A question whether a party "had any right of entry to the premises" calls for a conclusion, and is inadmissible. Searles v. Oden, 13 Neb. 344 (14 N. W. 420).

492. (1884.) Testimony of defendant as to whether he was indebted to plaintiff on a certain day, being a conclusion, is properly excluded. Frederick v. Ballard, 16 Neb. 559 (20 N. W. 870).

493. (1889.) In an action for the purchase price of goods ordered by an alleged partner of defendant the latter cannot testify to the conclusion whether there "was any authority in (the alleged partner) to order the goods." Maurer v. Miday, 25 Neb. 575 (41 N. W. 395).

494. (1895.) On the trial of a libel suit the plaintiff called as a witness another clergyman, of whom he inquired what effect it would have upon a clergyman to charge him with repeatedly and persistently uttering statements that are contrary to the truth, and with defaming the good name of members of the church. The witness answered that the charge would be detrimental to the clergyman's reputation and usefulness, and would destroy his reputation for honesty and qualifications for his office. Held, That the evidence of the witness was a mere opinion and its admission was error. Piper v. Woolman, 43 Neb. 280 (61 N. W. 588).

495. (1898.) A non-expert witness may testify to a conclusion when, from the nature of the subject under investigation, it is not possible to lay before the jury all the facts from which such conclusion is drawn. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Palmer, 55 Neb. 559 (76 N. W. 169).

496. (1898.) In an action for damages for assault and battery a question put to plaintiff asking whether or not any person could have been standing in the hallway when the alleged assault took place is not objectionable as calling for a mere conclusion of the witness. Barr v. Post, 56 Neb. 698 (77 N. W. 123).

497. (1900.) Witnesses should state facts, and not mere conclusions. Orcutt v. Polsley, 59 Neb. 575 (81 N. W. 616).

498. (1901.) Whether the whole of a conversation which a witness has detailed in full is embodied correctly in a written document in evidence is a question for the court and jury, and the opinion of the witness on such question is not admissible. Union State Bank v. Hutton, 1 Unof. 795 (95 N. W. 1061).

498*a*. (1902.) An answer of a witness in a deposition is not to be stricken out because in answer to a proper question he gives the effect of a conversation instead of the very terms thereof. If the other party desires to know what transpired in more detail, he should cross-examine. Bowman v. Wright, 65 Neb. 661 (91 N. W. 580).

499. (1902.) Where it is practicable to place before the jury all the facts supporting the opinion of a non-expert, the witness should be restricted in his testimony to such facts, and the jurors left to form their opinion from the facts alone, without the aid of the opinion of the witness. Read v. Valley Land & Cattle Co., 66 Neb. 423 (92 N. W. 622).

500. (1907.) In an action of forcible entry and detention, a question asked of a witness as to who was in possession of the property was not objectionable as calling for the conclusion of the witness on legal possession, in the absence of anything in the form of the question or previous questions put to witnesses indicating that the word was used in its technical sense as synonymous with seizin. Iler v. Miller, 78 Neb. 675 (111 N. W. 589).

Discretion of court.

501. (1901.) The competency of opinion evidence is largely in the discretion of the trial judge, and unless it is clearly inadmissible the ruling will not be disturbed. Jerabek v. Kennedy, 61 Neb. 349 (85 N. W. 279).

Inferences from collective facts.

502. (1901.) It is error to admit general conclusions of one who has examined the record as to what is shown, as to insolvency of an estate, by the probate records, and to refuse the admission of the record itself. Quinby v. Ayers, 1 Unof. 70 (95 N. W. 464).

503. (1901.) Testimony of a witness to a conclusion of fact not sustained by the particular facts upon which his conclusion is based need not be submitted to the jury. Winterringer v. Warder, Bushnell & Glessner Co., 1 Unof. 413 (95 N. W. 619).

504. (1903.) Where the expert witness saw the occurrence with reference to which he testifies, and differences of opinion as to the conclusion to be drawn may reasonably arise, he should be required to state facts, rather than give his conclusion upon the ultimate issue. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Holmes, 68 Neb. 826 (94 N. W. 1007).

505. (1904.) Expert testimony must be based upon supposed facts of the existence of which there is evidence before the court. Goken v. Dallugge, 72 Neb. 16 (99 N. W. 818).

Matters directly in issue.

506. (1903.) It is error to permit an expert witness to give his opinion on the ultimate fact to be determined by the jury. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Holmes, 68 Neb. 826 (94 N. W. 1007).

507. (1903.) Where the facts upon which the opinion of an expert witness is based are stated, and the conclusion is one which must necessarily be drawn from such facts, error in permitting an opinion upon the ultimate fact to be determined by the jury to be given in evidence is without prejudice. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Holmes, 68 Neb. 826 (94 N. W. 1007).

508. (1906.) The opinion of an expert witness on the question of insanity, which assumes the point in dispute, is valueless. Ames v. Ames, 75 Neb. 473 (106 N. W. 584).

Special knowledge as to subject-matter.

509. (1890.) Action for damages from overflow caused by railway bridge; testimony of non-experts in bridge building properly admitted so far as it consisted of facts within their knowledge. Omaha & R. V. R. Co. v. Brown, 29 Neb. 492 (46 N. W. 39).

Personal conduct.

510. (1903.) A question put to a non-expert witness—"Q. What would you say was the treatment accorded by Mrs. Bullard to Mrs. Laughlin—the treatment usually accorded to hired help, or was it that which is usually extended to members of the family?"—held properly excluded as calling for a conclusion. Bullard v. Laughlin, 4 Unof. 697 (96 N. W. 159).

Cause and effect.

511. (1889.) Testimony of the party claiming to have been defrauded, that he relied upon the alleged false representations and that the same induced him to make the contract, is not the statement of a conclusion, and hence is admissible. Cressler v. Rees, 27 Neb. 515 (43 N. W. 363; 20 Am. St. Rep. 691).

512. (1895.) A coroner who is a physician and surgeon may state his opinion as to the manner of a death where no one was present when it occurred. Gran v. Houston, 45 Neb. 813 (64 N. W. 245).

513. (1904.) When medical testimony is relied upon to prove the cause or effect of a physical injury, it seldom goes further than an opinion based on the experience of the witness and the general learning of the profession. Positive statements of fact are seldom indulged in by physicians when testifying as experts, and yet this character of testimony is universally admitted by the courts of this country. City of South Omaha v. Sutliffe, 72 Neb. 746 (101 N. W. 997).

Bodily appearance or condition.

