521. (1907.) The transferee of a negotiable promissory note who has purchased the same in the usual course of trade for value may maintain an action at law against the maker without proof of indorsement. First Nat. Bank of Madison v. Sprout, 78 Neb. 187 (110 N. W. 713).

——Matters admissible under general denial.

522. (1892.) Evidence that a note has been materially altered after execution is admissible on foreclosure of mortgage securing it under a general denial. Walton Plow Co. v. Campbell, 35 Neb. 173 (52 N. W. 883; 16 L. R. A. 468*n*).

523. (1896.) Want of consideration in an action on a promissory note is new matter which must be specially pleaded, and is not available as a defense under a general denial. Sharpless v. Giffen, 47 Neb. 146 (66 N. W. 285).

524. (1896.) The defense that the consideration for the note was an illegal sale of intoxicating liquors made by the payee to the maker was an affirmative defense, and could not be proved under a general denial. Dillon v. Darst, 48 Neb. 803 (67 N. W. 783).

525. (1899.) In an action by an indorsee of a note, where defendant pleads want, or failure of consideration, or payment, and notice of these facts by the plaintiff before transfer; a general denial in the reply will join the issues Knight v. Finney, 59 Neb. 274 (80 N. W. 912).

526. (1901.) In an action upon a promissory note, or other contract for the unconditional payment of money, a general denial, being regarded as the code equivalent of the common-law plea of non-assumpsit, does not put the allegation of non-payment in issue. Barker v. Wheeler, 62 Neb. 150 (87 N. W. 20).

527. (1902.) An allegation in the petition that the note sued on bears date in Oklahoma, and that twelve per cent. per annum is a lawful rate of interest by statutes of Oklahoma, is sufficient, on a general denial, to admit evidence of the Oklahoma statute. Hewit v. Bank of Indian Territory, 64 Neb. 468 (90 N. W. 250).

528. (1904.) A fraudulent alteration of the note sued upon may be shown under the general issue, and, when the whole evidence fairly raises the question, testimony tending to show that no such indebtedness as the one sued upon ever existed is competent upon the issue of alteration. Gandy v. Estate of Bissell, 72 Neb. 356 (100 N. W. 803).

——Variance.

529. (1902.) Where it is alleged in the petition that the plaintiff is the owner and holder of the notes sued on, and it develops in the testimony that the notes were indorsed and delivered to the plaintiff as collateral security for an indebtedness, such allegation and proof do not constitute a variance. Holway v. American Exchange Nat. Bank, 64 Neb. 67 (89 N. W. 382).

530. (1903.) One cannot recover as for money loaned, on a petition which charges the defendants with no other liability than that of indorsers of a promissory note. Harnett v. Holdrege, 5 Unof. 114 (97 N. W. 443).

Process.

531. (1882.) In a joint action against the maker and indorser upon a promissory note, the claim in the summons "for $75, with ten per cent. interest from February 19, 1880, and ten per cent. of amount as attorney fee upon a certain promissory note," is sufficient to apprise the indorser "of the nature of the claim against him." McKay v. Hinman, 13 Neb. 33 (13 N. W. 15).

532. (1883.) Where, in an action against the maker and several indorsers of a note, jurisdiction is acquired over one of the defendants, the court may issue its summons to any other county in this state, for service upon any of the parties found there, and acquire jurisdiction over him. Pearson v. Kansas Mfg. Co., 14 Neb. 211 (15 N. W. 346). [Overruled. 57 Neb. 534; 72 Neb. 152.]

533. (1885.) Where a surety on a promissory note has been discharged from liability by the creditor extending the time of payment to the principal, he is a defendant having such a substantial interest in the action as will permit a service and jurisdiction on a defendant residing in another county, by service on such surety. Dunn v. Haines, 17 Neb. 560 (23 N. W. 501).

Presumptions.

534. (1876.) In the absence of evidence showing the purpose and object of the assignment to the bank, it cannot be presumed that it was for a debt created in presenti, in violation of the National Banking Act. Richards v. Kountze, 4 Neb. 200.

535. (1894.) Where two makers of a promissory note are shown to be sureties for a third party, they will be presumed to be co-sureties until the contrary is shown. Eisley v. Horr, 42 Neb. 3 (60 N. W. 365).

536. (1895.) Where a mortgage of land in Nebraska is there executed and delivered to secure a note appearing from its face to have been twelve days previously executed in Iowa to a loan broker of that state, the presumption is, in the absence of explanatory evidence, that payment of the proceeds of the loan and delivery of the note and mortgage were contemporaneous acts, and that the note is not an Iowa contract. Stark v. Olsen, 44 Neb. 646 (63 N. W. 37).

537. (1898.) When one not a payee signs his name in blank upon the back of a promissory note before the delivery thereof, the law presumes he signs as maker. Drexel v. Pusey, 57 Neb. 30 (77 N. W. 351).

538. (1903.) A promissory note in the hands of the payee is, even after maturity, evidence of the existence of a debt. Goff v. Byers Bros. & Co., 70 Neb. 1 (96 N. W. 1037).

539. (1905.) Where there is no evidence as to the date of an indorsement on a negotiable promissory note of the name of the payee or an indorsee, the presumption of law is that it was made before maturity and that the holder thereof is a bona fide holder for value. Haslach v. Wolf, 73 Neb. 658 (103 N. W. 317).

Burden of proof.

540. (1888.) In an action on a note executed and delivered to plaintiff by its corporate name, it is unnecessary to prove plaintiff's corporate existence. Holland v. Commercial Bank, 22 Neb. 571 (36 N. W. 113).

541. (1892.) In an action by a payee against the acceptor of a conditional order for the payment of money, the plaintiff must aver and prove that the conditions stipulated in the order have been fulfilled in order to entitle him to recover. Stabler v. Gund, 35 Neb. 648 (53 N. W. 570).

542. (1903.) The burden of proof is upon the holder of a promissory note signed by a married woman to show that she intended to bind her separate estate for the satisfaction of the obligation. Farmers Bank v. Boyd, 67 Neb. 497 (93 N. W. 676).

——— Execution and delivery of note.

543. (1885.) In an action upon a promissory note, an answer consisting of a general denial is a denial of the execution of the note, and the burden of proof is upon the plaintiff to establish its execution and delivery before it is admissible in evidence. Donovan v. Fowler, 17 Neb. 247 (22 N. W. 424).

544. (1890.) In an action on a promissory note, where the answer is a general denial, the burden of proof is upon the plaintiff to show that the defendant executed the note. This burden does not shift to the defendant after the note is introduced in evidence, but remains with the plaintiff through the entire trial. First Nat. Bank of Madison v. Carson, 30 Neb. 104 (46 N. W. 276).

545. (1892.) In an action upon a promissory note, where the answer is a general denial, the burden of proof is upon the plaintiff to establish the genuineness of the instrument, and this burden remains with him throughout the case. Monitor Plow Works v. Born, 33 Neb. 747 (51 N. W. 129).

——— Ownership of note.

546. (1892.) Where the plaintiff claims as an indorsee of a negotiable promissory note, and the indorsement is denied in the answer, he must prove the words or form of the indorsement. It is for the court to determine its legal effect. Colby v. Parker, 34 Neb. 510 (52 N. W. 693).

547. (1894.) In a suit against the maker of a promissory note by an alleged indorsee thereof, as such, the defendant's answer denied plaintiff's ownership. Held, To entitle plaintiff to recover, he must establish, by competent evidence, that the indorsement on the note was that of the payee. Schroeder v. Nielson, 39 Neb. 335 (57 N. W. 993).

548. (1894.) Where maker of a note, in action by indorsee, denies latter's ownership, indorsee must prove that note was indorsed by payee. Rainbolt v. Strang, 39 Neb. 339 (58 N. W. 96).

549. (1901.) Where, in an answer, execution and delivery of a note and mortgage pleaded in the petition are admitted.

the burden is on the defendant to prove some fact showing want of ownership. Bank of Stockham v. Alter, 61 Neb. 359 (85 N. W. 300).

550. (1902.) Where, in an action by the alleged indorsee of a promissory note, the defendant denies the plaintiff's ownership, the burden of proof is upon plaintiff to show by competent evidence that the indorsement on the note is that of the payee. Payne v. Liebee, 3 Unof. 448 (91 N. W. 581).

——Want or failure of consideration.

551. (1879.) A negotiable promissory note is prima facie evidence of a sufficient consideration, but when between the parties to the instrument evidence is introduced to rebut this presumption, the plaintiff must satisfy the jury by a preponderance of evidence that there was a consideration. Search v. Miller, 9 Neb. 26 (1 N. W. 975).

552. (1899.) In an action on a note, by an endorsee the burden of proving want of failure of consideration, or payment, and notice of such facts by the indorsee, is on defendant. Knight v. Finney, 59 Neb. 274 (80 N. W. 912).

——Validity of consideration.

553. (1889.) Where doubt is cast upon the validity of the contract by the testimony, it is the duty of the party claiming any rights under it to make it satisfactorily and affirmatively appear that the contract was made with the intention to deliver the grain. Sprague v. Warren, 26 Neb. 326 (41 N. W. 1113; 3 L. R. A. 679*n*.

——Good faith of purchase.

554. (1885.) Where usury in the original transaction for which negotiable promissory notes were given is proved, a party who claims to have purchased the notes before maturity must assume the burden of proof to show that he is a bona fide purchaser for value before maturity and without notice. Darst v. Backus, 18 Neb. 231 (24 N. W. 681; (1888) Knox v. Williams, 24 Neb. 630 (39 N. W. 786; 8 Am. St. Rep. 220); (1892) Colby v. Parker, 34 Neb. 510 (52 N. W. 693); (1892) Suiter v. Park Nat. Bank of Chicago, 35 Neb. 372 (53 N. W. 205); (1894) McDonald v. Aufdengarten, 41 Neb. 40 (59 N. W. 762); (1903) Bovier v. McCarthy, 4 Unof. 490 (94 N. W. 965).

555. (1889.) Where usury in the original transaction is shown, and where the note has been renewed a number of times, and usurious interest added to each renewal, and the note then transferred to one who claims to be a bona fide purchaser without notice, the burden of proof is on such party to show that he is such purchaser. Lincoln Nat. Bank v. Davis, 25 Neb. 376 (41 N. W. 281).

556. (1889.) When a note has been the subject of litigation in a previous suit at law, and shows it has been trimmed and torn in such a way as to excite suspicion that something has been torn off, the burden is on the holder to show that he is a bona fide purchaser for value, or submit to equitable defenses. Richardson v. Stone, 28 Neb. 137 (44 N. W. 105).

557. (1890.) Where a note is shown to have originated in fraud, a presumption arises that a subsequent holder gave no value for it; and such presumption will prevail in an action by such holder against the maker unless rebutted by evidence of value and good faith in the transfer. Haggland v. Stuart, 29 Neb. 69 (45 N. W. 263).

558. (1890.) In an action to recover on a promissory note by an indorsee, it being shown in evidence that the note was given to the payee in consideration of his taking the maker into partnership as an attorney at law and real estate broker, the note and mortgage to be held until the proceeds of the business paid for it, the indorsee must prove that he bought and paid for the note before he received notice of the defenses under such agreement. Norman v. Waite, 30 Neb. 302 (46 N. W. 639).

559. (1891.) In an action by the assignee of a note, where the defense is usury, and a stipulation introduced that a certain person if present would so testify, and that such statement might be used in evidence, if no contradictory evidence is offered, the burden is upon plaintiff to prove the bona fides of his purchase. Richardson v. Stone, 32 Neb. 617 (49 N. W. 763).

560. (1893.) Where undisputed proof showed a want of consideration for a promissory note, and the proof failed to clearly establish the fact that the plaintiff was a bona fide purchaser for value before maturity, a verdict and judgment in favor of the defendant will not be set aside. Hooper v. Grewell, 36 Neb. 595 (54 N. W. 967).

561. (1894.) Where, to an action upon a promissory note by an indorsee thereof, the defense interposed is fraud or illegality in the inception of the contract, the burden is upon the plaintiff to prove that he is a bona fide holder for value, but where the only defense is the failure of consideration, or the like, the burden is upon the defendant to overcome the presumption that the note was transferred before due for value in the usual course of business. Violet v. Rose, 39 Neb. 660 (58 N. W. 216); (1897) Nat. Bank of Battle Creek v. Miller, 51 Neb. 156 (70 N. W. 933); (1901) Chapman v. Snyder, 1 Unof. 230 (95 N. W. 346).

562. (1895.) Where the only defense to an action by an indorsee is failure of consideration, the burden is on defendant to overcome the presumption that the note was transferred for value before maturity. Kelman v. Calhoun, 43 Neb. 157 (61 N. W. 615); (1896) Crosby v. Ritchey, 47 Neb. 924 (66 N. W. 1005); (1898) Crosby v. Ritchey, 56 Neb. 336 (76 N. W. 895); (1901) Chapman v. Snyder, 1 Unof. 230 (95 N. W. 346).

563. (1895.) Where, in an action on a promissory note by an indorsee thereof, the defense interposed is fraud in the inception of the note, the burden is upon the plaintiff to prove that he is a bona fide holder for value. Kelman v. Calhoun, 43 Neb. 157 (61 N. W. 615); (1895) Fawcett v. Powell, 43 Neb. 437 (61 N. W. 586); (1897) Nat. Bank of Battle Creek v. Miller, 51 Neb. 156 (70 N. W. 933); (1900) Thompson v. West, 59 Neb. 677 (82 N. W. 13; 49 L. R. A. 337); (1901) Chapman v. Snyder, 1 Unof. 230 (95 N. W. 346); (1906) Lahrman v. Bauman, 76 Neb. 846 (107 N. W. 1008).

564. (1897.) In an action by an indorsee of a negotiable promissory note against the maker, its mere production by the plaintiff, duly indorsed, raises a presumption of law that it was transferred before maturity and for value, and the burden is on the defendant to show that plaintiff is not an innocent holder. First Nat. Bank of Dubuque v. McKibben, 50 Neb 513 (70 N. W. 38).

——— Payment.

565. (1880.) Where an answer to an action on a note sets up that the same was to be set off against the purchase price of a certain land bought from the maker, and the reply admits such purchase but pleads payment, the burden of proving such payment is on the plaintiff. Kelsey v. McLaughlin, 10 Neb. 6 (4 N. W. 361).

566. (1887.) Where an action was brought upon a promissory note for the sum of $250, and it appeared that originally the loan had been made for $500, that a number of renewals had been had, and it was claimed by the payee that the note sued on was for the balance of the original loan; a letter written by the payee to the maker, as follows: "Your letter received, and we credit $300 on note," imposed on the payee the burden of showing that the note referred to in such letter was not that held by the payee against the defendant. Butts v. Capital Nat. Bank, 21 Neb. 586 (33 N. W. 250).

567. (1897.) Where a note was made for the amount of an unpaid subscription to the captial stock of a corporation, the payment of such note, to be available, must be pleaded and proved by the party relying on such payment, as a discharge of his liability, and a finding of the trial court adverse to such alleged discharge will not be disturbed on appeal when all the evidence on that issue is not preserved by bill of exceptions. Wyman v. Williams, 52 Neb. 833 (73 N. W. 285).

568. (1901.) A defendant setting up payment of a note sued on is encumbered with the burden of proving the same. Mains v. Mains, 1 Unof. 679 (95 N. W. 776).

——— Authority to receive payment.

569. (1891.) Where the maker of a note pays the amount thereof to one not in possession of it the burden is upon him to show authority of such party to receive payment. South Branch Lumber Co. v. Littlejohn, 31 Neb. 606 (48 N. W. 476); (1896) Richards v. Waller, 49 Neb. 639 (68 N. W. 1053); (1898) Chandler v. Pyott, 53 Neb. 786 (74 N. W. 263); (1898) Campbell v. O'Connor, 55 Neb. 638 (76 N. W. 167); (1901) Gilbert v. Garber, 62 Neb. 464 (87 N. W. 179); (1901) Thompson v. Buehler, 1 Unof. 590 (95 N. W. 854).

570. (1902.) If the maker elects to pay a negotiable promissory note to one who cannot and does not produce the note, by so doing he assumes the burden of showing that the party to whom he paid it was the owner of the note, or was authorized by the owner to receive the money for him. Coddington Savings Bank v. Anderson, 64 Neb. 205 (89 N. W. 787); (1902) Garnett v. Meyers, 65 Neb. 280 (91 N. W. 400), [see Garnett v. Meyers, 65 Neb. 287]; (1902) Consterdine v. Moore, 65 Neb. 291 (91 N. W. 399; 101 Am. St. Rep. 620), [see Consterdine v. Moore, 63 Neb. 296].

571. (1902.) One who makes payment of a promissory note to a person, not the owner of the note, and not in possession of it, at a place other than the place of payment designated therein, assumes the burden of proving that the party to whom payment was made was empowered to collect the money. Lay v. Honey, 2 Unof. 749 (89 N. W. 998).

Admissibility of evidence.

572. (1874.) Where the maker of a negotiable promissory note is sued by an endorsee, and pleads that the note was given upon an illegal contract prohibited by statute, and also pleads that the note was not transferred to the endorsee before it became due, all the evidence in respect to the contract between the original parties, and the endorsement and delivery of the note to the endorsee, should be submitted to the jury for their determination. Kittle v. De Lamater, 3 Neb. 325.

573. (1875.) Where the defense to an action on a promissory note was that the note had been given to cover an overdraft by a depositor in a bank, testimony of one of the makers, as to his understanding of the purpose and object of giving the note, is inadmissible. Lacey v. Central Nat. Bank, 4 Neb. 179.

574. (1875.) Demand for security for an overdraft by a depositor in a bank, made long after a note had been given and where there was an overdraft still due, does not constitute a part of the res gestæ. Lacey v. Central Nat. Bank, 4 Neb. 179.

575. (1876.) In determining whether the signature to a note was obtained by fraud it is proper for the jury to take into consideration all the facts and circumstances attending the transaction, in which the signature was obtained. First Nat. Bank of Omaha v. Lierman, 5 Neb. 247.

576. (1883.) There being evidence that a note sued on was transferred after maturity, evidence of payment is admissible, as against the transferee. Lamb v. Hotchkiss, 14 Neb. 102 (15 N. W. 324).

577. (1886.) Whether or not an indorsement on a note was made recently, is not a subject for expert testimony and depositions of such not admissible. Cheney v. Dunlap, 20 Neb. 265 (29 N. W. 925; 57 Am. Rep. 828).

578. (1887.) When a note sued on is claimed to have been procured by the fraud and connivance of plaintiff and one defendant, evidence that after the case was dismissed for failure of plaintiff to furnish security for costs, such defendant aided him in procuring such security, is admissible. Brown v. Herr, 21 Neb. 113 (31 N. W. 246).

579. (1889.) In an action on a note claimed to have been given without consideration and transferred to one who was not a bona fide purchaser for value before maturity, cross examination of witness, set out in opinion, held, proper, as tending to show true nature of transaction by which plaintiff acquired title to note sued on. Fifth Nat. Bank v. Edholm, 25 Neb. 741 (41 N. W. 776).

580. (1889.) Where a member of the firm, suing on a usurious note as a bona fide purchaser, was called as a witness by defendant, and it was shown by him that to his knowledge usurious interest was generally charged by the payee's bank (a member of the firm controlling which was a brother of witness) such testimony, though not conclusive against plaintiffs, is competent as a circumstance to be considered with other facts tending to establish notice of defense. Blackwell v. Wright, 27 Neb. 269 (43 N. W. 116; 20 Am. St. Rep. 662).

581. (1889.) In an action on a usurious note by one claiming to be a bona fide purchaser thereof, evidence that immediately after the alleged purchase, and before he had had an opportunity to see defendant plaintiff offered the note at a heavy discount, is admissible as a circumstance tending to show knowledge of the existing defense. Blackwell v. Wright, 27 Neb. 269 (43 N. W. 116; 20 Am. St. Rep. 662).

582. (1890.) In an action on a note given as the purchase price of a hotel, the defense being fraudulent representations as to the value of the hotel business, a monthly statement of receipts and disbursements, of the business, furnished by plaintiff to defendant during the negotiations, is admissible. Salisbury v. Iddings. 29 Neb. 736 (46 N. W. 276).

583. (1890.) In an action on a note given as the purchase price of a hotel and fixtures defended on the ground of fraudulent representations as to value, the answer alleging that defendant relied on the inventory furnished by plaintiff, testimony of defendant as to the particulars in which the inventory was false, is admissible.

Salisbury v. Iddings, 29 Neb. 736 (46 N. W. 267).

584. (1892.) In an action upon a note claimed by the defendant to be forged, it is not competent for him to introduce evidence tending to prove that the payee had, at other times and unconnected with the note in suit, negotiated paper alleged to be forged. Monitor Plow Works v. Born, 33 Neb. 747 (51 N. W. 129).

585. (1892.) A stranger took the drafts with alleged forged acceptance, and indorsed the same and delivered them in the night season to one Wheeler, and thereupon left the county. Wheeler soon after, 9 A. M. next morning, took the drafts to a bank and had them discounted for four-fifths of their face value. The alleged acceptor lived less than three miles from the bank and apparently was solvent, yet no inquiry was made of him, nor any one having knowledge of the matter in regard to the drafts. Held, That these facts were proper to be submitted to the jury in determining the question of good faith of the purchaser. State Bank of Wilcox v. Wilkie, 35 Neb. 579 (53 N. W. 603).

586. (1893.) In a suit by an indorsee against the indorser of an ordinary check, where the defense is that the check was not presented for payment within a reasonable time, inquiry as to whether the indorser was damaged by reason of the failure to present the check for payment is immaterial. First Nat. Bank of Wymore v. Miller, 37 Neb. 500 (55 N. W. 1064; 40 Am. St. Rep. 499).

587. (1894.) Where, in an action on a note, a defendant pleads both fraud and failure of consideration, it is not error for the trial court to permit the introduction of evidence as to the transactions between the original parties before the defendant has by evidence attacked plaintiff's bona fides, especially in view of the rule that the order in which proof shall be introduced rests within the discretion of the trial court. Violet v. Rose, 39 Neb. 660 (58 N. W. 216).

588. (1894.) In an action by the indorsee of a note, where the defendant pleads fraud and failure of consideration, it is not error to permit defendant to testify as to transactions between the original parties, before showing that plaintiff was not a bona fide purchaser. Violet v. Rose, 39 Neb. 660 (58 N. W. 216).

589. (1894.) When the defense to a note is usury, evidence that the indorsee knew at the time of the purchase that the payee usually loaned money at an usurious rate of interest, while insufficient of itself to charge the purchaser with notice of the defense, is competent to go to the jury as a circumstance to be considered, in connection with other proven or admitted facts, as tending to establish that plaintiff took the paper with notice of its infirmities. McDonald v. Aufdengarten, 41 Neb. 40 (59 N. W. 762).

590. (1894.) In an action on a note by an endorsee, alleged by the maker to have been given for certain corporation stock falsely represented by the payee, the maker not alleging in her answer an agreement that the note was not to be delivered until the dividends of the stock should yield a certain return, evidence that such note was not intended to be delivered until such conditions were fulfilled is irrelevant and properly excluded. Stedman v. Rochester Loan & Bank Co., 42 Neb. 641 (60 N. W. 890).

591. (1896.) Where a note executed by a devisor was canceled after his death and a new one given by the devisees, a will showing that the devise was subject to the payment of debts and that the property was bequeathed to them, may, in an action on the note, be admitted in evidence under an issue as to consideration. McCormal v. Redden, 46 Neb. 776 (65 N. W. 881).

592. (1896.) In a suit upon a promissory note given as part payment for corporation stock, the defense being that the defendants were induced to make such purchase by certain false representations of the plaintiff, testimony showing that prior to such sale he made to other persons similar misstatements in the sale to them of a portion of the same series of stock is irrelevant and immaterial. Johnson v. Gulick, 46 Neb. 817 (65 N. W. 883; 50 Am. St. Rep. 629).

593. (1896.) Where, in an action on a bill or note, the defendant is examined with respect to the genuineness of the signature alone, he should not, on cross-examination, be required to state his opinion touching collateral or incidental matters based upon a comparison of the disputed signature with others. Norfolk Nat. Bank v. Job, 48 Neb. 774 (67 N. W. 781).

594. (1897.) In an action on a promissory note, or other written agreement, a contemporaneous contract in writing, con-

595. (1897.) In a suit by an indorsee of a note, admission in evidence, over plaintiff's objection, of a published reward for payee's arrest is prejudicial error. Sanford v. Craig, 52 Neb. 483 (72 N. W. 864).

596. (1899.) In a suit by the purchaser of a note from the first indorsee, such indorsee may testify upon rebuttal as to the bona fides of the purchase and ownership of the paper. Knight v. Finney, 59 Neb. 274 (80 N. W. 912).

597. (1899.) In the trial of an action on a promissory note, the execution of which is denied, evidence of facts and circumstances surrounding the parties and attending the giving of the note is relevant. German-American Bank of Milwaukee v. Stickle, 59 Neb. 321 (80 N. W. 910).

598. (1901.) In a suit upon a promissory note, the plaintiff claiming to be an innocent purchaser thereof, the fact that the payee's name appears on the back of the note will not render the note and indorsement competent evidence without proof that it is the signature of the payee. Western Mattress Co. v. Potter, 1 Unof. 627 (95 N. W. 841).

599. (1902.) Proof that the note in question was given for a pre-existing debt contracted and due in Oklahoma, is relevant as tending to establish an Oklahoma contract. Hewitt v. Bank of Indian Territory, 64 Neb. 468 (90 N. W. 250).

600. (1902.) When the usual rate of discount is shown at the place where a note is purchased, as bearing upon the question of good faith in such purchase, it is proper to exclude evidence offered as to rates of discount in other places, although in the same county. Canon v. Farmers Bank of Cook, 3 Unof. 348 (91 N. W. 585).

601. (1902.) An offer to prove that defendant's cashier, when he purchased the note in suit, knew of other alleged fraudulent transactions of the kind in question generally, in Lincoln in the years of 1895 and 1896, and that Woods Bros., of said place, had tried to hire him as a capper, without offering to in any manner connect such proof with the transaction in question, was properly excluded as too remote to be of any assistance to the jury. Canon v. Farmers Bank of Cook, 3 Unof. 348 (91 N. W. 585).

602. (1903.) Where plaintiff alleges an absolute agreement to pay drafts of an agent if cashed by plaintiff, and defendants set up a conditional agreement, and the evidence is conflicting, defendants should be allowed to prove facts showing that under the agreement, as claimed by them, there was nothing due the drawer and no authority to make the draft. Baeschlin v. Chamberlain Banking House, 67 Neb. 196 (93 N. W. 412).

603. (1903.) In case of a draft made through a bank by an agent on a plea by the drawee of bad faith upon the bank's part, and when there is evidence showing knowledge by it of the relations of the drawer and drawee, evidence tending to show a misappropriation of the proceeds of the draft by the agent for the bank's benefit, and with its knowledge, should be admitted. Baeschlin v. Chamberlain Banking House, 67 Neb. 196 (93 N. W. 412).

604. (1904.) When, in an action upon a promissory note, there is evidence tending to show that the note sued upon is not the genuine note of the defendant, it is competent to show the circumstances surrounding the parties at the time of the alleged execution of the note. Gandy v. Estate of Bissell, 72 Neb. 356 (100 N. W. 803).

605. (1905.) In an action by a bona fide purchaser of a negotiable instrument for value before maturity, without notice, where the defense is fraud in the procurement of the paper, evidence of similar frauds committed by the agent of the payee about the same time is inadmissible. Hunt v. Van Burg, 75 Neb. 304 (106 N. W. 329).

——— Altered note.

606. (1890.) Where the defense to an action on a promissory note was that it was indorsed after maturity and that there was no consideration therefor, the note, showing on its face an alteration of dates, is not admissible in evidence without an explanation of such alteration. Johnson v. First Nat. Bank, 28 Neb. 792 (45 N. W. 161.) [Overruled. Dorsey v. Conrad, 49 Neb. 443.]

607. (1894.) A note showing on its face alteration in rate of interest should not be received in evidence until such alteration is explained. Courcamp v. Weber, 39 Neb. 533 (58 N. W. 187). [Overruled. Dorsey v. Conrad, 49 Neb. 443.]

608. (1896.) Where a promissory note is offered in evidence, and it is apparent from an inspection that there had been a material alteration thereof it may generally be received. Whether so altered prior or subsequent to its execution and delivery, is a question, finally, for the determination of the trial court or the jury, as is any controverted fact in the case, from a consideration of all the competent evidence adduced by the parties explanatory or tending to settle the disputed point. Goodin v. Plugge, 47 Neb. 284 (66 N. W. 407).

609. (1896.) A note which shows on its face a material alteration may go in evidence in the first instance, leaving the parties to such explanation of the alteration as they may choose to offer. Dorsey v. Conrad, 49 Neb. 443 (68 N. W. 645).

——— Declarations and admissions.

610. (1875.) In an action upon a promissory note, where the defense was that the note had been given in part payment of real estate, upon which an incumbrance existed, proof that one of the payees had said that "if the defendant would pay off the incumbrance plaintiffs would owe the defendant $5,000," held inadmissible. Mills v. Saunders, 4 Neb. 190.

611. (1889.) In an action by a married woman, on a promissory note the defense to which was that it was given to her husband, whose initials were the same as hers, and that the note was non-negotiable, the reply being a general denial, a question put the husband on cross-examination asking if he had not, at a certain time and place, had the note in his possession, and offered to trade it to a certain person, saying that it belonged to him, is admissible, as inconsistent with his examination in chief. Galloway v. Hicks, 26 Neb. 531 (42 N. W. 709).

612. (1890.) In an action on a note by an indorsee, statements by his agent who presented it to the maker for collection, as to who owned the note, are admissible, on behalf of the maker. Salisbury v. Iddings, 29 Neb. 736 (46 N. W. 267).

613. (1893.) In a case where a bank sues the makers of a note indorsed to it by the secretary of the payee, a corporation, the declarations of officers of such corporation, made after the transfer to the bank, are inadmissible, for the purpose of showing want of authority in the secretary to make the transfer. Commercial Nat. Bank of St. Paul v. Brill, 37 Neb. 626 (56 N. W. 382).

614. (1895.) In an action against joint makers of a note, one of whom claims his signature was forged by the other, declarations of the latter that he could imitate the signature of any person, are not admissible. Stratton v. Nye, 45 Neb. 619 (63 N. W. 928).

615. (1899.) In an action between an indorsee of a promissory note and the maker, the admissions or statements of the indorser made subsequent to the indorsement may not be received in evidence to impeach the validity or weaken the force of the indorsement or the transfer of title evidenced by it. Zimmerman v. Kearney County Bank, 57 Neb. 800 (78 N. W. 366).

616. (1899.) Each party testified of one, and only one, conversation in regard to the matter at issue,—the execution of a promissory note. They differed as to the time and place of the conversation. The one gave testimony of admissions made by the other; the latter offered to show what he said at the time and place when and where he claimed to have talked with the former of and concerning the issuable matter. This was excluded. Held, Error. Johnson v. Opfer, 58 Neb. 631 (79 N. W. 547).

617. (1901.) In an action upon an alleged promissory note, purporting to have been executed by the agent of the maker, in which action one of the matters in dispute is the authority of the agent in the premises, a letter apparently written by the maker and recognizing the existence and validity of the note, but which is not signed otherwise than by the impression thereon of the maker's name by means of a rubber stamp, without evidence as respects by whom or by what authority the stamp was affixed, is inadmissible. Reynolds v. Phillips, 1 Unof. 114 (95 N. W. 491).

618. (1903.) Where the genuineness of the note sued on is denied, evidence that several years prior to its alleged execution, the maker had stated that he was in straitened circumstances, and needed to borrow money, is not admissible. Gandy v. Estate of Bissell, 5 Unof. 184 (97 N. W. 632).

——— Parol evidence.

619. (1888.) Parol evidence is admissible to explain that the word "excepted" written on a draft was intended as an acceptance. Cortelyou v. Maben, 22 Neb. 697 (36 N. W. 159; 3 Am. St. Rep. 284).

620. (1889.) Where a note has no date of payment, the legal intendment that it is payable upon demand, cannot be changed by parol proof any more than could the express terms of a written instrument be changed. Roberts v. Snow, 27 Neb. 425 (43 N. W. 241).

www.hbook.com.cn

621. (1890.) While parol testimony may not be received to contradict or vary the terms of a promissory note, yet the consideration for which it was given may be established by parol testimony. Walker v. Haggerty, 30 Neb. 120 (46 N. W. 221); (1901) Gifford v. Fox, 2 Unof. 30 (95 N. W. 1066).

622. (1892.) In an action on a promissory note parol evidence is admissible that the amount of the note is part of a debt assumed by the holder as part consideration for the sale of a farm to him by the makers. Fall v. Glover, 34 Neb. 522 (52 N. W. 168).

623. (1893.) Where persons other than the payee had signed their names on the back of a promissory note at time of its execution, and were, after its maturity, sued by a bona fide purchaser of the note as joint makers, it was held that parol evidence could not be admitted to limit the character of their liability or show it to be different from what the law presumed it to be. Salisbury v. First Nat. Bank of Cambridge City, 37 Neb. 872 (56 N. W. 727; 40 Am. St. Rep. 527).

624. (1893.) A blank indorsement of a negotiable instrument before due, where the transfer is to a bona fide holder in the due course of business, establishes a liability which cannot be varied by parol evidence. But between the original parties a blank indorsement may be modified by parol. The entire transaction may be shown by reason of which the indorsement was made, and parol evidence is admissible for the purpose of proving the same. Holmes v. First Nat. Bank of Lincoln, 38 Neb. 326 (56 N. W. 1011; 41 Am. St. Rep. 733).

625. (1894.) Evidence of a parol agreement entered into by the makers and payee of a promissory note contemporaneously with or previous to its execution, whereby it was attempted to be shown that such note was not to become due according to its plain terms, but that its collectibility depended upon the happening of an event in the future, was incompetent, and the jury was properly instructed to give it no consideration. Van Etten v. Howell, 40 Neb. 850 (59 N. W. 389).

626. (1895.) Parol evidence is not admissible to establish a contemporaneous oral agreement not to negotiate a negotiable instrument. Waddle v. Owen, 43 Neb. 489 (61 N. W. 731).

627. (1895.) Between the original parties a blank indorsement may be modified by parol, the entire transaction may be shown by reason of which the indorsement was made, and parol evidence is admissible for the purpose of proving the actual contract made between the indorser and the indorsee at the time of the blank indorsement. True v. Bullard, 45 Neb. 409 (63 N. W. 824).

628. (1896.) As against a subsequent bona fide holder, the liability created by the indorsement in blank of a bill or note cannot be varied by parol evidence; but, as between the original parties to such an indorsement, the terms of the contract is a proper subject of inquiry, and may be established by parol evidence. Corbett v. Fetzer, 47 Neb. 269 (66 N. W. 417).

629. (1896.) As between the original parties to the indorsement, the words "without recourse," following the name of the first, and preceding the name of the second indorser of a bill or note, may be shown by parol evidence to apply to the former instead of the latter. Corbett v. Fetzer, 47 Neb. 269 (66 N. W. 417).

630. (1897.) A general indorsement of commercial paper may, except as against a bona fide holder, be explained and the precise terms of the agreement shown by parol evidence. Whitney v. Spearman, 50 Neb. 617 (70 N. W. 240).

631. (1897.) As between the immediate parties the form of an indorsement is not conclusive, but the nature of the contract may be proved by parol evidence. United States Nat. Bank v. Geer, 53 Neb. 67 (73 N. W. 266; 41 L. R. A. 439). [Rehearing, 55 Neb. 462.]

632. (1898.) Where commercial paper is indorsed in blank, the terms of the contract may be shown by parol evidence to be different from those which the law implies in such cases. United States Nat. Bank v. Geer, 55 Neb 462 (75 N. W 1088; 70 Am. St. Rep. 390; 41 L. R. A. 444).

633. (1898.) A restrictive indorsement in unambiguous language cannot be contradicted or explained by evidence resting in parol. United States Nat. Bank v. Geer, 55 Neb. 462 (75 N. W. 1088; 70 Am. St. Rep. 390; 41 L. R. A. 444).

634. (1898.) As between original parties to a note and those not innocent purchasers it may be shown by parol that one signing his name in blank on the back of the note was an accommodation indorser. Drexel v. Pusey, 57 Neb. 30 (77 N. W. 351).

635. (1901.) Parol testimony is admissible in an action upon a promissory note to show that it was given to secure the performance of an agreement whereby the payee conveyed to the maker certain lands in consideration that the maker should support the payee during his lifetime, and that the maker had performed the conditions of the agreement. Gifford v. Fox, 2 Unof. 30 (95 N. W. 1066).

636. (1902.) Where a promissory note in the usual form calls for the payment of money, evidence that it was to be paid in work and labor cannot be received against the objection of the holder. Vradenburg v. Johnson, 3 Unof. 326 (91 N. W. 496).

637. (1903.) Where the rights of innocent third parties are not involved, it is permissible to show by parol evidence that the contract between the indorser and indorsee of a promissory note was different from that which results by legal implication from a blank indorsement. Jaster v. Currie, 69 Neb. 4 (94 N. W. 995).

638. (1903.) The terms of a promissory note cannot be contradicted, altered or varied by evidence of a prior or contemporaneous parol agreement between the payor and the payee. Aultman, Miller & Co. v. Hawk, 4 Unof. 582 (95 N. W. 695).

639. (1904.) Though the language of a note executed by directors of a corporation imports a personal obligation, it may be shown by parol evidence, on an issue of reformation that the intention of both the makers and the payee was to execute an instrument binding the corporation only, and that, though the language was that which they intended, it did not express their true purpose. Western Wheeled Scraper Co. v. McMillen, 71 Neb. 686 (99 N. W. 512).

640. (1905.) Parol evidence of a custom or course of dealing previously pursued by the maker with regard to other notes of a like character is not admissible for the purpose of showing, inferentially, that the indorsers were joint makers, and thus change and enlarge their liability. Harnett v. Holdrege, 73 Neb. 570 (103 N. W. 277).

Weight and sufficiency of evidence.

641. (1886.) Defense that, at the time of execution of a note and mortgage sued on, a certain contemporaneous agreement in writing was made by the parties whereby it was intended to change the terms of the note by prescribing the methods of payment is not established by the evidence. Marshall v. Roe, 20 Neb. 307 (30 N. W. 59).

642. (1886.) Evidence of transfer after maturity, that the maker was insane, and the note sued on was without consideration; and of two set-offs which, in amount, would overbalance the note, is sufficient to sustain a verdict for the defendant in an action on a promissory note. Britton v. Berry, 20 Neb. 325 (30 N. W. 254).

643. (1887.) Where, in an action on a promissory note and account, the answer of the defendant was a plea of payment and overpayment, and there is a failure of proof to show payment of the account, a verdict for the defendant therein cannot be sustained. Tootle v. Maben, 21 Neb. 617 (33 N. W. 264).

644. (1887.) Evidence examined, and held, not to sustain finding of district court that note in suit was executed. Nebraska Land & Cattle Co. v. Bowie, 21 Neb. 667 (33 N. W. 246).

645. (1889.) In an action on several promissory notes in which a set-off is pleaded by defendant the evidence showing the verdict to be excessive, in default of a remittitur the judgment will be reversed. Everson v. Graves, 26 Neb. 262 (41 N. W. 994).

646. (1891.) Evidence held sufficient to establish oral acceptance of check by drawee. Farmers & Merchants Bank v. Dunbier, 32 Neb. 487 (49 N. W. 376).

647. (1892.) An action was brought upon two drafts which it was claimed one W. had accepted. This he denied. The proof tended to show that the alleged acceptance had been obtained, if at all, January 14, 1890, about 7 p. m., by one H., a stranger; that W. had then signed a property statement for an alleged hydro-carbon burner, which H. professed to be about to furnish to him. W. also signed two contracts. He denied that the signatures to the acceptance were his, and the jury having found that he did not sign the same, held, that the verdict conformed to the proof. State Bank of Wilcox v. Wilkie, 35 Neb. 579 (53 N. W. 603).

648. (1892.) In an action on a note, the dispute being as to the word "protest waived," preponderance of the evidence being that the defendant placed the words thereon to satisfy an indorsee, a judgment for the latter is sustained. Mehagan v. McManus, 35 Neb. 633 (53 N. W. 574).

649. (1893.) Where a bank has an arrangement with a corporation whereby the bank agrees to discount notes held by the corporation, and in pursuance of such agreement such notes have customarily been brought to the bank and been negotiated by the secretary of the corporation, such facts are sufficient evidence of the authority of the secretary to transfer a particular note and of the genuineness of the indorsement upon such note, the proceeds of the note having been placed by the bank to the corporation's credit and paid out on the corporation's checks. Commercial Nat. Bank of St. Paul v. Brill, 37 Neb. 626 (56 N. W. 382).

650. (1895.) The evidence in this case examined, and held to show such delay in presentment for payment, as discharged defendant in error from liability to the plaintiff in error as indorser of ordinary checks. First Nat. Bank of Wymore v. Miller, 43 Neb. 791 (62 N. W. 195).

651. (1895.) Evidence that notes deposited as collateral security for the payment of other notes were from time to time renewed, interest collected thereon in advance, and the time of payment extended will not of itself support a finding that the holder of such original notes thereby extended their time of payment. Benton v. German-American Nat. Bank, 45 Neb. 850 (64 N. W. 227).

652. (1895.) Verdict for plaintiff held to be sustained by the evidence in a suit on a note, where the sureties alleged that the principal delivered it without complying with an agreement to procure the signature of another surety. Brumback v. German Nat. Bank of Beatrice, 46 Neb. 540 (65 N. W. 198).

653. (1896.) In an action against a husband and wife on a promissory note, the evidence being conflicting and unsatisfactory as to a defense that the wife signed as surety, the case was properly sent to the jury. McKinney v. Hopwood, 46 Neb. 871 (65 N. W. 1055).

654. (1896.) Plaintiffs in error, on the evidence in the record, held not liable as indorsers. Corbett v. Fetzer, 47 Neb. 269 (66 N. W. 417).

655. (1896.) In an action on a note, where the genuineness of the signature was denied, the evidence examined, and held sufficient to sustain a verdict for defendant. Norfolk Nat. Bank v. Job, 48 Neb. 774 (67 N. W. 781).

656. (1896.) Evidence in an action against the indorsers of a note held to show the note to have been made by a partner after the dissolution of the firm and without authority to bind the defendant. Graves v. Norfolk Nat. Bank, 49 Neb. 437 (68 N. W. 612).

657. (1897.) In a suit on a note admitted in evidence upon uncontradicted testimony of a qualified witness who gave it as his opinion, on the only issue, that the signatures were genuine, the action of the court in directing a verdict for plaintiff was held proper. Mosher v. Farmers & Merchants Nat. Bank, 51 Neb. 55 (70 N. W. 540).

658. (1897.) When there is no other disputed question the signatures of defendants are sufficiently proved to allow of the receipt in evidence of a note alleged to have been signed by them when a witness, duly qualified to testify on that question, gives it as his opinion that the alleged signatures are genuine. Mosher v. Farmers & Merchants Nat. Bank, 51 Neb. 55 (70 N. W. 540).

660. (1901.) Evidence in an action on notes held not to support a judgment for defendant. Lewis v. North, 62 Neb. 552 (87 N. W. 312).

661. (1901.) Evidence in an action on accepted draft examined, and held to support the verdict and judgment. Clarkson Saw Mill Co. v. Patrick, 2 Unof. 191 (96 N. W. 211).

662. (1902.) Evidence examined, and held not to support the claim that time of payment of notes had been extended so as to release a surety thereon. Parker v. Taylor, 3 Unof. 318 (91 N. W. 537).

——— Want or failure of consideration.

663. (1882.) In an action upon a promissory note given for fruit trees the defense was a failure of consideration and breach of warranty, but there was no testimony tending to show the loss of trees or a breach of warranty. Held, A failure to prove the defense. Citizens Bank v. Ryman, 12 Neb. 541 (11 N. W. 850).

664. (1889.) Evidence as to consideration for note sued on held sufficient to sustain verdict for plaintiff. Herron v. Cole Bros., 25 Neb. 692 (91 N. W. 765).

665. (1895.) Evidence examined, and held not to prove a failure of consideration or to overcome the presumption that the plaintiff is a bona fide holder of the note sued on. Kelman v. Calhoun, 43 Neb. 157 (61 N. W. 615).

666. (1901.) Evidence examined, and found not to support the defense of want of consideration for, or fraud in procuring, the note and mortgage in suit. Fourth Nat. Bank of Cadiz v. Craig, 1 Unof. 849 (96 N. W. 185).

——— Validity of consideration.

667. (1880.) In an action on a promissory note the defendants answered that it was given for the balance due on an optional contract in grain in Chicago. Held, That the testimony failed to establish the defense. Pieronnet v. Lull, 10 Neb. 457 (6 N. W. 759).

668. (1887.) Evidence held to sustain finding that note sued on was obtained by the fraud and connivance of the payee and one of the makers. Brown v. Herr, 21 Neb. 113 (31 N. W. 246).

669. (1896.) Suit on a promissory note. Defense: Consideration for the note, a loan of money made by appellee to appellants at a usurious rate of interest, and that the contract was made in the state of New York and void under the laws thereof. Evidence set out at length in the opinion and held to sustain the finding of the district court that the contract between the parties was made in, and governed by the laws of, the state of Nebraska. Bascom v. Zediker, 48 Neb. 380 (67 N. W. 148).

670. (1902.) Evidence examined, and held sufficient to sustain finding that the note in suit was given in consideration of plaintiff's promise not to prosecute one of the defendants for embezzlement. Smith Premier Typewriter Co. v. Mayhew, 65 Neb. 65 (90 N. W. 939).

——— Duress.

671. (1903.) Evidence examined, and held to sustain finding that the note in suit was procured by duress, consisting of threats to prosecute the maker's son-in-law. Nebraska Mutual Bond Ass'n v. Klee, 70 Neb. 383 (97 N. W. 476).

——— Good faith of purchase.

672. (1889.) A transaction by which a grossly usurious note was transferred to a third party as alleged, before due and for a valuable consideration, but in which neither the seller nor buyer can state what had been paid or the manner of paying the same, fails to establish a bona fide purchase. Lincoln Nat. Bank v. Davis, 25 Neb. 376 (41 N. W. 281).

673. (1892.) A promissory note was given to an agent for a windmill. The agent indorsed the note and transferred it to the windmill company to be applied on his general account. The company afterwards transferred it to its general agent, who took it in satisfaction of a debt, paying the full value thereof. The windmill proved defective. Held, That the testimony tended to show that the plaintiff was a bona fide purchaser of the note for value before maturity and without notice, and that the most that could be said of the proof impugning his right was that it raised a suspicion of bad faith, but was wholly insufficient to found a verdict for the defendant upon. Martin v. Johnston, 34 Neb. 797 (52 N. W. 819).

674. (1894.) The evidence considered and held sufficient to sustain the plea of usury, and that plaintiff was not an innocent purchaser without notice. McDonald v. Aufdengarten, 41 Neb. 40 (59 N. W. 762).

675. (1899.) Evidence held to sustain a finding that plaintiff and his assignor purchased the note in suit after maturity, and that nothing was due on the note when the action was brought. Davis v. Culver, 58 Neb. 265 (78 N. W. 504).

676. (1901.) Where the defense of usury is established, the mere introduction of a promissory note duly indorsed is insufficient to prove that the plaintiff is an innocent holder for value before maturity. Male v. Wink, 61 Neb. 748 (86 N. W. 472).

677. (1906.) Evidence examined, and held not sufficient to show bad faith or want of honesty in the purchase of the note in controversy. Norwood v. Bank of Commerce, 77 Neb. 205 (109 N. W. 152).

678. (1907.) Evidence held sufficient to sustain finding that plaintiff was not a bona fide purchaser of a note given in payment for a stolen horse. Palmer v. McFarlane, 78 Neb. 788 (111 N. W. 794).

——— Authority to receive payment.

679. (1891.) One L., having dealings with the Stewart-Chute Lumber Co. at Adams, Nebraska, in 1887, gave his note thereto for $269.80. This note soon afterwards was transferred to the South Branch Lumber Co., which brought an action on the note. L. pleaded payment, and in support thereof introduced a receipt, "Received from D. Littlejohn $100 on account, $100. Signed, S. C. L. Co." The party giving this receipt did not have the note in his possession, and the proof failed to show that he was authorized to receive the money. Held, A failure of proof on a material point. South Branch Lumber Co. v. Littlejohn, 31 Neb. 606 (48 N. W. 476).

680. (1901.) Evidence examined, and held not to show agency for the collection of a negotiable note. Gilbert v. Garber, 62 Neb. 464 (87 N. W. 179).

631. (1901.) Evidence examined, and held not sufficient to show that the person to whom the mortgage debt was paid was the agent of the owner and holder and authorized to receive the same. Thompson v. Buehler, 1 Unof. 590 (95 N. W. 854).

682. (1902.) Evidence in an action on a note and mortgage by a purchaser from the original payee held sufficient to sustain a finding that the original payee was impliedly authorized to collect the same and payment to him was payment to the holder. Pochin v. Knoebel, 63 Neb. 768 (89 N. W. 264).

683. (1902.) Evidence examined, and held not sufficient to show that F. was the agent of the pledgee of the note to collect the principal of the debt. Connecticut Trust & Safe Deposit Co. v. Trumbo, 2 Unof. 850 (90 N. W. 216).

684. (1906.) In an action on a note, evidence held insufficient to sustain a finding of payment to a third person as agent for the payee, there being no express authority of such alleged agent. Parker v. Leech, 76 Neb. 135 (107 N. W. 217).

——— Possession as evidence of ownership.

685. (1879.) Negotiable paper before maturity is intended, to some extent at least, to represent money. Possession is prima facie evidence of ownership where it is payable to bearer, or indorsed in blank. Wortendyke v. Meehan, 9 Neb. 221 (2 N. W. 339); (1898) New England Loan & Trust Co. v. Robinson, 56 Neb. 50 (76 N. W. 415; 71 Am. St. Rep. 657).

686. (1880.) A note itself is prima facie evidence of indorsement and delivery before maturity, and its possession is prima facie evidence of ownership. Knowlton v. Parsons, 10 Neb. 502 (6 N. W. 605).

687. (1883.) The possession by the plaintiff of a negotiable promissory note maturing January 1, 1881, executed by the defendants, payable to the order of T. K. P. with the following words written on the back, "collection guaranteed and notice of protest waived this 26th of April, 1880. T. K. P.," is evidence of title to such note in the plaintiff, and of its receipt of the same before maturity, for value, in the due course of business and without notice of infirmity. State Nat. Bank v. Haylem, 14 Neb. 480 (16 N. W. 754).

688. (1894.) In an action by the transferee of a negotiable note properly indorsed before maturity, the production of the note shows prima facie that he is a bona fide holder. McDonald v Aufdengarten, 41 Neb. 40 (59 N. W. 762).

689. (1895.) Possession of instruments which pass by delivery alone is prima facie evidence of ownership and therefore is prima facie proof in support of a claim of any lesser interest. Sharmer v. McIntosh, 43 Neb. 509 (61 N. W. 727); (1896) City Nat. Bank of Hastings v. Thomas, 46 Neb. 861 (65 N. W. 895).

690. (1898.) Possession of a negotiable note, duly indorsed by the payee, creates a presumption of title thereto in the holder. Saunders v. Bates, 54 Neb. 209 (74 N. W. 578).

691. (1899.) Where plaintiff's averment of ownership by indorsement is denied in a suit on a note, introduction of the note in evidence, without referring to the indorsement, does not establish plaintiff's right to recover. Grant v. Clarke, 58 Neb. 72 (78 N. W. 364).

692. (1901.) The possession of a negotiable promissory note is prima facie evidence of ownership. Sanford v. Litchenberger, 62 Neb. 501 (87 N. W. 305). (1902) Michigan Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Klatt, 2 Unof. 872 (92 N. W. 325); (1904) Gandy v. Estate of Bissell, 72 Neb. 356 (100 N. W. 803).

693. (1902.) If a payee of a note makes an indorsement thereon to G., but delivers it to M., and M. brings action thereon, his possession of the note, with proof that he paid the payee therefor, will raise a presumption that the note was never delivered to G., and is sufficient prima facie evidence of M.'s ownership of the note. Menzie v. Smith, 63 Neb. 666 (88 N. W. 855).

694. (1902.) In a suit upon a negotiable promissory note, the possession of the note is prima facie evidence of ownership, which will not be overcome by a finding in a former action, before the note was due, that it was the property of a stranger to the pending suit. Ryan v. West, 63 Neb. 894 (89 N. W. 416).

695. (1903.) The fact that a promissory note was found in the possession of the payee at the time of his death, is evidence that he had not made a present of it to the maker. Oelke v. Theis, 70 Neb. 465 (97 N. W. 588).

——— Payment.

696. (1884.) The possession of a canceled bank check by the drawer, who testifies that on the day of its date he made and delivered it to the drawee in payment of a debt, is sufficient proof prima facie of the payment of the amount named in the check. Peavy v. Hovey, 16 Neb. 416 (20 N. W. 272).

——— Possession as evidence of payment.

697. (1893.) The possession of a promissory note by the maker after maturity thereof is prima facie evidence of payment. Smith v. Gardner, 36 Neb. 741 (55 N. W. 245).

698. (1893.) The force of the presumption of payment from the possession of a note by the maker depends upon the circumstances of the particular case. It is error, therefore, to instruct the jury that possession of a note raises a strong presumption of payment or is a strong circumstance to prove payment. Smith v. Gardner, 36 Neb. 741 (55 N. W. 245).

699. (1903.) In an action in replevin by a mortgagee, the production at the trial, from the possession of the plaintiff, of the notes evidencing the debt and payable to him, is prima facie evidence that they have not been paid. Heagney v. Case Threshing Machine Co., 4 Unof. 753 (99 N. W. 260).

Questions of law and fact.

700. (1876.) Where the defense, in an action upon a promissory note is based upon an alleged alteration of the instrument, it is the duty of the court to determine whether such alteration is material. Palmer v. Largent, 5 Neb. 223 (25 Am. Rep. 479).

701. (1897.) Where the terms of a note in suit are not disputed, the court may instruct the jury whether or not the note is negotiable. Corry v. Klump, 52 Neb. 592 (72 N. W. 857).

702. (1897.) The question whether title passes to a negotiable instrument delivered to a bank under a restrictive but ambiguous indorsement, without an express contract, but in pursuance of an established usage, is one of fact rather than law, and depends on the intent of the parties. United States Nat. Bank v. Geer, 53 Neb. 67 (73 N. W. 266; 41 L. R. A. 439). [Rehearing, 55 Neb. 462.]

703. (1904.) Where there is conflicting evidence with regard to whether or not the holder of a negotiable promissory note is an innocent purchaser, for value, before maturity, the question is a question of fact for the jury, and it is error for the court to direct a verdict for the plaintiff. Padget v. O'Connor, 71 Neb. 314 (98 N. W. 870).

Direction of verdict.

704. (1889.) Where a note is given to a selling agent in payment of a threshing machine, and such note is forwarded to their principal, and at maturity the maker sends the amount to such agents, who reply that they do not have the note but will send and get it, there is no evidence of authority of such agents, and a verdict for plaintiff, in an action on such note, should be directed. Sieberling v. Demarec, 27 Neb. 854 (44 N. W. 46).

Instructions.

705. (1877.) It is error to refuse to give instructions that where the answer alleges that one of several joint makers of a note was in fact a surety, it will be taken as true, where no reply was made. Dillon v. Russell & Holmes, 5 Neb. 484.

706. (1882.) An instruction which, substantially, told the jury to find for the defendant, if they should find from the evidence "that the defendant before signing said note used the diligence and care that a man of ordinary care and prudence would have used under similar circumstances, to ascertain its contents," is erroneous. Dinsmore v. Stimbert, 12 Neb. 433 (11 N. W. 872).

707. (1884.) In an action on a note given for money placed in defendant's hands to be used for a certain purpose, where there was evidence that, on the failure of such use, the payee directed it to be used for another purpose, which was done, an instruction that unless there was a final settlement and a balance struck between the parties, "then there was no accord and satisfaction and the plaintiff must recover," is properly refused. Hitchcock v. Hassler, 16 Neb. 467 (20 N. W. 396).

708. (1887.) In an action on a note where the defense was that such note was obtained by the fraud and connivance of plaintiff and one of the defendants, the instructions given set out and held to be proper. Brown v. Herr, 21 Neb. 113 (31 N. W. 246).

709. (1889.) Where in an action on a note the jury were instructed that if they found that the defendant had not proved the failure of consideration as alleged in his answer, they should find for the plaintiff, held, error, as substantially withdrawing from the jury the other issues involved in the case. Galloway v. Hicks, 26 Neb. 531 (42 N. W. 709).

710. (1889.) An instruction that the defendant by his answer alleged that the note upon which the action was brought was executed and delivered "to the plaintiff" to procure credit, etc., was erroneous as a misstatement of the issues in the case, the allegation of the answer being that the note was made to the husband of the plaintiff and not to her, her ownership and title being denied. Galloway v. Hicks, 26 Neb. 531 (42 N. W. 709).

711. (1889.) Where it appears that the makers of notes are jointly liable and entitled to any set-off which might be proved, it is not error to instruct the jury that they may find the whole of the set-off, prorate the same, and deduct from the notes the proper amount so found. Davis v. Sloman, 27 Neb. 877 (44 N. W. 41).

712. (1890.) In action on note given as purchase price of hotel and fixtures, defended on ground of fraudulent representations as to value, instructions examined and held proper. Salisbury v. Iddings, 29 Neb. 736 (46 N. W. 267).

713. (1890.) In an action on a promissory note, the defense being forgery, an instruction that if the jury find for defendant on the question of forgery he is not liable on the note even though it has passed into the hands of a bona fide purchaser before maturity, was properly given. First Nat. Bank v. Carson, 30 Neb. 104 (46 N. W. 276).

714. (1891.) In an action to recover upon a note which the plaintiff claimed had been canceled by mistake without being paid, and delivered to the defendant, and the defendant claimed that he had paid the same, two of the instructions given were inconsistent with each other as to the burden of proof, and therefore erroneous. Farmers Bank v. Harshman, 33 Neb. 445 (50 N. W. 328).

715. (1893.) In an action on a promissory note, the defense to which was failure of consideration, in that there was a breach of warranty in the sale of certain sheep, instructions making fraud a valid defense to the action, no fraud being in issue, is erroneous. Farmers & Merchants Bank v. Upham, 37 Neb. 417 (55 N. W. 1044).

716. (1894.) In an action by an indorsee of a note where the maker alleges, as a defense, that the rate was given for certain stock of a milling corporation falsely represented to be solvent and paying large dividends, and the evidence shows the indorser was a bona fide purchaser before maturity, an instruction for the plaintiff was proper. Stedman v. Rochester Loan & Bank Co., 42 Neb. 641 (60 N. W. 890).

717. (1896.) Instructions held not prejudicial to payee in an action on a note where the genuineness of the signature was in issue. Norfolk Nat. Bank v. Job, 48 Neb. 774 (67 N. W. 781).

718. (1898.) In an action against the sureties on a note it is error to instruct the jury that they are not liable thereon to the same extent as the principal, and that the contract of the sureties is to pay only when the liability of the principal is fixed and ascertained by a judgment at law against him, and execution issued thereon and his property exhausted. Kroncke v. Madsen, 56 Neb. 609 (77 N. W. 202).

719. (1900.) In an action to recover on a lost note, instructions in regard to the burden of proving the loss are not prejudicially erroneous, where it appears conclusively that the note was non-negotiable and had been delivered to the defendant. Walsh v. Peterson, 59 Neb. 645 (81 N. W. 853).

720. (1901.) In an action on a note of which plaintiff claims to be a holder without notice and the payee's name appears on the back of the note, if the allegation that the note was indorsed to the plaintiff is denied and the evidence upon that point is conflicting, it is error to refuse to instruct the jury that they cannot find that the plaintiff is an innocent purchaser unless the note bears the genuine or authorized indorsement of the payee. Western Mattress Co. v. Potter, 1 Unof. 627 (95 N. W. 841).

721. (1902.) An instruction that a defendant who had admitted execution of the note sued on had the burden of proving "the material allegations" of the answer in which he set up an affirmative defense, without stating the issues raised upon such answer, held without prejudice where the allegations therein were few in number, plain, and simply expressed, and all material, and another instruction, stating the rules of law applicable to the defendant's case, set forth what he must establish substantially to the same effect as the facts pleaded. Murray v. Burd, 65 Neb. 427 (91 N. W. 278).

722. (1903.) Where no issue as to the bona fides of the transfer and want of notice on the part of the indorsee is raised by the pleadings, error in instructing the jury that a promissory note, containing an agreement to pay exchange on the principal sum, is non-negotiable, is without prejudice. Bovier v. McCarthy, 4 Unof. 490 (94 N. W. 965).

723. (1903.) Where a suit on a note is defended on the ground either that the note was forged, or that the amount thereof had been raised, an instruction to find for plaintiff "if you believe that the signature is genuine," is erroneous. Gandy v. Estate of Bissell, 5 Unof. 184 (97 N. W. 632).

724. (1904.) Instructions submitting to the jury a question whether an assumption of the entire notes in controversy by two of the makers thus releasing the other two, was or was not induced by fraud, found vague if not contradictory. Jackson v. Lalicker, 5 Unof. 473 (99 N. W. 32).

725. (1905.) Where a bank receives a check on another bank after banking hours and the drawee bank fails before opening hours the next day an instruction that if the payee had reason to believe the drawee bank was in failing circumstances, it was its duty to present the check for payment forthwith, is erroneous. Temple v. Carroll, 75 Neb. 61 (105 N. W. 989).

Right to open and close.

726. (1902.) Where petition, in vague terms and by reference to note, alleges that twelve per cent. per annum is a lawful rate of interest by statutes of Oklahoma, and note sued on bears date in Oklahoma and interest at twelve per cent per annum, and such allegation is denied, held not error to refuse opening and closing to defendants, who plead usury, but admit execution and delivery of note. Hewit v. Bank of Indian Territory, 64 Neb. 463 (90 N. W. 250).

Amount of recovery.

727. (1888.) In an action on a purchase money note the consideration may be inquired into and plaintiff's recovery limited to the actual amount due. Wilson v. Ellsworth, 25 Neb. 246 (41 N. W. 177).

728. (1893.) Where, in an action on a negotiable check, payment of which had been stopped by the drawer, the answer admitted a portion of the indebtedness, and alleged a partial failure of consideration, the plaintiff should recover the amount admitted to be due, and judgment in favor of defendant could not be sustained. Lanning, Antram & Co. v. Burns, 36 Neb. 236 (54 N. W. 427).

Stipulation for judgment.

729. (1879.) Where one member of a partnership draws a sixty days' sight draft of the firm of T. & S. and indorsed it in the name of the firm, and the drawer's partner denies any liability thereon, but at the trial stipulated for judgment against himself as a mere accommodation indorser, such stipulation is virtually an admission of the validity of the endorsement, and of his liability thereon. Trego v. Lowrey, 8 Neb. 238.

Judgment.

730. (1881.) Upon an action on promissory note and to enforce vendors lien where the answer admitted execution of the note but denied existence of lien, and the lien was found not to exist, the plaintiff is entitled to judgment for amount of the note. Rhea v. Reynolds, 12 Neb. 128 (10 N. W. 549).

731. (1885.) Where the justice has in his possession the instrument on which the action is brought, and there is no affidavit of the defendant made and filed with him denying its execution, nor any defense made to the action, the justice may render judgment on such instrument, although the plaintiff fail to appear. Phœnix Ins. Co. v. Lemke, 18 Neb. 184 (24 N. W. 727).

732. (1898.) Section 511 of the code of civil procedure cannot be invoked in determining the liability of a surety to his obligee or payee, but merely requires that a judgment against a principal and surety shall state which is the principal debtor and which the surety, and provides, as between them, the mode of enforcing the same. Kroncke v. Madsen, 56 Neb. 609 (77 N. W. 202).

733. (1898.) The rendition of a judgment against principal and surety on a note, without having judicially determined on the record which defendant was the principal debtor and which the surety, in accordance with section 511 of the code of civil procedure, does not extinguish the relation of suretyship between the parties, and the duties of the creditor with reference thereto. Drexel v. Pusey, 57 Neb. 30 (77 N. W. 351).

734. (1898.) Where it is disclosed in an action on a note that one maker is principal and the other surety, a judgment for plaintiff should, under section 511 of the code, state which defendant is the principal debtor and which is surety. Maxwell v. Home Fire Ins. Co., 57 Neb. 207 (77 N. W. 681).

——— Reformation of instrument.

735. (1877.) In an action between the original parties to a promissory note, the district court has ample power to correct mistakes and enforce the original contract. Brown v. Straw, 6 Neb. 536 (29 Am. Rep. 369).

——— Merger and bar.

736. (1899.) A former judgment on a note is not a defense to a subsequent action on the same note, where the judgment was void for want of jurisdiction over the person of the defendant. Sackett v. Montgomery, 57 Neb. 424 (77 N. W. 1083; 73 Am. St. Rep. 522).

——— Payment and satisfaction.

737. (1889.) In an action against the makers and indorser of a promissory note judgment was rendered against all of the defendants jointly, no defense of suretyship having been made by the indorser. An execution was issued on the judgment and placed in the hands of the sheriff for collection and which was paid by the defendant, who was the indorser of the note upon which the judgment was founded, the money being returned by the sheriff with the execution to the clerk of the district court, who paid it to the judgment plaintiff. After the receipt of the money the plaintiff in the action assigned the judgment to the defendant, by whom it was paid, and who in the name of the plaintiff caused an execution to issue which was levied upon the land of his co-defendant, and under which the sheriff sold the said land. Held, That said sale should be set aside upon the ground that the payment of the judgment satisfied and canceled it, and that the relation of principal and surety did not exist as between the judgment defendants. Potvin v. Meyers, 27 Neb. 749 (44 N. W. 25).

——— Opening or vacating.

738. (1879.) One who signs a note as surety supposing an action against the principal to be on the genuine note, when in fact it was on a forged instrument, may secure relief in equity against a judgment recovered therein, when he makes no defense under the mistake. Young v. Morgan, 9 Neb. 169 (2 N. W. 237).

Attorney's fees.

739. (1881.) Attorney's fees in notes not recoverable since June 1, 1879. Dow v. Updike, 11 Neb. 95 (7 N. W. 857).

740 (1881.) There is no authority to allow attorney fees in actions founded on instruments executed since June 1, 1879. Hardy v. Miller, 11 Neb. 395 (9 N. W. 475).

741. (1881.) The repeal of the act allowing attorney's fees on foreclosure did not affect a contract entered into while the act was in force. White v. Rourke, 11 Neb. 519 (9 N. W. 689).

742. (1884.) If an allowance of attorney's fees is made, the record should show the fact, and it should be kept entirely distinct from the judgment proper. It is considered in the nature of costs and should be treated as such. Aultman & Co. v. Stout, 15 Neb. 586 (19 N. W. 464).

743. (1893.) A provision in a note executed since June 1, 1879, for the payment of attorney's fees for collection is invalid. Security Company of Hartford v. Eyer, 36

Neb. 507 (54 N. W. 838; 38 Am. St. Rep. 735).

Appeal and error.

744. (1896.) In an action on certain promissory notes a finding of payment upon conflicting evidence will not be disturbed. McCormick Harvesting Machine Co. v. Seeman, 49 Neb. 312 (68 N. W. 482).

I. DESCRIPTION.

Location of lines.

1. (1875.) In identifying a block of lots depended upon the correct location of another block, some distance away, a corner of which has been taken as an initial point in making the survey; and the surveyor testified that in 1857 a fence was erected around the block, but was destroyed in 1862, and in making survey in question, he found west line and southwest corner by remains of the fence, instructions were properly given to the jury that in determining whether the fence had been built upon the true line, they may take into account the time when it was built, the fact that it was about the time of the survey. Horbach v. Miller, 4 Neb. 31.

Townsite lines.

2. (1884.) The intention of the proprietor of a town site as to the streets and lots therein is indicated by the monuments which he has caused to be placed at the corners of the lots, and by his conveyance of the streets to the public, and in case of variance between the plat and survey the lines actually run and marked on the ground will control. Holst v. Streitz, 16 Neb. 249 (20 N. W. 307).

Courses and distances.

3. (1880.) Mounds thrown up by the government surveyors as corners, and quarter section corners, of sections, control course and distance. Johnson v. Preston, 9 Neb. 474 (4 N. W. 83); (1894) Thompson v. Harris, 40 Neb. 230 (58 N. W. 712).

4. (1895.) Where the original mounds or monuments established during a government survey can be identified, they will control courses and distances. Peterson v. Skjelver, 43 Neb. 663 (62 N. W. 43).

4a. (1908.) Fixed monuments and boundaries actually marked upon the ground by the government surveyors, when established, control the distances stated in the notes of such survey. Bock v. Porterfield, 80 Neb. 523 (114 N. W 597).

5. (1907.) Fixed monuments and known corners govern both courses and distances. Bridenbaugh v. Bryant, 79 Neb. 329 (112 N. W. 571).

5a. (1907.) In determining the boundaries of land, fixed monuments and known corners govern both courses and distances; and, where the existence of the original government corner is established at a certain point by sufficient evidence, its authenticity cannot be overcome by showing that the location is not at the distance from other monuments indicated by the field notes of the original survey. Hurn v. Alter, 80 Neb. 183 (113 N. W. 986).

Watercourses as boundaries.

6. (1888.) Where the main-land and an island have been separately surveyed, and purchased by different parties as distinct tracts, the grantees of the main-land cannot claim the island as included in their grant. Wiggenhorn v. Kountz, 23 Neb. 690 (37 N. W. 603; 8 Am. St. Rep. 150).

7. (1902.) Grants of land bounded upon a river not navigable carry with them the exclusive right and title of the grantee to the centre of the stream, unless the terms of the grant clearly denote the intention to stop at the bank or margin of the river; the rule of the common law being that proprietors of land adjoining public rivers not affected by the flow of the tide own the soil ad filum aquæ. McBride v. Whitaker, 65 Neb. 137 (90 N. W. 966).

——Meandered lines.

8. (1876.) Although, as to public lands of the United States, a meandered line is generally considered as following the windings of a stream, yet the question whether it does so or not may be determined by evidence aliunde. The mere fact that it is run and designated upon the plats as a meandered line is not conclusive against the government. Lammers v. Nissen, 4 Neb. 245; (1886) Bissel v. Fletcher, 19 Neb. 725 (28 N. W. 303); (1892) Harrison v. Stipes, 34 Neb. 431 (51 N. W. 976).

9. (1902.) A grant of land bounded upon a non-navigable river, made by the general government with reference to the plat of the survey, which shows a meandered line along the river bank, conveys to the grantee title to such unsurveyed islands or parts of islands as lie within that limit. McBride v. Whitaker, 65 Neb. 137 (90 N. W. 966).

10. (1902.) An instruction that the jury were to decide from the evidence whether or not certain meandering lines, located by the government surveyor, could be identified where such lines indicated the margin of a certain channel, does not substitute such meandered lines for the center of the channel as a boundary, where the jury are expressly told that, if they can locate such channel, its center is to serve as the boundary between the parties in the action. Shrake v. Laflin, 3 Unof. 489 (92 N. W. 184).

11. (1880.) In an action to recover certain tracts of lands, and to establish the corners thereof, where the jury find that such corner was established by the government surveyors, its location cannot be changed by testimony showing that it is not equidistant between the southwest and southeast corners of the section. Johnson v. Preston, 9 Neb. 474 (4 N. W. 83).

12. (1902.) If the location of section and quarter section corners by the original government survey can be ascertained, they are not to be moved, but will control all other surveys; but when the marks of the government survey have been obliterated, and the location of the corners by that survey cannot be established by witnesses who know where they were located, resort must be had to other evidence, and in the absence of any other proof, the measurements indicated by the field notes of the government survey must control. Clark v. Thornburg, 66 Neb. 717 (92 N. W. 1056).

13. (1902.) Government corners fixed by a United States surveyor at the time of the original survey will control the field notes of the survey taken at the time the corner was erected and will control the field notes or courses and distances of any subsequent survey. Such corner, if identified by the proofs, is the best evidence of where the line should be. But in the absence of such corner, or of satisfactory proof of its location, the field notes of the survey will govern and determine the true line, and such field notes and government plats in such case are prima facie evidence of its true location, and the burden is then shifted to the party who wishes to establish the corner at a place different from that called for by the field notes and government plat of the original survey. Knoll v. Randolph, 3 Unof. 599 (92 N. W. 195).

14. (1906.) In an action to establish a controverted section line, where the trial is conducted by both parties on the theory that the corner established by the government surveyors was not a lost corner, it is not error to charge the jury that they are to determine the location of the original boundary line, even though evidence was admitted that a corner had been established by the county surveyor who proceeded on the theory that the original corner was lost. Stryker v. Meagher, 76 Neb. 616 (107 N. W. 792).

Establishment by adjoining owners.

15. (1882.) Where the owners of a fractional half section of land, agreed upon an equal division of the tract and established a line upon which a hedge was set out, and fence erected, and both parties cultivated up to and made improvements upon their respective tracts with reference to this line, and sold and conveyed their respective interests in the land, the grantees having knowledge of the agreement, the line thus established will be sustained, particularly in view of the fact that there was testimony tending to show that the action was barred. Trussel v. Lewis, 13 Neb. 415 (14 N. W. 155; 42 Am. Rep. 767).

16. (1882.) Where the true line can be ascertained, and parties by mistake agree upon an erroneous line as their boundary, believing it to be the true line, they will not be concluded by such agreement from claiming to the true line when discovered, unless the statute of limitations has run, or equitable reasons exist for establishing the erroneous line. But if the true line cannot be ascertained with certainty, then an agreement establishing a line of division will be sustained. Trussel v. Lewis, 13 Neb. 415 (14 N. W. 155; 42 Am. Rep. 767).

17. (1893.) Where there is a dispute as to the exact boundary between the owners of adjoining lands, and a county surveyor establishes a line upon an actual survey of the lands, and both claimants participated in making and paying the expenses of the survey, which survey was acquiesced in for a considerable time afterwards, it will not be disturbed because a new survey, made some years afterwards, tends to show a mistake in the establishment of such line. Benson v. Daly, 38 Neb. 155 (56 N. W. 788).

18. (1902.) Where a division line, supposed to be the true line established by the government survey, has been acquiesced in by the parties interested for more than ten years, it is conclusive of the location of the boundary line; but whether such line was agreed upon, or has been acquiesced in as the true division line, is a question of fact to be submitted to the jury in a proper case. Clark v. Thornburg, 66 Neb. 717 (92 N. W. 1056).

19. (1903.) Where the true boundary line between adjoining owners is uncertain and unknown to them and may be ascertained only at more or less trouble and expense, an executed agreement to accept and abide by a certain line as such boundary, is binding upon the parties and subsequent purchasers having notice thereof, although the boundary agreed upon may not be the true line. Egan v. Light, 4 Unof. 127 (93 N. W. 859).

20. (1903.) A road was ordered by the authorities of Nance county along a "half section line." In a contest over the location of such line between owners of premises on opposite sides thereof, in which contest the county is not interested, held that the line of a division fence jointly built between the holdings of the contending parties, to which each party had occupied, and maintained possession for more than ten years, was rightly adopted by the trial court as the "half section line" within the meaning of the proceedings locating such road. County of Nance v. Russell, 5 Unof. 97 (97 N. W. 320).

21. (1903.) Where the true boundary line between adjoining owners is uncertain and unknown to them and may be ascertained only at more or less trouble and expense, an executed agreement and abide by a certain line as such boundary, is binding upon the parties and subsequent purchasers having notice thereof, although the boundary agreed upon may not be the true line. Lynch v. Egan, 67 Neb. 541 (93 N. W. 775).

22. (1903.) Evidence showing that both plaintiff and defendant are grantees of parties who had fixed the boundary line between their premises by agreement, and that the grantees had notice of such agreement, sustains a decree enjoining defendant from tearing down the agreed boundary fence. Lynch v. Egan, 67 Neb. 541 (93 N. W. 775).

23. (1907.) A boundary line agreed upon by adjoining land owners as the result of a survey and acquiesced in by them for more than ten years, is conclusive, although such survey afterwards proves to be inaccurate. Smith v. Nelson, 78 Neb. 745 (111 N. W. 779).

II. EVIDENCE, ASCERTAINMENT, AND ESTABLISHMENT.

Judicial notice of correctness of surveys.

24. (1883.) Judicial notice will not be taken of the incorrectness of the government surveys of an Indian reservation, although the court, as individuals may believe it incorrect. Minkler v. State, ex rel. Smithers, 14 Neb 181 (15 N. W. 330).

Presumption and burden of proof.

25. (1891.) Where a corner supposed to have been established by the government in the surveys of public lands has been acquiesced in by adjoining owners of such lands for nearly ten years, and improvements made and the land broken up to the line thus established, there is a presumption in favor of such corner being the true one, which can only be overcome by clear proof that it was not established by the government. Coy v. Miller, 31 Neb. 348 (47 N. W. 1046).

26. (1902.) Where, on a line of the same survey and between remote corners, the whole length of which is found to be variant from the length called for, it is not to be presumed that the variance was caused from a defective survey of any part, but it must be presumed, in the absence of circumstances showing the contrary, that it arose from imperfect measurement of the whole line, and such variance must be distributed between the several subdivsions of the line in proportion to their respective lengths. Brooks v. Stanley, 66 Neb. 826 (92 N. W. 1013).

Evidence admissible.

——In general.

27. (1893.) Where a government corner between two adjoining landowners has been obliterated, the exact location of the corner may be determined by the jury from the evidence in an action of ejectment, and it is unnecessary first to establish the corner by an action in equity. Kittell v. Jenssen, 37 Neb. 685 (56 N. W. 487).

28. (1902.) The identification of a section corner as a starting point, made by the county surveyor upon examination of the ground and upon sworn evidence, will not be rejected in the absence of any showing of mistake or error. Shrake v. Laflin, 3 Unof. 489 (92 N. W. 184).

29. (1902.) A survey will not be rejected merely because the county surveyor commenced the measurement of a line at its northern extremity, where that extremity is well ascertained, instead of going over it from the south as was done in the original survey. Shrake v. Laflin, 3 Unof. 489 (92 N. W. 184).

30. (1907.) The fact that the boundary lines of fields and highways, as established by the early settlers, are in harmony with disputed monuments is relevant as tending to show that such monuments are true corners. Bridenbaugh v. Bryant, 79 Neb. 329 (112 N. W. 571).

——Maps and surveyor's notes.

31. Field notes and plats of the original government survey are competent evidence in ascertaining where monuments are located, in case a government corner is destroyed, or the point where it was originally placed cannot be found, or the location of the original corner is in dispute; but when it is shown by uncontradicted evidence that a section corner was located by the government surveyors at a certain point, such location must control, even though it is at a place different from that given in the field notes and plat. (1894) Woods v. West, 40 Neb. 307 (58 N. W. 938); (1895) Peterson v. Skjelver, 43 Neb. 663 (62 N. W. 43).

32. (1885.) Where a stone purporting to be the northeast corner of a section was fifty-two rods east of the true section line, as shown by the surveys both north and south of it, and there was no evidence tending to show that it had been placed there by the government surveyors, nor had it been seen until about forty years after the original surveys, held, that the quantity of land contained in the subdivisions of the section in question, and the one east of it, and the field notes and plates of the original survey were properly received in evidence for the purpose of determining the original location of the section corner. Morrison v. Neff, 18 Neb 133 (24 N. W. 555).

33. (1894.) Where the description in a deed contains a call to and along a line, the true location of which is uncertain, maps proved to be in common and accepted use in the community at the time of the conveyance are admissible to show that a particular line was in the community generally recognized by the name used in the deed. Hanlon v. Union P. R. Co., 40 Neb. 52 (58 N. W. 590).

——Parol evidence in general.

34. (1884.) Where there is a call in a deed, which was in fact not intended by the parties, and is unambiguous, the intention of the parties cannot be made to take the place of the call, neither is parol proof competent to locate the land. Gillespie v. Sawyer, 15 Neb. 536 (19 N. W. 449).

35. (1894.) A written lease described the demised land as "four acres out of lot four," in a certain governmental subdivision "lying north of the railroad track." Held, That in an action between the lessor and lessee's assignee parol evidence was admissible to show that the lessor and lessee, about the time the lease was made, had gone upon the land and agreed upon certain lines and monuments as defining its boundaries. Schneider v. Patterson, Murphy & Co., 38 Neb. 680 (57 N. W. 398).

36. (1894.) Where the description in a deed contains a call to and along a line, the true location of which is uncertain, parol evidence is admissible to show that at the time of the conveyance a particular line was in the community generally recognized by the name used in the deed. Hanlon v. Union P. R. Co., 40 Neb. 52 (58 N. W. 590).

Competency of non-experts to testify.

37. (1889.) Not improper for witnesses, even if not surveyors, to testify as to lines, corner-stones, and other boundaries, the description of the disputed boundary not requiring professional skill or mathematical knowledge. Obernalte v. Edgar, 28 Neb. 70 (44 N. W. 82).

38. (1902.) In determining boundary lines between lands, the testimony of a non-expert, who claims to have located the line from government monuments then in existence, may be accepted by the jury in preference to that of surveyors who have subsequently located a different line independently of such monuments. Baty v. Elrod, 66 Neb. 735 (92 N. W. 1032).

39. (1906.) When a government monument, being the corner between two adjoining landowners, has been obliterated, its location may be proved by testimony of witnesses acquainted therewith. Reed v. Burrell, 77 Neb. 76 (108 N. W. 155).

Weight and sufficiency.

40. (1891.) Evidence as to alleged location of corner established by government, examined, and held insufficient to overcome effect of acquiescence by parties in different location. Coy v. Miller, 31 Neb. 348 (47 N. W. 1046).

41. (1893.) In an action of ejectment, the question involved being the location of a corner as located by the government survey, surveys from known government corners both north and south and east and west of the corner in disppute, by which it was located on a line with other corners on both of said lines, and each landowner would thereby be given the full amount of land called for by his patent, would be preferred to a survey which was not begun at a known government corner and lacked many of the elements of certainty, and which gave one of the landowners much more than he was entitled to under his patent, and the other less. Woods v. West, 37 Neb. 400 (56 N. W. 30).

42. (1894.) Evidence held sufficient to sustain finding of jury that a government corner was located at a certain point different from one shown in field notes and plat. Woods v. West, 40 Neb. 307 (58 N. W. 938).

43. (1896.) In an action of ejectment the evidence as to the boundary line, though conflicting, will sustain a judgment for defendant. Blomgren v. Holmquest, 49 Neb. 49 (68 N. W. 382).

44. (1902.) Evidence examined, and held to warrant a finding that a channel indicated by the field notes of an original survey as constituting the boundary line between parties could no longer be located by either natural or artificial landmarks. Shrake v. Laflin, 3 Unof. 489 (92 N. W. 184).

45. (1902.) Plaintiff's showing the United States survey field notes, when applied to the land in dispute by a competent surveyor, supported his contention as to the boundary line in dispute, held sufficient where the monuments of the government survey are no longer recognizable, to take that question to the jury, notwithstanding a former owner swore to the other location of the line as having been originally made from the government quarter-corner mounds. Baty v. Elrod, 66 Neb. 744 (97 N. W. 343).

46. (1905.) Evidence held sufficient to sustain decree in dispute over boundary line between two quarter sections of land. Coppom v. Forman, 74 Neb. 275 (104 N. W. 167).

47. (1905.) Evidence held sufficient to sustain decree in dispute over boundary line between two quarter sections of land. Coppom v. Forman, 74 Neb. 275 (104 N. W. 167).

48. (1907.) In an action to recover possession of a triangular shaped tract between the parties' land, which under one survey belonged to defendant, and under another belonged to plaintiff, evidence showing the first surveyor ignored certain government corners supports a finding for plaintiff. Bridenbaugh v. Bryant, 79 Neb. 329 (112 N. W. 571).

49. (1908.) It is a general rule that only a preponderance of evidence is required to establish an issue in civil actions; and boundary disputes furnish no exception to this rule. Bock v. Porterfield, 80 Neb. 523 (114 N. W. 597).

BOUNTIES.

1. (1896.) Chapter 1, Session Laws, 1895, providing for sugar bounties, carries no appropriation for payment thereof, and there being no appropriation for that purpose elsewhere, the auditor has no authority to issue warrants in payment of such bounties. State, ex rel. Norfolk Beet Sugar Co., v. Moore, 50 Neb. 88 (69 N. W. 373; 61 Am. St. Rep. 538).

2. (1905.) The statute offering a bounty for the manufacture of sugar and chicory being unconstitutional because of lack of power on the part of the legislature to appropriate money for such purpose, the fact that the manufacturers paid larger prices for their products to the producers of beets from which to manufacture these articles, relying upon this statute for remuneration, will not create in favor of such manufacturers any obligation against the state. Oxnard Beet Sugar Co. v. State, 73 Neb. 66 (105 N. W. 716).

3. (1905.) Chapter 1 of the laws of 1895, entitled "An act to provide for the encouragement of the manufacture of sugar and chicory and to provide a compensation therefor," is unconstitutional and void. Oxnard Beet Sugar Co. v. State, 73 Neb 66 (105 N. W. 716).

BOWLING ALLEYS.

Operation in saloon.

1. (1903.) The running of a bowling alley in connection with a saloon or hotel, is in this state a criminal offense. Koepke v. State, 68 Neb. 152 (93 N. W. 1129).

Damages.

3. (1884.) An action for breach of promise, though in form ex contractu, yet it being impossible to fix a rule or measure of damages, the jury must determine the same from all the circumstances of each case. Schreckengast v. Ealy, 16 Neb. 510 (20 N. W. 853).

4. (1889.) In an action for damages for a breach of promise of marriage, where there was sufficient evidence to justify the jury in finding that the promise was made, and that the defendant had seduced the plaintiff through and by reason of her reliance upon his promise, it was held that a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for $7,000 damages was not excessive. Musselman v. Barker, 26 Neb. 737 (42 N. W. 759).

Pleading.

5. (1884.) Where in an action for breach of promise of marriage the promise is alleged to have been made at a certain date, to which the defendant pleaded infancy, it is not error for the court to permit an amended petition to be filed stating other promises and a ratification of the first after the defendant came of age. Schreckengast v. Ealy, 16 Neb. 510 (20 N. W. 853).

Evidence.

——— Admissibility.

6. (1884.) A question whether plaintiff had been waited on by another suitor, asked of her on cross-examination, should be confined to the time her engagement to defendant was in existence. Schreckengast v. Ealy, 16 Neb. 510 (20 N. W. 853).

7. (1889.) The loss of social standing in the community in which a plaintiff in an action for damages for breach of promise of marriage resides, caused by the seduction of the plaintiff, is an element of damages to be considered in such action, and a ruling of the trial court permitting the plaintiff to state in her evidence that since, she had been "sneered at" upon the streets in the city in which she resided, would not be error requiring the reversal of a judgment rendered upon a verdict in the plaintiff's favor. Musselman v. Barker, 26 Neb. 737 (42 N. W. 759).

8. (1889.) In an action for breach of promise it was not error for the court to permit the plaintiff to testify that the defendant was the father of an illegitimate child, begotten by him while the agreement for marriage existed, and on faith thereof on the part of the plaintiff in the action. Musselman v. Barker, 26 Neb. 737 (42 N. W. 759).

9. (1895.) Evidence of defendant's reputation for wealth is admissible to show the condition in life the plaintiff would have secured by a consummation of the contract. Stratton v. Dole, 45 Neb. 472 (63 N. W. 875).

10. (1895.) Where defendant's mother, at his request, procured the plaintiff to receive him as a suitor, and was otherwise actively engaged in promoting the marriage agreement, communications by the former to the plaintiff, while thus engaged, touching the defendant's property, made as an inducement to the marriage contract, are admissible in evidence in an action against the latter for the breach thereof. Stratton v. Dole, 45 Neb. 472 (63 N. W. 875).

11. (1895.) It is permissible for the defendant to prove specific acts of incontinence on the part of the plaintiff. If guilty of fornication, that fact would be a defense to her action, since personal purity is one of the implied conditions of her agreement. If her actions have been wantonly indelicate and inconsistent with the conduct of a pure-minded woman, that fact is admissible at least in mitigation of damage. Stratton v. Dole, 45 Neb. 472 (63 N. W. 875).

12. (1903.) In an action for breach of promise of marriage the general reputation of the defendant for wealth, as distinguished from his actual circumstances, is not a proper matter to be taken into account in estimating the amount of damages. Johansen v. Modahl, 4 Unof. 411 (94 N. W. 532).

——— Weight and sufficiency.

13. (1889.) Testimony of a plaintiff, in a breach of promise suit, that defendant had often promised to marry her, when corroborated by two other witnesses is sufficient to sustain a verdict for the plaintiff. Musselman v. Barker, 26 Neb. 737 (42 N. W. 759).

14. (1895.) Evidence held sufficient to sustain a judgment for plaintiff in an action by her to recover from defendant damages for breach of a contract to marry. Stratton v. Dole, 45 Neb. 472 (63 N. W. 875).

15. (1903.) Evidence examined, and held not to establish a written contract of marriage. Haslam v. Barge, 69 Neb. 644 (96 N. W. 245).

Evidence.

3. (1884.) Under the allegations of the indictment and the circumstances of the case as shown by the testimony, it was held competent for the state to prove other acts of bribery than those alleged in the indictment for the purpose of corroborating the principal witness upon material facts involved in the original contract of bribery, and also for the purpose of showing the system, plan, and design of the parties involved in the transaction alleged in the indictment. *Guthrie v. 4. (1906.) On the trial of one charged with the crime of attempting to corrupt a witness, it is reversible error to allow the state to introduce evidence tending to show that the defendant offered a person the sum of $500 to steal a written instrument called a certain power of attorney, where the information contains no charge of that kind or nature. *Gandy v. 5. (1884.) The indictment in this case alleged that the sum of $300 was paid to plaintiff in error as a bribe by one C. B., "and others whose names are to the grand jurors unknown." The proof showed that the money was paid by C. B. for the purpose alleged in the indictment. Held, That the variance was not fatal and that the district court was justified, under the provisions of section 413 of the criminal code, in disregarding it. *Guthrie v. 6. (1906.) An information for the crime of attempting to corrupt a witness must allege that the person sought to be corrupted was a witness; that the defendant knew such person to be a witness, or must state such facts constituting the offense as show conclusively that the defendant had such knowledge. *Gandy v. Character of bridges as highway.

1. (1875.) Public bridges are part of public roads, and the provisions of section 16, chapter 67, General Statutes, requiring contracts for the construction of roads to be let to the lowest competent bidder, apply to the letting of contracts for the erection of bridges; and it is the duty of county commissioners to adopt plans and specifications, in advance of the letting, as a basis on which bids may be received. State, ex rel. Putnam, v. Buffalo County Comm'rs, 4 Neb. 150; McConnell v. Dewey, 5 Neb. 385; Follmer v. Nuckolls County, 6 Neb. 204.

Acquisition by public.

2. (1879.) County commissioners have no power to purchase a private bridge over a stream within the county; and an award made under such a contract is a nullity. McCann v. Otoe County, 9 Neb. 324 (2 N. W. 707).

3. (1891.) Where the county board appropriates a private bridge and locates a road over it upon petition duly signed, the county is liable to the owner for compensation. Blaine County v. Brewster, 32 Neb. 264 (49 N. W. 183).

Bonds in aid of construction.

4. (1876.) County bonds issued for the purpose of erecting a public bridge over the Platte river, conformable in all respects to the laws of this state, authorizing the issuance of bonds in aid of works of internal improvement, are valid. Union P. R. Co. v. Colfax County, 4 Neb. 450.

5. (1876.) A bridge over the Platte river is a work of internal improvement, and from the course of legislation, in this state, it is clear that aid may be granted in its erection by the issuance of county bonds, by grant from the state, donations, or by two counties bordering on the river uniting in the enterprise. Union P. R. Co. v. Colfax County, 4 Neb. 450.

6. (1877.) Precinct bonds may be issued to aid in building a public wagon bridge across the Platte river, that being a work of internal improvement. Fremont Building Ass'n v. Sherwin, 6 Neb. 48.

7. (1877.) Where the vote is regular in all other respects, it is not a valid objection to the bonds issued in pursuance thereof that the proposition contained a provision for collecting tolls from persons crossing the bridge—especially after the bonds have passed into the hands of innocent purchasers. Fremont Building Ass'n v. Sherwin, 6 Neb. 48.

8. (1878.) Under the act of February 15, 1869, enabling counties, cities and precincts to issue bonds in aid of internal improvements, precincts may issue such bonds to aid in the construction of bridges for public use, and when such bonds are issued in conformity with the provisions of the law, they are valid, and the collection of taxes, levied on the property of the precinct to pay the interest thereon, may be legally enforced. South Platte Land Co. v. Buffalo County, 7 Neb. 253. [Changed by statute. 19 Neb. 159; 26 Neb. 705.]

9. (1884.) A bridge across the Platte river is a work of internal improvement, and county bonds voted to erect the same are valid. Nor does the fact that the entire bridge is within the limits of the county voting the bonds, change its character or affect the validity of the bonds. State, ex rel. Peterson, v. Keith County, 16 Neb. 508 (20 N. W. 856).

10. (1888.) Bonds may be issued by a city to aid in the construction of a public bridge on a public thoroughfare leading into such city, although the bridge is outside of the corporate limits. State, ex rel. City of Columbus, v. Babcock, 23 Neb. 179 (36 N. W. 474).

11. (1888.) The provisions of section 77, chapter 14 of the Compiled Statutes, authorizing a city in certain cases to appropriate the sum of five dollars per lineal foot to aid in the construction of a county bridge, do not prevent a city situated on a stream like the Loup river, from issuing bonds to aid in the construction of a public bridge across such river. State, ex rel. City of Columbus, v. Babock, 23 Neb. 179 (36 N. W. 474).

Liability on subscription to private bridge.

12. (1879.) One who subscribes a sum of money to a bridge company, in aid of rebuilding a toll bridge, is not liable thereon where the location of the bridge is changed without such subscriber's consent. Fremont Ferry Co. v. Fuhrman, 8 Neb. 99.

Duty of mill owner to construct.

13. (1906.) Where water is diverted from its natural channel by means of a canal constructed and operated to supply power for a mill, it is the duty of the mill owner to erect and maintain suitable bridges for the convenience of the public at any point where the canal crosses a public road. Nuckolls County v. Guthrie & Co., 76 Neb. 464 (107 N. W. 779).

Establishment by public authority.

14. (1877.) The building of county bridges being entirely within the control of county commissioners, and they having accepted the bridge from the plaintiff, and allowed his claim therefor, the remedy for any person feeling himself aggrieved was by appeal to the district court. Having neglected this remedy the plaintiff cannot resort to equity for relief by an original suit. Clark v. Dayton, 6 Neb. 192.

15. (1879.) It is discretionary with the county board what bridges shall be erected. The courts will not interfere unless there is an abuse of such discretion. Brown v. Merrick County, 18 Neb. 355 (25 N. W. 356).

16. (1895.) By the enactment of chapter 72, Session Laws 1887, it was not intended to make counties under township organization liable for the payment of bridges already constructed. Tullock v. Webster County, 46 Neb. 211 (64 N. W. 705).

17. (1895.) Prior to the enactment of chapter 72, Session Laws, 1887, a county under township organization was not invested with power of building bridges in the county. Tullock v. Webster County, 46 Neb. 211 (64 N. W. 705).

18. (1905.) Sections 102*a* and 102*b*, chapter 78, Compiled Statutes 1903, being chapter 72, laws 1887, do not operate as a repeal of that portion of section 77, article 1, chapter 14, Compiled Statutes 1903, pertaining to the liability of counties, cities and villages for the construction and repair of bridges. City of Central City v. Marquis, 75 Neb. 233 (106 N. W. 221).

——— Mandamus to compel construction.

19. (1906.) Mandamus will lie to compel the construction of a bridge on a highway across a stream. Nuckolls County v. Guthrie & Co., 76 Neb. 464 (107 N. W. 779).

——— Selection of design and material.

20. (1907.) When they build or repair a bridge, the commissioners must necessarily decide upon the material to be used and the character and design of the structure. State, ex rel. Ellis, v. Switzer, 79 Neb. 78 (112 N. W. 297).

——— Contribution of expenses.

21. (1885.) Where the middle of a stream is the dividing line between two counties, and a bridge is erected across said stream by the county board of one of such counties, without the co-operation of the county board of the other, the county erecting the bridge may use precinct bonds, voted for that purpose to complete the bridge in the county not co-operating in the erection of the bridge. Brown v. Merrick County, 18 Neb. 355 (25 N. W. 356).

22. (1885.) Sections 87 and 88 of the road law merely authorize the county boards of counties separated by a stream to meet and confer together in regard to the erection, jointly, of a bridge across such stream, and to enter into a joint contract for that purpose, but in the absence of a contract there is no power in one board to erect or repair a bridge across such stream, and compel the other board to pay part of the cost. Brown v. Merrick County, 18 Neb. 355 (25 N. W. 356).

23. (1902.) That a county board allowed the claim of an adjoining county for one-half the cost of a bridge erected on the county line, is not available as an estoppel on an appeal from the order allowing such claim. Saline County v. Gage County, 66 Neb. 839 (92 N. W. 1050). [Reversed on rehearing. 66 Neb. 844.]

24. (1902.) The liability of a county to contribute for the cost of the construction or repair of a bridge on a highway along the line between that and an adjoining county is purely statutory, and is based on sections 87, 88 and 89, chapter 78, Compiled Statutes. Saline County v. Gage County, 66 Neb. 839 (92 N. W. 1050). [Reversed on rehearing. 66 Neb. 844.]

25. (1902.) When a bridge is constructed on a county line and the entire cost thereof paid by one county, no cause of action arises against the adjoining county for contribution, in the absence of a contract in that behalf to which the latter county is a party. Saline County v. Gage County, 66 Neb. 839 (92 N. W. 1050). [Reversed on rehearing. 66 Neb. 844.]

26. (1902.) That a county allowed the work of contruction of a bridge on the line between it and an adjoining county to proceed without objection, and, when completed, graded the approaches to the bridge, and that its inhabitants used the bridge, would not estop such county nor its taxpayers from denying the validity of a claim presented by the adjoining county to the latter county for half the cost of such bridge. Saline County v. Gage County, 66 Neb. 839 (92 N. W. 1050). [Reversed on rehearing. 66 Neb. 844.]

27. (1902.) When the county boards of adjoining counties have attempted to enter into a joint contract for the building of a bridge over boundary streams, but, by reason of the neglect of requisite formalities, one of such counties fails of becoming obligated thereby, and the other, in good faith, and pursuant to the contract, builds and pays for the bridge, the former may ratify and confirm the contract by the allowance in behalf of the latter of a claim for one-half the contract price of the structure, and a taxpayer can not defeat or annul such ratification by appealing from the order of allowance. Saline County v. Gage County, 66 Neb. 844 (97 N. W. 583).

28. (1902.) A county can become obligated to contribute towards the expenses of building a bridge over a stream upon a boundary line between itself and another county, either by entering in the first instance into a joint contract for the construction of such bridge in the manner prescribed by statute, or by subsequently ratifying a contract for that purpose. Saline County v. Gage County, 66 Neb. 844 (97 N. W. 583).

29. (1903.) The purpose of Compiled Statutes, chapter 78, section 87, and the ones immediately following, is to provide for bridges which are rendered necessary in order to travel from one county into an adjacent one, and to divide the cost between the two, and the statute should be construed if possible, so as to give effect to the apparent intent of the legislature. Dodge County v. Saunders County, 70 Neb. 442 (97 N. W. 617).

www.libtool.com.cn

30. (1903.) When the legislature speaks of "streams which divide counties," in section 87, chapter 78, Compiled Statutes, it must be taken as referring, not to the entire stream but to some part of or line therein. Dodge County v. Saunders County, 70 Neb. 442 (97 N. W. 617).

Taxes and assessments.

31. (1884.) The board of county commissioners had no authority in the year 1879 to levy a bridge tax, there being no law in force at that time authorizing such a tax. Burlington & M. R. R. Co. v. Cass County, 16 Neb. 136 (19 N. W. 700).

Maintenance and repair.

——— Duty to repair.

32. (1881.) Where there are not sufficient funds in the county treasury to repair all the bridges in a county, the court will not control the discretion of county commissioners as to what bridges they shall repair, unless there is a clear abuse of the trust. State, ex rel. Roe, v Kearney County, 12 Neb. 6 (10 N. W. 413); (1885) Brown v. Merrick County, 18 Neb. 355 (25 N. W. 356); (1907) State, ex rel. Ellis, v. Switzer, 79 Neb. 78 (112 N. W. 297).

33. (1888.) Prior to the act of 1887, in a county under the township system of government, the respective towns, and not the county board of supervisors, were vested with the power and charged with the duty of building and repairing the bridges in such towns, and the letting of contracts therefore. Whitcomb v. Reed, 24 Neb. 50 (37 N. W. 684).

34. (1894.) Where a county builds a bridge with money realized from precinct bonds, the precinct is not the owner of the bridge in such a sense as to relieve the county from a liability to keep it in repair. Dutton v. State, ex rel. Pankonin, 42 Neb. 804 (60 N. W. 1042).

35. (1895.) By the enactment of chapter 72, Session Laws, 1887, it was not intended to make counties under township organization liable for repairs made to bridges prior to the taking effect of said act. Tullock v. Webster County, 46 Neb. 211 (64 N. W. 705).

36. (1895.) Prior to the enactment of chapter 72, Session Laws, 1887, a county under township organization was not charged with the duty of repairing bridges. Tullock v. Webster County, 46 Neb. 211 (64 N. W. 705).

37. (1906.) Repairs of county bridges contemplated by sections 114 and 115, chapter 78, Compiled Statutes, providing for repairs are such as may be made at once, and without considerable cost. State, ex rel. Sumpton, v. Smith, 77 Neb. 1 (108 N. W. 173).

——— Mandamus to compel repair.

38. (1894.) A county may be compelled by mandamus to repair a bridge. Dutton v. State, ex rel. Pankonin, 42 Neb. 804 (60 N. W. 1042).

——— Contribution and liability of adjoining county.

39. (1881.) Where a bridge across the Platte river was constructed by one county an adjoining county cannot be compelled to aid in keeping it in repair. State, ex rel. Roe, v. Kearney County, 12 Neb. 6 (10 N. W. 413).

40. (1894.) A bridge across the Platte river between two counties, the county boundary extending to the channel of the river, it is the duty of each county to keep the respective parts of the bridge in repair, and may be compelled to so do by mandamus instituted in the name of citizens and taxpayers. Dutton v. State, ex rel. Pankonin, 42 Neb. 804 (60 N. W. 1042).

41. (1899.) Ordinarily, where a stream of water constitutes the boundary line between two political subdivisions, each subdivision holds to the middle of the stream and accordingly is liable for bridge repairs, as laid down in Dutton v. State, 42 Neb. 804, irrespective of the volume of flowage being nearer one bank than the other. State, ex rel. Pankonin, v. County Comm'rs of Cass County, 58 Neb. 244 (78 N. W. 494).

42. (1902.) The liability of a county to contribute to the repair of bridges along the county line, is purely statutory. Saline County v. Gage County, 66 Neb. 839 (92 N. W. 1050). [Reversed on rehearing. 66 Neb. 844.]

43. (1902.) Chapter 78, Compiled Statutes, entitled "Roads," in so far as it relates to the building of bridges over streams dividing counties, is not in violation of the constitution. Cass County v. Sarpy County, 66 Neb. 473 (92 N. W 635).

44. (1902.) A petition in an action by one county for contribution from another for repairs to a bridge over a stream separating the two counties, is not defective for failure to allege that the contract was let to the lowest bidder. Cass County v. Sarpy County, 63 Neb. 813 (89 N. W. 219).

45. (1902.) When a public bridge has been constructed across a stream dividing two counties, each county may be compelled, at the suit of the other, to contribute toward the expense of necessary repairs upon the same, although there may be no contract between the counties for the building or repair of the structure. Cass County v. Sarpy County, 63 Neb. 813 (89 N. W. 291). [Overruled on rehearing. 66 Neb. 473.]

46. (1902.) Where repairs on a bridge on a county line are paid for wholly by one county, in the absence of a contract in that behalf, to which the other county is a party, no cause of action arises against the latter unless it has refused to enter into a contract therefor. Saline County v. Gage County, 66 Neb. 839 (92 N. W. 1050). [Reversed on rehearing. 66 Neb. 844.]

47. (1902.) A county is excused from contributing toward the expense of repairing a bridge over a stream dividing it from an adjoining county by the fact that the county making the repairs did so in violation of the law regulating the manner of making such repairs on bridges for the maintenance of which it is solely responsible. Cass County v. Sarpy County, 66 Neb. 473 (92 N. W. 635).

48. (1903.) The fact that a resolution, passed by the board of one county calling upon the other, on the opposite side of a stream, to join in making bridge repairs, designates two bridges, while, after the latter's refusal, a contract is let and recovery sought as to the one only, is not fatal. Dodge County v. Saunders County, 70 Neb. 442 (97 N. W. 617).

49. (1903.) Under the provisions of section 87, chapter 78, Compiled Statutes, 1901, a county may be required to contribute toward the repair of a bridge abutting in such county although it is located mainly within the territorial jurisdiction of an adjoining county. Dodge County v. Saunders County, 70 Neb. 451 (100 N. W. 934).

50. (1903.) The word "stream" as used in Compiled Statutes, chapter 78, section 87, is used in a general sense, and includes rivers, and smaller courses of running water. Dodge County v. Saunders County, 70 Neb. 451 (100 N. W. 934).

51. (1904.) When a county has refused, upon request, to participate with an adjoining county in repairing a bridge over a stream forming part of the boundary line between them, and the latter county has performed the work at its separate expense, it is not a defense to an action for contribution under the statute, that the plaintiff county, in procuring the repairs to be made, proceeded in an irregular or illegal manner with respect to obligating itself to pay for them, provided it did in fact become so obligated. Cass County v. Sarpy County, 72 Neb. 93 (100 N. W. 197).

52. (1904.) Where there is a bridge over a stream which divides two counties and is a charge upon each, it is the duty of the county board of either county, when notified in writing by the other to join in a contract for the repairs of the bridge, to either to comply with the notice by joining in the contract or unequivocally refuse to do so. Iske v. State, ex rel. Pankonin, 72 Neb. 278 (100 N. W. 315).

53. (1904.) The duty of one county when notified, to join with another county in a contract for repairs of a bridge over a boundary stream, or else to unequivocally refuse to do so, may be enforced by mandamus. Iske v. State, ex rel. Pankonin, 72 Neb. 278 (100 N. W. 315).

54. (1905.) The term "bridges," in section 77, article 1, chapter 14, Compiled Statutes, 1903, making it the duty of cities to repair bridges, does not include the approaches thereto. City of Central City v. Marquis, 75 Neb. 233 (106 N. W. 221).

55. (1906.) A county which refuses to enter into a contract with an adjoining county to repair a bridge across a stream dividing the counties is liable to the county making the repairs under contract for "such proportion of the cost of making said repairs as it ought to pay, not exceeding one-half of the full amount so expended," when the county making the repairs has followed the procedure pointed out by the statute as to notice, etc. Dodge County v. Saunders County, 77 Neb. 787 (110 N. W. 756).

56. (1906.) Where the proper steps have been taken to render an adjoining county liable for the repair of a bridge, and where an issue is raised as to the necessity of the repairs or as to the amount paid being more than the actual and reasonable cost thereof, then the amount that the defaulting county ought to pay is a question for the jury, but, if no such issue is tendered, the county in default is liable for one-half of the cost of repairs. Dodge County v. Saunders County, 77 Neb. 787 (110 N. W. 756).

57. (1906.) The fact that a bridge across the Platte river where it divides the counties of Dodge and Saunders is not one continuous structure but consists of two separate portions separated by an island, one of which portions is entirely within Dodge county, does not, under the circumstances, relieve Saunders county from the burden of contributing to the repair of the entire structure. Dodge County v. Saunders County, 77 Neb. 787 (110 N. W. 756).

58. (1906.) Though the whole of the Platte river, flowing between Colfax and Butler counties is in Colfax county, mandamus to compel Colfax county to repair a bridge that has been taken out by an ice-gorge, cannot be maintained without notice to both counties, under section 116, chapter 78, Compiled Statutes, and the counties must be joined. State, ex rel. Sumpton, v. Smith, 77 Neb. 1 (108 N. W. 173).

Liability of adjoining county for constructing ice breaks.

59. (1906.) A county is not liable for contribution to the cost of ice breaks erected by an adjoining county at a bridge across a stream dividing the counties, when the notice to repair made no mention of the necessity for such ice breaks. Dodge County v. Saunders County, 77 Neb. 787 (110 N. W. 756).

Injuries to bridges.

60. (1884.) On trial under an indictment for maliciously cutting down and destroying a public bridge on a public highway, it is competent for the state to prove, by the records of the county commissioners' court, the establishment of the highway on which the bridge was constructed, and also by such records and the records of the district court, that the accused presented and prosecuted his claim for damages resulting from such location, and that he received and accepted the damages awarded him by the trial jury in the district court. O'Dea v. State, 16 Neb. 241 (20 N. W. 299).

Liability for injuries by reason of defective bridges.

——In general.

61. (1880.) At common law a county is not liable for the failure of the commissioners to keep a bridge in repair. Woods v. Colfax County, 10 Neb. 552 (7 N. W. 269).

62. (1893.) Where a county board negligently fails to keep a public bridge in suitable repair so as to be in a safe condition for travel, and damages have been occasioned by reason thereof, under the act of the legislature of 1889, the county is liable therefor to the person sustaining the damages, unless he has been guilty of contributory negligence. Hollingsworth v. Saunders County, 36 Neb. 141 (54 N. W. 79).

63. (1906.) One who is injured by reason of a defective bridge while riding in a private vehicle may recover from a county otherwise liable, notwithstanding the negligence of the driver, which may have contributed to produce the injury, the injured party being free from negligence and having no authority or control over the driver. Loso v. Lancaster County, 77 Neb. 466 (109 N. W. 752).

——Care required of public.

64. (1902.) In constructing and maintaining a bridge for public use, a municipality is not limited in its duty by the ordinary business use of the structure, but is required to provide for what may be fairly anticipated for the proper accommodation of the public in the various occupations which may be pursued in the locality. Seyfer v. Otoe County, 66 Neb. 566 (92 N. W. 756).

65. (1905.) In an action for injuries caused by a defect in a bridge at a point near one side, an instruction that it is not necessary that defendant keep the entire width of its highways and bridges in good condition for travel, while stating a correct proposition of law, held erroneous under the circumstances of this case. Clingan v. Dixon County, 74 Neb. 807 (105 N. W. 710).

——Right to assume bridge is safe.

66. (1905.) A party attempting to cross a bridge which is a part of a highway in the absence of notice to the contrary, or facts sufficient to put him on inquiry, has a right to assume that it is reasonably safe for the accommodation of the public at large in the various occupations pursued in the locality where the bridge is situated. City of Central City v. Marquis, 75 Neb. 233 (106 N. W. 221).

——Notice of defects.

67. (1904.) The county cannot be held as an insurer of those who have occasion to use a county bridge. If the defect in a bridge, from which injury and damages occur to the person using it, as a latent defect, not discernable from the ordinary tests and examinations usually made to ascertain its condition, and if those charged with such examination have not been negligent in their duty in that regard, the county cannot be held liable for damages caused by such latent and undiscovered defects. Johnson County v. Carmen, 71 Neb. 682 (99 N. W. 502).

68. (1905.) In an action to recover for personal injuries resulting from the defective condition of a bridge, it is not error to instruct the jury that actual notice to the municipality is not necessary, where "the defects are of such a nature or have existed for such a length of time that they might by the exercise of ordinary diligence have been discovered and repaired." City of Central City v. Marquis, 75 Neb. 233 (106 N. W. 221).

——— Notice of claim for injuries.

69. (1893.) The person sustaining damages by the failure of a county board to keep a public bridge in repair, may maintain an original action against the county whose duty it was to keep the bridge in repair. He is not required to present his claim to the county board for allowance or rejection, since the provisions of section 37, chapter 18, Compiled Statutes, do not apply to demands arising upon torts. Hollingsworth v. Saunders County, 36 Neb. 141 (54 N. W. 79).

70. (1895.) A county is liable in damages for injuries resulting from an unsafe county bridge, though no notice of the defects had been given to any officer of the county. Raasch v. Dodge County, 43 Neb. 508 (61 N. W. 725).

——— Pleading.

71. 1893.) The pettition to recover damages from a county for injuries resulting from a failure of the county board to keep a public bridge in repair, set out in the opinion, held to state a cause of action. Hollingsworth v. Saunders County, 36 Neb. 141 (54 N. W. 79).

72. (1904.) In a suit against a county for damages on account of the death of a party caused by the giving way of a county bridge, the petition contained a general statement that the bridge was "out of repair and unsafe," a motion for a more specific statement should be sustained. Johnson County v. Carmen, 71 Neb. 682 (99 N. W. 502).

——— Evidence.

73. (1902.) The declaration of a deceased person made to a third party, as to his knowledge of the condition of a bridge, which gave way while he was attempting to cross it and caused his death, before the accident occurred, may be properly received in evidence as tending to establish contributory negligence. Seyfer v. Otoe County, 66 Neb. 566 (92 N. W. 756).

74. (1905.) Evidence in an action for injuries sustained by plaintiff by reason of the fall of a bridge while crossing over the same with a traction engine held to sustain a finding of constructive notice of the defective condition of the bridge. City of Central City v. Marquis, 75 Neb. 233 (106 N. W. 221).

——— Questions for jury.

75. (1902.) In an action against a county by the administrator of the estate of a deceased person to recover damages alleged to have been caused by the breaking down of a bridge while the deceased was attempting to cross it with a steam traction engine and separator, it is for the jury to determine whether the bridge was properly constructed and maintained, and whether the use the deceased was making of it was unusual and extraordinary, and such as the county was not bound to anticipate. Seyfer v. Otoe County, 66 Neb. 566 (92 N. W. 756).

I. EMPLOYMENT, AUTHORITY, AND DUTIES OF BROKER.

Contract of employment.

1. (1896.) A conveyance of chattels at a certain price, with a provision that the buyer may, upon failure to resell, return them, is a contract of sale with an option to recind, and not a contract of brokerage. Houck v. Linn, 48 Neb. 227 (66 N. W. 1103).

2. (1904.) Where the owner by letter authorized an agent to make a sale of a certain tract of land and offered a specified commission for doing so, and the agent by letter notified the owner that he was attempting to make the sale in the manner suggested by the owner and named a prospective purchaser to whom the land was finally sold in the manner agreed upon between the owner and agent, such a contract in writing as is required by section 74 of chapter 73, Compiled Statutes, is created. Bradley & Co. v. Bower, 5 Unof. 542 (99 N. W. 490).

3. (1904.) Under the provisions of section 74, chapter 73, Compiled Statutes, 1901, a contract for the sale of land between the owner thereof and an agent or broker must be signed by the owner and broker, must contain a description of the land, and set forth the amount of compensation the agent is to receive for negotiating a sale, or it will be void and furnish no basis for recovery. Danielson v. Goebel, 71 Neb. 300 (98 N. W. 819).

4. (1905.) A letter written to one who has solicited the agency for the sale of certain real estate, in which the owner states, in substance, "I still have the northwest quarter of section 20, township 22-5, and would sell for $3,000 cash net to me, or $3,200 on time, one-third down and the back payments secured by first mortgage. The man that sells it will have to get his commission out of the man that buys"—is sufficient to authorize such person to sell the land according to the terms therein stated. Weaver v. Snively, 73 Neb. 35 (102 N. W. 77).

Necessity of contract in writing.

5. (1890.) Where a landowner employs an agent to procure a purchaser for his real estate upon certain terms and conditions, the contract of employment need not be in writing. Griffith v. Woolworth, 28 Neb. 715 (44 N. W. 1137).

6. (1902.) A verbal contract with an agent or broker to sell land for the owner thereof, is void under the statute of frauds, and it requires the voluntary act of both parties thereto to execute it so as to completely take it out of the operation of the statute. Allen v. Hall, 64 Neb. 256 (89 N. W. 803).

7. (1903.) The act of 1897 (Session Laws, 1897, ch. 57), entitled "An act to provide for the making of contracts in writing between owners of land and brokers or agents employed to sell lands," is not repugnant to the constitutional inhibition against special legislation; and every provision of said act is clearly expressed in its title. Baker v. Gillan, 68 Neb. 368 (94 N. W. 615).

8. (1904.) A verbal contract with an agent or broker to sell land for the owner or to obtain a purchaser therefor is void. Covey v. Henry, 71 Neb. 118 (98 N. W. 434); Frahn v. Metcalf, 75 Neb. 241 (106 N. W. 227).

9. (1906.) A contract whereby a real estate agent agrees to secure for purchase by defendant a tract of land, and a check for his commission is given in advance, to be valid when the land is secured, is not within the statute of frauds and not void as not being in writing. Mellor v. McConnell, 75 Neb. 776 (106 N. W. 1012).

10. (1905.) A contract whereby one person employs an agent to negotiate for the purchase of real estate is not a contract for the creation of an estate or interest in land, or trust or power over or concerning lands, etc., within the meaning of the statute of frauds. Johnson v. Hayward, 74 Neb. 157 (103 N. W. 1058).

——— Sufficiency of signature.

11. (1907.) The word "subscribed" as used in section 74, chapter 73, Compiled Statutes, 1905, relating to contracts between real estate brokers and landowners, is synonymous with the word "signed." Myers v. Moore, 78 Neb. 448 (110 N. W. 989).

12. (1907.) The requirement of section 74, chapter 73, Compiled Statutes, 1905, that the contract be "subscribed" by both parties is met where the signatures of the parties are placed thereon, for the purpose of authenticating and giving force and effect to the contract, whether they be placed at the bottom, the top, or in the body of the instrument. Myers v. Moore, 78 Neb. 448 (110 N. W. 989).

Exclusive authority.

13. (1897.) A stipulation giving the agent exclusive authority to sell the premises for an indefinite time is not void as against public policy. Woods v. Hart, 50 Neb. 497 (70 N. W. 53).

Revocation of authority.

14. (1897.) The principal may, at any time before sale, revoke the agent's authority, even though the instrument expressly stipulated the agent's power to sell should be exclusive. Woods v. Hart, 50 Neb. 497 (70 N. W. 53).

Authority conferred.

14*a*. (1882.) Where an agent with only special and limited authority to sell a tract of land for a fixed price in case he could sell it "immediately," answered by letter that he could not sell it for that price, and requested permission to sell for considerably less, or if that were not given to "let the matter drop," he has no authority to sell the land at the price first offered, without a renewal of his agency. Matthews v. Sowle, 12 Neb. 398 (11 N. W. 857).

15. (1905.) A written contract between the owner of real estate and a real estate broker for the "sale" of property does not contemplate an exchange thereof for other property. Lucas v. County Recorder of Cass County, 75 Neb. 351 (106 N. W. 217).)

Rights of purchaser under sale repudiated by principal.

15*a*. (1898.) Where a real estate agent gave a memorandum of sale subject to approval of his principal, and the evidence showed the latter's prompt disapproval, direction of a verdict against one claiming the realty under the memorandum was held proper. Powell v. Binney, 54 Neb. 690 (74 N. W 1073).

Authority to act for buyer.

See, also, post, §§ 30-33.

16. (1902.) When a party acts as agent for both the seller and the buyer, and that is known to them, the law exacts the most perfect good faith, honesty and fairness on his part, and will not adjudge the specific performance of a contract thus made unless it has been entered into with perfect fairness and without misapprehension or misrepresentation. Andrew v. Whitwer, 3 Unof. 55 (90 N. W. 924).

17. (1905.) The mere listing of property with a broker for sale does not necessarily constitute the broker the owner's agent to make the sale so as to prevent him from becoming agent for a person desiring to purchase the property. Johnson v. Hayward, 74 Neb. 157 (103 N. W. 1058).

18. (1905.) A broker whose undertaking is merely to find a purchaser at a price fixed by the seller, or at a price which shall be satisfactory to the seller when he and the purchaser meet, is in reality only a middleman, whose duty is performed when the buyer and seller are brought together, and hence may act as agent for one desiring to purchase the property. Johnson v. Hayward, 74 Neb. 166.

Purchase of property by broker.

19. (1888.) Where an agent for the sale of real estate conceals from his principal material facts relative to the value of the property to be sold, and by a subterfuge fraudulently purchases the property from his principal in the name of another, for less than its value, the principal may, by proper proceedings in equity, rescind the sale and require a conveyance of the property from the agent. Bookwalter v. Lansing, 23 Neb. 291 (36 N. W. 594).

20. (1888.) If the broker, in good faith and without any desibn to obtain the property for himself, sold it to a purchaser, reported the sale to his principal, giving the terms and conditions thereof, and after the ratification of the sale by the principal, purchased the land from the party to whom it had been sold and received a conveyance from him, no fraud having been perpetrated against his principal, the principal cannot rescind the sale and require a reconveyance from the broker. Bookwalter v. Lansing, 23 Neb. 291 (36 N. W. 594).

21. (1893.) An agent is required to disclose to his principal all the information he has touching the subject-matter of the agency; and his relation to his principal forbids his becoming a purchaser thereof for his own benefit in any way without the full knowledge by the principal of this fact, and the principal's acquiescence therein with such knowledge. The burden of proving such knowledge and acquiescence is upon the agent. Jansen v. Williams, 36 Neb. 869 (55 N. W. 279; 20 L. R. A. 207).

22. (1905.) An agent for the purchase of property who purchases in his own name will be compelled to convey to his principal at the price paid by him. Morrison v. Hunter, 74 Neb. 559 (105 N. W. 88).

22*a*. (1907.) An agent having authority to sell both real and personal property for a certain sum, cannot, without the consent of his principal, take over to himself the personal property upon receiving the authorized sum for the real estate. Northup v. Bathrick, 80 Neb. 36 (113 N. W. 808).

23. (1905.) Where one employed to act as the agent for another in the purchase of real estate becomes the purchaser himself, he will be considered in equity as holding the property in trust for his principal, although he purchased with his own money, subject to reimbursement for his proper expenditures in that behalf. Johnson v. Hayward, 74 Neb. 157 (103 N. W. 1058).

www.lawbook.com.cn

Priority of claims of purchasers.

24. (1905.) Where the equity of a person to have land purchased by his agent in his own name, charged with the trust, and that of a subsequent purchaser from the agent are equal, the former being prior in time, will prevail. Johnson v. Hayward, 74 Neb. 157 (103 N. W. 1058).

Denial of relation by broker.

24*a*. (1907.) By correspondence, plaintiffs, who are real estate brokers, arranged with a landowner for a sale of his land to a stranger, and during the negotiation demanded a certain sum as their commission, which, upon consummation of the sale, was paid to them. Held, That the plaintiffs will not be heard to say that they were not the agents of the vendor. Northup v. Bathrick, 80 Neb. 36 (113 N. W. 808).

II. COMPENSATION AND LIENS.

Right to compensation.

25. (1892.) A real estate broker who is employed to sell or dispose of the property of his principal is entitled to recover his commission whenever he has procured a customer who is willing and able to purchase the property at the price and upon the terms named by his principal. Siemssen v. Homan, 35 Neb. 892 (53 N. W. 1012).

26. (1897.) A real estate broker employed to make a sale has no claim for commissions until he furnishes a purchaser willing and able to buy the property upon the terms fixed by his principal. Stewart v. Smith, 50 Neb. 631 (70 N. W. 235).

27. (1893.) A commission cannot be collected by an agent for his services as such if he has wilfully disregarded, in a material respect, an obligation which the law devolves upon him by reason of his agency. Jansen v. Williams, 36 Neb. 869 (55 N. W. 279; 20 L. R. A. 207).

28. (1898.) Where a firm of real estate brokers undertook to find purchasers of land for one who held title thereto merely for convenience of transfer for the benefit of associates interested therein, such firm is not, in equity, entitled to decree subjecting unsold portions of such land, or such associates personally, to liability for the payment of commissions on the theory that the services of the firm in finding purchasers as undertaken were rendered in the execution of a technical trust. Marshall v. Goble, 56 Neb. 274 (76 N. W. 573).

29. (1894.) A real estate broker is ordinarily entitled to his commission when he has produced a purchaser willing and able to purchase on the terms proposed by the principal, but the broker and principal may agree on different terms, and if they do so, the broker is only entitled to commission when he has complied with the terms of the special contract. Barber v. Hildebrand, 42 Neb. 400 (60 N. W. 594).

Acting for both parties.

See, also, ante, §§ 16-18.

30. (1894.) A real estate agent acting for both parties in effecting an exchange of their property can recover compensation from neither unless such agent's double employment was known and assented to by both said contracting parties. Campbell v. Baxter, 41 Neb. 729 (60 N. W. 90).

31. (1894.) Money paid by a principal to his agent for the latter's services in effecting a sale or exchange of the principal's property may be recovered back, in an action at law, when it appears that such agent had or was to receive a commission or compensation from the other party to the trade or exchange for his services in bringing it about, if it also appear that at the time such principal made such payment he was ignorant of the fact that his agent was acting for both parties to such trade or exchange. Campbell v. Baxter, 41 Neb. 729 (60 N. W. 90).

32. (1895.) A real estate agent who has acted for both parties to an exchange of property can recover compensation only when his services have been limited to bringing together such parties as, without his interference, have agreed upon an exchange of the property with reference to which such agent procured them to meet; and even this limited right to compensation does not exist as against a party who in advance did not know of and assent to the agent's dual employment. Strawbridge v. Swan, 43 Neb. 781 (62 N. W. 199).

33. (1891.) One C. was employed by Y. to sell certain city property, and effected an exchange of real estate with one P. After the transaction was complete, P. paid C. $100 for his services, although he testified that he had previously not employed him. Held, There being no charge of bad faith, that if Y. had employed C to sell his property and he had procured a sale and exchange of the same upon terms satisfactory to Y., he was entitled to a fair compensation for his services. Campbell v. Yager, 32 Neb. 266 (49 N. W. 181).

Sufficiency of services.

34. (1889.) An owner of land authorized a broker to sell it for $150 per acre, "or if you have a proposition, you submit it, and I will consider it." The broker telegraphed to him that he thought he could sell at the price, with part of the payments deferred, and asked, "Shall I try?" The owner answered, "Will reply by letter," and in the letter declined to sell. Held, That there had been no sale according to the owner's terms (which must be construed to have been cash) and hence no commission was earned. Morrill v. Davis, 27 Neb. 775 (43 N. W. 1146).

35. (1894.) Where real estate is listed with an agent or broker for sale, the agreement being that it is to be sold for $4,800 net to the owner of the land, the broker to have and receive as compensation for making the sale any sum in excess of the $4,800 for which he can effect a sale, and he meets a party who desires to purchase the land, and informs him that it can be purchased for $4,800, and then introduces him to the owner, who completes the sale at the price above named, in an action by the broker to recover a reasonable commission, held, that he is not entitled to recover. Beatty v. Russell, 41 Neb. 321 (59 N. W. 919).

36. (1894.) Where a party, owner of 260 shares of bank stock, each share being of the value of $100, desired to sell the stock and agreed with a firm in the business of selling real estate and other property that if the firm would find him a purchaser for the stock said firm should receive, as compensation for such services, all of the consideration received for the sale of such stock in excess of the face or par valuation thereof, and the consideration for the sale of the stock was $26,000, the face value, and the seller to retain a dividend then earned of $780, held, that this was a sale of the stock for the sum of $780 in excess of the face or par value, and on proof of performance of the services contracted for, the plaintiffs were entitled to recover the above amount. Blakeslee v. Ervin, 40 Neb. 130 (58 N. W. 850).

37. (1898.) Ordinarily a real estate broker, who for a commission undertakes to sell land on certain terms and within a specified period, is not entitled to compensation for his services unless he produce to the owner a purchaser within the time limited who is able and willing to buy upon the terms prescribed in the contract of employment. Langhorst v. Coon, 53 Neb. 765 (74 N. W. 257).

——Bringing parties together.

38. (1882.) Where a real estate broker produces a purchaser willing to take the property, with whom the seller himself negotiates, the broker is entitled to his commission, although the seller sees fit to let the contract rest in parol, whereby he may be unable to enforce it. Potvin v. Curran, 13 Neb. 302 (14 N. W. 400).

39. (1882.) Where the price of property and the terms of payment are fixed by the seller, and the broker engages to procure a purchaser at that price and upon those terms, if, upon the procurement of the broker, a purchaser is produced, with whom the seller himself negotiates and effects a sale, although the terms may be changed, and even the sale itself finally abandoned, he is entitled to his commission. Potvin v. Curran, 13 Neb. 302 (14 N. W. 400).

40. (1884.) A landowner employed an agent to sell his real estate upon commission. The agent advertised the land at his own expense, and a neighbor seeing the advertisement directed a buyer to the farm, and thereby a sale of the land was effected. There being a dispute as to the contract between the landowner and agent, held, that the sale being effected through the agent's advertisement constituted a strong equity in his favor. Anderson v. Cox, 16 Neb. 10 (20 N. W. 10).

41. (1887.) Where an action was brought to recover commissions for effecting the sale of real estate, and the testimony shows that the broker merely procured a purchaser who purchased the premises from the owner, held, that, in the absence of objections, a judgment awarding the broker a less sum than the commission upon a completed sale will not be set aside. Gregg v. Loomis, 22 Neb. 174 (34 N. W. 355).

42. (1888.) Where the price of property and terms of payment are fixed by the seller, and a broker engages to procure a purchaser at this price and upon these terms, if, upon the procurement of the broker, a purchaser is produced with whom the seller himself negotiates and effects a sale, the broker is entitled to his commission. Butler v. Kennard, 23 Neb. 357 (36 N. W. 579).

43. (1888.) Where the price of property and the terms of payment are fixed by the seller, and the agent engages to procure a purchaser at that price and upon those terms, if, upon the procurement of the agent, a purchaser is produced, to whom a sale is made, even though the contract of sale may be made by the seller, the agent is entitled to his commission. Nicholas v. Jones, 23 Neb. 813 (37 N. W. 679).

44. (1892.) An instruction, "If you find from the evidence that the defendant employed the plaintiff to sell the farm and procure a purchaser therefor, and if you further believe that the purchaser, Levi Cox, received the information which led to the purchase of said farm from other parties than the plaintiff, and that plaintiff did not sell said farm or obtain or procure a purchaser for the same, then the plaintiff cannot recover, and you will find for the defendant," correctly states the law. Burkholder v. Fonner, 34 Neb. 1 (51 N. W. 293).

45. (1895.) In an action to recover commission the instruction that a man had the right to sell or trade his own property, and that if defendant acted for himself in the matter and did not employ plaintiff as his agent to procure him a customer, plaintiff could not recover for the alleged services, held, correctly to state the law, in view of the issues and of the proofs thereunder. Strawbridge v. Swan, 43 Neb. 781 (62 N. W. 199).

46. (1899.) A real estate agent who has been instrumental in producing a purchaser for land listed with him for sale is entitled to his contract commission though the owner of the property consummate the sale in ignorance of the services rendered by the agent. Craig v. Wead, 58 Neb. 782 (79 N. W. 718).

47. (1899.) Under a real estate broker's contract to find a purchaser it is not essential to his earning commissions that he literally bring the vendor and vendee together, or that he even inform the vendor of the identity of the proposed purchaser. It is sufficient if by his influence on the mind of the vendee he be the efficient cause of the two assuming the relations of vendor and vendee. Hambleton v. Fort, 58 Neb. 282 (78 N. W. 498).

48. (1902.) Where it appears that a piece of property has been listed with a real estate broker as a whole, and his sole authority is to negotiate a sale as a whole, and his negotiations to so sell it to a particular customer have been broken off, a subsequent sale some months later of a portion, only, of the property by the owner to the purchaser with whom the broker's negotiations were had, but independently, will not entitle the broker to a commission. Frenzer v. Lee, 3 Unof. 69 (90 N. W. 914).

Failure to complete transaction.

——In general.

49. (1897.) In an action for the recovery of an agreed compensation to be paid on the making of a sale or disposition of property, a broker is not entitled to recover for merely finding a purchaser, where the sale failed of consummation. Dorrington v. Powell, 52 Neb. 440 (72 N. W. 587).

——Default of principal or seller.

50. (1889.) Where real estate agents procure buyers for a tract of land listed with them for sale, and such buyer makes a part payment, such brokers are entitled to their compensation, even though the vendor refuse to complete the transaction. Gibbons v. Sherwin, 28 Neb. 146 (44 N. W. 99).

51. (1889.) A real estate agent was employed by one B to effect any exchange of certain real estate with one C. He succeeded in making a contract between the parties for the exchange of said parcels of land, and C complied with the contract on his part, but B, apparently without just cause, refused to comply. Held, That the agent was entitled to his commission. Greenwood v. Burton, 27 Neb. 808 (44 N. W. 28).

52. (1890.) Where the owner of land employs a real estate agent to find a buyer for his land, which such agent does, and the owner accepts a better offer, he is liable to the agent for his commission. Griffith v. Woolworth, 28 Neb. 715 (44 N. W. 1137).

53. (1893.) Where a real estate broker is employed to procure a purchaser of real property, he is entitled to compensation when he has secured a proposed purchaser ready, able, and willing to buy the property on the terms and conditions upon which the said broker is authorized to procure such purchaser. This right to compensation will not be impaired by the subsequent inability or unwillingness of the owner to consummate such sale on the terms prescribed. Jones v. Stevens, 36 Neb. 849 (55 N. W. 251).

54. (1896.) A broker does not earn his commission by producing one able to purchase only by a resort to an unlawful device, though a contract of sale is entered into which the principal refuses to consummate because it involves a fraud upon a third person. Zittle v. Schlesinger, 46 Neb. 844 (65 N. W. 892).

——— Default of purchaser.

55. (1892.) Where a real estate broker secures a purchaser for land, on an agreement to exchange other property subject to a mortgage of twenty-five hundred dollars, but in fact the incumbrances is in excess of that amount and the purchaser is unable to consummate the transaction according to his agreement, the broker is not entitled to his commission. Siemssen v. Homan, 35 Neb. 892 (53 N. W. 1012).

55a. (1888.) Where a real estate agent is given authority to sell city property and finds a buyer who agrees to take the same after several inspections of the premises, but, when the parties meet to execute the deed, discovers the lot is some short in width and refuses to purchase, the agent cannot recover his commission from defendant. Sloman v. Badwell, 24 Neb. 790 (40 N. W. 321).

56. (1894.) Where the contract between the principal and the broker was that no commission should be paid unless an exchange of land were actually consummated, and a contract of exchange was entered into whereby the exchange was made conditional upon the purchaser's furnishing an abstract showing perfect title to the land to be given by him in exchange, and the purchaser furnished an abstract which did not show good title in him, and the exchange was not effected, held, that the broker was not entitled to his commission. Barber v. Hildebrand, 42 Neb. 400 (60 N. W. 594).

57. (1898.) Where a real estate broker contracts to produce a purchaser who shall actually buy, he has performed his contract by the production of one, financially able, with whom the owner actually makes an enforceable contract of sale, and failure to carry out that contract, even if the default be that of the purchaser, does not deprive the broker of his right to commission. Lunney v. Healey, 56 Neb. 313 (76 N. W. 558; 44 L. R. A. 593).

Fraud and bad faith of broker.

58. (1896.) While a real estate broker is usually entitled to his commission when he has produced one ready, willing, and able to purchase on the terms proposed by the principal, or when he has produced one with whom a contract of sale is actually made, still, if the person produced is able to purchase only by resort to an unlawful device, the broker has not earned his commission. Zittle v. Schlesinger, 46 Neb. 844 (65 N. W. 892).

59. (1902.) Where evidence tended to show an interest in the contract of purchase on the part of real estate broker, instruction that he must, to entitle him to commissions, act in good faith and in the interest of his employer, held not erroneous. Buck v. Hogeboom, 2 Unof. 853 (90 N. W. 635).

60. (1902.) An agent authorized by contract to sell real estate to any purchaser thereafter to be secured is not guilty of fraud for failing to disclose the identity of a prospective purchaser, where it appears that the vendors neither asked nor made any attempt to ascertain who such purchaser was. Rank v. Garvey, 66 Neb. 767 (92 N. W. 1025).

Quantum meruit, recovery on.

61. (1885.) In an action to recover for the value of services as agent in selling real estate, and there is testimony tending to show that the plaintiff rendered some service, but did not effect a sale, an instruction that if the jury believe that he rendered some service he is entitled to recover on a quantum meruit is not improper. Mc-

Murtry v. Madison, 18 Neb. 291 (25 N. W. 85).

62. (1895.) On a petition alleging merely a special contract and performance by the plaintiff, the plaintiff cannot recover on a quantum meruit for part performance. Mayer v. Ver Bryck, 46 Neb. 221 (64 N. W. 691).

63. (1897.) A real estate broker suing and relying solely upon a special contract cannot recover on a quantum meruit. Dorrington v. Powell, 52 Neb. 440 (72 N. W. 587).

64, 65. (1904.) Services as a real estate broker rendered for the owner of the land, without a written contract, cannot be recovered for, as such, upon a quantum meruit. Blair v. Austin, 71 Neb. 401 (98 N. W. 1040) [see Barney v. Lasbury, 76 Neb. 701]; (1905) Rodenbrock v. Gress, 74 Neb. 409 (104 N. W. 758).

66. (1906.) A broker cannot recover on a quantum meruit on a contract void because not in writing, nor for the value of time expended in that behalf. Barney v. Lasbury, 76 Neb. 701 (107 N. W. 989).

Failure of notice to reach seller.

67. (1889.) Miscarriage of a notice of sale of lands, required by the vendor as a condition in the contract with the agent who sold the property, does not deprive the latter of his right to recover for services performed. Gibbons v. Sherwin, 28 Neb. 146 (44 N. W. 99).

III. ACTIONS FOR COMPENSATION.

Pleading.

Additional allegation in petition in district court on appeal, see Justice of the Peace, § 533.

68. (1891.) In an action by one who had been appointed sole agent to sell defendant's lands, for commissions on sales made by defendant, the defendant obtained leave to amend his answer by alleging "that after making the sales named he (plaintiff) complained that the prices were too high as named by defendant and made no effort to sell the same, but neglected the same, to the defendant's damage and injury." Held, That the matter involved in the amendment, not being pertinent to the case, was calculated to raise a false issue and distract the attention of the jury from the real questions for their determination. Marshall v. Goble, 32 Neb. 9 (48 N. W. 898).

69. (1904.) A petition, in an action by a real estate agent for commission earned under a contract to sell defendants realty, setting out a parol contract with defendant to find a buyer for his land does not state a cause of action. Covey v. Henry, 71 Neb. 118 (98 N. W. 434).

70. (1904.) Petition examined, and held sufficient to withstand a demurrer except for the fact that the letters alleged to constitute the contract are not shown or alleged to have been signed. Bradley & Co. v. Bower, 5 Unof. 542 (99 N. W. 490).

71. (1907.) In an action to recover compensation for services rendered as a real estate broker, a petition which discloses on its face that the contract of agency was not in writing is open to attack by demurrer. Smith v. Aultz, 78 Neb. 453 (110 N. W. 1015).

Issues and proof.

72. (1891.) In an action by a broker for commissions, a defense that plaintiff was to take his pay in land, is not available under a general denial. Bishop v. Stevens, 31 Neb. 786 (48 N. W. 827).

73. (1892.) In an action for commissions, testimony that a third person effected the sale is not admissible under a general denial. St. Felix v. Green, 34 Neb. 800 (52 N. W. 821).

74. (1897.) Where the claim of an agent for compensation was for finding a purchaser for the land of the defendant ready and willing to purchase, and, without objection, proof was made of the ability to purchase, as well as of the alleged readiness and willingness, the variance cannot be urged as error for the first time in the supreme court. Hoefer v. Langhorst, 53 Neb. 364 (73 N. W. 692).

75. (1907.) In an action by a principal against a broker to recover money received by the latter in payment for the land, and which he claims as his commission, the plaintiff, by alleging a contract of employment with defendant, is not thereby estopped to deny the particular contract for compensation which defendant pleaded in his answer. Wells v. Cochran, 78 Neb. 612 (111 N. W. 381).

Defenses.

76. (1894.) A broker is not a guarantor of the vendor's title and a defect in such title cannot defeat an action for his commission. Barber v. Hildebrand, 42 Neb. 400 (60 N. W. 594).

Digitized by Google

77. (1895.) Where a broker undertakes to sell real estate in consideration of a suit of clothes to be worth fifty dollars, and there is a tender of a suit of clothes at the time, which tender is kept good, the plaintiff cannot recover. Mayer v. Ver Bryck, 46 Neb. 221 (64 N. W. 691).

78. (1896.) In an action to recover a brokers commission under a contract to exchange landd, a defect in the title to the land offered in exchange is as good a defense as would be proof that the purchaser produced had no means of buying. Zittle v. Schlesinger, 46 Neb. 844 (65 N. W. 892).

Evidence.

——Burden of proof.

79. (1895.) Plaintiff in an action to recover for services in effecting an exchange of defendant's property must show by a preponderance of the evidence that he was employed by defendant. Strawbridge v. Swan, 43 Neb. 781 (62 N. W. 199).

80. (1907.) To entitle a recovery on a contract of brokerage for the purchase of real estate, it is essential that the broker establish that he procured a valid conveyance of the real estate, or an enforceable contract of sale of the same, before he is entitled to the commission stipulated in his contract with the purchaser. Bolton v. Coburn, 78 Neb. 731 (111 N. W. 780).

81. (1906.) To entitle a real estate broker to recover a commission for the sale of real estate he must prove a sale of the land on such terms as would entitle him to a commission under the provisions of a written contract between himself and the owner. Tracy v. Dean, 77 Neb. 382 (109 N. W. 505).

——Admissibility.

82. (1892.) In an action to recover commissions for selling real estate, the defendant denied plaintiff's employment, or that he was instrumental in making the sale, and averred that it was negotiated by persons other than the plaintiff. It is incompetent to ask the buyer of the property, from whom he purchased and upon whose representations he relied in doing so. Burkholder v. Fonner, 34 Neb. 1 (51 N. W. 293).

83. (1894.) In an action to recover a commission for procuring a purchaser to certain realty, the action being upon a quantum meruit, and plaintiff testified that his services were worth a certain sum, it is not error to admit, without objection testimony as to the customary compensation to such brokers. Shields v. Gamble, 42 Neb. 850 (61 N. W. 101).

84. (1894.) In establishing the contract between the broker and his principal the parties are not bound by the terms of the written contract between the principal and purchaser, although it may evidence a portion of the broker's contract. In such a case parol evidence may be introduced, even if it operate to contradict or vary the terms of the written contract between the principals. Barber v. Hildebrand, 42 Neb. 400 (60 N. W. 594).

——Weight and sufficiency.

85. (1887.) Where a real estate broker brought an action to recover commissions for a completed sale of real estate, and the testimony showed that he had merely procured a purchaser, who afterwards purchased such real estate from the owner. Held, That the action was one to recover upon a quantum meruit—the value of the services rendered, but as no objection had been made to the testimony, the judgment will be sustained. Gregg v. Loomis, 22 Neb. 174 (34 N. W. 355).

86. (1890.) In action by broker for commission evidence examined and held to sustain judgment for plaintiff. Seeley v. Smith, 29 Neb. 545 (45 N. W. 922).

87. (1891.) In an action by a real estate agent to recover commissions for the sale of a house and lot belonging to the defendant there is but little conflict in the testimony, and a clear preponderance thereof sustains the plaintiff's claim for a commission. Held, That the judgment was right and is affirmed. Tubbs v. Mackintosh, 31 Neb. 238 (47 N. W. 854).

88. (1891.) Action for commission; verdict for $112.50, as commission on sale for $3,500, found to be sustained by the evidence. Wasmer v. Lean, 32 Neb. 519 (49 N. W. 463).

89. (1892.) Evidence held to sustain finding that plaintiff had been a moving cause in effecting the sale of the property in question, and hence was entitled to a commission therefor. St. Felix v. Green, 34 Neb. 800 (52 N. W. 821).

90. (1893.) One S., being the owner of certain real estate, executed a power of attorney to one H., authorizing him to sell the land, for either cash or partly on credit, for not less than $20 per acre. H. being unable to sell at $20 per acre, afterwards sold the land, subject to the approval of his principal, for $2,000 cash. Held, That the weight of the testimony sustained the finding and judgment of the court that the principal had ratified and confirmed the sale. Prine v. Syverson, 37 Neb. 860 (56 N. W. 714).

91. (1894.) Evidence held sufficient to prove a contract hiring plaintiff as broker to sell certain bank stock, and that plaintiff had made a sale thereof. Blakeslee v. Ervin, 40 Neb. 130 (58 N. W. 850).

92. (1894.) In an action for a broker's commission for the sale of real estate, which agency was denied, evidence showing that the defendant asked plaintiff, a real estate broker, what he had for sale, plaintiff suggested certain lands and wrote to the owner and another agent, held to sustain a verdict for plaintiff. Shields v. Gamble, 42 Neb. 850 (61 N. W. 101).

93. (1898.) Evidence in an action by a real estate broker to recover his commission from the owner of real land who has refused to convey to a purchaser sustains a finding for plaintiff. Lunney v. Healy, 56 Neb. 313 (76 N. W. 558; 44 L. R. A. 593).

94. (1905.) Under the evidence, held, that a real estate broker has no just cause for complaint of an allowance to him of $300 as commission for services in the exchange of properties. Lucas v. County Recorder of Cass County, 75 Neb. 351 (106 N. W. 217).

95. (1907.) Evidence examined, and held insufficient to show a right of plaintiff to recover commissions as broker for the sale of real estate. Bolton v. Coburn, 78 Neb. 731 (111 N. W. 780).

96. (1906.) Correspondence set out in the opinion held insufficient to entitle the plaintiff to recover a commission. Tracy v. Dean, 77 Neb. 382 (109 N. W. 505).

Instructions.

97. (1885.) Where there was evidence tending to show that the plaintiff rendered no services whatever in effecting a sale of real estate, an instruction to the effect that if the jury should so find the plaintiff would not be entitled to recover is based upon evidence in the case, and is not inconsistent with the instruction that if he did render some service, he is entitled to recover on a quantum meruit. McMurtry v. Madison, 18 Neb. 291 (25 N. W. 85).

98. (1885.) In an action for compensation an instruction that plaintiff is entitled to recover, if at all, "such sum as you believe from the evidence his services were reasonably worth according to the usual and customary mode of charging for such services among real estate agents at the time and place such services were rendered," held proper. Lansing v. Johnson, 18 Neb. 174 (24 N. W. 726).

99. (1891.) Instructions in action by broker for commissions, held erroneous. Marshall v. Goble, 32 Neb. 9 (48 N. W. 898).

100. (1892.) Instructions to find for plaintiff in case the jury found he consummated a sale of realty held applicable to the evidence. St. Felix v. Green, 34 Neb. 800 (52 N. W. 821).

101. (1895.) In an action by a real estate broker to recover on a special contract for procuring a purchaser, the contract having been made by one alleged to be the agent of the owner and the authority of the agent being one of the issues, the court properly refused an instruction stating that the plaintiff was entitled to recover if he was employed by the owner or some one acting for her without stating that such person must be authorized to so act. Funk v. Latta, 43 Neb. 739 (62 N. W. 65).

102. (1897.) Instructions in an action for a broker's commission held not erroneous. Stewart v. Smith, 50 Neb. 631 (70 N. W. 235).

103. (1898.) Instructions held correct in an action by real estate agents for commission for making a sale. Traynor v. Morse, 55 Neb. 595 (75 N. W. 1103).

104. (1902.) In an action by a broker, for commissions alleged to be due for procuring a purchaser of real estate, the instructions examined, and held properly given. Huffman v. Ellis, 64 Neb. 623 (90 N. W. 552).

105. (1902.) Where party claims compensation as real estate broker for procuring a purchaser of lands and no exclusive right of sale was claimed, an instruction to the effect that the seller had a right to trade his own property, and that if the broker was not instrumental in bringing about the making of a contract, he could recover no commission on it, held proper. Buck v. Hogeboom, 2 Unof. 853 (90 N. W. 635).

Status of association.

1. (1894.) A corporation which has for its object the purchase of land and the construction of houses thereon (the funds being realized from the capital stock paid in by subscribers in installments), and finally the allotment of the lots and houses among stockholders in satisfaction of their stock, is one organized for the purpose of carrying on a lawful business and authorized by the general incorporation laws. York Park Building Ass'n v. Barnes, 39 Neb. 834 (58 N. W. 440).

Statutory provisions.

2. (1878.) In the act of February 18, 1873, entitled "An act to enable associations of persons for raising funds to be loaned among their members for building homesteads to become bodies corporate," the words "and other purposes" are null and void. Lincoln Building & Savings Ass'n v. Graham, 7 Neb. 173.

3. (1896.) The act of 1873 (Gen. Stats., p. 207), providing for the incorporation of building and loan associations, does not conflict with section 15, article III of the constitution, prohibiting special legislation. Livingston Loan & Building Ass'n v. Drummond, 49 Neb. 200 (68 N. W. 375).

4. (1896.) Assuming that the purpose of the act of 1891, relating to foreign building and loan associations (Comp. Stats., secs. 148*a*-148*r*, ch. 16), was to invalidate contracts of non-complying corporations, the act, as to agreements existing at the time of its enactment, is unconstitutional. American Building & Loan Ass'n v. Rainbolt, 48 Neb. 434 (67 N. W. 493).

5. (1896.) The primary object of the act of 1891, relating to building and loan associations (Comp. Stats., secs. 148*a*-148*r*, ch. 16), is to bring a designated class of foreign corporations within the jurisdiction of the state courts in order to protect persons dealing with them from fraud and imposition. American Building & Loan Ass'n v. Rainbolt, 48 Neb. 434 (67 N. W. 493).

sufficient clearness indicates the subject of legislation. Nebraska Loan & Building Ass'n v. Perkins, 61 Neb. 254 (85 N. W. 67).

7. (1901.) Chapter 11, General Statutes of 1873, entitled "An act to enable associations of persons for raising funds to be loaned among their members for building them homesteads and other purposes, to become bodies corporate," is not unconstitutional. Chadron Loan & Building Ass'n v. O'Linn, 1 Unof. 1 (95 N. W. 368).

By-bidding by officers.

8. (1902.) Loans by the association must be open to competitive bidding, and by-bidding by the officers or agents of the association for the purpose of increasing the premium to be paid for loans, will not be tolerated. South Omaha Loan & Building Ass'n v. Wirrick, 63 Neb. 598 (88 N. W. 694).

Deducting premium from loan.

9. (1902.) A building and loan association may deduct from a loan made to one of its members the premium bid for the right of precedence in taking such loan. South Omaha Loan & Building Ass'n v. Wirrick, 63 Neb. 598 (88 N. W. 694).

Subscription to stock.

10. (1894.) One to whom stock is issued, who pays assessments thereon, acts as an officer and takes part in management of corporation, is estopped to deny his subscription. York Park Building Ass'n v. Barnes, 39 Neb. 834 (58 N. W. 440).

11. (1896.) In a suit for money paid for stock, and to cancel the subscription contract on account of false and fraudulent representations of defendant's agent, the surrender of the stock is a condition precedent to the right to rescind, in absence of evidence that the stock is worthless. Building & Loan Ass'n of Dakota v. Cameron, 48 Neb. 124 (66 N. W. 1109).

Validity of contract in general.

12. (1902.) Contracts in which a corporation, in consideration of stated payments made to it, makes promises, which are the main inducement to such contracts, and are impossible to perform, are unlawful, being against public policy. State, ex rel. Prout, v. Nebraska Home Co., 66 Neb. 349 (92 N. W. 763; 103 Am. St. Rep. 706; 60 L. R. A. 448).

13. (1902.) Contracts of a corporation, in consideration of stated payments to it, by which it professes to assist the holders of its contracts in the purchase of homes and in payment of the same, where under its scheme some of the contributors can obtain no assistance for more than seventy years, are unlawful, as against public policy. State, ex rel. Prout, v. Nebraska Home Co., 66 Neb. 349 (92 N. W. 763; 103 Am. St. Rep. 706; 60 L. R. A. 448).

Contracts with foreign association.

14. (1901.) A contract made in this state, with a resident thereof, by a foreign building and loan association, which has failed to first procure a certificate or approval and authorization from the proper officers for transacting business in this state, is void and unenforceable, though the parties to such contract may have stipulated therein that it should be governed by the laws of the state where the offending association is resident. Henni v. Fidelity Building & Loan Ass'n, 61 Neb. 744 (86 N. W. 475; 87 Am. St. Rep. 519).

15. (1901.) A contract made in this state with a resident thereof by a foreign building and loan association which has failed first to procure a certificate of approval and authorization from the proper officers for transacting business in this state, is void and unenforceable in our courts. Pioneer Savings & Loan Co. v. Eyer, 62 Neb. 810 (87 N. W. 1058).

16. (1901.) The policy of this state, as announced by the legislature, is to prohibit the transaction of business by foreign building and loan associations, unless duly authorized by the proper authorities. Henni v. Fidelity Building & Loan Ass'n, 61 Neb. 744 (86 N. W. 475; 87 Am. St. Rep. 519).

17. (1901.) In the absence of usury, fraud, or other illegality, a contract with a foreign building and loan association will be enforced according to an equitable interpretation of its terms. People's Building, Loan & Savings Ass'n v. Gilmore, 1 Unof. 181 (90 N. W. 108).

18. (1902.) When a member of a so-called mutual loan association, not incorporated under the laws of this state, borrows money of the society at an agreed rate of interest and surrenders to the society his shares of stock therein, and stipulates to continue the payment of monthly dues upon such shares, such stipualtion is without consideration and is void, and the borrower's obligations to the association are discharged by the repayment of the loan with interest at the agreed rate. Kear

v. Eastern Building & Loan Ass'n, 2 Unof. 895 (90 N. W. 643).

19. (1906.) A contract with a foreign building and loan association authorized to transact business in this state at the time the contract is made does not become unenforceable by reason of the failure of the association to renew its authority to transact business in the state. Eastern Building & Loan Ass'n v. Tonkinson, 76 Neb. 470 (107 N. W. 762).

——What law governs.

20. (1903.) Contracts made in this state, by residents of this state, with foreign building and loan associations, such contracts being made through agents of such associations located in this state, are Nebraska contracts, and their construction, validity and enforcement are governed by the laws of this state. National Mutual Building & Loan Ass'n v. Retzman, 69 Neb. 667 (96 N. W. 204).

21. (1901.) A contract executed in this state by a New York building and loan association, on property in this state, is a Nebraska contract, and the construction and validity is to be governed by laws of this state. People's Building, Loan & Savings Ass'n v. Parish, 1 Unof. 505 (96 N. W. 243)

22. (1902.) Contracts made in Nebraska, with residents of this state, by a foreign building and loan association, if made by agents of such associations within this state, are Nebraska contracts; and by their construction, validity and enforcement are governed by the laws of this state. People's Building, Loan & Savings Ass'n v. Shaffer, 63 Neb. 573 (88 N. W. 669).

Recovery of premiums.

23. (1894.) Action by stockholder to recover back payments on his shares, on ground that company refused to make a promised loan; judgment for plaintiff affirmed, and order requiring plaintiff to file certificate of stock with clerk for cancelation and delivery to defendant approved. American Building & Loan Ass'n v. Mordock, 39 Neb. 413 (58 N. W. 107).

Interest and usury.

——Rate of interest chargeable.

24. (1878.) Persons associated and incorporated under section 123 and subsequent sections of chapter XXV of the Revised Statutes of 1866, for the transaction of lawful business, have no authority as a corporation to charge and receive interest on loans made by them, to exceed the maximum rate allowed by law; and all loan contracts made by such corporation for interest in excess of the rate fixed by law, are affected with the vice of usury. Lincoln Loan & Savings Ass'n v. Graham, 7 Neb. 173.

25. (1896.) The act of 1873 authorized associations created thereunder to collect money by stated dues, fines, interest, and by premiums bid by members for the right of precedence in taking loans. It also provided that the dues, fines, and premiums, although in excess of legal interest, shall not be construed to make the loan usurious. Held, That interest might be reserved at the highest rate permitted by law on the face of the loan, although the premium was deducted from that amount and the difference only paid the borrower. Livingston Loan & Building Ass'n v. Drummond, 49 Neb. 200 (68 N. W. 375).

26. (1902.) A contract which provides for the payment of 6 per cent. interest, payable monthly, on a loan of $1,500, and also provides for a "premium" of $1,500, to be paid by the borrower by taking stock in that amount in a foreign corporation which has not complied with our statute regulating building and loan associations, and making monthly payments on said stock of $9 each until the same is matured, is usurious. Anselme v. American Savings & Loan Ass'n, 66 Neb. 520 (92 N. W. 745).

27. (1904.) The loan made to the appellee in this case held to be tainted with usury. Clarke v. Woodruff, 72 Neb. 286 (100 N. W. 314).

——Determining usurious contract.

28. (1906.) In determining whether a contract with a foreign building and loan association is usurious, it is proper to consider only such payments contracted for as are in the nature of interest and premiums on the loan. Eastern Building & Loan Ass'n v. Tonkinson, 76 Neb. 470 (107 N. W. 762).

——Foreign association.

29. (1898.) In foreclosure by a foreign building and loan association the rate of interest is not regulated by chapter 14, Session Laws of 1891, which relates solely to domestic associations. National Mutual Building & Loan Ass'n v. Keeney, 57 Neb. 94 (77 N. W. 442).

30. (1899.) A foreign building and loan association is subject to the penalties of the statute against usury. Building & Loan Ass'n of Dakota v. Bilan, 59 Neb. 458 (81 N. W. 308).

——— Penalties.

31. (1898.) In an action of foreclosure brought by a building and loan association incorporated under the laws of a state other than Nebraska, the rights of plaintiffs with respect to interest are governed by chapter 44, Compiled Statutes; and if, for the use of the money sought to be collected, the proofs, upon proper issues, show that more than ten per cent. interest per annum has been contracted for or received under any pretense whatever, the penalties prescribed by said chapter 44 for contracting for or receiving usury should be enforced. National Mutual Building & Loan Ass'n v. Keeney, 57 Neb. 94 (77 N. W. 442).

32. (1899.) The contracts of foreign building and loan associations made in this state are not exempt from the penalties denounced against usurious transactions by our statutes. Interstate Savings & Loan Ass'n v. Strine, 58 Neb. 133 (78 N. W. 377).

33. A foreign building and loan association doing business in this state, is subject to the penalties of the statute against usury. (1899) Interstate Savings & Loan Ass'n v. Strine, 59 Neb. 27 (80 N. W. 45); (1899) Building & Loan Ass'n of Dakota v. Bilan, 59 Neb. 458 (81 N. W. 308); (1899) People's Building & Loan Ass'n v. Parish, 1 Unof. 505 (96 N. W. 243); (1902) People's Building & Loan Savings Ass'n v. Palmer, 2 Unof. 460 (89 N. W. 316); (1902) People's Building & Loan Savings Ass'n v. Welton, 2 Unof. 462 (89 N. W. 317); (1902) People's Building, Loan & Savings Ass'n v. Carricker, 2 Unof. 465 (89 N. W. 316).

34. (1902.) A foreign building and loan association, which reserves a greater rate of interest than $10 per year on the hundred in a contract for the loan of money in this state, is not exempt from the penalties of the usury laws. Anselme v. American Savings & Loan Ass'n, 66 Neb. 520 (92 N. W. 745).

35. (1902.) The provisions of the homestead association act of 1873, did not exempt foreign building and loan associations from the penalties of usury. People's Building, Loan & Savings Ass'n v. Shaffer, 63 Neb. 573 (88 N. W. 669).

Recovery of loan on insolvency.

36. (1902.) Where a building and loan association is insolvent and unable to perform its contracts with its members, and a receiver is appointed to wind up its affairs, it is entitled to recover from a borrowing member the amount of money actually loaned, with interest thereon from date at the legal rate, less the amount paid by the member as interest and premium, with interest from the date of the several payments. Such borrower is not entitled to credit upon his loan for money paid into the association as dues upon the stock. Anselme v. American Savings & Loan Ass'n, 63 Neb. 525 (88 N. W. 665).

Change of business method as defense to foreclosure.

37. (1902.) In an action to foreclose a mortgage given to a building and loan association organized under the laws of this state, the fact that the association changed its method of making loans and conducting its business after the making of the mortgage is no defense to the action, especially in the absence of a showing that the mortgagor objected thereto. South Omaha Loan & Bldg. Ass'n v. Wirrick, 63 Neb. 598 (88 N. W. 694).

Application of payments on forfeiture or foreclosure.

——— Allowance in general.

38. (1894.) In an action to foreclose a mortgage given to secure a loan from a building and loan association, to a member, equity will relieve against a forfeiture of payments for delinquency in the interest to the extent of treating payments upon the stock as payments upon the loan. Randall v. Nat. Building, Loan & Protective Union, 42 Neb. 809 (60 N. W. 1019; 29 L. R. A. 133).

39. (1894.) Payments by a member of a building and loan association upon stock should, in an accounting of the amount due on a mortgage against him, be treated as payments on the loan. The fact that the company declared the stock forfeited according to the terms of the contract does not change the rule. Randall v. Nat. Building, Loan & Protective Union, 42 Neb. 809 (60 N. W. 1019; 29 L. R. A. 133).

40. (1894.) A member of a building and loan association, who was also a borrower, brought an action, before the maturity of the stock or loan, to redeem from the mortgage given to secure the loan on the ground of fraud in procuring it. She prayed that the mortgage be canceled on her payment of the amount found by the court to be due. The association brought its action to foreclose the mortgage because of delinquency in interest. The note provided that any such delinquency rendered the whole debt due. The court consolidated the two cases and made a general finding for the plaintiff in the first suit, but ascertained the amount due on the mortgage and decreed a foreclosure and sale. The association appealed. Held, That inasmuch as both parties sought the same relief and the appellant obtained all the relief it sought except as to the amount found due, the other issues were immaterial to the appeal. Randall v. Nat. Building, Loan & Protective Union, 42 Neb. 809 (60 N. W. 101[a]; 29 L. R. A. 133).

41. (1895.) An agreement whereby the stock of a borrowing member of a building and loan association, pledged as collateral security for his loan, is to be forfeited upon default of interest, without allowing credit on account of payments previously made on such stock, is unconscionable, and will not be enforced by the courts of this state, although recognized as valid in the association's own state. Randall v. Nat. Building, Loan & Protective Union, 43 Neb. 876 (62 N. W. 252).

42. (1895.) Although stock payments by a borrowing member of a building and loan association are not ipso facto credits upon his indebtedness so as to reduce pro tanto the amount due on his mortgage, a borrower may elect to have payments on account of stock applied upon his indebtedness to the association. Randall v. Nat. Building, Loan & Protective Union, 43 Neb. 876 (62 N. W. 252).

43. (1900.) A borrower from a building and loan association, whose mortgage stipulates that in case of foreclosure he shall receive credit for the withdrawal value of his shares of stock on a basis fixed by the by-laws, is entitled on foreclosure to have the withdrawal value of his stock fixed and credited according to his contract. Equitable Building & Loan Ass'n v. Bidwell, 60 Neb. 169 (82 N. W. 384).

44. (1901.) In an accounting between a foreign building and loan association and one of its members, when there exists a stock purchase and a loan, the transaction is to be treated as a loan and the borrower has the right to have the value of his stock applied to reduce the indebtedness of the mortgage, if he so chooses. McDowell v. Pioneer Savings & Loan Co., 2 Unof. 24 (90 N. W. 111).

45. (1901.) It is the right of a defaulting borrower from a building and loan association who so elects to have a credit of the present value of his stock applied to the reduction of his mortgage indebtedness. People's Building, Loan & Savings Ass'n v. Gilmore, 1 Unof. 181 (90 N. W. 108).

46. (1901.) The stock is to be taken as worth the amount that has been paid on it, in absence of evidence as to its actual value. McDowell v. Pioneer Savings & Loan Co., 2 Unof. 24 (90 N. W. 111).

47. (1902.) In an accounting between a foreign building and loan association and a member to whom a loan has been made, if credit is given the member for the amount paid upon the stock, it must be on the theory that such amount represents the value thereof, he having elected to apply it on the debt. Hence, where such sum is credited to the borrower, no further deduction should be made for value of the stock. Mercantile Co-operative Bank v. Shaaf, 2 Unof. 703 (89 N. W. 990).

——— Allowance for premiums and dividends.

48. (1896.) In ascertaining the amount due on a loan, from a building and loan association, the borrower is entitled to a credit of the present value of the stock at the time of foreclosure as well as to a fair and reasonable credit on account of unearned premium, and by-laws fixing the terms of ascertaining such credit will be enforced where not unconscionable. Livingston Loan & Building Ass'n v. Drummond, 49 Neb. 200 (68 N. W. 375); (1901) Chadron Loan & Bldg. Ass'n v. Simmons, 1 Unof. 718 (95 N. W. 868).

49. (1901.) Payments made on the stock are not to be applied as payments on the loan until the borrower has elected to have them so applied, and credit for the value of the stock should be given at the time of such election, and not as of the date when the payments were made. McDowell v. Pioneer Savings & Loan Co., 2 Unof. 24 (90 N. W. 111).

50. (1901.) Payments made on account of operating expenses and fines paid belong to the company and should not be credited on the mortgage. McDowell v. Pioneer Savings & Loan Co., 2 Unof. 24 (90 N. W. 111).

51. (1901.) Payments made for premium and interest, if not usurious, are not to be credited on the principal of the mortgage debt. McDowell v. Pioneer Savings & Loan Co., 2 Unof. 24 (90 N. W. 111).

52. (1901.) Any dividends declared or earned on the stock will inure to the borrower's credit, and this may be credited on the mortgage. McDowell v. Pioneer Savings & Loan Co., 2 Unof. 24 (90 N. W. 111).

53. (1901.) Value of stock will be taken to at least equal sum of stock payments and declared dividends in the absence of competent proof of losses. People's Building, Loan & Savings Ass'n v. Gilmore, 1 Unof. 181 (90 N. W. 108).

Evidence.

54. (1894.) In an action against a building and loan association to recover payments on shares of stock parol evidence of the contents of the by-laws of the association is not admissible. American Building & Loan Ass'n v. Mordock, 39 Neb. 413 (58 N. W. 107).

55. (1894.) In an action by a stockholder of a building and loan association to recover back payments made on his shares of stock objection to a deposition, in regard to the usage and custom of the company in transacting business was by the direct contract between them and the rules and by-laws of the association, properly sustained. American Building & Loan Ass'n v. Mordock, 39 Neb. 413 (39 N. W. 107).

56. (1896.) Evidence examined, and held not to prove the breach by the defendant, a foreign building and loan association, of an alleged agreement to maintain at the plaintiff's home a local board of directors. American Building & Loan Ass'n v. Rainbolt, 48 Neb 434 (67 N. W. 493).

I. OFFENSES AND RESPONSIBILITY.

Nature and elements of offense.

——— Breaking and entering.

Evidence of breaking, see post, §§ 40-42.

1. (1895.) A breaking necessary to constitute the crime of burglary may be by any act of physical force, however slight, by which the obstruction to entering is forcibly removed. Metz v. State, 46 Neb. 547 (65 N. W. 190).

2. (1897.) The lifting of a hook with which a door is fastened, or the opening of a closed door in order to enter a building, is a "breaking" within the accepted definition of burglary, although the entry might have been effected through a door already open. Ferguson v. State, 52 Neb. 432 (72 N. W. 590; 66 Am. St. Rep. 512).

3. (1897.) It is a familiar principle that a breaking necessary to constitute the crime of burglary may be by any act of physical force, however slight, by which the obstruction to the entering is removed. Ferguson v. State, 52 Neb. 432 (72 N. W. 590; 66 Am. St. Rep. 512).

——— Time of breaking.

Evidence of time of offense, see post, §§ 36-39.

4. (1893) Under section 48, criminal code, the breaking and entering in the night season is an essential element of the crime. Ashford v. State, 36 Neb. 38 (53 N. W. 1036).

5. (1897.) That the act be committed in the night-time is an essential element of the crime of burglary. In re McVey, 50 Neb. 481 (70 N. W. 51).

6. (1897.) Under an information against a person for the crime of burglary, he cannot be convicted of the statutory offense of breaking and entering buildings in the daytime described in section 53 of the criminal code. In re McVey, 50 Neb. 481 (70 N. W. 51).

7. (1898.) By section 48 of the criminal code, breaking and entering in the night-season are essential elements of the crime of burglary. Bergeron v. State, 53 Neb. 752 (74 N. W. 253).

——— Character of building.

8. (1895.) A building, erected upon a farm, designed and used for the purpose of storing corn after it is husked, is a storehouse and warehouse within the meaning of section 48 of the criminal code defining burglary. Metz v. State, 46 Neb. 547 (65 N. W. 190).

8*a*. (1907.) A vat six or eight feet deep and six feet in diameter, constructed of heavy oak timbers, which is partly sunk in the ground, having a hinged cover secured in place by a lock, and which is used for storing hides, awaiting sale, is a "storehouse," within the meaning of that word, as used in section 48 of the criminal code. Steele v. State, 80 Neb. 9 (113 N. W. 798).

9. (1900.) Breaking into a basement hallway, held to be a burglary of the dwelling-house of the person residing in the building, and having the general charge and control thereof, although such basement is not connected internally with other portions of the building Hahn v. State, 60 Neb. 487 (83 N. W. 674).

——— Value of property.

10. (1898.) Where an information for burglary charges that the breaking and entering were effected with the intent to steal, it is necessary to prove that the property possessed some value and was within the building. Bergeron v. State, 53 Neb. 752 (74 N. W. 253).

Consent of owner as defense.