514. (1883) One who is neither a physician nor surgeon is not competent to testify as to the condition of plaintiff's arm, as to dislocation at the wrist. O'Hara v. Wells, 14 Neb. 403 (15 N. W. 722).

515. (1883.) Although a non-expert witness is incompetent to give his opinion as to the existence of a dislocation of a limb, he may describe its appearance, as he saw it, to the jury. O'Hara v. Wells, 14 Neb. 403 (15 N. W. 722).

Mental condition or capacity.

516. (1896.) As the result of personal observation after stating the facts observed, a non-professional witness may give his opinion as to sanity. Hay v. Miller, 48 Neb. 156 (66 N. W. 1115).

517. (1898.) Non-expert witnesses can be permitted to express opinions as to the sanity or insanity of a person only when they have shown other sufficient qualifications, and have stated the facts and circumstances upon which their opinion of mental condition is based. Lamb v. Lynch, 56 Neb. 135 (76 N. W. 428).

518. (1902.) One shown to have an extended and intimate acquaintance with another is competent to state whether or not, in her opinion, such person is sane or insane. Clarke v. Irwin, 63 Neb. 539 (88 N. W. 783).

519. (1906.) Non-expert witnesses called upon the question of the mental capacity of a testator must state the facts upon which their opinion of incapacity is based. Isaac v. Halderman, 76 Neb. 823 (107 N. W. 1016).

520. (1907) One who shows an intimate acquaintance with a person whose mental capacity is in question, and who is familiar with his general conduct, who had occasion to and did observe the party and his condition at the time when his state of mind is in dispute, may testify affirmatively that in his opinion such person was of sound mind and possessed of his normal faculties, while the opinion that such person was of unsound mind must be based on facts consisting of particular acts or conduct indicating unsoundness. In re Estate of Wilson, 78 Neb. 758 (111 N. W. 788).

Handwriting.

Comparison of handwritings, see post, §§ 620-622.

521. (1894.) A witness may testify to the signature of one whom he has never seen write, if he has sent to, and received in reply letters, the replies coming apparently from such person. Violet v. Rose, 39 Neb. 660 (58 N. W. 216).

Rate of speed.

522. (1889.) It is not necessary to the admissibility of the testimony of a witness as to the rate of speed a train of cars was running at the time of an accident, that such witness should be an expert in the matter of the speed of trains. Any person of sound mind and judgment, who has observed trains running or other objects in motion, and who has an opinion thereon based upon seeing the train at the time in question, is a competent witness upon the subject, the jury being the judges of the weight of his testimony. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Clark, 26 Neb. 645 (42 N. W. 703).

523. (1902.) A witness accustomed to observing the running of trains, and who observed one at the time of an accident and noticed its speed, may give his opinion, together with all the facts on which it is based, as to the rate of speed at which the train was running. Union P. R. Co. v. Ruzicka, 65 Neb. 621 (91 N. W. 545; 101 Am. St. Rep. 614).

524. (1902.) A witness need not be an expert in order to be permitted to give his opinion of the rapidity of motion of familiar objects like railway trains and street cars, but he must be shown to have had, and to have availed himself of, an opportunity for observation in the case in hand. Mathieson v. Omaha Street R. Co., 3 Unof. 743 (92 N. W. 639).

525. (1902.) A non-expert who can testify to the rate of speed of a street railway car, only as the result of a mathematical calculation made after the event, is not a competent witness on the subject. Mathieson v. Omaha Street R. Co., 3 Unof. 747 (97 N. W. 243).

526. (1903.) A witness who sees a moving car, and possesses a knowledge of time and distance, is competent to express an opinion as to the rate of speed at which the car was moving. Omaha Street R. Co. v. Larson, 70 Neb. 591 (97 N. W. 824); (1907) Coffey v. Omaha & C. B. Street R. Co., 79 Neb. 286 (112 N. W. 589).

Quantity.

527. (1889.) In an action to recover damages for false weighing of plaintiff's cattle, the opinion of witnesses of long experience in raising, feeding, handling, and weighing cattle is admissible for the purpose of establishing the falsity of such weight. Filley v. Billings, 26 Neb. 537 (42 N. W. 713).

528. (1890.) In an action for the removal of earth at twenty cents per cubic yard, one S. testifies that he had cross-sectioned the work before the grading was done, and in substance that the measurements were accurate. A Mr. H. then testified that he and S. had made estimates from the data furnished by S. and from such data a certain number of cubic yards of earth had been removed. Held, That the evidence of H. was properly received. Clarke v. Williams, 29 Neb. 691 (46 N. W. 82).

Boundaries.

529. In determining boundary lines between lands, non-experts, who have knowledge of the location of the lines as established by the government, may testify. (1889) Obernalte v. Edgar, 28 Neb. 70 (44 N. W. 82); (1902) Baty v. Elrod, 66 Neb. 735 (92 N. W. 1032).

530. (1906.) When a government monument between adjoining lands has been obliterated, its location may be proved by testimony of witnesses acquainted therewith. Reed v. Burrell, 77 Neb. 76 (108 N. W. 155).

Value.

531. (1887.) Testimony of a competent expert as to value of property, based upon what he would give for it, properly admitted, though unexplained might tend to diminish the weight of his testimony. Connelly v. Edgerton, 22 Neb. 82 (34 N. W. 76).

532. (1894.) In an action to recover for a loss under a policy, it is competent for the insured, who was acquainted with the value of the property destroyed at the time of the fire, to testify as to such value. Western Home Ins. Co. v. Richardson, 40 Neb. 1 (58 N. W. 597).

533. (1895.) Where the value of a stock of dry goods is in issue it is not competent to inquire of a witness not shown to have seen, or to know anything in regard to, the stock, what proportion of the original cost would represent the value of a stock of dry goods after it had been in a store three months. Smith v. First Nat. Bank of Chadron, 45 Neb. 444 (63 N. W. 796).

534. (1896.) In an action against a railroad company for setting out fire upon its right of way which spread to the lands of the plaintiff and destroyed trees thereon the plaintiff testified as to the value of the trees. On cross-examination he said that in estimating their value he considered what they were worth to him as ornamental trees and as adding to the value of the land. Held, That a motion to strike out his testimony as to value was properly overruled. Kansas City & O. R. Co. v. Rogers, 48 Neb. 653 (67 N. W. 602).

535. (1898.) One may testify to the value of his own services although his information in regard to the matter is chiefly derived from others adequately informed on the subject. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Palmer, 55 Neb. 559 (76 N. W. 169).

536. (1901.) Objection to certain testimony of witnesses, who were permitted to testify as to the value of services claimed to have been rendered by plaintiffs, held not well taken. Green v. Lancaster County, 61 Neb. 473 (85 N. W. 439).

537. (1906.) It is not error to permit a witness to testify whether or not growing timber is valuable as ornamental or shade trees or as a protection to the owner's premises. Union P. R. Co. v. Murphy, 76 Neb. 545 (107 N. W. 757).

Damages.

538. (1883.) On the trial of a question of damages for an injury to growing crops, neither science nor unusual skill being involved, the witnesses should be confined in their testimony to a statement of the facts showing the injury, and should not be permitted to express opinions as to the amount of the damages or loss occasioned thereby. Burlington & M. R. R. Co. v. Schluntz, 14 Neb. 421 (16 N. W. 439).

539. (1883.) On the trial of a right of way case a witness may state that the taking of a right of way across plaintiff's farm in a diagonal direction from the N. E. corner to the S. W. corner is a damage to the remaining and severed pieces of land, and may state in what such damage consists. Re- publican V. R. Co. v. Linn, 15 Neb. 234 (18 N. W. 35).

540. (1888.) Where a land owner sustains injury to his crops, land, etc., caused by the negligence of a railroad company, a witness who possesses the requisite knowledge may testify to the value of the crops, property, etc., and to facts and circumstances calculated to inform the jury on those questions, but will not be permitted to state the amount of damages sustained by a party for loss of crops or other injuries —that being a matter for the jury to determine. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Marley, 25 Neb. 138 (40 N. W. 948; 13 Am. St. Rep. 482).

541. (1889.) A witness called to testify to the damages to certain private property from the location and construction of a public improvement near it, may state what the property was worth immediately before the location and construction of the improvement, and immediately afterwards; in other words, what the property was worth without the improvement, and what it is worth with it, not considering general benefits, but cannot be permitted to state the amount of damages thereby sustained by the land owner, as that is a deduction to be made by the jury from the evidence. City of Omaha v. Kramer, 25 Neb. 489 (41 N. W. 295; 13 Am. St. Rep. 504).

542. (1894.) A party cannot testify as to his opinion of the amount of his damages, but the facts upon which the court or jury can make such estimates are to be given. Jameson v. Kent, 42 Neb. 412 (60 N. W. 879).

543. (1898.) One may testify to the value of his own services although his information in regard to the matter is chiefly derived from others adequately informed on the subject. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Palmer, 55 Neb. 559 (76 N. W. 169).

544. (1902.) It is an invasion of the province of the jury in the trial of a cause to permit an expert to give his opinion as to the amount of damages which should be awarded. Read v. Valley Land & Cattle Co., 66 Neb. 423 (92 N. W. 622).

545. (1906.) In order to establish the amount of damages to merchandise by reason of flooding basement, it is not permissible for a witness to testify to his conclusion as to the amount of damages; he should state the facts within his knowledge, and from those and other facts in evidence it is for the jury to determine the amount of damages sustained. City of McCook v. McAdams, 76 Neb. 1 (106 N. W. 988).

546. (1906.) In an action for damages to growing trees, evidence showing the effect the destruction of the trees had on the value of the land is admissible when the nature of the trees destroyed is such that they have no value, except with reference to and as a part of the real estate. Alberts v. Husenetter, 77 Neb. 699 (110 N. W. 657).

546*a*. (1908.) Where one claims his property has been damaged by certain acts of the defendant, it is not proper to ask the witness in what manner he has been damaged, but he should state the facts, and the jury will then in the exercise of its functions find whether the litigant has been damaged. Kendrick v. Furman, 80 Neb. 797 (115 N. W. 541).

——— Depreciation in value.

547. (1895.) Where the value of a stock of dry goods is in issue it is not competent to inquire of a witness not shown to have seen, or to know anything in regard to the stock, what proportion of the original cost would represent the value of a stock of dry goods after it had been in a store three months. Smith v. First Nat. Bank of Chadron, 45 Neb. 444 (63 N. W. 796.

——— Value before and after injury complained of.

548. (1881.) Witnesses should not be permitted to express their opinions before the jury of the value of the land, subject to the right of way. This should be left to the jury to ascertain from facts affecting the value, and proper to be considered, uninfluenced by the opinion of others. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Whalen, 11 Neb. 585 (10 N. W. 491). [Modified. Republican V. R. Co. v. Arnold, 13 Neb. 485).

549. (1882.) Where persons are shown to be familiar with the value of a particular piece of land, across which a railroad has been built, they may be permitted to testify as to the value of such tract immediately before the location of the road, and to the value thereof immediately afterwards. Republican V. R. Co. v. Arnold, 13 Neb. 485 (14 N. W. 478); (1888) Blakeley v. Chicago, K. & N. R. Co., 25 Neb. 207 (40 N. W 956); (1889) Burlington & M. R. R. Co. v. White, 28 Neb. 166 (44 N. W. 95).

B. Subjects of Expert Testimony.

See, also, Witnesses, II.

Matters of opinion or facts.

550. (1893.) It is not prejudicial error to permit an expert to state what steps he would take in a given case if the question does not refer to any matter in dispute but is merely introductory in its character. Hewitt v. Eisenbart, 36 Neb. 794 (55 N. W. 252).

www.libool.com.cn

551. (1902.) The testimony of a medical expert is not objectionable as being conjectural and speculative, because it gives the opinion of such expert as to the probability of a physician's accomplishing a certain result in a given time if he had been in attendance upon a woman in confinement. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Church, 3 Unof. 22 (90 N. W. 878).

Matters of common knowledge.

552. (1894.) Expert testimony is not competent, and cannot be received upon a subject of inquiry of such a character as to be within the knowledge of men of common education and experience and to require no special skill, knowledge, or experience in considering or forming an opinion upon. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Lawler, 40 Neb. 356 (58 N. W. 968); (1898) Missouri P. R. Co. v. Fox, 56 Neb. 746 (77 N. W. 57).

553. (1894.) A witness cannot express an opinion as to whether under certain conditions of wind and tracks, sparks could be carried from the engine to a car thirteen cars back from it, so as to set the car on fire, since such inquiry is not a subject for expert testimony. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Lawler, 40 Neb. 356 (58 N. W. 968).

Matters involving special knowledge or skill.

554. (1900.) When the question involved does not fall within the range of common experience or common knowledge, the opinions of witnesses skilled in the particular science, art or trade to which the question relates are admissible in evidence. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Fox, 60 Neb. 531 (83 N. W. 744).