11. (1887.) Where the proprietor of a building hears of an intended burglary to be committed by breaking into such building, and does not prevent it, but puts a force in the building to capture the burglar, and does effect his capture, this does not affect the guilt of the burglar. State v. Sneff, 22 Neb. 481 (35 N. W. 219).

II. PROSECUTION AND PUNISHMENT.

Indictment and information.

Indictments in general, see Indictment and Information.

——— In general.

12. (1888.) Where a preliminary examination was held upon a complaint charging the crime of burglary with the intent to steal, and the information filed by the county attorney in the district court charges the same offense, but with the intent to commit a rape, it was held that the same crime, to-wit, burglary, was described, both in the complaint and in the information. Alderman v. State, 24 Neb. 97 (38 N. W. 36).

13. (1903.) An allegation of an unlawful entering of a building with intent to commit one of the crimes enumerated in section 49 of the criminal code, is not sufficient to charge a crime as therein defined. Smith v. State, 68 Neb. 204 (94 N. W. 106).

14. (1907.) A preliminary examination on a complaint charging breaking into a storeroom with intent to steal goods will sustain a prosecution on an information charging the same facts, together with the value of the property actually stolen. Wheeler v. State, 79 Neb. 491 (113 N. W. 253).

——— Time of offense.

Time as element of offense, see ante, §§ 4-7.

15. (1900.) It is not essential, in an information or indictment charging burglary, to state the particular hour of the night at which the crime was committed. Leisenberg v. State, 60 Neb. 628 (84 N. W. 6).

——— Intent.

16. (1889.) In an indictment for burglary it is necessary that the indictment contain an averment that the breaking was with intent to steal property within the building. Winslow v. State, 26 Neb. 308 (41 N. W. 1116).

17. (1907.) A complaint which charges the defendant with burglariously breaking and entering a storeroom with intent to steal the goods and property of the owner need not allege the value of the property stolen or intended to be stolen. Wheeler v. State, 79 Neb. 491 (113 N. W. 253).

——— Ownership of premises.

18. (1889.) In an indictment for burglary, it is necessary that the name of the owner of the building broken into should be given, and for this purpose the person in the visible occupancy and control of the premises, at the time of the burglary, may be set out as the owner, whether he be the owner of the title or a tenant. Winslow v. State, 26 Neb. 308 (41 N. W. 1116). [Overruled in part. Leisenberg v. State, 60 Neb. 628.]

19. (1900.) In an information for burglary, it is proper to allege ownership in the person having the visible occupancy and control of the premises burglarized. Hahn v. State, 60 Neb. 487 (83 N. W. 674).

20. (1900.) Where a building is occupied by a person having general charge thereof the ownership should be alleged in him in an information for burglary, though some of the rooms are let to lodgers. Hahn v. State, 60 Neb. 487 (83 N. W. 674).

21. (1900.) Where a building occupied by a person having general charge thereof has a basement, some of the rooms of which are let to lodgers, and for other purposes, and a hallway leading to the different rooms is in possession of and used by the person in charge of the building, in common with those occupying the rented rooms in such basement, and a burglary is committed by breaking in at the door of such hallway, ownership was properly charged as being in the person in possession, and having charge and control of the premises. Hahn v. State, 60 Neb. 487 (83 N. W. 674).

——— Description of building.

Character of property as element of offense, see ante, §§ 8, 9.

22. (1903.) In an information for burglary, a drug store is properly described as "a storehouse, commonly called a drug store." McNutt v. State, 68 Neb. 207 (94 N. W. 143).

Presumption from possession of property.

23. (1894.) An instruction which, in effect, left it to the jury to determine what weight and effect should be given the circumstance that the accused, soon after the burglary charged was in possession of goods which had been taken from the store where the burglary had been committed, proper. Whitman v. State, 42 Neb. 841 (60 N. W. 1025). [Overruled. Metz v. State, 46 Neb. 547.]

24. (1895.) That a building was burglariously entered, and property stolen therefrom was, soon thereafter, found in the exclusive possession of the accused, do not, alone, raise a presumption of law that he is guilty of the burglary. The inference to be drawn from such facts is for the jury alone to determine, when considered in connection with all the other facts proven. Metz v. State, 46 Neb. 547 (65 N. W. 190).

25. (1900.) No presumption of guilt arises from the mere possession of stolen property. Williams v. State, 60 Neb. 526 (83 N. W. 681).

Admissibility of evidence.

26. (1898.) Circumstantial evidence is competent in a prosecution for burglary. Cunningham v. State, 56 Neb. 691 (77 N. W. 60).

27. (1904.) Where one is arrested for the crime of burglary, evidence of what was found in his room at the time of his arrest, together with his conduct and statements on that occasion, is proper and competent as tending to show his consciousness of innocence or guilt, as the case may be. Kennedy v. State, 71 Neb. 765 (99 N. W. 645).

28. (1904.) The attempts of the accused to escape, while confined in jail awaiting his trial, may be shown as an inculpatory circumstance properly to be considered by a jury, and to be given such weight as it seems fairly entitled to, with the other evidence introduced at the trial, in determining the question of his guilt or innocence. Kennedy v. State, 71 Neb. 765 (99 N. W. 645).

Weight and sufficiency of evidence.

——In general.

29. (1887.) The evidence examined and held not sufficient to support a verdict of guilty of the crime of burglary. Wright v. State, 21 Neb. 496 (32 N. W. 576).

30. (1903.) Evidence found sufficient to support the allegation of the ownership of the building burglarized and property stolen. McNutt v. State, 68 Neb. 207 (94 N. W. 143).

31. (1903.) In a prosecution for burglary and larceny, the proof must agree with the allegations of the information in the description of the property, but when the property stolen is described in the information as "one Elgin gold watch" and "thirty-two gold watch chains," the verdict will not be set aside as unsupported by the evidence because no witness testified that the articles were gold, if the articles are produced and offered in evidence at the trial, and there is nothing in the record to show that the jury could not determine the truth of the allegation from an inspection of the articles. McNutt v. State, 68 Neb. 207 (94 N. W. 143).

32. (1904.) Evidence showing that one accused of burglarizing a bank and securing over two thousand dollars, had, for some time before the burglary, been loafing about the town, looking into the bank windows; that he had no occupation; that before the crime charged he had no money, but immediately after he had plenty; that soon after the burglary he and his wife sold their household goods for a sum greatly under its real value and left the state returning again when he was arrested; and when arrested tried to escape; and that several revolvers were found on his person at the time, sustains a verdict of guilty. Kennedy v. State, 71 Neb. 765 (99 N. W. 645).

33. (1905.) Evidence that defendant was seen looking "Indian fashion" into a bank window the day before the robbery thereof; that early the next morning a team of horses and buggy were stolen in the town and were seen being rapidly driven toward another town; that the buggy was found in a corn-field and the horses running loose and defendant was seen walking toward a town from the vicinity where the buggy was found; and that defendant, after the robbery, was known to have a quantity of gold coins, and no evidence to explain defendant's presence in the town at about the time of the robbery, sustains a conviction for burglary. Keeler v. State, 73 Neb. 441 (103 N. W. 64).

——Circumstantial evidence.

34. (1898.) Circumstantial evidence is legal and competent in criminal cases, and if it is of such a character as to exclude every reasonable hypothesis other than that the defendant is guilty, it is sufficient to authorize a conviction for burglary. Cunningham v. State, 56 Neb. 691 (77 N. W. 60).

——— Intent.

35. (1893.) The intent with which the breaking and entering were done must be proved as laid in the information. Ashford v. State, 36 Neb. 38 (53 N. W. 1036).

www.libtool.com.cn

——— Time of commission of offense.

Time as element of offense, see ante, §§ 4-7.

36. (1895.) Evidence showing that during a certain night a board was removed from a corn crib belonging to the prosecuting witness, and without his consent, and a quantity of corn taken therefrom and the wagon tracks leading from the crib led to defendant's house where the corn was found, and the team identified as defendant's is sufficient to sustain a conviction of burglary. Metz v. State, 46 Neb. 547 (65 N. W. 190).

37. (1897.) Proof that the burglary was committed on the precise day laid in the information is not essential to a conviction. It is sufficient if it be proved that the crime was committed within the period limited by statute for the prosecution of the offense. Ferguson v. State, 52 Neb. 432 (72 N. W. 590; 66 Am. St. Rep. 512).

38. (1900.) The fact that a building was feloniously broken and entered between the hours of 6:30 P. M. and 9 P. M. on March 29 does not show with the requisite degree of moral certainty, that the crime charged was committed in the night season. Leisenberg v. State, 60 Neb. 628 (84 N. W. 6).

39. (1905.) In a prosecution for burglary, the charge that it was committed in the night season is to be proved like any other fact. If the whole evidence shows that fact beyond a reasonable doubt it is sufficient. Keeler v. State, 73 Neb. 441 (103 N. W. 64).

——— Breaking and entering.

Breaking and entering as element of crime, see ante, §§ 1-3.

40. (1886.) In a prosecution for a violation of section fifty-one of the criminal code, where it is shown that the accused went to the house of another in the nighttime and called to the persons within, who were asleep, to open the door, falsely stating that he was the sheriff of the county and desired to serve a subpœna; but when the door was opened he ordered the inmates to throw up their hands, but before he could enter the house the door was closed, and through which he shot twice, and then forced the door open and entered the house, this was held to be sufficient proof of a breaking and entering. Seling v. State, 18 Neb. 548 (26 N. W. 254).

41. (1895.) Evidence showing the accused broke into a building, while intoxicated, for the purpose of stealing liquor, sustains a verdict of guilty to the charge of burglary. McMahon v. State, 46 Neb. 166 (64 N. W. 694).

42. (1889.) Where, in a prosecution for burglary by breaking and entering a dwelling-house, with intent to steal, it was shown that the entry was through an open transom, and it did not appear that there was any breaking, either actual or constructive, the conviction was not sustained by sufficient evidence. McGrath v. State, 25 Neb. 780 (41 N. W. 780).

——— Violence.

43. (1886.) The fact that a person after breaking and entering a house approached the head of the family in his bed, fired off his pistol, and presented the muzzle thereof to him and ordered him in a threatening manner to hold up his hands, is sufficient proof of personal violence to meet the requirements of section 51 of the criminal code. Seling v. State, 18 Neb. 548 (26 N. W. 254).

Question for jury.

44. (1887.) In a prosecution for burglary of a railroad station, it appearing that the agent had information of the contemplated burglary, whether or not the company, by its agent, consented to the act by reason of such agent requesting his informant to aid and watch defendant, is for the jury. State v. Sneff, 22 Neb. 481 (35 N. W. 219).

Effect of mistrial on subsequent prosecution for larceny.

45. (1901.) The fact that the accused was prosecuted for burglary, resulting in a mistrial, is not a bar to a prosecution for larceny resulting from burglary. Sharp v. State, 61 Neb. 187 (85 N. W. 38).

Instructions.

46. (1897.) In a prosecution for burglary it is not error to instruct the jury that it is sufficient to find that the crime was committed "on or about" the date charged in the information, or at any date within the statute of limitations. Ferguson v.

State, 52 Neb. 432 (72 N. W. 590; 66 Am. St. Rep. 512).

47. (1897.) An instruction that if the jury does not believe beyond a reasonable doubt that a burglary has been committed yet are convinced that the defendant did steal the goods described in the information, is not objectionable as assuming that a burglary had been committed. Ferguson v. State, 52 Neb. 432 (72 N. W. 590; 66 Am. St. Rep. 512).

48. (1897.) An instruction which defined a reasonable doubt as being an actual, substantial doubt of guilt arising from the evidence or want of evidence in the case, upheld. Ferguson v. State, 52 Neb. 432 (72 N. W. 590; 66 Am. St. Rep. 512).

49. (1898.) An instruction in a prosecution for burglary where the evidence was circumstantial, "What is meant by circumstantial evidence, in criminal cases, is the proof of such facts or circumstances connected with or surrounding the commission of the crime charged as tend to show the guilt or innocence of the party charged; and if these facts and circumstances are sufficient to satisfy the jury of the guilt of the defendant beyond a reasonable doubt, then such evidence is sufficient to authorize the jury in finding a verdict of guilty," approved. Cunningham v. State, 56 Neb. 691 (77 N. W. 60).

50. (1898.) The statute defining burglary states, among other things, "if any person shall * * * wilfully, maliciously and forcibly break and enter," etc. If in an instruction, in which it is purposed to embody a statement of the elements which constitute the crime and necessary to be proved, the word "maliciously" in reference to the breaking and entering is omitted, it is sufficient if other words, or another word, identical in meaning or expressing the same meaning be used. Carrall v. State, 53 Neb. 431 (73 N. W. 939).

51. (1901.) Where in a prosecution against a defendant charged as principal in the crime of burglary, the jury are instructed that the defendant may be found guilty if he advised and counseled the commission of the crime, such instruction is erroneous, as authorizing a conviction as an accessory on an information charging him as principal in the alleged burglary. Sandage v. State, 61 Neb. 240 (85 N. W. 35; 87 Am. St. Rep. 457).

52. (1900.) Where, in an action against a person for burglary with intent to steal and also the larceny of goods, the court, in instructing the jury, in defining what constitutes the offense of burglary, omits an essential element, and the jury return a verdict of not guilty as to the charge of burglary, held that such omission is error without prejudice. Williams v. State, 60 Neb. 526 (83 N. W. 681).

Sentence.

53. (1889.) A sentence of ten years, on a plea of guilty by a young man, less than twenty-one years of age, who had fallen in with strangers and became intoxicated and persuaded to burglariously enter a dwelling with them, held to be excessive under the circumstances. Charles v. State, 27 Neb. 881 (44 N. W. 39).

Grounds for cancelation.

——— In general.

1. (1895.) To set aside a contract for duress it must be shown first that the will of one of the parties was overcome, and that he was thus subjected to the power of another, and that the means used to induce him to act were of such a kind as would overcome the mind and will of an ordinary person. Hargreaves v. Korcek, 44 Neb. 660 (62 N. W. 1086).

2. (1905.) Where a joint tenant gains complete title to the land by a quitclaim deed of his co-tenant, and is adjudged a trustee for such co-tenant, on the refusal of the grantee to reconvey according to the agreement of the parties, the court will set aside the quitclaim deed and restore the grantor to his rights in the property. Koefoed v. Thompson, 73 Neb. 128 (102 N. W. 268).

——— Incapacity to execute.

What constitutes mental capacity to execute instrument, see Insane Persons, §§ 21-25.

3. (1877.) A court of equity will relieve a party against contracts made by him while temporarily insane from the use of intoxicating liquor, where such contracts have been procured by the fraud or imposition of the other party. Johnson v. Phifer, 6 Neb. 401.

4. (1882.) A deed executed by one while he is non compos mentis, for no consideration, is invalid and may be canceled. Fisher v. Fisher, 12 Neb. 416 (11 N. W. 864).

——— Failure of consideration.

5. (1905.) Where an old woman, dependent upon a soldier's pension for support, conveyed her house and lot to her son, in consideration of a promise to support her, the cancelation of such conveyance is affirmed, where, a year later, she is ejected from the place. McIntyre v. McIntyre, 75 Neb. 397 (106 N. W. 29).

——— Coercion or fraud.

6. (1886.) Where an old woman has been induced through coercion, though not amounting to fraud, to deed her property to her son who agreed to care for her and husband, but, after securing the deed mistreats her and the father and does not properly provide for them, the deed will be set aside. Munson v. Carter, 19 Neb. 293 (27 N. W. 208).

7. (1894.) Where coersion is not sufficient to amount to duress, but a social or domestic force is exerted on a party which controls the free action of the will, and prevents voluntary action in the making of a contract or execution of a deed for real estate, equity may relieve against the same on the ground of undue influence. Hartnett v. Hartnett, 42 Neb. 23 (60 N. W. 362).

——— Misrepresentation.

8. (1885.) Where a mother, by reason of false representation made by her daughter, is induced to execute a deed conveying a farm to the daughter, who represented that by reason of litigation between a son and his wife the mother would lose the place unless she disposed of the legal title, when in fact there was no such danger, the transfer will be set aside at a suit by the mother. Kleeman v. Peltzer, 17 Neb. 381 (22 N. W. 793).

9. (1888.) Where a person desiring to purchase real estate knows its value, and when asked by the vendor, a resident of another state, and who has no knowledge of such value, as to the worth of such property, designates a sum greatly beneath its worth, as he well knows, and such statement is relied upon by the vendor and a sale effected, it may be sufficient to authorize a cancelation of the deed at the suit of the vendor. Morgan v. Dinges, 23 Neb. 271 (36 N. W. 544; 8 Am. St. Rep. 121).

10. (1890.) Misrepresentations before sale, as to value of certain land, by vendee, who was not ignorant of its value, to vendor in a distant state who had never seen it, held, sufficient ground for cancelation of the deed. Delorac v. Conna, 29 Neb. 791 (46 N. W. 255).

——— Claim for penalty for failure to release chattel mortgage.

11. (1902.) A claim for penalty for failure to release a chattel mortgage, not reduced to judgment, cannot be made the basis of an equitable action to cancel another mortgage between the same parties. Meredith v. Lyon & Healey, 3 Unof. 485 (92 N. W. 122).

Persons entitled.

12. (1896.) A mortgage will not be canceled upon the application of the mortgagor, no creditor being interested, without a tender or requirement that the mortgagee be reimbursed for such expenditures as he has made, and indemnified as to such liabilities as in good faith he has incurred, on the faith of such mortgage. Miller v. Gunderson, 48 Neb. 715 (67 N. W. 769).

Consideration for cancelation.

13. (1895.) The mutual waiver of the rights of the parties to a contract of sale of personal property is sufficient consideration for a cancelation of the contract, to release the parties from their obligations thereunder. Bryant v. Thesing, 46 Neb. 244 (64 N. W. 967).

Negligence of plaintiff.

14. (1901.) One who seeks relief on the ground of mistake of fact must show that he was free from negligence. Farrell v. Bouck, 61 Neb. 874 (86 N. W. 907).

Condition precedent.

15. (1883.) Where a party has executed a mortgage of real property to secure the repayment to the county of the amount of certain coupon bonds, voted by the electors of the county, and issued by the county commissioners, and delivered to such person to aid him in building a water grist mill, an action will not lie in equity to remove said mortgage, as a cloud on the title of the plaintiff, to such real property, without first paying off such mortgage, according to the terms thereof, on returning to said county the value of such coupon bonds. Brewer v. Merrick County, 15 Neb. 180 (18 N. W. 43).

16. (1887.) Where heirs come into a court of equity to claim an interest in lands, which has not been conveyed, but which lands have been held adversely by other parties for a long period, they must do equity by paying a just proportion of the taxes and the interest due thereon. Snowden v. Tyler, 21 Neb. 199 (31 N. W. 661).

17. (1888.) Where a sale was had under a void foreclosure of a mortgage of real estate, and a sheriff's deed executed, held, that the mortgagor in an action to cancel the deed as a cloud upon his title must offer to do equity by paying what is equitably due under the decree, with interest and taxes. Loney v. Courtnay, 24 Neb. 580 (39 N. W. 616).

17*a*. (1903.) By an agreement made between an administratrix and those claiming under a contract of decedent for the sale of land, it was attempted to change said contract so that the east instead of the north twenty acres of the forty-acre tract was to be conveyed by the estate, the west ten acres of the north twenty being retained by the estate and sold for its benefit. A sum of money exceeding $350, paid by the administratrix on a contract made by the decedent in his lifetime, was returned to her by those claiming the benefit of the decedent's contract to convey in consideration of her agreement to convey the east twenty acres. An heir not made a party to the petition of the administratrix for leave to convey, had the benefit of the money and the land retained and hence should not be given the ten acres wrongfully conveyed, until he offers to do equity. Holmes v. Columbia Nat. Bank, 4 Unof. 893 (97 N. W. 26).

Jurisdiction.

18. (1889.) The district, not county, court has jurisdiction to set aside a deed obtained by false representations. Barker v. Barker, 27 Neb. 135 (42 N. W. 889).

Limitations and laches.

19. (1902.) The statute of limitations does not begin to run against an action to cancel a deed, constituting a cloud on the title to real estate, until some right or title is asserted under such deed, and such fact is brought to the knowledge of the holder of the title. Palmer v. Mizner, 2 Unof. 899 (90 N. W. 637).

20. (1902.) Laches will not be imputed to one from a mere failure to watch the records to guard against the recording of a forged or undelivered deed purporting to be a conveyance of his real estate. Palmer v. Mizner, 2 Unof. 899 (90 N. W. 637).

21. (1906.) An action to set aside a deed twenty-eight years after the conveyance, on the ground of insanity of the grantor, is on its face barred by the statutes. Hawley v. Van Lanken, 75 Neb. 597 (106 N. W. 456).

Parties.

22. (1887.) Heirs at law of a deceased grantor may prosecute in their own names, a suit to set aside the conveyance on the ground of incompetency. Cole v. Cole, 21 Neb. 84 (31 N. W. 892).

23. (1891.) In an action to set aside a deed, alleged to have been fraudulently obtained, the immediate grantee, who has conveyed away the entire interest, is not a necessary party. Dailey v. Kinsler, 31 Neb. 340 (47 N. W. 1045).

Pleading.

24. (1902.) In view of the other allegations as to the nature and circumstances of the conveyance, showing fraud and undue influence, the allegation that it "was without consideration" sufficiently states a fact, and is not open to objection. Bennett v. Bennett, 65 Neb. 432 (91 N. W. 409).

25. (1902.) In a suit to cancel a conveyance by an old man alleged to have been of weak mind, allegations that the defendant represented that the grantor's son and son-in-law were conspiring to defraud him of his land; that they were intending to bring an action against him and would be able to procure a judgment by false evidence, and cause the land to be sold to satisfy it unless conveyed to the defendant; that the defendant promised to hold the land in trust and reconvey it; that such representations were false; that the conveyance was without consideration; and that it was procured by said false representations in consequence of the extreme old age, mental weakness and childishness of the grantor, state a cause of action. Bennett v. Bennett, 65 Neb. 432 (91 N. W. 409).

26. (1907.) In a petition to cancel a conveyance of real property alleged to have been obtained by false and fraudulent representations, an allegation that the plaintiff, in reliance upon such representations, parted with the title to the land is a sufficient plea that he was damaged by the fraud. Rihner v. Jacobs, 79 Neb. 742 (113 N. W. 220).

27. (1902.) The circumstances under which a conveyance was made, the condition of the grantor at the time, and the injustice to him and his heirs if it is upheld, may be such as to cast upon the grantee the burden of showing that it is untainted with undue influence, imposition, or fraud, but is the intelligent and deliberate act of the grantor. Bennett v. Bennett, 65 Neb. 432 (91 N. W. 409).

Admissibility of evidence.

28. (1906.) The fact that the attending physician prescribed certain drugs for a patient which are used in the treatment of mental disorders is not competent evidence tending to establish the insanity of the patient. Ames v. Ames, 75 Neb. 473 (106 N. W. 584).

29. (1906.) In a suit by one of the representatives of a deceased person to set aside a conveyance made by the deceased on the ground that he was mentally incompetent to execute such conveyance, an answer filed by the deceased in a suit pending in his lifetime, in which he averred that at the time of executing the contract then in suit he was suffering from mental and physical prostration, and non compos mentis, is inadmissible in evidence on the question of the mental capacity of the grantor. Ames v. Ames, 75 Neb. 473 (106 N. W. 584).

Weight and sufficiency of evidence.

30. (1887.) The evidence examined, and held to sustain the finding and decree of the district court, and not to present a case of fraud or undue influence. Holmes v. Hill, 22 Neb. 425 (35 N. W. 206).

31. (1892.) In an action to cancel deed and quiet title in grantor, evidence examined, and held to sustain finding that the conveyance by plaintiff was without consideration, and that defendant was not a bona fide purchaser from the grantee. Rakes v. Brown, 34 Neb. 304 (51 N. W. 848).

32. (1892.) In an action to set aside a deed made by a father in his dotage to his youngest son, held, that the testimony tended to show undue influence on the part of the son, and that the father was not in a mental condition to transact important business. Loder v. Loder, 34 Neb. 824 (52 N. W. 814).

33. (1894.) Evidence, in an action to cancel certain notes alleged to have been obtained by fraud, showing that the notes were given in the belief that they were to cover part of the interest on a loan secured by the defendant for plaintiff, from a third party, but in fact were made to defendant and kept by him, is sufficient to sustain a decree of cancelation. Galloway v. Merchants Bank of Neligh, 42 Neb. 259 (60 N. W. 569).

34. (1895.) Evidence in an action to set aside a deed on the ground of fraud and duress held to sustain a decree for defendant. Firestein v. Horwich, 43 Neb. 453 (61 N. W. 592).

35. (1895.) Evidence discussed held insufficient to show plaintiff's right to have a conveyance executed by her canceled on account of fraud, duress, and undue influence. Firestein v. Horwich, 43 Neb. 453 (61 N. W. 592).

36. (1896.) Evidence in an action to cancel a deed from a mother to a son held to sustain a decree for defendant. Issitt v. Dewey, 47 Neb. 196 (66 N. W. 288).

37. (1896.) Evidence in an action to rescind a contract of conveyance and cancel a deed on the ground of fraud held to sustain a decree for defendant. Stochl v. Caley, 48 Neb. 786 (67 N. W. 783).

38. (1899.) In an action to cancel and set aside a deed on the ground of fraud and duress, evidence held to sustain a finding of no existing oral contract with plaintiff whereby the father was to convey the premises to him at his death, and decree for defendant sustained. Moore v. Moore, 58 Neb. 268 (78 N. W. 495).

39. (1899.) Evidence examined, and held to sustain a finding that a deed was forged. Lindsay v. Palmer, 58 Neb. 168 (78 N. W. 371).

40. (1905.) Evidence in an action for the cancelation of a deed in blank, delivered to a real estate broker, who was to obtain the signature of the plaintiff's wife thereto, held to sustain a decree for plaintiff. Lucas v. County Recorder of Cass County, 75 Neb. 351 (106 N. W. 217).

40*a*. (1908.) In an action to set aside a conveyance on the ground that the deed had not been delivered, the evidence held sufficient to sustain a judgment for plaintiff. Wetherell v. Adams, 80 Neb. 584 (114 N. W. 778).

41. (1907.) Evidence in an action to cancel a deed to land sold by plaintiff, for which certain trust company stock was given to secure the mortgage back, which stock was shown to be of little value, and was given to pay for the land, which in effect, was in turn given to pay for the stock, sustains a decree for plaintiff. Rihner v. Jacobs, 79 Neb. 742 (113 N. W. 220).

Adjudicating right of possession.

42. (1907.) In an equitable action to set aside a deed, where the right of possession is in issue and depends upon principles of equity that must necessarily be determined by the court, it is the duty of the court to determine the right of possession, if all parties in interest are before the court, and put the parties entitled thereto into possession. Hobson v. Huxtable, 79 Neb. 340 (116 N. W. 278).

I. CONTROL AND REGULATION.

Regulation and control of telegraph and telephone companies, see Telegraphs and Telephones, §§ 7-12.

Who are common carriers.

Street railways as common carriers, see post, §§ 213-216.

Telegraph and telephone companies as common carriers, see Telegraphs and Telephones, §§ 1-5.

1. (1893.) Street railway companies are common carriers of passengers, and are liable as other common carriers upon common law principles. Spellman v. Lincoln Rapid Transit Co., 36 Neb. 890 (55 N. W. 270; 38 Am. St. Rep. 753; 20 L. R. A. 316).

1*a*. (1885.) Telephone companies are common carriers of news and intelligence. State, ex. rel. Webster, v. Nebraska Telephone Co., 17 Neb. 126 (22 N. W. 237; 52 Am. Rep. 404); Nebraska Telephone Co. v. State. ex rel. Yeiser, 55 Neb. 627 (76 N. W. 171; 45 L. R. A. 113).

2. A telegraph company is a public carrier of intelligence with rights and duties analogous to those of a public carrier of goods or passengers. (1893) Pacific Telegraph Co. v. Underwood, 37 Neb. 315 (55 N. W. 1057; 40 Am. St. Rep. 490); (1895) Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Call Publishing Co., 44 Neb. 326 (62 N. W. 506; 48 Am. St. Rep. 729; 27 L. R. A. 622); (1897) Perry v. German-American Bank, 53 Neb. 89 (73 N. W. 538; 68 Am. St. Rep. 593).

3. (1887.) The word "locality," mentioned in act of March 31, 1887, means the territory unjustly discriminated against, and may be a village, city, county, or portion of the state. State, ex rel. Board of Transportation, v. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co., 22 Neb. 313 (35 N. W. 118).

4. (1887.) Act of March 31, 1887, prohibits any preference or advantage to any particular person, company, corporation, or locality on any particular description of traffic in any respect, or to subject any particular person, company, firm, corporation, or locality, or any particular description of traffic to any prejudice or disadvantage in any respect, and places the general supervision of all railroads within the state in the board of transportation, and requires it carefully to investigate any complaints made in writing, and under oath, concerning any unjust discrimination against any person, firm, corporation or locality; either in rates or facilities furnished, in order to prevent unjust discriminations against either persons or places. State, ex. rel. Board of Transportation, v. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co., 23 Neb. 313 (35 N. W. 118).

5. (1887.) The act to regulate railroads and prevent unjust discrimination, approved March 31, 1887, being remedial, is to receive a liberal construction. State, ex rel. Board of Transportation, v. Fremont E. & M. V. R. Co., 22 Neb. 313 (35 N. W. 118).

6. (1889.) The act of 1897 (Session Laws, p. 303, ch. 56) placed certain companies or persons, owners or in control of telegraph, telephone or express line or lines, under the control of the board of transportation, and for the jurisdiction and powers of the board adopted such as were conferred by a prior act. It was not amendatory of the act of 1887, by which there was created the board of transportation. Pacific Express Co. v. Cornell, 59 Neb. 364 (81 N. W. 377).

7. (1900.) The act of 1897 (Session Laws, ch. 56), empowering the board of transportation to regulate the charges of express, telephone and telegraph companies, is an original and independent statute and is not violative of section 11, article III of the constitution, respecting amendatory legislation. Nebraska Telephone Co. v. Cornell, 59 Neb. 737 (82 N. W. 1).

7a. (1900.) Chapter 60, Session Laws, 1887, regulating railroads, providing for a board of transportation, etc., is void, as the act as enrolled was not passed by the legislature in the mode prescribed by section 11, article III of the constitution. State v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., 60 Neb. 741 (84 N. W. 254).

8. (1904.) A statute forbidding railroad companies to charge for transportation for any specific distance a greater sum than they charge for carriage over a greater distance is within legislative discretion and is valid. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Anderson, 72 Neb. 856 (101 N. W. 1019).

9. (1899.) The law creating the board of transportation, by which certain designated state officers of the executive department are charged with prescribed duties in regard to railroads, does not cast such duties upon the individuals, as distinguished from the offices or officers, but it is the latter upon whom is put the burden of further acts executive in their nature. Pacific Express Co. v. Cornell, 59 Neb. 364 (81 N. W. 377.)

Legislative authority to create railroad commissioners.

9a. (1884.) The legislature have no power under the constitution to create railroad commissioners. The supervision of railroads by a commission would be proper, but the power must be conferred on executive offices already existing. In re Railroad Commissioners, 15 Neb. 679 (50 N. W. 276).

Power of courts to regulate.

10. (1896.) It is not within the power of a court to make such an arrangement for the business intercourse of common carriers as, in the opinion of such court, they ought to make for themselves. State, ex rel. Board of Transportation, v. Sioux City, O. N. & W. R. Co., 46 Neb. 682 (65 N. W. 766; 31 L. R. A. 47).

11. (1898.) The power—the jurisdiction—to determine what compensation a public service corporation may exact for services to be rendered by it is a legislative and not a judicial function. Nebraska Telephone Co. v. State, ex rel. Yeiser, 55 Neb. 627 (76 N. W. 171; 45 L. R. A. 113).

Regulation of rates or fares.

12. (1893.) The street railway of the city of Lincoln is so far under the control of the municipality that the latter may fix the rates of fare for passage over said railway, and may require tickets six for twenty-five cents to be kept for sale by each conductor of a street car. Sternberg v. State, 36 Neb. 307 (54 N. W. 553; 19 L. R. A. 570).

Discrimination.

See, also, post, §§ 118-125.

12a. (1885.) The right to build and operate a railroad and to charge and take tolls and fares, is a prerogative granted by the state. Public utility is the consideration for such grant. Although in the hands of a private corporation it is still a sovereign franchise, and must be used and treated as such, it must be held in trust for the general good. In the use of such franchise all citizens have an equal interest and equal rights, and all must, under the same circumstances, be treated alike, without unjust discrimination against any. State, ex rel. Mattoon, v. Republican V. R. Co., 17 Neb. 647 (24 N. W. 329; 52 Am. Rep. 424).

Who are members of state board of transportation.

13. (1899.) The secretaries, including the secretary of the board of transportation, whose appointment is provided for by the law, are not executive state officers. They are, in the nature of mere deputies, to act for their principals in matters which precede and lead to a final order or decision, which must be by the principals. Pacific Express Co. v. Cornell, 59 Neb. 364 (81 N. W. 377).

Power of board of transportation in general.

14. (1900.) The act of 1893, known as the "Maximum Rate Law" (Session Laws, ch. 24), does not materially modify the provisions of the law enacted in 1887 (Session Laws, ch. 60), defining the duties and powers of the state board of transportation. Nebraska Telephone Co. v. Cornell, 59 Neb. 737 (82 N. W. 1).

15. (1900.) The act of 1887 (Laws 1887, ch. 60) creating the board of transportation and defining its powers, is not in conflict with constitution, art. V, p. 26, which forbids the legislature to create any executive state office, nor with art. V, p. 2, which declares that no executive state officer shall be eligible to any other state office. Nebraska Telephone Co. v. Cornell, 59 Neb. 737 (82 N. W. 1).

——As to telephone, telegraph, or express companies.

16. (1895.) Section 7, article XI of our constitution, limits the legislature in the regulation of telegraph companies to the correction of abuses and prevention of unjust discrimination. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Call Publishing Co., 44 Neb. 326 (62 N. W. 506; 48 Am. St. Rep. 729; 27 L. R. A. 622).

16*a*. (1898.) Since the state board of transportation is vested by statute with authority to fix reasonable rates to be charged by telephone companies, a patron of such company should apply to that board for relief against unreasonable charges, and cannot resort to mandamus. Nebraska Telephone Co. v. State, ex rel. Yeiser, 55 Neb. 627 (76 N. W. 171; 45 L. R. A. 113).

16*b*. (1898.) The power—the jurisdiction—to determine what compensation a public service corporation may exact for services to be rendered by it is a legislative and not a judicial function. Nebraska Telephone Co. v. State, ex rel. Yeiser, 55 Neb. 627 (76 N. W. 171; 45 L. R. A. 113).

16*c*. (1900.) The act of 1897 (Session Laws, ch. 56) empowering the board of transportation to regulate the charges of express, telephone and telegraph companies, is an original and independent statute and is not violative of section 11, article III of the constitution, respecting amendatory legislation. Nebraska Telephone Co. v. Cornell, 59 Neb. 737 (82 N. W. 1).

16*d*. (1900.) The state board of transportation has power to inquire into the intra-state business of express, telephone and telegraph companies and to regulate their rates therefor. Nebraska Telephone Co. v. Cornell, 59 Neb. 737 (82 N. W. 1).

16*e*. (1908). Express companies operating over the lines of railroad corporations exercising a public franchise in this state are equally subject to state control and regulation with the railroad companies over whose lines they operate, within the limited field of the business of transportation which they occupy. State v. Pacific Express Co., 80 Neb. 823 (115 N. W. 619).

17. (1900.) The jurisdiction of the board of transportation under the act of 1897 (Session Laws, ch. 56) is not limited to the regulation of specific charges for messages sent from one point to another within the state. The regulation of telephone rentals is also within the powers of the board. Nebraska Telephone Co. v. Cornell, 59 Neb. 737 (82 N. W. 1).

Power of board of transportation as to rates.

18. (1887.) The power to determine what is an unjust rate and charge, and the extent of the same, and to prevent unjust discrimination, carries with it the power to decide what is a just rate and charge, and authorizes the board to fix just and reasonable rates and charges. State, ex rel. Board of Transportation, v. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co., 22 Neb. 313 (35 N. W. 118).

19. (1887.) The act to regulate railroads and to prevent unjust discrimination, approved March 31, 1887, provides that all charges made for services rendered, or to be rendered, by any railway company in this state, in the transportation of passengers or property, shall be reasonable and just, and every unjust and unreasonable charge for such service is prohibited and declared to be unlawful; and requires such railway company to print and keep for public inspection schedules showing the rates and fares and charges which have been established and are in force at the time upon such railroad. Held, That the board of transportation has authority to determine, in the first instance, what are just and reasonable charges for the services rendered or to be rendered on such railways. State, ex rel. Board of Transportation, v. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co., 22 Neb. 313 (35 N. W. 118).

20. (1887.) The state board of transportation has power to fix a reasonable and just rate, and also power to determine what is a reasonable or unjust rate. State, ex rel. Board of Transportation, v. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co., 22 Neb. 313 (35 N. W. 118).

20*a*. (1906.) A side-track constructed and used by a railroad company, and which connects with its main line and occupies a portion of the public streets of a city under a grant from the city to such company, will be presumed, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, to be a part of the public highway system of such company, and a public highway within the meaning of section 4, article XI of the constitution. Roby v. State, ex rel. Farmers Grain Co., 76 Neb. 450 (107 N. W. 766).

21. (1888.) Where the board of transportation finds that the charges on a line of railway are not reasonable and just, and orders a reduction of such rates 33 1-3 per cent., such board cannot enter into a compromise with the railway company by which the charges within the state shall be in excess of the rates found to be reasonable and just, in consideration of certain reductions in rates on in and out freight to and from Chicago and other common points. State, ex rel. Board of Transportation, v. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co., 23 Neb. 117 (36 N. W. 305).

Findings of board of transportation.

22. (1887.) The finding of fact by the board of transportation, in any matter submitted to it under act of March 31, 1887, for determination, is prima facie evidence of the existence of such facts, and of the reasonableness of an order made by said board in pursuance thereof. State, ex rel. Board of Transportation, v. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co., 22 Neb. 313 (35 N. W. 118).

22*a*. (1897.) An order of the state board of transportation under the provisions of the act of March 31, 1887, entitled "An act to regulate railroads and prevent unjust discrimination," etc., which requires a railroad company to surrender a portion of its right of way for an elevator site to a person or corporation engaged in the buying and shipping of grain, contemplates the taking of property for mere private use within the prohibition of the United States constitution, and is accordingly without authority and void. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. State, ex rel. Board of Transportation, 50 Neb. 399 (69 N. W. 955).

23. (1888.) It is the duty of the board of transportation to fix rates and charges within the state at such sum as shall be reasonable and just, and make findings of the fact. Its findings are prima facie evidence of the truth of the same, but when issue is taken upon them in court, the question of what are reasonable and just charges must be determined like other questions of fact. State, ex rel. Board of Transportation, v. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co., 23 Neb. 117 (36 N. W. 305).

Enforcement of order of board of transportation.

24. (1885.) The duty imposed upon a railroad, as a common carrier, growing out of the principles of common law, may be enforced by mandamus in the absence of statutory provisions. State, ex. rel. Mattoon, v. Republican V. R. Co., 17 Neb. 647 (24 N. W. 329; 52 Am. Rep. 424).

25. (1887.) Where the board of transportation has investigated charges of unjust discrimination against a railroad company, and has found such unjust discrimination to exist, and ordered such railroad company to reduce its rates to conform to a schedule presented by such board, which order the railroad company neglected to comply with, mandamus is a proper remedy to enforce such order, and the mention of the district court in the statute (act of March 31, 1887) will not preclude bringing the action in the supreme court in any case where the latter court has original jurisdiction. State, ex rel. Board of Transportation, v. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co., 22 Neb. 313 (35 N. W. 118).

26. (1887.) Where a railway company demurred to an alternative writ requiring it to reduce its rates and charges to conform to an order of the board of transportation, and denied the power of the board to reduce such rates and charges, the court would determine the question of the power of the board to make the order in question before entering upon an examination of the facts, and therefore would not permit the demurrer to be withdrawn. State, ex rel. Board of Transportation, v. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co., 22 Neb. 313 (35 N. W. 118).

27. (1907.) A court has no power to issue a peremptory mandamus without notice in an action brought to compel a railroad company to furnish cars to a shipper at a certain time and place, since it cannot be "apparent that no valid excuse can be given." State, ex rel. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., v. Harrington, 78 Neb. 395 (110 N. W. 1016).

Interstate commerce.

28. (1894.) The act of congress entitled "An act to regulate commerce," when it took effect, abrogated all existing contracts with common carriers for special interstate commercial rates, and especially vested in the federal tribunals described in that act exclusive jurisdiction to inquire into and adjust such interstate rates as are alleged to be unfair or discriminative. Fitzgerald v. Fitzgerald & Mallory Construction Co., 41 Neb. 374 (59 N. W. 838).

Jurisdiction of state courts over interstate commerce.

29. (1906.) The allowance by railroad companies of certain charges, as elevator charges, to terminal elevators on shipments of grain from points in this state to points without the state is an incident of interstate commerce, and this court has no jurisdiction to limit or control the same. State v. Omaha Elevator Co., 75 Neb. 654 (106 N. W. 979).

www.libtool.com.cn

30. (1893.) The state courts have not lost jurisdiction of the subject matter of actions against carriers of interstate commerce by reason of legislation by congress upon that subject. St. Joseph & G. I. R. Co. v. Palmer, 38 Neb. 463 (56 N. W. 957).

Maximum rate law.

31. (1896.) Chapter 11, Laws of 1893, requiring railroad companies, without the right of judicial investigation, to carry freight over longer lines at the rates for carrying it over shorter lines between the same points, conflicts with the fourteenth amendment to the federal constitution prohibiting a state from depriving a person of property without due process of law. State, ex rel. Board of Transportation, v. Sioux City, O'N. & W. R. Co., 46 Neb. 682 (65 N. W. 766; 31 L. R. A. 47).

32. (1899.) The law of 1893, known as the maximum rate law, or the portion thereof which contained the schedule of rates, was declared unconstitutional, under the then existing conditions, by the supreme court of the United States. This carried with it section 6 of the act, which could have no operation except in connection with the rates as fixed in the schedule. Such law is now as if non-existent, and does not interfere with the enforcement of the law of 1887 by the board and in the method provided in the law of 1887. Pacific Express Co. v. Cornell, 59 Neb. 364 (81 N. W. 377). [Overruled. Nebraska Telephone Co. v. Cornell, 59 Neb. 737.]

33. (1900.) The enactment of 1893, known as the "Maximum Rate Law" (Session Laws, ch. 24), appears upon its face to be a constitutional and valid act; and there is no presumption that its immediatte execution would deprive freight carriers of their property without due process of law, or deny them the equal protection of the laws. Nebraska Telephone Co. v. Cornell, 59 Neb. 737 (82 N. W. 1).

34. (1900.) The supreme court does not take judicial cognizance of the net earnings of railroad companies, and can not assume, without proof, that the "Maximum Rate Law" (Session Laws, 1893, ch. 24) is now, or was at the time of its enactment, confiscatory legislation. Nebraska Telephone Co. v. Cornell, 59 Neb. 737 (82 N. W. 1).

35. (1902.) The provisions of section 9 of the act of 1893, known as the "Maximum Freight Law," being punitive and not remedial, are to be enforced in accordance with the procedure of the criminal code. State v. Missouri P. R. Co., 64 Neb. 679 (90 N. W. 877).

36. (1904.) The title "An act to fix a maximum standard of freight charges on railroads, and to prevent unjust discrimination therein, or secret rates, rebates or drawbacks therefor," contains only one subject. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Anderson, 72 Neb. 856 (101 N. W. 1019).

Action for penalty for violation of statute.

37. (1887. Railroads being public ways, and subject to legislative control, any violation of the statute by them is a matter of public right, and to procure the enforcement of a public duty it is sufficient for the complainant to show that he is a citizen, and, as such, is interested in the execution of the laws. State, ex rel. Board of Transportation, v. Fremont, E. & M. R. Co., 22 Neb. 313 (35 N. W. 118).

38. (1903.) An action by the state to collect the penalty of a railroad under the Maximum Freight Law is criminal in nature, and can not be originated in the supreme court in the first instance. State v. Union P. R. Co., 67 Neb. 141 (93 N. W. 222).

II. CARRIAGE OF GOODS.

A. In General.

Duty to provide shipping facilities.

Stations for passengers, see post, §§ 198.

39. (1885.) It is the duty of railways as common carriers to furnish suitable warehouses at all appropriate points on their lines for the receipt and discharge of freight. State, ex rel. Mattoon, v. Republican V. R. Co., 17 Neb. 647 (24 N. W. 329; 52 Am. Rep. 424).

40. (1890.) Facilities for the erection of elevators, which a railroad is required to furnish need not necessarily be upon the right of way, but may be along the side thereof; but if facilities are granted to one or more for that purpose on the right of way, the same privilege, upon like terms and conditions, must be granted to others who are engaged, or desire in good faith to engage, in the business at that point, of receiving, storging, and shipping produce over such railway. State, ex rel. Board of Trans- portation, v. Missouri P. R. Co., 29 Neb. 550 (45 N. W. 785).

41. (1890.) Under the provisions of the act to regulate railroads, etc., which took effect July 1, 1887, the board of transportation of the state may institute an action in a proper case to require a railway company to furnish like facilities to erect an elevator at one of its stations, to any person engaged, or who desires in good faith to engage, in the business of receiving, handling, and shipping grain over the railway. State, ex rel. Board of Transportation, v. Missouri P. R. Co., 29 Neb. 550 (45 N. W. 785). [Overruled. 164 U. S. 403; 50 Neb. 399.]

42. (1890.) A railway company may impose reasonable terms and conditions upon persons who erect, or are about to erect, elevators at stations on the line of such road, but such conditions and terms must be the same to all such persons. State; ex rel. Board of Transportation, v. Missouri P. R. Co., 29 Neb. 550 (45 N. W. 785.)

43. (1904.) A common carrier of goods is required to provide facilities for and to receive and ship goods tendered at its stations on payment or tender of the usual tariff rates, and has no right to discriminate or favor one shipper over another in rates or facilities. State, ex rel. Crandall v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 72 Net. 542 (101 N. W. 23).

See, also, post, § 186.

44. (1904.) During a temporary scarcity of cars, a railroad company is entitled to consider, in apportioning cars among grain dealers, their relative volume of business and facilities for the loading of cars. Though there may be a difference in the number of cars furnished different grain dealers at the same railroad station, still, if no favoritism or discrimination is shown and the number of cars furnished each in is a fair proportion to his volume of business, facilities of loading and grain in sight, no shipper has a right to complain of this difference, though he may not obtain all the cars he deems necessary for his business. State, ex rel. McComb, v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 71 Neb. 593 (99 N. W. 309).

45. (1904.) It is the duty of a railroad company to furnish the necessary cars to transport the goods which are offered to it for carriage, but, when the carrier has furnished itself with the appliances necessary to transport an amount of freight which may, in the usual course of events, be reasonably expected to be offered to it for carriage, taking into consideration the fact that at certain seasons more cars are needed, it has fulfilled its duty in that regard, and it will not be required to provide for such a rush of grain or other goods for transportation as may only occur in any given locality temporarily or at long intervals of time. State, ex rel. McComb, v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 71 Neb. 593 (99 N. W. 309).

46. (1904.) "Chop" or "cracked corn" held properly classified as grain and not as a mill product, in apportioning cars to rival shippers of grain. State, ex rel. Crandall, v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 72 Neb. 542 (101 N. W. 23).

47. (1904.) If the carrier has furnished itself with cars sufficient to carry the freight which may reasonably be expected to be offered for carriage, taking into consideration the fact that at certain seasons more cars are needed, it has exercised due diligence in that regard, and where through causes which are not within its control it cannot supply the cars temporarily made necessary by unusual demand therefor, it is entitled to apportion the same in a fair and equitable manner among its patrons, and cannot be compelled to provide one shipper with cars to the exclusion of others. State, ex rel. Crandall, v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 72 Neb. 542 (101 N. W. 23).

48. (1904.) It is the duty of a railroad corporation, both under the common law, and by statute in this state, to supply cars to all persons or associations handling or shipping grain, without favoritism or discrimination in any respect whatever. State, ex rel. McComb, v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 71 Neb. 593 (99 N. W. 309).

Rules and regulation for reception and transportation of goods.

49. (1903.) The reasonableness of rules, regulations and classification for the reception, carriage and delivery of freight, made by a carrier, is a question of law for the court; and it is reversible error to submit that question to the jury. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Colby, 69 Neb. 572 (96 N. W. 145).

50. (1903.) A railroad company, as a common carrier, may make reasonable rules and regulations for the reception, carriage and delivery of freights, including the classification and suitable preparation of articles for shipment; and such rules and regulations shippers are to conform to. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Colby, 69 Neb. 572 (96 N. W. 145).

B. Bills of Lading and Special Contracts.

Bill of lading as affecting connecting lines.

51. (1897.) Bill of lading examined, and construed as an agreement for the carriage of goods over the defendant's line of road only, and not over the line of a connecting carrier. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Waters, 50 Neb. 592 (70 N. W. 225).

Negotiability and assignment.

52. (1878.) An assignment of a bill of lading and draft by a consignee of goods conveys his entire interest in the shipment to the assignee. Wright v. Greenwood Warehouse Co., 7 Neb. 435.

53. (1894.) The bill of lading issued by carrier to the owner or shipper is the symbol of ownership of the goods shipped, and though not negotiable is assignable. Gates v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 42 Neb. 379 (60 N. W. 583).

54. (1895.) A bill of lading, when properly indorsed, operates as a delivery of the property, investing the indorsee with a constructive custody which serves all the purposes of an actual possession. Union P. R. Co. v. Johnson, 45 Neb. 57 (63 N. W. 144; 50 Am. St. Rep. 540).

Rules and customs as affecting shipper.

55. (1884.) A rule or custom adopted by a railroad company concerning its contracts with its patrons for the transportation of grain, cannot operate upon those of its patrons who have no knowledge of the existence of such rule, and such persons will not be legally bound thereby. Atchison & N. R. Co. v. Miller, 16 Neb. 661 (21 N. W. 451).

C. Custody and Control of Goods.

Title to goods.

56. (1899.) The presumption that a shipper who consigns goods to himself intended to retain title may be rebutted by proof; and where the question of the intention is litigated, it is one of fact for the jury, unless conclusively established by the evidence. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Lau, 57 Neb. 559 (78 N. W. 291).

57. (1899.) Where the seller delivers the goods to a carrier for transit, and causes them to be consigned to himself, the presumption arises that he intended to retain the title. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Lau, 57 Neb. 559 (78 N. W. 291).

58. (1902.) That the articles were paid for and were to be shipped with freight prepaid, and were guaranteed to be according to sample, does not take them out of the general rule that the title to goods ordered from a distant point passes to the purchaser when they are consigned to him and delivered to a common carrier. Harding v. State, 65 Neb. 238 (91 N. W. 194).

See, also, Sales, §§ 287-294.

59. (1884.) The right of stoppage in transitu by the vendor continues until the goods have reached the buyer and the delivery is complete. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Painter & Sons, 15 Neb. 394 (19 N. W. 488).

60. (1872.) The term "transit" as used in the law relative to the right of the creditor to retake goods sold before delivery, is not confined in its meaning to the passage of the goods through the country, but includes their situation in every stage, from the time of passing out of the control and possession of the vendor into that of the vendee, the accident of place is not a material circumstance; but the immediate relation of the parties to the goods is rather to be considered. Sutro v. Hoile, 2 Neb. 186).

61. (1872.) B and A, merchants in Omaha, ordered, through plaintiff's agent, goods of him, agreeing to give their notes at four months; and the defendant, as marshal, was in possession of their store on delivery of the goods. B and A had filed petition in bankruptcy at arrival of goods, which were delivered to him by an expressman, without the presence or direction of the plaintiffs, or knowledge of B and A, and without delivery of the notes of B and A. Held, That the right of stoppage remained in plaintiffs, notwithstanding delivery to the defendant. Sutro v. Hoile, 2 Neb. 186.

62. (1884.) The right of stoppage in transitu may be asserted by the vendor of goods at any time before their delivery to the vendee by the carrier. But if the goods are by the vendee sold to a third party, in good faith, for value, and they are by the carrier delivered to the vendee, who delivers them to his vendee, the lien of the consignor is lost, and he cannot retake the goods in the pososession of such vendee of his vendee. U. S. Engine Co. v. Oliver, 16 Neb. 612 (21 N. W. 463).

——— Effect of garnishment.

63. (1884.) The right of stoppage in transitu is not impaired or extinguished by service of process of garnishment upon the carrier. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Painter & Sons, 15 Neb. 394 (19 N. W. 488).

64. (1884.) The fact that a carrier has been garnisheed by a creditor of an insolvent debtor to whom property is assigned, is no defense to an action of replevin, by the vendor, who has given notice to the carrier and demanded the goods. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Painter & Sons, 15 Neb. 394 (19 N. W. 488).

D. Transportation and Delivery by Carrier.

As shipments of live stock, see post, §§ 144-151.

Duty to deliver in general.

65. (1894.) The duty of a common carrier of goods is not only to safely carry, but to deliver; and delivery must be made within a reasonable time, at the place, and to the person to whom the goods were consigned. Gates v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 42 Neb. 379 (60 N. W. 583).

Delivery on direction of consignor's agent.

66 (1894.) Where a railroad company receives a car of potatoes to deliver to an agent of the shipper, and on arrival at the place of destination the consignee, the owner's agent, directs the delivery to another, such delivery was in effect a delivery to the agent, and the person to whom the delivery was actually made failed to pay for the potatoes, the carrier was not liable to the owner thereof for their value, although the bill of lading for the goods was not surrendered to the carrier before delivery, as the instruction of W. to deliver to K., was, in effect, the owner's instruction, and it not appearing that the bill of lading for the goods had been assigned or indorsed to any one by the owner or shipper. Gates v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 42 Neb. 379 (60 N. W. 583).

Delivery to consignee.

67 (1894.) The delivery of goods by a common carrier to the consignee thereof is made at the peril of the carrier, unless when made the consignee surrenders the bill of lading either made or indorsed to himself. Gates v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 42 Neb. 379 (60 N. W. 583).

68. (1895.) The delivery of goods by a common carrier to the consignee thereof is made at the peril of the carrier, unless when made the consignee surrenders the bill of lading either made or indorsed to himself. Union P. R. Co. v. Johnson, 45 Neb. 57 (63 N. W. 144; 50 Am. St. Rep. 540).

69. (1895.) A railway company issued to shippers of grain in Nebraska several bills of lading as follows: "Received of ——— [the name of the shipper] the following described freight * * * marked and consigned as noted below * * * to be transported to ———, and delivered at the railway depot on payment of freight charges together with such charges as have been advanced to the same. Consignee, Brown Bros. Grain Company. Destination, Milwaukee, Wis." The bills of lading contained the following notations: "Care Union Elevator, Council Bluffs, Iowa. Stop at Brown Bros. Elevator Company to clean. Transfer at Council Bluffs." Held, That such bills of lading were contracts to deliver in Milwaukee, and the notations on the bills of lading meant nothing more than that the grain should go by way of Council Bluffs to be cleaned there, or transferred to other carriers through the instrumentality of the elevator located there. Union P. R. Co. v. Johnson, 45 Neb. 57 (63 N. W. 144; 50 Am. St. Rep. 540).

70. (1895.) Where grain was delivered to a carrier, consigned to Milwaukee, and while in transit, was sold and the bill of lading assigned to a party in Milwaukee, the carrier by delivering the grain to the original consignee, at an intermediate point, without a surrender of the bill of lading, renders itself liable to the assignee. Union P. R. Co. v. Johnson, 45 Neb. 57 (63 N. W. 144; 50 Am. St. Rep. 540).

71. (1896.) A carrier delivering property to anyone except the owner and holder of the bill of lading is liable for resulting loss. Union Stock Yards Co. v. Westcott, 47 N. W. 300 (66 N. W. 419).

72. (1896.) Directions contained in a bill of lading to notify a certain person of the arrival of the shipment at the place of destination is no authority to the carrier to make delivery of such shipment to the person so to be notified, without the production of the bill of lading. Union Stock Yards Co. v. Westcott, 47 Neb. 300 (66 N. W. 419).

www.libtool.com.cn

73. (1903.) Where a mortgagee consigned a shipment of cattle, described in his mortgage, to a commission firm in order to protect the payment of his mortgage debt, and as soon as payment thereof was made directed the delivery of the shipment to the firm designated by the mortgagor, no action will lie against the carrier for nondelivery to the party designated by such mortgagor. Johnston v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 70 Neb. 364 (97 N. W. 479).

Delivery to warehouse.

74. (1885.) The common law rule requiring common carriers to make personal delivery to the consignee, has been so far relaxed as regards railways, from necessity, as in most cases to substitute in place of personal delivery a delivery at the warehouse of the company. But this is upon the ground that a railway has no means of delivery beyond its own lines. State, ex rel. Mattoon, v. Republican V. R. Co., 17 Neb. 647 (24 N. W. 329; 52 Am. Rep. 424).

Liability for failure or refusal to deliver.

75. (1895.) The refusal of a common carrier to surrender goods in its possession to the rightful owner amounts to conversion, for which the latter may recover if entitled to possession at the time of the demand therefor. Shellenberg v. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co., 45 Neb. 487 (63 N. W. 859; 50 Am. St. Rep. 561).

76. (1895.) The rightful owner of goods in possession of a common carrier may enforce his right thereto, although a stranger to the contract of bailment. Shellenberg v. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co., 45 Neb. 487 (63 N. W. 859; 50 Am. St. Rep. 561).

77. (1903.) Where the conditions of a valid chattel mortgage have been broken, and the mortgagee is entitled to take possession of the mortgaged property, wherever found, a common carrier is not liable to the mortgagor for a diversion of a shipment of such property and a delivery of the same to the mortgagee demanding possession thereof while it is still in the carrier's hands. Johnston v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 70 Neb. 364 (97 N. W. 479).

Action for failure to deliver.

78. (1897.) One with whom a carrier has made a contract for transporting his goods, may, in case of breach, elect to sue for damages for failure to perform the public duties of a carrier, or he may waive the tort and sue for breach of the special contract. Denman v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 52 Neb. 140 (71 N. W 967).

——— Pleading.

79. (1897.) An action against a carrier for failure to deliver goods cannot be maintained by the consignor in the absence of averments that he was the owner of the goods, that he was liable for their loss, or that he had sustained special damage. Union P. R. Co. v. Metcalf & Wood, 50 Neb. 452 (69 N. W. 961).

E. Delay in Transportation or Delivery.

As to live stock, see post, §§ 144-151.

Time for performance.

80. (1897.) A contract of carriage which contains no specified time for performance, implies, as one of its terms, performance within a reasonable time, and an action may be maintained on the contract for unreasonable delay in performance. Denman v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 52 Neb. 140 (71 N. W. 967).

81. (1906.) Where a carrier unnecessarily delays the continuation of shipment of goods from a point of transfer of the goods was to be had the carrier is liable for damage that is the result of an act of God. Wabash R. Co. v. Sharpe, 76 Neb. 424 (107 N. W. 758).

Act of God as defense.

82. (1888.) High water in a river rendering a railway over it impassable whereby a shipment of perishable goods was delayed, is an act of God, in the absence of proof that such a flood was not to be anticipated, and could not be guarded against. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Manning, 23 Neb. 552 (37 N. W. 462).

83. (1906.) A common carrier is responsible for injury to goods where the goods were exposed to injury by the carrier's inexcusable detention, and the carrier cannot, in such case, plead the act of God as a defense. Wabash R. Co. v. Sharpe, 76 Neb. 424 (107 N. W. 758).

Actions.

84. (1897.) An action to recover for breach of contract of carriage is not for a liability created by statute within the meaning of section 11, code of civil procedure, because of the duties imposed on railroad companies by section 111, chapter 16, Compiled Statutes. Denman v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 52 Neb. 140 (71 N. W. 967).

84*a*. (1907.) Claims against a carrier for an overcharge on a shipment of goods, and for damages for delay in the shipment and for negligence in handling the goods, are all for breaches of the same contract, and may be joined in one cause of action, a petition thereon not being subject to a motion to separately state and number. Haurigan v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 80 Neb. 132 (113 N. W. 983).

85. (1897.) A petition which alleges what is the reasonable and usual time for transporting goods and that the goods were not transported in that time but were unreasonably delayed, states in that respect a cause of action. Justifiable delay beyond the usual and ordinarily reasonable time is matter of defense. Denman v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 52 Neb 140 (71 N. W. 967).

F. Loss of, or Injury to, Goods.

Liability of carriers in general.

Liability of connecting line, see post, §§ 106-113.

86. (1873.) Common carriers of goods are not only responsible for any loss or injury to the goods they carry, but the law raises an absolute and conclusive presumption of negligence whenever the loss occurs from any other cause than the act of God or the public enemy. McClary v. Sioux City & P. R. Co., 3 Neb. 44.

87. (1873.) Common carriers of goods are not only responsible for any loss or injury to the goods they carry, but the law raises an absolute and conclusive presumption of negligence whenever the loss occurs from any other cause than the act of God or the public enemy. McClary v. Sioux City & P. R. Co., 3 Neb. 44.

88. (1883.) Certain household goods were carried by a railway company to H. in this state, reaching that point on November 14, 1879, and were placed in the company's depot. Soon afterwards the owner called for the goods, but was informed by the agent that they had not arrived. Certain friends of the owner at his request, also, on the 19th, 20th, and about the 22d of that month, made a similar inquiry of the agent and were informed that the goods had not been received. The depot was burned November 24, 1879, and the goods destroyed. The custom of the railway company was to give notice through the mail to all persons who were not regular shippers of the arrival of their goods, but no such notice was sent to the consignee in this case. Held, That the railway company was liable for the value of the goods. Burlington & M. R. R. Co. v. Arms, 15 Neb. 69 (17 N. W. 351).

89. (1906.) The general rule is that a common carrier of goods insures their safe delivery to the consignee against loss or injury from whatever cause arising, except only the act of God or the public enemy. Wabash R. Co. v. Sharpe, 76 Neb. 424 (107 N. W. 758).

When liability attaches.

90. (1905.) The liability of a carrier of goods does not attach until the goods are unconditionally delivered by the shipper and accepted by the carrier. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Powers, 73 Neb. 816 (103 N. W. 678).

91. (1905.) When a shipper surrenders the entire custody of his goods to a common carrier for immediate transportation, and the carrier so accepts them, the liability of the carrier at once attaches. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Powers, 73 Neb. 816 (103 N. W. 678).

Oral contract.

92. (1890.) On an oral contract between a shipper and station agent, that a stove should be shipped at carrier's risk and the subsequent delivery to shipper of bill of lading with the clause, "stoves at owner's risk of breakage," which condition was not brought to shipper's notice, the carrier was liable for breakage. Union P. R. Co. v. Marston, 30 Neb. 241 (46 N. W. 485).

Actions.

——— Jurisdiction of state courts.

93. (1893.) The state courts have not lost their jurisdiction of the subject-matter of actions against carriers because of interstate shipments by reason of the fact that congress has legislated upon the subject. St. Joseph & G. I. R. R. Co. v. Palmer, 38 Neb. 463 (56 N. W. 957; 22 L. R A. 335).

——— Damages.

94. (1894.) Where property delivered to a common carrier for shipment is destroyed while in transit, the measure of the shipper's damages is the market value of the property at its place of destination at the time it should have been delivered there. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Lawler, 40 Neb. 356 (58 N. W. 968).

——— Admissibility of evidence.

95. (1899.) The bill of lading and waybill made by the authorized agent of a common carrier of freight are competent evidence tending to prove that the articles therein described were delivered to such carrier for shipment. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Johnston, 58 Neb. 236 (78 N. W. 499).

——— Sufficiency of evidence.

96. (1890.) Where, in an action on a contract of carriage, to recover for breakage to a stove, evidence that the shipper, at suggestion of the defendant's agent paid a higher rate with the understanding that it was at the carrier's risk, and the bill of lading was handed to plaintiff when he was boarding the train and he did not examine it, is sufficient to sustain a finding of such special contract, and a verdict for plaintiff. Union P. R. Co. v. Marston, 30 Neb. 241 (46 N. W. 485).

97. (1906.) The delivery of the goods to the carrier in good order, and their arrival at the place of destination in bad order, makes a prima facie case against the carrier. Wabash R. Co. v. Sharpe, 76 Neb. 424 (107 N. W. 758).

——— Instructions.

98. (1890.) Instructions bearing on a carrier's liability for breakage of a stove shipped by plaintiff, under a special oral contract with defendant's agent, approved. Union P. R. Co. v. Marston, 30 Neb. 241 (46 N. W. 485).

G. Limitation of Liability.

By connecting lines, see post, §§ 114, 115.

As to shipments of live stock, see post, §§ 152-157.

As to passengers, see post, §§ 239, 240.

Right to limit liability.

99. (1876.) An incorporated railroad company is a common carrier as to all property within the scope of its chartered powers, and it cannot by special agreement divest itself of such character, and therefore it is liable for the negligence of its servants. Atchison & N. R. Co. v. Washburn, 5 Neb. 117.

100. (1889.) A railroad company operating a line of railroad in this state, is a common carrier, and cannot, under the provisions of the constitution, limit its liability as such by special agreement with a shipper. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Vandeventer, 26 Neb. 222 (41 N. W. 998; 3 L. R. A. 129).

101. (1901.) Section 5, article I, chapter 72, Compiled Statutes, does not impliedly give the right to a railway company to limit its liability, under section 3 of the same article, by stipulation. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Collier, 1 Unof. 278 (95 N. W. 472).

Validity of contract limiting liability.

102. (1893.) A railroad company, in the carriage of goods, is subject to the liability of a common carrier, and must answer for all losses not occasioned by the act of God or the public enemy, and cannot in this state by special contract limit or relieve itself from this liability, and the fact that the contract was for the carriage of goods from a point in this state to a point in another state does not change the rule. St. Joseph & G. I. R. Co. v. Palmer, 38 Neb. 463 (56 N. W. 957; 22 L. R. A. 335).

103. (1894.) A contract between a shipper and a common carrier, which, by its terms, limits the liability of the carrier and relieves it from either entirely or partially responding in damages for injury or loss to property shipped under such contract, resulting from negligence of the carrier, is invalid or void under the common law rule, as against public policy. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Lawler, 40 Neb. 356 (58 N. W. 968).

104. (1899.) Under the constitution of this state a common carrier of freight can not lawfully stipulate for the release from liability for loss or damage occasioned by its own negligence, and such a stipulation in a contract of affreightment is illegal and void. Pennsylvania Co. v. Kennard Glass & Paint Co., 59 Neb. 435 (81 N. W. 372).

——— What law governs.

105. (1897.) A limitation of the liability of a common carrier contained in a shipping contract will not be recognized or enforced in this state, though valid in the state where made, when such attempted restriction of liability is illegal and contrary to the public policy of this state. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Gardiner, 51 Neb. 70 (70 N. W. 508).

H. Connecting Carriers.

Liability in general.

See, also, ante, §§ 86-98.

P. R. Co. v. Marston, 30 Neb. 241 (46 N. W. 485).

107. (1902.) An agent employed to solicit traffic for a foreign railroad company, having no line of road in this state, has implied authority to bind his principal for the safe delivery of goods at a point beyond its own line, and to contract over what road beyond that line the property shall be transported. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. New York C. & St. L. R. Co., 66 Neb. 159 (92 N. W. 131; 59 L. R. A. 939).

108. (1892.) Where several common carriers unite to form a line for the transportation of goods and give a through bill of lading, each becomes the agent of the other, and damages for negligence may be recovered from the carrier committing the injury or from the one that undertook to transport the goods. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Twiss, 35 Neb. 267 (53 N. W. 76; 37 Am. St. Rep. 526).

109. (1897.) A railroad company receiving for shipment goods consigned to a point on the line of a connecting carrier, under an agreement to transport them to the terminus of its own road, is neither at common law nor by statute of this state answerable therefor after their safe delivery to the connecting line named in the bill of lading or contract of shipment. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Waters, 50 Neb. 592, (70 N. W. 225).

Delivery to succeeding carrier.

110. (1897.) It is the duty of a railroad company to receive and transport to the terminus of its line, and to safely deliver to a connecting carrier, goods offered for shipment and consigned to a place beyond its line. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Waters, 50 Neb. 592 (70 N. W. 225).

111. (1889.) The M. P. Railway Company received a piano at W., to be carried to L. and "delivered to a connecting carrier" for transportation to P. At L. the track of the M. P. railway crossed the track of the B. & M. railroad, the tracks and stations being connected by a "Y." The piano was carried to L. by the M. P. Railway Co., and delivered to two draymen to be transferred to the B. & M. Railroad Co. at its station. Before delivery to the last named railroad company, and while in the possession of the draymen, it fell out of the wagon and was broken, and was not received by the agent of the B. & M. Railroad Company. Held, That delivery to the draymen was not a compliance with the contract to deliver to a connecting carrier, and hence the M. P. Railway Company was liable. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Young, 25 Neb. 651 (41 N. W. 646).

Duty to receive cars of connecting line.

112. (1897.) It is the duty of a railroad company to receive and transport over its line cars of other companies if the gauge of the road is suitable and the cars are not defective or out of repair. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Curtis, 51 Neb. 442 (71 N. W. 42; 66 Am. St. Rep. 456).

Agency for each other.

113. (1892.) Where several lines of railroads undertake to transport and deliver goods of a shipper, each line is the agent of the other to accomplish the carriage and delivery of the goods. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Twiss, 35 Neb. 267 (53 N. W. 76; 37 Am. St. Rep. 526).

Limitation of liability.

See, also, ante, §§ 99-105.

114. (1902.) Although a railroad company enters into a joint contract with another company for the transportation of goods to a point beyond the end of its own line, it is competent for it to enter into an express contract with the shipper limiting its liability to the transportation of the property over its own line. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. New York, C. & St. L. R. Co., 66 Neb. 159 (92 N. W. 131; 59 L. R. A. 939).

115. (1902.) When a railway company receives goods for shipment to a point beyond the terminus of, or at a distance from, its own line, so that for a part of the distance they will require to be transported over the lines of other carriers and collects the entire charge for transportation, it will be held to have assumed responsibility for safe carriage over every part of the route, and the liability so incurred can not be evaded or limited even by express contract. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Western Hay & Grain Co., 2 Unof. 784 (90 N. W. 205).

Actions.

116. (1892.) When a party ultimately liable knows that an action is pending against the carrier who undertook to transport the goods, it is his duty to defend the action. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Twiss, 35 Neb. 267 (53 N. W. 76; 37 Am. St. Rep. 526).

Measure of damage.

117. (1892.) The measure of damages recoverable by a connecting carrier, for loss by reason of a judgment recovered for injuries to a piano while in the hands of the connecting line, is the amount of the judgment with interest and costs. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Twiss, 35 Neb. 267 (53 N. W. 76; 37 Am. St. Rep. 526).

I. Charges.

Regulation of rates, see ante, § 12.

Discrimination in rates, statutory provisions, see ante, §§ 3-9

Joinder of action for damages for delay with claim for overcharge, see ante, § 84*a*.

Amount of charge by express companies.

117*a*. (1908.) Until otherwise prescribed by competent authority, by the provisions of sections 2, 3, ch. 91, laws 1907, express companies doing business in this state after the law took effect may charge for the transportation of merchandise within this state any sum not exceeding 75 per cent of the rate in force on the 1st day of January, 1907, and thirty days were allowed after the act was in force for such companies to file with the state railway commission the schedule of rates and classifications in force on that date. State v. Pacific Express Co., 80 Neb. 823 (115 N. W. 619).

Charges for unloading.

118. (1884.) A railroad company cannot collect charges for unloading freight which it converts to its own use at the time of such unloading. Burlington & M. R. R. Co. v. Chicago Lumber Co., 15 Neb. 390 (19 N. W. 451).

Demurrage.

119. (1884.) A railroad company is not entitled to charge demurrage for freight standing in its cars, unless by virtue of contract or statutory law, or possibly by such use and custom as may have acquired the force of law. Burlington & M. R. R. Co. v. Chicago Lumber Co., 15 Neb. 390 (19 N. W. 451).

Liability for advances by agent.

See, also, Money Lent.

120. (1900.) Plaintiff, a freight agent of a railroad company, delivered to defendant, upon his promise to pay therefor, freight upon which was an unpaid balance of charges. Held, That on plaintiff being compelled to pay the charges to company, defendant became liable to plaintiff therefor. Grand Island Mercantile Co. v. McMeans, 60 Neb. 373 (83 N. W. 172).

Additional charge.

121. (1884.) A railroad company, as a common carrier, cannot legally increase the charges for transportation by wrongfully diverting freight from its proper course in transit. Burlington & M. R. R. Co. v. Chicago Lumber Co., 15 Neb. 390 (19 N. W. 451).

Actions for rebates.

122. (1888.) In an action against a railroad company brought by an assignee of a claim for rebates and overcharges admitted to be due by the defendant company, a judgment rendered in favor of a third party intervening and claiming the fund, cannot stand where there is nothing in evidence to show that he was entitled to the money. Russell v. Rosenbaum, 24 Neb. 769 (40 N. W. 287).

123. (1888.) In an action by an assignee of a contract against a railroad company for rebates and overcharges, no question as to the legality of the contract between the shipper and the railroad company was presented by the answer of an intervener, but upon the contrary he sought to obtain the benefit of the contract, and obtained a judgment in his favor, he could not afterwards be heard to insist upon the illegality of the contract. Russell v. Rosenbaum, 24 Neb. 769 (40 N. W. 287).

Effect of mistake in quoting rate.

124. (1897.) Where a railroad company, by mistake, quotes a rate on grain to be shipped to Colorado, less than the usual rate, and the shipper, basing the price of grain sold on such quoted rate, sold a large quantity of grain to one in Colorado, who is compelled to pay a connecting carrier the higher and usual rate, and the shipper is required to reimburse the buyer, the first railroad is liable to the shipper for the over-charge paid. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Crowell Lumber & Grain Co., 51 Neb. 293 (70 N. W. 964).

124*a*. (1907.) Section 3, article V, chapter 72, Compiled Statutes 1907, does not render void a contract between a railroad company and a shipper to transport merchandise for less than the usual and regular freight rate, where such rate has been agreed to by mistake of the railroad company without intending any discrimination against other shippers. Where such contract had been entered into and the freight transported in pursuance thereof, if the railroad company compels the payment of freight charges in excess of the contract rate, such excess may be recovered by the shipper. Haurigan v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 80 Neb. 132 (113 N. W. 983). [Overruled on rehearing. 80 Neb. 139.]

Right of carrier to rescind contract.

125. (1884.) When a carrier offers to carry the goods of a shipper for a certain price per car-load, and the shipper accepts such offer and ships his goods thereunder, the carrier is bound thereby and cannot be heard to say he will not abide by its terms, and if a greater sum is retained by the carrier, upon sale of the goods, it will be required to respond to the shipper for such excess. Atchison & N. R. Co. v. Miller, 16 Neb. 661 (21 N. W. 451).

Restraining violation of statute as to rates.

125*a*. (1908.) The attorney general may, on behalf of the state, maintain an action in equity to enjoin common carriers whose rates are fixed by law from violating the terms of the statute and exacting unlawful and excessive rates and charges. State v. Pacific Express Co., 80 Neb. 823 (115 N. W. 619).

III. CARRIAGE OF LIVE STOCK.

Relation of carrier and shipper.

126. (1876.) When a railroad company undertakes to carry live stock for hire, the fact that it does so establishes its relation as a common carrier, with the duties and obligations which grow out of it. Atchison & N. R. Co. v. Washburn, 5 Neb. 117.

127. (1906.) When the railway company undertakes to carry live stock for hire, it assumes all the duties and liabilities of a common carrier with reference to such property, and it is liable for injuries thereto occasioned by the negligence of its servants. Cleve v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 77 Neb. 166 (108 N. W. 982).

Duty to provide fit cars.

See, also, ante, §§ 44-48.

128. (1901.) A railroad company is bound to provide cars fit and suitable for live stock under existing conditions, and to exercise due care to transport safely. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Williams, 61 Neb. 608 (85 N. W. 832; 55 L. R. A. 289).

129. (1901.) A railway company acts in the capacity of a common carrier of live stock which it receives for transportation; and as such carrier it is bound to provide cars fit and suitable under existing conditions, and exercise due care to carry safely. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Williams, 61 Neb. 608 (85 N. W. 832; 55 L. R. A. 289).

Care and protection of stock.

130. (1893.) Section 4386, Rev. Stat. U. S., imposes a penalty upon a railway company which transports live stock, if the animals are kept in the cars more than twenty-eight consecutive hours, "unless prevented from so unloading by storm or other accidental causes." There is further exception where animals "have proper food, water, space, and opportunity to rest" on the cars. Held, That in addition to the penalty imposed by statute, a railway company which failed to comply with the above requirement would be liable in damages to the owner of the stock, but to state a cause of action the petition must show that the case is not within the exceptions named. Hale v. Missouri P. R. Co., 36 Neb. 266. (54 N. W. 517).

131. (1901.) Where a shipper of live stock agrees to furnish a caretaker and fails to do so, the carrier, if it has knowledge of such failure and proceeds under the shipping contract, is liable for any loss resulting from its failure to provide the stock with proper care and protection. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Williams, 61 Neb. 608 (85 N. W. 832; 55 L. R. A. 289).

132. (1901.) Where the shipper of live stock does not agree to furnish caretaker, and some of the animals die or are injured for want of proper care and protection while in transit, the carrier is liable and must bear the loss. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Williams, 61 Neb. 608 (85 N. W. 832; 55 L. R. A. 289).

133. (1906.) The provisions of sections 4386 and 4387, Revised Statutes of the United States, do not relieve a railway company engaged in conveying animals from one state to another from liability for damages arising through the failure to properly care for, feed and water animals in their charge, the transportation of which is delayed through an act of God. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Slattery, 76 Neb. 721 (107 N. W. 1045).

134. (1906.) A common carrier is not relieved from its responsibility to care for animals entrusted to it for transportation by reason of the express terms of a written contract, whereby the shipper agreed to accompany the stock, where the company, with knowledge of the failure on the part of the shipper to accompany the stock, proceeds under the shipping contract. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Slattery, 76 Neb. 721 (107 N. W. 1045).

——— Neglect of owner accompanying stock.

135. (1902.) Where a shipper agrees to personally accompany and care for the watering of live stock transported by a railway company, and is given free transportation for that purpose and is supplied with proper facilities, he can not complain of an injury arising from lack of such care in the matter of watering, arising out of his own fault. Chicago, St. P., M. & O. R. Co. v. Schuldt, 66 Neb. 43 (92 N. W. 162).

Liability for stock in yards awaiting loading.

136. (1905.) A railroad company which constructs yards by the side of its track to facilitate the loading and unloading of stock is not responsible as a common carrier for stock placed in such yards for subsequent shipment, but subject to the right of the shipper to remove the stock from the pens for feed and water, before the shipment is actually made. In such a case the liability of the company is no greater than that of an ordinary depository, or bailee. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Powers, 73 Neb. 816 (103 N. W. 678).

137. (1907.) When cattle have been delivered to and accepted by a railroad company in its loading pens for immediate shipment, the company is liable as a common carrier for damages to the cattle from the time of such delivery. Nelson v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 78 Neb. 57 (110 N. W. 741).

Liability for delay in accepting for shipment.

138. (1905.) Where a railroad company negligently refuses to receive and transport freight intended for immediate sale upon the market, such as live stock, it is liable for the expense of keeping the stock, caused by such delay, and for the difference between the price of the stock when it should have arrived at the market and the price when it did actually arrive. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Todd, 74 Neb. 712 (105 N. W. 83).

Act of God releasing carrier from liability.

139. (1890.) A snow storm of such violence as to prevent the moving of trains is an act of God, and releases a carrier from ordinary liability for loss to live stock. Black v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 30 Neb. 197 (46 N. W. 428).

140. (1890.) The words "ordinary" and "reasonable," as used to define the degree of care required of a common carrier of live stock, when overtaken by the "act of God," are used interchangeably, and either word expresses the degree sufficiently. Black v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 30 Neb. 197 (46 N. W. 428).

141. (1890.) A common carrier of live stock is not an insurer against injuries unavoidably resulting from the inherent nature or propensities of the animals, or against loss caused by the act of God. While a carrier, when overtaken by an occurrence known as the act of God, is not bound to the highest degree of diligence to preserve the property from injury, yet, in such an emergency, he is required to bestow such care as an ordinarily prudent person or carrier would use under like circumstances, and if he fail to do so and loss results therefrom, he is liable. Black v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 30 Neb. 197 (46 N. W. 428).

Carrier as insurer of live stock.

142. (1906.) A common carrier of live stock is generally an insurer of their safe delivery to the consignee against loss or damage. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Slattery, 76 Neb. 721 (107 N. W. 1045).

143. (1906.) A carrier of live stock is not an insurer against injury resulting from the inherent nature or propensities of the animals, and without fault of the carrier. Cleve v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 77 Neb. 166 (108 N. W. 982).

Delay in transportation or delivery.

In shipment of goods, see ante, §§ 80-85.

144. (1903.) In order to recover damages for an alleged delay in the shipment of live stock, it is necessary to introduce some competent evidence tending to show the length of time ordinarily required to transport the shipment from the place where received to the point of delivery, and that a longer time was actually consumed than was necessary for that purpose. Johnston v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 70 Neb. 364 (97 N. W. 479).

145. (1906.) In an action by a shipper of stock, against a railroad company for damages sustained by reason of failing to deliver the stock on the destination marked on time, evidence showing several delays from side-tracking the train to permit others to pass justified sending the case to the jury. Union P. R. Co. v. Thompson, 75 Neb. 464 (106 N. W. 598).

146. (1906.) A cause for unavoidable delay in shipment affords no excuse for a failure to exercise that degree of care required of a common carrier in the transportation of stock. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Slattery, 76 Neb. 721 (107 N. W. 1045).

147. (1907.) Where a consignor of a horse pays the carriage charges and demands the animal before delivery to a connecting carrier, it is the duty of the carrier to redeliver the horse without unreasonable delay. Wente v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 79 Neb. 179 (115 N. W. 859).

148. (1906.) Where a carrier undertakes the carriage of live stock, part of the shipment to be over a branch line, it is immaterial whether a delay in shipment that occurs be on the main line or the branch. Union P. R. Co. v. Nelson, 76 Neb. 72 (106 N. W. 1036).

149. (1907.) The consignor of a horse shipped from one point to another, which will necessitate shipment over two connecting lines of railroad, on the arrival of the horse at the connecting point of said roads, may, if he so desires, decline to ship farther, and upon payment of the charges of the first carrier demand a redelivery of such horse. Wente v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 79 Neb. 179 (115 N. W. 859).

150. (1907.) A railroad company is not an insurer of the arrival of its trains on schedule time in the transportation of live stock, but, where there is a material delay in the delivery of the stock, the company must, to exonerate itself from liability, show that the delay arose from some cause other than its own negligence. Nelson v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 78 Neb. 57 (110 N. W. 741).

151. (1907.) Under the constitution and statutes of this state, the liability of a railroad company for unnecessary and unreasonable delay in the shipment of live stock is the same whether the contract of shipment is a written or an oral one Nelson v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 78 Neb. 57 (110 N. W. 741).

Limitation of liability.

As to goods, see ante, §§ 99-105.

152. (1876.) An agreement that the railroad company and all connecting lines over which stock should be transported should be deemed merely forwarders and not common carriers, and only liable for such damage or injury of such freight as may be caused by gross negligence only, and not otherwise, is in violation of law and against public policy, and it does not change the character of the company from that of a common carrier to that of a bailee for hire; and such agreement does not lessen the responsibility of said company as such common carrier, nor remove its liability for negligence of its servants. Atchison & N. R. Co. v. Washburn, 5 Neb. 117.

153. (1891.) A common carrier of live stock cannot, by contract with a shipper, relieve itself, either in whole or in part, from liability for injury or loss resulting from its own negligence. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Witty, 32 Neb. 275 (49 N. W. 183; 29 Am. St. Rep. 436).

154. (1906.) It is not an open question in this state that common carriers cannot, by contract, limit their common law liability. Union P. R. Co. v. Thompson, 75 Neb. 464 (106 N. W. 598).

155. (1906.) A stock shipping contract contained a provision to the effect that unless claims for loss, damage or detention are presented within ten days from the date of unloading the stock at destination and before said stock has been mingled with other stock, such claims shall be deemed to be waived, and the carriers and each thereof shall be discharged from liability is void. Union P. R. Co. v. Thompson, 75 Neb. 464 (106 N. W. 598).

156. (1902.) An agreement that the shipper shall accompany the stock and be responsible for its care, when proper facilities are supplied, is not a limitation of the carrier's liability, forbidden by article 11, section IV of the constitution. Chicago, St. P., M. & O. R. Co. v. Schuldt, 66 Neb. 43 (92 N. W. 162).