555. (1900.) Expert testimony may be received regarding a subject peculiarly within the knowledge and experience of those testifying, and which is not of such a character as to be within the knowledge of men of common education and experience in considering and forming an opinion upon it. Missiouri P. R. Co. v. Fox, 60 Neb. 531 (83 N. W. 744).

556. (1903.) In an action for malpractice in amputating part of plaintiff's hand and removing the metacarpal bone, it is proper to ask a professional witness for plaintiff, as a preliminary question, whether there is any method of cure without removing the bone. Johnson v. Winston, 68 Neb. 425 (94 N. W. 607).

557. (1903.) In an action against a physician and surgeon for alleged negligent treatment of a compound fracture of the bone, it is permissible to show by another surgeon what would be the proper treatment for a simple fracture, and that the treatment for a compound fracture would not be materially different. Liesenring v. La Croix, 68 Neb. 803 (94 N. W. 1009).

558. (1904.) Expert evidence is permitted where the facts under investigation are such that the witness is supposed, from his experience, skill and study, to have peculiar knowledge upon the subject of inquiry, which jurors generally do not possess. Horst v. Lewis, 71 Neb. 370 (103 N. W. 460).

Matters directly in issue.

559. (1902.) It is improper to permit an expert to give his opinion on the ultimate fact to be determined by the jury. Read v. Valley Land & Cattle Co., 66 Neb. 423 (92 N. W. 622).

560. (1905.) An expert witness will not be permitted to usurp the functions of the jury, by finding a certain result from certain facts. City of Central City v. Marquis, 75 Neb. 233 (106 N. W. 221).

Laws of other states.

561. (1894.) The law of a sister state, when involved in the determination of an action here, is a fact to be established by evidence, and, so far, at least, as it is not statutory, is the proper subject of expert testimony. Barber v. Hildebrand, 42 Neb. 400 (60 N. W. 594).

562. (1901.) The written laws of a sister state cannot be proved by the testimony of an expert witness. Johnson v. Hesser, 61 Neb. 631 (85 N. W. 894).

Date of writing.

563. (1886.) Whether or not an indorsement on a note was made recently, is not a subject for expert testimony, and depositions of such not admissible. Cheney v. Dunley, 20 Neb. 265 (29 N. W. 925; 57 Am St. Rep. 828).

Result of examination of accounts.

564. (1904) Where a book contains voluminous accounts or transactions, the examination of which could not conveniently take place in court, an accountant, who had made an examination of the book, may testify as to the result of his computation therefrom, but not as to mere inferences. Mendel v. Boyd, 71 Neb. 657 (99 N. W. 493).

565. (1906.) An expert accountant may testify to the results of an examination and computation of complicated accounts, the books, checks or memoranda making up the account being first introduced in evidence. Kannow & Sons v. Farmers Co-operative Shipping Ass'n, 76 Neb. 330 (107 N. W. 563).

Custom or usage.

566. (1898.) In an action on a contract for the purchase of "all patterns that are staple and down to date," where no criterion was fixed by which to determine what patterns came within that description, it was error for the trial court to exclude evidence of competent witnesses regarding the standard usually adopted by the trade in selecting and purchasing such patterns. Hayden v. Frederickson, 55 Neb. 156 (75 N. W. 530).

Amount of profits.

567. (1902.) Prospective gains arising from the probable increase of a flock of sheep and the probable wool-clip are not so uncertain and contingent as to prevent proof by experts of the amount and value of such increase and wool-clip. Schrandt v. Young, 2 Unof. 546 (89 N. W. 607).

Damages.

568. (1902.) It is an invasion of the province of the jury in the trial of a cause to permit an expert to give his opinion as to the amount of damages which should be awarded. Read v. Valley Land & Cattle Co., 66 Neb. 423 (92 N. W. 622).

C. Competency of Experts.

In general.

569. (1882.) A witness not shown to have any knowledge in the matter of the construction or operation of railroads, is not competent to give an opinion as to the needs of a railroad company in respect to its depot or other grounds. Deitrichs v. Lincoln & N. W. R. Co., 13 Neb. 361 (13 N. W. 624).

570. (1884.) Witnesses who show scientific or practical skill and knowledge and experience as to matters of which they testify, are competent as experts. The weight to be given to their testimony is for the jury to determine. Sioux City & P. R. Co. v. Finlayson, 16 Neb. 578 (20 N. W. 860; 49 Am. Rep. 724).

Discretion of court.

571. (1900.) The general rule as to the competency of a witness to testify as an expert rests in the sound discretion of the court, whose rulings will not be reversed unless clearly wrong. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Fox, 60 Neb. 531 (83 N. W. 744); (1901) Schmuck v. Hill, 2 Unof. 79 (96 N. W. 158).

572. (1901) The determination of the competency of witnesses to testify as to their opinion of the value of real estate, which is the subject of controversy, rests largely in the discretion of the trial court, and a ruling thereon will not be disturbed on review except when clearly erroneous as a matter of law. Omaha Loan & Trust Co. v. Douglas County, 62 Neb. 1 (86 N. W. 936).

Accounts and book entries.

573. (1899.) A person who has held office for some considerable time, is presumably competent to give an opinion as to the meaning of entries in the books of the office evidencing business transactions therein. Paxton v. State, 59 Neb. 460 (81 N. W. 383; 80 Am. St. Rep. 689).

Machinery and mechanical devices and construction.

574. (1894.) An engineer, who examined the work two months after it was abandoned by the contractors and found the original stakes showing the depth of the ditch and was able to verify his estimate from such stakes, held competent to testify to the cost of completing such work in accordance with the contract. McDonald & Penfield v. Dodge County, 41 Neb. 905 (60 N. W. 366).

575. (1900.) Yardmaster of a railroad held competent to testify as an expert in regard to construction of car. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Fox, 60 Neb. 531 (83 N. W. 744).

576. (1900.) Persons having several years' experience in railroading, and having knowledge as to the manner of constructing road-beds and maintaining the same, held to be competent to testify, and to express an opinion, as to whether the road-bed at a certain place was properly or improperly constructed Missouri P. R. Co. v. Fox, 60 Neb. 531 (83 N. W. 744).

Obstetrics.

577. (1907.) A professional nurse, having fifteen years' experience in obstetrical cases, and who assisted at the birth of a child, is competent to testify as to her opinion whether or not the child was fully developed at the time of its birth. Souchek v. Karr, 78 Neb. 488 (111 N. W. 150).

Value.

578. (1882.) One who testified that he knew only a "portion of a lot of horses" is incompetent to give an opinion as to the value of the entire lot. Dunbar v. Briggs, 13 Neb. 332 (14 N. W. 414).