157. (1902.) The care of live stock while being transported is a mere incident to its transportation, and transportation agencies have the right to contract against their assumption of liability that accrues to them as bailees, and in common with other bailees, and not strictly as common carriers. Chicago, St. P., M. & O. R. Co. v. Schuldt, 66 Neb. 43 (92 N. W. 162).

Notice of claim for loss.

158. (1897.) A provision in a shipping contract that in case of damage sustained, a verified claim should be presented to the general freight agent or to the local station agent, is waived where, on oral notice to the local station agent that the horse shipped had been injured, the latter had the horse examined, and removed from the car, and steps were taken by the carrier to relieve the injuries. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Gardiner, 51 Neb. 70 (70 N. W. 508).

159. (1907.) A condition in a contract for the shipment of live stock by a railway company, which provides that, unless claims for loss, damage or detention are presented within ten days from the date of the unloading of said stock at destination, and before said stock has been mingled with other stock, such claims shall be deemed to be waived, and the carriers and each thereof shall be discharged from liability, is in violation of the prohibition of section 4, article XI of the constitution of Nebraska. Cook v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 78 Neb. 64 (110 N. W. 718).

Actions.

——Parties.

160. (1899.) Where two persons ship their own stock in the same car of a railway company and that of one is injured, and, in an action for damages against the carrier, joins the other shipper as co-defendant because he refused to join as plaintiff, there is no misjoinder of parties. Union P. R. Co. v. Vincent, 58 Neb. 171 (78 N. W. 457).

——Damages.

161. (1905.) The class and condition of live stock are material matters in determining their market price, and, in the absence of evidence as to these matters and of what the market price of live stock of the class in question was, damages cannot be awarded from a claimed decline in the market price of stock of the general description of that which the carrier negligently refused to accept and transport. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Todd, 74 Neb. 712 (105 N. W. 83).

——Burden of proof.

162. (1906.) In an action to recover damages from a carrier for injury sustained by live stock in transit, which are accompanied by the owner or his agents, the burden is on the owner to show that the loss complained of was occasioned by the carrier's negligence. Cleve v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 77 Neb. 166 (108 N. W. 982).

163. (1906.) Where by contract the shipper accompanies his live stock with tenders or caretakers, no presumption of negligence on the part of the carrier arises merely from the proof of the fact that loss or injury has attended the shipment, but the burden is on the shipper to show that the loss, if any, sustained was occasioned by the negligence of the carrier. Cleve v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 77 Neb. 166 (108 N. W. 982).

164. (1906.) The delivery of animals to a carrier in good order and their arrival at the place of destination in bad order makes a prima facie case against the carrier, and it devolves upon the carrier to show that the loss or damage resulted from some cause which would exempt it from liability. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Slattery, 76 Neb. 721 (107 N. W. 1045).

——Sufficiency of evidence.

165. (1895.) Evidence held to sustain the allegation that the carrier was negligent in furnishing for the shipment of live stock cars which were dangerous and unfit for use on account of the broken condition thereof. Chicago, St. P., M. & O. R. Co. v. Deaver, 45 Neb. 307 (63 N. W. 790).

166. (1897.) Evidence, in an action by a shipper of sheep for loss and damage sustained by reason one end of the upper deck of one of the cars having fallen in, showing that the one car was taken from the train and the sheep placed in a suitable car and forwarded to another market by a following train, the owner's representative going on with the others, sustains a verdict for plaintiff for the full value of the sheep in such defective car. Union P. R. Co. v. Langan, 52 Neb. 105 (71 N. W. 979).

167. (1897.) In an action by a shipper against a railroad for damages to goods and live stock while being transported, the authority of defendant's agent to make the contract is denied by defendant, evidence introduced sufficient to sustain a finding to the contrary. Burlington & M. R. R. Co. v. Kittridge, 52 Neb. 16 (71 N. W. 986).

168. (1898.) Evidence, in an action against a railroad company for the loss of a horse, by reason of a collision, held to sustain a verdict for defendant. McIntyre v. Union P. R. Co., 56 Neb. 587 (77 N. W. 57).

169. (1899.) In an action on a contract of shipment of horses, not naming the carrier, evidence examined, and held to sustain a finding that the defendant was the carrier making the contract. Union P. R. Co. v. Vincent, 58 Neb. 171 (78 N. W. 457).

170. (1901.) Evidence showing defendant received a horse from a connecting carrier and after receding from a refusal to accept it for shipment because unattended with a caretaker, placed the horse in an open stock car in such a position it could not lie down, and was without feed or other care for thirty hours, and stood in rain and slush, contracting sickness resulting in its death, sustains a finding of negligence and a verdict for plaintiff. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Williams, 61 Neb. 608 (85 N. W. 832; 55 L. R. A. 289).

171. (1906.) In order to recover damages for an alleged delay in the shipment of live stock, it is necessary to introduce some competent evidence tending to show the length of time ordinarily required to transport the shipment from the place where received to the point of delivery, and that a longer time was actually consumed than was necessary for that purpose. Cleve v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 77 Neb. 166 (108 N. W. 982).

172. (1907.) When facts are disclosed from which it appears that an animal has not suffered through the neglect of a carrier intrusted with its transportation, the rule that proof of the receipt of animals by a carrier in good order and delivery at destination in bad order makes a prima facie case of liability against the carrier has no weight as against such facts. Wente v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 79 Neb. 175 (112 N. W. 300).

173. (1907.) In an action against a carrier for failure to furnish proper facilities for feeding and watering sheep while in transit, the evidence examined, and held sufficient to sustain the judgment of the trial court for plaintiff under the instruction given. Cook v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 78 Neb. 64 (110 N. W. 718).

——— Question for jury.

174. (1907.) Where the owner of a horse, after it is unloaded, acting under the supervision of a competent veterinary surgeon whom he has employed, leads said horse, in the storm which has arisen, through the streets of the city for a distance of two miles to the veterinary hospital; held, a question of fact for the jury whether a reasonably prudent man under like circumstances would have so done. Wente v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 79 Neb. 179 (115 N. W. 859).

175. (1907.) Where a shipper, in conformity to an agreement whereby a valuable horse was to be shipped on a certain fast train to a point in Missouri, delivers the animal to the carrier in proper time, but the car in which the horse is placed is not attached to the fast train but to a slower one and is twenty-four hours later in reaching the junction of a connecting carrier, and has, in the meantime, contracted a cold on its lungs, and on a demand of the caretaker to unload at such junction that the horse may be cared for, the carrier is several hours late in so unloading, when a severe snow storm is raging, such evidence is sufficient to sustain a finding of negligence on the part of the carrier. Wente v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 79 Neb. 179 (115 N. W. 859).

176 (1907.) In an action for damage to a shipment of sheep from failure of defendant to furnish reasonable facilities for feeding and watering them, the evidence held sufficient to sustain the judgment for plaintiff under the instruction given. Cook v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 78 Neb. 64 (110 N. W. 718).

——— Instructions.

177. (1906.) Instructions in an action for damages for delay in a contract of carriage of live stock approved. Union P. R. Co. v. Nelson, 76 Neb. 72 (106 N. W. 1036).

IV. CARRIAGE OF PASSENGERS.

Location of railroad stations, see Railroads, §§ 39-45.

A. Relation Between Carrier and Passengers.

Who are passengers.

——— Approaching or leaving station.

178. (1904.) In order to bring a person within the station house or upon the platform of a railroad station within the protection of the legal duties owing by a common carrier to its passengers, a person intending to become a passenger must go to the station at a reasonable time before the time fixed for the departure of the train upon which he intends to take passage, in a proper manner, and there, either by the purchase of a ticket or in some other manner, indicate to the carrier his intention to take passage and thus place himself in the carrier's charge. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Hagblad, 72 Neb. 773 (101 N. W. 1033; 4 L. R. A. [n. s.] 254).

179. (1904.) From the time a passenger places himself under the charge of the carrier as he begins his journey until he is afforded the opportunity to leave the premises of the carrier at its termination, he is "a passenger being transported," unless by some act not attributable to the carrier the relation ceases. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Hagblad, 72 Neb. 773 (101 N. W. 1033; 4 L. R. A. [n. s.] 254).

180. (1906.) One who enters a railway station, or other place provided for the reception of passengers, and does nothing to indicate that he intends becoming a passenger and in no way committed himself to the custody of the railroad company, cannot be regarded as a passenger and within the protection of the statute. Hicks v. Union P. R. Co., 76 Neb. 496 (107 N. W. 798).

181. (1907.) One holding a permit to ride on a freight train, by which he assumes the risk incident to boarding the caboose at any place where it may be stopping, while on his way through the station grounds and yards of the company to board the caboose of a freight train which does not carry passengers except by special permission, is not a passenger being transported over the company's road, within the meaning of section 3, article 1, chapter 72, Compiled Statutes, and the duty which the company owes to him is only that of ordinary care and such a passenger cannot recover for injuries sustained by him while on his way to board the caboose of a freight train without proof of negligence on the part of the company in the construction or maintenance of its station, station grounds or yards, which is the proximate cause of such injuries. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Mann, 78 Neb. 541 (111 N. W. 379).

——Stealing a ride or trespassing.

182. (1903.) A party who boards a railway train with the intention of "beating" his way or "stealing a ride," and, to that end, secretes himself on such train, does not stand in the relation of passenger to the common carrier, and the latter owes him no active duty as such passenger. Pledger v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 69 Neb. 456 (95 N. W. 1057).

——Riding on engine and working passage.

183. (1894.) To constitute one a passenger on a railway train he must be lawfully there, with the carrier's consent. It is not sufficient that he agrees to shovel coal for the fireman in return for the privilege of riding. Woolsey v. Chicago, B. & Q. R Co., 39 Neb. 798 (58 N. W. 444; 25 L. R. A 79).

184. (1894.) A person riding on the locomotive engine of a freight train by agreement with the fireman of such engine to shovel coal for the privilege of riding, such person being on such train without the knowledge or consent of the conductor in charge thereof, is not a passenger of the carrier operating such train. Woolsey v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 39 Neb. 798 (58 N. W. 444; 25 L. R. A. 79).

——Termination of relation by leaving car.

185. (1902.) A passenger on a railroad train does not lose his character as such by leaving his car at a regular station from motives of either business or curiosity, although he has not yet arrived at the terminus of his journey. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Sattler, 64 Neb. 636 (90 N. W. 649; 97 Am. St. Rep. 666; 87 L. R. A. 890).

Rules of company as defense for breach of contract.

186. (1880.) The rules and regulations of a railroad company can not be pleaded as an excuse for not performing an express contract of carriage, when a ticket was obtained by false representations the contract is voidable, not void. Gregory v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., 10 Neb. 250 (4 N. W. 1025).

Nature of relation.

187. (1896.) The relation existing between a common carrier and a passenger is a contractual one, the undertaking of the carrier being to safely transport and deliver the passenger at his destination, and the violation of this contract by the carrier entitles the passenger to recover such damages as will fully compensate him for the injury and loss sustained; but the passenger is not entitled to damages that will put him in a better position than he would have been in had the carrier complied with its contract. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. French, 48 Neb. 638 (67 N. W. 472).

Shipper riding on drover's pass.

188. (1896.) A shipper of cattle, who, for the purpose of enabling him to care for his stock in transit, receives a drover's pass, is not, while accompanying his stock, entitled to all the rights and privileges of an ordinary passenger for hire, and an instruction to the contrary effect was erroneous. Omaha & R. V. R. Co. v. Crow, 47 Neb. 84 (66 N. W. 21).

Digitized by Google

189. (1896.) One who ships cattle and undertakes, upon a pass given him for that purpose, to accompany and care for his stock in transit does so under the implied conditions that he will submit to whatever inconveniences are necessarily incident to his undertaking. Omaha & R. V. R. Co. v. Crow, 47 Neb. 84 (66 N. W. 21).

190. (1898.) By accepting a drover's pass the shipper does not become the servant of the railroad company, and is not within the fellow-servant rule. Omaha & R. V. R. Co. v. Crow, 54 Neb. 747 (74 N. W. 1066; 69 Am. St. Rep. 741)

191. (1898.) A shipper riding on a drover's pass does not assume the risk of negligence by the carrier, but only such dangers as result from his peculiar duties while the railroad is being carefully operated. Omaha & R. V. R. Co. v. Crow, 54 Neb. 747 (74 N. W. 1066; 69 Am. St. Rep. 741).

192, 193. (1896.) A shipper of live stock who receives from the railroad company undertaking the transportation of such stock a free pass, to enable him to care for his stock in transit, assumes such risks and inconveniences as necessarily attend upon caring for such stock, and, modified accordingly, the liability of the railroad company to such shipper for personal injuries by him sustained, by reason of the negligence of its employees, is that of a common carrier for hire. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Tietken, 49 Neb. 130 (68 N. W. 336; 59 Am. St. Rep. 437); (1903) Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Troyer, 70 Neb. 287 (97 N. W. 308).

194. (1903.) A person traveling on a freight train on a stock shipper's pass or contract, for the purpose of attending to and caring for the live stock being shipped on such train, sustains the relation to the carrier of passenger but in a restricted and modified sense. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Troyer, 70 Neb. 293 (103 N. W. 680).

195. (1903.) A person traveling on a freight train on a stock shipper's pass, assumes such risks and inconveniences as necessarily attend upon caring for such stock and such as are incident to the means and methods employed by the company in the operation of its freight trains, and, as thus modified, the liability of the railway company to such shipper for personal injuries by him sustained, by reason of the negligence of its employees, is that of a carrier for hire. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Troyer, 70 Neb. 293 (103 N. W. 680).

196. (1903.) A shipper traveling on a pass on a freight train carrying live stock does not assume the risk of negligence by the carrier, but only such dangers as result from his peculiar duties while the railroad is being carefully operated. In such a case, the duty devolves upon the carrier to exercise the highest degree of care, skill and diligence for the safety of the passenger practically consistent with the efficient use and operation of the mode of transportation adopted. Chicago, B & Q. R. Co. v. Troyer, 70 Neb. 293 (103 N. W. 680).

197. (1907.) One who under contract with a railroad company accompanies a shipment of live stock is not a passenger within the meaning of section 3, article I, chapter 72, Compiled Statutes 1907, and, in an action for personal injuries received by such person, the common law and not the statutory rule of liability applies. Riley v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 78 Neb. 748 (111 N. W. 847).

Duty to provide stations.

198. (1885.) It is the duty of railroads as common carriers to furnish stations at all appropriate points along its line for receipt and discharge of passengers. State, ex rel. Mattoon, v. Republican V. R. Co., 17 Neb. 647 (24 N. W. 329; 52 Am. Rep. 424).

B. Fares, Tickets, and Special Contracts.

Charges for freight, see ante, §§ 118-125.

Special contract, who may use.

199. (1880.) A land exploring coupon railroad ticket is a special contract between the railroad company, and no one but the purchaser may use such a ticket. Gregory v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., 10 Neb. 250 (4 N. W. 1025).

200. (1883.) A regulation of a railroad company providing for the sale of tickets at a reduced rate upon condition that they be used only by the persons purchasing the same is reasonable and proper, and a third party cannot by purchasing such ticket acquire the right to travel on the same. A party holding such ticket who refused to pay his fare and was expelled from the cars cannot recover damages therefor. Post v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 14 Neb. 110 (15 N. W. 225; 45 Am. Rep. 100)

Effect of failure to sign special contract.

201. (1880.) The possession of a coupon railroad ticket is prima facie evidence of ownership, and failure to sign his name to the special contract on the ticket, then bring no evidence of his request to so do, does not invalidate the ticket. Gregory v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., 10 Neb. 250 (4 N. W. 1025).

Right to take up ticket in hands of third party.

202. (1883.) Where a non-transferable ticket contained a condition that "I, failing to comply with this agreement, either of the companies may refuse to accept this ticket," this did not give the conductor the right to take it up, but merely to refuse to receive it. Post v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 14 Neb. 110 (15 N. W. 225; 45 Am. Rep. 100).

Damages recoverable for wrongful taking up ticket.

203. (1883.) Where a conductor of a railroad train wrongfully takes up a non-transferable ticket from a passenger not entitled to ride upon the same, the measure of damages is the value of a ticket of the same class between the points named in the ticket taken up. Post v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 14 Neb. 110 (15 N. W. 225; 45 Am Rep. 100).

Sale of tickets of street railways.

204. (1893.) A street railway has no depots. Its stopping places are on each street corner and it transacts its business with the public in its cars, and its tickets should be kept for sale where it transacts its business with the public. Sternberg v. State, 36 Neb. 307 (54 N. W. 553; 19 L. R. A. 570).

C. Personal Injuries.

Contributory negligence of person injured, see post, §§ 301-347.

Statutory liability.

——In general.

205. (1894.) Section 3, article I, chapter 72, Compiled Statutes, providing that every railroad company shall be liable for all damages inflicted upon the person of passengers while being transported over its road, except in cases where the injury done arises from the criminal negligence of the person injured, etc., is not restricted in its application to actions by the passengers so injured, but extends to actions by third persons for damages sustained in consequence of such injuries to passengers. Therefore, the rule of liability in this case by the husband for injuries sustained by the wife is to be determined by the statute referred to. Omaha & R. V. R. Co. v. Chollette, 41 Neb. 578 (59 N. W. 921).

206. (1898.) Section 3, article I, chapter 72, Compiled Statutes, relating to the liability of railroad companies for injuring passengers, does not apply to street railways. Lincoln Street R. Co. v. McClellan, 54 Neb. 672 (74 N. W. 1074; 69 Am. St. Rep. 736).

——Validity and constitutionality of act.

207. (1899.) The act of June 22, 1867 (Session Laws, p. 88), making railroad companies liable, in absence of negligence, for injuries to passengers neither deprives carriers of property without due process of law, nor denies them the equal protection of the laws. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Young, 58 Neb. 678 (79 N. W. 556).

208. (1900.) Section 3, article I, chapter 72, Compiled Statutes, making carriers presumptively liable for injuries to passengers, is not inimical to the fourteenth amendment of the constitution of the United States, nor to section 3, article I of the constitution of this state, as tending to deprive railroad companies of their property without due process of law. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Zernecke, 59 Neb. 689 (82 N. W. 26; 55 L. R. A. 610).

209. (1900.) A statute making carriers liable for injuries to passengers, in the absence of negligence, is within the police power of the state. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Zernecke, 59 Neb. 689 (82 N. W. 26; 55 L. R. A. 610).

210. (1901.) Section 3, article I, chapter 72, Compiled Statutes, making railroads liable for injuries to passengers, does not contravene the fourteenth amendment to the constitution of the United States. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Wolfe, 61 Neb., 502 (86 N. W. 441).

211. (1901.) Section 3, article I, chapter 72, Compiled Statutes, imposing liability on railroads for injuries to passengers, was passed at a special session of the legislature held in 1867, and is within the scope of the third object designated by the governor in his proclamation. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Wolfe, 61 Neb. 502 (86 N. W. 441).

212. (1902.) Section 3, article I, chapter 72, Compiled Statutes, is not inimical to the fourteenth amendment to the constitution of the United States, nor to section 3, article I of the constitution of this state, as tending to deprive railroad companies of their property without due process of law.

Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Hambel, 2 Unof. 607 (89 N. W. 643).

Street railways as common carriers.

See, also, ante, §§ 1, 2.

www.libtool.com.cn

213. Street railways are common carriers of passengers and are liable upon common law principles for all injuries. (1893) Spellman v. Lincoln Traction Co., 36 Neb. 890 (55 N. W. 270; 38 Am. St. Rep. 753); (1895) Pray v. Omaha Street R. Co., 44 Neb. 167 (62 N. W. 447; 48 Am. St. Rep. 717).

214. (1904.) Street railways are common carriers of passengers. Lincoln Traction Co. v. Heller, 72 Neb. 127 (100 N. W. 197); Lincoln Traction Co. v. Webb, 73 Neb. 136 (102 N. W. 258).

215. (1897.) A street railway company, by undertaking the transportation of passengers for hire, assumes toward its patrons the relation of a common carrier, without regard to the character of the easement possessed by it in its right of way. East Omaha Street R. Co. v. Godola, 50 Neb. 906 (70 N. W. 491).

216. (1897.) Street railway companies are common carriers, and as such are required to exercise more than ordinary skill and precaution in order to insure the safety of passengers. East Omaha Street R. Co. v. Godola, 50 Neb. 906 (70 N. W. 491).

Care required of carrier.

217. (1873.) Common carriers of passengers are liable only where the injury has arisen from their own neglect. And while it is a general rule that, if they are in the least degree negligent, they are liable, yet only for such damages as are the natural and direct result of the act complained of. McClary v. Sioux City & P. R. Co., 3 Neb. 44 (20 Am. Rep. 631).

218. (1889.) An instruction that a railroad company owes a much higher degree of care to passengers than it does to the public generally, going upon its tracks at public crossings, taken in connection with the other instructions given to the jury, held to be correct. Union P. R. Co. v. Sue, 25 Neb. 772 (41 N. W. 801).

219. (1893.) Common carriers for the protection of their passengers, are bound to the exercise of more than ordinary care; they are bound to exercise extraordinary care and the utmost skill, diligence and human foresight, and are liable for the slightest negligence. Spellman v. Lincoln Rapid Transit Co., 36 Neb. 890 (55 N. W. 270; 38 Am. St. Rep. 753; 20 L. R. A. 316).

220. (1894.) Common carriers of passengers should be held to the strictest accountability and be required to exercise the highest degree of care and forethought of which the human mind is capable. This rule is founded on principles of public policy and enforced by the courts for the protection of the traveling public. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Landauer, 39 Neb. 803 (58 N. W. 434).

221. (1896.) It is the duty of a street railway company, as a carrier of passengers, to exercise the highest degree of care for their safety. Omaha & C. B. R. Co. v. Levinston, 49 Neb. 17 (67 N. W. 887).

222. (1898.) Street railways are common carriers of passengers, and are required to exercise the utmost skill, diligence and foresight, consistent with the business in which they are engaged, for the safety of their patrons, and are liable for the slightest negligence. Lincoln Street R. Co. v. McClellan, 54 Neb. 672 (74 N. W. 1074; 69 Am. St. Rep. 736).

223. (1898.) Definition of ordinary care. Omaha & R. V. R. Co. v. Crow, 54 Neb. 747 (74 N. W. 1066; 69 Am. St. Rep. 741).

224. (1904.) Street railway companies are common carriers of passengers. As such they are bound to exercise for the safety of their patrons more than ordinary care. They are required to exercise the utmost skill, diligence and foresight consistent with the business in which they are engaged, and are liable for the slightest negligence. Lincoln Traction Co. v. Haller, 72 Neb. 127 (100 N. W. 197).

224*a*. (1908.) When a passenger, a girl under 14 years of age, unaccustomed to riding upon street cars, becomes frightened and frenzied by the negligence of the defendant's servants in carrying such passenger past her known destination, and the conductor knows, or by the exercise of due care and diligence under the circumstances should know, of such passenger's frightened and frenzied condition, and that she is about to leave the moving car, it is his duty to exercise the highest degree of care possible under the circumstances to prevent such passenger from alighting from the moving car and if the conductor fails to exercise the degree of care required of him, and the passenger in consequence of such failure receives injuries while alighting from the moving car, the street railway company is liable in damages for the resulting injuries. Kruger v. Omaha & C. B. St. R. Co., 80 Neb. 490 (114 N. W. 571).

225. (1905.) Street railway companies are common carriers of passengers, and are liable as other common carriers upon common law principles. They are required to exercise the utmost skill, diligence and foresight consistent with the business in which they are engaged for the safety of their passengers, and they are liable for the slightest negligence. Lincoln Traction Co. v. Webb, 73 Neb. 136 (102 N. W. 258).

Liability for injuries in general.

226. (1901.) A carrier is liable for damages resulting from injuries sustained by a passenger, unless the latter was guilty of criminal negligence. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Wolfe, 61 Neb. 502 (86 N. W. 441).

Carrier as insurer.

As to goods, see ante, §§ 86-89.

As to animals, see ante, §§ 142, 143.

227. (1894.) By the statutes of this state a common carrier is made an insurer of the safety of its passengers, except as against the gross negligence of such passenger, or his violation of some rule of the carrier brought to such passenger's notice. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Landauer, 39 Neb. 803 (58 N. W. 434).

228. (1896.) By the statutes of this state a common carrier is made an insurer of the safety of its passengers, except as against the criminal negligence of such passenger or his violation of some rule of the carrier actually brought to such passenger's notice. (Comp. Stats., ch. 72, art. I, sec. 3.) Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. French, 48 Neb. 638 (67 N. W. 472).

229. (1905.) A street railway company is not an insurer of its passengers. It is not bound to do everything that can be done to insure their safety. It fulfills its obligations in that regard when it exercises the utmost skill, diligence and foresight consistent with the practical conduct of the business in which it is engaged. Omaha Street R. Co. v. Boesen, 74 Neb. 764 (105 N. W. 303).

Acts of carrier's employees.

230. (1895.) Street railway companies in this state are common carriers, and are presumptively liable for the concurrent negligence of their servants and third persons resulting in personal injuries to passengers. Pray v. Omaha Street R. Co., 44 Neb. 167 (62 N. W. 447; 48 Am. St. Rep. 717).

231. (1895.) A common carrier of passengers is liable for personal injuries to passengers produced by the concurrent negligence of its servants and third persons. St. Joseph & G. I. R. Co. v. Hedge, 44 Neb 448 (62 N. W. 887).

232. (1905.) In order to render a street railway company liable for injuries received by a person traveling upon one of its cars, the negligence of its servants, either alone of in concurrence with the negligence or wrongful act of other persons, must be the proximate cause of the injuries. Bevard v. Lincoln Traction Co., 74 Neb. 802 (105 N. W. 635).

Acts of third persons.

233. (1905.) The wrongful act of a stranger is not sufficient to make a street railway company liable to a passenger for an injury caused thereby, unless it might reasonably have been foreseen and guarded against by the carrier. Bevard v. Lincoln Traction Co., 74 Neb. 802 (105 N. W. 635).

234. (1905.) Defendant street railway company held not liable for an injury to a passenger resulting from explosives placed on the rail by third persons on the Fourth of July. Bevard v. Lincoln Traction Co., 74 Neb. 802 (105 N. W. 635).

Negligence of connecting carrier.

235. (1898.) A railroad company which issues a through ticket, and so contracts to carry a passenger beyond its own terminus, constitutes the connecting carrier its agent for the purpose of performing the contract, and is liable for the negligence of such connecting carrier. Omaha & R. V. R. Co. v. Crow, 54 Neb. 747 (74 N. W. 1066; 69 Am. St. Rep. 741).

Duty as to trespassers.

236. (1903.) A person who attempts to board a railway train in such a way as to avoid the payment of his fare, and intending to "beat his way," is a trespasser, and the railway company owes him no duty to keep its right of way free from obstructions. Pledger v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 69 Neb. 456 (95 N. W. 1057).

vide such safeguards as will protect such passengers, in the exercise of ordinary care, from injury from passing trains. And if it fail to do this, whether its negligence consists in its failure to provide a proper platform, or to notify passengers who have gone between its tracks to enter its cars of the approach of a train on a track parallel and near to that on which its passenger train is standing, and an injury results from such failure to one of the passengers who is about to enter its car, and without negligence on the part of such passenger, the railroad company will be liable for the damage resulting from such injury. Union P. R. Co. v. Sue, 25 Neb. 772 (41 N. W. 801).

Entering baggage car for baggage.

238. (1896.) In an action to recover for injuries sustained by a passenger of a railroad, who, at a request of the conductor, entered the express car to receive a consignment, there being no agent at that station, and when the train starts the conductor, it is alleged, pushed him out of the car, under the allegations of the petition herein a recovery might be had for any injuries proved to have been sustained by the party plaintiff in the character of a passenger, as a licensee on the company's premises, or as a trespasser thereon. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Root, 48 Neb. 900 (69 N. W. 397).

Limitation of liability.

As to goods, see ante, §§ 152-157.

As to live stock, see ante, §§ 152-157.

239. (1083.) Section 3, article I, chapter 72, Compiled Statutes, prevents any limitation on the liability of a railroad company for a passenger's safety unless within the exceptions provided in the section, and section 5 of the same chapter does not impliedly give the right to a railway company to limit its liability under section 3 by stipulation. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Hambel, 2 Unof. 607 (89 N. W. 643).

240. (1907.) A railroad company may make suitable and reasonable conditions and regulations for carrying passengers on its freight trains from which they are excluded except by special permission; and an agreement on the part of one holding a special permit, by which he assumes the risks incident to boarding the caboose of such trains at any place where it may be stopped for the purpose of conducting the freight business of the company, does not amount to a limitation of the carrier's liability for its own negligence. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Mann, 78 Neb. 541 (111 N. W. 379).

241. (1895.) It is evidence of negligence on the part of a street railway company to carry passengers greatly in excess of the seating capacity of its trains, and permitting them to stand on the platforms and steps of the cars. Pray v. Omaha Street R. Co., 44 Neb. 167 (62 N. W. 447; 48 Am. St. Rep. 717).

242. (1895.) A person standing on the steps of a moving street car, being unable to secure a seat or standing room within, is presumed to be there with the consent of the servants in charge of the train. Pray v. Omaha Street R. Co., 44 Neb. 167 (62 N. W. 447; 48 Am. St. Rep. 717).

243. (1907.) A party cannot be charged with contributory negligence on account of taking a place on a crowded street car designated by the conductor of the car. Boesen v. Omaha Street R. Co., 79 Neb. 381 (112 N. W. 614).

Companies liable, lessee.

244. (1889.) A railroad company that has leased its road to another company that operates the same as a branch of its road is liable to a passenger who is injured by reason of the negligent operation of the train by the lessor company. Chollette v. Omaha & R. V. R. Co., 26 Neb. 159 (41 N. W. 1106; 4 L. R. A. 135*n*).

Setting down passengers.

245. (1891.) In an action to recover for personal injuries sustained by the plaintiff while alighting from defendant's train, each alleging negligence in the other, instructions to the effect that the plaintiff in order to recover must prove by a preponderance of the evidence each material allegation; and that such preponderance of the testimony does not necessarily mean the number of witnesses testifying, but includes the interest of the witnesses in the result of the verdict and their relationship to the parties in interest, their intelligence, and means of opportunity of, for knowing the truth of the matters in issue, correctly states the law. Omaha & R. V. R. Co. v. Chollette, 33 Neb. 143 (49 N. W. 1114).

246. (1893.) It is the duty of railroad compnies to stop their trains at stations a sufficient length of time for passengers to get on and off, and it is negligence for the conductor or other servant of the company to start a train while passengers are obviously in the act of getting on or alighting therefrom. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Landauer, 36 Neb. 642 (54 N. W. 976).

247. (1893.) When a train has made a reasonable stop and passengers have not given notice or other evidence of their intention to alight, the starting of the train is not per se negligence for which the company will be held liable. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Landauer, 36 Neb. 642 (54 N. W. 976).

248. (1903.) Where a passenger of a railroad train holds a ticket to a station beyond her place of destination and in attempting to alight, at the latter place, is injured, an instruction, in an action therefor, that if the jury find plaintiff notified the conductor that she wanted to get off the train at that particular place, it was the duty of the defendant to stop the train and allow plaintiff a reasonable time to alight, properly states the law. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Winfrey, 67 Neb. 13 (93 N. W. 526).

Safety of stations and platforms.

249. (1897.) It is the duty of a railroad company to keep in safe repair the approaches to its platforms at stations. Union P. R. Co. v. Evans, 52 Neb. 50 (71 N. W. 1062).

250. (1889.) As a general rule, railroad companies are bound to keep in a safe condition all portions of their platforms and approaches thereto, to which the public do or would naturally resort, and all portions of their station grounds reasonably near to the platforms, where passengers taking passage on their cars would naturally or ordinarily be likely to go. Union P. R. Co. v. Sue, 25 Neb. 772 (41 N. W. 801).

Proximate cause of injury.

251. (1873.) Where a train of cars was running three-quarters of an hour behind the usual, ordinary, and advertised time, and was upset by a sudden gust of wind which crossed the tracks, but not that portion of the track where the train would have been if running on time, whereby a passenger was injured, an injury is not the natural result of the train being behind time, and the damages sustained were too remote to entitle a recovery against the carrier. McClary v. Sioux City & P. R. Co., 3 Neb. 44 (20 Am. Rep. 631).

252. (1896.) The contract between a railroad company, as a carrier, and a passenger, does not contemplate that the passenger shall go into the express car of the train; and if he go there, and while there is injured, if his going or being in such car entered into the injury, as an element thereof, as its proximate cause or rendering its reception more liable to occur, it would be a matter of defense for the carrier; but if not the proximate cause of the injury, or the risk of such particular injury was not increased by the action of the passenger, then that he assumed the position in the express car voluntarily would be no defense to an action for damages resultant from the injury. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Root, 49 Neb. 900 (69 N. W. 397).

Actions for injuries.

——— Right of action.

253. (1900.) By section 3, article 1, chapter 72, Compiled Statutes, a right of action is given to a person for all injuries sustained while a passenger of a railroad company, except where the injury was occasioned by his own criminal negligence, or by his violation of some express rule or regulation of the carrier actually brought to his notice. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Zernecke, 59 Neb. 689 (82 N. W. 26; 55 L. R. A. 610); Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Hambel, 2 Unof. 607 (89 N. W. 643).

——— Pleading.

254. (1899.) A passenger injured by derailment of a train is not, in suing for damages, required to allege that the injury resulted from the wrongful act of the carrier. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Young, 58 Neb. 678 (79 N. W. 556).

255. (1904.) Petition examined, and held not to set forth facts sufficient to constitute the plaintiff a passenger while standing on defendant's platform, so as to bring him within the provisions of section 3, article 1, chapter 72, Compiled Statutes, 1903. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Hagblad, 72 Neb, 773 (101 N. W. 1033; 68 L. R. A. [n. s.] 254).

256. (1904.) Petition examined, and held not to state a cause of action ex contractu against a common carrier of passengers, nor a cause of action at common law for the carrier's negligence. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Hagblad, 72 Neb. 773 (101 N. W. 1033; 4 L. R. A. [n. s.] 254).

257. (1904.) In order to state a cause of action upon the statutory duty of a railroad company to a passenger who has not actually taken passage upon the train, it is necessary that the facts stated show that the person suing is one of the class of persons to whom the remedy is afforded by the statute. To plead that he is a passenger, in a case where the existence of such relation to the carrier is at issue, pleads a mere conclusion of law and is not sufficient. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v Hagblad, 72 Neb. 773 (101 N. W. 1033; 4 L. R. A. [n. s.] 254).

——— Admissibility of evidence.

258. (1894.) Under an issue as to whether an injured person had an opportunity to alight from a train, the remark of a brakeman, at the time, concerning the length of the stop was properly admitted in evidence. Omaha & R. V. R. Co. v. Cholette, 41 Neb. 578 (59 N. W. 921).

259. (1895.) Under an allegation that "the braking apparatus of said car * * * was in bad repair, the brake chains broken, and said brake useless for the purpose of stopping said car or controlling its movements," does not disclose such a relation of the chain mentioned to the braking apparatus as to warrant the inference that the escape of the car resulted from that cause alone, and that it was not error to receive evidence tending to prove that the brake was broken and useless. St. Joseph & G. I. R. Co. v. Hedge, 44 Neb. 448 (62 N. W. 887).

——— Sufficiency of evidence.

260 (1893.) Evidence held insufficient to charge defendant with negligence in the injury of a passenger who jumped from a train after it had started. Chicago, B. & Q. R Co. v. Landauer, 36 Neb. 642 (54 N. W. 976).

261. (1984.) In an action to recover for injuries against a street railway company by a woman for injuries sustained while alighting from a car, the jury's finding that plaintiff was thrown from the platform by the cause and in the manner she testified, would not be set aside as not supported by the evidence because two witnesses testified that she stepped from the platform onto the street, nor because two witnesses swore there was no sudden acceleration of the speeed of the car, and three witnesses swore that they did. Omaha Street R. Co. v. Craig. 39 Neb. 601 (58 N. W. 209).

262. (1895.) It is sufficient under the provisions of section 3, article 1, chapter 72, Compiled Statutes, in an action to recover for injuries received by the plaintiff while a passenger on a railroad train in this state, to prove that such injuries resulted from the operation and management of the road. St. Joseph & G. I. R. Co. v. Hedge, 44 Neb. 448 (62 N. W. 887).

263. (1895.) In an action to recover for personal injuries evidence that shows plaintiff, a messenger boy, while boarding a street car in the middle of a block was thrown from the step of a south bound car by a north bound car and injured, and a claim by the boy that the motorman of the north bound car grabbed him by the neck as he passed, thus causing him to fall, is unsupported by the evidence. Omaha Street R. Co. v. Baker, 44 Neb. 511 (63 N. W. 25).

264. (1896.) In an action against a railroad company evidence showing that plaintiff, a passenger on defendant's train, entered the express car to get a hive of bees, there being no agent at the station, but as the train started the conductor, who had requested plaintiff to get the bees, pushed him out of the car door, sustains a finding that the conductor was, at the time, acting for the company and within the line of his duties. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Root, 49 Neb. 900 (69 N. W. 397).

265. (1896.) Evidence that plaintiff while a passenger on defendant's train entered the baggage car, at request of the conductor, to get a hive of bees, there being no agent at the station of his destination, and before having time to get the bees the train started and the conductor pushed plaintiff out of the car door, sustains a verdict for plaintiff, in an action to recover for injuries received. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Root, 49 Neb. 900 (69 N. W. 397).

266. In an action to recover for the death of a stock man who was killed while a passenger on a freight train on a drover's pass, evidence showed deceased, while standing in the freight yards while the train was being made up and transferred to a connecting road was struck by a switch engine that had passed and was returning without warning or sufficient head light to attract attention, sustains a verdict and judgment for plaintiff. Omaha & R. V. R. Co. v. Crow, 54 Neb. 747 (74 N. W. 1066; 69 Am. St. Rep. 741).

267. (1905.) In an aetion for damages for an injury received while being transported by a street railway, proof of mere injury, without more, does not raise the raise the presumption of negligence sufficient to impose on the company the burden to prove due care on its part. Lincoln Traction Co. v. Webb, 73 Neb. 136 (102 N. W. 258).

268. (1906.) Evidence, in an action against a street railway for injuries sustained while alighting from a car, showing plaintiff procured a transfer just before alighting at a place other than the junction for such transfer; that the car had stopped at a regular stopping place, sustains a verdict for plaintiff. McCarty v. Lincoln Traction Co., 76 Neb. 819 (107 N. W. 1021).

269. (1907.) In an action to recover damages for being thrown from a street car while attempting to enter, testimony showing plaintiff, in reply to the conductor after re-entering, said she was hurt, properly retained in evidence. Nixon v. Omaha & C. B. Street R. Co., 79 Neb. 550 (113 N. W. 117).

——— Presumptions and burden of proof.

270. Under the provisions of section 3, article 1, chapter 72, Compiled Statutes of Nebraska, it is only necessary to a right of recovery against a railroad company, to show that the person injured was at the time being transported as a passenger over the defendant's line of railroad, and that the injury resulted from the management or operation of said railroad, a presumption thereupon arises that such management or operation was negligent, and it can be met only by showing that the injury arose from the criminal negligence of the party injured, or, that the injury complained of was the result of the violation of some express rule or regulation of said railroad company actually brought to the notice of the party injured. (1893) Missouri P. R. Co. v. Baier, 37 Neb. 235 (55 N. W. 913)); (1893) Union P. R. Co. v. Porter, 38 Neb. 226 (56 N. W. 808); (1896) Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. French, 48 Neb. 638 (67 N. W. 472); (1896) Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Hague, 48 Neb. 97 (66 N. W. 1000).

271. (1893.) Where a street railway car is derailed and a passenger injured thereby, the presumption is that the casualty was due to the negligence of the carrier, and the burden is on it to rebut that presumption. Spellman v. Lincoln Rapid Transit Co., 36 Neb. 890 (55 N. W. 270; 38 Am. St. Rep. 753; 20 L. R. A. 316).

272. (1893.) Where a passenger, without engligence on his part, is injured by the derailment of the car in which he is traveling, the carrier, to overcome the presumption of negligence caused by such derailment, must show that the accident was produced by causes wholly beyond his control, and that it had not been guilty of the slightest negligence contributing thereto, and that by the exercise of the utmost human care, diligence, and foresight the casualty could not have been prevented. Spellman v. Lincoln Rapid Transit Co., 36 Neb. 890 (55 N. W. 270; 38 Am. St. Rep. 753; 20 L. R. A. 316).

273. (1895.) The law infers negligence from the fact of an injury and imposes upon the carrier the burden of proving that the case is within one of the exceptions mentioned in the statute. St. Joseph & G. I. R. Co. v. Hedge, 44 Neb. 448 (62 N. W. 887).

274. (1896.) In a suit by a passenger against a common carrier for damages for an injury alleged to have been sustained while such passenger, when the passenger has shown that the defendant is a common carrier, that he was the carrier's passenger, and while such was injured, and the extent of such injury, he has made out his case. The carrier then, to escape liability, must show that the injury of the passenger was the result of his criminal negligence, or the result of a violation by him of some express rule or regulation of the carrier actually brought to the passenger's notice. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. French, 48 Neb. 638 (67 N. W. 464).

275. (1898.) The law presumes that one injured while being transported by a common carrier was injured in consequence of the latter's negligence. Lincoln Street R. Co. v. McClellan, 54 Neb. 672 (74 N. W. 1074; 69 Am. St. Rep. 736).

276. (1898.) In a suit against a street railway company for injuring a passenger the burden is on the defendant, the injury being shown, to show that it was in nowise at fault. Lincoln Street R. Co. v. McClellan, 54 Neb. 672 (74 N. W. 1074; 69 Am. St. Rep. 736). [Overruled. Lincoln Traction Co. v. Webb, 73 Neb. 136.]

277. (1899.) In an action for injuries to a passenger resulting from the derailment of a train, the presumption is that the accident was caused by the carrier's negligence, and it is unnecessary to plead what the law presumes. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Young, 58 Neb. 678 (79 N. W. 556).

278. (1900.) In an action for injuries sustained by derailment of a train, on which plaintiff was a passenger, the statute creates a presumption that the accident was caused by the negligence of the carrier, or by its wrongful act, neglect or default. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Zernecke, 59 Neb. 689 (82 N. W. 26; 55 L. R. A. 610).

www.inbtool.com.cn

279. (1901.) When one is injured while a passenger on a railroad train, the presumption is that such injury was caused by the negligence of the carrier. Chicago, B & Q. R. Co. v. Wolfe, 61 Neb. 502 (86 N. W. 441).

280. (1903.) It is the settled law of this state that when, in the operation of a train carrying passengers, an injury results to one of them, the imputation of negligence arises, and the liability to respond in damages becomes fixed, unless it is made to appear that the injury arose from the criminal negligence of the passenger, or was the result of the violation of some express rule or regulation of the carrier, actually brought to the notice of the party injured. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Winfrey, 67 Neb. 13 (93 N. W. 526).

281. (1903.) Where plaintiff, admittedly a passenger on defendant's street car, alleged that he was thrown therefrom by reason of a derailment of the car, and defendant denies the derailment, and alleges that plaintiff jumped off the car while it was in motion, an instruction that "the burden of proof is upon the defendant to show by a preponderance of the evidence that such injuries, if any, were received while a passenger, by being thrown from a car because of the derailment thereof, were without fault on defendant's part, and that they could not have been avoided by the exercise of the highest degree of skill and diligence on the part of the defendant, consistent with its business," is erroneous. Omaha Street R. Co. v. Boesen, 68 Neb. 437 (94 N. W. 619).

282. (1904.) The law presumes that one injured while being transported by a common carrier was injured in consequence of the latter's negligence; and, to escape liability, it must show that it has discharged the full measure of its legal duty, and was in nowise to blame for the accident, unless defendant's negligence contributed thereto. Lincoln Traction Co. v. Heller, 72 Neb. 127 (100 N. W. 197). [Overruled on rehearing. 72 Neb. 134.]

283. (1904.) In an action against a common carrier on its common law liability for negligence to recover damages for an injury causing the death of a passenger, it is error to instruct the jury that, "When the plaintiff has shown that the deceased met with an injury while being transported by the defendant, and the plaintiff has sustained damages thereby, then the burden of proof is upon the defendant to prove by a preponderance of the evidence that it was not guilty of negligence, the proximate cause of his death." Lincoln Traction Co. v. Heller, 72 Neb. 134 (102 N. W. 262).

284. (1905.) In an action against a street railway company for damages for injuries sustained by one of its passengers, the burden of proof on the question of negligence does not shift to the defendant upon proof that the injuries resulted from a derailment of the car. Omaha Street R. Co. v. Boesen, 74 Neb. 764 (105 N. W. 303).

285. (1905.) In an action by a passenger in a street car, to recover for injuries sustained, the burden is on the plaintiff to prove that he was a passenger, was injured, extent of his injuries, the accident from which the injury resulted, and circumstances of such a character as to impute negligence. Lincoln Traction Co. v. Webb, 73 Neb. 136 (102 N. W. 258).

286. (1905.) When it appears, in an action against a common carrier for personal injury caused by the negligence of the carrier, that some defect in the appliances of the carrier, or some act of its employees in the conduct of its business, contributed to the accident which caused the injury complained of, a presumption of negligence on the part of the carrier arises, and unless there is evidence against the presumption it will be sufficient to establish the allegation of negligence of the carrier. Lincoln Traction Co. v. Shepherd, 74 Neb. 374 (107 N. W. 764).

287. (1905.) In an action for damages by a passenger against a street railway company, where the defendant's liability rests upon the question whether or not a street car was suddenly and carelessly started as the plaintiff was about to alight therefrom, which is denied, the defendant is only required to furnish sufficient proof to rebut that produced by the plaintiff upon this point, and is not required to establish its freedom from negligence by a preponderance of the evidence. Lincoln Traction Co. v. Shepherd, 74 Neb. 369 (104 N. W. 882).

288. (1905.) In an action against a street railway company for injuries to a passenger resulting from the derailment of a car, a presumption of negligence arises from the fact of derailment, but when that presumption is met by evidence which makes it equally probable that the accident was not due to negligence on the part of the defendant, in the absence of other evidence tending to establish the affirmative of the issue, the defendant is entitled to a verdict. Omaha Street R. Co. v. Boesen, 74 Neb. 764 (105 N. W. 303).

289. (1905.) In an action for injuries received by a passenger in a street car it is error to instruct the jury, in substance, that it is only necessary for the plaintiff to prove that he was a passenger and was injured, and that the burden of proof is then upon the defendant to show by a preponderance of the evidence that it was not guilty of the negligent act complained of. Lincoln Traction Co. v. Webb, 73 Neb. 136 (102 N. W. 258).

290. (1906. In an action for damages against a street railway company for a personal injury caused by the alleged negligent starting of one of its cars when the plaintiff, a passenger, was in the act of alighting, the defense being a general or special denial, the burden of proof never shifts, but remains with the plaintiff to prove that the injury was received substantially as alleged. Lincoln Traction Co. v. Brookover, 77 Neb. 217 (109 N. W. 168).

——— Questions for jury.

291. (1895.) Whether the natural connection of events is maintained or interrupted by the introduction of a new and independent cause is usually a question of fact and not of law. St. Joseph & G. I. R. Co. v. Hedge, 44 Neb. 448 (62 N. W. 887).

292. (1895.) Where a boy of fourteen boarded a crowded street car, as a passenger, and was compelled to stand on the platform of the car, and later to step to the ground to permit a passenger to get off the car, when he lost his place on the platform and was required to stand on the step from whence, by the pushing of the crowd on the platform he fell off, there being evidence tending to show that the conductor pushing his way onto the platform from within the car caused the crowd to sway back, thus causing the plaintiff to fall, the question of negligence is for the jury. Pray v. Omaha Street R. Co., 44 Neb. 167 (62 N. W. 447; 48 Am. St. Rep. 717).

293. (1896.) In an action for damages from injuries inflicted by an engine upon a shipper of live stock, who was accompanying and caring for such stock, the question of the existence of negligence, such as would give rise to a cause of action, or of such contributory negligence as would defeat it, is one of fact to be determined by the jury. Omaha & R. V. R. Co. v. Crow, 47 Neb. 84 (66 N. W. 21).

294. (1896.) Where a passenger on a railroad train, having a hive of bees in the express car, enters such car to receive the same, there being no agent at the station of his destination, and as the train starts the conductor pushes him out, whether or not injuries sustained were received after he had ceased to be a passenger is a question for the jury. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Root, 49 Neb. 900 (69 N. W. 397).

295. (1903.) Ordinarily the existence of negligence such as will justify or defeat a right of recovery for damage for an injury received by a passenger is for the jury to determine. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Winfrey, 67 Neb. 13 (93 N. W. 526).

296. (1903.) In an action for damages for negligence against a railway company for personal injury to a shipper of stock, riding in a freight train, by coming in collision with a moving switch engine in the yards of the defendant company, it is made to appear that the train upon which the plaintiff was being carried came into the defendant's freight yards about midnight, and that he was required to change way-cars before proceeding farther on his journey. The way-car upon which he had been riding was left about thirty car-lengths from the place where he was required to take another. To reach the other way-car the plaintiff and other passengers were required to walk the length of the train between the track on which it stood and another track eight feet distant. The distance between the cars or engines on these two adjacent tracks was four feet. While walking along the train and toward its head, where the other way-car was supposed to be, a switch engine passed the plaintiff on the adjacent track, going in an opposite direction; and about the time he reached the head of the train on his way to the other way-car, the same switch engine returning and moving in the same direction overtook and struck him, inflicting an injury which is sought to be compensated in damages. Held, Under the evidence, that the question of the alleged negligence of the company and contributory negligence was a matter for the jury to determine under proper instructions of the court, and that the evidence is sufficient to warrant a finding that the defendant company was guilty of actionable negligence which was the proximate cause of the injury complained of. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Troyer, 70 Neb. 293 (103 N. W. 680.)

297. (1907.) Evidence, in an action for damages to a passenger on a street car who while riding on the step was thrown therefrom and killed, that shows the car was crowded, and that the deceased stood upon the step; that the conductor requested him to get upon the platform, but such request was more to clear the steps for others to get off and onto the car; that the car was traveling at a great rate of speed, justifies submission of the case to the jury. Coffey v. Omaha & C. B. Street R. Co., 79 Neb. 286 (112 N. W. 589).

——— Instructions.

298. (1906.) When, in an action for damages for a personal injury inflicted while the plaintiff, a passenger, was in the act of alighting from a street railway car, the evidence is conflicting as to where the plaintiff alighted, an instruction that "plaintiff became a passenger to the company, and continued to be its passenger up to and including the act of alighting at his proper stopping place," is erroneous. Lincoln Traction Co. v. Brookover, 77 Neb. 217 (109 N. W. 168).

299. (1907.) Instructions in an action to recover for negligently operating a street car, thereby causing a passenger to fall, causing injuries resulting in death, held, properly given. Coffey v. Omaha & C. B. Street R. Co., 79 Neb. 286 (112 N. W. 589).

300. (1907.) In an action against a street railway company to recover for injuries sustained while alighting from a car, the court properly instructed the jury that they may consider the absence of a conductor and inexperience of the motorman in determining the negligence of defendant. Shepherd v. Lincoln Traction Co., 79 Neb. 834 (113 N. W. 627).

D. Contributory Negligence.

301. (1893.) The term criminal negligence, as used in section 3, article I, chapter 72, Compiled Statutes, means gross negligence, such as amounts to reckless disregard of one's own safety and a willful indifference to the consequences liable to follow. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Landauer, 36 Neb. 642 (54 N. W. 976).

302. (1894.) Section 110 of chapter 16, Compiled Statutes, providing that in case any passenger of a railroad shall be injured while on the platform of a car while in motion, in violation of the printed regulations of the company posted up at the time, in a conspicious place inside of its passenger cars, then in the train, said company shall not be liable for the injury, etc., being a limitation upon a recognized liability, it is to be strictly construed; and in order that such statute shall be applicable the car must be in motion when the accident occurs and there must be some connection of cause and effect between the injury of the passenger and of his being upon the platform, and the notices required by the statute must be posted in the cars of the train wherein the accident occurs. Omaha & R. V. R. Co. v. Chollette, 41 Neb. 578 (59 N. W. 921).

303. (1896.) It is the settled law of this state that the term "criminal negligence," as employed in section 3, article 1, chapter 72, Compiled Statutes, means gross negligence, such as amounts to a reckless disregard of one's own safety and a willful indifference to the consequences liable to follow. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Hyatt, 48 Neb. 161 (67 N. W. 8).

304. (1896.) Criminal negligence of a passenger, as the term is used in section 3, article 1, chapter 72, Compiled Statutes, means such negligence as amounts to a flagrant and reckless disregard of one's own safety, and the willful indifference to the injury liable to follow. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Hague, 48 Neb. 97 (66 N. W. 1000).

305. (1902.) The words "while being transported over its road" in section 3 of the Passenger Act (ch. 72, Comp. Stat.) is a qualifying phrase intended to limit the liability of the company, and must be given be given the force of the legislative intent; but it was not intended to exclude all passengers who leave the car provided for them by the carrier. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Sattler, 64 Neb 636 (90 N. W. 649; 97 Am. St. Rep. 666; 57 L. R. A. 890).

306. (1902.) The phrase "while being transported over its road" used in the Passenger Act, at section 3, chapter 72, Compiled Statutes, was intended to include all passengers actually on the train, whether the train is moving or standing, and all such as leave the train for any necessary purpose incident to the journey, e. g., change of cars, procuring refreshments at a point where the same are furnished by the company, and where an express or implied invitation is extended for passengers to leave the car for that purpose. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Sattler, 64 Neb. 636 (90 N. W. 649; 97 Am. St. Rep. 666; 57 L. R. A. 890).

Effect of contributory negligence.

307. (1898.) A passenger on a street railway cannot recover for an injury resulting in part from his own negligence. Lincoln Street R. Co. v. McClellan, 54 Neb. 672 (74 N. W. 1074; 69 Am. St. Rep. 736).

Extending person through window.

308. (1903.) If a passenger on a steam railroad extends his person through the window of the car of a rapidly moving train in which he is riding, he is chargeable with such gross negligence as will prevent a recovery of damages for an injury to which such act on his part contributes. Union P. R. Co. v. Roeser, 69 Neb. 62 (95 N. W. 68).

Acts by direction of carrier's employees.

309. (1896.) A shipper of live stock, who was riding on a drover's pass, while in a station lunch room being informed to get on the train at once or he would be left, and by reason of such direction of the conductor attempts to climb up the ladder of a freight car, is not necessarily guilty of such contributory negligence as will defeat his right to recover for the loss of a foot. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Tietken, 49 Neb. 130 (68 N. W. 336; 59 Am. St. Rep. 437).

310. (1903.) The caboose of a stock train was left about thirty car-lengths from the station, and the defendant in error and other passengers were directed to leave the caboose and take another which would be attached to a train to be made up. To reach the station the passengers were required to walk the length of the train between the train and another track eight feet distant from the track on which their train stood. The distance between the cars or engines, occupying these two adjacent tracks, was four feet. While walking along the track a switch engine passed defendant in error, going north, and about the time he reached the south end of the train the same engine, returning south, overtook and struck him. Held, That while the company might rightfully stop its caboose at the place it did, it was bound to furnish defendant in error a safe passage way to the station, and that no duty devolved on him to be watchful for any but apparent and known danger, and he would not be negligent in failing to do so, it being the duty of the company to refrain from any act which threatened him with danger of which he was not given warning and time to guard against. Chicago, B. & Q. R. v. Troyer, 70 Neb. 287 (97 N. W. 308).

Using track as way to station.

311. (1902.) A passenger is not guilty of negligence in walking along the track to the station where that is the only practical route by which to reach the station. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Lagerkrans, 65 Neb. 566 (91 N. W. 358).

Acts in emergencies.

312. (1895.) Independent of the statutory rule, a passenger who is placed in a position of apparent imminent peril through the negligence of a carrier may recover for injuries received while endeavoring to escape in obedience to the natural instinct of self-preservation, provided he exercise ordinary prudence in view of the circumstances, as they appear to him at the time. St. Joseph & G. I. R. Co. v. Hedge, 44 Neb. 448 (62 N. W. 887).

313. (1895.) A carrier, whose negligence is the proximate cause of the injury, cannot complain on the ground that the passengers err in their estimate of the danger confronting them or the choice of means to insure their safety. St. Joseph & G. I. R. Co. v. Hedge, 44 Neb. 448 (62 N. W. 887).

Entering express car for baggage.

314. (1896.) The fact that a passenger goes into the baggage car for a package belonging to him, there being no agent to receive it at the place of destination, does not relieve the carrier from liability for injuries sustained by the conductor pushing him out of the car door when the train starts. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Root, 49 Neb. 900 (69 N. W. 397).

Riding on steps or platform.

315. (1895.) It is not such negligence for a passenger to stand on the front steps of a crowded street car while in motion as will per se prevent a recovery for injuries received in consequence of the negligence of persons in charge thereof. Pray v. Omaha Street R. Co., 44 Neb. 167 (62 N. W. 447; 48 Am. St. Rep. 717).

316. (1897.) It is not such negligence for a passenger to stand upon the platform of a crowded street car while in motion as will per se defeat a recovery for injuries received in consequence of the negligence of the persons in charge thereof. East Omaha Street R. Co. v. Godola, 50 Neb. 906 (70 N. W. 491).

Leaving car while on siding.

317. (1902.) A through train ran onto a side track at an intermediate station to allow the passage of another train. A through passenger left his car, crossed the main track to the depot, for a drink of water. He filled his cup from the pump, but heard the whistle of the incoming train, and started on a rapid run to regain his car. From the pump the track over which the incoming train was approaching could be seen for about one hundred feet, and three steps from the pump toward the track over which the train was approaching the track was visible for a mile or more. When the passenger reached the track the approaching train was about fifty feet distant from him, and running at a high rate of speed, he attempted to pass in front of the train, and was struck by the engine and killed. Held, That he was not "a passenger being transported over the road," within the meaning of section 3, chapter 72 of the Compiled Statutes, and the railroad was not liable for damages on account of his death because of his own negligence. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Sattler, 64 Neb. 636 (90 N. W. 649; 97 Am. St. Rep. 666; 57 L R. A. 890).

318. (1902.) Where a passenger leaves his car of his own volition for some purpose of his own not incident to the journey he is pursuing, at a place not designed for the discharge of passengers, he cannot claim the protection of section 3, chapter 72 of the Compiled Statutes, although the carrier may, under some exceptional circumstances, still owe him the duty imposed on it by the common law. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Sattler, 64 Neb. 636 (90 N. W. 649; 97 Am. St. Rep. 666; 57 L. R. A. 890).

319. (1902.) While, if a railway company permits the practice of passengers leaving and re-entering their train, while at a sidetrack at an intermediate station for the purpose of letting another train pass on the main track, it is bound to use reasonable care not to expose such passengers to unnecessary danger, yet it is not bound to so regulate its business as to make the side-track as safe a place of ingress and egress as the station platform; nor does it give any assurance, under such circumstances, to passengers that no trains will pass while they are crossing or recrossing the main track. Neither does the call of "all aboard," by the conductor of the side-tracked train, give any assurance to those who have left their train that they may cross the track in safety without looking for approaching trains. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Sattler, 64 Neb. 636 (90 N. W. 649; 97 Am. St. Rep. 666; 57 L. R. A. 890).

320. (1902.) Where the train in which the passenger is being transported is run upon a switch to allow the passage of another train, or is stopped at a place other than that used by the carrier for receiving and discharging passengers, and the stoppage is not for the purpose of allowing passengers to board the train or alight therefrom, one who leaves the train must usually assume all the ordinary risks incident to his action. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Sattler, 64 Neb. 636 (90 N. W. 649; 97 Am. St. Rep. 666; 57 L. R. A. 890).

321. (1904.) Where a passenger on a through fast train, that has side-tracked at a small way station to permit another fast train to pass, leaves the train and crosses the main track to a pump for a drink and, on hearing the approaching train, which is running at a high rate of speed, starts to cross the track ahead of it and is struck and killed, he is guilty of such contributory negligence as to defeat a recovery. Sattler v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 71 Neb. 213 (98 N. W. 663).

Leaving car while in motion.

322. (1894.) Where a woman who is a passenger on a railroad train starts from her seat after the train has started from the station of her destination and she steps from the car step after passing the platform, she is guilty of such negligence as relieves the defendant of liability for her injuries sustained. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Landauer, 39 Neb. 803 (58 N. W. 434).

323. (1903.) Evidence that shows plaintiff to have purchased a ticket to a station beyond her real destination, because the selling agent would not sell to the latter station, and upon arrival at her destination she started to leave the car, but before reaching the door the train started, but plaintiff continued the act of alighting, and was injured, sustains a verdict in favor of plaintiff. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Winfrey, 67 Neb. 13 (93 N. W. 526).

www.libook.com.cn

323*a*. (1908.) Where plaintiff was negligent in attempting to alight from a moving car, she cannot recover although defendant's conductor was negligent in not preventing her from making the attempt, the doctrine of "last clear chance" not applying in such a case. Kruger v. Omaha & C. B. Street R. Co., 80 Neb. 490 (114 N. W. 571).

324. (1903.) It is not necesarily gross negligence in every case for a passenger to attempt to leave a train, even though at the time it be in motion. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Winfrey, 67 Neb. 13 (93 N. W. 526).

Jumping from moving train.

325. (1896.) Where a passenger knowingly jumps from a moving train under such circumstances as to render the act obviously and necessarily perilous and to show a willful disregard of the danger incurred thereby, it will prevent a recovery for the injuries received therefrom. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Hyatt, 48 Neb. 161 (67 N. W. 8).

326. (1894.) Where one who is riding on an engine under an agreement with the fireman to shovel coal for his passage, and having been told to get off before reaching a certain station as he would be arrested if found on the engine, he jumped while the train was running at a great rate of speed and is killed, the court did not err in charging the jury to return a verdict for the defendant in an action by his administrator. Woosley v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 39 Neb. 798 (58 N. W. 444; 25 L. R. A. 79).

327. (1893.) It is not such contributory negligence for a passenger to jump from a moving train as will in every case prevent a recovery under section 3, article I, chapter 72, Compiled Statutes, but where the circumstances are such as to render it obviously and necessarily perilous, and to show a willful disregard of the danger incurred thereby, such act amounts to criminal, negligence. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v Landauer, 36 Neb. 642 (54 N. W. 976).

328. (1902.) A passenger who has been carried past his place of destination by a train which did not stop for him to alight, without notice to or knowledge of those in charge of the train, simply to avoid being carried to the next station, jumps from the steps of the car to the ground while the train is in rapid motion, and is injured thereby, can not maintain an action against the railroad company to recover damages therefor. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Martelle, 65 Neb. 540 (91 N. W. 364).

Proximate cause of injury.

329. (1894.) Where a person who is riding on the engine of a railroad train by permission of the enginemen, agreeing to shovel coal to pay for his passage, and is told to get off before coming into a town or he would be arrested if found on the engine, and he jumps while the train is moving at a rapid rate of speed and is killed, such act of the deceased was criminal negligence and the proximate cause of his death. Woosley v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 39 Neb. 798 (58 N. W. 444; 25 L. R. A. 79).

Burden of proof.

330. (1898.) In a suit against a street railway company for injuring a passenger it is error to instruct that, the injuries being shown, the carrier, to escape liability, must prove that the passenger was guilty of gross negligence. Lincoln Street R. Co. v. McClellan, 54 Neb. 672 (74 N. W. 1074; 69 Am. St. Rep. 736).

331. (1903.) Where plaintiff, admittedly a passenger on defendant's street car, alleged that he was thrown therefrom by reason of a derailment of the car, and defendant denies the derailment and alleges that plaintiff jumped off the car while it was in motion, an instruction that the burden of proof is upon the plaintiff to establish by a preponderance of the evidence that he was injured while a passenger of the defendant, the extent of his injuries and the damage occasioned thereby, is misleading. Omaha Street R. Co. v. Boesen, 68 Neb. 437 (94 N. W. 619).

332. (1905.) Where negligence is proved, or where from the nature of the accident which was the proximate cause of the injury negligence is presumed, the carrier is then required to show that it was in nowise at fault, or that the plaintiff was guilty of some negligent act which contributed to the injury complained of. Lincoln Traction Co. v. Webb, 73 Neb. 136 (102 N. W. 258).

Sufficiency of evidence.

333. (1896.) Held, Under the facts proven in the case, that plaintiff was not guilty of such negligence in alighting from a moving train as to defeat a recovery for injuries received therefrom. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Hyatt, 48 Neb. 161 (67 N. W. 8).

334. (1896.) Evidence held to so clearly disclose crimininal negligence on the part of a railway passenger as to permit no reasonable inference to the contrary. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Hague, 48 Neb. 97 (66 N. W. 1000).

335. (1893.) Evidence examined and held to show that plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence in jumping from a moving train. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Landauer, 36 Neb. 642 (54 N. W. 976).

336. (1904.) Evidence showing that a passenger of a fast through train left the train when on a side-track waiting for another fast train to pass, and was killed while attempting to cross the main track in front of the approaching train, warrants a peremptory instruction for the defendant in an action to recover for such death. Sattler v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 71 Neb. 213 (98 N. W. 663).

Question for jury.

337. (1889.) Where a railroad company constructed its platforms for the accommodation of passengers getting on and off its cars between a side-track and the main line track, the distance between the two tracks being about six feet, and where a passenger approaching the train for the purpose of taking passage sought to enter the train from the platform of the rear car, and upon approaching the door, found that that portion of the car into which the door opened was set apart exclusively for baggage, and then sought to leave the car and enter a passenger car, by stepping upon and passing along the platform between the two tracks to the passenger car, but finding the platform crowded with other passengers, he sought to pass through and around the company of passengers, but in doing so was struck by a passing train moving at a rapid rate of speed, it was held, the question of his want of care was properly submitted to the jury, and that his conduct was not such as would require the court to declare it negligent. Union P. R. Co. v. Sue, 25 Neb. 772 (41 N. W. 801).

338. (1891.) In an action to recover for personal injuries sustained by reason of alleged negligence of defendant in starting its train while plaintiff was alighting therefrom, by which the defendant charged contributory negligence on the part of plaintiff, there being questions of fact to determine, the court properly refused to take the case from the jury. Omaha & R. V. R. Co. v. Chollette, 33 Neb. 143 (49 N. W. 1114).

339. (1894.) In an action to recover for injuries sustained by a woman for an alleged sudden jerking of a street car, as she was in the act of alighting, whether she was guilty of contributory negligence in stepping onto the platform of the car while in motion, and in not using the handholds on the uprights, were questions of fact for the jury. Omaha Street R. Co. v. Craig, 39 Neb. 601 (58 Neb. N. W. 209).

340. (1894.) Whether alighting from a moving train constitutes negligence or not is a fact to be determined by the jury, taking into consideration all the circumstances in evidence in the case. Omaha Street R. Co. v. Craig, 39 Neb. 601 (58 N. W. 209).

340*a*. (1894.) Where a passenger upon a street car, alighted on the side next a parallel track, and was struck and killed by a car upon that track, and the car from which he alighted had steps upon that side, with no gate or barricade to prevent their use, and no warning was given to him as to the danger of dismounting on that side, nor of the approach of the car on the other track, the questions of negligence and contributory negligence were properly left to the jury. Omaha Street R. Co. v. Loehneisen, 40 Neb. 37 (58 N. W. 535).

341. (1896.) Whether the act of a person in attempting to board a moving street car is negligence is generally a fact to be determined by the jury. Omaha Street R. Co. v. Martin, 48 Neb. 65 (66 N. W. 1007).

342. (1897.) The question of defendant's negligence and of plaintiff's contributory negligence, unless conclusively established by the evidence, should be submitted to the jury. Union P. R. Co. v. Evans, 52 Neb. 50 (71 N. W. 1062).

343. (1903.) Whether or not a passenger on a railroad train was guilty of such contributory negligence in attempting to leave the car at her destination, and before she reached the door the train started and she continued the act of alighting, which resulted in an injury to her, was properly submitted to the jury Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Winfrey, 67 Neb. 13 (93 N. W. 526.)

344. (1906.) In an action for damage sustained by one as a passenger, who, while running to catch a train that had been announced as about to leave the station, and while crossing the main tracks to where such train stood was struck by a fast train that passed the station without stopping, the question of contributory negligence is for the jury. Hicks v. Union P. R. Co., 76 Neb. 496 (107 N. W. 798).

344*a*. (1907.) In the circumstances of this case, the question of whether a passenger was guilty of negligence in going from the platform to the step of a moving street car with the intention of alighting therefrom is a question of fact for the jury, and not one of law for the court. Bendekovick v. Omaha & C. B. Street R. Co., 80 Neb. 174 (113 N. W. 988).

345. (1907.) Whether a passsenger on a street car is guilty of negligence in riding on a step of a platform of a crowded car is a question for the jury. Coffey v. Omaha & C. B. Street R. Co., 79 Neb. 286 (112 N. W. 589).

Instructions.

346. (1893.) In an action to recover for the death of one who was injured while alighting from a railroad train, the existence of negligence should be proved and passed upon by the jury as any other fact. It is improper to state to the jury a circumstance or group of circumstances as to which there has been evidence on the trial, and instruct that such fact or group of facts amount to negligence per se. At most, the jury should duly be instructed that such circumstances, if established by a preponderance of the evidence, are properly to be considered in determining the existence of negligence. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Baier, 37 Neb. 235 (55 N. W. 913).

346*a*. (1894.) In an action for death of a passenger who dismounted from a street car on the side next a parallel track and was struck by a car coming on such track, the instructions set out in the opinion, held to state the law correctly. Omaha Street R. Co. v. Loehneisen, 40 Neb. 39 (58 N. W. 535).

347. (1894.) Such expressions as "slight negligence" and "slight want of ordinary care" should never be used in instructions to juries, as such expressions tend to obscure and confuse what should be stated in plain and concise language. Omaha Street R. Co. v. Craig, 39 Neb. 601 (58 N. W. 209).

E. Ejection of Passengers.

Right to eject passenger.

348. (1881.) The right of expulsion of a passenger for non-compliance with a regulation requiring a ticket may be exercised after leaving the station, at any suitable place, under all the circumstances of the particular case. Burlington & M. R. R. Co. v. Rose, 11 Neb. 177 (8 N. W. 433).

349. (1892.) In ejecting a passenger from the street car the conductor can use no more force than is necessary for that purpose, and if he do so the company will be liable. Haman v. Omaha Street R. Co., 35 Neb. 74 (52 N. W. 830).

Nature of action.

350. (1897.) Parties rightfully on a railroad train by virtue of a contract for their carriage to an agreed destination, and who are wrongfully ejected before the journey is completed, may sue for a breach of the contract, or in an action ex delicto for tort or negligence of the carrier. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Spirk, 51 Neb. 167 (70 N. W. 926).

Ejecting trespasser.

351. (1903.) While the common carrier owes a person who boards a train for the purpose of stealing a ride, no active duty as a passenger, yet, if it uses unnecessary force to remove him, or expel him at a dangerous place, or while the train is moving at a dangerous rate of speed, and he thereby sustains injury, the carrier is liable in damages. Pledger v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 69 Neb. 456 (95 N. W. 1057).

351*a*. (1905.) One stealing a ride on a freight train is a trespasser and may be ejected by force under proper circumstances. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. White, 73 Neb. 870 (103 N. W. 661).

Rules and regulations of carrier.

352. (1881.) A railroad company has the power to make, and in a reasonable manner to enforce, a rule or regulation to carry passengers on its freight trains, either not at all, or only upon the condition that they provide themselves with tickets. Burlington & M. R. R. Co. v. Rose, 11 Neb. 177 (8 N. W. 433).

Notice of rules and regulations.

353. (1881.) In the enforcement of a regulation that passengers will not be carried on a freight train unless they have tickets, previous notice thereof must be given. It is not, however, required of a railroad company to bring home to a passenger actual notice of the regulation before the train leaves the station where he entered the car, to justify his expulsion therefrom, for want of a ticket, at any other than a regular stopping place. All that is required is, that a suitable general notice to the public be given for such length of time before the regulation is put into operation, as to make it reasonably certain that all passengers in the exercise of due diligence must become aware of its existence. Burlington & M. R. R. Co. v. Rose, 11 Neb. 177 (8 N. W. 433).

354. (1881.) Notices published notifying passengers that none without tickets would be carried on freight trains sufficient to put passengers on their guard and passengers are bound thereby; and a tender of a fare to the conductor was a void act conferring no right on the passenger. Burlington & M. R. R. Co. v. Rose, 11 Neb. 177 (8 N. W. 433).

Ejection at wrong station.

355. (1897.) Where passengers on a railroad train which does not stop at the station to which their tickets entitled them to be carried, and their being so situated is not the result of their own negligence but that of the company or its employees, were ejected from the train by the conductor and other employes of the company in obedience to a rule of the company for the guidance of the conductor in such cases, at a station other than the one to which they were to be carried, the company is liable in an action ex delicto for all damages which result or flow directly from the negligence. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Spirk, 51 Neb. 167 (70 N. W. 926).

Damages.

356. (1892.) The measure of damages recoverable for an assault in a street car conductor ejecting a passenger from the car is actual damages sustained in the assessment of which the jury may consider the character and extent of the injuries, the pain suffered, loss of time, and cost of medical attendance. Haman v. Omaha Horse Car Co., 35 Neb. 74 (52 N. W. 830).

357. (1897.) Injuries incident to a trip across a prairie held not elements of damage in a suit against a carrier for wrongfully ejecting plaintiff from a train. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Spirk, 51 Neb. 167 70 N. W. 926).

358. (1897.) If an action is brought for the tort or negligence in the ejection of a passenger the measure of damages will be compensation for all injuries which are directly caused or flow from the wrongful act or acts. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Spirk, 51 Neb. 167 (70 N. W. 926).

359. (1897.) If action is brought for a breach of the contract resulting from ejection of a passenger, the measure of damages will be such as may fairly be considered as arising naturally, or in the usual course of things from the breach, or such as may reasonably be supposed to have been in contemplation of the parties to the contract when it was made, as the probable result of its breach. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Spirk, 51 Neb. 167 (70 N. W. 926).

360. (1899.) Damages assessed held inadequate and did not furnish compensation for the loss shown. Spirk v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 57 Neb. 565 (78 N. W. 272).

Pleading.

361. (1897.) Petition alleging that plaintiffs purchased tickets which entitled them to a safe passage on or over plaintiff in error's road from a named starting point to a designated destination, and that they became passengers on said railroad accordingly, and took seats in the cars of the plaintiff in error, to be carried to their journey's end, and were carried directly toward their destination until a station called Benkelman, on the line of the road, was reached, where they were unlawfully and forcibly ejected from the train or car in which they were riding, held to state a cause of action. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Spirk, 51 Neb. 167 (70 N. W. 926).

361*a*. (1905.) Petition in an action for negligence in ejecting plaintiff, a trespasser, from a train, when construed in the light of the entire record, held sufficient to support a judgment for plaintiff. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Kerr, 74 Neb. 1 (104 N. W. 49).

Evidence.

361*b*. (1905.) Evidence held sufficient to sustain verdict for plaintiff in an action for injuries received by a trespasser ejected from a freight train. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Kerr, 74 Neb. 1 (104 N. W. 49).

Question for jury.

362. (1899.) Whether passengers on a railway train have exercised the required care to ascertain whether they are on the right train or in the proper car of the train to reach their destination is generally a question of fact to be submitted to the jury. Spirk v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 57 Neb. 565 (78 N. W. 272).

F. Passenger's Effects.

Liability for baggage.

363. (1895.) A common carrier undertaking to transport the baggage of its passengers is held by the law to the strictest accountability; and if the carrier receives such baggage, and undertakes its carriage, it cannot be relieved from liability therefor by anything save the act of God or of the public enemy. Ringwalt v. Wabash R. Co., 45 Neb. 760 (64 N. W. 219).

364. (1895.) A carrier is not liable for the baggage of its passenger unless the evidence shows that the baggage claimed to be lost and sued for came into the possession of the carrier. Ringwalt v. Wabash R. Co., 45 Neb. 760 (64 N. W. 219).

365. (1907.) Where a railway company gives no explanation as to the loss of a passenger's baggage while in the baggage room at its station, the presumption arises that it resulted from the negligence of the bailee. Campbell v. Missouri P. R. Co., 78 Neb. 479 (111 N. W. 126).

366. (1907.) The liability of a railway company for the loss of baggage of a passenger, after it has been removed from the train and taken into the baggage room at a station, is that of a warehouseman. Campbell v. Missouri P. R. Co., 78 Neb. 479 (111 N. W. 126).

——— Loss by connecting carrier.

367. (1895.) Where a trunk containing jewelry was delivered to a drayman and by him taken to a railroad station where it was checked under a passenger's ticket and delivered, after being transported by several connecting lines, to its destination when it was again taken by a drayman to the residence of the owner, in the absence of a showing that the trunk was not opened or tampered with by the drayman no recovery can be had against the railroad company for the loss of such jewelry. Ringwalt v. Wabash R. Co., 45 Neb. 760 (64 N. W. 219).

368. (1907.) Where a carrier uses the railway station of another carrier, over whose lines it operates its trains, at which to discharge passengers and baggage, and the agent of the latter company removes and cares for such baggage the same as that coming on his own line, except that all checks are taken off before the baggage is removed from the train, such agent is the agent of the former carrier also, in the receipt and care of such baggage so as to render it liable for loss of baggage taken by him into the baggage room. Campbell v. Missouri P. R. Co., 78 Neb. 479 (111 N. W. 126).

Baggage check as evidence.

369. (1897.) A carrier's check for baggage is prima facie evidence that the baggage was delivered to the carrier, and when such a check has been introduced in evidence the burden of proof is on the party alleging non-delivery. Chicago, B. & Q. R Co. v. Steear, 53 Neb. 95 (73 N. W. 466).

G. Palace Cars and Sleeping Cars.

Liability for loss to passenger.

370. (1889.) A sleeping car company, so far as it renders service similar in kind to an innkeeper, is subject to the same liabilities; and where an article of wearing apparel belonging to a passenger in one of such cars has been placed in the care of the porter, and is stolen from the car, the company will be liable therefor. Pullman Palace Car Co. v. Lowe, 28 Neb. 239 (44 N. W. 226; 26 Am. St. Rep. 325; 6 L. R. A. 809).

371. (1889.) "Guest" and "lodger" defined. Pullman Palace Car Co. v. Lowe, 28 Neb. 239 (44 N. W. 226; 26 Am. St. Rep. 325; 6 L. R. A. 809).

372. (1906.) Evidence in an action by a passenger against a sleeping car company held to sustain a finding of theft of jewelry from plaintiff while asleep in a sleeping car of defendants. Pullman Palace Car Co. v. Woods, 76 Neb. 694 (107 N. W. 858).

ANALYSIS.

Nature of private association, § 1.
Statutory provisions, §§ 2, 3.
Establishment and purchase of property for, § 4.
Exemptions, §§ 5-7.
Enjoining burial as a nuisance, §§ 8-13.

CROSS-REFERENCE.

Land donated as cemetery subject to creditor's suit, see Creditor's Suit, § 26.

Nature of private association.

1. (1894.) A cemetery association organized under section 45, chapter 16, Compiled Statutes, is a private corporation. Pokrok Zapadu Publishing Co. v. Zizkovsky, 42 Neb. 64 (60 N. W. 358).

Statutory provisions.

2. (1888.) As to whether chapter 15 of the Session Laws of 1887, providing for the establishment of cemeteries in cities, is repealed by the provisions of chapter 12 of the Session Laws of 1887 subsequently enacted, quære. State, ex rel. Wyuka Cemetery Ass'n, v. Bartling, 23 Neb. 421 (36 N. W. 811).

3. (1888.) The provisions of section 330, chapter 15 of the Session Laws of 1887, providing for the more efficient management and care of cemeteries and cemetery grounds in cities of the second class and villages, has no application to "cities of the second class of over 5,000 inhabitants," as created by article II of chapter 14 of the Compiled Statutes of 1885, but is limited to article I of said chapter, and to chapter 14 of the Compiled Statutes of 1881. State, ex rel. Wyuka Cemetery Ass'n, v. Bartling, 23 Neb. 421 (36 N. W. 811).

Establishment and purchase of property for.

4. (1888.) Nebraska City, being a city of the second class having over 5,000 inhabitants, is governed by the act of March 1, 1883, as amended by chapter 14 of the Session Laws of 1885, which act confers upon the city the right to enact ordinances for the purpose of purchasing, holding, and controlling cemeteries. State, ex rel. Wyuka Cemetery Ass'n, v. Bartling, 23 Neb. 421 (36 N. W. 811).

Exemptions.

5. (1902.) Real estate platted and dedicated for a public cemetery, which is used exclusively for burial purposes, is exempt from forced sale. First Nat. Bank of Pawnee City v. Hazels, 63 Neb. 844 (89 N. W. 378; 56 L. R. A. 765).

6. (1902.) The fact that the owner of the legal title to a portion of the lots in a cemetery receives a portion of the revenues derived from a sale thereof when required for burial purposes, does not render such unsold lots subject to execution, legal or equitable. First Nat. Bank of Pawnee City v. Hazels, 63 Neb. 844 (89 N. W. 378; 56 L. R. A. 765).

7. (1902.) Real estate platted into lots and blocks and dedicated for a public cemetery cannot be reached by an equitable proceeding in the nature of a creditor's bill. First Nat. Bank of Pawnee City v. Hazels, 63 Neb. 844 (89 N. W. 378; 56 L. R. A. 765).

Enjoining burial as a nuisance.

8. (1903.) A court of equity will enjoin the use of a tract of land for cemetery purposes so situated that the burial of the dead there will injure life or health, either by corrupting the surrounding atmosphere, or the water of wells or springs. Braasch v. Cemetery Ass'n, 69 Neb. 300 (95 N. W. 646).

9. (1903.) A burial ground near dwellings is not necessarily a nuisance, and the court will only interfere and enjoin its use on clear and convincing proof of probable injury. Braasch v. Cemetery Ass'n, 69 Neb. 300 (95 N. W. 646).

10. (1903.) Evidence held insufficient to sustain an injunction against the establishment of a cemetery near plaintiff's land and wells. Braasch v. Cemetery Ass'n, 69 Neb. 300 (95 N. W. 646).

11. (1905.) The cause upon which the order allowing a perpetual injunction against the use of a tract of land for burial purposes is not removed, and the threatened invasion of the plaintiff's rights is not obviated, by an ordinance of the city within which such tract of land is located, which authorizes the health commissioner in his discretion to provide rules and grant permits for the burial of dead bodies in a different manner than that ordinarily obtaining, by covering the bottom and walls of the grave with a coat of mortar, so as to render the same impervious to the fluids arising from decomposition of dead bodies. Lowe v. Prospect Hill Cemetery Ass'n, 75 Neb. 85 (106 N. W. 429).

12. (1905.) Evidence examined, and it is found that there has been no material change since the entry of the final order allowing a perpetual injunction in respect of the wells on the premises of the plaintiffs, and the threatened dangers to them because of the pollution of the underground waters from which such wells are supplied, by reason of the decomposition of dead bodies, if interred in the tract of land involved in the controversy, and that no such change has arisen since the rendition of the original decree in the action in respect of such matters as would justify the modification or vacation of the order of injunction therein allowed. Lowe v. Prospect Hill Cemetery Ass'n, 75 Neb. 85 (106 N. W. 429).

13. (1905.) Where, in an action in which the object is to enjoin the defendant from using a certain tract of land for the interment of dead bodies, one of the vital issues is whether such land is a part of an established cemetery, and it is in such action determined that it is not, a resolution afterwards passed by the city council of the city in which such grounds are situated to the effect that such disputed ground is a part of the cemetery, and is not therefore taxable, will not affect the question as litigated and determined, and will afford no sufficient basis for modification or vacation of an order for perpetual injunction restraining the defendants from the use of such ground for burial purposes. Lowe v. Prospect Hill Cemetery Ass'n, 75 Neb. 85 (106 N. W. 429).

CHARITIES.

ANALYSIS.

Validity of devise, §§ 1, 2.
Enforcement of trust, §§ 3-6.
——— Power of trustee, § 7.
Action for accounting, §§ 8, 9.

Validity of devise.

1. (1900.) The provisions for the administration of charitable trusts under the statute of 43 Elizabeth held not to be in force in this state. St. James Orphan Asylum v. Shelby, 60 Neb. 796 (84 N. W. 273; 83 Am. St. Rep. 553).

2. (1900.) A devise of certain land to a certain bishop, or to his successors in case testator survive him, and "my wish and direction is that the said bishop * * * apply the said lands and proceeds arising therefrom to some charity according to his judgment," is not void for uncertainty. St. James Orphan Asylum v. Shelby, 60 Neb. 796 (84 N. W. 273; 83 Am. St. Rep. 553).

Enforcement of trust.

3. (1900.) Courts will view with favor donations by will for charitable purposes, and will endeavor to carry them into effect where the same can be done consistently with the rules of law. St. James Orphan Asylum v. Shelby, 60 Neb. 796 (84 N. W. 273; 83 Am. St. Rep. 553).