579. (1882.) Where persons are shown to be familiar with the value of a particular tract of land, they are competent to testify as to the value thereof immediately before the location of a railroad thereon, and immediately after such location. Republican V. R. Co. v. Arnold, 13 Neb. 485 (14 N. W. 478); Burlington & M. R. R. Co. v. White, 28 Neb. 166 (44 N. W. 95).

580. (1883.) The owner of land taken for right of way by a railroad company, having resided upon and improved it for several years, who swears that he knows what it is worth, is a competent witness on the question of its value. Burlington & M. R. R. Co. v. Schluntz, 14 Neb. 421 (16 N. W. 439); (1884) Sioux City & P. R. Co. v. Weimer, 16 Neb. 272 (20 N. W. 349).

581. (1883.) Persons who have for several years resided in the immediate neighborhood of the land, are competent to testify as to the value of the land taken under the right of eminent domain. Burlington & M. R. R. Co. v. Schluntz, 14 Neb. 421 (16 N. W. 439); (1884) Sioux City & P. R. Co. v. Weimer, 16 Neb. 272 (20 N. W. 349).

582. (1887.) Testimony of expert as to value of property not inadmissible because he has not seen it since about a month prior to time when value was to be established; it being shown by other testimony that the property was in substantially the same condition at both periods of time. Connelly v. Edgerton, 22 Neb. 82 (34 N. W. 76).

583. (1888.) In an action to recover damages for real estate condemned fro right of way for a railway company, a witness who testified that he resided near the land condemned, and was acquainted with the value of the real estate in that vicinity at the time of the condemnation, is prima facie a competent witness to prove the amount of damages sustained by the landowner. Northeastern Nebraska R. Co. v. Frazier, 25 Neb. 53 (40 N. W. 609).

584. (1891.) A witness who, in answer to questions by counsel for the plaintiff, testified that he had resided in the town of Harvard for about six years; was engaged in land and loan and general real estate business, and had been so employed for about six years; that he had a very fair idea of the value of real estate in Harvard, and was acquainted with the property of the plaintiff in dispute ever since he had resided in the town; that he knew about the time that the grade of the street was established, is competent to testify as to what was the fair market value of the Hammond property immediately prior to the establishment of the grade. Hammond v. City of Harvard, 31 Neb. 635 (48 N. W 462).

585. (1892.) A person having a general knowledge of the value of household goods may testify as to such value although he may not have dealt in goods of that kind. Omaha Auction & Storage Co. v. Rogers, 35 Neb. 61 (52 N. W. 826).

586. (1896.) One who has resided upon and owned real estate for twenty years, and is acquainted from hearsay with the recent sales of land in the vicinity and the prices paid therefor, is a competent witness to the value of his own property. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Shafer, 49 Neb. 25 (68 N. W. 342).

587. (1897.) In a suit by a landowner against a county to recover damages which he alleged he had sustained by reason of the appropriation of a part of his land towards the construction of a public highway, a supervisor of such county, who participated in the location of such highway, and in passing upon the claim filed by the landowner against the county for damages, is a competent witness in behalf of the county. Lane v. Harlan County, 51 Neb. 641 (71 N. W. 302).

588. (1898.) Where the owner resided on land taken for right of way and is familiar with the value of the land, he is a competent witness on the question of such value. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Buel, 56 Neb. 205 (76 N. W. 571).

589. (1899.) To lay a foundation for testimony as to the value of goods in common use it is sufficient to show that witness, by purchasing and by pricing similar goods, is in a general way familiar with their value, the weight of his opinion being for the jury.

Langdon v. Wintersteen, 58 Neb. 278 (78 N. W. 501).

590. (1901.) One who has kept a team for another is competent to testify as to the value of such keep. McCormick Harvesting Machine Co. v. Davis, 61 Neb. 406 (85 N. W. 390).

591. (1901.) When one of the questions in a lawsuit is the value of the use and occupation of real property in a city, one of the parties, who immediately before the litigation arose had for a considerable time occupied the premises for business purposes and was seeking for damages for alleged unlawful dispossession of them, is a competent witness, after swearing that he knows such value, to testify what he considers it to be, his degree of competency and the effect of his interest upon his credibility being left to the jury to determine. Ish v. Marsh, 1 Unof. 864 (96 N. W. 58).

592. (1902.) Resident owners of farm property in the particular locality, who are acquainted with the land in question, are qualified to testify as to its value, although no recent sales have been made in the locality upon which to base the estimate of value. Greeley County v. Gebhardt, 2 Unof. 661 (89 N. W. 753).

593. (1904.) The fact that a witness as to values, shown to be competent in that respect, testifies on cross-examination that in making his estimate he took into consideration, besides matters that were proper to be so considered, other matters that were not proper for that purpose, does not entitle a party to have the entire testimony of the witness upon that subject withdrawn from the jury and stricken from the record. Union P. R. Co. v. Stanwood, 71 Neb. 150 (91 N. W. 191).

594. (1904.) Persons who have resided for several years and own property in the immediate neighborhood of property alleged to have been damaged by grading a street in front of such property, and who seem, upon examination, to be well informed of its situation, condition and value, are competent witnesses on the question of its value. City of South Omaha v. Ruthjen, 71 Neb. 545 (99 N. W. 240).

595. (1905.) A husband and wife are competent to express an opinion as witnesses concerning the value of their own household furniture. Lincoln Supply Co. v. Graves, 73 Neb. 214 (102 N. W. 457).

596. (1907.) One who has been engaged in ordinary mercantile business for a considerable time may testify as to the value of his services and attention to such business. Howard v. McCabe, 79 Neb. 42 (112 N. W. 305).

Quality.

597. (1893.) In an action to recover upon an account for flour sold, where the defendant pleads a breach of warranty, a person engaged in selling flour in the different markets of the state, and knows what flour is worth at defendant's place of business, may testify as to the quality of the flour sold. Reed v. Davis Milling Co., 37 Neb. 391 (55 N. W. 1068).

Handwriting.

597*a*. (1901.) Where a witness swears that he has made a special study of and has been an instructor in penmanship for twenty-five years and has given special attention to the comparison of signatures, such evidence is sufficient to qualify him to testify as an expert on handwriting. Heffernan v. O'Neill, 1 Unof. 363 (96 N. W. 244).

Preliminary evidence as to competency.

598. (1881.) A witness before he is competent to testify as to the value of property must show by his testimony that he has knowledge of the value of such property. Engster v. State, 11 Neb. 539 (10 N. W. 453).

599. (1882.) Where a witness is called to testify as to whether proper care was given to stock during the winter, it was competent to show by the number of cattle kept by him as a foundation for his opinion. Catlin v. Wright, 13 Neb. 558 (14 N. W. 530).

600. (1883.) Without a showing, there is no presumption that a witness is competent to give a reliable estimate of the market value of land; and where one's competency is challenged, before he should be permitted to express an opinion it should be made to appear that he has in some way become qualified to do so. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Coon, 15 Neb. 232 (18 N. W. 62).

601. (1886.) Where a witness is examined in the trial of a cause as an expert, and testifies as to his opinions upon scientific questions involved in his profession, it is competent upon cross-examination to inquire as to the extent of his knowledge and his familiarity with the accredited standard authors of his profession. Hutchinson v. State, 19 Neb. 262 (27 N. W. 113).

cross-examination as to the capacity of the witness to testify as an expert held properly excluded. Denise v. City of Omaha, 49 Neb. 750 (69 N. W. 119).

603. (1897.) It is not error to exclude expert evidence for the introduction of which no proper foundation has been laid. Union P. R. Co. v. Evans, 52 Neb. 50 (71 N. W. 1062).

D. Examination of Experts.

Laying foundation.

604. (1903.) In an action for malpractice in amputating part of plaintiff's hand and removing the metacarpal bone, a surgeon of thirty-five years' experience, who has inspected the amputated bone, may be asked to examine plaintiff's hand, and state what ligaments would need to be severed in the operation, without a preliminary showing that the question can be answered from such inspection. Johnson v. Winston, 68 Neb. 425 (94 N. W. 607).

Hypothetical question.

605. (1883.) If hypothetical questions are resorted to in the examination of expert witnesses, they must be so framed as to fairly reflect facts, either admitted or proved by other witnesses. O'Hara v. Wells, 14 Neb. 403 (15 N. W. 722); (1886) Morrill v. Tegarden, 19 Neb. 534 (26 N. W. 202).

606. (1886.) Hypothetical questions to experts must be framed so as to fairly reflect facts either admitted or proved by other witnesses and must not assume as proven that which has not been, nor should they be based upon conclusions of fact which can only be found by a jury. Ballard v. State, 19 Neb. 609 (28 N. W. 271).

607. (1893.) A judgment will not be set aside because an expert witness was permitted to answer a hypothetical question assuming a fact unsupported by the evidence, where such fact was the only hypothesis of the question, not combined with others based upon evidence, and the answer could not mislead the jury. Hewitt v. Eisenbart, 36 Neb. 794 (55 N. W. 252).

608. (1894.) Some latitude must necessarily be given in an examination of medical experts and in the propounding of hypothetical questions, the better to enable the jury to pass upon the question submitted to them. It is the privilege of counsel in such cases to assume, within the limits of the evidence, any state of facts which he claims the evidence justifies, and have the opinion of experts upon the facts thus assumed. Omaha & R. V. R. Co. v. Brady, 39 Neb. 27 (57 N. W. 767).

609. (1896.) In the trial of an action for personal injuries a hypothetical question containing inquiries relating to facts expressly assumed was held not prejudicial to defendant. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Archer, 46 Neb. 907 (65 N. W. 1043).

610. (1896.) An objection to a hypothetical question put to an expert witness, that it is "incompetent, immaterial, and irrelevant," is too general to raise the point that the question involves erroneous statement of evidence. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Archer, 46 Neb. 907 (65 N. W. 1043).

611. (1896.) A hypothetical question, after stating a number of hypotheses, concluded, "[suppose] he has been unable to work by reason of such injury for a period of seven months, * * * to what would you attribute his inability to work, and for what period would he be partially or wholly incapacitated for labor, and until what time would it require for a total disappearance of the pains and other results of such injuries and leave no trace thereof?" Held, That the first two inquiries relating to facts expressly assumed were not prejudicial, and that the last was an inquiry as to the probable future duration of the injury, and a proper question to ask an expert. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Archer, 46 Neb. 907 (65 N. W. 1043).

612. (1898.) Held, That the court committed no prejudicial error in refusing to permit plaintiff in error's witness, on his redirect examination, to answer a certain hypothetical question. Barr v. Post, 56 Neb. 698 (77 N. W. 123).

613. (1898.) A hypothetical question should not be permitted when it only in part calls for the exercise of special skill or knowledge, and for the rest asks the witness to base his opinion on matters within the ordinary experience of men. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Fox, 56 Neb. 746 (77 N. W. 130).

614. (1901.) A hypothetical question is not necessarily to be rejected because it does not include all the facts in evidence. If elements, not important upon the theory of the party putting it, are omitted, the other party, deeming such elements material to the conclusion and desiring the opinion of the witness in view of them, may embody them in a further question upon cross-examination. Herpolsheimer v. Funke, 1 Unof. 471 (95 N. W. 688).

615. (1901.) All the undisputed pertinent facts of a case should be substantially included in hypothetical questions propounded to expert witnesses. Schulz v. Modisett, 2 Unof. 138 (96 N. W. 338).

Facts forming basis of opinion.

616. (1894.) The opinion of a medical expert may be based (1) on his acquaintance with the party whose condition is under investigation; (2) upon a medical examination of him which he has made; or (3) upon a hypothetical case stated to the expert in court. Omaha & R. V. R. Co. v. Brady, 39 Neb. 27 (57 N. W. 767).

617. (1888.) A witness on his examination-in-chief, or re-examination by the party calling him, when on account of his possessing special knowledge, skill, or experience, is permitted to give his opinion or judgment on a question of quality or values, if he is permitted to give the source of his special knowledge, experience or skill, it will be confined to general statements. And when he is permitted to narrate the facts and circumstances of a special transaction, outside of the case on trial, for the purpose of enabling the jury to compare the facts and results of such transaction with those of the case on trial, and in that manner impress them with the soundness of his opinion or judgment, held, error. Bollman v. Lucas, 22 Neb. 796 (36 N. W. 465).

Contradiction.

618. (1904.) When a witness as to the value of real property has testified that he based his opinion, in part, upon his information as to prices obtained upon sales of other specifically described property in the neighborhood of that in controversy, it is error to exclude evidence of what the prices obtained at each sale actually were. Union P. R. Co. v. Stanwood, 71 Neb. 150 (91 N. W. 191). [Overruled. 71 Neb. 158.]

619. (1904.) When a witness as to the value of real estate has testified that he has based his opinion upon the prices obtained upon sales of other specifically described real estate in the neighborhood of that in controversy, an offer of evidence of the prices actually obtained at such sales must include an offer to prove that such prices were in fact different from what the witness, in basing his estimate of value thereon, understood them to be. Union P. R. Co. v. Stanwood, 71 Neb. 158 (98 N. W. 656).