4. (1900.) Where the object of a testamentary trust is clearly charitable, and a trustee is named who is empowered to select for the testator, and as an expression of his will, a charity upon which the property is to be bestowed, and the trustee has accepted or is ready to accept the trust and is willing to carry out its provisions, such bequest, though entirely general and uncertain in its objects, will not be declared invalid because of the general nature of the object or objects of the charity. St. James Orphan Asylum v. Shelby, 60 Neb. 796 (84 N. W. 273; 83 Am. St. Rep. 553).

5. (1900.) The doctrine of charitable uses, being administered as a part of the common law jurisdiction of the courts of chancery of England exercising judicial power only, has been transplanted in this state and become a part of the jurisprudence of the courts possessing common law equity powers; and in the administration and enforcement of such trusts the courts can exercise only judicial powers, and not those of the extraordinary character mentioned. St. James Orphan Asylum v. Shelby, 60 Neb. 796 (84 N. W. 273; 83 Am. St. Rep. 553).

6. (1900.) In a devise, where a certain and ascertainable trustee or trustees are appointed, with full power to select the beneficiaries or designate the objects of the charity, and devise a plan for the application of the funds bestowed, the court will, through the trustee, execute the charity. St. James Orphan Asyum v. Shelby, 60 Neb. 796 (84 N. W. 273; 83 Am. St. Rep. 553).

——— Power of trustee.

7. (1900.) Where a devise is made to a certain and ascertainable trustee or trustees with full power to select the beneficiaries or designate the objects of the charity, the exercise of the discretion or power vested in the trustees will be deemed to be an expression of the will of the testator. St. James Orphan Asylum v. Shelby, 60 Neb. 796 (84 N. W. 273; 83 Am. St. Rep. 553).

Action for accounting.

8. (1907.) The supreme court will not entertain original jurisdiction in an action to compel a former manager of a private charitable corporations to account. State v. Tabitha Home, 78 Neb. 651 (111 N. W. 586).

9. (1907.) The state is not a proper party plaintiff to an action to compel the officers of a charitable institution to account. State v. Tabitha Home, 78 Neb. 651 (111 N. W. 586).

I. REQUISITES AND VALIDITY.

A. Nature and Essentials of Transfer.

Necessity of change of possession as against creditors, see Fraudulent Conveyances, §§ 179-192.

Excessive security as element of fraud, see Fraudulent Conveyances, §§ 52-65.

Nature of mortgage.

1. (1873.) A mortgage of chattels is a conditional sale, with title in the mortgagee, subject to mortgagor's right to perform the conditions. Tallon v. Ellison, 3 Neb. 63.

2. (1894.) A chattel mortgage, whether in writing or not, is a pledge of personal property to secure the promise of the mortgagor or some one for whom he stands sponsor. Musser v. King, 40 Neb. 892 (59 N. W. 744; 42 Am. St. Rep 700).

Mortgage securing debts to different creditors.

3. (1899.) A chattel mortgage may be to a number of persons and may be to each a separate and several security of his claim or debt against the mortgagor. Sloan v. Thomas Mfg. Co., 58 Neb. 713 (79 N. W. 728).

4. (1899.) A chattel mortgage given by a debtor to several creditors, who by the terms of the instrument are to prorate in the proceeds of the mortgaged property, is the legal equivalent of a separate mortgage to each of such creditors. Skinner v. First Nat. Bank of Pawnee City, 59 Neb. 17 (80 N. W. 42).

Property subject to mortgage.

——— Things non in esse.

Sufficiency of description, see post, §§ 59-61.

5. (1886.) A chattel mortgage executed upon a crop of corn to be planted at some future time on the premises described in the instrument creates no lien upon the crop when it comes into existence, until seized by the mortgagor. Cole v. Kerr, 19 Neb. 553 (26 N. W. 598).

6. (1888.) A mortgage of a crop of corn yet to be planted, conveys no title as against a levying creditor. Johnson v. Walker, 23 Neb. 736 (37 N. W. 639).

7. (1903.) It is no objection to an agreement to execute a mortgage on crops that the crops were not in being when it was made. Sporer v. McDermott, 69 Neb. 533 (96 N. W. 232).

8. (1901.) A mortgage on a thing non in esse discussed. Brown v. Neilson, 61 Neb. 765 (86 N. W. 498; 87 Am. St. Rep. 525; 54 L. R .A. 328).

9. (1901.) Things which have neither an actual nor potential existence are not the subject of sale or mortgage. Within the meaning of this rule, animals which have neither been littered nor conceived are without actual or potential being. Battle Creek Valley Bank v. First Nat. Bank of Madison, 62 Neb. 825 (88 N. W. 145; 56 L. R. A. 124).

10. (1901.) An instrument which assumes to convey or incumber a thing non in esse is a mere executory contract, which does not, "without a new intervening act," create any legal right to, or interest in, the thing to which it relates. Battle Creek Valley Bank v. First Nat. Bank of Madison, 62 Neb. 825 (88 N. W. 145; 56 L. R. A. 124).

——— Fixtures.

11. (1873.) Fixtures erected by a tenant during his term may be mortgaged as chattels. Lamphere v. Lowe, 3 Neb. 131.

——— After-acquired property.

12. (1885.) Where a party purchased horses upon condition that he should pay for them by a certain date, and paid for them at the time agreed upon, but before doing so he executed a chattel mortgage on them, held, that so far as the mortgage was concerned the title of the mortgagor related back to the date of purchase. Peters v. Parsons, 18 Neb. 191 (24 N. W. 687).

13. (1894.) A mortgage of chattels to be thereafter acquired is invalid as against purchaser and attaching creditors of the mortgagor. Steele v. Ashenfelter, 40 Neb. 770 (59 N. W. 361; 42 Am. St. Rep. 694).

Mortgage or indemnity.

14. (1899.) A mortgage in terms to secure the payment of a debt evidenced by a promissory note may be shown to be one of indemnity only. Honaker v. Vesey, 57 Neb. 413 (77 N. W. 1100).

Absolute bill of sale as mortgage.

15. (1880.) A bill of sale, absolute on its face, but accompanied by a verbal defeasance, is not only a chattel mortgage as between the parties to it, but also to third parties who have actual notice, or such knowledge of the facts as charges them with notice. And a sale of the chattels by the mortgagor to such third parties in payment of a debt due from him to them conveys no title. Omaha Book Co. v. Sutherland, 10 Neb. 334 (6 N. W. 367).

16. (1889.) Where a debtor, for the purpose of securing a debt, conveys personal property to his creditor, giving him the possession thereof with authority to the creditor to sell the same and account to the debtor for the surplus after paying the debt so secured, together with the necessary expenses of sale, etc., the instrument by which the conveyance was made will be treated as a chattel mortgage as well between the grantee and the creditors of the grantor as between the parties to the transfer. Sloan v. Coburn, 26 Neb. 608 (42 N. W. 726; 4 L. R. A. 470).

17. (1890.) A chattel mortgage in the form of a bill of sale, with a defeasance clause, given and received bona fide, though unfiled, held valid as against subsequent mortgagees having actual notice thereof at time of taking their respective mortgages. Russell v. Longmoor, 29 Neb. 209 (45 N. W. 624).

18. (1891.) An absolute deed of real estate, or a bill of sale of personal property absolute on its face, executed and intended as security for a debt or loan, will be construed as a mortgage as between the parties thereto, and all others, except bona fide purchasers for value without notice. Kemp v. Small, 32 Neb. 318 (49 N. W. 169).

19. (1891.) Held, That the deeds and bill of sale, referred to in the opinion, were given as security and were not intended as an absolute transfer of the property therein described. Kemp v. Small, 32 Neb. 318 (49 N. W. 169).

Mortgage distinguished from assignment.

20. (1899.) A chattel mortgage given by a debtor to several creditors, who by the terms of the instrument are to prorate in the proceeds of the mortgaged property, is not a voluntary assignment under the statute. Skinner v. First Nat. Bank of Pawnee City, 59 Neb. 17 (80 N. W. 42).

Consideration.

——In general.

21. (1887.) A purchased a span of horses of B, giving his note therefor, with C and D as sureties. To induce C to sign the note as surety, A promised to execute a chattel mortgage on said property to C, and further agreed that until the execution of said mortgage C should retain a lien on said property. Afterwards A executed a mortgage to one E, on said property, and soon afterwards left the state without having executed a mortgage to C. D thereupon, in consideration that C would release his claim on the property, executed a chattel mortgage upon other property to secure C against the payment of a part or all of the note held by B. Held, That the mortgage from D to C was not without a consideration. Sparks v. Wilson, 22 Neb. 112 (34 N. W. 111).

22. (1902.) Where chattel mortgagees hold mortgages of various priority on the same goods, the fact that one mortgage, executed at the same time and as a part of the same transaction, was without consideration, will not impeach the other mortgages, where the parties act in good faith, supposing the first mortgage valid. Trompen v. Yates, 66 Neb. 525 (92 N. W. 647).

——Pre-existing debt.

23. (1882.) A pre-existent debt already due, is good consideration for a chattel mortgage. Turner v. Killian, 12 Neb. 580, (12 N. W. 101).

24. (1891.) A pre-existing debt is a valuable consideration for a chattel mortgage. Henry v. Vliet, 33 Neb. 130 (49 N. W. 1107; 29 Am. St. Rep. 478). [Overruled. Henry v. Vliet, 36 Neb. 138.]

25. (1892.) When goods obtained by fraud have been mortgaged by the fraudulent vendee solely to secure a pre-existing debt due from him to the mortgagee, the latter cannot claim the protection which the law affords an innocent and bona fide purchaser of property from a fraudulent vendee. Tootle v. First Nat. Bank, 34 Neb. 863 (52 N. W. 396),

26. (1893.) The first paragraph of the syllabus in Henry v. Vliet, 33 Neb., 130: "A pre-existing debt is a valuable consideration for a chattel mortgage and protects the mortgagee to the same extent as had he paid a new consideration," is overruled. Henry v. Vliet, 36 Neb. 138 (54 N. W. 122; 19 L. R. A. 590).

27. (1893.) As to attachment creditors of the mortgagor, a pre-existing debt already due is a good consideration for a chattel mortgage and protects the mortgagee to the same extent as would a new consideration given at the time of making the mortgage. Beagle v. Miller, 37 Neb. 855 (56 N. W. 710).

28. (1895.) A pre-existing debt is a sufficient consideration for a chattel mortgage and protects the mortgagee to the same extent as a new consideration. Chaffee v. Atlas Lumber Co., 43 Neb. 224 (61 N. W. 637; 47 Am. St. Rep. 753).

29. (1896.) A mortgage upon chattels given to secure a pre-existing demand will protect the mortgagee as fully as though a new consideration had been paid. State Bank of Lushton v. Kelley, 49 Neb. 242 (68 N. W. 481).

30. (1896.) A mortgage securing a pre-existing debt should not be declared void merely because the mortgagee had notice that the mortgagor intended to defraud creditors, mortgagee not participating in the fraudulent purpose. Grosshans v. Gold, 49 Neb. 599 (68 N. W. 1031).

31. (1903.) One F. deserted his wife and left the state, leaving a crop of standing matured corn and other personal property. The wife claimed all the property as exempt from attachment by the husband's creditors. Knowing of such claim the plaintiff took from the husband a chattel mortgage and bill of sale of the property as security for a pre-existing debt and an additional sum loaned to induce the husband to give the security. Held, In a replevin action for the corn, that the taking of such security was not per se a fraud upon the wife, that the husband's desertion did not transfer the title of his exempt property to his wife, nor divest him of power to create a lien thereon. Farmers & Merchants Bank of Sterling v. Hoffman, 5 Unof. 9 (96 N. W. 1044).

——— Extension of time or release of surety.

32. (1896.) Extension of time for the payment of a debt is a sufficient consideration for a chattel mortgage given by the debtor to secure such indebtedness. Fuller v. Brownell & Co., 48 Neb. 145 (67 N. W. 6).

33. (1891.) The release of an indorser or surety of a promissory note, on a pre-existing debt in consideration of a chattel mortgage on the goods of the maker is a valuable consideration for the mortgage. Henry v. Vliet, 33 Neb. 130 (49 N. W. 1107; 29 Am. St. Rep. 478).

Specific enforcement of contract to execute mortgage.

34. (1903.) An agreement to execute, after they are growing, a mortgage upon crops, may be enforced specifically in equity if sufficiently definite in its terms and clearly established, and the situation of the parties and property is such that justice and equity call for such a remedy. Sporer v. McDermott, 69 Neb. 533 (96 N. W. 232)

B. Form and Contents, Execution and Validity.

Validity of mortgage given in preference to one creditor, see Fraudulent Conveyances, §§ 153-163.

Effect of retaining power of sale, see Frandulent Conveyances, §§ 187-192.

Necessity of writing.

35. (1878.) A verbal agreement to give and accept security upon personal property is valid between the parties, although of no validity as against creditors and subsequent purchasers in good faith. Conchman v. Wright, 8 Neb. 1.

36. (1887.) A verbal contract upon sufficient consideration, by which the owner of personal property gives a lien upon it is valid. Sparks v. Wilson, 22 Neb. 112, (34 N. W. 111).

37. (1888.) A verbal agreement between a debtor and creditor, by which the former gives a lien upon certain property to the latter, is valid between the parties, but void as to creditors and subsequent purchasers in good faith. Ostertag v. Galbraith, 23 Neb. 730 (37 N. W. 637).

38. (1902.) An oral chattel mortgage is good as between the parties thereto; it is invalid only as to creditors and subsequent purchasers in good faith. Reiss v. Argubright, 3 Unof. 756 (92 N. W. 988).

39. (1902.) Creditor as to whom an oral chattel mortgage would be void means judgment, execution or attachment creditor; a subsequent mortgagee with notice is not so regarded. Reiss v. Argubright, 3 Unof. 756 (92 N. W. 988).

Acknowledgment.

40. (1878.) The several sections of chapter 43 of the Revised Statutes 1866, in relation to the execution and acknowledgment of deeds, mortgages, and other instruments in writing required to be recorded, are to be construed together, and apply to and include chattel mortgages. Hooker v. Hammill, 7 Neb. 231.

Digitized by Google

41. (1881.) Where the statute provides that a chattel mortgage shall be void "as against the creditors of the mortgagor" unless the mortgage or a true copy thereof shall be filed and recorded as directed by law, the mortgage is void unless properly acknowledged, since it must be acknowledged to entitle it to be recorded Becker v. Anderson, 11 Neb. 493 (9 N. W. 640). [Overruled. 13 Neb. 261; 49 Neb. 165.]

Acceptance and delivery.

42. (1897.) Acceptance by grantee of a mortgage beneficial to him will be presumed, but the presumption may be rebutted by proof that he did not accept it. Atwood v. Marshall, 52 Neb. 173 (71 N. W. 1064).

43. (1898.) An undated instrument signed by grantor and taken by grantee for retention until he is notified by grantor of a contingency, after which the instrument is to be filed, does not become a completed chattel mortgage until the grantor takes the action contemplated by the agreement. Midland State Bank v. Kilpatrick-Koch Dry Goods Co., 54 Neb. 410 (74 N. W. 837).

Description of property.

——Sufficiency in general.

44. A description of property in a chattel mortgage is sufficient, where it will enable a third person, aided by inquiries which the instrument itself suggests, to identify the property. (1889) Rawlins v. Kennard, 26 Neb. 181 (41 N. W. 1004); (1894) Love v. Putnam, 41 Neb. 86 (59 N. W. 691); (1890) Buck v. Davenport Savings Bank, 29 Neb. 407 (45 N. W. 776; 26 Am. St. Rep. 392); (1901) Union State Bank v. Hutton, 61 Neb. 571 (85 N. W. 535).

45. (1886.) A chattel mortgage may be void as against the bona fide creditors of or purchasers from the mortgagor for defective description of the property mortgaged and yet good as between the immediate parties to the mortgage. Leighton v. Stuart, 19 Neb. 546 (26 N. W. 198).

46. (1886.) As between the mortgagor and mortgagee of personal chattels, a specific and particular description of the several articles mortgaged from which to identify them from other like articles of the mortgagor in the same collection, is not essential to the validity of the mortgage. Leighton v. Stuart, 19 Neb. 546 (26 N. W. 198).

47. (1892.) In an action of replevin founded on a chattel mortgage, the description of the property was held sufficient to entitle the plaintiff to recover, and there was testimony tending to show that the purchaser had actual notice of the mortgage. Bartholomew v. Fisher, 34 Neb. 98 (51 N. W. 599).

48. (1893.) A description of property covered by a chattel mortgage which will not enable third persons aided by inquiries which the mortgage itself suggests, to identify the mortgaged property is not constructive notice to good faith purchasers thereof for a valuable consideration. Iowa Savings Bank v. Dunning, 37 Neb. 322 (55 N. W. 1079).

49. (1893.) Whether the description of property in a chattel mortgage and the other inquiries which the mortgage itself suggests are sufficient to enable third persons to identify the mortgaged property is a question of fact for the jury. Iowa Savings Bank v. Dunning, 37 Neb. 322 (55 N. W. 1079).

50. (1894.) A description in a chattel mortgage, "One hundred thirty tons of hay now in stack upon east half northwest quarter of section 30, town 18, range 6; said property is now and will be kept on J. W. Love's farm northwest of town," was held sufficient although the land upon which the hay in controversy was standing was in range 7 and not in range 6. Love v. Putnam, 41 Neb. 86 (56 N. W. 691).

51. (1898.) A chattel mortgage specifically described the chattels, but described them as contained in a certain building where they had not yet been put, but where they were placed before any other rights intervened. Held, That the misdescription of the place did not render the mortgage void. Arlington Mill & Elevator Co. v. Yates, 57 Neb. 286 (77 N. W. 677).

52. (1901.) A chattel mortgage, duly filed for record, which described the property conveyed as "five hundred bushels yellow corn now in pile on ground on Gilman farm, 8 mi. south and 2 mi. west of Wayne, Nebraska," although a greater quantity of corn is in the pile, the corn being of uniform value and quality, held not void for insufficient description. McCormick Harvesting Machine Co. v. Reynolds, 62 Neb. 892 (88 N. W. 130).

53. (1903.) A chattel mortgage which would be invalid as against creditors and purchasers in good faith by reason of defective description of the property mortgaged, may be good as between mortgagor and mortgagee, where the property in fact mortgaged is identified, but where no specific chattels are mortgaged, but there is an attempt to mortgage a certain number out of a mass without separating or identifying them, no lien upon upecific chattels is created in a case of the latter sort until they are separated or identified and it is agreed that the mortgage shall apply to them. First Nat. Bank of Holdrege v. Johnson, 68 Neb. 641 (94 N. W. 837).

54. (1904.) The mortgage involved in this action properly filed, held to be sufficient notice of the lien thereof under the facts disclosed, notwithstanding a mistake in the description of the premises where the property is situated. Hayes v. First State Bank of Bertrand, 5 Unof. 298 (98 N. W. 423).

55. (1906.) While a mortgage is void as to third persons for failure of description of the property, it is not void between the parties thereto. It gives to the mortgagee the right of selection, and, when he has exercised that right, the lien of the mortgage ataches and will prevail over all after acquired interests in the mortgaged property. South Omaha Nat. Bank v. McGillin, 77 Neb. 6 (108 N. W. 257).

56. (1906.) A chattel mortgage giving a lien on the mortgaged property as against the mortgagor is, nothwithstanding an imperfect description of the property covered thereby, good as against a subsequest purchaser or mortgagee who fails to show that he purchased in good faith and without notice of the mortgage. South Omaha Nat. Bank v. Stewart, 75 Neb. 716 (106 N. W. 969).

57. (1906.) It is only where the rights of innocent third parties have intervened that an incorrect or faulty description in a chattel mortgage can be taken advantage of, and, even as against innocent third parties, a faulty description is sufficient if the mortgage contains such description as would lead to the identification of the chattels intended to be mortgaged on reasonable inquiry. South Omaha Nat. Bank v. Stewart, 75 Neb. 716 (106 N. W. 969).

58. (1906.) A defective or incorrect description of property covered by a chattel mortgage is immaterial, so far as the parties to the mortgage are concerned, when it is admitted by the mortgagor that the property claimed by the mortgagee as included therein is the identical property intended to be mortgaged. South Omaha Nat. Bank v. Stewart, 75 Neb. 716 (106 N. W. 969).

——— Crops.

Crops subject to mortgage, see ante, §§ 5-10.

59. (1888.) Where a chattel mortgage was given by certain owners of an elevator upon "ten thousand bushels of ear corn, contained in cribs 1 and 2, situated south of the B. & M. R. R. side track, in the town of Crab Orchard, on right of way of said railroad company," and the proof was that there were three cribs without any designation as to numbers or the particular cribs included in the mortgage, the mortgage is too indefinite to entitle the mortgagee to recover corn placed in one of the cribs by a depositor. Grimes v. Connell, 23 Neb. 187 (36 N. W. 479).

60. (1899.) A description in a chattel mortgage, "50 acres of corn planted on the S. E. ¼ of sec. 17-1-8, being the N. 30 of the S. 80 acres and the south 20 of the N. 80 acres," accompanied by the further statement that the mortgaged property is in the possession of the mortgagor in N. county, and that any attempt on his part to remove the property from said county would be a sufficient reason for an immediate foreclosure, is sufficiently definite to impart constructive notice. Chicago Lumber Co. v. Hunter, 58 Neb. 328 (78 N. W. 619).

61. (1900.) A chattel mortgage on 340 acres of corn, which was part of a growing crop of 425 acres, held void for uncertainty of description, the mortgaged property being neither uniform in quality or capable of identification. Wattle v. Cobb, 60 Neb. 403 (83 N. W. 195; 83 Am. St. Rep. 537).

——— Animals.

62. (1881.) A description of the property as "Two mules, one bay and one brown, aged eight years old. One mare, bay, eight years old. One bay horse, age five years old. One black mare, age five years old. One lumber wagon. One double harness. Nine acres of growing wheat, situated on south-west quarter of sec. 35, town 12, range 6," is sufficiently definite. Jordan v. Hamilton County Bank, 11 Neb. 499 (9 N. W. 654).

63. (1885.) Where the property was described in a chattel mortgage as "one bay horse eight years old, weight about

1,200," and it was stated in the mortgage that the mortgagor, who was a resident of the county, was "lawfully possessed of said goods and chattels," held, sufficient to put a purchaser on inquiry. Peters v. Parsons, 18 Neb. 191 (24 N. W. 687).

64. (1887.) Where the description in a chattel mortgage was "twenty-three head of horses and mules, * * * all situated on their range on the South Loup river. * * * Above described chattels are now in their (the mortgagor's) possession and are owned by them," the testimony showed the range in question to be situated in Buffalo county, where the mortgage was filed for record, and that the horses and mules were all those possessed by the mortgagor; held, a sufficient description. Wiley v. Shars, 21 Neb. 712 (33 N. W. 418).

65. (1887.) Where a chattel mortgage on steers is void because the property mortgaged cannot be identified, the fact that before the levy of an attachment, certain steers had been separated from the whole number and claimed under the mortgage, would be unavailing as against such attaching creditor, unless it was also shown that at the time the mortgage was executed there was an agreement that it should apply to such steers. Price v. McComas, 21 Neb. 195 (31 N. W. 511).

66. (1887.) A chattel mortgage on "ten head of two year old steers valued at thirty-five dollars per head—now in my possession, owned by me, and free from incumbrances," executed by one who owned ninety head of steers of that description, is invalid for uncertainty where the steers mortgaged were not separated from the others. Price v. McComas, 21 Neb. 195 (31 N. W. 511).

67. (1889.) A mortgage executed upon "two brown mules, one four years old, the other five; weighing about nine hundred pounds each" is superior to a mortgage executed on "one bay mule, four years old; one bay mule, five years old," by the same person in favor to one who had knowledge of the first mortgage. Rawlins v. Kennard, 26 Neb. 181 (41 N. W. 1004).

68. (1890.) The fact that a mortgage on a cow erroneously described her as three years old instead of two years old, cannot be taken advantage of by one claiming under a subsequent mortgage which contains the same erroneous description. Lininger & Metcalf Co. v. Mills, 29 Neb. 297 (45 N. W. 463).

69. (1890.) A chattel mortgage on "one white cow, three years old, now in my possession in Harlan county" in sufficiently definite where the mortgagor had only one white cow. Lininger & Metcalf Co. v. Mills, 29 Neb. 297 (45 N. W. 463).

70. (1890.) A description in a chattel mortgage, "95 head of steers one year old this spring, marked as follows: Right ear cropped and notch cut out of the under side of the left, being the said catle I have this day purchased of Welcome Mowry, being all the cattle I have now thus marked. Said cattle are to be kept in Seward Co., Neb., except during the herding season, in which they are to be kept in Butler Co, Nebraska," is sufficient. Buck v. Davenport Savings Bank, 29 Neb. 407 (45 N. W. 776; 26 Am. St. Rep. 392).

71. (1891.) Where cattle were described in a chattel mortgage as "forty head of steers, three years old next spring, being all steers of that age owned by us; sixty head of steers, two years old next spring, being all of that age we own except forty head; all of the above are branded with figure 4 on left hip and are kept on the Verges farm," etc., the descriptions are to be considered in conjunction by the jury, and not in the disjunctive, and an instruction which submits each part of the description as though it was the whole is erroneous. Norfolk Nat. Bank v. Wood, 33 Neb. 113 (49 N. W. 958).

72. (1901.) A provision in a mortgage of domestic animals, assuming to give the mortgagee a lien upon the increase to be thereafter begotten, is nothing more than an agreement for a lien which, without possession, vests no legal right to, or interest in, such increase. Battle Creek Valley Bank v. First Nat. Bank of Madison, 62 Neb. 825 (88 N. W. 145; 56 L. R. A. 124).

73 (1901.) A mortgage of chattels, where the property is described as "twenty-five (25) cattle, consisting of ten cows, seven steers, and eight heifers. The above described chattels are now in my possession, are owned by me," etc., and the parties mortgaging the same had in their possession at the time a larger number of the same kind and description, and there is no separation, designation or means of identification by which those mortgaged could be distinguished from the remainder of the herd, is void for uncertainty. Union State Bank v. Hutton, 61 Neb. 571 (85 N. W. 535).

74. (1902.) A man owning a herd of two hundred cows and a hundred and forty-three calves, executed a mortgage containing the following description: "Two hundred (200) head of native cows, in ages from three to seven years; some branded L and others SH; also with one hundred head of above mortgaged cows are included in this mortgage one hundred head of their calves, which are to be branded SH. The above described chattels are now in my possession on," etc. Held, That this description was so indefinite as to be void as against subsequent purchasers of a part of the herd of calves, without actual notice of the instrument. First Nat. Bank of Chadron v. Hughes, 3 Unof. 823 (92 N. W. 986).

75. (1903.) Where mortgaged stock are described as being upon a certain farm owned by the mortgagor in the county of his residence, the mortgage is not void for uncertainty, if the description of the animals is not applicable to any others kept on such farm. Goff v. Byers Bros. & Co., 70 Neb. 1 (96 N. W. 1037).

76. (1906.) A chattel mortgage on a specified number of cattle, describing them by age and brands, and reciting that "the above described stock are in my undisputed possession, free from all liens and incumbrances, and kept on my premises on section No. 4, township No. 5, range No. 38, Chase county, Nebraska," is not void on its face for uncertainty of description. South Omaha Nat. Bank v. McGillin, 77 Neb. 6 (108 N. W. 257).

77. (1906.) If it is made to appear that a chattel mortgage was in fact given on a specified number of cattle out of a larger number of the same kind and description, or, in other words, on a part only of a herd of cattle of the same kind and bearing the same description, it is void as to third persons, unless there has been a separation or a delivery of the cattle mortgaged to the mortgagee. South Omaha Nat. Bank v. McGillin, 77 Neb. 6 (108 N. W. 257).

Duress.

78. (1901.) Evidence examined, and held to be sufficient to warrant the finding of the jury that the mortgage under which plaintiff claimed possession of certain grain was obtained by compulsion and was without consideration. Iowa Savings Bank v. Frink, 1 Unof. 14 (92 N. W. 916).

Retention of possession by mortgagor.

79. (1886.) A chattel mortgage on a stock of goods, executed to secure a creditor possession and power to sell, in the usual course of business, in the mortgagor is valid as between the parties thereto. Ahlman v. Meyer & Schurman, 19 Neb. 63 (26 N. W. 584).

Ratification of mortgage.

80. (1889.) A party being charged with embezzlement executed a chattel mortgage to secure the debt, and retained possession of the mortgaged property for about a year and a half, when he delivered the possession thereof to the mortgagee. In an action of replevin thereafter brought by the mortgagor to regain possession of the property, held, on the facts proved, that he had ratified the mortgage. Sanford v. Sornberger, 26 Neb. 295 (41 N. W. 1102).

81. (1892.) Instructions as to ratification of alleged void chattel mortgage by surrender of possession, held to state the law correctly. Sornberger v. Sanford, 34 Neb. 498 (52 N. W. 368).

II. FILING, RECORDING AND REGISTRATION.

Necessity to refile, see post, §§ 219-221.

Necessity of filing as against creditors of mortgagor, see Fraudulent Conveyances, §§ 217-236.

Failure to record as affecting creditors, see Fraudulent Conveyances, §§ 210-236.

Necessity of as between parties.

82. (1883.) A bill of sale in the nature of a chattel mortgage is good as between the parties to it without being filed, as the statute directs. Fitzgerald v. Andrews, 15 Neb. 52 (17 N. W. 370).

83. (1891.) As between the parties to a chattel mortgage the lien thereby created continues so long as theer is a subsisting debt, which can be enforced in the courts. The filing or refiling of a chattel mortgage, as required by statute, is for the protection of creditors and bona fide purchasers without notice, and not for the purpose of continuing the lien as between the parties to the mortgage. Sanford v. Munford, 31 Neb. 792 (48 N. W. 876).

84. (1893.) The filing of the mortgage is not essential as between the parties thereto. Bush v. Bank of Commerce, 38 Neb. 403 (56 N. W. 989).

85. (1896.) A chattel mortgage is good between the parties thereto, and all others, except creditors of the mortgagor or subsequent purchasers and mortgagees in good faith, though not filed as required by statute. Fuller v. Brownell & Co., 48 Neb. 145 (67 N. W. 6).

86. (1897.) A chattel mortgage delivered by the mortgagor unconditionally to an unauthorized third person, by whom, under the direction of the mortgagor, it was filed for record and subsequently accepted by the mortgagee, takes effect, as between the mortgagor and mortgagee, from the time of the first delivery; but not so as to persons who have acquired title to, an interest in, or a lien upon, the property, before the actual acceptance by the mortgagee. Rogers v. Heads Iron Foundry, 51 Neb. 39 (70 N. W. 527; 37 L. R. A. 429).

87. (1901.) Where a mortgage of real property is intended by the parties thereto to convey also personal property situated and in use upon the realty, while such mortgage would create a charge thereon between the parties, it cannot be given effect as against execution creditors of the mortgagor unless the instrument is duly filed as a chattel mortgage. Hillebrand v. Nelson, 1 Unof. 783 (95 N. W. 1068).

Method and sufficiency of filing.

88. (1884.) The object of the statute in requiring a copy of a chattel mortgage to be filed with the county clerk is to give notice to third parties of the existence of the mortgage, its terms and conditions, the amount secured thereby, and all other material conditions of the contract. In these respects the copy filed must be a "true copy" of the original mortgage. When this is done the law is complied with. Gillespie v. Brown & Ryan Bros., 16 Neb. 457 (20 N. W. 632).

89. (1884.) A chattel mortgage contained a provision that, if the mortgagor made default in any of the conditions of the mortgage, the mortgagee might take possession of the mortgaged property, and upon giving "5" day's notice sell it at public auction, or a sufficient amount thereof to pay the debt. The figure "5" was placed over the word "twenty" in the printed blank used, and "twenty" was erased. In the copy filed in the office of the county clerk, a similar printed blank being used, the word "twenty" was not erased nor was the figure "5" interlined, held, a substantial compliance with the statute. Gillespie v. Brown & Ryan Bros., 16 Neb. 457 (20 N. W. 632).

Evidence of filing.

90. (1899.) The filing of a chattel mortgage is not proven by the introduction in evidence of a copy of the instrument, even though the fact of filing may have been indorsed thereon. Drexel v. Murphy, 59 Neb. 210 (80 N. W. 813).

91. (1904.) Evidence, inferential in its nature, examined, and held sufficient to show that the mortgagor was a resident of the county where the mortgage was filed. Gosnell v. Webster, 70 Neb. 705 (97 N. W. 1060).

III. CONSTRUCTION AND OPERATION.

A. Parties and Debts or Liabilities Secured.

Debt secured in general.

92. (1887.) Where a mortgage is given by one co-surety to another, to secure him against a contingent liability as surety, and there is a conflict of testimony as to the amount to be secured, the question is one of fact for the jury. Sparks v. Wilson, 22 Neb. 112 (34 N. W. 111).

93. (1898.) A chattel mortgage generally will be construed to secure the debt and not merely its evidence. Therefore, while the original debt remains, the mortgage will not be defeated by a change in its form. Arlington Mill & Elevator Co. v. Yates, 57 Neb. 286 (77 N. W. 677).

Advances by mortgagee to save property.

94. (1904.) Evidence in an action to satisfy certain alleged advancements made to save and harvest a crop of mortgaged hemp, held sufficient to sustain a finding that such advancements were made for the benefit of subsequent mortgagees and should be allowed. Dickenson v. Columbus State Bank, 71 Neb. 260 (98 N. W. 813).

B. Property Mortgaged, and Estates and Interests of Parties Therein.

Property included.

95. (1882.) A chattel mortgage on "One bay mare eleven years old, named Tony; one grey horse about nine years old, named Pet; one sorrel mare four years old, named Bet;—fifty head of hogs from six weeks to two years old,—all of said property being owned and kept by me on my farm near Fort Calhoun, in Washington county, Nebraska," does not cover a colt and some pigs born after the mortgage was executed. Boggs v. Stanky, 13 Neb. 400 (14 N. W. 392).

96. (1884.) The question as to what property is covered by the description in the mortgage, is one of law for the court. Osborne v. McAllister, 15 Neb. 428 (19 N. W. 510).

97. (1884.) A mortgage on a "threshing machine" covers the horsepower by which the separator is propelled. Osborne v. McAllister, 15 Neb. 428 (19 N. W. 510)

98. (1890.) Where the mortgagors were permitted after the execution of the mortgage to sell goods in the same manner as if no mortgage had been given, and a considerable portion of the property on which the mortgage lien existed had been sold and replaced by other goods the mortgage does not cover the latter, since a mortgage on goods in this state is a specific lien which attaches to the goods mortgaged and not to goods in general. Wedgewood v. Citizens Nat. Bank, 29 Neb. 165 (45 N. W. 289).

99. (1893.) A mortgage upon a stock of merchandise, under a general description, attaches only to such merchandise as was in the stock when the mortgage was executed, and not to any afterwards purchased. Rockford Watch Co. v. Manifold, 36 Neb. 801 (55 N. W. 236).

100. (1894.) An instruction that "the chattel mortgage given in evidence, and the transfer or assignment of the note by the mortgagee, I. B. Hickok, to the plaintiff, would pass the legal title to the hay therein described to the plaintiff, if from the evidence in this case the jury believe that the witness N. L. Hughes, at the time of the execution of said mortgage, was the owner of said hay," is not open to the objection that it assumes that the hay in question was intended to be embraced in the mortgage. Love v. Putnam, 41 Neb. 86 (59 N. W. 691).

101. (1898.) The lien of a chattel mortgage on a stock of merchandise attaches to the articles in stock at the time the mortgage is executed, but generally does not attach to future additions to the stock. Midland State Bank v. Kilpatrick-Koch Dry Goods Co., 54 Neb. 410 (74 N. W. 837).

102. (1902.) A mortgage upon a stock of merchandise under the general description attaches only to such merchandise as was in stock when the mortgage was executed, and not to stock afterwards added by purchase. Godfrey & Sons Co. v. Citizens' Nat. Bank of Norfolk, 64 Neb 477 (90 N. W. 239).

Parol proof to aid in construction.

103. (1899.) Where the description of property in a chattel mortgage is clear, and free from all ambiguity, parol proof is inadmissible to show the extent and meaning of language employed. Drexel v. Murphy, 59 Neb. 210 (80 N. W. 813).

Title and ownership of property.

104. (1876.) A mortgage of chattels transfers to the mortgagee the whole legal title to the thing mortgaged, subject only to be defeated by performance of the condition, but the mortgagor may redeem the property at any time before sale. Adams v. Nebraska City Bank, 4 Neb 370. [Overruled. 40 Neb. 892; 42 Neb. 229; 42 Neb. 607; 44 Neb. 165; 45 Neb. 771; 47 Neb. 256; 47 Neb. 319; 50 Neb. 885.]

105. (1889.) A chattel mortgage is a security in which the legal title to the property mortgaged passes to the mortgagee but in which the mortgagor retains a beneficial interest. Gillilan v. Kendall, 26 Neb. 82 (42 N. W. 281; 18 Am. St. Rep. 766).

106. (1894.) The mortgagee under a chattel mortgage acquires a lien only upon the property conveyed and not the legal title thereof. Bedford v. Van Cott, 42 Neb. 229 (60 N. W. 572).

107. (1894.) The legal title to property pledged by a chattel mortgage remains in the mortgagor until divested by foreclosure proceedings and sale in pursuance of the statute; and until the title of the mortgagor is thus divested, the mortgagee has merely a lien upon the property. Musser v. King, 40 Neb. 892 (59 N. W. 744; 42 Am. St. Rep. 700); (1894) Randall v. Persons, 42 Neb. 607 (60 N. W. 898); (1895) Camp v. Pollock, 45 Neb. 771 (64 N. W. 231); (1896) Murray v. Loushman, 47 Neb. 256 (66 N. W. 413); (1896) Gould v. Armagost, 46 Neb. 897 (65 N. W. 1064); (1897) Robinson v. Kilpatrick-Koch Dry Goods Co., 50 Neb. 795 (70 N. W. 378); (1897) Omaha Fire Ins. Co. v. Thompson, 50 Neb. 580 (70 N. W. 30); (1898) Drummond Carriage Co. v. Mills, 54 Neb. 417 (74 N. W. 966; 69 Am. St. Rep, 719; 40 L. R. A. 761); (1902) Union Stock Yards Nat. Bank v. Thurston County, 65 Neb. 410 (92 N. W. 1022).

C. Lien and Priority.

Liens.

——— Creation in general.

108. (1892.) Where two persons buy a stallion giving two notes, signed by each in payment and one note is paid with money largely derived from the horse, and, with consent of the other, one partner mortgages the horse to secure a loan in order to pay the second note, the mortgagee has a lien upon the horse for the amount of his loan. Clay v Greenwood, 35 Neb. 736 (53 N. W. 659).

109. (1899.) A mortgagee of chattels who files the instrument before the rights or liens of third parties intervene is entitled to the property as against them. Nat. Bank of Commerce v. Bryden, 59 Neb. 75 (80 N. W. 276).

——— Priority as to assignee.

110. (1896.) The holder of an unrecorded chattel mortgage from the assignor has a right to the mortgaged property superior to that of the assignee, unless the case is one where the statute expressly confers upon the assignee the powers of the creditor. Lancaster County Bank v. Gillilan, 49 Neb. 165 (68 N. W. 352).

111. (1896.) The holder of an unrecorded chattel mortgage from the assignor has a right to the mortgaged property superior to that of the assignee, unless the case is one where the statute expressly confers upon the assignee the powers of a creditor. Lancaster County Bank v. Gillilan, 49 Neb. 165 (68 N. W. 352).

112. (1906.) If the mortgagee transfers the same to a third party, and afterwards takes the second mortgage on the same description of property, he takes his right of selection subject to the right so transferred to the first assignee. And if he afterwards assigns the second mortgage, such assignee will take no greater right than his assignor had. South Omaha Nat. Bank v. McGillin, 77 Neb. 6 (108 N. W. 257).

——— Priority over lien for rent.

113. (1889.) A chattel mortgage executed upon a crop of growing wheat, and without notice of a landlord's unrecorded lien for rent, is superior to such lien for rent. Gandy v. Dewey, 28 Neb. 175 (44 N. W. 106).

114. (1899.) A lease executed October 16, 1890, contained a provision that it should operate as a lien on all the personal property of the lessees at any time in or upon the demised premises, to secure payment of rent. The building leased was in process of erection for use as a hotel and was not completed until January, 1891. The furniture was ordered for the hotel after the lease had been made; and because of delays in finishing the building was not placed in the hotel until in December, 1890, and January, 1891. In January, 1895, there was rent unpaid, and the lessees' successors mortgaged the furniture to secure debts by them owing to other parties who were aware of the above noted provisions in the lease. Held, That the mortgagees were entitled to the first lien upon the furniture mortgaged. New Lincoln Hotel Co. v. Shears, 57 Neb. 478 (78 N. W. 25; 73 Am. St. Rep. 524; 43 L. R. A. 588).

115. (1873.) A mortgage of fixtures erected by a tenant has a prior equity over the lien of the landlord for unpaid rent or taxes. Lamphere v. Lowe, 3 Neb. 131.

——— Priority over subsequent mortgagee.

116. (1881.) Where a senior mortgagee of chattels, for the purpose of depriving of his security a junior mortgagee of a part of the same property, fraudulently releases that portion on which his mortgage is the exclusive lien, the same being adequate security, he will not be permitted, to the prejudice of the latter, to go upon the property covered by the second mortgage for payment of his demand. Jordan v. Hamilton County Bank, 11 Neb. 499 (9 N. W. 654).

117. (1897.) In a replevin suit by a first mortgagee against an attaching officer, to which the holder of a second mortgagee was not made a party, the holder of the third mortgage intervened and obtained a judgment to the effect that the surplus proceeds of the sale of the property, after the satisfaction of plaintiff's mortgage, be paid to the intervener. Held, Not binding on the holder of the second mortgage, who was entitled to a prior lien on such surplus. Sarpy County State Bank v. Hinkle, 53 Neb. 108 (73 N. W. 462).

118. (1904.) A verbal chattel mortgage, not coupled with possession by the mortgagee, will not take precedence over a subsequent written mortgage, taken without notice of the secret lien of the verbal mortgage. Mueller v. Parcel, 71 Neb. 795 (99 N. W. 684).

119. (1906.) When two mortgages are executed on parts of the same herd of cattle, the mortgagees have an equal right of selection, and the one first exercising that right is entitled to the possession of the cattle so selected by him to the exclusion of the rights of the other, if need be. South

Omaha Nat. Bank v. McGillin, 77 Neb. 6 (108 N. W. 257).

——— Priority over attachment or execution creditors.

120. (1883.) A debt being past due, a mortgagee of property securing such debt is entitled to possession of the property as against an execution purchaser of the same. Stuart v. Alexander, 14 Neb. 37 (14 N. W. 655).

121. (1886.) After the mortgagee has reduced the goods to possession for the purpose of foreclosing the mortgage in conformity to its stipulations his lien will take precedence of those of creditors whose attachments or executions are thereafter levied, nothwithstanding the existence of a stipulation such as above referred to or the fact that it has been acted upon by the mortgagor. Kay v. Noll, 20 Neb. 380 (30 N. W. 269).

122. (1888.) A party who obtains machinery on which there is a valid chattel mortgage cannot divest the lien by attaching such machinery as a fixture in a roller mill. Grand Island Banking Co. v. Frey, 25 Neb. 66 (40 N. W. 599; 13 Am. St. Rep. 478).

123. (1893.) Mortgagee of chattels in entitled to hold same as against an officer holding a writ of attachment that runs against his mortgagor. Hakanson v. Brodke, 36 Neb. 42 (53 N. W. 1033).

124. (1904.) A properly filed chattel mortgage upon "growing hay" stipulating that it shall be cut and stacked, and that the mortgage shall cover the same in stacks, creates a lien upon the hay in stacks upon the premises where cut, superior to the lien of a levy under execution issued upon a judgment against the mortgagor made at a time when it was apparent the hay in the stacks was of the annual crop described in the mortgage. Hayes v. First State Bank of Bertrand, 5 Unof. 298 (98 N. W. 423).

——— Priority of lien for repair.

125. (1898.) One bestowing labor and skill on a chattel bailed to him for that purpose, thereby increasing its value, has a lien thereon superior to the lien of a prior chattel mortgage. Drummond Carriage Co. v. Mills, 54 Neb. 417 (74 N. W. 966; 69 Am. St. Rep. 719; 40 L. R. A. 761).

——— Priority over lien for keep of animals.

126. (1881.) A mortgage on a team of horses is superior to the lien of a livery stable keeper, who has not retained possession. Marseilles Mfg. Co. v. Morgan, 12 Neb. 66 (10 N. W. 462. [Overruled. Bedford v. Van Cott, 42 Neb. 229.]

127. (1887.) The act of the council and house of representatives of the late territory of Nebraska, entitled "An act to provide for liens upon live stock for their keeping," approved February 18, 1867, examined, and held, not to give a lien upon live stock for their keep superior to the lien of a previously executed, delivered, and recorded mortgage thereon. State Bank of Nebraska v. Lowe, 22 Neb. 68 (33 N. W. 482).

128. (1902.) Under the statute of this state, an agister's lien is inferior to that of a prior valid chattel mortgage, properly of record, but is superior to a mortgage executed after it has attached and while the property is in the possession of the agister. Becker v. Brown, 65 Neb. 264 (91 N. W. 178).

——— Lien for damages from trespassing animals.

129. (1887.) The lien of a taker-up of animals is not superior to a prior recorded chattel mortgage. State Bank of Nebraska v. Lowe, 22 Neb. 68 (33 N. W. 482).

130. (1903.) A mortagee of cattle can not, in a proceeding under the herd law, be bound by an award made without giving him a hearing or an opportunity to be heard. Notice to the owner of cattle in such a proceeding is not notice to the mortgagee. Goff v. Byers Bros. & Co., 70 Neb. 1 (96 N. W. 1037).

——— Priority as to purchasers.

131. (1882.) If a creditor receives his pay in mortgaged property, with knowledge of the mortgage, he will take it subject to the mortgage. Earle v. Burch, 21 Neb. 702 (33 N. W. 254).

132. (1889.) The holder of an unrecorded contract for the sale of a vacant lot, erected a building thereon which she mortgaged to plaintiff. She afterwards executed mortgages on the lot to defendant who also assumed a mechanic's lien on the property. After the plaintiff foreclosed its mortgage and bought in the building, defendant instead of standing on its rights under its mortgages, took an assignment of the contract of sale, and perfected the purchase thereunder, taking also a quitclaim deed from the mortgagor. Held, that plaintiff acquired a prior title to the building. Holt

County Bank v. Tootle, Livingston & Co., 25 Neb. 408 (41 N. W. 291).

133. (1889.) A purchased property under an assumed name from B who was unacquainted with him, and gave a mortgage for the price in such name. The purchaser stated that his residence was in Webster county, which was correct, and the mortgage was duly filed in the proper office in that county. Subsequent to the filing of the mortgage. A sold the property to C, under his true name, after C had examined the records for chattel mortgages executed by A, and finding none. In an action of replevin by B against C for the possession of the mortgaged property, it was held that B should recover judgment. Alexander Bros. v. Graves, 25 Neb. 453 (41 N. W. 290; 13 Am. St. Rep. 501).

134. (1889.) A chattel mortgage upon growing grain is not constructive notice to third parties of a mortgage on the same grain thereafter lawfully placed in crib or bin; and a dealer in grain who in good faith in open market purchases such grain from the mortgagor, and receives it at his warehouse, will take it free from the lien of the mortgage. Gillilan v. Kendall, 26 Neb. 82 (42 N. W. 281; 18 Am. St. Rep. 766).

135. (1892.) A purchaser who has actual notice of the claim of a third party in the property, purchases subject to such rights, although the mortgage under which the third party claims is not upon record. Railsback, Mitchell & Co. v. Patton, 34 Neb. 490 (52 N. W. 277. [Overruled. 39 Neb. 343; 2 Unof. 157.]

136. (1893.) One who purchases personal property with knowledge of a prior, unrecorded mortgage thereon, takes subject to the lien created by such mortgage. Wagner v. Steffn, 38 Neb. 392 (56 N. W. 993).

137. (1896.) A mortgagee of a conditional vendee in possession of chattels is not a purchaser within the meaning of section 26, chapter 32, Compiled Statutes, and the rights of the conditional vendor thereof are prior and paramount to the lien of such mortgagee under his mortgage. McCormick Harvesting Machine Co. v. Callen, 48 Neb. 849 (67 N. W. 863).

——Priority over vendor of property.

138. (1887.) A chattel mortgage, executed by the mortgagor in possession as owner, although the legal title was not to pass to him until the chattels were paid for, where such contract of conditional sale was not filed for record, will take precedence over the secret lien of the party claiming to be the real owner of the property. Manning v. Cunningham, 21 Neb. 288, (31 N. W. 933).

139. (1907.) The mortgagee of a conditional vendee of personal property is not a purchaser within the meaning of section 26, chapter 32, Compiled Statutes, 1907. and cannot by his mortgage acquire any rights superior to the conditional vendor, even if the contract of conditional sale is not filed as required by said section. Racine-Sattley Co. v. Meinen, 79 Neb. 33 (114 N. W. 602).

——Priority over tax lien.

140. (1895.) The lien of taxes is superior to the lien of a chattel mortgage executed after the tax list has been delivered to the county treasurer. Reynolds v. Fisher, 43 Neb. 172 (61 N. W. 695).

141. (1896.) The lien of taxes assessed on personalty is paramount to the lien of a chattel mortgage executed after the delivery of the tax list to the county treasurer. Farmers Loan & Trust Co. v. Memminger, 48 Neb. 17 (66 N. W. 1014).

142. (1900.) A lien for taxes upon the property of the tax debtor is inferior to that of a chattel mortgage lien antedating the time the tax lien attaches. Chamberlain Banking House v. Woolsey, 60 Neb. 516 (83 N. W. 729).

143. (1900.) Where a sheriff levies distress warrant for delinquent taxes for several years upon property of the tax debtor. upon which a valid chattel mortgage exists, the seizure and sale of the property is wrongful and unauthorized to the extent and for the years the mortgage lien is prior and superior to the lien for delinquent taxes. Chamberlain Banking House v. Woolsey, 60 Neb. 516 (83 N. W. 729).

144. (1902.) A lien for taxes upon the property of the tax debtor is inferior to that of a chattel mortgage lien antedating the time the tax lien attaches. Blanchard. Shelley & Rogers v. Logan County, 2 Unof 516 (89 N. W. 376).

145. (1902.) Where a sheriff levies distress warrants for delinquent taxes for several years upon property of the tax debtor upon which a valid chattel mortgage exists, the seizure and sale of the property is wrongful and unauthorized to the extent, and for the years, the mortgage lien

146. (1903.) While the lien of a tax upon personal property is inferior to a chattel mortgage given after the taxes were levied, but before the tax books came into the hands of the collector, such mortgage is inferior to the lien of taxes levied and assessed against the mortgagor, for subsequent years, upon the property mortgaged remaining in his possession. Woolsey v. Chamberlain Banking House, 70 Neb. 194 (97 N. W. 241).

147. (1907.) The lien of a chattel mortgage taken before the tax books were delivered to the treasurer is superior to the lien for taxes for that year, created by such delivery, under the provisions of section 139 of the revenue law of 1879 (laws 1879, p. 332) but inferior to the lien for subsequent years. Platte Valley Milling Co. v. Malmsten, 79 Neb. 730 (113 N. W. 229).

——— Waiver or abandonment of lien.

148. (1882.) Where the mortgagee is surety on an undertaking in replevin and takes the property under his mortgage and delivers it to the judgment creditor in replevin, he thereby surrenders his claim to the property under the mortgage. Rich v. Savage, 12 Neb. 413 (11 N. W. 863).

149. (1888.) Evidence held to sustain finding that the mortgagee had released the lien of the mortgage as against a purchaser and had accepted mortgage on other property in lieu thereof. Littlejohn v. Pearson, 23 Neb. 192 (36 N. W. 477).

150. (1893.) The delivery of mortgaged property to a stranger by a mortgagee is not an abandonment of the lien of the mortgage, in favor of a subsequent mortgagee. Rogers v. Heads Iron Foundry, 51 Neb. 39 (70 N. W. 527; 37 L. R. A. 429).

151. (1896.) The evidence examined, and held to sustain the finding of the district court, that the appellants had by their conduct estopped themselves from claiming or asserting a mortgage lien upon certain chattel property. Brown v. Eno, 48 Neb. 538 (67 N. W. 434).

152. (1899.) Where a mortgagee of chattels authorizes the mortgagor to sell the property described in the mortgage at private sale, and with the proceeds pay the mortgage debt, and the sale is accordingly made, the mortgagee has thereby waived his lien. Drexel v. Murphy, 59 Neb. 210 (80 N. W. 813).

153. (1903.) A mortgagee of chattels does not waive or lose his lien by causing an attachment to be levied upon the mortgaged property. First National Bank of Holdrege v. Johnson, 68 Neb. 641 (94 N. W. 837).

Mortgage as notice to subsequent mortgagees or purchasers.

See, also, ante, §§ 82-91.

154. (1889.) A mortgage upon a growing crop of corn is not notice to a dealer who purchases the same in open market after it is husked and placed in cribs or piles. Gillilan v. Kendall, 26 Neb. 82 (42 N. W. 281; 18 Am. St. Rep. 766).

155. (1893.) A mortgage upon growing corn is not constructive notice to a dealer in grain who, in good faith, in open market purchases such corn from the mortgagor after the same has been husked by the latter and placed in a pile or crib. But the rule does not prevail where the person who assisted in husking the corn afterwards becomes the purchaser, while it is yet in the same pile or crib, and receives it there, having at the time actual knowledge that it is the same corn he helped harvest. In such case the purchaser will take the corn subject to the lien of the mortgage. Fines v. Bolin, 36 Neb. 621 (54 N. W. 990).

156. (1899.) When standing corn covered by a chattel mortgage which is sold for future delivery is husked and delivered in execution of the contract, the purchaser is presumed to know that it is part of the crop covered by the mortgage. Chicago Lumber Co. v. Hunter, 58 Neb. 328 (78 N. W. 619).

157. (1899.) One who bargains for the future delivery of a quantity of corn to be taken from the stalk in a designated field is charged with notice of a then existing and duly recorded chattel mortgage in which such corn is described as a growing crop. Chicago Lumber Co. v. Hunter, 58 Neb. 328 (78 N. W. 619).

158. (1899.) Although the description in a chattel mortgage may be insufficient to impart notice to innocent third parties, such fact will not avail a purchaser from the mortgagor who was appraised of the lien on the property before he parted with the consideration. Drexel v. Murphy, 59 Neb. 210 (80 N. W. 813).

Record as notice.

159. (1886.) Where a chattel mortgage is duly filed in the county where the mortgagor resides, and is constructive notice there, it will be constructive notice into whatever county the mortgagor may remove with the property. Cool v. Roche, 20 Neb. 550 (31 N. W. 367).

www.libtool.com.cn

160. (1888.) A chattel mortgage duly filed in the county where the mortgagor resides is constructive notice of the existence of such mortgage and will be constructive notice in any county to which the mortgagor may remove the property. Grand Island Banking Co. v. Frey, 25 Neb. 66 (40 N. W. 599; 13 Am. St. Rep. 478).

161. (1889.) The filing of a chattel mortgage on a building erected by the holder of an unrecorded contract of sale of the lot, is not notice thereof as against a subsequent mortgage of the lot executed by the same party. Holt County Bank v. Tootle, Livingston & Co., 25 Neb. 408 (41 N. W. 291).

Failure to file evidence of fraud.

162. (1895.) The mere failure to record a mortgage raises no presumption that it is void. Grand Island Banking Co. v. Costello, 45 Neb. 119 (63 N. W. 376).

Failure of clerk to index.

163. (1881.) If a chattel mortgage be duly filed in the office of the county clerk, as required by section 73, chapter 43, Revised Statutes 1866 (Gen. Stats., ch. 25, sec. 14), as amended by the act of February 15, 1877, the mere failure of the clerk to properly index the same, as required by the next section, will not render it void as to a subsequent mortgagee without actual notice of its existence. Jordan v. Hamilton County Bank, 11 Neb. 499 (9 N. W. 654).

Action to establish liens.

——— Nature and jurisdiction.

164. (1901.) An action by a mortgagee to ascertain the priorities of liens, and to charge a junior incumbrancer as trustee of the proceeds of a foreclosure sale, and to apply such proceeds to the prior mortgage, in an action properly cognizable as a proceeding in equity. Bank of Stockham v. Alter, 61 Neb. 359 (85 N. W. 300).

——— Evidence.

165. (1891.) In an action to enjoin the transfer of a mortgage on stock in an abstracting company and to establish priority of liens thereon, evidence held to establish the prior equities of defendant. Holyoke v. McMurtry, 33 Neb. 548 (50 N. W. 767).

166. (1892.) A chattel mortgage was made October 18, 1888, and filed for record December 21, 1888, at 1:15 P. M. On December 18, 1888, the same mortgagor made a second mortgage on the same and other property to secure certain sureties who had signed his notes. This mortgage was filed for record five minutes after the first. In a contest between the mortgagees, it did not appear that the second mortgagees had paid any actual consideration therefor. Held, That to entitle them to priority it must be made to appear that but for the failure of the first mortgagee to file his mortgage for record they would not have become sureties for the mortgagor; that he was insolvent and that they would be compelled to pay the debt. Patrick v. Paulson, 34 Neb. 416 (51 N. W. 1029).

167. (1893.) The question in this case being merely whether or not two certain chattel mortgages covered property sold, and the evidence being insufficient to establish the identity claimed, the mortgagee's claim of a lien upon the property is denied. First Nat. Bank of Mount Pleasant v. Davis, 38 Neb. 238 (56 N. W. 975).

168. (1898.) A chattel mortgage remaining in possession of the mortgagor without actual delivery may create a valid lien where the parties intend it shall have that effect; but such intention will not be presumed, and a finding on conflicting evidence that no lien was created will not be disturbed. Western Assurance Co. v. Kilpatrick, 54 Neb. 241 (74 N. W. 592).

IV. RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF PARTIES.

Possession or control of property.

169. (1883.) Where a bill of sale or chattel mortgage conveys, in absolute terms, the entire interest of the seller, without reservation, the vendee or mortgagee may, without demand take possession of the property whenever he sees fit to do so. In such case the instrument itself is a continuing authority to him to do so, which he may exercise at his own pleasure. Fitzgerald v. Andrews, 15 Neb. 52 (17 N. W. 370).

170. (1890.) After a debt secured by a chattel mortgage becomes due, the mortgagee is entitled to the possession of the mortgaged property and may maintain an action to recover the same, but after a judgment in his favor for the possession, unless there is a special finding as to his interest, he is liable to account to the mortgagor, and if more has been received for the property than the amount of the debt, an action will lie to recover the same. Lathrop v. Cheney, 29 Neb. 454 (45 N. W. 617).

171. (1894.) A mortgage gives to the mortgagee no right of possession of the chattels mortgaged when the note thereby secured is wholly without consideration. McGhee v. First Nat. Bank of Tobias, 40 Neb. 92 (58 N. W. 537).

172. (1895.) There is no presumption that a mortgagee of chattels before condition broken has any right to the possession as against the mortgagor. Camp v. Pollock, 45 Neb. 771 (64 N. W. 231).

173. (1896.) The indorsement of notes secured by chattel mortgage, as collateral security for a debt of the mortgagee, passes the mortgage security to the indorsee of the notes, and such indorsee is, as against both mortgagor and mortgagee, entitled, on breach of condition, to the possession of the mortgaged property. Houck v. Linn, 48 Neb. 227 (66 N. W. 1103).

174. (1898.) A chattel mortgage made and filed for record in accordance with an agreement between the parties thereto that the mortgagor would give security of that kind, prima facie vested the mortgagee with the right of possession of the property mortgaged as against an officer levying on the said property in the interval of time between such filing and the mortgagee's acquisition of knowledge that such filing had actually taken place. Rein v. Kendall, 55 Neb. 583 (75 N. W. 1104).

Conversion by mortgagor.

175. (1897.) Where the mortgagor converts the chattels into cash and deposits the money with an agent having notice of the lien, the mortgagee may sue the agent for the proceeds of the property, and the fact that the former did not pursue and seize the chattels does not afford the agent a defense to the action. Alter v. Bank of Stockham, 53 Neb. 223 (73 N. W. 667).

176. (1896.) The measure of damages in an action by a mortgagee for the conversion of mortgaged chattels is the amount of the mortgage, not exceeding the value of the property. Kasper v. Walla, 49 Neb. 288 (68 N. W. 476).

Conversion by mortgagee.

177. (1891.) Where a mortgagee of chattels unlawfully seizes the mortgaged property before there has been any default in payment, and before any condition in the mortgage has been broken, the mortgagor may at once maintain replevin or sue for conversion, and such actions are barred after four years from the date of the unlawful seizure, rather than the date of the maturity of the note. Brashier v. Tolleth, 31 Neb. 622 (48 N. W. 398).

177*a*. (1898.) A mortgagee of chattels who is out of possession, and not entitled to possession by his mortgage, cannot maintain an action against a stranger for conversion. Hill v. Campbell Commission Co., 54 Neb. 59 (74 N. W. 388).

178. (1892.) A mortgagee, after due notice, may sell a sufficient amount of the mortgaged property to satisfy the mortgage debt; but if he sell more than sufficient to satisfy the same and costs necessarily incurred, he will be liable for conversion of such excess. Omaha Auction & Storage Co. v. Rogers, 35 Neb. 61 (52 N. W. 826); Skow v. Locke, 72 Neb. 681 (101 N. W. 340).

179. (1892.) In an action by a chattel mortgagor against the mortgagee for conversion of the property, where the defendant justifies under a provision in the mortgage authorizing him to take immediate possession when he felt insecure, he may prove any facts tending to show the conduct of the mortgagors in regard to the chattels, but cannot prove mere rumors or reports. Rector-Wilhelmy Co. v. Nissen, 35 Neb. 716 (53 N. W. 670).

180. (1896.) The mortgagee's right to the use of chattels mortgaged is, in the absence of a special agreement, merely such as is incident to the foreclosure proceeding, and the breach of his obligation in that regard is an actionable wrong. Murray v. Loushman, 47 Neb. 256 (66 N. W. 413).

181. (1896.) In an action of conversion by a mortgagee against an officer who seized the chattels under a writ in favor of mortgagor's creditors, the measure of damages is the market value of the property when converted, with interest, deducting the market value of any property returned to, and received by, the mortgagee and the proceeds of any property of which he has received the benefit. Coburn v. Watson, 48 Neb. 257 (67 N. W. 171).

182. (1903.) Where the mortgagee by its terms provides for a seizure of the property if it or any part of it is disposed of or taken out of the county without the mortgagee's assent, a sale in the open market of a substantial part of the wheat covered by the mortgage, without the mortgagee's assent, and against his express prohibition, will entitle the mortgagee to recover possession of enough of the remainder to satisfy his claim. Allen v. Cerny, 68 Neb. 211 (94 N. W. 151).

183. (1901.) A second mortgageeof chattels cannot recover damages in conversion against the first mortgagee in possession unless the value of the property at the time of the alleged conversion was greater than the amount due upon the first mortgage. Dempster Mill Mfg. Co. v. Wright, 1 Unof. 666 (95 N. W. 806).

183*a*. (1901.) In an action for the wrongful conversion of a threshing machine by a mortgagee who claimed foreclosure by reason of failure of payment, it being claimed an extension of time was given in consideration of assignment of threshing accounts, an instruction that if the accounts were not turned over to defendant as agreed releases him from the contract, properly refused. Huber Mfg. Co. v. Gottchall, 1 Unof. 548 (96 N. W. 611).

184. (1902.) Where a mortgage has been taken upon a running stock of goods, expressly describing them as "goods now in stock," a mortgagee who has seized the stock by replevin from mortgagor should be required to account to the latter's garnishing creditor for all goods actually seized, and which were not in the stock when mortgaged. Tolerton, Stetson & Co. v. First Nat. Bank of Wayne, 63 Neb. 674 (88 N. W. 865).

Conversion by third persons.

185. (1882.) Where mortgaged chattels have been wrongfully seized and sold at the suit of a creditor of the mortgagor, the mortgagee has a choice of remedies; he may either replevy them, or recover their value at the time of the conversion in an action for damages. Peckinbaugh v. Quillin, 12 Neb. 586 (12 N. W. 104).

186. (1898.) Evidence held insufficient to show that a sheriff's seizure of chattels under writs of attachment resulted in injury to the interest of a junior mortgagee. Locke v. Shreck, 54 Neb. 472 (74 N. W. 970).

187. (1902.) Mortgagees holding mortgages of various priority on the same goods, who are jointly in possession of them, may join in an action against the sheriff for depriving them of possession and converting the goods to his own use. Trompen v. Yates, 66 Neb. 525 (92 N. W. 647).

Sale of property by mortgagor.

188. (1900.) Where mortgaged property has been sold by the mortgagor without the knowledge or consent of the mortgagee, such mortgagee may either disavow the sale and retake the property or ratify it and recover the proceeds of the sale. Burke v. First Nat. Bank, 61 Neb. 20 (84 N W. 408; 87 Am. St. Rep. 447).

189. (1906.) The making of a written contract by a mortgagor of chattels in possession, providing for the sale and future disposition of the property, and providing for the payment or satisfaction of the mortgage indebtedness, is neither malum in se nor malum prohibitum. Morris v. Persing, 76 Neb. 80 (107 N. W. 218).

Rights under insecurity clause.

190. (1887.) A provision in a mortgage that the mortgagee may take possession of the property at any time he feels insecure, and advertise and sell the same, does not authorize him to apply the proceeds to the payment of a note not then due. Loeb & Hirsch v. Milner, 21 Neb. 392 (32 N. W. 205).

191. (1888.) Where the mortgage provides that the debt shall draw interest and the debt is to be paid at certain times named, and thereby there is an implied agreement that the mortgagor shall remain in possession of the property until there is a default in the payment of the money or some part thereof, a provision in the mortgage that, "If the mortgagee shall at any time feel unsafe or insecure he may seize and sell, as aforesaid, the property," will not authorize such mortgagee without cause to seize and sell such property before the debt becomes due. The words "feels unsafe and insecure" do not mean that he may exercise an arbitrary discretion in the premises, but the mortgagor must be about to do or has done some act which tends to impair the security of the mortgagee. Newlean & Hoard v. Oleson, 22 Neb. 717 (36 N. W. 155; 3 Am. St. Rep. 286).

192. (1890.) Where a mortgage is executed on buildings situated on leased land and an assignment of the lease is made to the mortgagee and a contract entered into by the parties, which provided that the mortgagee and assignee should take immediate possession of the premises, but when he has been paid in full to surrender possession to the mortgagors and to reassign the lease to them, and the mortgage also contained a provision that the mortgagee should collect all rents, issues, and profits to be credited upon the notes secured as fast as collected, save so much as is necessary for the payment of the ground rent, insurance and taxes, it is the duty of such mortgagee to apply the rents collected to the payment of the insurance, rent and taxes, and he cannot declare a forfeiture and sell the property under the mortgage before the first note becomes due. The mortgagee is also entitled to an accounting. Edling v. Bradford, 30 Neb. 593 (46 N. W. 836).

193. (1891.) The fact of a mortgagee's insecurity must be apparent to justify advertisement and sale of the property before the debt falls due. Hull v. Godfrey, 31 Neb. 204 (47 N. W. 850).

194. (1891.) Evidence held insufficient to justify mortgagee to seize a harvester under an insecurity clause. Case Plow Co. v. Marr, 33 Neb. 215 (49 N. W. 1119)

195. (1891.) Where a chattel mortgage provides that the debt shall draw interest and shall be paid at certain stated times, and thereby is an implied agreement that the mortgagor shall remain in possession of the property until there is a default in payment, a provision that "if the mortgagee shall at any time feel unsafe or insecure, he may seize and sell the property," will not authorize such mortgagee, without evident cause, to seize and sell such property before the debt becomes due. The words "feels unsafe and insecure" do not mean that he may exercise an arbitrary discretion in the premises, but the mortgagor must be about to do, or has done, some act which tends to impair the security. Lichtenberger v. Johnson, 32 Neb. 185 (49 N. W. 336).

196. (1896.) The right of a mortgagee under a clause authorizing him to take the chattels, when he feels insecure, cannot be exercised arbitrarily, but depends upon some act of mortgagor which tends to impair the security. Brown v. Hogan, 49 Neb. 746 (69 N. W. 100).

197. (1903.) The discretion conferred upon the mortgagee by a clause in a chattel mortgage, authorizing him to take possession of the mortgaged property whenever he may deem himself unsafe or insecure, is not to be exercised arbitrarily; such belief must rest on reasonable grounds. Meyer v. Michaels, 69 Neb. 138 (95 N. W. 63).

198. (1903.) The words "feels unsafe and insecure," in a chattel mortgage do not mean that the mortgagee may exercise an arbitrary discretion in the premises, but the mortgagor must be about to do or must have done some act which tends to impair the security of the mortgagee in order that the latter's right to take possession may become operative. Allen v. Cerny, 68 Neb 211 (94 N. W. 151).

199. (1903.) The facts that would warrant mortgagee to believe himself insecure so as to justify him in taking possession of the property must be such as did not exist, or of which the mortgagee was ignorant, at the time of taking the mortgage. Meyer v. Michaels, 69 Neb. 138 (95 N. W. 63).

Costs on usurious contract.

200. (1893.) Where, in an action by a mortgagee against the mortgagor to recover the mortgaged chattels, it is established that the mortgage was given to secure a usurious loan of money, the defendant is entitled to recover costs, although the verdict is in favor of the plaintiff. Rodgers v. Graham, 36 Neb. 730 (55 N. W. 243).

Action for possession.

201. (1886.) Under a chattel mortgage of a stock of goods, with possession and power to sell in the mortgagor, an instruction that if such possession and control was found to be given the mortgage was void, was properly refused. Ahlman v. Meyer & Schurman, 19 Neb. 63 (26 N. W. 584).

202. (1895.) A mortgagee of chattels cannot maintain a possessory action against a stranger unless as between mortgagor and mortgagee the latter has the right of possession. Camp v. Pollock, 45 Neb. 771 (64 N. W. 231).

203. (1898.) An officer who seizes mortgaged chattels on mesne or final process against the mortgagor is not liable in an action by the mortgagee if he does nothing to place the property beyond the reach of the mortgagee or to prevent him from taking possession of it when his right of possession accrues. Locke v. Shreck, 54 Neb. 472 (74 N. W. 970).

204. (1903.) An allegation of possession under a chattel mortgage, by agreement with the mortgagor, renders unnecessary any allegation of demand of payment of demand notes secured by the mortgage, in order to show the mortgagee's right of possession. Taylor v. Harle-Haas Drug Co., 69 Neb. 546 (96 N. W. 182).

Finding in action for possession as bar to subsequent action.

205. (1890.) Where mortgagee, after an alleged default in the payment of the debt, takes possession of the mortgaged property and afterwards, when an action of replevin is brought by the mortgagor, is adjudged to be entitled to the right of property and right of possession thereof, there being no finding as to his special interest under his mortgage, the judgment will not bar an action for an accounting for the proceeds of the property mortgaged. Lathrop v. Cheney, 29 Neb. 454 (45 N. W. 617).

Rights and liabilities of junior and senior mortgagee.

206. (1888.) A executed to B a chattel mortgage upon a horse, and other property, and before the maturity of the notes secured by the mortgage, executed to C a chattel mortgage on the same property, expressly stating in the mortgage that it was subject to the mortgage executed to B. Afterwards A and B sold the horse to D for its full value, and applied the proceeds of the sale to the partial payment of A's debt to B. Upon the horse being delivered to D under his purchase, C asserted his mortgage, and took possession of the property for the purpose of foreclosure, when B replevied it. Held, That the sale of the horse to D by A and B, being made in good faith and for the full value, effectually foreclosed the title of A, as well as that of C, and that as against A and C, B was entitled to the property. Faeth v. Leary, 23 Neb. 267 (36 N. W. 513).

207. (1890.) In an action by a senior mortgagee against a junior mortgagee for the conversion of two mares which it is alleged were described in the senior mortgage as one dark brown mare, age five years, weight about 1,200 pounds, of the value of $175, and one dark brown mare, right hind foot white, age five years, weight about 1,200 pounds, of the value of $175, and in the junior mortgage as one dark brown mare five years old called "Dolly," and one light brown mare four years old called "Pet," held, that the testimony showed that the mares were properly described in the senior mortgage and that such mortgage was duly filed for record; it was notice therefore to the junior mortgagee, of the existence of the lien of the senior mortgagee, and that the senior mortgagee had the superior right. Shreck v. Spain, 30 Neb. 887 (47 N. W. 419).

208. (1890.) In a controversy between holders of chattel mortgages, held to be no error in giving and refusing instructions set out in opinion. Wood River Bank v. Kelley, 29 Neb. 590 (46 N. W. 86)

209. (1892.) In an action by a second mortgagee against a first mortgagee based on an allegation that a private sale of the mortgaged goods by defendant was for an inadequate price, the instructions given and refused and rulings thereon approved. Raymond Bros. & Co. v. Miller, 34 Neb. 576 (52 N. W. 573).

210. (1895.) Where the original plaintiff had dismissed his appeal, leaving a controversy solely between defendants as to respective priorities of mortgages, the defendants having stipulated, in effect, that the mortgage to one of their number was first recorded and that in terms every other mortgage was made subject to this particular one, held, in the absence of facts pleaded and corresponding relief prayed entitling to other relief, that this court should not reverse the judgment of the district court recognizing and confirming the priority of the mortgage as stipulated in the mortgages specially made subject thereto. Gilmore v. Silver, 45 Neb. 632 (63 N. W. 923)

211. (1898.) A junior mortgagee has an interest in the mortgaged property which the law will protect in an appropriate action. Locke v. Shreck, 54 Neb. 472 (74 N. W. 970).

V. RIGHTS AND REMEDIES OF CREDITORS AND PURCHASERS.

See, also, Fraudulent Conveyances.

Persons entitled to attack mortgage.

212. (1895.) Where a bank takes a mortgage to secure a debt, a third person cannot attack the transaction or treat the mortgage as void on the ground that it is ultra vires of the bank to take such security. Smith v. First Nat. Bank of Chadron, 45 Neb. 444 (63 N. W. 796).

213. (1901.) An attachment creditor who has actual notice that certain property is covered by a chattel mortgage, can take no advantage of insufficiency or inaccuracy of description of the property in the mortgage. Cohee v. First Nat. Bank of West Point, 1 Unof. 321 (95 N. W. 610).

Bona fide mortgagee.

214. (1882.) To be a mortgagee in good faith, one must be without actual notice of prior incumbrances. Ransom v. Schmela, 13 Neb. 73 (12 N. W. 926).

215. (1896.) One who accepted from a joint owner a chattel mortgage upon a threshing-machine incumbered by an unrecorded purchase-money mortgage of which the former had no knowledge, held a mortgagee in good faith within the meaning of section 14, chapter 32, Compiled Statutes, providing that unrecorded chattel mortgages shall be void as against subsequent purchasers in good faith. State Bank of Lushton v. Kelley Co., 47 Neb. 678 (66 N. W. 619).

216. (1896.) A mortgagee in good faith, within the meaning of section 14, chapter 32, Compiled Statutes, is one who takes his mortgage to secure a debt actually and justly owing to him, without notice, actual or constructive, of other existing claims against the mortgaged property. State Bank of Lushton v. Kelley Co., 47 Neb. 678 (66 N. W. 619).

217. (1896.) Under section 14, chapter 32, Compiled Statutes, a mortgagee in good faith is one who takes a chattel mortgage to secure a debt actually and justly owing to him, whether pre-existing or not, without actual or constructive notice of prior equities against the mortgaged property. State Bank of Lushton v. Kelley Co., 49 Neb. 242 (68 N. W. 481).

218. (1901.) When goods obtained by fraud have been mortgaged by the fraudulent vendee to secure a present indebtedness, to a mortgagee in good faith, without notice of such fraud, the latter stands in the position of an innocent purchaser bona fide of property from a fraudulent vendee, but to the extent of the mortgage debt only. Kellogg Co. v. Horkey, 61 Neb. 751 (86 N. W. 497).

Necessity of refiling.

See, also, ante, §§ 82-87.

219. (1882.) After the repeal of section 74, chapter 43, Revised Statutes, by the act "to amend sections seventy-three," etc., the refiling and recording of chattel mortgages was rendered unnecessary thereafter for the protection of the interests of mortgagees. Ransom v. Schmela, 13 Neb. 73 (12 N. W. 926).

220. (1882.) Failure to refile and record a chattel mortgage as required by chapter 43, page 74, Revised Statutes, cannot be taken advantage of by a subsequent mortgagee who had actual knowledge of the prior mortgage. Ransom v. Schmela, 12 Neb. 73 (12 N. W. 926).

221. (1898.) The statute, whereby a chattel mortgage ceases to be valid as against creditors or subsequent purchasers or mortgagees in good faith after the expiration of five years from the filing thereof, protects only creditors, purchasers, and mortgagees whose rights accrued after the five years. Arlington Mill & Elevator Co. v. Yates, 57 Neb. 286 (77 N. W. 677).

Bona fide purchasers.

222. (1886.) Where the mortgagee releases certain mules from the mortgage and accepts other stock in its stead, and such mules are sold at public auction, the evidence tending to show that the mortgagee had full notice of the sale and the property so sold; a purchaser in good faith is not subject to replevin of the same. Bullis v. Drake, 20 Neb. 167 (29 N. W. 292).

223. (1888.) A receipt of the mortgagor in favor of a purchaser from him, did not affect the rights of the mortgagee when the purchaser had notice of the mortgage. Grand Island Banking Co. v. Frey, 25 Neb. 66 (40 N. W. 599; 13 Am. St. Rep. 478).

224. (1893.) No one can acquire title to a mortgaged chattel as against the mortgagee thereof, no matter under what circumstances he may purchase the chattel, or what its description may be in the mortgage. Iowa Savings Bank v. Dunning, 37 Neb. 322 (55 N. W. 1079).

225. (1894.) It seems that a "subsequent purchaser in good faith," within the mean- of section 14, chapter 32, Compiled Statutes, 1893, is one who acquires title to mortgaged property by contract with the mortgagor or his vendee, after the execution of the mortgage and without notice thereof; and that a purchaser of such property at execution sale would take it discharged of the mortgage lien, irrespective of such purchaser's knowledge of the existence of such mortgage lien. Farmers & Merchants Bank of York v. Anthony, 39 Neb. 343 (57 N. W. 1029).

226. (1896.) A mortgagee of a conditional vendee in possession of chattels is not a purchaser within the meaning of section 26, chapter 32, Compiled Statutes. Campbell Printing Press & Mfg. Co. v. Dyer, 46 Neb. 830 (57 N. W. 904).

227. (1896.) Essential element of "good faith," is that the subsequent purchaser must have acquired the mortgaged chattels for a valid consideration, and without actual knowledge of the existence of the mortgage, or notice of such facts as would put an ordinarily prudent man on inquiry. Sanford v. Jensen, 49 Neb. 766 (69 N. W. 108).

228. (1901.) The doctrine of caveat emptor applies to the mortgagee of chattels or live stock. Sweeney v. Rejto, 1 Unof. 409 (95 N. W. 669).

229. (1901.) A mortgagee who has brought suit on his claim, attached goods and garnisheed debtors, and who, in consideration of the giving of the mortgage, dismisses his attachment and garnishment proceedings, and pays the costs, if not chargeable with notice, is a bona fide purchaser for value of the mortgaged goods as against the vendor of the goods who seeks to rescind the sale on account of fraud. Large & Amsden Co. v. Nott & Son, 1 Unof. 147 (95 N. W. 489).

Determining validity.

230. (1872.) In determining the bona fides of the mortgage, it is immaterial what the assignee of the mortgagee may have paid for it. Pyle v. Warren, 2 Neb. 241.

231. (1886.) Where there is no evidence of fraud in the execution of a mortgage it is error to submit to the jury for their special finding the question whether the mortgage of plaintiff is fraudulent and void as against the defendant. Kay v. Noll, 20 Neb. 380 (30 N. W. 269).

Title to property of void mortgage on death of mortgagor.

232. (1881.) When chattel mortgage is void, the property, on the death of the mortgagor, leaving an insolvent estate, becomes assets in hands of executor. Becker v. Anderson, 11 Neb. 493 (9 N. W. 640).

Private sale by mortgagee.

233. (1890.) Where a merchant in failing circumstances executes a mortgage to one of his creditors, and on the following day executes a second mortgage to another creditor, with knowledge of the first mortgagee, and after private sale by the first mortgagee of the goods other creditors garnishee the surplus in the hands of the mortgagee, who pays over the same, he is liable to the second mortgagee for the amount of such surplus. Russell v. Lau, 30 Neb. 805 (47 N. W. 193).

234. (1893.) A junior mortgagee of chattels, who agrees with the senior mortgagee and the mortgagor that the goods mortgaged may be sold and the proceeds applied to the payment of the mortgages in the order of their priority as disclosed by the records, cannot, after such sale and appropriation of the proceeds, maintain an action to avoid the senior mortgage for fraud in its inception without proof that the facts constituting the fraud were discovered after the agreement and sale. Rockford Watch Co. v. Manifold, 36 Neb. 801 (55 N. W. 236).

Subrogation of attaching creditor after payment of mortgage.

235. (1898.) An attaching creditor against whom a judgment for conversion has been recovered is rightfully subrogated to the mortgagees right to have the property subjected to the payment of the sum paid to satisfy the conversion judgment. Aultman, Miller & Co. v. Bishop, 53 Neb. 545 (74 N. W. 55).

Pleading.

236. (1882.) A subsequent mortgagee claiming as against a prior mortgagee who failed to refile his mortgage as required by statute, must allege and prove that he took without knowledge of the prior mortgage. Ransom v. Schmela, 13 Neb. 73 (12 N. W. 926).

VI. ASSIGNMENT OF MORTGAGE OR DEBT.

In general.

Indorsement of note as transfer of mortgage given to secure it, see Bills and Notes, § 170.

237. (1876.) Notes secured by mortgages were assigned to a national bank, and by it to plaintiff. Held, In an action of foreclosure, that the mortgages were not extinguished by the assignment to the bank, and were valid in the hands of the plaintiff, he being a bona fide purchaser. Richards v. Kountze, 4 Neb. 200.

238. (1886.) Where one executed a number of promissory notes secured by a chattel mortgage on certain furniture and the holder transferred a portion of the notes, either absolutely or as collateral security to another, the transfer of the notes was an assignment pro tanto of the mortgage. Harman v. Barhydt, 20 Neb. 625 (31 N. W. 488).

239. (1894.) The assignment and delivery of a note as collateral will carry the mortgage also; and the assignee may sue in his own name. Kavanaugh v. Brodball,

240. (1905.) If an assignor of a chattel mortgage given to secure a promissory note which is past due at the time of the assignment has, prior thereto, become estopped by his own conduct from enforcing it against an innocent subsequent mortgage for value, his assignee is also estopped. May v. First Nat. Bank of Mendota, 74 Neb. 251 (104 N. W. 184).

VII. REMOVAL OR TRANSFER OF PROPERTY BY MORTGAGOR.

A. Rights and Liabilities of Parties.

Right to convey and title acquired.

241. (1889.) The mortgagor of chattels, until foreclosure, possesses a beneficial interest in the property mortgaged, and will convey a good title by a sale of such property to one who purchases in the open market in good faith and without notice, actual or constructive, of the mortgage. Gillilan v. Kendall, 26 Neb. 82 (42 N. W. 281; 18 Am. St. Rep. 766).

Estoppel of mortgagee.

242. (1889.) If a mortgagee of chattels stands by and knowingly permits the goods to be sold to another, he will be estopped from afterwards asserting his title thereto. Gillilan v. Kendall, 26 Neb. 82 (42 N. W. 281; 18 Am. St. Rep. 766).

243. (1896.) A chattel mortgage is not avoided by the fact that subsequent to its execution the mortgagee consented to a sale of the property by the mortgagor for the benefit of both parties, no other liens existing and the sale not having been consummated. Houck v. Linn, 48 Neb. 227 (66 N. W. 1103).

Ratification of sale by mortgagee.

244. (1902.) A mortgagee of chattels will be held to have ratified an unauthorized sale of the mortgaged property by knowingly receiving and retaining the proceeds of such sale. Ayres v. McConahey, 65 Neb. 588 (91 N. W. 494).

245. (1904.) Where a mortgagor, without authority from the mortgagee, sold property covered by a chattel mortgage, and paid a debt to the mortgagee, other than the one secured by the mortgage, with a portion of the purchase money, which was received and credited by the mortgagee without knowledge of the fact that the money had been so obtained, the failure of the mortgagee to refund the money so received, upon learning the source from which it was derived after commencing an action against third parties to whom the mortgagor's vendee had sold the chattels, does not thereby ratify the sale and deprive himself of the right to recover possession of the chattels. Gosnell v. Webster, 70 Neb. 705 (97 N. W. 1060).

B. Criminal Responsibility.

Nature and elements of offense.

246. (1893.) To constitute the offense of selling mortgaged chattels, the sale must have been made during the existence of the mortgage lien without the consent of the owner and holder of the debt secured and the indictment must so charge. State v. Hughes, 38 Neb. 366 (56 N. W. 982).

247. (1895.) Under the statute, the gist of the offense for which punishment is therein prescribed is the fraudulent removal of mortgaged personal property out of the county with the intent to deprive the owner of the mortgage of his security. The mortgagor who fraudulently removes from the county any portion of the mortgaged chattels, during the existence of the lien or title created by the mortgage, is equally amenable to the provisions of the law as the mortgagor who so removes the entire property mortgaged. Wilson v. State, 43 Neb. 745 (62 N. W. 209).

Statutory provisions.

248. (1884.) That part of "An act to prevent the fraudulent transfer of personal property," approved February 13, 1877, which makes it criminal to remove mortgaged property out of the county within which such property was at the time of the execution of the mortgage, held unconstitutional, as not being expressed in the title of the act. Ex parte Thomason, 16 Neb. 238 (20 N. W. 312).

249. (1901.) The title of the act of the legislature of 1877 (Session Laws, 1877, p. 5), "to prevent the fraudulent transfer of personal property," with sufficient clearness indicates the subject of the proposed legislation, which is limited to transfers of mortgaged chattels. State v. Heldenbrand, 62 Neb. 136 (87 N. W. 25; 89 Am. St. Rep. 493).

250. (1901.) Section 9, chapter 12, Compiled Statutes, making it a crime to sell mortgaged chattels without "the written consent" of the mortgagee, is not violative of section 3, article I, of the constitution, which decrees that "no person shall be deprived of life, liberty or property, without due process of law." State v. Heldenbrand, 62 Neb. 136 (87 N. W. 25; 89 Am. St. Rep. 493).

Indictment and information.

251. (1886.) In an indictment for selling mortgaged chattels it is not necessary to charge that the act was done with intent to defraud. State v. Hurds, 19 Neb. 316 (27 N. W. 139).

252. (1893.) In an indictment for selling or transferring mortgaged personal property, it is necessary to allege the name of the person or corporation to whom such sale or transfer was made. State v. Hughes, 38 Neb. 366 (56 N. W. 982).

253. (1893.) It is not sufficient in an indictment for selling mortgaged personal property to allege that the sale was made without the consent of the mortgagee, naming him. To constitute the offense the sale of the property must have been made by the mortgagor during the existence of the mortgage lien, without the written consent of the owner and holder of the debt secured by the mortgage, and the indictment must so charge. State v. Hughes, 38 Neb. 366 (56 N. W. 982).

254. (1895.) In the prosecution for the removal of mortgaged property contrary to the provisions of the statute the value of the property at the time of the removal need not be alleged in the information, nor proved upon the trial. Wilson v. State, 43 Neb. 745 (62 N. W. 209).

255. (1895.) Information under section 10, chapter 12, Compiled Statutes, charging the mortgagor with fraudulently removing mortgaged property, held sufficient. Wilson v. State, 43 Neb. 745 (62 N. W. 209).

256. (1895.) It is sufficient in an information for fraudulently removing mortgaged property from the county, to allege that the mortgaged property was fraudulently removed from the county where the same was situated at the time the mortgage was given thereon, with the intent to deprive the owner of said mortgage of his security, without averring that the owner of the mortgage was the owner of the debts thereby secured. Wilson v. State, 43 Neb. 745 (62 N. W. 209).

257. (1895.) In an information under section 10, chapter 12, Compiled Statutes, for fraudulently removing mortgaged property out of the county, it is unnecessary to aver that the mortgage was in writing. The allegation that the defendant "duly mortgaged and thereby conveyed" meets the requirements of said section. Wilson v. State, 43 Neb. 745 (62 N. W. 209).

258. (1895.) It is not necessary to set out in the information for fraudulently removing mortgaged property from the county the mortgage in hæc verba, nor to aver the amount of the indebtedness the mortgage was given to secure. Wilson v. State, 43 Neb. 745 (62 N. W. 209).

259. (1895.) An information for fraudulently removing mortgaged property from the county need not allege that the mortgage was given to secure a valid indebtedness. Wilson v. State, 43 Neb. 745 (62 N. W. 209).

VIII. PAYMENT, RELEASE, AND SATISFACTION.

Claim for penalty for failure to release, as ground for canceling, see Cancelation of Instrument, § 11.

New note as payment.

260. (1900.) Where on the sale of mortgaged property, the note and mortgage evidencing the prior indebtedness are retained by the creditor, and a new note and mortgage taken from the purchaser, for the amount due on the same indebtedness, the taking of such new note and mortgage will not effectuate payment of the prior indebtedness, unless there is an express agreement of the parties that such new note and mortgage were received in payment and satisfaction of such prior indebtedness. Chamberlain Banking House v. Woolsey, 60 Neb. 516 (83 N. W. 729).

261. (1900.) Where on a sale of mortgaged personal property, a new note and mortgage are executed by the purchaser, the note evidencing the original indebtedness being canceled and surrendered, the presumption of law is that the execution and delivery of the new note and mortgage is in payment and satisfaction of the prior indebtedness, and the burden is on the creditor to provce to the contrary. Chamberlain Banking House v. Woolsey, 60 Neb. 516 (83 N. W. 729).

262. (1901.) The giving of a new note for an existing indebtedness will not of itself release collateral security held for payment of such indebtedness. Meeker v. Waldron, 62 Neb. 689 (87 N. W. 539).

263. (1905.) Where a mortgagee of chattels, part of the debt having been satisfied out of a portion of the property, took a new note and mortgage for a portion only of the balance due, on the entire remaining property, the mortgage reciting that the property was in the undisputed possession of the mortgagor and free from all liens and incumbrances, and assigned the same to an innocent purchaser, he is estopped to deny that the first mortgage was satisfied. May v. First Nat. Bank of Mendota, 74 Neb. 251 (104 N. W. 184).

Tender after default.

264. (1881.) A mere tender of the amount secured by a chattel mortgage to the creditor on the day fixed for payment, although not accepted, nor kept good, has the effect to release the property from the lien of the mortgage. But if the tender be made after default of payment at the stipulated time, it must be kept good, or it will be entirely unavailing. Thompkins v. Batie, 11 Neb. 147 (7 N. W. 747; 38 Am. Rep. 361).

265. (1888.) An absolute tender of the amount due upon a promissory note secured by chattel mortgage—the tender being made the day after the debt is due, but kept good—will have the effect to divest the lien of the mortgage. Knox v. Williams, 24 Neb. 630 (39 N. W. 786; 8 Am. St. Rep. 220).

266. (1896.) An unconditional tender by a purchaser at execution sale of chattels of the entire debt secured by a chattel mortgage existing against said property, the debt being at the time of the tender due and the tender being kept good, divests the lien of the mortgage and entitles the purchaser to the possession of the property. Gould v. Armagost, 46 Neb. 897 (65 N. W. 1064).

Alteration affecting terms of payment.

267. (1888.) Notes accompanying a mortgage are evidence of the debt and times of payment; but a provision inserted in the mortgage without the mortgagor's knowledge or consent, changing the times of payment from that stated in the notes, was not binding on him. Ward v. Watson, 24 Neb. 592 (39 N. W. 615).

Modes of release.

268. (1895.) By section 15, chapter 32, Compiled Statutes, two modes are prescribed for discharging chattel mortgages, viz.: By an entry by the mortgagee, his agent or assignee, on the margin of the index, duly attested by the county clerk; and by the county clerk, when authorized so to do by a written order signed by the mortgagee and attested by a justice of the peace, or some officer having a seal. Boyes v. Summers, 46 Neb. 308 (64 N. W. 1066).

Order for release.

269. (1395.) An order to the county clerk to release a mortgage, is invalid, as a release, unless attested by the county clerk as provided for by section 15, chapter 37, Compiled Statutes. Boyes v. Summers, 46 Neb. 308 (64 N. W. 1066).

Evidence of release.

270. (1891.) Evidence held sufficient to show that a chattel mortgage had been released by a consent to a sale of the mortgaged property. Sanford v. Munford, 31 Neb. 792 (48 N. W. 876).

271. (1894.) The execution and filing of a release of a chattel mortgage is not conclusive evidence of the payment of the debt secured by such mortgage, in favor of the mortgagee of the property whose mortgage lien attached prior to the execution and filing of such release. Waggoner v. First Nat. Bank of Creighton, 43 Neb. 84 (61 N. W. 112).

Penalty for failure to enter satisfaction.

272. (1891.) Where a chattel mortgage is paid in full it is the duty of the mortgagee or his agent to release the same, acknowledge satisfaction of the debt in the proper office, and if such release is delayed for an unreasonable time, and damage thereby ensue to the mortgagor, he may recover the same by action, but only such damages can be recovered as naturally result from the wrong complained of. Deering v. Miller, 33 Neb. 654 (50 N. W. 1056).

273. (1891.) The statute which provides for a penalty in case the mortgagee, etc., delay releasing the mortgage for a certain number of days, is merely cumulative and will not prevent a recovery for actual damages. Deering v. Miller, 33 Neb. 654 (50 N. W. 1056).

274. (1891.) In an action to recover $50 for neglect of the agent of the mortgagee of a chattel mortgage to release the same the district court struck out all that part of of the petition relating to the penalty, and the action thereupon proceeded as a common law action for actual damages, the question of the validity of the statute not being before the court. Held. That the testimony failed to show any legitimate actual damages, and that a judgment for $50 could not be sustained. Deering v. Miller, 33 Neb. 654 (50 N. W. 1056).

275. (1895.) Under section 15, chapter 32, Compiled Statutes, a mortgagee is liable for the damages therein specified for failure to satisfy of record a chattel mortgage within the period therein named, after demand and the payment of mortgage debt whether the mortgagee acted in good faith or not, or whatever may have been the motives of such mortgagee. A mere mistake or ignorance, without a corrupt intent, is no defense to such an action. Boyes v. Summers, 46 Neb. 308 (64 N. W. 1066).

276. (1895.) The entry of satisfaction after the statutory period will not defeat an action to recover the penalty fixed by the statute (Compiled Statutes, ch. 32, sec. 15). Clearwater Bank v. Kurkonski, 45 Neb. 1 (63 N. W. 133).

277. (1895.) The provision of section 15, chapter 32, Compiled Statutes, making a mortgagee of chattels liable to the mortgagor for fifty dollars as damages for a failure to satisfy the mortgage, is not unconstitutional. Clearwater Bank v. Kurkonski, 45 Neb. 1 (63 N. W. 133).

278. (1902.) The penal provisions of section 15, chapter 32, Compiled Statutes, for failure to satisfy a chattel mortgage, have no application to the instruments enumerated in section 26 of said chapter. McCormick Harvesting Machine Co. v. Mills, 64 Neb. 166 (89 N. W. 621).

279. (1902.) Section 15, chapter 32, Compiled Statutes, entitled "Frauds," prior to its amendment in 1885, provided for the filing of chattel mortgages and for their release on performance of conditions. Such amendment, authorizing liquidated damages for refusal to release after conditions performed and demand made, was germane to the subject-matter contained in the original section, and does not violate section 11, article III of the constitution, prohibiting duplex legislation. Van Duzer v. Mellinger, 66 Neb. 508 (92 N. W. 738).

280. (1902.) A claim not reduced to judgment, for the statutory penalties for a failure to release paid chattel mortgages, does not furnish such a cross-demand as can be used for the basis of an equitable action to cancel another mortgage between the same parties which has not been paid. Meredith v. Lyon & Healy, 3 Unof. 485 (92 N. W. 122).

——— Demand for satisfaction before suit.

281. (1895.) A demand must be made upon the mortgagee or his assignee for the satisfaction of a mortgage, before an action can be maintained to recover the fixed sum named in section 15, chapter 32, Compiled Statutes. Clearwater Bank v. Kurkonski, 45 Neb. 1 (63 N. W. 133).

IX. FORECLOSURE.

Recovery of deficiency judgment on foreclosure of pledge, see Pledges, § 57.

Right to foreclose.

282. (1899.) Each of the persons secured by a chattel mortgage given to secure several debts, may enforce a separate foreclosure of his interest in the property, and may also maintain a separate action to recover from the wrongful taker thereof, the possession of such property. Sloan v. Thomas Mfg. Co., 58 Neb. 713 (79 N. W. 728).

Option to foreclose.

283. (1891.) A mortgage contained a provision that in case of default in the payment of any interest for the space of three days, after the same becomes due and payable, the whole debt should, at the option of the mortgagee, become due and payable forthwith. Held, That the mortgagee, in case of a default in payment of interest for three days, may elect to declare the entire debt due, and bring an action to foreclose the mortgage. Coad v. Home Cattle Co., 32 Neb. 761 (49 N. W. 757; 29 Am. St. Rep. 465).

284. (1891.) The bringing of a replevin action by a mortgagee to recover possession of the mortgaged property, is a sufficient notice to the mortgagor, of an election to declare the entire sum due, for a default in the payment of interest. Coad v. Home Cattle Co., 32 Neb. 761 (49 N. W. 757; 29 Am. St. Rep. 465).

Right to foreclose before default.

285. (1891.) A clause in a chattel mortgage providing that the mortgagee may, at any time he feels insecure, treat the debt as due and take and sell the property, will not authorize the seizure and sale of the property unless the mortgagor is about to do, or has done, some act which tends to impair the security. Case Plow Co. v. Marr, 33 Neb. 215 (49 N. W. 1119).

286. (1892.) Where a mortgage is executed upon a stock of goods wherein the mortgage is authorized to take immediate possession of the goods when he felt insecure, the mortgagors must be in default or be about to do or have done some act which tends to impair the security, to authorize the mortgagee to take possession before the maturity of the notes. Rector-Wilhelmy Co. v. Nissen, 35 Neb 716 (53 N. W. 670).

Delay or failure to foreclose.

287. (1896.) One who takes possession of mortgaged chattels in order to satisfy his lien thereon by means of notice and sale in the manner prescribed by law, does so with the implied obligation to proceed without unreasonable delay and with due regard for the rights of the mortgagor. Murray v. Loushman, 47 Neb. 256 (66 N. W. 413).

288. (1896.) A chattel mortgage is not avoided by the failure of the mortgagee to foreclose immediately upon default Houck v. Linn, 48 Neb. 227 (66 N. W. 1103).

Foreclosure of indemnity mortgage.

289. (1898.) An indemnity mortgage may not be foreclosed by the original mortgagee or an assignee after maturity until the damages have been suffered, against or for which the indemnity was sought to be provided. Honaker v. Vesey, 57 Neb. 413 (77 N. W. 1100).

Property in custody of court pending foreclosure.

290. (1903.) The pendency of an action for the foreclosure of an alleged chattel mortgage, in which a temporary injunction has been granted restraining the defendant from selling, consuming or disposing of the property in controversy during the pendency of the action, withdraws the property from pursuit, by general creditors of the alleged mortgagor, in another court by means of the ordinary procedure of a suit at law, judgment and execution. In such case the property is in the constructive custody of the law. Ryan v. Donley, 69 Neb. 623 (96 N. W. 231).

Mode of foreclosure.

291. (1887.) A sale by the mortgagee under the statute in which he fails to comply with any essential requirement of such statute will render him liable to the mortgagor for the damages which the latter may thereby sustain. Loeb & Hirsch v. Milner, 21 Neb. 392 (32 N. W. 205).

292. (1901.) Notwithstanding the parties to a chattel mortgage have stipulated therein for the foreclosure and sale of the mortgaged property by advertisement in the manner authorized by statute, a court of equity has jurisdiction to entertain an action thereon, and adjudicate the respective rights of the parties in such action. The statutory method of foreclosure is not exclusive. Meeker v. Waldron, 62 Neb 689 (87 N. W. 539); Meeker v. Waldron, 2 Unof. 867 (90 N. W. 755).

293. (1891.) A mortgagee of chattels must comply substantially with the requirements of the statute in foreclosing a chattel mortgage. If he fails so to do in an essential particular, and the property is sold for less than its value, the mortgagor is entitled to have the value of the property applied to the extinguishment of the debt, and if such value is greater than such debt, the mortgagee is liable to the mortgagor for the difference. Coad v. Home Cattle Co., 32 Neb. 761 (49 N. W. 757; 29 Am. St. Rep. 465).

294. (1901.) The first mortgagee of chattels in possession who sells the chattels without substantially complying with the statute must account to subsequent lienholders for the value of the property sold. Dempster Mill Mfg. Co. v. Wright, 1 Unof. 666 (95 N. W. 806).

295. (1893.) Unsecured creditors of a mortgagor of chattels are entitled to have the mortgages foreclosed as required by law, and a sale otherwise than as the law provides, although in accordance with an agreement of the mortgagor and mortgagees, is no protection to those participating in the proceeds of the sale. They are liable to account to such creditors for the value of the goods, less the valid liens thereon. Rockford Watch Co. v. Manifold, 36 Neb. 801 (55 N. W. 236).

296. (1894.) If chattels seized by virtue of a mortgage are sold in a manner other than is provided by law, without the consent of the mortgagor, said mortgagor will be entitled to any damages caused by such illegal sale. Buffalo County Nat. Bank v. Sharpe, 40 Neb. 123 (58 N. W. 734).

297. (1895.) Mortgaged chattels should be disposed of according to the stipulation of the mortgage and the provisions of the statute relating to the foreclosure of chattel mortgages. If the mortgagee does not do so, that, of itself, will not invalidate the lien of the mortgage. If he fails to sell the property, or if he disposes of the same in a mode contrary to the stipulation of the parties, or the requirements of the statute, the mortgagee must account for its value. Chaffee v. Atlas Lumber Co., 43 Neb. 224 (61 N. W. 637; 47 Am. St. Rep. 753).

298. (1896.) A mortgagee who fails to comply with the statutory requirements relating to foreclosure is liable to the mortgagor for the value of the property, less the mortgage lien. Callen v. Rose, 47 Neb. 638 (66 N. W. 639).

299. (1896.) Verdict for plaintiff in a suit for damages against a chattel mortgagee who failed to comply with the statute relating to foreclosure, held not excessive. Callen v. Rose, 47 Neb. 638 (66 N. W. 639).

300. (1902.) Where a mortgagee, in the foreclosure of his mortgage, fails to comply in an essential particular with the requirements of the statute, he will be liable to the mortgagor for any damage the latter may thereby sustain. McCormick Harvesting Machine Co. v. Preitauer, 3 Unof. 230 (91 N. W. 499).

301. (1903.) Notwithstanding the parties to a chattel mortgage have stipulated therein for the foreclosure and sale of the mortgaged property by advertisement in the manner authorized by statute, a court of equity has jurisdiction to entertain an action thereon, and adjudicate the respective rights of the parties in such action. The statutory method of foreclosure is not exclusive. Monnich v. Schwartz, 4 Unof. 811 (96 N. W. 636).

——— Waiver of regularity.

302. (1897.) The mortgagor of chattels waives the benefit of the statute by stipulating in the mortgage for the sale of the property by the mortgagee, "at public or private sale with or without, as the holder may deem best, an advertisement, and sale according to law, being hereby expressly waived." Lexington Bank v. Wirges, 52 Neb. 649 (72 N. W. 1049).

303. (1897.) Section 6, chapter 12, Compiled Statutes, prescribing the mode of conducting a chattel mortgage sale, was designed for the protection of the mortgagor, and he may waive his right thereunder to have the mortgaged property in view at the time of sale. Lexington Bank v. Wirges, 52 Neb. 649 (72 N. W. 1049).

304. (1901.) A mortgagor of chattels can waive the benefit of the provisions of the statute relating to foreclosures. Marseilles Mfg. Co. v. Perry, 62 Neb. 715 (87 N. W. 544).

Granting inspection before sale.

305. (1899.) It is the duty of a mortgagee of chattels, in selling under foreclosure, to give a reasonable opportunity to persons desiring to purchase to see the goods and to offer bids. Failing in this the mortgagor may hold him accountable for the sacrifice thereby resulting. Langdon v. Wintersteen, 58 Neb. 278 (78 N. W. 501).

Place of sale.

306. (1887.) Under the act of 1867, in foreclosing a chattel mortgage by a sale of the property, such sale is to take place in the county where the mortgage was first recorded, or in any county where the property may have been removed by consent of parties, and in which the mortgage was duly recorded. Under the act of 1879 the proper filing of a chattel mortgage takes the place of recording. But to authorize a sale under the statute where the property has been removed by consent of parties, into a county other than that where the mortgage was first filed, the mortgage must be duly filed in the county where the sale is to take place. Loeb & Hirsch v. Miller, 21 Neb. 392 (32 N. W. 205).

307. (1887.) A provision in the mortgage that the mortgaged property may be sold in a county other than that in which the mortgagor resides does not waive the statutory requirement that the mortgage is to be filed in the county where the sale is to take place. Loeb & Hirsch v. Miller, 21 Neb. 392 (32 N. W. 205).

308. (1888.) The mortgagee of chattels cannot withdraw the original instrument from the clerk's office, when filed, and proceed under the statutes to foreclose. Ward v. Watson, 24 Neb. 592 (39 N. W. 615).

309. (1889.) Where a chattel mortgage is duly filed, as required by section 2 of chapter 12 of the Compiled Statutes, a duly certified copy thereof would be sufficient authority under which the mortgagee could take possession of the property and foreclose the mortgage. In case such foreclosure were not resisted, not the authority of the mortgagee questioned, a certified copy would not be necessary, the original mortgage on file would be sufficient to justify the proceeding when collaterally attacked. Hall v. Aitkin, 25 Neb. 360 (41 N. W. 192).

310. (1894.) Mortgaged chattels may be sold under the mortgage in a county other than the one in which they were at the time of the execution of the mortgage, and were afterwards kept up to the time of seizure under same, when the mortgage by its terms provides that the sale may take place in such other county, if the mortgagee, prior to the sale, files or causes the mortgage to be filed in the county where the sale is made. Buffalo County Nat. Bank v. Sharpe, 40 Neb. 123 (58 N. W. 734).

311. (1902.) Where a mortgagee takes mortgaged property to another county and there sells it without first filing his mortgage in such other county, the mortgagor may maintain an action against the mortgagee and recover the value of the property taken, less the amount of the debt due to the mortgagee. McCormick Harvesting Machine Co. v. Preitauer, 3 Unof. 230 (91 N. W. 499).

312. (1902.) By the provisions of section 6, chapter 12, Compiled Statutes, 1899, before mortgaged chattels can be sold in a county other than that in which the mortgage was originally filed, the mortgage must be filed in the office of the county clerk of the county where the property is to be sold. McCormick Harvesting Machine Co. v. Prietauer, 3 Unof. 230 (91 N. W. 499).

Accounting for surplus.

313. (1901.) The provisions of a chattel mortgage that the mortgagee may, upon default, take the property and sell the same at public or private sale, are valid, but under such provisions the mortgagee has no right to the possession of the property except for the purpose of foreclosure; and if he takes the property and holds the same longer than is reasonably necessary for that purpose, he will be held to have elected to take the property, so far as its value will go, in satisfaction of his claim, and if the value is greater than the amount of his claim, he holds the surplus for the mortgagor. Marseilles Mfg. Co. v. Perry, 62 Neb. 715 (87 N. W. 544).

314. (1879.) A mortgagee of chattels on foreclosure, must sell the property as provided by law and any surplus over the amount of his claim should be paid to junior lien holders or the owner of property. Aultman & Taylor Co. v. Steinan, 8 Neb. 109.

315. (1882.) The mortgagee of chattels is not the holder of the legal title thereto and should be held to a strict account for the surplus. Mathews v. Smith, 13 Neb. 178 (12 N. W. 821).

Rights of purchaser.

316. (1897.) One who claims an interest in chattels by virtue of his bid therefor upon the foreclosure of a mortgage thereon by sale at public auction cannot be heard to question the regularity of a subsequent sale of the same chattels rendered necessary by his own refusal, by payment, to make good his bid. Undeland v. Stanfield, 53 Neb. 120 (73 N. W. 459).

317. (1896.) A purchaser of mortgaged chattels at execution sale is subrogated to the mortgagor's rights in the property at the time of the levy. Gould v. Armagost, 46 Neb. 897 (65 N. W. 1064).

318. (1896.) A tender by a purchaser of chattels at an execution sale of the amount of a chattel mortgage against the property, to be good and divest the lien of the mortgage, in addition to the amount of the mortgage debt, must include all reasonable and necessary expenses which have been incurred by the holder of the mortgage in taking possession of the mortgaged property and in enforcing his lien thereon. Gould v. Armagost, 46 Neb. 897 (65 N. W. 1064).

319. (1901.) Where the mortgagee of chattels is not in possession and his mortgage is not on file at the date of the levy, a purchaser at execution sale under a judgment against the mortgagor will take free of the mortgage though he had notice thereof prior to the sale. Johns v. Kamarad, 2 Unof. 157 (96 N. W. 118).

320. (1907.) A purchaser of personal property under mortgage sale, before the tax lien has attached, takes it free of all claims for the taxes. Platte Valley Milling Co. v. Malmsten, 79 Neb. 735 (116 N. W. 962).

Notice of sale or postponment.

321. (1891.) When a chattel mortgage sale is postponed, notice of such adjournment, in case a newspaper is published in the county where the sale is to take place, and the adjournment is for a sufficient length of time to permit, must be published in the paper in which the original notice of sale was given, and be continued therein in each issue of the paper until the day of sale. Coad v. Home Cattle Co., 32 Neb. 761 (49 N. W. 757; 29 Am. St. Rep. 465).

322. (1886.) Mere certificate of an officer is not evidence of the service of a notice of sale. Hale v. Wigton, 20 Neb. 83 (29 N. W. 177).

Purchase by mortgagor's agent.

323. (1893.) An agent for the purpose of selling goods will not be permitted to sell to himself, even though the sale be public, and no actual fraud appear. In case he do so, he will be required to account to his principals for any profit he may have realized. Rockford Watch Co. v. Manifold, 36 Neb. 801 (55 N. W. 236).

Injunction to aid foreclosure.

324. (1903.) Where an injunction is necessary to a successful foreclosure of a chattel mortgage, it is error to refuse one. Monnich v. Schwartz, 4 Unof. 811 (96 N. W. 636).

Who may attack validity of sale.

325. (1886.) Mere absence from the place of sale will not estop the absent party from denying its legality. Hale v. Wigton, 20 Neb. 82 (29 N. W. 177).

Effect of irregularity.

326. (1899.) The lien is not divested, nor the mortgagee's right of possession impaired, by any mere irregularity in the manner of conducting the foreclosure sale. Tackaberry & Co. v. Gilmore, 57 Neb. 450 (78 N. W. 32).

Order of sale.

327. (1901.) Where the mortgagee of chattels receives notice of the rescission of a fraudulent sale to his mortgagor before the sale of property included in the mortgage, he must first sell the mortgaged goods not involved in such fraudulent sale. Kellogg Co. v. Horkey, 61 Neb. 751 (86 N. W. 497).

Disposition of proceeds of sale.

328. (1890.) A stipulation between a creditor of the mortgagor of chattels and the mortgagee, it being claimed that the mortgage was fraudulent as against creditors, whereby the proceeds from an advertised foreclosure sale should be deposited in a certain bank to be held pending the termination of the right of the parties, and further that any property bid in by the mortgage to be held by him in the same terms as the proceeds held by the bank, recognizes the right of the mortgagee to bid off property, and it was the amount of his bid for the property struck off to him that was to be held by him pending the termination of their rights. South Omaha Nat. Bank v. Chase, 30 Neb. 444 (46 N. W. 513).

329. (1904.) Advancements by a mortgagee made to harvest and market a crop of hemp, under an oral agreement with the owner and another mortgagee that they shall be repaid out of the proceeds of the crop before the mortgagees, warrant the application of the proceeds to such payment as against a subsequent mortgagee with notice, who is also the assignee with notice of the other mortgage. Dickenson v. Columbus State Bank, 71 Neb. 260 (98 N. W. 813).

——— Limitation of action for proceeds.

330. (1901.) Where, in an action to reach the proceeds of a sale of mortgaged property to apply on a mortgage note, the makers deny anything was due, the statute of limitations does not run during litigation, though the payee of the note had not declared thereon. Bank of Stockham v. Alter, 61 Neb. 359 (85 N. W. 300).

Demand for proceeds as affecting costs.

331. (1901.) A demand by a party claiming the proceeds of the sale of mortgaged property from another is unnecessary to affect the question of costs, where both parties claim a prior right. Bank of Stockham v. Alter, 61 Neb. 359 (85 N. W. 300).

Actions to foreclose.

——— Petition.

332. (1900.) A petition which calls for the foreclosure of a chattel mortgage and for a personal judgment in case of a deficiency states but one cause of action. Richardson v. Opelt, 60 Neb. 180 (82 N. W. 377).

——— Limitations.

333. (1898.) A chattel mortgage is not barred by the statute of limitations on the ground that the original evidence of the debt would be barred, where it has been kept alive by renewal notes. Arlington Mill & Elevator Co. v. Yates, 57 Neb. 286 (77 N. W. 677).

——— Finding and judgment.

334. (1893.) The findings and judgment in a case must be based upon the pleadings. A decree in an action between a mortgagor and certain mortgagees of chattels whereby a mortgage not attacked by the pleadings, and the holder whereof is not a party to the action, is declared void, is erroneous. Rockford Watch Co. v. Manifold, 36 Neb. 801 (55 N. W. 236).

Wrongful foreclosure.

335. (1892.) In an action to recover the value of household goods wrongfully sold under a chattel mortgage, executed on a usurious contract, the instructions given held to correctly state the law. Omaha Auction & Storage Co. v. Rogers, 35 Neb. 61 (52 N. W. 826).

Right to redeem.

336. (1881.) The mortgagor has the right to redeem at any time before sale of the property by paying the mortgage debt. Tompkins v. Batie, 11 Neb. 147 (7 N. W. 747; 38 Am. St. Rep. 361).

337. (1891.) A junior mortgagee has a legal right to redeem the prior mortgage, upon tender of the amount of the debt. Hull v. Godfrey, 31 Neb. 204 (47 N. W. 850).

Date of citizenship.

2. (1891.) Where an alien is naturalized under the naturalization laws, his citizenship dates from the time the order of the court is made admitting him to citizenship, and does not relate back to the time he made his declaration of intention. State ex rel. Thayer, v. Boyd, 31 Neb. 682 (48 N. W. 739).

Nature of act admitting alien.

3. (1891.) The order of a court admitting an alien to citizenship is a judicial act, in the nature of a judgment. Such proceedings are required to be made a matter of record. The record must be pleaded and

Who are citizens.

4. (1891.) Under the fourth section of the act of congress, entitled "An act to establish an uniform rule of naturalization," approved April 14, 1802, the child of an alien, under twenty-one years of age, although born in a foreign country, becomes a citizen by the naturalization of his parent, if dwelling within the United States at the time the parent is admitted to citizenship; but it does not have that effect if he is over twenty-one years old at the time the parent is naturalized. State, ex rel. Thayer, v. Boyd, 31 Neb. 682 (48 N. W. 739).

5. (1891.) The fact that an alien has for many years voted at elections held in this state, and filled important public offices, does not establish the fact that he is a citizen of the United States. State, ex rel. Thayer, v. Boyd, 31 Neb. 682 (48 N. W. 739).

6. (1891.) The alien inhabitants of the territory of Nebraska at the time of its admission as a state, did not become citizens of the United States by virtue of the acts of congress admitting the state into the Union. State, ex rel. Thayer, v. Boyd, 31 Neb. 682 (48 N. W. 739).

7. (1891.) The words "citizens of the United States," as used in section 2 of article V of the state constitution, construed to mean a person who is an American citizen by birth, or a person of foreign birth who has been duly naturalized under the provisions of the uniform rule of naturalization established by congress. State, ex rel. Thayer, v. Boyd, 31 Neb. 682 (48 N. W. 739).

8. (1893.) The actual issuance or receipt by an Indian of a patent for lands allotted to him under the act is not necessary to constitute him a citizen of the United States. When he has accepted the land allotted, taken possession thereof and otherwise complied with the law, he becomes entitled to his patent and his citizenship attaches. State, ex rel. Crawford, v. Norris, 37 Neb. 299 (55 N. W. 1086).

9. (1893.) All Indians born within the territorial limits of the United States to whom allotments of land in severalty have been made under the provisions of the act of congress of February 8, 1887, law, or other law or treaty, and all Indians, born as aforesaid, who have voluntarily taken up their residence in the United States separate and apart from any tribe of Indians therein, and adopted the habits of civilized life, are made citizens of the United States, and such Indians residing in this state are citizens thereof. State, ex rel. Crawford, v. Norris, 37 Neb. 299 (55 N. W. 1086).

10. (1897.) Though a declaration of intention to become a citizen may constitute a resident alien an elector, this status does not extend to his son because the declaration was made before the son attained his majority. Haywood v. Marshall, 53 Neb. 220 (73 N. W. 449).

5. (1889.) Where the act "to provide that all citizens shall be entitled to the same civil rights" etc., is broader than its title, that portion in excess of the title will be declared void; as where the title of the act relates to "all citizens," and the body to "all persons." In such case, in order to entitle a party to the benefits of the act, it must be alleged and proved that he is a citizen. Meisinger v. State, 25 Neb. 674 (41 N. W. 638).

Appointment, election and tenure.

1. (1880.) Where a county clerk issued notice of an election of a clerk of the district court, as one of the officers to be elected, the person receiving the majority of the votes cast is not entitled to possession of the office, by means of quo warranto, where it appears that the last census the county had a population of only fifty-five hundred, but that the population has been constantly increasing since, without showing that the present population is over eight thousand. State, ex rel. Welna, v. Steuffer, 10 Neb. 506 (6 N. W. 604).

2. (1881.) Thee act approved March 1, 1879, authorizing an election of clerks of district courts in the year 1879, and every four years thereafter, in counties containing not less than eight thousand inhabitants, does not authorize an election of such clerks in other counties during the intervening years upon attaining that population. *State, ex rel. 3a. (1908.) Chapter 34, laws 1897, entitled "An act to authorize the county judge in counties where said judge has been previously authorized by the board of county commissioners to employ one or more clerks, to designate and appoint, in writing, one of said clerks to be the clerk of the county court, and prescribing the duties and compensation of the clerk of the county court," examined, and held not in conflict with section 11, article III of the constitution, providing that "no law shall be amended unless the new act contain the section or sections so amended and the section or sections so amended shall be repealed." Zimmerman v. Trude, 80 Neb. 503 (114 N. W. 641).

4. (1887.) Under section 7, chapter 26, Compiled Statutes, providing that "In each county having a population of eight thousand inhabitants or more, there shall be elected in the year 1879, and every four years thereafter, a clerk of the district court in and for such county," and section 105, providing that "Appointments under the provisions of this chapter shall be in writing and continue until the next election at which the vacancy can be filled and until a successor is elected and qualified," etc., a vacancy in the office of clerk of the district court, occurring in 1886, may be filled by an election held subsequently in that year, it not being necessary to wait until a quadrennial year from 1879. State, ex rel. Francl, v. Dodson, 21 Neb. 218 (31 N. W. 788).

Additional bond required.

5. (1871.) The statute making county clerks ex officio clerks of the district court in their respective counties, does not require of them bonds in their character of court clerks, separate or additional to such as they give as county clerks. People v. McCallum, 1 Neb. 182.

6. (1871.) Failure of a county clerk to give an additional bond, where he is ex-officio clerk of the court, will not exclude him from the performance of his duties as such officer. People v. McCallum, 1 Neb. 182.

Duties in general.

Duties as to deposits in court, see Deposits in Court, §§ 2, 3.

7. (1891.) It is the duty of the clerk to make a complete record of a case as soon as it is finally determined unless it is waived by an agreement of both parties. Colonial & U. S. Mortgage Co. v. Foutch, 31 Neb. 282 (47 N. W. 929).

8. (1898.) Ordinarily, the clerk of one court has not the authority to authenticate transcripts of the records kept by another court. Comstock v. Kerwin, 57 Neb. 1 (77 N. W. 387).

9. (1900.) The non-performance of some condition in a decree for the specific execution of a contract of sale is no defense to an action against the clerk of the court for conversion of money paid to him in accordance with the requirements of the decree, if it be made to appear that the party for whose benefit the condtion was inserted has waived it. Bantley v. Baker, 61 Neb. 92 (84 N. W. 603).

Liability for negligence.

Liability for negligence in approval of stay bond, see Execution, §§ 116-118.

10. (1876.) The clerk of the district court is not liable for taking insufficient security, if he exercises a reasonable degree of care in the performance of his duty. Brock v. Hopkins, 5 Neb. 231.

11. (1876.) The clerk of a district court is a ministerial officer, and is liable for damages occasioned by his "negligently and carelessly" taking insufficient security. Brock v. Hopkins, 5 Neb. 231.

12. (1880.) In a petition to recover for damages occasioned by the neglect of the clerk of a district court to properly enter a transcript of judgment on the judgment record, so as to create a lien on real estate of the defendant, it is not necessary to allege that an execution has been issued on the judgment, and returned unsatisfied for want of property whereon to levy, but an allegation showing that the defendant owned no other property than that on which the lien was sought, and that owing to such neglect this has become lost to him, is sufficient. Ryan v. State Bank, 10 Neb. 524 (7 N. W. 276).

13. (1880.) To prove the neglect of the clerk of a district court to enter a transcript of judgment filed in his office on the judgment record so as to make the judgment a lien on real estate it is necessary to show that he was requested to do so. Ryan v. State Bank, 10 Neb. 524 (7 N. W. 276).

15. (1882.) In counties containing less than 8,000 inhabitants county clerks are also clerks of the district courts of their respective counties. The duties being imposed upon them as county clerks, they must report the fees received by virtue of their office. State, ex rel. County Commissioners, v. Whittemore, 12 Neb. 252 (11 N. W. 310).

16. (1905.) The clerk of the district court is not required to account to the county for fees collected by him for services rendered by his predecessor before section 3, chapter 28, Compiled Statutes, as amended April 3, 1899, went into effect, although the act was in effect when such fees were collected. Boettcher v. Lancaster County, 74 Neb. 148 (103 N. W. 1075).

17. (1905.) Under act April 3, 1899, amending section 3, chapter 28, Compiled Statutes, a clerk of the district court is required to account for the fees earned by him as a member of the board of commissioners of insanity. Boettcher v. Lancaster County, 74 Neb. 148 (103 N. W. 1075).

18. (1905.) The clerk of the district court is not required to account to the county for fees collected by him for services rendered by his predecessor before section 3, chapter 28, Compiled Statutes, as amended April 3, 1899, went into effect, although the act was in effect when such fees were collected. Boettcher v. Lancaster County, 74 Neb. 148 (103 N. W. 1075).

19. (1905.) Under act April 3, 1899, amending section 3, chapter 28, Compiled Statutes, the clerk of the district court extends credit at his peril, and will be required to account for the fees earned by him for official services, whether the same are collected or not. Boettcher v. Lancaster County, 74 Neb. 148 (103 N. W. 1075).

Liability on official bond.

20. (1879.) The making of a false certificate that a sum of money has been allowed a county clerk, whereby he was enabled to sell the same, not being an official act or within his duties, his sureties are not liable to purchaser thereof. Ottenstein v. Alpaugh, 9 Neb. 237 (2 N. W. 219).

21. (1882.) The receipt of money by the clerk of a court of record upon a judgment in his office, whether paid voluntarily or made by the sheriff on execution, is an official act, and his failure to faithfully account for such money is a breach of his bond, for which his sureties are liable in an action upon it. McDonald v. Atkins, 13 Neb. 568, (14 N. W. 532).

22. (1892.) While the record of a district court is supposed to contain a history of the proceedings before that tribunal, and is under the conrtol of the judge, so far that it shall be a truthful statement of the proceedings, yet the ownership of the books themselves is in the county; and for any dereliction of official duty in the clerk of the court, by reason of which the county sustains pecuniary loss, the officer and sureties will be liable on his bond. Toncray v. Dodge County, 33 Neb. 802 (51 N. W. 235).

23. (1892.) A county may recover from a clerk of the district court and his sureties for expenses in reproducing records destroyed through the negligence of such clerk, though his bond runs to the people and not to the county. Toncray v. Dodge County, 33 Neb. 802 (51 N. W. 235).

24. (1895.) The sureties on the bond of a district clerk are not liable for the approval of an insufficient delivery on an attachment. Dewey & Stone v. Kavanaugh, 45 Neb. 233 (63 N. W. 396).

25. (1895.) The mere facts that the clerk of the district court, without authority, approved a delivery bond and directed the sheriff to release the attached property, in the absence of evidence of fraud or deceit practiced by the clerk, were not alone sufficient to render him liable to the plaintiffs in attachment for the loss sustained by reason of the clerk's approval of the bond and the release of the property by the sheriff in obedience to the order of the clerk. Dewey & Stone v. Kavanaugh, 45 Neb. 233 (63 N. W. 396).

26. (1903.) Where the sureties deny the execution and delivery of the official bond of the clerk of court and the clerk defends on the ground that he merely received the money as bailee, and not in his official capacity as clerk, a tender of part payment by him does not impair the defense of the sureties. Craw v. Abrams, 68 Neb. 553 (97 N. W. 296).

27. (1903.) The sheriff and the purchaser at a judicial sale disobey the statute making the sheriff the sole custodian of the proceeds of the sale, at their peril, but they cannot by such disobedience, and the payment of the money to the clerk of the court, impose obligations upon him, as such clerk, foreign to the duties of his office. Craw v. Abrams, 68 Neb. 546 (94 N. W. 639).

28. (1905.) Before the act amendatory of section 3, chapter 28, Compiled Statutes, 1903, limiting the salary of clerks of the district court went into effect, a clerk had collected the fees for making complete records, but died before such records were made. At the request of his representatives, and after said act went into effect, his successor made up these records and received the fees therefor from such representatives. In an action by the county on the official bond of such successor, held, that he was properly chargeable with such fees. Boettcher v. Lancaster County, 74 Neb. 148 (103 N. W. 1075).

29. (1907.) In an action on the bond of a clerk of the district court for negligence in failing to index certain judgments, resulting in the loss of the lien thereof, defended on the ground that plaintiff had negligently failed to enforce his judgments against certain property of the judgment debtor, the instructions examined, and held not to be prejudicial to the plaintiff. German Nat. Bank of Beatrice v. Laflin, 78 Neb. 715 (111 N. W. 578).

30. (1907.) In an action on the bond of a clerk of the district court for negligence in failure to index certain judgments, resulting in a loss of the lien thereof, defended on the ground that plaintiff had negligently failed to enforce his judgment against certain property of the judgment debtor, the evidence examined and held to sustain a judgment for defendants. German Nat. Bank of Beatrice v. Laflin, 78 Neb. 715 (111 N. W. 578).

Mandamus to compel performance of duty.

31. (1890.) Section 889 of the code confers authority upon the district court to direct its clerk in the performance of his official duties, and the supreme court will not issue a mandamus to compel such clerk to issue an order of sale upon a decree of foreclosure, where there has been no application to and refusal by the district court to direct its clerk to issue such order of sale. State, ex rel. Sloman, v. Moores, 29 Neb. 122 (45 N. W. 278).

32. (1897.) The supreme court will not issue mandamus to compel the clerk of the district court to issue execution on a judgment when no application to, and a refusal by, the district court to so issue. State, ex rel. Ogden, v. Frank, 52 Neb. 553 (72 N. W. 857).

33. (1888.) Section 27, chapter 19, Compiled Statutes, 1887, makes it the duty of the clerk of the district court to keep a record of the proceedings of the court, under the direction of the judge of such court. The supreme court has no jurisdiction or authority to exercise the functions of the district court in the matter of the preparation of the records of said court, its jurisdiction, except in certain cases, being appellate and not original. State, ex rel. Wilkins, v. Le Fevre, 25 Neb. 223 (41 N. W. 184).

Custodian of funds and liability therefor.

34. (1893.) Where real estate has been sold under proceedings in partition and on the discharge of the referee he is ordered to turn over the proceeds in his possession to the clerk of the court for the benefit of the persons entitled thereto, the clerk holds such funds as a mere trustee and not strictly as clerk of the court, and it is his duty to deliver it to the persons entitled to it. State, ex rel. Levy, v. Spicer, 36 Neb. 469 (54 N. W. 849).

35. (1893.) On the facts stated in the petition, the defendant, a district clerk, held certain money and notes in controversy in trust, and it was his duty to pay and deliver the same to the parties entitled thereto. State, ex rel. Levy, v. Spicer, 36 Neb. 469 (54 N. W. 849).

36. (1893.) In an action to compel a clerk to pay over money in his hands, a demurrer overruled and five days given to answer. State, ex rel. Levy, v. Spicer, 36 Neb. 469 (54 N. W. 849).

37. (1897.) A clerk of the district court, as to moneys received by him in payment of fines and penalties imposed in his court, is a collector and custodian of public money within the meaning of section 2, article XIV of the constitution. State, ex rel, Broatch, v. Moores, 52 Neb. 770 (73 N. W. 299).

38. (1897.) An action in equity will not lie to subject to the payment of the claim of a judgment creditor money held by the clerk of a court in his official capacity. Anheuser-Busch Brewing Ass'n v. Hier, 52 Neb. 424 (72 N. W. 588).

39. (1898.) A clerk of the district court who, knowingly and intentionally deposits public money received in payment of fines imposed in his court, and his own private funds in a bank in one general account, to his own individual credit, and before paying the fines to the county treasurer withdraws all of the funds from the bank and uses the same for his own use, is properly held in default within the meaning of section 2, article XIV of the constitution, and is ineligible to any office of trust or profit during the existence of such default. State, ex rel. Broatch, v. Moores, 56 Neb. 1 (76 N. W. 530).

40. (1893.) The clerk of the court is the proper custodian of money paid into court pursuant to an order or judgment of the court. Dirks v. Juel, 59 Neb. 353 (80 N. W. 1045).

41. (1899.) Bringing money into court is the act of depositing money in the hands of the proper officer of the court for the purpose of satisfying a debt or duty. Dirks v. Juel, 59 Neb. 353 (80 N. W. 1045).

42. (1899.) Where, by his answer, defendant concedes that he received and receipted for certain money as clerk of the district court, and has paid a portion of it to his successor in office, he is still presumed to retain the balance in custodia legis, notwithstanding the fact that he may actually have paid it out on an ineffectual garnishment. Baker v. Peterson, 57 Neb. 375 (77 N. W. 774).

43. (1900.) Money paid to the clerk under an order of the court is received by him in his official capacity. Bantley v. Baker, 61 Neb. 92 (84 N. W. 603).

44. (1900.) Where, in an action for specific performance, the decree provides that notes evidencing part of the purchase price shall be deposited with the clerk of the court pending the execution of a deed by the vendor, such clerk is neither charged with the duty, nor given the right, to collect or receive in his official capacity the money due upon the notes. Bantley v. Baker, 61 Neb. 92 (84 N. W. 603).

45. (1901.) Where the clerk of a state court for a certain county has possession of the records of the territorial court for the same county, both courts being of the same description, it will be presumed his possession was rightful. McPherson v. Commercial Nat. Bank, 61 Neb. 695 (85 N. W. 895).

46. (1904.) When the clerk of the district court pays money in his hands belonging to A, over to B, as attorney for C, and B pays the same, less his fee, to C, they are all three liable to A therefor regardless of whether their act was the result of intention, or ignorance of the law. Story v. Robertson, 5 Unof. 404 (98 N. W. 825).

Compensation and fees.

47. (1880.) Whether the language of the statute includes anything more than clerk's fees for transcript of the record of the case, quære. Stanton County v. Madison County, 10 Neb. 304 (4 N. W. 1055).

48. (1882.) The act to regulate fees, approved February 15, 1877, is not an amendment of sections 1, 5, 8, and 14, chapter 19, Revised Statutes 1866, but an original act. State, ex rel. County Commissioners, v. Whittemore, 12 Neb. 252 (11 N. W. 310).

49. (1900.) Act of 1899 (Laws 1899, ch. 31) amending section 3, chapter 28, Compiled Statutes, entitled "Fees," does not intrench upon or amend section 43, chapter 19, Compiled Statutes, 1899, respecting the appointment of deputies by clerks of the district court. State, ex rel. Douglas County, v. Frank, 60 Neb. 327 (83 N. W. 74).

50. (1900.) The act of 1899 (Session Laws, ch. 31) amending section 3, chapter 28, Compiled Statutes, 1897, entitled "Fees," limits the compensation which the clerk of the district court may receive for his services, is germane to the section amended, and its provisions are within its title. State, ex rel. Douglas County, v. Frank, 60 Neb. 327 (83 N. W. 74).

51. (1901.) Chapter 31, Session Laws, 1899, amending section 3, chapter 28, Compiled Statutes, 1897, is germane to the section amended, and its provisions are within its title. State, ex rel. Douglas County, v. Frank, 61 Neb. 679 (85 N. W. 956).

52. (1903.) Under the authority of chapter 34 of the laws of 1897, the county board may, in the exercise of good faith, make a supplemental allowance of compensation for the services of the clerk of the county court after the services have been rendered. County of Adams v. Bowen, 69 Neb. 405 (95 N. W. 869).

53. (1905.) The clerk of the district court cannot be required to search the records of his office to ascertain what liens, if any, exist against lands described in an abstract of title, and make and enter upon the abstract a compilation and statement of the result of such search. If he performs such service, he is entitled to reasonable compensation for making such statement and entering it upon the abstract. He is not entitled to a fee for making a search of his records necessary to the performance of another service "to which a fee is attached." Sheibley v. Hurley, 74 Neb. 31 (103 N. W. 1082).

——— Clerk of supreme court.

54. (1884.) The salary of the clerk of the supreme court is exclusive of the modes of compensation for preparing the state reports for publication. In re Brown, 15 Neb. 688 (50 N. W. 273).

55. (1884.) Under the provisions of section 19, laws 1879, p. 82, in connection with section 8, article VI of the constitution, the reporter of the supreme court is only entitled to draw from the state treasury the cost of printing, stereotyping, and binding each volume of reports not exceeding $2.25 per volume. Expenses incurred by the reporter in preparing copy, reading proof, and packing and shipping are not properly chargeable against the appropriation made by the legislature for payment of said volumes. The salary paid to the reporter is exclusive of any and all other modes of compensation for work on the reports. In re Brown, 15 Neb. 688 (50 N. W. 273).

56. (1902.) The appropriation for the salary of the reporter and ex-officio clerk and librarian of the supreme court is made by section 25, article XVI, of the constitution, and requires no special legislative enactment. Weston v. Herdman, 64 Neb. 24 (89 N. W. 384).

Liability for taking excessive fees.

57. (1891.) Where a clerk of the district court takes fees, is excess of that limited by law, he is liable to the party injured for the penalty provided by section 34, chapter 28, Compiled Statutes. Lydick v. Palmquist, 31 Neb. 300 (47 N. W. 918).

Action for penalty and recovery of illegal fees.

58. (1889.) In an action to recover the penalty for taking illegal fees for making out and certifying to certain transcripts of judgments the testimony tended to show that eight of the transcripts were demanded at one time, and were received together and paid for in one sum, although separately itemized in the bill, an instruction which in effect directed the jury to find that there were eight separate causes of action was properly refused. Phœnix Ins. Co. v. Bohman, 28 Neb. 251 (44 N. W. 111).

59. (1891.) Receipt by a public officer of several items of illegal fees from the same person, in the same transaction, gives but one cause of action for the penalty provided by section 34, chapter 28, Compiled Statutes. Lydick v. Palmquist, 31 Neb. 300 (47 N. W. 918).

Nature and status of organization.

1. (1877.) The corporate body known as "The Regents of the University of Nebraska," is, in its strictest sense, a public corporation. Regents of the University v. McConnell, 5 Neb. 423.

2. (1877.) The creation of the University of Nebraska, as a public corporation by legislative authority, is not repugnant to the constitution. Regents of the University v. McConnell, 5 Neb. 423.

3. (1877.) The University of Nebraska corporation is but part of the machinery employed in carrying on the affairs of state, and is subject to be changed, modified, restrained or destroyed as the general interests and public exigencies may require. Regents of the University v. McConnell, 5 Neb. 423.

4. (1903.) The State University of Nebraska is a state institution, and its board of regents is an agent of the state. Von Forel v. State, ex rel. Ansley, 4 Unof. 843 (96 N. W. 648).

5. (1903.) The fact that an educational institution may acquire and convey property necessary to the accomplishment of its object, and may charge tuition for instruction, does not render it an incorporation for the pecuniary benefit of its members. McLeod v. Lincoln Medical College, 69 Neb. 550 (96 N. W. 265).

Officers.

6. (1880.) The state treasurer is not the treasurer of the board of regents of the state university. State, ex rel. McLean, v. Leidtke, 9 Neb. 468 (4 N. W. 61).

7. (1905.) The provisions of the biennial election law (laws 1905, ch. 65) are found to be in conflict with the paramount law relative to the election of judicial officers and regents of the university, and the time thereof, and of their terms of office; and are held to be inoperative and void. State, ex rel. Polk, v. Galusha, 74 Neb. 188 (104 N. W. 197).

8. (1905.) Under the constitution it is mandatory that a general election shall be held in each odd numbered year for the election of university regents. State, ex rel. Polk, v. Galusha, 74 Neb. 188 (104 N. W. 197).

Salaries.

Compelling allowance of salaries of instructors, see Mandamus, § 143.

9. (1880.) Under the appropriation bill of 1879, the salaries of the officers and professors of the State University for the years 1879 and 1880 are payable out of the general fund. State, ex rel. McLean, v. Leidtke 9 Neb. 468 (4 N. W. 61).

Digitized by Google

10. (1885.) The regents of the university, in the absence of an appropriation by the legislature, have no power to dispose of the endowment fund or that derived from the three-eighths mill tax. State, ex rel. Bessey, v. Babcock, 17 Neb. 610 (24 N. W. 202).

11. (1903.) The board of regents of the State University, in allowing certificates for salaries of professors in that institution duly fixed by law, act ministerially, and mandamus will lie to compel their action in this particular. Von Forel v. State, ex rel. Ansley, 4 Unof. 843 (96 N. W. 648).

Custody and control of funds.

12. (1877.) Under the legislative acts of 1869 and 1875 the state treasurer is made the custodian of all the university funds, to be disbursed by him upon warrants drawn by the state auditor. Regents of the University v. McConnell, 5 Neb. 423.

13. (1893.) There is no authority for the secretary of the board of regents of the state university to draw any money appropriated for the university or any of its buildings except upon vouchers duly certified. State, ex rel. Dales, v. Moore, 36 Neb. 579 (54 N. W. 866).

14. (1893.) Under the provisions of the act making an appropriation for the current expenses of the state for the years ending March 31, 1892, and March 31, 1893, etc., approved April 6, 1891, whereby an appropriation of $37,000 was made for fire-proof library building at the state university, no part of said appropriation can be drawn except upon proper vouchers filed with the auditor of public accounts. State, ex rel. Dales, v. Moore, 36 Neb. 579 (54 N. W. 866).

15. (1893.) The term "voucher," when used in connection with the disbursement of money, means a written or printed instrument in the nature of a bill of particulars, accounts, etc., which shows by what authority a particular payment has been made. State, ex rel. Dales, v. Moore, 36 Neb. 579 (54 N. W. 866).

16. (1895.) Chapter 65, Session Laws, 1895, providing for a uniform system of vouchers, applies to claims against the state university. State, ex rel. Regents of University, v. Moore, 46 Neb. 373 (64 N. W. 975).

17. (1895.) Claims against the university must be presented to the auditor upon vouchers drawn in conformity with the act of 1895. State, ex rel. Regents of University, v. Moore, 46 Neb. 373 (64 N. W. 975).

18. (1906.) The money donated by the United States to the University of Nebraska by an act of congress approved March 2, 1887, and acts supplemental thereto, known as the "Experimental Station" fund, may be expended by the board of regents for the purposes expressed by the donation, without other or more specific legislative appropriation than that implied by section 2, article VIII of the constitution, and contained in section 19, chapter 87, Compiled Statutes 1905. State, ex rel. Spencer Lens Co., v. Searle, 77 Neb. 155 (108 N. W. 1119).

Appropriating funds to.

19. (1907.) The act of the legislature passed and approved April 4, 1907, appropriating the proceeds of taxes for the years 1907 and 1908, and so much of the proceeds of the one mill tax for the years 1905 and 1906, not heretofore appropriated, to the use of the State University for the biennium ending March 31, 1909, amounts to a specific appropriation within the meaning of section 22, article III of the constitution. State, ex rel. Ledwith, v. Searle, 79 Neb. 111 (112 N. W. 380).

20. (1907.) That part of section 19, chapter 87, Compiled Statutes 1905, which provides that in the year 1899, and annually thereafter, a tax of one mill on the dollar shall be levied on all of the taxable property in the state, the proceeds to constitute a fund for the maintenance of the university, was not repealed by implication by the revenue law of 1903. State, ex rel. Ledwith, v. Searle, 79 Neb. 111 (112 N. W. 380).

Actions.

21. (1877.) The regents of the University of Nebraska, as such corporation, may sue and be sued in matters over which express authority is given to such corporation. Regents of the University v. McConnell, 5 Neb. 423.

22. (1877.) The university corporation acts simply by delegated authority, and can exercise only such powers as are expressly given to it; and not having corporate power over the university funds, it has no authority to bring and maintain an action to recover such funds. Regents of University v. McConnell, 5 Neb. 423.

23. (1897.) In an action on a contract of employment as a teacher of elocution by the president of the defendant who exceeded his authority, it is error to instruct the jury that it should find for plaintiff if they find the defendant ratified the unauthorized contract, when there is no evidence to show that the defendant knew of the existence of the contract. Nebraska Wesleyan University v. Parker, 52 Neb. 453 (72 N. W. 470).

24. (1901.) Note and mortgage running to Creighton University, trustee for Creighton College, are valid and enforceable obligations, notwithstanding that there has been no legal incorporation of Creighton College. Goddard v. Clarke, 1 Unof. 769 (96 N. W. 350).

Regulation of liquor traffic.

1. (1891.) Section 2360 of the code of Iowa prohibits the manufacture for sale or selling of intoxicating liquors within the state for any purpose except for pharmaceutical, medical, chemical, and sacramental purposes, and then only by persons holding permits from the proper authorities. The Franz Brewing Company, without such permit, manufactured and sold in that state a quantity of beer for the purpose of being transported to this state. Held, That the sale was in violation of said law, and that the Iowa statute does not conflict with section 8, article 1, of the federal constitution which confers upon congress the exclusive power to regulate interstate commerce. Tredway v. Riley, 32 Neb. 495 (49 N. W. 268; 29 Am. St. Rep. 447).

Application of state statutes to interstate commerce.

2. (1904.) Article I, chapter 77, pages 62-64, Compiled Statutes, imposing a penalty for peddling without a license, does not authorize a conviction of one who solicits orders in the state, which orders are sent to a business house in another state, which packs the goods ordered and ships them to the solicitor, who distributes them to the purchasers, collects the money therefore and remits the same to the shipper, since such a transaction constitutes interstate commerce. Menke v. State, 70 Neb. 669 (97 N. W. 1020).

3. (1904.) Sections 62, 63, and 64, article I, chapter 77, of the Compiled Statutes of 1903, providing for the licensing of peddlers, and imposing a penalty for their violation, are not void as being in contravention either of the constitution of this state, or of the constitution of the United States, but they are inapplicable to transactions constituting interstate commerce. Menke v. State, 70 Neb. 669 (97 N. W. 1020).

Federal jurisdiction of interstate commerce.

4. (1893.) The state courts have not lost their jurisdiction of the subject-matter of actions against carriers because of interstate shipments by reason of the fact that congress has legislated upon the subject. St. Joseph & G. I. R. Co. v. Palmer, 38 Neb. 463 (56 N. W. 957; 22 L. R. A. 335).

5. (1894.) The act of congress entitled an act to regulate commerce abrogated all existing contracts with common carriers for interstate commercial rates, and especially vested in the federal courts exclusive jurisdiction to inquire into and adjust such interstate rates as are alleged to be unfair or discriminative. Fitzgerald v. Fitzgerald & Mallory Construction Co., 41 Neb. 374 (59 N. W. 838).

Jurisdiction of state courts.

6. (1906.) The allowance by railroad companies of certain charges, as elevator charges, to terminal elevators on shipments of grain from points in this state to points without the state is an incident of interstate commerce, and the supreme court has no jurisdiction to limit or control the same. State v. Omaha Elevator Co., 75 Neb. 654 (106 N. W. 979).

Taxation of interstate telegraph messages.

7. (1894.) Where a telegraph company is engaged in both interstate and intrastate business, an ordinance levying an occupation tax on that portion of such business which is carried on wholly within the state is not repugnant to section 8, article I of the constitution of the United States, since it in no way interferes with, or regulates, interstate commerce. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. City of Fremont, 39 Neb. 692 (58 N. W. 415).

8. (1894.) State and municipal authorities are powerless to impose a tax upon messages to or from other states, since such a tax would be in conflict with that clause of the federal constitution which gives to congress the exclusive power to regulate commerce among the several states. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. City of Fremont, 39 Neb. 692 (58 N. W. 415).

Common law in force.

1. (1880.) So much of the common law of England as is applicable and not inconsistent with the constitution of the United States, with the organic law of this territory, or with any law passed or to be passed by the legislature of this territory, be and the same is adopted and declared to be law within this territory. Delaney v. Errickson, 10 Neb. 492 (6 N. W. 600; 35 Am. Rep. 487).

2. (1898.) While the law of England has been adopted by statute in this state, the statute does not extend to those rules of the English law which contravene the object and purpose of our own statutes. *Bloomfield State Bank v. 3a. (1905.) By statute so much of the common law of England as is applicable and not inconsistent with the constitution of the United States or the constitution and statutes of this state is in force in this state. Kinkead v. Turgeon, 74 Neb. 580 (109 N. W. 744).

4. (1903.) The term "common law of England," as used in chapter 15a, Compiled Statutes, refers to that general system of law which prevails in England, and in most of the United States by derivation from England, as distinguished from the Roman or civil law system. Hence the statute does not require adherence to the decisions of the English common-law courts prior to the Revolution in case this court considers subsequent decisions, either in England or America, better expositions of the general principles of that system. Williams v. Miles, 68 Neb. 463 (94 N. W. 705; 110 Am. St. Rep. 431; 62 L. R. A. 383).

Common law as vested right.

5. (1901.) There is no vested right in any rule of the common law. State v. Heldenbrand, 62 Neb. 136 (87 N. W. 25; 89 Am. St. Rep. 493).

Power of courts to apply.

6. (1903.) The power of the courts to declare established doctrines of the common law inapplicable to this state should be used somewhat sparingly, and its exercise is not to be justified unless the inapplicability of a rule is general, extending to the whole or the greater part of the state, or, at least, to an area capable of definite judicial ascertainment. Meng v. Coffee, 67 Neb. 500 (93 N. W. 713; 108 Am. St. Rep. 697; 60 L. R. A. 910).

Applicability to riparian owners.

7. (1903.) The common-law rule with respect to the rights of private riparian proprietors has been a part of the laws of the state ever since the organization of a state government. Crawford Co. v. Hathaway, 67 Neb. 325 (93 N. W. 781; 108 Am. St. Rep. 647; 60 L. R. A. 889).

8 (1903.) It can not be said that the common-law rule defining the rights of riparian proprietors is inapplicable to the conditions prevailing in the state because irrigation is found essential to successful agriculture in some portions thereof. Crawford Co. v. Hathaway, 67 Neb. 325 (93 N. W. 781; 108 Am. St. Rep. 647; 60 L. R. A. 889).

9. (1903.) The common-law rules as to the rights and duties of riparian owners are in force in every part of the state, except as altered or modified by statutes. Meng v. Coffee, 67 Neb. 500 (93 N. W. 713; 108 Am. St. Rep. 697; 60 L. R. A. 910).

1. (1891.) The maker of notes placed with a bank as trustee to secure the claims of certain creditors of the payee, cannot purchase such claims at a discount and set off their face value against the notes; he can be credited only with the amounts actually paid by him. Hughes v. Swartz, 33 Neb. 276 (50 N. W. 5).

2. (1893.) The main issue in this case being whether the note sued upon was given by the defendant as payment for the other 50 per cent. due from defendant to plaintiffs (50 per cent. having already been paid upon a general composition agreement of Treitschke with his creditors), or whether said note was given plaintiffs for services by plaintiffs' agent rendered for defendant, independently of such agency; it was proper to instruct the jury: 1. That if plaintiffs with Treitschke entered into such a composition agreement a note taken for the 50 per cent. by said composition rebated would be a fraud upon the rights of the other compounding creditors, and that payment thereof would not therefore be enforced. 2. Instructions as to the rights of plaintiffs, upon plaintiffs' theory of the transaction, properly required upon the evidence adduced that the jury should "believe from the testimony that such transaction was made in good faith, and not as a device to evade the effeect of a payment to the plaintiffs directly." Freiberg v. Treitschke, 36 Neb. 880 (55 N. W. 273).

Breen*, 68 Neb. 379 (94 N. W. 614.)

Consideration.

5. (1881.) The prevention of litigation is a sufficient consideration to support a compromise of a claim, and courts will not inquire into the relative value of the claim and the property given in settlement thereof. Boyce v. Berger, 11 Neb. 399 (9 N. W. 545).

6. (1892.) Acceptance of a check for a less amount than the contract price of a steam boiler, without any condition as to its acceptance save a statement in the nature of a counter-claim, which would balance the account, does not bar an action, by the creditor, to recover the balance of the account. Fremont Foundry & Machine Co. v. Norton, 3 Unof. 804 (92 N. W. 1058).

7. (1902.) When there is a bona fide dispute between parties as to the amount due upon an account, and the debtor tenders a less amount than the claim in full settlement, which the creditor accepts, with knowledge that it was tendered as a full settlement, the dispute will be a sufficient consideration to uphold the settlement, and will bar a recovery upon the remainder of the claim. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Buckstaff, 65 Neb. 334 (91 N. W. 426).

8. (1895.) The settlement of a doubtful or disputed claim is generally a sufficient consideration for a compromise, but to have such effect it is essential that there be in fact a dispute or doubt of the rights of the parties. Fitzgerald v. Fitzgerald & Mallory Construction Co., 44 Neb. 463 (62 N. W. 899).

9. (1895.) An arbitrary refusal to pay, based on the mere pretense of the debtor, made for the purpose of exacting terms which are inequitable and oppressive, is not such a dispute as will of itself support a compromise resulting in a reduction of the amount of indebtedness. Fitzgerald v. Fitzgerald & Mallory Construction Co., 44 Neb. 463 (62 N. W. 899).

10. (1896.) If a consideration is necessary to sustain a settlement made by the payment and receipt in full satisfaction of the sum which the debtor admits to be due, it is found in the fact that the creditor by accepting such sum thereby avoids the delay, expense, and labor of an accounting, and avoids threatened litigation. Treat v. Price, 47 Neb. 875 (66 N. W. 834.)

11. (1897.) The settlemen of a doubtful or disputed claim is generally a sufficient consideration for a compromise, but in order to have such effect it is essential that there be in fact a dispute or doubt of the rights of the parties. An arbitrary refusal to pay, based on the mere pretense of the debtor, made for the obvious purpose of exacting terms which are inequitable and oppressive, is not such a dispute as will of itself support a compromise resulting in a reduction of the amount of his indebtedness. Home Fire Ins. Co. v. Skoumal, 51 Neb. 655 (71 N. W. 290).

12. (1904.) An accord, even between the plaintiff and a third party, as to the subject matter of an action, and a satisfaction moving from such third party to the plaintiff, are available in bar of the action, if the defendant has authorized or ratified the settlement. Chicago, R. I & P R. Co., v. Brown, 70 Neb. 696 (97 N. W. 1038).

13. (1904.) That it is uncertain which of two parties, both of whom deny liability, is liable for a debt of a fixed and certain amount, is a sufficient consideration to support a settlement betweeen one of such parties and the creditor, whereby the creditor accepts a part of the amount due in discharge of the debt. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Brown, 70 Neb. 696 (97 N. W. 1038).

14. (1906.) If the claimant, knowing that his claim is groundless, forces the other party to a compromise by threats of suit, there is no consideration and the compromise will not be enforced. Gering v. School District, 76 Neb. 219 (107 N. W. 250).

15. (1906.) Forbearance to prosecute proceedings for the reversal of a judgment is a sufficient consideration for a compromise, and, unless the good faith of the claimant in pressing his claim is put in issue, whether he intended to prosecute such proceedings is immaterial. Gering v. School District, 76 Neb. 219 (107 N. W. 250).

16. (1906.) A compromise, whereby one party agrees to pay and the other to receive a certain sum in satisfaction of a doubtful claim, rests upon a sufficient consideration. Gering v. School District, 76 Neb. 219 (107 N. W. 250).

Operation and effect.

17. (1872.) If two parties claim property adversely, and the subject is in litigation, and they come to an agreement in respect of their rights without fraud on the part of either, beyond the representation by one that he owns the property, the other, after a judicial decision in favor of his claims, cannot avoid the compromise. Mills v. Miller, 2 Neb. 299.

18. (1893.) A conveyed certain real estate to B by an absolute deed to secure the payment of a loan. The trust character of this deed was recognized by the grantee, who at various times promised that upon a sale of the property he would pay him the surplus in excess of the loan and interest. Afterwards A brought an action against B to redeem, and offered to pay the loan with interest. While the action was pending A and B entered into a stipulation as to the amount which A should pay B, whereupon he would recover the premises. Held, That in the absence of fraud or misrepresentation the agreement was binding upon the parties, and would be enforced. Hamley v. Doe, 36 Neb. 398 (54 N. W. 673).

19. (1894.) A compromise of honest differences whereby a less sum than that claimed has been paid and accepted in full of plaintiff's claim bars the right of plaintiff to recover the balance. Slade v. Swedeburg Elevator Co., 39 Neb. 600 (58 N. W. 191).

20. (1896.) Where a creditor accepts from his debtor a part of an unliquidated demand against him in full settlement and compromise thereof, such an act is a defense and bar to an action by the creditor against the debtor for the original demand, unless it be pleaded and proved that the settlement was procured by fraud, mistake, or duress. Home Fire Ins. Co. v. Bredehoft, 49 Neb. 152 (68 N. W. 400).

21. (1896.) A being indebted to B in an uncertain amount, sent to the C bank the amount which A conceded to be due, with instructions to pay the sum to B but only in full settlement, and on his signing a receipt to that effect. B, protesting that more was due, accepted the money and signed the receipt, but caused the bank to send back, accompanying the receipt, a letter declaring that he only received the money on account and not in settlement. Held, That by receiving the money he had accepted the condition on which it was tendered, and that his protest availed nothing. The terms of the receipt and the refusal of the bank to pay the money except upon his signing it, were notice to him that the bank had no authority to pay it except on the condition that it should be received in full settlement. Treat v. Price, 47 Neb. 875 (66 N. W. 834).

22. (1902.) Where parties enter into an agreement whereby the one agrees to pay, and the other to accept, a certain sum in full satisfaction and discharge of a disputed claim urged by the latter against the former, such agreement constitutes a valid contract between the parties. Massillon Engine & Thresher Co. v. Prouty, 65 Neb. 496 (91 N. W. 384).

22*a*. (1908.) When, in an action to set aside a conveyance of land as having been fraudulently procured, the plaintiff obtains a decree in his favor by means of a compromise and settlement, in which he agrees to pay and discharge a mortgage upon the premises executed by his fraudulent grantee, he is not entitled to object, in a subsequent action to foreclose that mortgage, that the same is for a sum in excess of the just indebtedness of the mortgagor to the mortgagee, or that prior to the settlement the mortgagee might have obtained a partial satisfaction from a source other than the land. Hannan v. Rihner, 80 Neb. 521 (114 N. W. 605).

23. (1902.) If an agreement for satisfaction and discharge of a disputed claim contemplates the surrender of evidence of indebtedness, on the part of the creditor, on payment of the amount agreed upon, in an action on such contract, the creditor is entitled to recover on a showing of readiness and willingness to perform his part of such contract. Massillon Engine & Thresher Co. v. Prouty, 65 Neb. 496 (91 N. W. 384).

Ratification of settlement by pleading.

24. (1904.) A plea interposing the defense of accord and satisfaction made between plaintiff and a third person, is of itself a ratification of the settlement. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Brown, 70 Neb. 696 (97 N. W. 1038).

Setting aside.

25. (1887.) Where, in an action for divorce and alimony, an order is made by the court in which the cause is pending, requiring a sum of money to be paid into court as and for attorney's fees, and afterwards the parties to the action, by collusion and fraud and for the purpose of defrauding the attorney for plaintiff out of the allowance made for his compensation, with notice of an attorney's lien thereon in his favor, enter into an alleged settlement by which the cause is to be dismissed and the order for alimony satisfied, such fraudulent settlement will be set aside, on motion of the attorney entitled to the money, and the amount found due ordered to be paid into court by the defendant. Aspinwall v. Sabin, 22 Neb. 73 (34 N. W. 72; 3 Am. St. Rep. 258).

26 (1896.) A settlement of a disputed demand will be set aside when procured by fraud, mistake or duress. Home Fire Ins. Co. v. Bredehoft, 49 Neb. 152 (68 N. W. 400).

27. (1902.) One S. had conveyed, by a warranty deed absolute in form, to a bank certain real estate as security for an indebtedness owing by S. to the bank. S. was in financial distress and had no means of meeting his indebtedness save by a sale of the real estate. The bank thereafter assumed to be the absolute owner of the property and denied to S. any right, interest or equity therein, and by injunction proceedings undertoook to dispossess him of a portion of such land. S. procured a purchaser at an advantageous price, and endeavored to adjust his differences with the bank, so as to effectuate a sale of the property, and meet pressing demands against him. The bank refused to consent to a sale or release its interest or reconvey the premises to S., so that a sale might be consummated without the payment by S. of a large sum of money in excess of the amount justly due. Held, Under the facts and circumstances as disclosed by the record, that the payment of the excess over and above the amount justly due, and also a compromise and settlement, the basis thereof, were made under duress and compulsion, and might be recovered back in an action brought for that purpose. First Nat. Bank of David City v. Sargeant, 65 Neb. 594 (91 N. W. 595; 59 L. R. A. 296).

28. (1902.) The fact that the party taking the money and giving a receipt in full supposed that certain checks, for whose payment the other party refused to indemnify him unless they were produced, were irrecoverably lost, and also supposed his claim for their payment could not be maintained without them, does not constitute a mistake which permits the disregarding of the settlement and a recovery of the amount of the checks after finding them, no fraud being alleged, and the nature and amount of the claim being well known to both parties. Connor v. Etheridge, 3 Unof. 555 (92 N. W. 135).

29. (1902.) Where a settlement is entered into between two parties in reliance on the accuracy and correctness of boooks of account kept by one of the parties, and it is subsequently discovered that the books have been erroneously kept, and that the party keeping them has not accounted for all the money which he has received, such a settlement will be set aside and a new accounting had although there may have been no intentional fraud practiced by the bookkeeper, and the failure to account may have been due to mistakes alone. Leidigh v. Keever, 2 Unof. 343 (96 N. W. 106).

30. (1902.) One who, on a settlement with his principal of transactions by him as agent, writes a receipt in full of all demands and attaches it to a draft for the amount the other party has offered to pay for such a receipt, cannot after taking the money, in absence of fraud or mistake, renew a claim previously in dispute between the parties. Connor v. Etheridge, 3 Unof. 555 (92 N. W. 135).

——— Parties.

31. (1887.) Original plaintiff not necessary party to motion by her attorney to set aside settlement of case after an allowance of attorney's fees had been made to her, on ground of fraud. Aspinwall v. Sabin, 22 Neb. 73 (34 N. W. 72; 3 Am. St. Rep. 258).

——— Evidence of fraud.

32. (1896.) In an action on an insurance policy the defense of which was settlement as a bar, evidence showing the insured receipted for a draft from the insurer, in which it was stated to be in full settlement of all damage, it not appearing that the receipt was not read over to the plaintiff, who could neither read or write English, is insufficient to sustain a finding that such settlement was obtained by fraud. Home Fire Ins. Co. v. Bredehoft, 49 Neb. 152 (68 N. W. 400).

33. (1894.) The evidence relied on in this case to sustain the defense that the compromise or settlement pleaded herein had been procured by unfair means examined, and held, not to establish either fraud, duress, or undue influence. Swartz v. Duncan, 38 Neb. 782 (57 N. W. 543).

34. (1899.) The circumstances of a settlement held to include matters of mistake or fraud sufficient to avoid its effect against complaining party. North Nebraska Driving Park Ass'n v. Box, 57 Neb. 302 (77 N. W. 770).

——— Burden of proof.

35. (1896.) The burden of showing that a settlement was procured by fraud is on the party alleging it. Home Fire Ins. Co. v. Bredehoft, 49 Neb. 152 (68 N. W. 400).

Pleading.

36. (1893.) An answer, in an action for conversion of property, alleging, "that the defendant had a full and complete settlement of all matters and things in dispute—and more especially the things referred to in the petition," presents the issue of settlement as a distinct defense and defendant is not confined to proof of the arbitration alone. Forbes v. Petty, 37 Neb. 899 (56 N. W. 730).

37. (1899.) A pleading stating that if a settlement was made its effect was avoided by mistake of fraud is an admission of the settlement. North Nebraska Fair & Driving Park Ass'n v. Box, 57 Neb. 302 (77 N. W. 770).

38. (1907.) The giving of a note by one party to another in settlement of the differences betweeen them is a good defense in an action by the maker against the payee to recover prior existing claims, in the absence of fraud or mistake, but such defense must be pleaded. Gandy v. Wiltse, 79 Neb. 280 (112 N. W. 569).

Evidence.

——— Admissibility.

See, also, Bastards, §§ 65-68.

39. (1891.) Offer of compromise made by defendant and not accepted is inadmissible in evidence in a bastardy proceeding. Olson v. Peterson, 33 Neb. 358 (50 N. W. 155).

40. (1876.) The rule excluding evidence of offers to compromise does not apply to offers to compromise a dispute which forms the basis or constitute a part of a contract actually compromising such dispute. Stuht v. Sweesy, 48 Neb. 767 (67 N. W. 748).

41. (1896.) Unaccepted propositions of compromise are inadmissible in evidence. Callen v. Rose, 47 Neb. 638 (66 N. W. 639); Eldridge v. Hargreaves, 30 Neb. 638 (46 N. W. 923).

42. (1897.) An offer of compromise made by one party to an action and not accepted by the other is not generally admissible in evidence. Hanover Fire Ins. Co. v. Stoddard, 52 Neb. 745 (73 N. W. 291).

43. (1897.) An offer to compromise a matter in dispute cannot be given in evidence against the party by whom such offer was made. Wright v. Morse, 53 Neb. 3 (73 N. W. 211).

44. (1898.) In an action for damages for inducing the purchase of property by false representations an offer of plaintiff to compromise before suit was brought is incompetent evidence. Boice v. Palmer, 55 Neb. 389 (75 N. W. 849).

45. (1903.) An amicable adjustment of a controversy between two parties is not admissible for the purpose of showing any liability of either. Creighton v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 68 Neb. 456 (94 N. W. 527).

46. (1906.) In an action upon the promise of a school district to pay a certain amount in composition of a doubtful claim, one of the defenses was that the claimant secured the adoption of a resolution for the compromise by threats and intimidation, and there is evidence tending to support such defense. Held, That evidence as to his reputation in the vicinity, as to being peaceable or otherwise, was properly received. Gering v. School District, 76 Neb. 219 (107 N. W. 250).

47. (1906.) Declarations of parties made at a meeting where resolutions of a compromise of a claim against an officer of a school district were adopted, tending to show that they were intimidated and for that reason left the meeting and refrained from voting on the resolution, are properly receivable in evidence as a part of the res gestæ. Gering v. School District, 76 Neb. 219 (107 N. W. 250).

——— Burden of proof.

48. (1885.) Where there has been a settlement of accounts and a promissory note has been given for the amount found due, the burden of proving the settlement did not include debts owing to the maker of the note is upon him. Keller v. Keller, 18 Neb. 366 (25 N. W. 364).

49. (1903.) The burden of proof is upon the party admitting a settlement to establish the facts relied on in avoidance thereof. Linton v. Cathers, 70 Neb. 598 (97 N. W. 799).

Instructions.

50. (1888.) An action on an alleged compromise agreement, an instruction, "No particular form of words is necessary to constitute a settlement in law, nor is it necessary for the plaintiff to prove a promise to pay the balance found to be due, provided a balance be found in his favor, as hereafter explained," is not open to the objection that it assumes that there was a settlement between the parties. Brewer v. Wright, 25 Neb. 305 (41 N. W. 159).

51. (1893.) An instruction, "Where a settlement is made, and a promissory note is given as a result of the settlement, the giving of the note is prima facie evidence that all matters in difference between the parties at the time of the settlement were settled in the settlement; and this presumption must prevail until a preponderance of the evidence shows that there were matters in the difference at the time between the parties that were not included in such settlement," held applicable to the testimony and not erroneous. Wagner v. Ladd, 38 Neb. 161 (56 N. W. 891).

2. (1880.) A conviction for conspiracy to violate a law of the United States, under section 5440 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, is not a conviction of a felony, but of a misdemeanor merely. Gandy v. State, 10 Neb. 243 (4 N. W. 1019).

3. (1901.) In an action for conspiracy, the damage, and not the wrongful confederation, is the gist of the action. Commercial Union Assurance Co. v. Shoemaker, 63 Neb. 173 (88 N. W. 156).

4. (1902.) An action for conspiracy whereby plaintiff was driven out of business as a lumber dealer, under section 11, chapter 91*a*, Compiled Statutes, is an action in tort. Cleland v. Anderson, 66 Neb. 276 (98 N. W. 1075).

Evidence.

——— Admissibility.

8. 1897.) In order to justify the admission in evidence, for the purpose of establishing an alleged conspiracy, of acts of individuals charged with the conspiracy, it is not necessary to first prove by other evidence the existence of the conspiracy. Farley v. Peebles, 50 Neb. 723 (70 N. W. 231).

9. (1894.) Acts and declarations of conspirators which are parts of the res gestæ, and therefore admissible against their co-conspirators, include those only which are done and made during the pendency of the conspiracy and in furtherance of its objects. Stratton v. Oldfield, 41 Neb. 702 (60 N. W. 82).

10. (1897.) Declarations made in pursuance of the object are admissible, but to be so they must not be merely narrative of past occurrences or statements of future purposes; they must tend so directly toward the accomplishment of the alleged common object as to constitute a part of the res gestæ. Farley v. Peebles, 50 Neb. 723 (70 N. W. 231).

11. (1897.) Evidence of acts or declarations of alleged conspirators may have a twofold purpose: First, the proof of the existence of the conspiracy; second, the conspiracy having been proved, to charge each member thereof with the consequence of such acts or declarations. For the first purpose the evidence is admissible generally as against all. For the second purpose it cannot be considered against those not participating in the acts or declarations, unless from all the evidence the existence of the conspiracy has been proved. Farley v. Peebles, 50 Neb. 723 (70 N. W. 231).

——— Sufficiency.

12. (1889.) Evidence in an action for conspiracy held to sustain a verdict and judgment for plaintiff. Booker v. Puyear, 27 Neb. 346 (43 N. W. 133).

13. (1889.) Although a petition charged a conspiracy on the part of the three defendants to defraud plaintiff, it is not necessary to his recovery that there should be actual evidence that the defendants conspired together, nor that any of the peculiar rules governing the trial of an indictment for criminal conspiracy prevail on the trial of the case at bar. Hence, if the jury believed that plaintiff was defrauded by one defendant who turned the property obtained over to the other defendants they might return their verdict for the plaintiff for the amount of his damages so sustained, though there might have been no proof that any two of the defendants actually conspired together for the purpose of perpetrating such wrong upon the plaintiff. Booker v. Puyear, 27 Neb. 346 (43 N. W. 133).

14. (1897.) A conspiracy, like other facts, may be proved by circumstantial evidence, and one means of proof is by showing overt acts of the individuals charged with conspiring. From the fact that different persons at different times by their acts pursue the same object, the jury may, in connection with other facts, infer the existence of a conspiracy to effect that object. Farley v. Peebles, 50 Neb. 723 (70 N. W. 231).

15. (1903.) A conspiracy, like any other fact which is the subject of judicial investigation, may be proved inferentially or by circumstancial evidence. O'Brien v. State, 69 Neb. 691 (96 N. W. 649).

16. (1906.) Where several defendants are proceeded against as conspirators in the commission of a tort, which would be actionable if committed by one alone, a judgment against one or more of such defendants may be sustained without proof of a conspiracy among all of them. Harvey v. Harvey, 75 Neb. 557 (106 N. W. 660).

I. ESTABLISMENT AND AMENDMENT OF CONSTITUTION.

Adoption of state constitution.

1. (1872.) Territorial legislatures have not inherent power to make or submit constitutions. Whatever they may do in that direction is without authority and is done only by indulgence of congress. Brittle v. People, 2 Neb. 198.

2. (1872.) The question, whether a state constitution was regularly and legally adopted after the same has been acted upon, and the state government is, in fact, being administered under it, is a political rather than a judicial question. A court organized under a constitution would be felo de se if it should declare such constitution null for irregularity and illegality in its adoption. Brittle v. People, 2 Neb. 198.