E. Comparison of Handwriting.

In general.

620. (1876.) A witness who is not an expert, and who has no knowledge either of the handwriting, or the signature, is not competent to give an opinion from a comparison of handwriting. First Nat. Bank of Omaha v. Lierman, 5 Neb. 247.

621. (1876.) A witness who is acquainted with the handwriting of a person whose signature is in dispute, although not an expert in judging of handwriting, is competent to give his opinion as to its genuineness. First Nat. Bank of Omaha v. Lierman, 5 Neb. 247.

622. (1890.) Under section 344 of the code, evidence respecting handwriting may be given by comparisons made, by experts or by the jury, with writings of the same person which are proved to be genuine. Grand Island Banking Co. v. Shoemaker, 31 Neb. 124 (47 N. W. 696).

F. Proof and Effect.

Conclusiveness and effect.

623. (1899.) It is error to instruct the jury that "expert evidence is of the very lowest order and is the least satisfactory." Hayden v. Frederickson, 59 Neb. 141 (80 N. W. 494).

624. (1899.) Triers of fact are not generally bound by opinion evidence of value, even when it is not met by opposing proof. Lincoln Land Co. v. Phelps County, 59 Neb. 249 (80 N. W. 818).

625. (1907.) In ejectment as to a military reservation an instruction that persons not surveyors who testify as to existence of government corners are entitled to consideration is not erroneous. Oldfather v. Ericsson, 79 Neb. 1 (112 N. W. 536).

XIII. EVIDENCE AT FORMER TRIAL OR IN OTHER PROCEEDING.

Admissibility in evidence.

626. (1886.) The report of the shorthand reporter of a district court of the testimony of a witness examined in such court is not admissible as evidence in a future action between the same parties, as documentary or independent evidence. Lipscomb v. Lyon, 19 Neb. 511 (27 N. W. 731).

627. (1889.) The record in a former trial, in the same case between the same parties, is admissible in evidence on the second trial. Filley v. Billings, 26 Neb. 537 (42 N. W. 713).

Digitized by Google

Stipulation for use.

628. (1894.) An affidavit in support of a motion for a continuance may be read to the jury as the testimony of an absent witness, where the adverse party so stipulated in order to procure the overruling of the motion, notwithstanding the facts were stated in the affidavit in the form of a conclusion. Blaine v. Poyer, 42 Neb. 709 (60 N. W. 865).

629. (1896.) Depositions taken in a case pending before a justice and by stipulation used in said case and another pending before said justice, may be used on the trial of both cases in the appellate court, the stipulation in the meantime not having been set aside. Keens v. Robertson, 46 Neb. 837 (65 N. W. 897).

Death of witness.

630. (1889.) Where, after the preliminary hearing before a justice of the peace, but before the trial, the plaintiff, in a bastardy proceeding, dies and the action is revived in the name of the county, the testimony of such plaintiff given before the justice is admissible on the trial. Dodge County v. Kemnitz, 28 Neb. 224 (44 N. W. 184).

Absence of witness.

631. (1892.) Where a witness has testified on a former trial of the case and his testimony reduced to writing in open court by the stenographic reporter, and the witness is absent from the state, such testimony, if otherwise competent, is admissible in evidence; and an objection "that no sufficient cause has been shown for the reading of that testimony" is not an objection to the mode of certifying the same, and was properly overruled. City of Omaha v. Jensen, 35 Neb. 68 (52 N. W. 833; 37 Am. St. Rep. 432).

632, 633. (1894.) Where a witness is shown to be absent from the state, his testimony given at a former trial of the cause is admissible in evidence, if otherwise unobjectionable. Omaha Street R. Co. v. Elkins, 39 Neb. 480 (58 N. W. 164); (1897) City of Ord v. Nash, 50 Neb. 335 (69 N. W. 964).

Preliminary evidence.

634. (1894.) Before the testimony of a witness at a former trial can be admitted in evidence it must be shown that he is absent from the state, or without the jurisdiction of the court, or beyond the reach of process. Young v. Sage, 42 Neb. 37 (60 N. W. 313).

635. (1896.) Where, in a trial before the judge of a district court without the intervention of a jury, a witness was allowed to state his recollection of the evidence of a witness given at a former trial foundation having first been laid for the of the case who had since died, no sufficient introduction of the evidence in such manner, and the witness making statements in giving his evidence which would have completed the foundation for its introduction, it renders the evidence competent for consideration in the determination of the issues in the action and cures the error, if any, committed by its admission. Twohig v. Leamer, 48 Neb. 247 (67 N. W. 152).

636. (1899.) The showing of the absence of a witness from the jurisdiction of the trial court held insufficient to warrant the admission of his testimony given at the former trial of the cause. Wittenberg v. Mollynéaux, 59 Neb. 203 (80 N. W. 824).

Mode of proof.

637. (1894.) The testimony of a witness in another case may be proved by any witness who heard the testimony, and who, with or without the aid of a memorandum, may speak from his own memory as to such testimony. The reporter's notes are not the only or best evidence as to such testimony. German Nat. Bank of Hastings v. Leonard, 40 Neb. 676 (59 N. W. 107).

638. (1896.) The evidence of a witness, given or used on the trial of a cause and who has since died, is competent on a subsequent trial of the same action, and where not in the form of deposition or preserved in any manner prescribed or contemplated by law, may be stated by any person who heard it given and who recollects and can state it substantially. Twohig v. Leamer, 48 Neb. 247 (67 N. W. 152).

Impeachment.

639. (1905.) On a subsequent trial the evidence of a deceased witness taken at a second trial cannot be impeached by showing that some of his statements on the witness stand at the first trial are inconsistent therewith, where upon the second trial his attention was not directed to such statements, and he was given no opportunity to explain the alleged discrepancies. Omaha street R. Co. v. Boesen, 74 Neb. 764 (105 N. W. 303).

XIV. WEIGHT AND SUFFICIENCY.

Weight and sufficiency of evidence as to particular matters, and in particular actions, see specific topics.

Weight and effect of opinion evidence, see ante, §§ 623-625.

Weight and conclusiveness in general.

640. (1877.) Where evidence is before the court which is unimpeached, the court cannot disregard it. If improper it should have been excluded; if properly admitted it must be considered and given due weight. Roberts v. City of Lincoln, 6 Neb. 352.

641. (1882.) Where the proof is of a doubtful or equivocal character, it must be construed least favorably to the party offering it. Bennett v. Rogers, 12 Neb. 382 (11 N. W. 314).