3. (1872.) When a constitution has been adopted by the people of a territory preparatory to admission as a state, and congress prescribes certain changes and additions to be adopted by the legislature as part of the constitution, and such changes and additions are declared to be fundamental conditions of the additions of the state, and the legislature accepts such changes, additions, and conditions, and the state is thus admitted, they become thereby a part of the constitution, and binding as such, although not submitted to the people for their approval. Brittle v. People, 2 Neb. 198.

Amendment of state constitution.

4. (1885.) The votes necessary to adopt an amendment to the constitution under the provisions of section 1, article XV of the same must be a majority of all those cast in the state at that election for senators and representatives. State, ex rel. Stevenson, v. Babcock, 17 Neb. 188 (22 N. W. 372).

5. (1889.) A proposed amendment to the constitution possesses no efficacy until approved by a majority of the electors of the state voting at the election, and the approval of the governor is unnecessary, and adds nothing to the validity of such proposed amendments. In re Senate File 31, 25 Neb. 864 (41 N. W. 981).

6. (1889.) A proposition to amend the constitution was passed by the senate by the necessary three-fifths majority, and entered at length on the journal. The proposition was then amended by the house, and as amended was passed by that body by the requisite majority, and entered at length on the house journal. Afterwards the house amendments were concurred in by the requisite majority of the senate, and such amendments entered at length on the senate journal. Held, That there was a sufficient compliance with section 1, article XV of the constitution. In re Senate File 31, 25 Neb. 864 (41 N. W. 981).

7. (1889.) A title stating the object of a bill or provision to amend the constitution is unnecessary, and if added may be disregarded, such title being necessary only in cases of ordinary legislation. In re Senate File 31, 25 Neb. 864 (41 N. W. 981).

8. (1889.) Proposed amendments to the constitution, being the proposition to prohibit "the manufacture, sale, and keeping for sale of intoxicating liquors as a bevererage," and to the proposition to license and regulate by law "the manufacture, sale, and keeping for sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage," are independent, and to be separately submitted to the electors of the state for approval or rejection. Any elector may vote for either, or against either or both of such propositions. In re Senate File 31, 25 Neb. 864 (41 N. W. 981).

9. (1889.) Section 1, article XV of the constitution of Nebraska, does not prescribe the form in which propositions by the legislature to amend the constitution shall be made, whether by bill or joint resolution. Therefore, if an amendment is proposed by a bill duly passed by the requisite three-fifths majority of the members elected to each house, and entered upon the journals thereof, and afterwards presented to the governor for his approval, who retains the same for more than five days, Sundays excepted, the supreme court will not for such causes declare the propositions in conflict with the constitution, and void. In re Senate File 31, 25 Neb. 864 (41 N. W. 981).

10. (1897.) A proposition to amend the constitution of the state can only be submitted at a general election at which there are elected senators and representatives. Tecumseh Nat. Bank v. Saunders, 51 Neb. 801 (71 N. W. 779).

11. (1897.) To effect the adoption of an amendment to the constitution of this state submitted by the legislature it must receive more than one-half the highest number of votes cast at such general election, whether such highest number be for the filling of an office or for the adoption of a proposition. Tecumseh Nat. Bank v. Saunders, 51 Neb. 801 (71 N. W. 779).

12. (1903.) Something more than mere irregularities and improprieties in declaring the result of an election adopting a constitutional amendment should appear, to warrant the supreme court in attempting to set aside the solemn acts of the legislative bodies and the executive of the state as to the fundamental law of the state, especially after such legislative and executive action has been acquiesced in for sixteen years. Weston v. Ryan, 70 Neb. 211 (97 N. W. 347).

13. (1903.) When a proposed constitutional amendment has been duly submitted to the people without prescribed regulations with reference to the manner of counting, canvassing or returning the ballots or ascertaining or authenticating the result of the election, it is competent for the legislature to provide by special enactment for so doing. Weston v. Ryan, 70 Neb. 218 (97 N. W. 347).

14. (1903.) The submission by the legislature to the electors of a proposed constitutional amendment is not a legislative act. In making such a submission, the legislature acts in a capacity strictly analogous to that of a constitutional convention and subject to such constitutional restricions and limitations only as have direct reference to the exercise of that power. Weston v. Ryan, 70 Neb. 218 (97 N. W. 347).

15. (1907.) The self-imposed limitations of the power of the people to amend their fundmental law should not be so construed as to defeat the will of the people, plainly expressed, on account of a slight and unimportant failure to comply literally with such limitations, if the requirements are substantially observed. State, ex rel. Thompson, v. Winnett, 78 Neb. 379 (110 N. W. 1113).

16. (1907.) The constitution requires that, when proposed amendments thereto are submitted to a vote of the people, said proposed amendments shall be "published once each week in at least one newspaper in each county, where a newspaper is published, for three months immediately preceeding the next election of senators and representatives, at which election the same shall be submitted to the electors for approval or rejection." Where there is a substantial compliance with this requirement, the fact that the publication was made for one week less than the required time in one county of the state will not invalidate the amendment. State, ex rel. Thompson, v. Winnett, 78 Neb. 379 (110 N. W. 1113).

17. (1907.) The manner of voting upon a constitutional amendment and the general conduct of the election are for the legislature to provide, subject to the limitation that, "When more than one amendment is submitted at the same election they shall be so submitted as to enable the electors to vote on each amendment separately." And when the legislature by resolution submits such question at a general election, as required by the constitution, it will be presumed that the legislature intends that the requirements of the general election law are to be observed. State, ex rel. Thompson, v. Winnett, 78 Neb. 379 (110 N. W. 1113).

18. (1907.) The act of 1901 (laws 1901, ch. 29), amending various sections of the general election law so as to provide for counting straight party votes for a constitutional amendment when such party has indorsed such amendment, does not violate the constitution, and it is within the power of the legislature to provide such regulations. State, ex rel. Thompson, v. Winnett, 78 Neb. 379 (110 N. W. 1113).

19. (1907.) It is not necessary that the entire proposed amendment be printed upon the official ballot. If enough is printed upon the ballot to identify the amendment and show its character and purpose, it is sufficient. State, ex rel. Thompson, v. Winnett, 78 Neb. 379 (110 N. W. 1113).

20. (1907.) When an amendment to the constitution creates a public office, such office may be filled by vote of the electors at the same election at which the amendment is adopted. State, ex rel. Thompson, v. Winnett, 78 Neb. 379 (110 N. W. 1113).

II. CONSTRUCTION, OPERATION AND ENFORCEMENT OF CONSTITUTIONAL PROVISIONS.

General rules of construction.

21. (1877.) In the construction of a constitution its terms must be taken in the ordinary and common acceptation, because they are supposed to have been so understood by the framers and by the people who adopted it. It owes its whole force and authority to its ratification by the people: and they judged it by the meaning apparent on its face according to the general use of the words employed when they do not appear to have been used in a legal or technical sense. State, ex rel. Davis, v. Bacon, 6 Neb. 286.

22. (1877.) In the construction of a constitution its terms must be taken in the ordinary and common acceptation. State, ex rel. Jones, v. Lancaster County, 6 Neb. 474.

23. (1878.) In construing a section of the constitution, effect must, if possible, be given to every portion of it. State, ex rel. Helmer, v. McConnel, 8 Neb. 28.

24. (1902.) In construing constitutional provisions, the rule prevails that words shall be given their ordinary meaning, except where the context makes it plain that they have been used in a technical sense. Hamilton Nat. Bank v. American Loan & Trust Co., 66 Neb. 67 (92 N. W. 189).

25. (1905.) Provisions found in the schedule of the constitution are not in all instances to be construed as of a temporary character. The language used should be given its ordinary meaning; and whether it is intended to be of a temporary or permanent character must be determined from the purpose of the enactment and the object sought to be accomplished thereby. The true meaning of the law is discovered by considering the reason and spirit of it, or the cause which moved the lawmaking body to enact it. State, ex rel. Polk, v. Galusha, 74 Neb. 188 (104 N. W. 197).

Construction by legislative or executive departments.

26. (1895.) A contemporaneous construction of a constitutional provision, which has for many years been adhered to by the legislative and executive departments of the government, will not be disregarded by the courts, and in doubtful cases will generally be held conclusive. State, ex rel. Horne, v. Holcomb, 46 Neb. 88 (64 N. W. 437).

27. (1900.) While a practical interpretation of the constitution by the legislature will not be lightly disregarded in doubtful cases, yet, when the language of the constitution is free from ambiguity, an interpretation thereof by the legislative department cannot be invoked to nullify the fundamental law. State, ex rel. Hibbard, v. Cornell, 60 Neb. 276 (83 N. W. 72).

28. (1905.) Courts will give weighty consideration to the legislative construction of the constitution when legislation is had regarding subjects of a political nature. But when such construction clearly appears to be unwarranted it will not be followed. State, ex rel. Polk, v. Galusha, 74 Neb. 188 (104 N. W. 197).

29. (1907.) When the legislature has construed a provision of the constitution in an administrative matter in one of two equally reasonable ways, the court will not take the opposite view, but will adopt and follow the legislative construction. State v. Sheldon, 78 Neb. 552 (111 N. W. 372).

Construction of federal constitution.

30. (1896.) The construction placed upon provisions of the federal constitution by the supreme court of the United States must be followed by state courts in all maters to which such provisions are applicable. State, ex rel. Board of Transportation, v. Sioux City, O. N. & W. R. Co., 46 Neb. 682 (65 N. W. 766; 31 L. R. A. 47).

Grant or limitation of powers.

31. (1872.) The constitution of this state confers plenary legislative power upon the general assembly; and if an act is within the legitimate exercise of that power, it is valid, unless some express restriction or limitation can be found in the constitution itself. Hallenbeck v. Hahn, 2 Neb. 377.

32. (1876.) The constitution of the state is not regarded as a grant, but rather as a restriction of legislative power, and so in an inquiry as to whether a statute is constitutional, it is for those who question its validity to show that it is prohibited. State, ex rel. Atchinson & N. R. Co., v. Lancaster County, 4 Neb. 537.

33. (1879.) The constitution of a state is not a grant, but a restriction upon the power of the legislature. State, ex rel. Abbott, v. Dodge County, 8 Neb. 124 (30 Am. Rep. 819); (1890) Magneau v. City of Fremont, 30 Neb. 843 (47 N. W. 280; 27 Am. St. Rep. 436).

Self-executing provisions.

34. (1876.) The constitution fixing the salary of an officer and providing that "the auditor shall draw warrants of the state quarterly" therefor, "which shall be paid out of any funds not otherwise appropriated," appropriates by law the amount necessary to pay such salary, and no legislative act is necessary. State, ex rel. Roberts, v. Weston, 4 Neb. 216.

35. (1885.) The provision of the constitution of 1875, that "the private property of no person shall be taken or damaged for public use without just compensation therefor," is self-operating. Harmon v. City of Omaha, 17 Neb. 548 (23 N. W. 503; 52 Am. Rep. 420).

Validity of statutory provisions.

36. (1871.) The courts cannot declare an act unconstitutional, because the legislature, in passing it, was influenced by unworthy motives. Bradshaw v. City of Omaha, 1 Neb. 16.

37. (1877.) The court cannot pronounce an act of the legislature void merely because it may be imperfect or impolitic, or for any supposed inequality or injustice in its operation, if it be upon a subject-matter fairly within the scope of legislative authority. To bring the validity of a legislative act within the control of the judiciary, it must be clearly subversive of the constitution. Turner v. Althaus, 6 Neb. 54.

38. (1877.) The power of the courts to declare a legislative act a nullity because it infringes on the constitution should be "exercised with extreme caution, and never when a serious doubt exists as to the true interpretation of the provision alleged to be repugnant." State, ex rel. Jones, v. Lancaster County, 6 Neb. 474.

39. (1879.) The legislature can legalize no act which that body could not have authorized before it was done. It cannot validate that which the constitution, either in express terms or by necessary implication, prohibits. City of Hastings v. Thorne, 8 Neb. 160.

40. (1881.) All laws in force in force at the time of the adoption of the constitution of 1875 in conflict with its provisions, and under which rights had not become vested therewith, repealed. Hanscom v. City of Omaha, 11 Neb. 37 (7 N. W. 739).

41. (1885.) Legislative bodies are created by the constitution, and every act may be tested by that instrument and declared void if not in conformity to its requirements. State, ex rel. Huff, v. McClelland, 18 Neb. 236 (25 N. W. 77; 53 Am. St. Rep. 814).

42. (1888.) No act of the legislature will be declared void unless it is clearly so, and the party who claims that an act is unconstitutional must be able to point to the particular provision of the constitution with which it is in conflict. State, ex rel. Singleton, v. Van Duyn, 24 Neb. 586 (39 N. W. 612); (1899) State, ex rel. Cornell, v. Poynter, 59 Neb. 417 (81 N. W. 431); (1902) Rosenbloom v. State, 64 Neb. 342 (89 N. W. 1053; 57 L. R. A. 922); (1904) State, ex rel. Prout, v. Nolan, 71 Neb. 136 (98 N. W. 657).

43. (1897.) Every legislative act comes before the courts surrounded with the presumption of constitutionality, and this presumption continues until the act under review clearly appears to contravene some provision of the constitution. Davis v. State, 51 Neb. 301 (70 N. W. 984).

44. (1904.) An act of the legislature will not be declared unconstitutional and void on the presumption that it will be used as a basis to assert an unjust or illegal claim to the property of the state. Marsh v. Stonebraker, 71 Neb. 224 (98 N. W. 699).

45. (1904.) The constitutional validity of an act of the legislature is to be tested and determined, not by what has been or possibly may be done under it, but by what the law authorizes to be done under and by virtue of its provisions. City of Beatrice v. Wright, 72 Neb. 689 (101 N. W. 1039).

——Letter and spirit of constitution.

46. (1894.) The fact that a statute is within the letter of the constitution is not sufficient. It must also be in substantial compliance with the spirit and purpose thereof, and an act which violates the true meaning and intent of the constitution and is an evasion of its general express or plainly implied purpose is as clearly void as if in express terms prohibited. State, ex rel. Stull Bros., v. Bartley, 41 Neb. 277 (59 N. W. 907).

47. (1898.) The bill of rights of our constitution is not an enumeration of all the powers reserved to the people of this state. A statute is unconstitutional and void which is repugnant to the rights, expressed or implied, retained by the people. State, ex rel. Attorney General, v. Moores, 55 Neb. 480 (76 N. W. 175: 41 L. R. A. 624).

——Presentation of question.

48. (1874.) The constitutionality of a law will not be determined upon review where the question was not presented below. Pill v. State, 43 Neb. 23 (61 N. W. 96).

49. (1895.) When the supreme court is asked to declare a statute unconstitutional, the particular section of the constitution which it is claimed the law infringes should be pointed out in the brief filed. Boyes v. Summers, 46 Neb. 308 (64 N. W. 1066).

Persons who can raise constitutional question.

50. (1885.) A court will not ordinarily listen to an objection made to the constitutionality of an act of the legislature by a party whose rights it does not affect, and who has therefore no interest in defeating it. State, ex rel. Morton, v. Stevenson, 18 Neb. 416 (25 N. W. 585).

III. DISTRIBUTION OF GOVERNMENTAL POWERS.

Construction of constitution by legislative or judicial departments, see ante, §§ 26-29.

In general.

51. (1877.) The powers of the state government are divided into three distinct departments—the legislative, executive, and judicial—and no person or collection of persons, being one of these departments, can exercise any power properly belonging to either of the others, except expressly so authorized by the constitution. Under this division of distinct departments of the government, the apportionment of power to one department will of itself imply an inhibition of its exercise by the others. Turner v. Althaus, 6 Neb. 54.

Legislative powers and functions.

52. (1892.) Constitutional limitations upon the power of the legislature in respect to offices will be confined to those offices which are specially enumerated in the constitution unless the contrary clearly appears therefrom. State, ex rel. Attorney General, v. Smith, 35 Neb. 13 (52 N. W. 700).

53. (1901.) The function of expressing the public will is intrusted to the legislature, but not to the courts, and to this principle it is the duty of the latter to give practical force as well as theoretical recognition. Adams v. Weisberger, 62 Neb. 325 (87 N. W. 16).

54. (1904.) The scavenger law provides for one of two methods of collecting delinquent taxes on real estate, and permits the county board to choose which method it will pursue. This does not amount to a delegation of legislative authority. Woodrough v. Douglas County, 71 Neb. 354 (98 N. W. 1092).

55. (1907.) The division of powers between the several branches of the state government made by article II of the constitution is comprehensive and final, and the legislature can neither add to nor subtract from the classes or character of questions with which the courts are entitled to deal. Tyson v. Washington County, 78 Neb. 211 (110 N. W. 634).

55*a*. (1907.) The power of the legislature over the subject of procedure, within limits not impairing the inherent powers or jurisdiction of the courts, is not restricted; and it is competent to require, by statute, a preliminary judicial ascertainment of facts, the existence of which is made a condition precedent to the creation of a public corporation. Barnes v. Minor, 80 Neb. 189 (114 N. W. 146).

Judicial powers and functions.

56. (1871.) Courts have no jurisdiction over matters which are committed to the discretion of the legislature. Bradshaw v. City of Omaha, 1 Neb. 16.

57. (1898.) The power—the jurisdiction—to determine what compensation a public service corporation may exact for services to be rendered by it is a legislative and not a judicial function. Nebraska Telephone Co. v. State, ex rel. Yeiser, 55 Neb. 627 (76 N. W. 171; 45 L. R. A. 113).

58. (1898.) The jurisdiction of the courts is limited to declaring what the law is, and they are forbidden by the constitution to perform legislative functions. Nebraska Telephone Co. v. State, ex rel. Yeiser, 55 Neb. 627 (76 N. W. 171; 45 L. R. A. 113).

59. (1901.) Section 584 of the criminal code, by leaving it discretionary with the district court whether or not a grand jury shall be called, does not confer upon the judiciary legislative powers. Dinsmore v. State, 61 Neb. 418 (85 N. W. 445).

60. (1902.) The theory that the judiciary, in issuing a mandamus to a member of the executive branch of the government, is thereby indirectly, and in violation of the constitution, exercising power properly belonging to the executive department, has been repudiated by this court in a long line of decisions. State, ex rel. Wright, v. Savage, 64 N. W. 684 (90 N. W. 898).

61. (1902.) The right of the courts to determine all judicial questions, whenever or however they may arise, is given by the constitution in explicit terms and is indisputable. But equally clear and incontestable is the right of the executive officers named in the constitution to exercise all powers properly belonging to the executive department. State, ex rel. Wright, v. Savage, 64 Neb. 684 (90 N. W. 898).

IV. POLICE POWERS IN GENERAL.

Police power of cities, see Municipal Corporations, VIII.

Waiver of powers.

62. (1896.) The reserved powers of the state, including the police power, are inalienable, and cannot be surrendered or bartered away by the legislature. West Point Water Power & Land Improvement Co. v. State, ex rel. Moodie, 49 Neb. 218 (66 N. W. 6).

Protection of property.

63. (1875.) An ordinance passed by a city of the second class, punishing persons who wilfully, maliciously, or mischievously meddle with, or trespass upon, the personal or real property of others, is not repugnant to the constitution or laws of the state. City of Brownville v. Cook, 4 Neb. 101.

Promotion of public welfare.

64. (1905.) An act which is calculated to foster sentiments of patriotism, such as one to prevent and punish the desecration of the flag of the United States, by use in an advertisement is not vulnerable to the objection that it is not calculated to promote the welfare of society. Halter v. State, 74 Neb. 757 (105 N. W. 298). [Affirmed, 205 U. S. 34.]

Public health and safety.

65. (1896.) The legislative power to subserve the public welfare by regulations in the interest of health and safety is inherent in the sovereignty of the state and cannot be bartered away by contract or otherwise. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. State, ex rel. City of Omaha, 47 Neb. 549 (66 N. W. 624; 53 Am. St. Rep. 557; 41 L. R. A. 481).

66. (1896.) The essential quality of the police power as a governmental agency is that it imposes upon persons and property, burdens designed to promote the safety and welfare of the public at large. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. State, ex rel. City of Omaha, 47 Neb. 549 (66 N. W. 624; 53 Am. St. Rep. 557; 41 L. R. A. 481).

67. (1898.) A statute authorizing a city to assess against a lot on which a nuisance exists the entire cost of abating the nuisance by improving the lot does not violate the constitutional provision relating to special taxation for local improvements, but is a proper exercise of police power. Horbach v. City of Omaha, 54 Neb. 83 (74 N. W. 434).

68. (1900.) A statute making carriers liable for injuries to passengers in the absence of negligence, is within the police power of the state. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Zernecke, 59 Neb. 689 (82 N. W. 26; 55 L. R. A. 610).

69. (1903.) The act of 1905, forbidding the selling or keeping for sale "imitation butter" colored so as to resemble butter made from pure milk, or the cream thereof, and the other regulations imposed by the act, is a valid exercise of the police power of the state; and it is competent for the legislature to provide such regulations as therein prescribed and to enact suitable penalties for their violation, for the better protection of the public health, and to prevent fraud and deception. Beha v. State, 67 Neb. 27 (93 N. W. 155).

70. 1905.) Notwithstanding the fourteenth amendment to the federal constitution, the state, in the exercise of the police power, may enact such laws as are calculated to promote the health, comfort, safety and welfare of society, although such laws operate to restrict the liberty of citizens of the United States. But whether legislation thus operating is in fact calculated to promote such ends is a legitimate subject of inquiry by the court, when the constitutionality of the act is assailed. Halter v. State, 74 Neb. 757 (105 N. W. 298). [Affirmed, 205 U. S. 34.]

Maintenance and regulation of highways.

71. (1896.) The provision of the charter of the city of Omaha (Compiled Statutes, ch. 12*a*, sec. 48), authorizing said city, by ordinance, to require railroad companies to construct and keep in repair viaducts over streets therein, crossed by their tracks, is a valid exercise of the police power of the state. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. State, ex rel. City of Omaha, 47 Neb. 549 (66 N. W. 624; 53 Am. St. Rep. 557; 41 L. R. A. 481).

Invasion of private rights.

72. (1894.) The legislature cannot, under the guise of police regulation, arbitrarily invade private property or personal rights. The test when such regulations are called in question is whether they have some relation to the public health or public welfare, and whether such is, in fact, the end sought. Smiley v. MacDonald, 42 Neb. 5 (60 N. W. 355; 47 Am. St. Rep. 684; 27 L. R. A. 540); (1902) Iler v. Ross, 64 Neb. 710 (90 N. W. 869; 97 Am. St. Rep. 676; 57 L. R. A. 895).

73. (1896.) The legislature cannot, under the guise of police regulations, arbitrarily invade personal rights or private property. There must be some obvious and real connection between the actual provisions of such measures and their assumed purpose. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. State, ex rel. City of Omaha, 47 Neb. 549 (66 N. W. 624; 53 Am St. Rep. 557; 41 L. R. A. 481).

Delegation of power.

74. (1896.) The power of the legislature to subserve the general welfare of the people by all needful and proper regulations in the interest of health and safety, may be asserted directly by the legislature, or may, in the absence of constitutional restrictions upon the subject, be delegated to the several municipal corporations or other agencies provided for its exercise. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. State, ex rel. City of Omaha, 47 Neb. 549 (66 N. W. 624; 53 Am. St. Rep. 557; 41 L. R. A. 481).

V. PERSONAL, CIVIL AND POLITICAL RIGHTS.

Personal liberty.

75. (1906.) Section 7, chapter 82, laws 1905, providing for the commitment of dipsomaniacs, is unconstitutional, as in violation of the right to personal liberty. In re Schwarting, 76 Neb. 773 (108 N. W. 125).

Liberty to contract.

76. (1894.) Sections 1 and 3 of chapter 54 of the Session Laws of 1891 having provided, in effect, that for all classes of mechanics, servants and laborers, excepting those engaged in farm or domestic labor, a day's work should not exceed eight hours, and that for working any employe over the prescribed time the employer should pay extra compensation in increasing geometrical progression for the excess over eight hours (the rate of payment for the eighth hour being taken as the basis upon which to reckon such progression), held, that these provisions are unconstitutional, (1) because the discrimination against farm and domestic laborers is special legislation; (2) because by the act in question the constitutional right of parties to contract with reference to compensation for services is denied. Low v. Rees Printing Co., 41 Neb. 127 (59 N. W. 362; 43 Am. St. Rep. 670; 24 L. R. A. 702).

77. (1902.) The act of March 31, 1899, is only a fair and reasonable exercise of the police power. It does not deprive any citizen of his property, or the reasonable use thereof, without due process of law. It does not prohibit the right of contract. It merely regulates the same in a reasonable manner. It is therefore not in conflict with the constitution, and is in all things valid. Wenham v. State, 65 Neb. 394 (91 N. W. 421; L. R. A. 825).

Religious liberty.

78. (1902.) Enforced attendance upon religious services is forbidden by the constitution, and pupils in a public school cannot be required either to attend such services or to join in them. State, ex rel. Freeman, v. Scheve, 65 Neb. 876 (93 N. W. 169).

79. (1902.) The right of all persons to worship Almighty God according to the dictates of their own consciences is declared by the constitution of this state to be a natural and indefeasible right. State, ex rel.

Freeman, v. Scheve, 65 Neb. 876 (93 N. W. 169).

80. (1902.) Exercises by teacher in a public school in a school building, in school hours, and in the presence of the pupils, consisting of the reading of passages from the Bible, and in the singing of songs and hymns, and offering prayer to the Deity in accordance with the doctrines, beliefs, customs, or usages of sectarian churches or religious organizations, is forbidden by the constitution of this state. State, ex rel. Freeman, v. Scheve, 65 Neb. 853, 876 (91 N. W. 846).

81. (1902.) The law does not forbid the use of the Bible in the public schools; it is not proscribed either by the constitution or the statutes; and the courts have no right to declare its use to be unlawful because it is possible or probable that those who are privileged to use it will misuse the privilege by attemtping to propagate their own peculiar theological or ecclesiastical views and opinions. The point where the courts may rightfully interfere to prevent the use of the Bible in a public school, is where legitimate use has degenerated into abuse—where a teacher employed to give secular instruction has violated the constitution by becoming a sectarian propagandist. State, ex rel. Freeman, v. Scheve, 65 Neb. 853, 876 (93 N. W. 169).

VI. VESTED RIGHTS.

Political power.

82. (1880.) Political power conferred by the legislature can never become a vested right as against the government. Such power is a public trust, to be executed, not for the benefit alone or at the will of the trustee, but for the common good. State, ex rel. Mayor, v. Palmer, 10 Neb. 203 (4 N. W. 965).

Rules of common law.

83. (1901.) There is no vested right in any rule of the common law. State v. Heldenbrand, 62 Neb. 136 (87 N. W. 25; 89 Am. St. Rep. 493).

Rules of procedure.

84. (1886.) A defendant on trial for a criminal offense has no vested right in the manner of procedure established by law at the time of the commission of the alleged crime. It is within the power of the legislature to change the procedure or manner of enforcing a punishment after the commission of the offense, and such a law would not be void as an ex post facto law. Marion v. State, 20 Neb. 233 (29 N. W. 911; 57 Am. Rep. 825).

Rules of evidence.

85. (1901.) The legislature may change the rules of evidence. State v. Heldenbrand, 62 Neb. 136 (87 N. W. 25; 89 Am. St. Rep. 493).

Salaries of public officers.

86. (1886.) Where no salary is provided for an officer of a city, an ordinance providing for such salary during his term is not unconstitutional. Wheelock v. McDowell, 20 Neb. 160 (29 N. W. 291).

Disposition of public moneys.

87. (1884.) The provisions of the act of March 1, 1883, requiring the county treasurer to pay over to the treasurer of cities of the second class having over ten thousand inhabitants all moneys arising from the levy of road tax against or upon property in said city, are not in violation of the vested rights of the county or any officer thereof. State, ex rel. Jones, v. Graham, 16 Neb. 74 (19 N. W. 470).

VII. OBLIGATION OF CONTRACTS.

Power of states in general.

88. (1896.) The legislature cannot, by law, impair the obligation of contracts. State, ex rel. Kearney Water Co., v. City of Kearney, 49 Neb. 325 (68 N. W. 533).

Contracts of states and municipalities.

89. (1871.) An act requiring the holder of a county warrant, which is overdue and which draws ten per cent. per annum interest, to present the same at the treasury, and surrender it and take in its place bonds drawing interest at seven per cent. per annum, payable at a distant day, is unconstitutional as impairing the obligation of a contract. Brewer v. Otoe County, 1 Neb. 373.

90. (1874.) The constitutional provision inhibiting the impairment of the obligation of contracts applies to both those executory and those executed, and to contracts made with the state as well as those between individuals. Koenig v. Omaha & N. W. R. Co., 3 Neb. 373.

91. (1874.) The act of the legislature, approved March 1, 1871, which undertakes to dispose of a portion of the lands, granted to railroad companies, for the purpose of building highway bridges across the Platte river, impairs the obligations of the contract between the state and the railroad companies above cited, and is unconstitutional and void. Koenig v. Omaha & N. W. R. Co., 3 Neb. 373.

www.libtool.com.cn

92. (1891.) While the legislature may change the remedy for the enforcement of contracts, it cannot impair their obligation; hence, it cannot take away the right of a lessee of school land to select an arbitrator, as provided by his lease, to reappraise the land at the end of five years. State, ex rel Brown, v. McPeak, 31 Neb. 139 (47 N. W. 691).

Impairing remedy.

93. (1884.) Without impairing the obligation of contracts the legislature may enact laws affecting the remedy upon them. Schoenheit v. Nelson, 16 Neb. 235 (20 N. W. 205).

94. (1894.) Section 531c of the code, to prevent garnishment of wages, in its application to debts incurred prior to its passage, does not impair the obligations of contracts since an assignment for the purpose of evading the effect of our exemption laws was unlawful before as well as after the passage of the act, and the act affects only the remedy. Bishop v. Middleton, 43 Neb. 10 (61 N. W. 129; L. R. A. 445).

95. (1903.) An act of a state legislature which is designed, and if enforced would be effectual, to deprive the obligees of existing contracts of an important and efficient remedy for the enforcement of the same, is an act impairing the obligations of such contracts and is in contravention of section 10, article I of the constitution of the United States. Burrows v. Vanderbergh, 69 Neb. 43 (95 N. W. 57).

96. (1903.) The validity of the so-called deficiency judgment law of 1897 can be upheld only by construing it, in connection with section 2, chapter 88 of the Compiled Statutes, in such manner as to bring it into harmony with the supreme law of the land as interpreted by the supreme court of the United States. So construed, it does not impair or affect any remedy upon any contract entered into before its enactment. Burrows v. Vanderbergh, 69 Neb. 43 (94 N. W. 57).

Alteration of extent of liability.

97. (1888.) The act of 1881, section 2, chapter 59, (Laws 1881) entitled "Mechanics' Liens," is not unconstitutional as impairing the obligation of contracts, by reason of its provisions being construed to apply to buildings already under contract at the time of the taking effect of said act, so as to give a lien thereon for all labor, skill, and material furnished therefor after the taking effect of said act. Colpetzer v. Trinity Church, 24 Neb. 113 (37 N. W. 931).

Executed contracts.

98. (1874.) The provision of the constitution which inhabits any law impairing contractual obligations applies alike to executed and executory contracts. Koenig v. Omaha & N. W. R. Co., 3 Neb. 373.

VIII. RETROSPECTIVE AND EX POST FACTO LAWS.

In general.

99. (1877.) An act which provides that a penalty shall attach to and become a part of a tax already delinquent, is void as being retroactive. Ryan v. State, 5 Neb. 276.

100. (1884.) Although the act of March 1, 1883, requiring the county treasurer to pay over to treasurers of cities of the second class having over ten thousand inhabitants all moneys arising from the levy of road tax against or on property in said cities, applies to moneys in the hands of the county treasurer when it went into effect, it is not for that reason objectionable as being retrospective. State, ex rel. Jones, v. Graham, 16 Neb. 74 (19 N. W. 470).

101. (1884.) A law which makes an action done before its passage, which was innocent when done, criminal, and punishes such action, or that aggravates a crime or makes it greater than when it was committed, or which, in relation to that offense or its consequences, alters the situation of the party to his disadvantage, or that changes the punishment and inflicts a greater punishment than the law annexed to the crime when committed, is an ex post facto law, and in so far as it affects the punishment of the party to his disadvantage is void. Marion v. State, 16 Neb. 349 (20 N. W. 289, 396).

102. (1884.) At the time of the commission of the alleged offense the punishment prescribed for the crime of murder was either death or imprisonment for life, the penalty to be fixed by the jury, in their verdict. After the commission of the offense the law was changed so as to make death the punishment for murder in the first degree, and divesting the jury of the authority to fix the penalty. Held, That so far as the law affected the rights of the party charged with the offense by depriving him of the right to the verdict of the jury upon the question of punishment it was ex post facto and void. Marion v. State, 16 Neb. 349 (20 N. W. 289, 396).

IX. PRIVILEGES OR IMMUNITIES AND CLASS LEGISLATION.

In general.

103. (1885.) The act of the legislature approved February 28, 1881, commonly known as the Slocumb Liquor Law, is not unconstitutional as being in violation of the provisions of the constitution of the United States, which provides that "the citizens of each state shall be entitled to all the privileges and immunities of citizens in the several states," it being the exercise of the police power of the state for the protection of its citizens, and not for the purpose of revenue or the regulation of commerce. In the exercise of such power, it is competent for the legislature to require that the licensee shall be a resident of the state, and subject to its laws and to the processes of its courts. Mette v. McGuckin, 18 Neb. 323 (25 N. W. 338).

104. (1902.) Chapter 91*a* of the Compiled Statutes, 1901, defines and prohibits trusts, but provides that nothing therein shall be construed to prevent any assembly or association of laboring men from adopting such regulations as they may think proper with reference to wages. The exception of labor unions from the operation of the statute is not contrary to the constitutional prohibition (constitution, art. III, sec. 15) of the grant of special or exclusive privileges and immunities. Cleland v. Anderson, 66 Neb. 252 (92 N. W. 306).

X. EQUAL PROTECTION OF LAWS.

In general.

105. (1899.) The act of June 22, 1867, (Session Laws, p. 88) making railroad companies liable, in absence of negligence, for injuries to passengers neither deprives carriers of property without due process of law, nor denies them the equal protection of the laws. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Young, 58 Neb. 678 (79 N. W. 556)

XI. DUE PROCESS OF LAW.

Constitutional guaranties in general.

106. (1877.) The legislative authority cannot reach the life, liberty, and property of the individual, except when he is convicted of crime, or when the sacrifice of his property is demanded by a just regard for the public welfare. Atchison & N. R. Co. v. Baty, 6 Neb. 37 (29 Am. Rep. 356).

107. (1877.) The terms "due process of law" and "the law of the land"—one or the other of which is found in all constitutions of the states—are said to mean the same thing. Atchison & N. R. Co. v. Baty, 6 Neb. 37 (29 Am. Rep. 356).

108. (1878.) Due process of law is a course of legal proceedings according to those rules and principles which have been established in our systems of jurisprudence for the protection and enforcement of private rights. South Platte Land Co. v. Buffalo County, 7 Neb. 253.

109. (1895.) The term "due process of law" as used in section 3, article I of the constitution of this state, relates to the remedy for wrongs to persons and property rather than to matters of substantive law. Board of Directors of Alfalfa Irrigation District v. Collins, 46 Neb. 411 (64 N. W. 1086).

110. (1898.) Due process of law defined and discussed. Cummins v. Hyatt, 54 Neb. 35 (74 N. W. 411).

Statutory creation of offenses.

111. (1901.) Section 9, chapter 12, Compiled Statutes making it a crime to sell mortgaged chattels without "the written consent" of the mortgagee is not violative of section 3, article I of the constitution, which decrees that "no person shall be deprived of life, liberty or property, without due process of law. State v. Heldenbrand, 62 Neb. 136 (87 N. W. 25; 89 Am. St. Rep. 493).

112. (1905.) Chapter 139, laws 1903, entitled "An act to prevent and punish the desecration of the flag of the United States" is not obnoxious to the fourteenth amendment to the constitution of the United States, nor to the provisions of the state constitution against depriving any person of his property without due process of law, and against special or class legislation. Halter v. State, 74 Neb. 757 (105 N. W. 298). [Affirmed. 205 U. S. 34.]

Deprivation of property in general.

113. (1871.) The constitutional provision that private property shall not be taken for public use without just compensation, implies that it shall not be taken for private use at all; either with or without compensation. This is the same as the axiom of natural justice, that the state shall not take A's property and give it to B. Bradshaw v. City of Omaha, 1 Neb. 16.

114. (1877.) The private property of a citizen cannot, by the exercise of legislative power in any form, be taken from him and given to another, or to a corporation. Such act would be judicial, depriving the citizen of his property without due process of law. Turner v. Althaus, 6 Neb. 54.

115. (1896.) "Due process of law," as the term is used in the state and federal constitutions, does not necessarily imply a hearing, by one whose property is taken or damaged for public use, according to the established practice in courts of common law or equity, but is satisfied whenever an opportunity is afforded to invoke the equal protection of the law by judicial proceedings appropriate for the purpose and adequate to secure the end and object sought to be attained. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. State, ex rel. City of Omaha, 47 Neb. 549 (66 N. W. 624; 53 Am. St. Rep. 557; 41 L. R. A. 481).

116. (1896.) The power of the legislature over private property is not absolute. But while it cannot at will impose upon property burdens so excessive and unreasonable as to work a practical confiscation thereof, the courts will never interfere to prevent the enforcement of statutes on account of any mere difference of opinion between them and the law-making power of the government respecting the wisdom or necessity of particular measures. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. State, ex rel. City of Omaha, 47 Neb. 549 (66 N. W. 624; 53 Am. St. Rep. 557; 41 L. R. A. 481).

117. (1897.) An order of the state board of transportation under the provisions of the act of March 31, 1887, entitled "An act to regulate railroads and prevent unjust discrimination," etc., which requires a railroad company to surrender a portion of its right of way for an elevator site to a person or corporation engaged in the buying and shipping of grain, contemplates the taking of property for mere private use within the prohibition of the United States constitution, and is accordingly without authority and void. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. State, ex rel. State Board of Transportation, 50 Neb. 399 (69 N. W. 955).

118. (1897.) Unclaimed witness fees and costs remaining in the hands of the clerk of the district court are not public moneys, and the legislation of the state, in so far as it attempts to divest the persons for whose benefit such fees and costs were paid of title thereto, is unconstitutional and void. State, ex rel. Broatch, v. Moores, 52 Neb. 770 (73 N. W. 299). [Overruled. Douglas County v. Moores, 66 Neb. 284.]

119. (1899.) Neither courts nor legislatures, except on the demand of the state and for its use, can compel one citizen to sell his property even for its full value to his neighbor for the latter's private use. Lowe v. Prospect Hill Cemetery Ass'n, 58 Neb. 94 (78 N. W. 488; 46 L. R. A. 237).

120. (1900.) No person can be deprived of his property or other valuable right by the exercise of judicial or other governmental power, without notice to such person and reasonable opportunity to be heard in his defense. Horton v. State, ex rel. Hayden, 60 Neb. 701 (84 N. W. 87).

121. (1902.) The act of March 31, 1899, is only a fair and reasonable exercise of the police power. It does not deprive any citizen of his property, or the reasonable use thereof, without due process of law. It does not prohibit the right of contract. It merely regulates the same in a reasonable manner. It is therefore not in conflict with the constitution, and is in all things valid. Wenham v. State, 65 Neb. 394 (91 N. W. 421; 58 L. R. A. 825).

——— Ex parte proceedings.

122. (1901.) An ex parte proceeding by which one person seeks to deprive another of his property, although adversary in its form, is in derogation of the common law and the statute authorizing it must be strictly followed or the entire transaction will be void. Buchanan v. Edmisten, 1 Unof. 429 (95 N. W. 620).

Taxation of property.

123. (1877.) Section 24 of the "act to incorporate cities of the first class," approved March 28, 1873, authorizing and empowering the mayor and council of such cities to levy and collect taxes for general purposes, is not unconstitutional; and under this law, all property within the limits of a city as incorporated, which is taxable according to the laws of the state, is subject to taxation by the municipal corporation for general purposes. Turner v. Althaus, 6 Neb. 54.

124. (1904.) The sale of real estate for the payment of delinquent taxes, under the provisions of section 1, article IX, chapter 77, Compiled Statutes, does not deprive the owner of his property without due process of law. Woodrough v. Douglas County, 71 Neb. 354 (98 N. W. 1092).

www.hbook.com.cn

125. (1904.) An owner is not deprived of his property without due process of law by means of taxation, if he has an opportunity to question its validity or the amount of such tax or assessment at some stage of the proceedings, either before that amount is finally determined, or in subsequent proceedings for its collection. Hacker v. Howe, 72 Neb. 385 (101 N. W. 255).

126. (1904.) Compiled Statutes, article I, chapter 77, pp. 39 and 40, as existing prior to their repeal by the revenue act of 1903, are not invalid as taking property by taxation without due process of law. State, ex rel. Morton, v. Back, 72 Neb. 402 (100 N. W. 952).

126*a*. (1908.) Due process of law does not necessarily require a judicial hearing in matters of taxation. Trainor v. Maverick Loan & Trust Co., 80 Neb. 626 (114 N. W. 932).

126*b*. (1908.) A sale of real estate by the county treasurer, for delinquent taxes, without any proceeding in court, is not a taking of property without due process of law. Trainor v. Maverick Loan & Trust Co., 80 Neb. 626 (114 N. W. 932).

Local improvements.

127. (1876.) A statute authorizing a city to grade and improve streets, one-half of the expense to be paid by special tax or assessment on lots abutting thereon is constitutional, under that provision authorizing the legislature to organize cities and towns and restrict their power of taxation, and assessment. Hurford v. City of Omaha, 4 Neb. 336.

128. (1888.) Under section 31, chapter 78, Compiled Statutes, providing for the establishment of roads, a party having due notice of the establishment of a public road over his premises, and having neglected, within the time provided, to remove his fences, the enforcement of penalty and costs for such neglect is not an abridgement of his rights under sections 3 and 15 of article I of the constitution of this state, and he is not thereby deprived of his property without due process of law. Black v. Stein, 23 Neb. 302 (36 N. W. 548).

129. (1895.) The district irrigation law does not conflict with the constitution by authorizing the taking of property for private use only. Board of Directors of Alfalfa Irrigation Dist. v. Collins, 46 Neb. 411 (64 N. W. 1086).

130. (1895.) The act providing for organization and promotion of irrigation districts, and the voting of bonds therefore, does not contemplate the taking of property without due process of law, by means of taxation, within the prohibition of the state or federal constitution. Board of Directors of Alfalfa Irrigation District v. Collins, 46 Neb. 411 (64 N. W. 1086).

131. (1898.) Taxation in aid of internal improvements such as irrigating canals or ditches does not involve the taking of property for private use, or without due process of law. Cummings v. Hyatt, 54 Neb. 35 (74 N. W. 411).

132. (1901.) Section 110 of the Omaha city charter act, giving to the mayor and city council unrestricted rights in the improvement of streets and alleys around the court house is not unconstitutional as taking property without due process of law. Kountz v. City of Omaha, 63 Neb. 52 (88 N. W. 117).

Imposition of penalty or forfeiture.

133. (1888.) Section 92, chapter 13, Compiled Statutes, 1887, providing that a license to sell intoxicating liquor shall be revoked upon the conviction of the licensee of any violation of any law, ordinance or reguation pertaining to the sale of such liquors, is not a taking of property without due process of law. Martin v. State, 23 Neb. 371 (36 N. W. 554).

134. (1904.) Under the police power of the state, the legislature has power to declare property which may be used only for an unlawful purpose to be a public nuisance and authorize the same to be abated summarily by public officers, but, if property of a nature innocent in itself and susceptible of a beneficial use, has been used for an unlawful purpose, a statutory provision subjecting it to summary forfeiture to the state as a penalty or punishment for the wrongful use, without affording the owner thereof opportunity for a hearing, deprives him of his property without due process of law. McConnell v. McKillip, 71 Neb. 712 (99 N. W. 505; 65 L. R. A. 607).

Imposition of liability for injuries to persons.

135. (1899.) The act of June 22, 1867 (Session Laws, p. 88), making railroad companies liable, in absence of negligence, for injuries to passengers neither deprives carriers of property without due process of law, nor denies them the equal protection of the laws. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Young, 58 Neb. 678 (79 N. W. 556).

136. (1900.) Section 3, article I, chapter 72, Compiled Statutes, making carriers presumptively liable for injuries to passengers is not inimical to the fourteenth amendment of the constitution of the United States, nor to section 3, article I, of the constitution of this state, as tending to deprive railroad companies of their property without due process of law. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Zernecke, 59 Neb. 689 (82 N. W. 26; 55 L. R. A. 610).

Civil remedies and proceedings.

137. (1893.) Although the right to recover for damage to private property is reserved by the constitution, it is within the power of the legislature to regulate the remedy and prescribe the forms to be observed in order to enforce that right. The only limitation upon the power of the legislature in that respect is that the regulation must be reasonable, and provided by general laws of uniform application. City of Lincoln v. Grant, 38 Neb. 369 (56 N. W. 995).

I. ACTS OR CONDUCT CONSTITUTING CONTEMPT OF COURT.

Kinds of contempt.

1. (1882.) Contempts are either direct or constructive, i. e., in the presence of the court or acts or omission tending to prevent the administration of justice. Gandy v. State, 13 Neb. 445 (14 N. W. 142).

Refusal of attorney to appear before judge.

2. (1895.) A candid statement by an attorney, in respectful language, of his reasons for refusing to appear before a particular judge, will not, of itself, sustain a conviction on the charge of contempt. Hawes v. State, 46 Neb. 149 (64 N. W. 699).

3. (1895.) An attorney has a right to refuse a retainer which would require his appearance before a particular judge, and a candid statement to the court or judge, in respectful language of the reasons for such a course, will not of itself sustain a conviction on the charge of contempt. Hawes v. State, 46 Neb. 149 (64 N. W. 699).

Affidavit of prejudice of judge.

4. (1896.) It is not a contempt per se to present to a judge, in respectful language and in a proper manner, an application for a trial before another judge on account of the former's prejudice. Le Hane v. State, 48 Neb. 105 (66 N. W. 1017).

5. (1896.) In a summary proceeding, a person making an application for a transfer to another judge because of prejudice, cannot be punished for contempt because of the character of the original publication of such documents, or of improper motives in making the application. Such a proceeding must be based on information as for constructive contempt. Le Hane v. State, 48 Neb. 105 (66 N. W. 1017).

6. (1896.) When proof of prejudice of a judge in a contempt proceeding is of a documentary character, the presenting of the application, if it is so made in good faith, is not a contempt of court merely because the documents offered in evidence do reflect upon the character of the judge, and even though their original publication may have been contemptuous or libelous. Le Hane v. State, 48 Neb. 105 (66 N. W. 1017).

7. (1896.) An application to have another judge hear a contempt proceeding must be supported by evidence, and the tender of such evidence is not a contempt of court when made in good faith for the purpose of proving such prejudice and not for the purpose of reflecting upon the judge's honor, integrity, or character. Le Hane v. State, 48 Neb. 105 (66 N. W. 1017).

8. (1896.) An attorney at law applied to a district judge for an order transferring a cause to another judge for trial because of prejudice on the part of the first. He supported the application by proof that he had published a libel of and concerning the judge to whom the application was made, and attached a copy of the libelous publication to his affidavit. The application was itself made in respectful language and it did not appear that it was not presented in a respectful manner. Held, That the attorney could not be summarily convicted of contempt without an information and trial, because of matter contained in the libelous publication. Le Hane v. State, 48 Neb. 105 (66 N. W. 1017).

Refusal of witness to be sworn or to testify.

9. (1895.) A witness who contumaciously refuses to answer any legal and proper question asked him is guilty of a contempt. Wilcox v. State, 46 Neb. 402 (64 N. W. 1072).

9a. (1895.) When a witness is committed for contempt for refusing to testify, the questions asked and refused to be answered must be stated in the order of commitment. Wilcox v. State, 46 Neb. 402 (64 N. W. 1073).

Digitized by Google

10. (1895.) It is not a contempt of court for a witness to decline merely to be sworn, but he must also refuse to be affirmed, and the record must so disclose. Wilcox v. State, 46 Neb. 402 (64 N. W. 1072).

Tampering with jury.

11. (1907.) All wilful attempts of whatever nature, seeking to improperly influence jurors in the impartial discharge of their duties, whether it be by conversations or discussions, or attempts to bribe, constitute contempts Emery v. State, 78 Neb. 547 (111 N. W. 347).

Disputing charge to grand jury.

12. (1894.) Where a court gives an inflammatory charge to a grand jury, attorneys for a person indicted thereby, who in good faith allege in respectful language that the charge is inflammatory, and move to quash the indictment on that ground, are not guilty of contempt, although he mistakes his remedy by motion instead of by plea. Clair v. State, 40 Neb. 534 (59 N. W. 118; 28 L. R. A. 367).

Misconduct of jury.

13. (1880.) A jury is liable to a fine for contempt if they return a verdict that they agree to disagree. Green v. State, 10 Neb. 102 (4 N. W. 422).

Publications relating to pending proceedings.

14. (1896.) Where a newspaper article is not per se contemptuous, or where it is susceptible of more than one reasonable construction, one of which is innocent and requires an innuendo to apply its meaning to the court, and the record fails to disclose that the language was employed in its culpable sense, the publisher is not liable for contempt. Rosewater v. State, 47 Neb. 630 (66 N. W. 640).

15. (1896.) To constitute any publication contemptuous it must reflect upon the conduct of the court in reference to a cause or proceeding then pending in court and undetermined, and be of a character tending to influence its decision, or obstruct, interrupt, or embarrass the due administration of justice. Rosewater v. State, 47 Neb. 630 (66 N. W. 640).

16. (1900.) A newspaper corporation which deliberately seeks to influence judicial action by the publication of articles threatening the judges with public odium and reprobation in case they decide a pending cause in a particular way, is guilty of constructive contempt. State v. Bee Publishing Co., 60 Neb. 282 (83 N. W. 204; 83 Am. Rep. 531; 50 L. R. A. 195); State v. Rosewater, 60 Neb. 438 (83 N. W. 353).

17. (1900.) The press and the public have the right to freely discuss, criticise and censure the decisions of the courts; but they have no right, while a cause is pending, to attempt, by threats or other form of intimidation, to control judicial action. State v. Bee Publishing Co., 60 Neb. 282 (83 N. W. 204; 83 Am. St. Rep. 531; 50 L. R. A. 195); State v. Rosewater, 60 Neb. 438 (83 N. W. 353).

18. (1895.) A publication regarding a cause during its pendency in court, which tends to corrupt or embarrass the administration of justice and to produce a prejudice in the minds of the public with respect to the merits of the cause, is a contempt and punishable. Percival v. State, 45 Neb. 741 (64 N. W. 221; 50 Am. St. Rep. 568).

Disobedience of order of court.

19. (1894.) When by an order of a district judge a county clerk has been required to place upon official and sample ballots the name of a candidatee and to make due return of his compliance at a time fixed, a failure to comply may be punished as being in contempt of the authority of such judge. McAleese v. State, 42 Neb. 886 (61 N. W. 88).

20. (1895.) A defendant in a civil action who has failed to comply with an order of court directing the payment by him of a certain sum of money to apply on a judgment recovered therein against him is not liable to punishment as for a contempt in refusing to comply with such order where such disobedience was not wilful, but was solely on account of his being insolvent and wholly unable to pay the amount in the order required. Hawthorn v. State, 45 Neb. 871 (64 N. W. 359).

21. (1895.) Unless the disobedience of an order of court is wilful there is no contempt. Hawthorn v. State, 45 Neb. 871 (64 N. W. 359).

22. (1895.) An order in proceedings in aid of execution as provided for in the code of civil procedure, to a third person to turn over property in his or her possession to be applied in discharge of the judgment, if disobeyed, cannot be enforced by imprisonment of the party so ordered, as for a contempt under section 546 of the code. In re Havlik, 45 Neb. 747 (64 N. W. 234).

23. (1899.) One who wilfully disobeys a restraining order is guilty of contempt. Hydock v. State, 59 Neb. 296 (80 N. W. 902).

24. (1899.) A party is guilty of contempt who wilfully disregards, or refuses to comply with, an order of court directing him to restore the subject-matter of litigation, if the court possessed jurisdiction to enter the same, although the proceedings may have been never so erroneous. Jenkins v. State, 59 Neb. 68 (80 N. W. 268).

25. (1898.) Ordinarily the non-compliance with an order for payment of permanent alimony is not punishable as for contempt of court. Leeder v. State, 55 Neb. 133 (75 N. W. 541).

26. (1900.) A party who, after vacation of judgment, wilfully fails to comply with a lawful order for restitution may be proceeded against as for a criminal contempt. Jenkins v. State, 60 Neb. 205 (82 N. W. 622).

Attempt to evade judgment by another proceeding.

27. (1906.) A proceeding commenced in a county court for the evident purpose and intent of evading the effect of a determination of a proceeding of the same cause in the district court is a contempt of the district court. Terry v. State, 77 Neb. 612 (110 N. W. 733).

Excuses or defenses.

28. (1899.) In a contempt proceeding based on the alleged violation of a judicial order, such order may be examined only with a view to ascertaining whether it was coram judice. No mere error or irregularity therein, or in the proceedings leading thereto, excuses its disobedience. Nebraska Children's Home Society v. State, 57 Neb. 765 (78 N. W. 267).

29. (1900.) One who is in contempt of court by reason of disobeying an order to restore the subject of litigation, may purge himself of such contempt by showing that his failure to comply with the order was not atributeable to mere contumacy, but was due to an inability (not voluntarily created) to comply with such order. Jenkins v. State, 60 Neb. 205 (82 N. W. 622).

30. (1900.) A disavowal by contemnor of intention to commit a contempt of court, when made in good faith, though insufficient to purge the contempt, is, at least, receivable in extenuation of the offense. Mackay v. State, 60 Neb. 143 (82 N. W. 372).

31. (1901.) Inability to obey a writ resulting from an act done knowingly and wilfully does not purge of contempt. Huckins v. State, 61 Neb. 871 (86 N. W. 485).

II. POWER TO PUNISH, AND PROCEEDINGS THEREFOR.

Nature and grounds of power.

32. (1899.) Contempt proceedings may be punitive merely, or they may be remedial, to compel obedience to an order for the time resisted. Nebraska Children's Home Society v. State, 57 Neb. 765 (78 N. W. 267).

Scope and extent of authority to punish.

——— Courts in general.

33. (1888.) The power to punish for violation of its orders or judgments is inherent in every court having common-law jurisdiction, without any expressed statutory authority. Kregel v. Bartling, 23 Neb. 848 (37 N. W. 668).

34. (1899.) The power to punish for contempt is incident to every judicial tribunal, derived from its very constitution, without any express statutory aid, and may generally be exercised only by that tribunal whose order has been violated or proceedings interfered with. Nebraska Children's Home Society v. State, 57 Neb. 765 (78 N. W. 267).

35. (1900.) The common law power of the courts to punish for constructive contempts is, in this state, expressly confirmed by legislative enactment. State v. Bee Publishing Co., 60 Neb. 282 (83 N. W. 204; 83 Am. St. Rep. 531; 50 L. R. A. 195); State v. Rosewater, 60 Neb. 438 (83 N. W. 353).

——— Judges.

36. (1899.) A judge in vacation, vested by law with jurisdiction to conduct certain proceedings, has the inherent power, incident to that jurisdiction, to hear and determine proceedings for contempt for the purpose of enforcing his orders in the principal matter. Nebraska Children's Home Society v. State, 57 Neb. 765 (78 N. W. 267).

——— Notary public.

37. (1887.) A notary public has power to commit for contempt a witness who refuses to give his deposition in a proper case. Dogge v. State, 21 Neb. 272 (31 N. W. 929).

Digitized by Google

38. (1891.) Notaries public, under section 7 of chapter 61, Compiled Statutes, are not authorized to punish by fine or imprisonment persons guilty of misdemeanor, or misbehavior, during the taking of depositions. Courtnay v. Knox, 31 Neb. 652 (48 N. W. 763).

39. (1906.) When a witness fails to attend before a notary public in obedience to a subpœna issued by that officer, he may be punished as for a contempt; but such punishment cannot exceed a fine of $50, and the notary is not authorized by statute to commit the witness to the county jail therefor. In re Butler, 76 Neb. 267 (107 N. W. 572).

——— County courts.

40. (1892.) A county judge has no power to commit for contempt one guilty of disobedience of an injunction allowed by him in an action in the district court. In such a case the contempt is against the district court. Johnson v. Bouton, 35 Neb. 898 (53 N. W. 995).

——— District courts.

41. (1882.) The district court has authority to punish by proceedings for contempt any person who attempts to corrupt or unlawfully influence jurors in a case pending before the court. Gandy v. State, 13 Neb. 445 (14 N. W. 143).

42. (1906.) The district court has jurisdiction to punish contempt by fine or imprisonment, or both. Back v. State, 75 Neb. 603 (106 N. W. 787).

——— Superior courts.

43. (1905.) A court of record may not punish, as for a criminal contempt, summarily, without formal accusation or complaint, and without affording the accused a reasonable time to prepare his defense, except in those cases in which the judge is, while in exercise of his office, an actual witness of the alleged contemptucus conduct, or, at least, of a substantial part thereof, so that he is not compelled to inform himself concerning it and of the circumstances of its commission by the testimony of witnesses. Gordon v. State, 73 Neb. 221 (102 N. W. 458).

Nature and form of remedy.

44. Proceedings in contempt are in their nature criminal, and the strict rules of construction applicable to criminal proceedings are to govern therein. (1882) Gandy v. State, 13 Neb. 445 (14 N. W. 143); (1886) Boyd v. State, 19 Neb. 128 (26 N. W. 925); (1895) Hawes v. State, 46 Neb. 149 (64 N. W. 699); (1895) O'Chander v. State, 46 Neb. 10 (64 N. W. 373); (1895) Zimmerman v. State, 46 Neb. 13 (64 N. W. 375).

45. (1896.) Proceeding for contempt under our system is in the nature of a criminal prosecution and that the same degree of certainty is required in stating the offense as in prosecutions under the criminal code. Cooley v. State, 46 Neb. 603 (65 N. W. 799).

46. (1896.) The rules of strict construction applicable to procedure in criminal cases should govern proceedings to punish one for contempt. Beckett v. State, 49 Neb. 210 (68 N. W. 473).

47. (1898.) A proceeding against a party for contempt is in the nature of a prosecution for a crime and the rules of strict construction applicable in criminal proceedings are governable therein. Herdman v. State, 54 Neb. 626 (74 N. W. 1097).

48. (1899.) Proceedings in contempt are in their nature criminal, the rules of strict construction applicable to criminal prosecutions obtain therein, and presumptions and intendments will not be indulged to sustain a conviction for contempt of court. Hydock v. State, 59 Neb. 296 (80 N. W. 902).

48a. (1907.) A prosecution for contempt of court is a criminal proceeding. The defendant is entitled to the benefit of and reasonable doubt as to his guilt. Connell v. State, 80 Neb. 296 (114 N. W. 294).

Joinder of causes.

49. (1897.) A charge of malpractice against an attorney and counselor at law may be joined with a prosecution for a contempt where both charges involve a single transaction. Blodgett v. State, 50 Neb. 121 (69 N. W. 751).

Transferring hearing to another judge.

50. (1899.) The power to punish for contempt being restricted to the tribunal whose authority is defied, it is not error for a judge, who within his authority has made an order in vacation, to refuse to transfer to another judge for hearing a proceeding in contempt based on the disobedience of such order. Nebraska Children's Home Society v. State, 57 Neb. 765 (78 N. W. 267).

51. (1906.) Upon prosecution for contempt in the district court, the judge before whom the cause is regularly to be heard may refuse to transfer the cause to another judge of the same court for hearing, unless it is made to appear by due proof that a fair and impartial trial cannot be had before him, or that some other ground for change of venue prescribed by statute exists. Back v. State, 75 Neb. 603 (106 N. W. 787).

Necessity of arraignment.

52. (1899.) It is not necessary in a contempt proceeding that the defendant be formally arraigned. Nebraska Children's Home Society v. State, 57 Neb. 765 (78 N. W. 267).

Affidavit.

53. (1891.) In all matters based on the oath of a party charging another with the commission of an offense by which he must be deprived of his liberty, the charge must be specific and direct. Mere heresay will not do. Ludden v. State, 31 Neb. 429 (48 N. W. 61).

54. (1894.) Proceedings for the punishment of contempt by a county clerk for failure to place names upon the sample ballots may be had upon an affidavit, sworn to before any officer by law authorized to administer an oath. McAleese v. State, 42 Neb. 886 (61 N. W. 88).

55. (1895.) In a proceeding to punish for an alleged contempt, not committed in the presence of the court, the affidavit upon which the proceeding is based is jurisdictional, and it must affirmatively disclose sufficient facts to show that the case is one over which the court has jurisdiction. Hawthorne v. State, 45 Neb. 871 (64 N. W. 359).

56. (1898.) The affidavit must state the acts of the asserted contempt with as much certainty as is required in a statement of an offense in a prosecution for a crime. The statements must be as of the personal knowledge of the affiant. They may not be on information and belief. Herdman v. State, 54 Neb. 626 (74 N. W. 1097).

57. (1898.) In a proceeding for contempt the affidavit is jurisdictional. Herdman v. State, 54 Neb. 626 (74 N. W. 1097).

Complaint or information.

58. (1882.) Proceedings for contempt not committed in the presence of the court are instituted by filing an information under oath stating the facts constituting the alleged contempt. An attachment or order to show cause will then be issued, and the party accused brought before the court. As the proceeding is solely to protect public justice from obstruction the accused is not entitled to trial by jury. Gandy v. State, 13 Neb. 445 (14 N. W. 143).

59. (1882.) Contempt proceedings are criminal in nature, and the same degree of certainty is required in stating the offense as would be required if instituted under the criminal law. The act itself must be set out. Gandy v. State, 13 Neb. 445 (14 N. W. 143).

60. (1891.) Proceedings for contempt not committed in the presence of the court are instituted by filing an information under oath stating the facts constituting the alleged contempt. The charge should be stated in a positive manner, and it is not sufficient for the affiant to allege that he "is informed and believes" certain material facts. Ludden v. State, 31 Neb. 429 (48 N. W. 61).

61. (1895.) A complaint on information in contempt based on the violation of an injunction, in force on an appeal under an invalid bond, is insufficient to sustain a conviction. O'Chander v. State, 46 Neb. 10 (64 N. W. 373).

62. (1896.) A complaint is insufficient as the foundation of proceedings for constructive contempt which fails to state the facts constituting the alleged offense, and showing that the act of the accused amounts to a fraud upon the court, or tends to hinder or embarrass it in the administration of justice. Cooley v. State, 46 Neb. 603 (65 N. W. 799).

63. (1896.) For acts contemptuous in their character, committed in the presence of the court, the court may inflict a summary punishment upon the offender without information filed or trial; but when the acts constituting a contempt are not committed in the presence of the court, an information under oath must be filed and the defendant is entitled to a trial of the facts therein alleged. Le Hane v. State, 48 Neb. 105 (66 N. W. 1017).

64. (1899.) If the terms of an information in contempt clearly show that the act complained of was wilful, the information will not be held bad for the failure to use the word "wilful." Nebraska Children's Home Society v. State, 57 Neb. 765 (78 N. W. 267).

65. (1903.) While a formal accusation is not necessary to a prosecution for contempt committed in the presence of the court, the record must show that such an offense has been committed in order to sustain a conviction. Ogden v. State, 3 Unof. 886 (93 N. W. 203).

66. (1903.) A recital that the accused addressed insulting and menacing language to the court is a mere conclusion; the language itself should be set out to enable the reviewing court to determine whether it was actually contemptuous. Ogden v. State, 3 Unof. 886 (93 N. W. 203).

67. (1906.) A prosecution for constructive contempt is based upon an affidavit or information alleging the facts constituting the contempt. If such information is amended by interlineation in matter of substance, it must be reverified, and there must be a trial thereon as upon a new prosecution. Back v. State, 75 Neb. 603 (106 N. W. 787).

68. (1906.) A prosecution for contempt is "in the nature of a prosecution for a crime," and the affidavit or information must state the acts constituting the offense with as great certainty as is required in criminal proceedings. Back v. State, 75 Neb. 603 (106 N. W. 787).

69. (1907.) Where the charge of contempt of court is set forth in an information in positive and direct terms, the statement by the public prosecutor in his verification thereto "that the allegations and charges in the within information are true, as he verily believes," does not render such information void. Emery v. State, 78 Neb. 547 (111 N. W. 347).

Answer.

70. (1895.) Where, in a proceeding for an indirect or constructive contempt, consisting of the publication in a newspaper, the article upon which the complaint is based is indefinite in its meaning and application, and is not libelous per se, and does not, unless aided by an innuendo, apply to the court, nor reflect upon its integrity or purpose, and, in so far as any reflection upon the court is concerned, is capable of an innocent interpretation; and the defendant, in an answer sworn to by him, positively asserts that he used the language employed in the article in a meaning other than libelous, and with no intent to reflect upon either the integrity or honesty of purpose of the judge, or to embarrass or impede the administration of justice, such answer will be taken as conclusive. Percival v. State, 45 Neb. 741 (64 N. W. 221; 50 Am. St. Rep. 568).

71. (1899.) Where a contempt proceeding is instituted by information and a rule to show cause, it is the duty of the defendant to file an answer if he desires to traverse the facts charged. Failing on sufficient opportunity to so do, the court may treat the facts alleged in the information as confessed. Nebraska Children's Home Society v. State, 57 Neb. 765 (78 N. W. 267).

72. (1903.) Where an information is filed charging defendant with a contempt of court and he is requested to file an answer to said charges but refuses to do so and stands mute, such refusal may be treated by the court as an admission of the charges contained in the information. Toozer v. State, 5 Unof. 182 (97 N. W. 584).

73. (1907.) In a prosecution for contempt where the act complained of is in itself a contempt of court, a denial on oath of its commission raises an issue of fact for trial, and does not entitle the accused to an acquittance. Emery v. State, 78 Neb. 547 (111 N. W. 347).

Questions of law and fact.

74. (1894.) In contempt proceedings, whether a failure to comply with an order has been satisfactorily explained is a question of fact for the trial court, and its judgment will not be reversed unless clearly wrong. McAleese v. State, 42 Neb. 886 (61 N. W. 88).

Evidence and proof of contempt.

75. (1891.) Proof examined, and held not to sustain the finding of the court that the plaintiff in error had violated the order of the court. Ludden v. State, 31 Neb. 429 (48 N. W. 61).

76. (1895.) To sustain a conviction for contempt it should appear that the language or conduct imputed to the accused is contemptuous per se, or, if it may be contemptuous or innocent according to the circumstances of the case, it should appear from the record to have been employed in its culpable sense. Hawes v. State, 46 Neb. 149 (64 N. W. 699).

77, 78. (1895.) Presumptions and intendments will not be indulged in, in order to sustain convictions for contempt of court. Hawes v. State, 46 Neb. 149 (64 N. W. 699); (1905) Crites v. State, 74 Neb. 687 (105 N. W. 469).

79. (1900.) Evidence in a contempt proceeding examined, and found to establish the defendant's guilt of the offense charged in the information. State v. Rosewater, 60 Neb. 438 (83 N. W. 353).

80. 1903.) Where the prosecution for contempt proceeds on the theory that such contempt was committed in the presence of the court, the record is insufficient unless it shows that the offense was thus committed. Ogden v. State, 3 Unof. 886 (93 N. W. 203).

Review.

Review of contempt for violating order of injunction, see Injunction, § 169.

81, 82. A judgment for contempt may be reviewed on error in the supreme court in the same manner as criminal cases. (1882) Gandy v. State, 13 Neb. 445 (14 N. W. 143); (1895) Zimmerman v. State, 46 Neb. 13 (64 N. W. 375).

83. (1895.) In order to secure a review of errors committed during a trial in proceedings for contempt such errors must first be submitted to the court wherein such proceedings were had by a motion for new trial. Zimmerman v. State, 46 Neb. 13 (64 N. W. 375).

84. (1896.) Where, although the alleged contemptuous acts are committed in facie curiæ, and, therefore, punishable summarily without the formality of a trial or hearing, witnesses are by the court called and examined touching the transaction involved, the prosecution will, for the purpose of review by means of proceedings in error, particularly where the record is ambiguous, be construed as one for a constructive contempt, in which the accused is entitled to be heard in his own defense. Beckett v. State, 49 Neb. 210 (68 N. W. 473).

85. (1897.) A finding without a judgment in a summary prosecution for contempt of court will not be reviewed by means of proceedings in error. Blodgett v. State, 50 Neb. 121 (69 N. W. 751).

86. (1903.) Orders and judgments of the district court in proceedings for contempt, are reviewable in the supreme court by petition in error only. Thompson v. Nelson, 4 Unof. 687 (96 N. W. 194).

87. (1904.) A sentence for contempt of court will not be reviewed in a proceeding to which the state is not a party. Whitaker v. McBride, 5 Unof. 411 (98 N. W. 877).

88. (1905.) A judgment in a summary proceeding for contempt in facie curiæ, where no complaint is filed, no evidence is taken, and no trial had, may be reviewed on the record made therein without the filing of a motion for a new trial. Crites v. State, 74 Neb. 687 (105 N. W. 469).

88*a*. (1907.) When the prosecution for contempt is based upon language used by counsel in open court in the trial of a cause, and the words used are not in themselves necessarily contemptuous, and the court orders a prosecution instituted by information filed by the county attorney, and a formal trial is had, there being no statement of the court in the record as to the conduct of counsel upon which the proceedings are based, general findings of the court will be considered as predicated on the evidence in the record, and unless supported by that evidence will not sustain a judgment of guilt. Connell v. State, 80 Neb. 296 (114 N. W. 294).

89. (1905.) The record in a contempt case must show forth the facts constituting the offense. A mere recital that the defendant is guilty of contemptuous and insolent behavior toward the court, and is in contempt of court, where the record of the proceedings does not warrant such recital, is a mere conclusion, and is insufficient to show that the offense was in fact committed. Crites v. State, 74 Neb. 687 (105 N. W. 469).

III. PUNISHMENT.

In general.

90. (1891.) A payment under protest of a fine for contempt, unlawfully imposed by a notary, under threat of imprisonment, is not voluntary and may be recovered back by action. Courtnay v. Knox, 31 Neb. 652 (48 N. W. 763).

91. (1895.) When a witness is committed for contempt for refusing to testify, the questions asked and refused to be answered must be stated in the order of commitment. Wilcox v. State, 46 Neb. 402 (64 N. W. 1072).

92. (1899.) Where the object of a contempt proceeding is to compel obedience to an order which may still be obeyed, it is not error to sentence the defendant to imprisonment until he shall obey such order, and in addition to impose a reasonable fine for past disobedience. Nebraska Children's Home Society v. State, 57 Neb. 765 (78 N. W. 267).

Grounds for continuance.

——— Stipulations and agreements.

1. (1890.) A verbal agreement made out of court by the attorneys in the cause are unenforceable; and a refusal to continue a cause on such grounds is not error. Hale v. Hess, 30 Neb. 42 (46 N. W. 261).

2. (1890.) On a contingent and alternative agreement between attorneys of record to an action pending in a county court, for the continuance of the cause for trial to a day certain, by which the plaintiff's attorneys were misled as to the consent and fact of postponement of the trial, which was called in their absence and dismissed, and a motion to reinstate the case upon affidavits of the facts, and of merits, overruled, and which was subsequently reversed on error in the district court, held, that the evidence presented to the county court was sufficient to sustain the last judgment. Bruce v. Sandwich Mfg. Co., 28 Neb. 827 (45 N. W. 250).

——— Pending taking depositions.

3. (1895.) A continuance should not be granted to enable a party, by proceedings for contempt in the courts of another state, to compel a witness to testify by deposition, there being no presumption that he would be guilty of contempt for refusing to answer questions. Stratton v. Dole, 45 Neb. 472 (63 N. W. 875).

4. (1903.) If sufficient time is given from denial of a motion for a continuance, sought in order to obtain a deposition, to enable it to be taken under ordinary circumstances, and from the showing made upon the motion there is no ground to believe it can be procured in any reasonable time if not in that allowed, it is not error to deny the continuance. Gatzemeyer v. Peverson, 68 Neb. 832 (94 N. W. 974).

www.liptool.com.cn

——— Amendment of pleading.

5. (1899.) Where the court, during the process of a trial, allows the defendant to amend his answer so as to present a new defense, the plaintiff, if not prepared to meet the new issue, may have a continuance of the cause upon such terms as the court may deem just. Dunn v. Bozarth, 59 Neb. 244 (80 N. W. 811).

——— Want of preparation.

6. (1891.) Where a case is called which a party is not prepared to try, he should move for a continuance, stating the grounds on which a continuance is sought, supported, if necessary, by affidavits. City of Lincoln v. Staley, 32 Neb. 63 (48 N. W. 887).

7. (1895.) An attorney whose case is called for trial, if unprepared, should at once make such showing to entitle him to a postponement as lies within his power, and if he fails so to do, he will not be permitted in support of a motion for a new trial to urge such matters within his knowledge as, properly presented, should have operated to excuse his entering upon a trial in the first instance. Corbett v. Nat. Bank of Commerce, 44 Neb. 230 (62 N. W. 445).

——— Absence of counsel.

8. (1895.) Where a case is regularly called for trial and one of the attorneys for defendant orally announces that another attorney for defendant is unavoidably absent but will return soon in case of postponement, for a short time, and attend to the trial, it is not an abuse of discretion for the judge to insist that the case be dismissed, continued, or tried. Corbett v. Nat. Bank of Commerce, 44 Neb. 230 (62 N. W. 445).

9. (1905.) It is not error to deny a motion for a continuance because of the absence of an attorney, if the party making the motion is represented at the trial by other competent counsel familiar with his case. First Nat. Bank of Omaha v. Dye, 73 Neb. 300 (102 N. W. 614).

——— Absence of witness.

10. (1884.) In an action for goods sold and delivered where the answer consists of denials alone, it is not error for the court to overrule a motion for a continuance based upon an affidavit of the defendant that he has recently discovered two witnesses in another state by whom he can prove payment. Clark v. Mullen, 16 Neb. 481 (20 N. W. 642).

11. (1889.) Under the provisions of section 960 of the code a party desiring a continuance of a cause for a period not exceeding thirty days is entitled to such continuance if he "prove by his own oath or otherwise that he cannot, for want of material evidence which he expects to procure, safely proceed to trial." Belcher v. Skinner, 28 Neb. 91 (44 N. W. 78).

12. (1894.) Suit was brought and service had on defendant in August, 1890. March 27, 1891, defendant applied for a continuance, on the ground of the absence from the state of a witness whose testimony was material for the defendant. The witness did not reside within the jurisdiction of the court when the suit was brought, and defendant had made no effort to procure the witness' deposition. Held, That the overruling of the application for a continuance by the district court was correct. Kansas City, W. & N. W. R. Co. v. Conlee, 43 Neb. 121 (61 N. W. 111).

13. (1895.) It is proper to refuse an application to withdraw a juror and continue the case for the purpose of enabling a party to procure a witness, when the adverse party admits the only fact to be proved, except what is cumulative. Smith v. First Nat. Bank of Chadron, 45 Neb. 444 (63 N. W. 796).

14. (1896.) An instruction by which the court only professed to describe, and in fact did accurately describe, to the jury the admissions of fact of a party as the same appeared of record, cannot be assailed as erroneous on the alleged ground that the adverse party had a right, in the first place, to an admission of greater scope or conclusiveness than that described as a condition upon which a continuance would be denied such adverse party. Burris v. Court, 48 Neb. 179 (66 N. W. 1131).

15. (1897.) The overruling of an application for continuance of a cause, based on the absence of a witness, is without prejudice when the person whose presence was desired was in court during the trial, placed on the witness stand, and was examined by the parties. Hartford Fire Ins. Co. v. Corey, 53 Neb. 209 (73 N. W. 674).

16. (1898.) There was no prejudicial error in denying an application for a continuance in order to secure the testimony of witnesses who afterwards appeared and testified at the trial. Life Insurance Clearing Co. v. Altschuler, 55 Neb. 341 (75 N. W. 862).

17. (1898.) An application for a continuance grounded on the absence of a material witness is properly denied where the party making the application has not been diligent in attempting to procure the testimony or compulsory attendance of such witness. Life Insurance Clearing Co. v. Altschuler, 55 Neb. 341 (75 N. W. 862).

18. (1898.) Where it appears that the evidence of an absent witness, if given on the trial, could not possibly change the result, an order refusing a continuance to obtain his testimony, if erroneous, would not be prejudicially so. Life Insurance Clearing Co. v. Altschuler, 55 Neb. 341 (75 N. W. 862).

19. (1902.) A motion for a continuance in order to obtain the testimony of an absent witness is addressed to the sound legal discretion of the trial court, and it is not error to overrule it where it does not appear that the party asking for the continuance has, without his fault, been deprived of material evidence. McDermott v. Manley, 65 Neb. 194 (90 N. W. 1119).

——— Surprise at trial.

20. (1884.) Where the injury is alleged in the petition to have occurred in December, and the testimony showed that it occurred in the previous September, it is not error to overrule a motion for a continuance, it not appearing that the change of time affected the defense. City of Omaha v. Cane, 15 Neb. 657 (20 N. W. 101).

21. (1894.) Where the pleadings notify the party seeking the continuance of the character of the evidence which his adversary will offer, and where no reason is shown for his not being prepared to meet such evidence, except his reliance upon an issue of law arising upon the trial, which is determined against him, it is not error for the trial court to refuse permission to withdraw a juror and continue the case. Violet v. Rose, 39 Neb. 660 (58 N. W. 216).

22. (1894.) Leave to withdraw a juror and continue the case is discretionary with trial court, and refusal thereof is not error when asked only upon the ground that the applicant expected certain evidence, admitted under the pleadings, to be ruled out. Violet v. Rose, 39 Neb. 660 (58 N. W. 216).

23. (1902.) When the issues in an action are regularly made up, the cause stands for trial; and a party thereto will not be granted, as a matter of right, a postponement solely on the ground that the issues as made by the pleadings were formed sooner than he anticipated they would be. Palmer v. Caywood, 64 Neb. 372 (89 N. W. 1034).

23*a*. (1907.) In the absence of any showing on the part of defendants that they were unprepared to meet, or were surprised by, the allegations in an amendment to the petition allowed at the close of the trial, the decision of the district court refusing a continuance on account of the granting of such amendment will not be reviewed. Bliss v. Beck, 80 Neb. 290 (114 N. W. 162).

24. (1903.) The propriety of allowing the plaintiff after he has rested his case without proving a material fact in issue, to withdraw a juror and continue the case in order to obtain further testimony, is a matter resting in the sound discretion of the court. Harker v. Burbank, 68 Neb. 85 (93 N. W. 949).

——— Absence of evidence.

25. (1886.) Where material testimony is suppressed, without which the party in whose favor it was taken cannot safely proceed to trial, the court, upon the application of such party and upon such terms as may be just, should grant a continuance. Spielman v. Flynn, 19 Neb. 342 (27 N. W. 224).

26. (1896.) The action of the trial court in denying an application for the continuance of a hearing on a motion to dissolve an attachment examined and affirmed. Dayton Spice Mills Co. v. Sloan, 49 Neb. 622 (68 N. W. 1040).

27. (1901.) When due diligence is not shown to have been exercised, or when the materiality of the proposed evidence does not appear, or when the proposed evidence may be procured from witnesses within the jurisdiction of the court, it is not error to overrule an application for a continuance for the purpose of securing the same character of testimony from witnesses residing in other states. Kerr v. State, 63 Neb. 115 (88 N. W. 240).

www.lhtool.com.cn

——— Pending review of interlocutory order.

28. (1899.) A trial of the merits of a case should not be delayed on account of an attempt to review on error an interlocutory order. Doolittle v. American Nat. Bank, 58 Neb. 454 (78 N. W. 926).

Time for application.

29. (1903.) Where, by the rules of the trial court, it is provided that applications for continuances must be filed on or before the first day of the term, and where it appears that such application is not filed until the cause is called for trial, and in the application itself it is not shown that the applicant has used reasonable diligence to procure counsel, and obtain the testimony of witnesses whose evidence he alleges is necessary to enable him to proceed to trial, it is no abuse of discretion to overrule the application. Miles v. Ballantine, 4 Unof. 171 (93 N. W. 708).

Affidavits for continuance.

——— In general.

30. (1876.) A party who charges that an election for the relocation of the county seat of M. county was carried in favor of M. by fraudulent means, must state the facts on which he bases his charge; and an affidavit for a continuance of an application for a peremptory writ of mandamus to compel the removal of the county records and offices to M., the place declared by the county commissioners to be the county seat, is not sufficient where it merely states that the affiant is informed and believes that a greater number of fraudulent votes were cast in one of the precincts of said county in favor of M. than the entire majority in favor of that place, and that certain votes were cast in favor of B. that were not counted. State, ex rel. Barnes, v. Thatch, 5 Neb. 94.

31. (1883.) The statement of facts in an affidavit for a continuance should be specific of acts done, or of excuses for not doing them, and given with such particularity that an indictment for perjury would lie in case of its being false. Ingalls v. Nobles, 14 Neb. 272 (15 N. W. 351).

32. (1889.) The oath for continuance, if in the form of an affidavit, may be substantially in the words of the statute, and it is unnecessary to state the purport of the testimony which the moving party supposes he can procure. Belcher v. Skinner, 28 Neb. 91 (44 N. W. 78).

33. (1907.) Where a case is set down for trial on a day certain, an application for a continuance over the term, supported by an affidavit showing the inability of the defendant to be in attendance on that day, but failing to show that he could not be in attendance at some subsequent day of the same term, is properly overruled. Good v. Bonacum, 78 Neb. 792 (111 N. W. 796).

——— Absence of witness.

34. (1871.) The affidavit for the continuance of a cause, to procure the evidence of a co-defendant, is fatally defective, if it does not state the testimony which the affiant expects will be given by the absent party. Jameson v. Butler, 1 Neb. 115.

35. (1884.) Application for continuance on ground of absence of witness examined, and found to be insufficient showing of diligence. Peavy v. Hovey, 16 Neb. 416 (20 N. W. 272).

36. (1889.) An affidavit for a continuance on account of absent witnesses which fails to show that either their personal attendance or testimony will probably be obtained, if time be granted, is insufficient, where it does not appear that the same facts cannot be proven by other witnesses within the jurisdiction of the court. Rowland v. Shephard, 27 Neb. 494 (43 N. W. 344).

37. (1890.) In an action to recover for personal injuries sustained by a servant while operating a press for defendant, an affidavit, supporting a motion for a continuance, stating that such continuance is necessary to obtain a necessary witness, who was plaintiff's foreman at the time of the accident, and by him defendant expects to prove contributory negligence by plaintiff; and that diligent search has been made for such witness, is sufficient and a continuance should have been granted even though the cause had been continued for other reasos at a previous term. Beatrice Sewer Pipe Co. v. Erwin, 30 Neb. 86 (46 N. W. 279).

38. (1891.) Where a motion for a continuance of a cause, made in the district court by a defendant on account of the absence of a co-defendant as a witness, is supported by affidavit which sets out specifically what facts the witness would testify to and that there was no other person by whom the facts could be proven, and it appearing that the testimony is material under the issues, that diligence has been used to obtain it in time for the trial, and that such testimony can be procured by the next succeeding term of court, held, that the continuance should be granted. Johnson v. Mills, 31 Neb. 524 (48 N. W. 266).

39. (1891.) Affidavits of parties to actions for the continuance of the trial for the production of the testimony of absent and distant witnesses, must allege facts and circumstances to be given in evidence from which legal conclusions, constituting a cause of action or defense, may be drawn. Farmers & Merchants Bank v. Berchard, 32 Neb. 785 (49 N. W. 762).

40. (1892.) A motion for continuance based upon an affidavit that a witness was absent and his whereabouts unknown; that he possessed important papers and that it would be unsafe to proceed to trial without him, but failed to state what papers he possessed, or what was to be proven by him, or any reason for the failure to take his deposition, was properly overruled. German Ins. Co. v. Penrod, 35 Neb. 273 (53 N. W. 74).

41. (1893.) A fourth application for continuance, based on the absence of the same witness as were the previous ones, was properly refused, where the affidavit did not show that either the personal attendance of such witness, or his evidence would probably be obtained if the cause was continued. Barton v. McKay, 36 Neb. 632 (54 N. W. 968).

42. (1894.) An order denying a continuance was properly sustained where applicant failed to show unavoidable absence of an important witness or that his testimony could subsequently be obtained. Home Fire Ins. Co. v. Johnson, 43 Neb. 71 (61 N. W. 84).

43. (1896.) A motion and affidavit based upon the absence of a witness are insufficient, where they fail to show that either the attendance of the witness or his testimony would be obtained after the granting of a continuance. McClelland v. Scroggin, 48 Neb. 141 (66 N. W. 1123).