642. (1896.) A jury is not bound to accept as true all testimony of a witness not directly contradicted or impeached. Murphey v. Virgin, 47 Neb. 692 (66 N. W. 652).

643. (1901.) Where it has been held on an error proceeding in the supreme court that a petition states a good cause of action, evidence sustaining the allegations of such petition is sufficient to support a verdict and judgment in favor of the plaintiffs in the action. Garneau v. Kendall, 61 Neb. 396 (85 N. W. 291).

644. (1900.) The mere fact that the testimony of the plaintiff is contradicted in every essential particular by that of the defendant does not necessarily determine that the former has failed to make out his case by a preponderance of the evidence. Grand Island Mercantile Co. v. McMeans, 60 Neb. 373 (83 N. W. 172).

645. (1903.) Evidence sufficient to take a question to the jury will ordinarily support a verdict upon it. New Orleans Coffee Co. v. Cady, 69 Neb. 412 (95 N. W. 1017).

Circumstantial evidence.

646. (1894.) A fact may be considered as established which may be reasonably inferred from all the facts and circumstances proved in a case; and in civil actions it is sufficient if the evidence on the whole agrees with and supports the hypothesis which it is adduced to prove, and it is the duty of the jury to decide according to the reasonable probability of the truth. Union Stock Yards Co. v. Conoyer, 41 Neb. 617 (59 N. W. 950).

647. (1894.) In a civil action, when a fact may be fairly and reasonably inferred from other and all the facts and circumstances proved, it may be taken as established. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Hildebrand, 42 Neb. 33 (60 N. W. 335).

Evidence at former trial.

648. (1902.) Not error to refuse to tell the jury that statements read from record of former trial were to be given same weight as if made by witness actually present. Crane & Co v. Columbus State Bank, 3 Unof. 339 (91 N. W. 532).

Admissions in pleadings.

649. (1886.) Where a pleading, verified by oath of the party filing it, is shown in evidence and is contradictory to the amended petition on which the issues are formed, and the cause depends upon the unsupported testimony of the party, such petition is entitled to weight in the evidence. Buntz v. Cornelius, 19 Neb. 107 (26 N. W. 621).

Parol or record evidence.

650. (1886.) Where the plaintiff establishes a prima facie case by parol evidence, and the defendant establishes, by record evidence, such facts as to constitute a defense, a verdict for plaintiff is not sustained. Dickenson v. State, 20 Neb. 72 (29 N. W. 184).

Failure of proof.

651. (1882.) The evidence in a lawsuit, like a line of battle, or a chain of military defenses, is "no stronger than its weakest point"; and so, where there is a point entirely undefended, it may be said that there is an entire failure of evidence. Bennett v. Rogers, 12 Neb. 382 (11 N. W. 314).

Uncontroverted evidence.

652. (1886.) Where, upon a question of the value of the property, a witness, in answer to an hypothetical question, gives evidence of the value of property of the kind and quality of that in question, a verdict adopting such valuation will not be molested, as not supported by sufficient evidence, if no other testimony of value is given. Western Horse Ins. Co. v. Putnam, 20 Neb. 331 (30 N. W. 246)

Conclusiveness of evidence on party introducing it.

653. (1880.). Where affidavits filed in another case are erroneously admitted in evidence, the party introducing them is bound by the material facts which they establish. Campbell v. Crone, 10 Neb. 571 (7 N. W. 334).

Number or credibility of witnesses.

654. (1890.) The preponderance of evidence is not determined alone by the number of witnesses testifying to a particular fact. In determining upon which side the evidence preponderates, the credibility of the witnesses, their situation, interest, means of knowledge, and manner of testifying, should be considered. Fitzgerald v. Richardson, 30 Neb. 365 (46 N. W. 615).

655. (1902.) The preponderance of evidence is not determined alone by the greater number of witnesses who testify in favor of a party. New Hampshire Savings Bank v. Dillrance, 63 Neb. 412 (88 N. W. 653).

Degree of proof.

656. (1879.) In a civil action a preponderance of evidence is all that is required to sustain the claim of a party to the action. Search v. Miller, 9 Neb. 26 (1 N. W. 975); (1898) First Nat. Bank of Omaha v. Goodman, 55 Neb. 409 (75 N. W. 846); (1901) Western Mattress Co. v. Potter, 1 Unof. 627 (95 N. W. 841); (1904) Link v. Campbell, 72 Neb. 307 (100 N. W. 409).

657. In civil cases the party holding the affirmative of an issue is only required to establish it by a preponderance of the evidence. (1879) Patrick v. Leach, 8 Neb. 538; (1882) Kopplekom v. Huffman, 12 Neb. 95 (10 N. W. 577); (1883) Altschuler v. Algaza, 16 Neb. 631 (21 N. W. 401); (1885) Dunbar v. Briggs, 18 Neb. 94 (24 N. W. 449); (1890) Stevens v. Carson, 30 Neb. 544 (46 N. W. 655).

658. (1894.) It is not error to instruct that the party on whom the burden rests is required to establish his cause of action or defense by a fair preponderance of the evidence. Altschuler v. Coburn, 38 Neb. 881 (57 N. W. 836).

659. (1901.) The rule that a plaintiff in a civil action is only required to prove his case by a preponderance of the evidence is not altered by the fact that the acts charged upon the defendant are highly discreditable or even criminal. Schmuck v. Hill, 2 Unof. 79 (96 N. W. 158).

660. (1902.) Ordinarily a preponderance of evidence will suffice in a civil action. But a greater degree is required to overcome the express terms of a conveyance. Doane v. Dunham, 64 Neb. 135 (89 N. W. 640).

661. (1903.) The expression "unequivocal evidence," in the syllabus and opinion in McCoy v. Conrad, 64 Neb. 150, was intended as the equivalent of "evidence of an unequivocal act or conduct." A simple preponderance of the evidence is all that is required to maintain an issue of fact in a civil action. Estate of Davidson v. Davidson, 70 Neb. 584 (97 N. W. 797).

662. (1904.) The use in an instruction of the phrase "a fair preponderance of the evidence" criticised, but held not to be prejudicially erroneous. Link v. Campbell, 72 Neb. 310 (104 N. W. 939).

663. (1906.) A preponderance of the evidence is all that is required to establish a disputed fact in a civil action, and an instruction which informs the jury that, if upon any reasonable hypothesis a fact can be accounted for upon any other theory than a dishonest one, they should so find, is erroneous. Nebraska Mercantile Mutual Ins. Co. v. Myers, 76 Neb. 460 (107 N. W. 747).