44. (1896.) An admission that absent witnesses would testify as alleged in an affidavit for a continuance, held not an admission that the testimony was true. Burris v. Court, 48 Neb. 179 (66 N. W. 1131).

45. (1898.) An application for a continuance which failed to disclose the names of absent parties whose testimony was desired, and the nature of their testimony, held properly to have been denied. Life Insurance Clearing Co. v. Altschuler, 53 Neb. 481 (73 N. W. 942).

46. (1901.) A mere unsworn certificate of a physician that defendant is prostrated from the effects of la grippe and rheumatism; not able to be out, and that any exposure would be dangerous, together with affidavits of the party and his son that he is unable to sit up and has to be assisted from his bed from such causes, is not such a showing as indicates abuse of discretion in overruling a motion to continue for that cause a foreclosure suit already pending more than two years, especially when no reason appears why defendant's place cannot be fully supplied. Black v. Webber, 1 Unof. 468 (96 N. W. 606).

47. (1902.) An affidavit for a continuance, on the ground of the absence of a witness, which leaves the materiality of such witness in doubt is fatally defective. Lomax v. Holbine, 65 Neb. 270 (90 N. W. 1122).

48. (1903.) Where the affidavit in support of a motion for a continuance does not set out the facts and circumstances to which an absent witness will testify, and especially where it is not shown that there are no other available witnesses by whom the facts known to the absent witness can be proved, the continuance of the case should be denied. Diedrichs v. Diedrichs, 68 Neb. 534 (94 N. W. 536).

49. (1907.) Where the necessity for the continuance by reason of defendant's inability to be present is placed on the ground that the defendant is a material witness in his own behalf as to the facts relied upon as a defense, the affidavit is defective if it fails to show that he would testify to such facts if present at the trial. Good v. Bonacum, 78 Neb. 792 (111 N. W. 796).

——— Admissibility in evidence.

49*a*. (1894.) Where a stipulation is made by the parties whereby it is agreed that an affidavit for continuance on the ground of the absence of a material witness may be read to the jury as the evidence of such absent witness, if the application for continuance be overruled, the facts which the affidavit alleged the absent witness would testify to are not incompetent, irrelevant, immaterial or improper evidence, because such facts are stated in the form of a conclusion. Blaine v. Boyer, 42 Neb. 709 (60 N. W. 865).

www.lhpool.com.cn

——— Absence of evidence.

50. (1887.) Where an affidavit in support of a motion for a continuance on account of the absence of a document necessary to be used in the cause as evidence is filed, it should affirmatively appear thereby, not only that the party seeking the continuance has been diligent in trying to procure such document, but that it is at least probable that the evidence can be had in case the adjournment should be granted. Singer Mfg. Co. v. McAllister Bros., 22 Neb. 359 (35 N. W. 181).

——— Loss of depositions.

51. (1890.) To entitle a party to either a continuance of a cause or a new trial on account of the loss before the trial of a deposition taken in the case, he must under oath set out the testimony contained in the lost deposition. It is no sufficient to state that it fully supports the allegations of the answer. Felton v. Moffet, 29 Neb. 582 (45 N. W. 930).

Counter-affidavits and other evidence.

52. (1889.) The docket of the county judge contained a recital that a motion for a continuance was overruled "as not appearing sufficient to the court, after examination, a settlement made between plaintiff and defendant and signed by H. D. Rowland." There was nothing of record to show that the settlement referred to was submitted to the court; whether it was in writing or rested on parol, nor that any evidence was offered by either party except the affidavit for a continuance, and which of itself was insufficient. Held, That the district court did not err in refusing to reverse the judgment of the county judge upon the ground that other evidence was heard contradicting the affidavit filed in support of the motion. Rowland v. Shephard, 27 Neb. 494 (43 N. W. 344).

53. (1893.) Where counter-affidavits are used, and the application for a continuance is denied, the judgment will not be reversed for that reason, where the showing of the party making the application, when considered alone, is insufficient to entitle him to a continuance. Barton v. McKay, 36 Neb. 632 (54 N. W. 968).

54. (1893.) Permitting counter-affidavits to be used on the hearing of a motion for a continuance is improper. Barton v. McKay, 36 Neb. 632 (54 N. W. 968).

Continuance to Sunday or holiday.

55. (1888.) Where cause is continued to a day on which the court is prohibited from transacting business, as Sunday, or a legal holiday, the continuance will extend to the first day thereafter on which it can legally transact business. State, ex rel. Carter, v. King, 23 Neb. 540 (37 N. W. 310).

56. (1898.) A continuance of a cause to a legal Sunday operates as a continuance to the first day thereafter when the court may legally sit. State, ex rel. Carter, v. King, 23 Neb. 540 (37 N. W. 310).

Time of continuance.

57. (1902.) The return day of the summons was September 5. It was returned not served because the defendant was a non-resident of the state, and not found within the county. On October 16 defendant entered his voluntary appearance in the case, waiving issuance and service of summons. Held, That the date of such appearance was equivalent to the return day of the summons; that a continuance for less than ninety days from October 16, but more than ninety days from September 5, without defendant's consent, did not work a discontinuance of the suit. Reed v. Mott, 2 Unof. 450 (89 N. W. 277).

Discretion of court.

58. A motion for a continuance is addressed to the sound legal discretion of a court, and its decision thereon will not be reversed unless there has been an abuse of such discretion. (1889) Singer Mfg. Co. v. McAllister Bros., 22 Neb. 359 (35 N. W. 181); (1894) Clark v. Carey, 41 Neb. 780 (60 N. W. 78); (1894) Nebraska Loan & Trust Co. v. Hamer, 40 Neb. 281 (58 N. W. 695); (1895) Stratton v. Dole, 45 Neb. 472 (63 N. W. 875); (1896) Burris v. Court, 48 Neb. 179 (66 N. W. 1131); (1896) Storz v. Finklestein, 48 Neb. 27 (66 N. W. 1020); (1901) Kerr v. State, 63 Neb. 115 (88 N. W. 240); (1903) Miles v. Ballantine, 4 Unof. 171 (93 N. W. 708); (1906) City of Lincoln v. Lincoln Street R. Co., 75 Neb. 523 (106 N. W. 317).

59. (1883.) Granting of continuance is largely a matter of discretion with the court, and will not be interfered with unless clearly abused. Ingalls v. Nobles, 14 Neb. 272 (15 N. W. 351).

60. (1876.) An application for a continuance is addressed to the sound discretion of the court, and its action will not be reversed, unless there has been such an abuse of discretion as has operated to the prejudice of the party in the final determination of the case. Billings v. McCoy Bros., 5 Neb. 187.

61. (1891.) An application for the postponement of a trial to a later day in the term, or for the continuance of a cause, is addressed to the sound legal discretion of the court, and the ruling thereon will not be disturbed, in the absence of a showing that there has been an abuse of discretion. McDonald v. McAllister, 32 Neb. 514 (49 N. W. 377).

62. (1894.) Allowance of continuance is discretionary with trial court. Home Fire Ins Co. v. Murray, 40 Neb. 597 (59 N. W. 102).

63. (1894.) The ruling of a district court on a motion for a continuance will not be disturbed unless it is manifest the court abused its discretion, and the litigant, himself guiltless of negligence or laches, was thereby deprived of an opportunity to make his case or defense. Kansas City, W. & N. W. R. Co. v. Conlee, 43 Neb. 212 (61 N. W. 111).

64. (1895.) Motions for change of venue and for continuance are addressed to the sound discretion of the trial court, and unless it appears that there has been an abuse of such discretion, its rulings thereon will not be disturbed. Stoppert v. Nierle, 45 Neb. 105 (63 N. W. 382).

65. (1896.) The ruling of a district court on a motion for a continuance will not be disturbed unless it is manifest the court abused its discretion and the litigant —himself guiltless of negligence or laches —was thereby deprived of an opportunity to make his case or defense. Keens v. Robertson, 46 Neb. 837 (65 N. W. 897).

Objections and review.

Ruling on motions for, as ground for reversal, see Appeal and Error, §§ 1909-1911.

——— Necessity of exceptions.

66. (1891.) To predicate error upon an order denying a continuance it must be excepted to at the trial. Coad v. Home Cattle Co., 32 Neb. 761 (49 N. W. 757; 29 Am. St. Rep. 465).

67. (1898.) To review the denial of a continuance it is necessary to take an exception to the ruling in the trial court. Staples v. Arlington State Bank, 54 Neb. 760 (74 N. W. 1066).

——— Sufficiency of record.

68. (1899.) An assignment of error that the court erred in denying a motion for a continuance is without merit where the record does not disclose that the motion was ever presented to the court for decision, or that there was any action or refusal to act thereon. Nelson v. Farmland Security Co., 58 Neb. 604 (79 N. W. 161).

69. (1901.) To obtain a review of the action of a trial court on an application to continue, the affidavits on which it was heard must be made a part of the bill of exceptions. Donahue v. Potter & George Co., 63 Neb. 128 (88 N. W. 171).

70. (1901.) Affidavits on an application for a continuance not made a part of the bill of exceptions and found only in the transcript of the record are not properly presented. Kerr v. State, 63 Neb. 115 (88 N. W. 240).

71. (1902.) Affidavits for continuance must be embodied in the bill of exceptions if the right to a continuance is to be examined on its merits upon review. Kinney v. Bittinger, 3 Unof. 817 (92 N. W. 1005).

——— Curing error.

72. (1891.) When a motion for the adjournment of a cause for a specified time is overruled, and the trial does not take place until the period asked for has elapsed, the error, if any, in not granting the motion in the first instance, is cured. Baldwin v. Rhea, 33 Neb. 319 (50 N. W. 1).

73. (1896.) Prejudicial error did not result from denying a continuance, where the application was based on the absence of a witness who appeared at the trial and testified. Imhoff v. Richards, 48 Neb. 590 (67 N. W. 483).

Costs.

74. (1879.) Under the act of February 25, 1875, the court may require the party moving for a continuance to pay a sum not exceeding $10 as costs. Smith v. Silvis, 8 Neb. 164.

75. (1890.) The awarding of costs on the granting of a continuance is discretionary with the trial court. Coombs v. Brenklander, 29 Neb. 586 (45 N. W. 929).

Contracts within the operation of statute of frauds, see Frauds, Statute of.

A. Nature and Essentials in General.

What law governs.

Law governing construction of contract, see post, §§ 163-166.

1. (1871.) The validity of a contract is to be determined by the law of the state in which it is made. The fact that a contract made in one state is evidenced by a note dated in another and secured by a mortgage upon land located in such other state, does not avoid the application of the rule. The note is but an incident to the agreement. Sands v. Smith, 1 Neb. 108.

2. (1874.) Unless a contract is by its terms to be performed in another state, it must be governed by the laws of the place where it is made. Kittle v. De Lamater, 3 Neb. 325.

3. (1890.) A contract by which plaintiff in Illinois agrees to sell beer to defendant exclusively in a certain territory in Nebraska, and under which plaintiff ships from Illinois car load lots of beer consigned to defendant in Nebraska, is a contract made and concluded in Illinois, and hence its validity is to be determined by the laws of that state. Wagner v. Breed, 29 Neb. 720 (46 N. W. 286).

4. (1899.) A contract made in Nebraska is a Nebraska contract, and will be governed by the laws of this state, notwithstanding it contains a stipulation that it is understood to be made with reference to and under the laws of another state. Building & Loan Ass'n of Dakota v. Bilan, 59 Neb. 458 (81 N. W. 308).

5. (1901.) A contract executed in this state by a foreign building and loan association on property in this state is a Nebraska contract, and the construction and validity is to be governed by laws of this state. People's Building, Loan & Savings Ass'n v. Parish, 1 Unof. 505 (96 N. W. 243); (1902) People's Building, Loan & Savings Ass'n v. Shaffer, 63 Neb. 573 (88 N. W. 669).

6. (1903.) A contract, void for illegality in its inception, is not validated by being sued upon in a foreign jurisdiction. Corn Exchange Nat. Bank v. Jansen, 70 Neb. 579 (97 N. W. 814).

Implied contracts.

7. (1902.) One who furnishes labor and materials for the creation of a public work, in good faith, but in the absence of a contract such as is required by statute, is entitled to recover their reasonable value, in the absence of a statute expressly or by necessary implication denying such right. Cass County v. Sarpy County, 66 Neb. 476 (97 N. W. 352).

8. (1903.) Wherever one person has money to which in equity and good conscience another is entitled, the law creates a promise by the former to pay it to the latter and the obligation may be enforced by assumpsit. Estate of Devries v. Hawkins, 70 Neb. 656 (97 N. W. 792).

Existence and condition of subject matter.

9. (1893.) One who sells his business and good-will to another, agreeing not to do business at the same point, and afterwards violates such agreement, is liable in damages. Nelson v. Hiatt, 38 Neb. 478 (56 N. W. 1029).

Certainty.

10. (1887.) That is certain which may be rendered certain. Wiley v. Shars, 21 Neb. 712 (33 N. W. 418).

11. (1903.) Appellee purchased certain lands from the United States at a price much above their appraised value, paying one-fourth of the purchase price in cash. Before any further payments had been made he sold part of the lands to appellants who, in addition to a cash payment, agreed to assume and pay to the government the unpaid three-fourths of the original purchase price. Prior to this sale appellee and other purchasers of like lands were pressing a claim to have the government remit from the purchase price of their lands all sums in excess of the appraised value thereof, and as a part of the contract of sale from appellee to appellants it was agreed that if the government should make this rebate appellee was to receive one-half thereof or of any amount of which rebate should be granted. Held, That the contract was not void for uncertainty in time of payment. Gumaer v. Day, 4 Unof. 320 (93 N. W. 933).

Mutuality.

12. (1896.) Reciprocal promises as the basis of a valid agreement must be equally obligatory upon the parties, so that each may have an action thereon; otherwise such agreement is nudum pactum. State, ex rel. Leidigh, v. Holcombe, 46 Neb. 612 (56 N. W. 873).

13. (1896.) One party to a contract may obligate himself for a definite or an indefinite period, not depending on his own acts, and the other party may at the same time have the option of terminating it at his will. A contract upon sufficient consideration is not void for that reason. Carter White Lead Co. v. Kinlin, 47 Neb. 409 (66 N. W. 536).

14. (1904.) Want of mutuality is no defense, even in an action for specific performance, where the party not bound thereby has performed all of the conditions of the contract and brought himself clearly within its terms. Dickson v. Stewart, 71 Neb. 424 (98 N. W. 1085; 1115 Am. St. Rep. 596).

Contract made on Sunday.

15. (1877.) Neither at common law nor under out statute is a contract entered into on Sunday void for that reason. Horacek v. Keebler, 5 Neb. 355.

Persons who can question validity of contract.

16. (1894.) Strangers to a contract cannot set up as a defense to an independent action that the contract is void as being champerty. Chamberlain v. Grimes, 42 Neb. 701 (60 N. W. 948).

17. (1902.) The plea of ultra vires cannot be interposed by a stranger to the contract, who cannot show a violation of a duty owing to himself. State Ins. Co. v. Farmers Mutual Ins. Co., 65 Neb. 34 (90 N. W. 997).

B. Parties, Proposals and Acceptance.

Contract by unauthorized person.

18. (1901.) A contract made in this state, with a resident thereof, by a foreign building and loan association, which has failed to first procure a certificate of approval and authorization from the proper officers for transacting business in this state, is void and unenforceable, though the parties to such contract may have stipulated therein that it should be governed by the laws of the state where the offending association is resident. Henni v. Fidelity Building & Loan Ass'n, 61 Neb. 744 (86 N. W. 475; 87 Am. St. Rep. 519).

Offer and acceptance.

19. (1898.) To establish an express contract there must be shown what amounts to a definite proposal and an unconditional and absolute acceptance thereof. Melick v. Kelley, 53 Neb. 509 (73 N. W. 945).

20. (1898.) That a binding contract may result from an offer and acceptance, it is essential that the minds of the parties meet at every point, and that nothing be left open for future arrangement. Krum v. Chamberlain, 57 Neb. 220 (77 N. W. 665).

21. (1900.) A contract to be of any binding force must be assented to by all the parties to it. Fulton v. Ryan, 60 Neb. 9 (82 N. W. 105).

22. (1901.) A contract, running to a corporation to be formed and providing for a conveyance of land to it on certain conditions, must be taken as an offer whose acceptance, within a reasonable time by forming the corporation and performing the conditions, would constitute a valid agreement. Omaha Loan & Trust Co. v. Goodman, 62 Neb. 197 (86 N. W. 1082).

23. (1906.) To establish as a contract a proposition made by letter, proof of its acceptance is necessary. Sennett v. Melville, 76 Neb. 690 (107 N. W. 991).

Acceptance varying from offer.

24. (1899.) Since a concurrence of minds is essential to a contract, a written instrument signed by one party with the intention that the other shall later sign it, which is changed in any manner altering its legal effect, and by that other signed in its altered condition, does not become binding on the former, unless he learn of and ratify the change; and this although the alteration be made by a stranger. McGavock v. Morton, 57 Neb. 385 (77 N. W. 785).

C. Formal Requisites.

Several instruments.

25. (1904.) A contract in writing may be created by letters between the parties, and may be sufficient though the same papers are not signed by both. Bradley & Co. v. Bower, 5 Unof. 542 (99 N. W. 490).

Delivery.

26. (1899.) An instrument is not delivered until it has passed beyond the dominion, control and authority of the maker, and is no longer capable of being recalled. Paxton v. State, 59 Neb. 460 (81 N. W. 383; 80 Am. St. Rep. 689).

Seals.

27. (1885.) The strict rule of the common law in regard to contracts under seal made by an agent for the sale or leasing of real estate is not in force in this state—private seals being abolished. Wheeler v. Walden, 17 Neb. 122 (22 N. W. 346).

D. Consideration.

Usurious contracts, see Usury.

Consideration for modification of contract, see post, §§ 242, 243.

Necessity.

28. (1881.) A sufficient consideration is essential to the enforcement of an unexecuted agreement to waive prompt payment according to the conditions of a written contract for the sale of land, where time is essential. Reynolds v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., 11 Neb. 186 (7 N. W. 737).

29. (1881.) Plaintiff purchased lands at tax sale, and afterwards received deeds therefor. Defendant purchased the lands at sheriff's sale, and afterwards promised orally to pay an agent of plaintiff the principal and ten per cent. interest for the amount paid at the tax sale. Plaintiff surrendered nothing, and nothing was done under the agreement. Held, That it could not be enforced. Boyce v. Berger, 11 Neb. 399 (9 N. W. 545).

30. (1881.) It is the consideration that gives vitality to a contract, and without it the contract cannot be enforced. Kansas Mfg. Co. v. Gandy, 11 Neb. 448 (9 N. W. 569; 38 Am. Rep. 370).

31. (1894.) Where a construction company having contracted to build a line of railroad had completed its work according to contract, an agreement by its president, without authority, to accept payment at less than the contract price, was without consideration and did not release the other contracting party from full payment. Fitzgerald v. Fitzgerald & Mallory Construction Co., 41 Neb. 374 (59 N. W. 838).

32. (1906.) An agreement without benefit, advantage or detriment to either party is without consideration and not enforceable. First Nat. Bank of Plattsmouth v. Estate of Lehnhoff, 77 Neb. 307 (112 N. W. 563).

Awarding of contract or franchise.

33. (1877.) The corporate franchise is a valuable privilege and is a sufficient consideration for the duties which the law imposes. City of Omaha v. Olmstead, 5 Neb. 446.

34. (1894.) The awarding of a contract for the erection of a public building is a sufficient consideration for a promise by such contractor to pay for all labor and material furnished him in the performance of such contract. Lyman v. City of Lincoln, 38 Neb. 794 (57 N. W. 531); (1894) Doll v. Crume, 41 Neb. 655 (59 N. W. 806); (1896) Kaufmann v. Cooper, 46 Neb. 644 (65 N. W. 796).

35. (1894.) A provision that contractors for the erection of a building for a city shall file with board of public works receipts of claims from laborers and materialmen is a promise that the latter shall be paid by such contractors, for which promise the awarding of the contract is a sufficient consideration. Lyman v. City of Lincoln, 38 Neb. 794 (57 N. W. 531).

Performance of legal obligation.

36. (1887.) Where a party sold stock to be paid for by weight, and said stock was weighed on the scales of the buyer, which on the next day were found to have been out of order, and to have favored the buyer, the seller was entitled to have the stock weighed correctly, and a promise by him to pay the buyer a bonus to weigh the stock correctly was without consideration. Billings v. Filley, 21 Neb. 511 (32 N. W. 567).

37. (1894.) Neither the promise to do nor the actual doing of that which the promisor is by law or subsisting contract bound to do is a sufficient consideration to support a promise in his favor. Esterly Harvesting Machine Co. v. Pringle, 41 Neb. 265 (59 N. W. 804); (1902) Allen v. Plasmyere, 3 Unof. 187 (90 N. W. 1125).

38. (1906.) The doing of that which the creditor of a corporation is required by law to do before he could maintain an action against the stockholders of the corporation is not a sufficient consideration to support a promise. First Nat. Bank of Plattsmouth v. Estate of Lehnhoff, 77 Neb. 303 (109 N. W. 164).

Mutual promises.

39. (1873.) An agreement by several property owners to convey their respective properties, to such one of their number as should be afterwards designated by a majority of them, being without consideration, is void. Dawson v. Merrille, 3 Neb. 458.

40. (1889.) An agreement to furnish medical treatment and care to horses and mules of the subcontractors of a railroad contract is a sufficient consideration for an agreement by the chief contractor to pay for such service, though the promisor has no ownership in the horses or mules. Lewis v. Owen, 26 Neb. 156 (42 N. W. 285).

41. (1891.) Mutual promises are sufficient consideration to make a valid contract. Pryor v. Hunter, 31 Neb. 678 (48 N. W. 736); (1894) Morrow v. Jones, 41 Neb. 867 (6 N. W. 369); (1902) Lamb v. Wilson, 3 Unof. 505 (97 N. W. 325).

42. (1896.) Where a party agreed, in consideration of real property being placed in the hands of his agent, that the rents and profits therefrom arising were to be collected and paid out as stipulated to certain holders of liens on such property, among whom was the aforesaid party to said agreement, such agreement will be enforced according to its terms, though thereby the otherwise existing rights of said party are modified or impaired. Rogers v. Central Loan & Trust Co., 49 Neb. 676 (68 N. W. 1048).

43. (1906.) Mutual promises, not for a common object or purpose and not mutually advantageous or detrimental, are without consideration and not enforceable. First Nat. Bank of Plattsmouth v. Estate of Lehnhoff, 77 Neb. 307 (112 N. W. 563).

44. (1906.) A promise made in consideration of an agreement to refrain from resisting the probate of a will is not without consideration and will be enforced. Grochowski v. Grochowski, 77 Neb. 506 (109 N. W. 742).

Services.

45. (1882.) Where, after an assignment for creditors, plaintiff told the assignee that, if the latter would furnish him information as to the creditors, and aid in buying up the claim, he would accept the assigned estate in full payment of the claim so purchased, the aid so rendered being valuable, is sufficient to sustain the contract to accept payment. Wilson v. Moore, 13 Neb. 240 (13 N. W. 217).

Detriment to promisee.

46. (1886.) A valuable consideration is one that is either a benefit to the party promising or some trouble or prejudice to the party to whom the promise is made. Any damage, or suspension, or forbearance of a right will be sufficient to sustain the promise. Homan v. Steele, 18 Neb. 652 (26 N. W. 472).

47. (1899.) The consideration of a contract need not move to promisor, a disadvantage to promisee being sufficient, though promiscr derives no benefit therefrom. Faulkner v. Gilbert, 57 Neb. 544 (77 N. W. 1072).

48. (1904.) The consideration sufficient to suport a promise may be a detriment suffered by the promisee in reliance upon the promise, as well as a benefit accruing to the promisor. Henry v. Dussell, 71 Neb. 691 (99 N. W. 484).

49. (1906.) A valuable consideration is one that is either a benefit to the party promising, or some trouble or prejudice to the party to whom the promise is made. Any damage, or suspension, or forbearance of a right, will be sufficient to sustain the promise. First Nat. Bank of Plattsmouth v. Estate of Lehnhoff, 77 Neb. 303 (109 N. W. 164).

Performance on faith of promise.

50. (1889.) The promise to pay for goods to be furnished to aonther, having been made prior to the delivery of any of the property sold, and such sale and delivery having been made upon the faith of the agreement of the promisor, it was sustained by sufficient consideration and the promisor was liable thereon. Lindsey v. Heaton, 27 Neb. 662 (43 N. W. 420).

51. (1907.) Where by reason of an agreement made by the president of a bank with the proposed purchaser of its stock that the bank will accept certain notes and mortgages held by him, amounting to the face value of said stock, in payment therefor, and that if such purchase is made he will hold the purchaser harmless and indemnify him against any action of the bank to recover any further or other amount either on his indorsement of said notes or otherwise, in payment for said stock, the bank stock is actually purchased and paid for, according to its terms, such purchase is a sufficient consideration to support the agreement. Patrick v. Barker, 78 Neb. 823 (112 N. W. 358).

Past consideration.

Pre-existing debt as consideration for chattel mortgage, see Chattel Mortgages, §§ 23-31.

52. (1896.) A past consideration is sufficient to support a promise when the consideration was performed in pursuance of a previous request. Stuht v. Sweesy, 48 Neb. 767 (67 N. W. 748).

Forbearance.

53. (1889.) The prevention of filing liens for services rendered in grading the railway was a sufficient consideration between employees of such subcontractor in grading the railway road-bed, and the contractor, who had agreed to save the railway company harmless from such liens. Carlile & Co. v. Dauchy, 26 Neb. 337 (41 N. W. 1119).

54. (1889.) Where the main contractor for the construction of railroad, finding a subcontractor has underestimated the cost of his work, takes the latter's pay-roll and pays the subcontractor's employees out of his monthly allowance, the withholding of filing their lien for wages against the railroad company is a sufficient consideration for the agreement of the main contractor to pay such employees. Carlile & Co. v. Dauchy, 26 Neb. 337 (41 N. W. 1119).

55. (1892.) Where one who stands in relation to an insolvent debtor as surety or creditor, and has in his hands certain property of the debtor, which he desires to retain or have applied on his claim or obligation, a promise made by him to another creditor, that if he will not institute legal proceedings against the common debtor he will pay the debt, if accepted, will constitute a valid contract and a recovery may be had thereon. Mathews v. Seaver, 34 Neb. 592 (52 N. W. 283).

56. (1896.) In order to sustain a contract which has for its consideration the release of a claim for damages against the promisor it is not necessary that the claim should be one which on litigation would have proved valid. Carter White Lead Co. v. Kinlin, 47 Neb. 409 (66 N. W. 536).

57. (1904.) The abandonment of a prosecution for statutory rape and consent, by the girl's father, to her marriage to the accused is a sufficient consideration for a contract by the accused's mother to provide a certain sum to the father of the girl for her maintenance. Henry v. Dussell, 71 Neb. 691 (99 N. W. 484).

58. (1906.) The dismissal, by a child, of proceedings instituted by her for the appointment of a guardian for her mother on the ground of the incompetency of the latter is not a valid consideration for a promise made by the mother to such child. Simmons v. Kelsey, 76 Neb. 124 (107 N. W. 122).

59. (1906.) Where opposition to the probate of a will is made by a party in good faith, a withdrawal of such opposition is a valid consideration for a promise on the part of one interested in sustaining the will. Grochowski v. Grochowski, 77 Neb. 510 (112 N. W. 335).

Release from obligation.

60. (1894.) The present acceptance by a railroad company from a construction company of unfinished work is a sufficient consideration for a stipulated deduction by the latter, made as a compromise between the parties, from the contract price of finished work. Fitzgerald v. Fitzgerald & Mallory Construction Co., 41 Neb. 374 (59 N. W. 838).

One consideration for several promises.

61. (1899.) One consideration is sufficient to support all the stipulations of a contract, where such was the intention of the parties. Boughn v. Smith, 58 Neb. 590 (79 N. W. 160).

Recitals as to consideration.

62. (1902.) The recital of a consideration is not always conclusive. Davis v. Thomas, 66 Neb. 26 (92 N. W. 187)

E. Validity of Assent.

Mental condition.

63. (1901.) The insanity of the obligor at the time the contract was made is a good defense to an action thereon. Boyd v. Mulvihill, 61 Neb. 878 (86 N. W. 922).

64. (1902.) The acts and contracts of a person of weak understanding will be set aside by a court of equity, when the nature of the acts or contracts justify the conclusion that the party has not exercised a deliberate judgment, but that he has been imposed upon, circumvented or overcome by cunning, artifice or undue influence. Meyer v. Fishburn, 65 Neb. 626 (91 N. W. 534).

65. (1903.) In absence of fraud, or undue influence, mere imbecility or weakness of mind will not avoid a contract or deed. Tichy v. Simicek, 4 Unof. 597 (95 N. W. 629).

66. (1906.) In order to make a valid contract the minds of the parties must meet; and if one mind is so weak, unsound or diseased that the party is incapable of understanding the nature and quality of the act to be performed, or its consequences, he is incompetent to make a valid contract, whether such state of his mind be the result of sickness, accident or voluntary intoxication. Hauber v. Leibold, 76 Neb. 706 (107 N. W. 1042).

Intoxication.

Ground for rescinding contract, see post, § 265.

67. (1906.) Intoxication. at the time a party enters into a contract, to the extent of rendering him mentally unfit for business transactions, renders such contract void. Hauber v. Leibold, 76 Neb. 706 (107 N. W. 1042).

67*a*. (1877.) In order to set aside a contract on the ground of drunkenness it is not sufficient that the party was under undue excitement from liquor. It must rise to that degree which may be called excessive drunkenness, where a party is utterly deprived of his reason and understanding. Johnson v. Phifer, 6 Neb. 401.

68. (1907.) To avoid a contract on the ground of drunkenness, it is not sufficient that the party was under undue excitement from liquor. It must arise to that degree which may be called excessive drunkenness, where a party is so far deprived of his reason and understanding as to render him incapable of understanding the character and consequence of his act. Case Threshing Machine Co. v. Meyers, 78 Neb. 685 (111 N. W. 602).

Ignorance of facts.

69. (1901.) Where persons are dealing with each other upon equal terms, and no confidential relation exists between them, neither is bound to disclose superior information he may have respecting the transaction. Jones v. Stewart, 62 Neb. 207 (87 N. W. 12).

70. (1902.) All men are presumed to read and understand the terms of contracts entered into by them, and in the absence of fraud, deception or other undue means in procuring their execution, they will not be permitted to escape a liability clearly expressed by the language of the contract. Cruzen v. Pottle, 3 Unof. 453 (91 N. W. 858).

Mistake.

71. (1895.) A mistake of law excuses no one. Boyes v. Summers, 46 Neb. 308 (64 N. W. 1066).

72. (1901.) Poor judgment, or unfortunate trades, in the absence of fraud or deception, form no basis for relief by the court. Jones v. Stewart, 62 Neb. 207 (87 N. W. 12).

Duress and undue influence.

Ground for rescission of contract, see post, § 266.

Sufficiency of plea of duress, see post, § 403.

73. (1884.) A contract made under duress is voidable, not void. Mundy v. Whittemore, 15 Neb. 647 (19 N. W. 694).

74. (1886.) Where coercion is not sufficient to amount to duress, but a social or domestic force is exerted on a party which controls the free action of his will, and prevents voluntary action in the making of a contract or execution of deed for real estate, equity may relieve against the same on the ground of undue influence. Munson v. Carter, 19 Neb. 293 (27 N. W. 208).

75. (1889.) It is those contracts only which are made under fear of unlawful imprisonment, and not those made under fear of imprisonment which would be legally justifiable, that can be avoided for duress. Sanford v. Sornberger, 26 Neb. 295 (41 N. W. 1102).

76. (1889.) Duress which will avoid a contract is either by unlawful restraint or imprisonment; or, if lawful, it must be accompanied by circumstances of unnecessary pain, privation, or danger, or when the arrest, though made under legal authority, is for an unlawful purpose. Sanford v. Sornberger, 26 Neb. 295 (41 N. W. 1102).

77. (1895.) When money is paid or concessions exacted through necessity in order to obtain property illegally withheld, where its detention is accompanied by immediate hardship or irreparable injury, such transaction may be avoided on the ground of compulsion, although perhaps not amounting to a technical duress. Fitzgerald v. Fitzgerald & Mallory Co., 44 Neb. 463 (62 N. W. 899).

78. (1895.) To set aside a contract for duress it must be shown first that the will of one of the parties was overcome, and that he was thus subjected to the power of another, and that the means used to induce him to act were of such a kind as would overcome the mind and will of an ordinary person. Hargreaves v. Korcek, 44 Neb. 660 (62 N. W. 1086).

79. (1898.) It is those contracts made under fear of unlawful arrest, and not those executed under threat of lawful imprisonment, which can be avoided on the ground of duress. McCormick Harvesting Machine Co. v. Miller, 54 Neb. 644 (74 N. W. 1061).

80. (1902.) An instruction, "Duress may be defined as an unlawful restraint, intimidation or compulsion of another to such an extent and degree as to induce such other person to do or perform some act, which he is not legally bound to do, contrary to his will and inclination," correctly states the law. First Nat. Bank of David City v. Sargeant, 65 Neb. 594 (91 N. W. 595; 59 L. R. A. 296).

81. (1906.) Where a contract, whereby children of a woman against whom the former had instituted insanity proceedings, is procured whereby the mother released all of her property to the children in consideration of a dismissal of the insanity proceedings, evidence shows the same was procured by duress. Simmons v. Kelsey, 76 Neb. 124 (107 N. W. 122).

Misrepresentations.

82. (1903.) Where one has made representations of fact shown to be false upon which the other party has relied to his damage, the intent or good faith of the party making the representations is immaterial in an action by the injured party to recoup his damages, or in an action by the former where the latter pleads the fraud of the plaintiff as a defense. Bauer v. Taylor, 4 Unof. 710 (98 N. W. 29).

Fraud.

Ground for rescission of contract, see post, §§ 267-278.

83. (1877.) Fraud cannot be predicated on a promise not performed. To be available there must be a false assertion in regard to some existing matter by which a party is induced to part with his money or property. Perkins v. Lougee, 6 Neb. 220.

84. (1879.) A contract obtained by fraud is not void; it is merely voidable; and the rights of intervening innocent parties will be protected. Aultman & Taylor Co. v. Steinan, 8 Neb. 109.

85. (1882.) Obtaining signature to contract by fraud is a good defense Cole v. Williams, 12 Neb. 440 (11 N. W. 875).

86. (1882.) Where one verbally contracts for the erection of lightning rods, and requests the agent procuring the contract to sign an alleged order for the work, he himself not having his glasses with him, and the agent does not read all of the contract therein, the other is not guilty of such negligence as would prevent a defense of fraud to the contract he in fact signed. Cole v. Williams, 12 Neb. 440 (11 N. W. 875). [Overruled. Ward v. Spelts, 39 Neb. 809.]

87. (1894.) The doctrine that the carelessness or negligence of a party in signing a writing estops him from afterwards disputing the contents of such writing, is not applicable in a suit thereon between the original parties thereto where the defense is that such writing, by reason of fraud, does not embrace the contract actually made. Ward v. Spelts, 39 Neb. 809 (58 N. W. 426).

88. (1897.) The doctrine that the negligence of a party in signing a writing estops him from afterwards urging that it does not contain the true agreement of the parties is not applicable in a suit between the original parties thereto or their privies, where the party seeking enforcement practiced fraud or deception in order to induce the other to sign without reading Woodbridge v. De Witt, 51 Neb. 98 (70 N. W. 506).

89. (1899.) Fraud, to constitute a cause of action, counter-claim or defense, must have been fruitful of injury or damage to the party who seeks to avail himself of the plea. Carrington v. Omaha Life Ass'n, 59 Neb. 116 (80 N. W. 491).

90. (1901.) In an action upon a contract, where the defense is that fraud was employed in securing the signature of one of the parties, the doctrine that the carelessness or negligence of the party in the signing of the contract estops him from disputing its contents is not applicable. Spelts & Klosterman v. Ward, 2 Unof. 177 (96 N. W. 56).

90*a*. (1908.) Where it appears that a plaintiff, who brings a suit in equity to enforce a specific performance of a contract, has obtained such contract by sharp and unscrupulous practices, by overreaching, by concealment of important facts, even though not actually fraudulent, by trickery, or by any other unconscionable means, he will be denied affirmative relief. Blondel v. Bolander, 80 Neb. 531 (114 N. W. 574).

Confidential relations.

91. (1905.) One occupying confidential relations toward another is held to the exercise of scrupulous good faith, and will not be permitted to make use of knowledge or opportunities to his own advantage and the injury of the party with whom he is dealing, from which the latter is in good conscience entitled to profit. Morrison v. Hunter, 74 Neb. 559 (105 N. W. 88).

Contravention of statute.

92. (1878.) Whenever a claim is bottomed on an immoral or illegal transaction, no right whatever can be founded upon such contract which the law will sanction or the courts maintain. Rudolf v. Winters, 7 Neb. 125.

93, 94. (1895.) No action can be maintained on a contract the consideration of which is either wicked in itself or prohibited by law. Storz & Iler v. Finklestein, 46 Neb. 577 (65 N. W. 195, 30 L. R. A. 644); (1902) Schoenhofen Brewing Co. v. Whipple, 2 Unof. 704 (89 N. W. 751).

95. (1897.) Courts will refuse to enforce contracts in contravention of statutes or good morals. Wilson v. Parrish, 52 Neb. 6 (71 N. W. 1010).

96. (1897.) A contract providing for the sale of intoxicating liquors without a license is void. Hall v. Hart, 52 Neb. 4 (71 N. W. 1009).

97. (1897). An action cannot, in this state, be maintained for the price of intoxicating liquors sold in violation of statute. Wilson v. Parrish. 52 Neb. 6 (71 N. W. 1010).

98. (1898.) A provision in a bond given by a person contracting with the state for the erection of a public building is valid which imposes on the contractor the duty of paying for material furnished and used in the erection of such building. Rohman v. Gaiser, 53 Neb. 474 (73 N. W. 923).

99. (1900.) Courts will not enforce contracts which are shown to be illegal. Jorgensen v. Kingsley, 60 Neb. 44 (82 N. W. 104).

100. (1902.) A court of equity will not enforce a contract made in contravention of a statute. Buetgenbach v. Gerbig, 2 Unof. 889 (90 N. W. 654).

Intent of parties.

101. (1901.) A party who has entered into a contract lawful on its face in good faith and for an honest purpose, is not precluded from relief because the other party may have intended to make fraudulent use of it as to a third person. Fox v. State, ex rel. Powers, 63 Neb. 185 (88 N. W. 176).

102. (1903.) The validity of a contract assailed for illegality is not determined by its formal incidents, but by the nature of the transaction and the intent of the parties. Corn Exchange Nat. Bank v. Jansen, 70 Neb. 579 (97 N. W. 814).

Public policy in general.

103. (1872.) The court will not lend its aid to the enforcement of a contract which is against public policy. Dawson v. Merrille, 2 Neb. 119.

104. (1873.) An agreement by several property owners to convey land to one of their number, as a donation for the procuring of the location of the capital is against public policy, and void. Dawson v. Merrille, 3 Neb. 458.

105. (1882.) The mere fact, that depot grounds were donated, will not render a contract for the location of the depot void. Harris v. Roberts, 12 Neb. 631 (12 N. W. 89; 42 Am. Rep. 779).

106. (1893.) Courts will refuse to enforce contracts which are manifestly contrary to public policy or sound morals. Wilde v. Wilde, 37 Neb. 891 (56 N. W. 724); (1897) Rocco v. Frapoli, 50 Neb. 665 (70 N. W. 236).

107, 108. (1896.) The legislative power to subserve the public welfare by regulations in the interest of health and safety is inherent in the sovereignty of the state and cannot be bartered away by contract or otherwise. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. State, ex rel. City of Omaha, 47 Neb. 549 (66 N. W. 624; 53 Am. St. Rep. 557; 41 L. R. A. 481).

109. (1898.) A note reading, "Six months after date, if elected county commissioner, I promise to pay," etc., is a contract of wager on the result of an election, and on grounds of public policy will be declared void. Specht v. Beindorf, 56 Neb. 553 (76 N. W. 1059; 42 L. R. A. 429).

110. (1900.) Contracts which contravene the established policy of this state cannot be enforced by action in its courts. Commonwealth Mutual Fire Ins. Co. v. Hayden Bros., 60 Neb. 636 (83 N. W. 922; 83 Am. St. Rep. 545. [Rehearing. 61 Neb. 454.]

111. (1901.) Our courts, as an exercise of comity, will not enforce a contract resulting from the transaction of business within this state violating the public policy thereof. Henni v. Fidelity Building & Loan Ass'n, 61 Neb. 744 (86 N. W. 475; 87 Am. St. Rep. 519).

112. (1903.) Courts should only declare contracts void as against public policy when expressly or impliedly forbidden by the paramount law, or by some principle of the common law, or by the provisions of the statute. Langdon v. Conlin, 67 Neb. 243 (93 N. W. 389; 108 Am. St. Rep. 643; 60 L. R. A. 429).

113. (1906.) A contract whereby one interested in defeating the probate of a will agrees to interpose no objection thereto is not void as against public policy, unless made collusively and in fraud of other parties interested in the estate. Grochowski v. Grochowski, 77 Neb. 510 (112 N. W. 325).

114. (1906.) A promise made in consideration of an agreement to refrain from resisting the probate of a will is not void as against public policy where no persons or interests other than the persons and interests of the contracting parties are prejudicially affected thereby. Grochowski v. Grochowski, 77 Neb. 506 (109 N. W. 742).

115. (1906.) A clause of a contract of a corporation of quasi public character, which, if enforced, would prevent its serving the public on such terms is illegal and void. Sammons v. Kearney Power & Irrigation Co., 77 Neb. 580 (110 N. W. 308).

Contracts impossible of performance.

116. (1902.) Contracts in which a corporation, in consideration of stated payments made to it, makes promises, which are the main inducement to such contracts, and are impossible to perform, are unlawful, being against public policy. State, ex rel. Prout, v. Nebraska Home Co., 66 Neb. 349 (92 N. W. 763; 103 Am. St. Rep. 706; 60 L. R. A. 448).

117. (1902.) Contracts of a corporation, in consideration of stated payments to it, by which it professes to assist the holders of its contracts in the purchase of homes and in payment of the same, where under its scheme some of the contributors can obtain no assistance for more than 70 years, are unlawful, as against public policy. State, ex rel. Prout, v. Nebraska Home Co., 66 Neb. 349 (92 N. W. 763; 103 Am. St. Rep. 706; 60 L. R. A. 448).

Restraint of trade.

118. (1900.) Contracts which impose unreasonable restraints upon the exercise of any business, trade or profession contravene sound public policy. Wittenberg v. Mollyneaux, 60 Neb. 583 (83 N. W. 842).

119. (1900.) A contract of purchase, the main purpose of which is to secure a monopoly, is contrary to public policy and will not be enforced. Wittenberg v. Mollyneaux, 60 Neb. 583 (83 N. W. 842).

120. (1901.) Agreements in restraint of trade should be construed with reference to the object sought to be attained by them, and will not be given a construction which, though covered by the words of the agreement, cannot be supposed reasonably, in view of the circumstances of the parties and the context of the instrument, to have been contemplated by them. Herpolsheimer v. Funke, 1 Unof. 304 (95 N. W. 687).

121. (1905.) A contract in restraint of trade which is not limited either in time or space is against public policy and void. Roberts v. Lemont, 73 Neb. 365 (102 N. W. 770).

122. (1905.) In determining the validity of a contract in restraint of trade, the test is whether the restraint is only such as is necessary to afford a fair protection to the interests of the party in whose favor it is given, and not so much as to interfere with the interest of the public. Roberts v. Lemont, 73 Neb. 365 (102 N. W. 770).

——— Partial restraint.

123. (1894.) Where real estate, consisting of certain lots and buildings thereon, is sold, and in the granting portion of the deed conveying the same a clause is inserted stating that the property is not to be used for hotel purposes for two years, held, that such restriction as to use of the property, being a limited one, was valid and not an unreasonable restrain of trade in view of the facts developed by the pleadings (the case having been decided upon the pleadings alone), and that such agreement was not within or covered by the prohibitions of provisions of chapter 91*a*, entitled "Trusts," Compiled Statutes, 1893. Mollyneaux v. Wittenberg, 39 Neb. 547 (58 N. W. 205).

124. (1899.) The contract in suit, one of the class known as contracts "in restraint of trade," being limited as to time and territory, and its stipulations reasonable, held valid and enforceable by injunction. Downing v. Lewis, 59 Neb. 38 (80 N. W. 261).

125. (1900.) Partial restraints upon the exercise of any business, trade or profession are not unreasonable when they are ancillary to an actual purchase of property, made in good faith, and are apparently necessary to afford fair protection to the purchaser. Wittenberg v. Mollyneaux, 60 Neb. 583 (83 N. W. 842).

126. (1900.) A covenant in a deed for the exchange of hotel property by which the grantee in one deed agrees that for a period named he will not use the property acquired by him for hotel purposes, is not void as being contrary to public policy. Wittenberg v. Mollyneaux, 60 Neb. 583 (83 N. W. 842).

127. (1901.) The owners of a building in which they were conducting a department store leased a portion of the building to a firm engaged in the sale of queensware, glassware and kindred articles, and in the lease covenanted "not to sell" articles of that character during the term of the lease. Held, That in view of the circumstances and context, this was not an agreement in general restraint of trade, but was intended to prohibit the lessors, in the conduct of their department store, from competing with the lessees in the same building, and hence was valid and enforceable. Herpolsheimer v. Funke, 1 Unof. 304 (95 N. W. 687).

128. (1901.) An agreement prohibiting one of the parties from engaging in a competitive business for a reasonable time and within a limited area not larger than reasonably necessary for the protection of the other, is valid and enforceable. Herpolsheimer v. Funke, 1 Unof. 304 (95 N. W. 687).

Ousting jurisdiction.

129. (1901.) It is the settled law of this state that a provision in a contract requiring arbitration, whether of disputes arising under the contract generally or only of the amount of any loss or damages sustained by the parties thereto, will not be enforced; nor will refusal to arbitrate be available in an action growing out of the contract. Schrandt v. Young, 62 Neb. 254 (86 N. W. 1085).

130. (1902.) An agreement by which parties thereto stipulate in advance not to enforce, by a resort to a court of justice, a substantial right which may subsequently be involved in dispute between them, but to submit such right to the decision of a private tribunal, although other questions involved may be reserved for adjudication by the courts, cannot be enforced. Hartford Fire Ins. Co. v. Hon, 66 Neb. 555 (92 N. W. 746; 60 L. R. A. 436).

131. (1902.) An agreement between parties to a contract that neither shall maintain a suit thereon after breach, all differences to be settled by arbitration—is without binding force, as tending to oust the courts of their jurisdiction. Hartford Fire Ins. Co. v. Hon, 66 Neb. 555 (92 N. W. 746; 60 L. R. A. 436).

——— Limiting time for action.

132. (1898.) A provision in a contract limiting the time for bringing suit thereon to a period different from that fixed by statute is against public policy and not enforceable. Miller v. State Ins. Co., 54 Neb. 121 (74 N. W. 416; 69 Am. St. Rep. 709).

Prevention of competition in bids.

133. (1892.) An agreement entered into by parties for the purpose of preventing competition in the letting of public contracts is void; and a like rule prevails where the necessary tendency or effect of the contract would be to stifle competition. To have this effect, however, it must appear that the intent, effect, or necessary tendency of the contract was to prevent or stifle competition. Otherwise, the contract will be sustained. Whalen v. Brennan, 34 Neb. 129 (51 N. W. 759).

134. (1898.) Contract between two persons for one of them to bid at a judicial sale for the benefit of both may be upheld where the intent or effect was not to chill bids or to prevent competition. Olson v. Lamb, 56 Neb. 104 (76 N. W. 433; 71 Am. St. Rep. 670).

135. (1900.) A contract whereby one agrees not to bid at a chattel mortgage sale is contrary to public policy, and a note given in pursuance of such contract is unenforceable. McClelland v. Citizens Bank, 60 Neb. 90 (82 N. W. 319).

Derogation of marriage relation.

136. (1893.) A contract intended to facilitate the procuring of a divorce at the suit of either of the parties thereto is void. Wilde v. Wilde, 37 Neb. 891 (56 N. W. 724); (1905) Davis v. Hinman, 73 Neb. 850 (103 N. W. 668).

Influencing legislation.

137. (1899.) A contract by which a person agrees to draft a bill, have it introduced in a legislature, explain it, and make arguments in its favor before legislative committees, and do all things needful and proper to secure its passage, is vicious, illegal and void, as against public policy; and the claimant can not recover, either on an implied contract or a quantum meruit for the services performed. Richardson v. Scott's Bluff County, 59 Neb. 400 (81 N. W. 309; 80 Am. St. Rep. 682; 48 L. R. A. 294). [Overruled. Stroemer v. Van Orsdel, 74 Neb. 132, 143.]

138. (1905.) A contract between an attorney and client for services to be rendered by the former is not necessarily invalid because a part of the services to be rendered is the procurement of legislative action, nor because such contract provides for a contingent fee, and will be enforced unless it appears that it contemplates the use of unlawful or improper means, or that such means were employed in pursuance thereof to attain the object for which the contract was made. Stroemer v. Van Orsdel, 74 Neb. 132 (103 N. W. 1053).

Affecting appointment to office.

139. (1901.) A contract between an appointive officer of a city, whose salary is fixed by statute or ordinance and a city council, by which such appointive city officer agrees to perform the duties of his office for a sum less than that prescribed by law, is against public policy and absolutely void. Gallaher v. City of Lincoln, 63 Neb. 339 (88 N. W. 505).

Compounding offenses.

140. (1898.) A contract, the consideration of which, in whole or in part, is the compounding of a felony or the stifling of a criminal prosecution, is contrary to public policy, illegal, and void. McCormick Harvesting Machine Co. v. Miller, 54 Neb. 644 (74 N. W. 1061).

141. (1902.) If the consideration for the giving of a note is the suppression of a criminal prosecution, the transaction is illegal and void, and no recovery can be had thereon. It is not material in such a case that no criminal prosecution was actually commenced. A promise not to institute a prosecution is as illegal a consideration as the dismissal of a prosecution already instituted. Smith Premier Typewriter Co. v. Mayhew, 65 Neb. 65 (90 N. W. 939).

142. (1904.) Where a plaintiff claims that a certificate of deposit in the sum of $300 was indorsed and delivered for him to a county attorney under an agreement that, in consideration thereof, he would dismiss a criminal prosecution against plaintiff and release him from jail, a court will not aid him to regain possession of the property. Such a contract or agreement is illegal, against good morals and public policy, and the court will leave the parties in the same position in which it finds them. Johnson v. Owen, 72 Neb. 477 (100 N. W. 945).

143. (1903.) A contract between an attorney at law and one who is not an attorney, by which the latter agrees to procure the employment of the former by third persons for the prosecution of suits in courts of record, and also to assist in looking after and procuring witnesses whose testimony is to be used in the cases, in consideration of a share of the fees which the attorney shall receive for his services, is against public policy and void. Langdon v. Conlin, 67 Neb. 243 (93 N. W. 389; 108 Am. St. Rep. 643; 60 L. R. A. 429).

Obstructing justice.

144. (1885.) An agreement whereby an attorney agrees to furnish another certain claims against a bankrupt merchant, and to procure his appointment as assignee in bankruptcy in consideration of which the other was to furnish his professional skill necessary to the successful prosecution of said claims in bankruptcy, and a division of all fees, both as attorney and assignee, is not void as against public policy as an attempt to impede justice. Redick v. Woolworth, 17 Neb. 260 (22 N. W. 693; 52 Am. St. Rep. 410).

Ratification.

145. (1898.) The payment of money on an agreement to compound a felony cannot be considered as a ratification, since the contract was illegal and void and incapable of ratification. McCormick Harvesting Machine Co. v. Miller, 54 Neb. 644 (74 N. W. 1061).

146. (1906.) When a party who claimed he had been fraudulently induced to enter into a contract by reason of the concealment of material facts afterwards employs counsel, and after full investigation ratifies and indorses the contract and accepts benefits under it, he is bound by such ratification. Kertson v. Kertson, 77 Neb. 688 (110 N. W. 750).

Effect of partial illegality.

147. (1881.) When a contract to convey land to be acquired under the United States homestead law provided that payment should be made in part by breaking the land, and that the breaking should be paid for in cash if the land was not conveyed, the illegality of the agreement to convey will not defeat a recovery for the price of the breaking. Simmons v. Yuram, 11 Neb. 516 (9 N. W. 690).

148. (1894.) An indivisible promise founded upon two considerations, one of which is legal and the other illegal, cannot be enforced. Luce v. Foster, 42 Neb. 813 (60 N. W. 1027).

Relief of parties.

149. (1877.) An action cannot be maintained for the consideration of a contract upon an alleged performance by the plaintiff, if such contract is against public policy. Clarke v. Omaha & S. W. R. Co., 5 Neb. 314.

150. (1877.) If a contract against public policy is fully executed the court will not disturb it, but leave the parties to abide the consequences; if it is not executed the court will not lend its aid to carry it into effect. Clarke v. Omaha & S. W. R. Co., 5 Neb. 314.

151. (1878.) The test in cases where the contract is founded on an illegal transaction is, whether the party requires the aid of the illegal transaction to establish his claim; and if he cannot proceed without showing that he has broken the law, the court cannot assist him whatever may be his demand. Rudolf v. Winters, 7 Neb. 125.

152. (1882.) Where acts are merely prohibited by statute, and the parties are not in pari delicto, the party upon whom no penalty is imposed may, upon non-performance, maintain an action against his co-contractor to recover the amount advanced on the contract. Bateman v. Robinson, 12 Neb. 508 (11 N. W. 736).

153. (1884.) No court of law or equity will lend its assistance in any way towards carrying out an illegal contract; therefore, such contract cannot be enforced by one party against the other; either directly, by asking the court to carry it into effect, or indirectly, by claiming damages or compensation for a breach of it. Gould & Kennard v. Kendall & Smith, 15 Neb. 549 (19 N. W. 483).

154. (1885.) No court of law or equity will lend its assistance in any way towards carrying out an illegal contract; therefore such contract cannot be enforced by one party against the other, either directly, by asking the court to carry it into effect, or indirectly, by claiming damages or compensation for a breach of it. Hobble v Zaepffel, 17 Neb. 536 (23 N. W. 514).

155. (1900.) When an illegal contract has been executed and the parties thereto are in pari delicto, no action lies to recover back money paid under it, or for restitution of property delivered in pursuance of its terms. This rule applies to the parties themselves and to all others claiming through or under them. Brower v. Fass, 60 Neb. 590 (83 N. W. 832).

156. (1902.) A party in pari delicto cannot make his illegal act a basis of recovery; but where the stronger mind takes posession of the weaker, or where through ignorance and without any intent to violate the law, one is led by fraud and misrepresentation to the performance of an act against public policy, the courts will not deny him relief against those whose fraud persuaded him to the act, and who seek to profit therefrom. Klein v. Pederson, 65 Neb. 452 (91 N. W. 281).

157. (1905.) Where an illegal contract has been executed, and the parties thereto are in pari delicto, no action lies to recover back money paid under it or for restitution of property delivered in pursuance of its terms. Davis v. Hinman, 73 Neb. 850 (103 N. W. 668).

A. General Rules of Construction.

In general.

158. (1885.) In construing contracts, the presumption of greater or less strength, according to the language used or circumstances of the case, is in favor of the comprehensive over the restricted, the general over the particular, the common over the unusual sense. Shuman v. Willets, 17 Neb. 478 (23 N. W. 358).

159. (1895.) A contract of donation must be strictly construed in favor of the donor. Gerner v. Church, 43 Neb. 690 (62 N. W. 51).

160. (1899.) While a court may construe and enforce contracts duly entered into, it is not the province of the judiciary to make contracts for parties. Te Poel v. Shutt, 57 Neb. 592 (78 N. W. 288).

161. (1899.) It is not the province of a court of equity to make contracts, but to construe and enforce them. Building & Loan Ass'n of Dakota v. Walker, 59 Neb. 456 (81 N. W. 308).

162. (1904.) Where a written contract is relied upon by both parties to an action it will be literally construed and enforced by the courts. McCormick Harvesting Machine Co. v. Brown, 5 Unof. 356 (98 N. W. 697).

What law governs.

163. (1874.) Unless a contract is by its terms to be performed in another state, it must be governed by the laws of the place where it is made. Kittle v. De Lamater, 3 Neb. 325.

164. (1889.) The homestead law in force when a contract was entered into is the law applicable to such contract. Gallagher v. Smiley, 28 Neb. 189 (44 N. W. 187; 26 Am. St. Rep. 319).

165. (1895.) The rule that the law of the place where a contract is made becomes a part of the contract applies to a city ordinance. Gerner v. Church, 43 Neb. 690 (62 N. W. 51).

166. (1900.) A contract is to be construed by the laws of the state in which it is made. Antes v. State Ins. Co., 61 Neb. 55 (84 N. W. 412).

Construction in favor of validity.

167. (1885.) In construing a contract, that construction which makes the contract legal and operative will be preferred to one which would have the opposite effect. Shuman v. Willets, 17 Neb. 478 (23 N. W. 358).

168. (1893.) Where a contract is capable of two constructions, the one making it valid and the other void, the law will adopt the construction that upholds the contract. Morrisey v. Broomal, 37 Neb. 766 (56 N. W. 383); (1903) Horton v. Rohlff, 69 Neb. 95 (95 N. W. 36).

Meaning of words.

169. (1876.) In the interpretation of contracts, words must not be forced from their proper signification to one entirely different. Mills v. Miller, 4 Neb. 441.

Digitized by Google

170. (1879.) Use of the word "as" in the clause "that said defendant refused and neglected to cut plaintiff's wheat as defendant had agreed and contracted," commented upon and proper signification given. Kelley v. Peterson, 9 Neb. 76 (2 N. W. 346).

Giving effect to all provisions.

171. (1878.) As a general rule, the covenants of a contract will be considered and held as dependent conditions to be performed by the respective parties, unless it very clearly appears, from the nature of the covenants, they intended them to be independent; and the common intention of the parties must be collected from the entire instrument; and therefore one clause or condition of the contract must be interpreted by the others, whether they precede or follow it. Hamilton v. Thrall, 7 Neb. 210.

172. (1899.) A contract should be construed if possible so as to give effect to all of its provisions. Lawton v. Fonner, 59 Neb. 214 (80 N. W. 808).

173. (1902.) The intention of the parties is to be gathered from the entire contract, and not from any clause contained therein. Royal Neighbors of America v. Wallace, 64 Neb. 330 (89 N. W. 758).

174. (1902.) In the interpretation of a written ambiguous contract, that construction will be preferred which gives effect to all the parts of the instrument rather than one which renders a portion redundant and useless. McGavock v. Omaha Nat. Bank, 64 Neb. 440 (90 N. W. 230).

175. (1902.) A construction of a written contract, which requires the rejection of certain words, is unwarranted where the rejection of such words would defeat the intention of the parties. Ricketts v. Buckstaff, 64 Neb. 851 (90 N. W. 915).

176. (1903.) A construction that will completely emasculate a clause of a contract will not be adopted, if any other reasonable construction is admissible. State, ex rel. Davis, v. Mortensen, 69 Neb. 376 (95 N. W. 831).

Surrounding circumstances.

177. (1884.) Contracts should be construed in the light of surrounding circumstances and the condition of the parties at the time of making them. Singer Mfg. Co. v. Doggett, 16 Neb. 609 (21 N. W. 468).

178. (1898.) Acts of the parties and other circumstances may be considered in interpreting an ambiguous contract in writing. Lctenser v. Misner, 56 Neb. 340 (76 N. W. 897).

179. (1900.) A contract will generally be construed solely by reference to its own language and terms; but where the language is ambiguous, other evidence may be considered, not for the purpose of contradiction, but to explain the ambiguity. State, ex rel. Seth Thomas Clock Co., v. County Commissioners of Cass County, 60 Neb. 566 (83 N. W. 733).

180. (1905.) In the determination of the rights of parties to a contract, the contract should be construed in the light of surrounding circumstances and the condition of the parties at the time of making it. Fiscus v. Wilson, 74 Neb. 444 (104 N. W. 856).

Custom or usage.

180*a*. (1894.) Parties to contracts are bound thereby and evidence of customs and usages cannot be received as a substitute. American Building & Loan Ass'n v. Mordock, 39 Neb. 413 (58 N. W. 107).

181. (1897.) The business usage of a particular individual is not admissible to interpret a contract between that individual and another in the absence of proof of knowledge by the latter of such usage. Gamble v. Stauber Mfg. Co., 50 Neb. 463 (69 N. W. 960).

182. (1897.) Custom or usage in trade or business may be shown for the purpose of interpreting a contract or controlling its execution, although not for the purpose of changing its intrinsic character, provided it be known to the party sought to be charged, or is so well settled and so uniformly acted upon as to warrant the presumption that it was known to both contracting parties and that they contracted with reference to it. McKee v. Wild, 52 Neb. 9 (91 N. W. 958).

Intention of parties.

183. (1874.) In the construction of a contract, the acts to be performed under it and the manner of performance may be considered; and such a construction should be adopted as will give effect to the provisions which carry out the evident intent of the contract; and the whole contract should be considered in determining the meaning of any or all of its parts. People, ex rel. Gere, v. Gosper, 3 Neb. 285.

184. (1883.) If words are used in a doubtful sense as to their meaning or application, courts should give them the meaning intended and understood by the parties. Harbach v. Miller, 14 Neb. 9 (14 N. W. 545).

185. (1894.) When terms of a contract are intended in different senses by the parties, courts will, under section 341, code, adopt one party's understanding when it formed the inducement for him to enter into the contract, and the other party is aware of it. Schroeder v. Nielson, 39 Neb. 335 (57 N. W. 993).

186. (1896.) In construing a contract, for the purpose of determining whether the statements made therein were intended by the parties thereto to be warranties or representations, the court will take into consideration the situation of the parties, the subject matter of the contract, and the language employed, and will consider a statement made to be a warranty only when it clearly appears that such was the intention of the contracting parties; that the mind of each party consciously intended and consented that such should be the interpretation of his statements. Kettenbach v. Omaha Life Ass'n, 49 Neb. 842 (69 N. W. 135).

187. (1901.) Where a building and loan association, through its agent, by representations inconsistent with a written contract, induces one, who is ignorant, and wholly unable to read or write the English language, to enter into such contract; and it appears that such party would not have entered into the contract had he known or possessed the means of knowing that the contract which he signed was not the contract to which he had agreed orally; and it further appears that the agent knew at the time that such pary relied upon his oral explanation of the terms of the contract, and was thereby induced to enter into the same; the court will give to such contract the construction understood and agreed to by the person so induced to sign. People's Building, Loan & Savings Ass'n v. Klauber, 1 Unof. 676 (95 N. W. 1072).

188. (1903.) In an action for damages for a breach of contract between a school district, in a metropolitan city, and an architect, for his services for the period of one year, the contract will be construed according to the plain import of its language, viewed in the light of the circumstances and the apparent understanding of the parties at the time it was made. School District of Omaha v. McDonald, 68 Neb. 610 (94 N. W. 829).

189. (1906.) A contract will ordinarily be construed as it was understood and construed by the contracting parties. School District v. Davis, 76 Neb. 612 (107 N. W. 842).

190. (1906.) A contract should be construed to give effect to the intention of the contracting parties, keeping in mind the situation of the parties, the property which is the subject matter of the contract, and the use to which it is being applied. Grothe v. Lane, 77 Neb. 605 (110 N. W. 305).

190*a*. (1907.) Contract of assignment examined, and held, under the evidence, to fall within the provisions of section 341 of the code, which provides that "when the terms of an agreement have been intended in a different sense by the parties to it, that sense is to prevail against either party in which he had reason to suppose the other understood it." Barnes v. Sim, 80 Neb. 213 (117 N. W. 881).

Construction by parties.

191. (1882.) Where both parties to a contract, with a full knowledge of its terms, by their action under it have given it the same construction, it is a safe rule to adopt that construction, where there is a possible doubt as to its meaning, in estimating damages under it. School District No. 8 v. Estes, 13 Neb. 52 (13 N. W. 16); (1894) Paxton & Gallagher v. Smith & Co., 41 Neb. 56 (59 N. W. 690); (1900) State, ex rel. Seth Thomas Clock Co., v. County Commissioners of Cass County, 60 Neb. 566 (83 N. W. 733); (1905) Fiscus v. Wilson, 74 Neb. 444 (104 N. W. 856).

192. (1890.) Where a contract for the construction of a canal at a certain sum per cubic yard of earth is silent as to whether the measurement is to include both excavation and embankment, the contractor by accepting each month a payment on account based on an estimate made by the engineer in charge obtained by computing the amount of excavation only is concluded by such construction of the contract. Price v. Kearney Canal & W. S. Co., 29 Neb. 33 (45 N. W. 252).

193. (1895.) In an action on a contract, where both parties in the district court adopt a particular construction, neither will be permitted to urge a different one in the reviewing court. Woodward v. Baird, 43 Neb. 310 (61 N. W. 612).

194. (1896.) Where a contract is ambiguous, a practical construction placed upon it by the parties thereto should prevail over any mere technical interpretation. Davis v. Ravenna Creamery Co., 48 Neb. 471 (67 N. W. 436).

www.libtool.com.cn

195. (1897.) A practical construction placed upon an ambiguous contract by the parties will generally be adopted by the courts. Hale v. Sheehan, 52 Neb. 184 (71 N. W. 1019); (1899) Lawton v. Fonner, 59 Neb. 214 (80 N. W. 808); (1903) Williams v. Auten, 68 Neb. 26 (93 N. W. 943).

Written and printed portions.

196. (1889.) Where an instrument consists partly of written and partly of printed form, the former controls the latter, where the two are inconsistent. Civil code, sec. 340. Union P. R. Co. v. Graddy, 25 Neb. 849 (41 N. W. 809).

197. (1896.) In case a contract is partly written and partly of printed form, the writing controls in case of inconsistency of provisions. Davis v. Ravenna Creamery Co., 48 Neb. 471 (67 N. W. 436).

Construing instruments together.

Construction of note and mortgage as one contract, see Bills and Notes, §§ 104-106.

198. (1874.) A contract to print and publish a map containing a lottery scheme, and the execution of a note in payment thereof, constitutes but one transaction, and should be construed as one entire contract. Kittle v. De Lamater, 3 Neb. 325.

199. (1886.) Where one partner sells his interest in the firm to the other, if he would take a certain interest in rooms over the store at one hundred dollars per year, the sale of the partnership interest and the leasehold constituted but one contract. Connor v. Hingtgen, 19 Neb. 472 (27 N. W. 443).

200. (1896.) Where a part consideration for a promise was performed in pursuance of a previous request, the previous request, the performance of the consideration, and the subsequent promise constitute a single contract, and where it would otherwise be within the statute of frauds, the performance by one party, although preceding the promise, may be sufficient to take the case out of the statute. Stuht v. Sweesy, 48 Neb. 767 (67 N. W. 748).

B. Parties.

Rights and liabilities of parties to contracts under assignment, see Assignments, §§ 24-30.

Joint and several contracts.

201. (1871.) An apportionment between several joint obligors does not render their contract one of severalty. Neligh v. Bradford, 1 Neb. 451.

202. (1903.) Contract for the conveyance of real estate between a vendee and three vendors, each owners of separate tracts of land, construed, and held to be severable and independent as to each vendor. Watkins v. Youll, 70 Neb. 81 (96 N. W. 1042).

Rights acquired by third persons.

203. (1877.) If a cause of action is exclusively based upon the full performance of the terms and conditions of a prior agreement between other parties, the primary inquiry is, whether such agreement was made a contract between the parties to the action, and if so, whether it was fully executed. Clarke v. Omaha & S. W. R. Co., 5 Neb. 314.

204. (1894.) A party seeking to avail himself of the terms of a contract between other parties must do so subject to all its conditions and restrictions. Simms v. Summers, 39 Neb. 781 (58 N. W. 431).

205. (1897.) Contract permitting the owner of buildings to retain,—for the purpose of insuring payment to subcontractors and of insuring completion of the buildings,—15 per cent. of the amounts due the contractor, held not to render the owner primarily liable to a subcontractor for sums thus retained, nor to constitute the owner a trustee. School District of Beatrice v. Thomas, 51 Neb. 740 (71 N. W. 731).

206. (1897.) A subcontractor, between whom and the employer of the contractor there is no privity of contract, cannot, as a matter of right,—merely because employed by the contractor to perform a portion of the labor contracted for,—if not paid by the contractor, demand payment of the employer, and, on refusal, maintain suit against the employer therefor. School District of Beatrice v. Thomas, 51 Neb. 740 (71 N. W. 731).

206*a*. (1899.) The circumstances under which the contract by which the telegraph company agreed to transmit to the other party to the contract the news reports of the Associated Press examined, and held not to show the contract to be elemental of the consideration of the agreement by the Associated Press to furnish the news reports to the party to the first mentioned contract other than the telegraph company.

Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Call Publishing Co., 58 Neb. 192 (78 N. W. 519).

——— Agreement for benefit of third person.

207. (1886.) Where one makes a promise to another for the benefit of the third person, such third person can maintain an action upon the promise, though the consideration does not move directly from him. Shamp v. Meyer, 20 Neb. 223 (29 N. W. 379); (1893) Barnett v. Pratt, 37 Neb. 349 (55 N. W. 1050); (1891) Kaufman v. United States Nat. Bank, 31 Neb. 661 (48 N. W. 738); (1891) Hale v. Ripp, 32 Neb. 259 (49 N. W. 218); (1894) Doll v. Crume, 41 Neb. 655 (59 N. W. 806); (1896) Kaufman v. Cooper, 46 Neb. 644 (65 N. W. 796); (1897) Meyer v. Shamp, 51 Neb. 424 (71 N. W. 57); (1898) Morrill v. Skinner, 57 Neb. 164 (77 N. W. 375).

208. (1898.) One not a party to a contract may maintain an action thereon when such contract was made for his benefit or the benefit of a class to which he belongs. Rohman v. Gaiser, 53 Neb. 474 (73 N. W. 923).

209. (1898.) Where one makes a promise to another for the benefit of a third person, the latter may defend the contract against an attack for fraud. Goos v. Goos, 57 Neb. 294 (77 N. W. 687).

Liabilities of third persons.

210. (1876.) Where the owner of premises, upon which with other property, judgment liens are held, enters into an agreement whereby the liens were to be discharged, and the owner was to buy in an outstanding title in favor of himself and the judgment creditor's son, the defendant herein, as tenants in common, the defendant cannot be compelled to contribute anything in the purchase of the outstanding title. Mills v. Miller, 4 Neb. 441.

C. Subject-Matter.

Construction of particular contracts.

211. (1874.) Under a contract for public printing, wherein it was provided that superior royal paper, forty pounds to the ream, and folded four times, should be used, paper twenty-four by thirty-eight inches in size, weighing forty pounds to the ream, must be used and should contain sixteen leaves and thirty-two pages of printed matter to the sheet, printed on both sides. People, ex rel. Gere, v. Gosper, 3 Neb. 285.

212. (1888.) A promise by a party to "see you paid for your trouble," is not an absolute promise to pay, but a guaranty that payment shall be made. Sedgwick v. Bliss, 23 Neb. 617 (37 N. W. 483).

213. (1894.) Where the contract of a construction company contemplated only the building of a specified line of railroad, the expenses incidental to preliminary surveys made by the construction company with a view to the location of other lines where municipal donations could readily and freely be secured, in large part, for the benefit of said construction company, are not properly recoverable by said construction company as against the railroad company for which the work of construction was being done, even though some of the officers of the said railroad company, by their conversation, in a measure, countenanced the making of said surveys for the purposes above stated. Fitzgerald v. Fitzgerald & Mallory Construction Co., 41 Neb. 374 (59 N. W. 838).

214. (1895.) The reservation of the right in a building contract by the owner, of an option to make payments by assuming lumber bills, of necessity excluded the inference therefrom that the proprietor assumed payment of lumber bills, of the existence of which he had no knowledge. O'Rourke v. Burke, 44 Neb. 821 (63 N. W. 17).

215. (1896.) A contract which provides for the sinking of a tubular well to be not more than of a certain depth and to furnish a flow of a certain quantity of water per hour, held to be an agreement under which the defendant was to sink the well until the prescribed flow of two thousand gallons of water per hour was obtained, not to extend, however, beyond a depth of five hundred feet, at any ascertained or fixed compensation for such further extension, and not in any event to extend beyond a depth at which the employer should give the defendant notice to quit work. Omaha Consolidated Vinegar Co. v. Burns, 49 Neb. 229 (68 N. W. 492).

216. (1898.) Under a contract, "Publishers Lincoln Daily Call, Lincoln, Neb.: I hereby authorize you to insert my advertisement in the Lincoln Daily Call, to occupy the space of five thousand (5,000) lines local reading matter, said advertisement to run one year, commencing January 10, 1891, for which I agree to pay the sum due for the lines used on the first day of each month until the expiration, at the rate of 2½ cents per line," there was no obligation to pay for 5,000 lines, but only for such portion thereof as was furnished by the contracting party and printed by the publishing company. Call Publishing Co. v. Edson, 55 Neb. 394 (75 N. W. 837).

217. (1902.) A note for $1,593 and a memorandum on the back thereof to the effect that when the sureties "quit paying on this note or any renewal of it, it is to be cut down to $1,050" construed to mean that the sureties were to be released when the excess of $1,050 had been paid. Mockett v. Boston Improvement Co., 2 Unof. 500 (89 N. W. 283).

218. (1906.) Under a contract whereby defendant purchased the joint interest of one, who with another has bought certain book rights of plaintiff, and agreed to pay off certain indebtedness, he was held not to have assumed the unknown obligations of the seller to plaintiff. Gammel Book Co. v. Paine, 75 Neb. 683 (106 N. W. 777).

219. (1906.) Under a contract by a school district and an architect whereby the latter was employed to draw all plans for buildings contemplated within one year, at a fixed compensation, such architect is entitled to compensation for plans for a building, prepared within the year, even though the building was not then constructed. School District v. Davis, 76 Neb. 612 (107 N. W. 842).

Warrantics.

220. (1888.) When a person undertakes any employment, trust, or duty, he thereby in contemplation of law impliedly contracts with those who employed him to perform that which he has undertaken with integrity, diligence, and skill; and if he fails to do so it is a breach of contract. Hart v. Barnes, 24 Neb. 782 (40 N. W. 322).

221. (1901.) One who undertakes for a consideration to do work requiring special skill, impliedly represents that he possesses, and will exercise, such reasonable degree of skill as the nature of the service may require; and if he is to furnish his own tools, implements or machinery, there is an implied representation as to their fitness for the use to which they are to be put. Van Nortwick v. Holbine, 62 Neb. 147 (86 N. W. 1057).

D. Time.

Effect of delay in performance, see post, § 313.

Time of performance in general.

222. (1886.) When the day of performance of contracts, other than instruments upon which days of grace are allowed, falls on Sunday, that day is not counted, and compliance with the stipulation of the contract on the next day (Monday) is deemed in law a performance. Post v. Garrow, 18 Neb. 682 (26 N. W. 580).

223. (1896.) The term "due" is employed to express distinct ideas. In some connections it is held to mean a debt immediately payable. In others it signifies a state of indebtedness merely, without reference to the time of payment; but does not include contingent liabilities which may ripen into absolute indebtedness upon the future performance of contract obligations. Ryan v. Douglas County, 47 Neb. 9 (66 N. W. 30).

224. (1897). A contract of carriage which contains no specified time for performance, implies, as one of its terms, performance within a reasonable time, and an action may be maintained on the contract for unreasonable delay in performance. Denman v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 52 Neb. 140 (71 N. W. 967).

224*a*. (1908.) The words "as soon as possible" in a contract for the manufacture of certain specified goods mean "with all reasonable diligence" or "without unreasonable delay." Childs & Co. v. Omaha Paraphernalia House, 80 Neb. 673 (114 N. W. 941).

Time as of essence of contract.

225. (1888.) The words "This contract is to be construed strictly as to payments" held not to make time of the essence of the contract. Langan v. Thummel, 24 Neb. 265 (38 N. W. 782).

226. (1900.) In equity, time will be regarded as of the essence of a contract when it clearly and affirmatively appears that the parties intended that time should be essential. Jewett v. Black, 60 Neb. 173 (82 N. W. 385).

Duration of contract.

227. (1880.) Under a contract whereby one of the parties was to put up ice and sell the same, unless the other should terminate the contract on the ground of the other's disposition and neglect of the business, a termination of the contract cannot be had merely because the one thought the other had become dissipated unless he was also neglectful of the business. Krigbaum v. Vindquest, 10 Neb. 435 (6 N. W 631).

228. (1890.) A contract appointing defendant as sales agent for plaintiff "during the season of 1888" in consideration of which defendant purchased 15,000 pounds of binding twine at a price fixed, with a proviso "above prices guaranteed during the season of 1888, and any reduction on this grade of twine will be met by us," is a continuing contract for 1888, so that plaintiff is liable for failure to furnish the entire 15,000 pounds. McCormick Harvesting Co. v. Jensen, 29 Neb. 102 (45 N. W. 160).

228*a*. (1908.) Where the county board has a yearly contract for the construction of all bridges in the county, it may not make another to take effect before the expiration of the first; but it may, if the occasion for building a bridge arises during the life of the yearly contract, require it to be done thereunder, even though the same cannot be completed within the term thereof. Whedon v. Lancaster County, 80 Neb. 682 (114 N. W. 1102).

Option to terminate.

229. (1891.) A contract by which plaintiff was to move to defendant's farm and keep house for him and board him "during the following winter," is not terminable at any time at the option of either party. Bryant v. Barton, 32 Neb. 613 (49 N. W. 331).

230. (1893.) Ordinarily where the right to terminate a contract on notice is reserved in the instrument itself, without fraud or mistake, and with the actual knowledge and consent of all the parties thereto, such reservation is valid, and the exercise thereof will be enforced by the courts, if not contrary to equity and good conscience. Morrissey v. Broomal, 37 Neb. 766 (56 N. W. 383).

E. Conditions.

In general.

231. (1905.) A provision in a contract placing certain cattle in another's care, giving him power to sell all by a certain time for not less than a certain sum per head, that requires each to submit all offers to buy to the other, is not a limitation upon the otherwise unlimited power of the one to sell at the other's discretion. First Nat. Bank of Omaha v. Dye, 73 Neb. 300 (102 N. W. 614).

III. MODIFICATION AND MERGER.

Merger of oral contract of insurance in subsequent policy, see Insurance, §§ 97, 98.

Reformation of contract, see Reformation of Instruments.

Of contract for sale of goods, see Sales, III.

Of contract for sale of land, see Vendor and Purchaser, III.

Contracts subject to modification.

232. (1882.) A contract between two corporations, having been entered into whereby one agrees to loan a large sum of money to the other, to concentrate its debts, in consideration of certain bonds and a control of the business, the officers of the advancing company, in their individual capacity with consent of an agent of the other company, cannot change or modify the original contract. Romig v. West Point Butter Co., 12 Neb. 567 (11 N. W. 884).

Provisions in contract for modification.

233. (1890.) Where a building contract provides that the owner and architect may make changes they deem necessary at any time during the building, the extra cost to be apportioned on them, the construction of a stairway from the kitchen not originally provided for and the use of a different kind of hardware falls within such clause and within the authority so given. Dorsey v. McGee, 30 Neb. 657 (46 N. W. 1018).

Parol modification of prior written contract.

Parol evidence to vary terms of contract, see post, §§ 456-472.

234. (1886.) It is competent to prove by parol a change or modification in the terms of a written contract made by the parties to such contract at a time subsequent to the execution thereof. And the consideration for the contract may be a sufficient consideration for such change or modification. Morrissey v. Schindler, 18 Neb. 672 (26 N. W. 476).

235. (1887.) After a contract has been reduced to writing, it is competent for the parties, at any time before breach of it, by a new contract, not in writing, either altogether to waive, dissolve, or annul the former agreement, or in any manner to add to, or subtract from, or vary or qualify the terms of it; which is to be proved partly by the written agreement and partly by the subsequent verbal terms, engrafted upon what will be thus left of the written agreement. Delaney v. Linder, 22 Neb. 274 (34 N. W. 630).

236. (1888.) A provision in a building contract, that "no new work of any description done on the premises, nor any work of any kind whatsoever, shall be considered as extra unless expressly contracted for in writing before its commencement," will not preclude the parties from afterwards waiving the same, and making changes in the original contract by parol. Erskine v. Johnson, 23 Neb. 261 (36 N. W. 510).

237. (1890.) A provision in a building tract that "no new work of any description done on the premises, nor work of any kind whatsoever, shall be considered as extras unless a separate estimate in writing for the same before it is commenced shall have been submitted by the contractor to the superintendent and proprietor and their signatures obtained thereto," may be subsequently waived by the parties by parol. McLeod v. Genius, 31 Neb. 1 (47 N. W. 473).

238. (1890.) The owner of a building is liable for work and materials furnished by the contractor in its construction not called for by the original written contract, where the owner, or his authorized agent, by a subsequent oral agreement, promised to pay therefor, or knew that the contractor would charge for the same as extras, and assented thereto or permitted the same without objection. McLeod v. Genius, 31 Neb. 1 (47 N. W. 473).

238*a*. (1894.) A written contract for the construction of a line of railroad only does not preclude the introduction of parol evidence of a subsequent contract for supply of cattle yards, telegraph line, and other extras necessary to equipment and operation of the road, and not within the terms of the written contract. Fitzgerald v. Fitzgerald & Mallory Construction Co., 41 Neb. 374 (59 N. W. 838).

239. (1902.) While executory and before a breach, the terms of a written contract may be changed by a subsequent parol agreement, and such subsequent agreement requires no consideration. Bowman v. Wright, 65 Neb. 661 (91 N. W. 580).

240. (1902.) There is a clear distinction between parol modification of an executory written agreement before breach and before the time for performance has arrived, and an attempt to satisfy a liquidated and accrued indebtedness by payment and acceptance of a less sum. Bowman v. Wright, 65 Neb. 661 (91 N. W. 580).

241. (1904.) It is a well settled principle that a written contract not required by the statute of frauds to be in writing may be subsequently changed by oral agreement, and such subsequent agreement need not rest upon any new consideration. Strahl v. Western Grocer Co., 5 Unof. 482 (98 N. W. 1043).

Consideration for modification.

242. (1895.) The mutual waiver of the rights of the parties to a contract of sale of nursery stock is sufficient consideration for a cancelation of the contract, to release the parties from their obligations thereunder. Bryant v. Thesing, 46 Neb. 244 (64 N. W. 967).

242*a*. (1894.) The present acceptance by a railroad company from a construction company of unfinished work is a sufficient consideration for a stipulated deduction by the latter, made as a compromise between the parties, from the contract price of finished work. Fitzgerald v. Fitzgerald & Mallory Construction Co., 41 Neb. 374 (59 N. W. 838).

242*b*. (1894.) Where a construction company having contracted to build a line of railroad had completed its work according to contract, an agreement by its president, without authority to accept payment at less than the contract price, was without consideration and did not release the other contracting party from full payment. Fitzgerald v. Fitzgerald & Mallory Construction Co., 41 Neb. 374 (59 N. W. 838).

243. (1902.) Where the contract is one required to be in writing by the statute of frauds, there must be consideration for a parol modification by waiving some of its requirements, or else such new agreement must be executed. In such case, if the terms of the new agreement have been fully carried out, the original obligation is discharged, though there was no additional consideration. Bowman v. Wright, 65 Neb. 661 (91 N. W. 580).

Merger in subsequent contract.

244. (1882.) A written contract of warranty of a machine cannot be varied by proof of oral agreements made before the writing was executed. Sycamore Marsh Harvester Co. v. Sturm, 13 Neb. 210 (13 N. W. 202).

245. (1887.) When a contract has been reduced to writing, verbal evidence of what passed between the parties either before the written instrument was made or during the time of its preparation, so as to add to or subtract from or in any manner to vary or qualify the written contract, is not admissible. Delaney v. Linder, 22 Neb. 274 (34 N. W. 630).

246. (1894.) All verbal negotiations or understandings of parties had prior to the execution of the written contract are merged in the written agreement. Clarke v. Kelsey, 41 Neb. 766 (60 N. W. 138); (1902) Martens v. Pittock, 3 Unof. 770 (92 N. W. 1038).

247. (1895.) A new contract with reference to the subject-matter of a former one does not supersede the former and destroy its obligations, except in so far as the new one is inconsistent therewith, when it is evident from an inspection of the contracts and from an examination of the circumstances that the parties did not intend the new contract to supersede the old, but intended it as supplementary thereto. Uhlig v. Barnum, 43 Neb. 584 (62 N. W. 749).

248. (1897.) The contractor abandoned the work and his contract. His bondsmen took charge and management of the completion of the buildings and fulfillment of the contract, and an additional contract was entered into between them, the subcontractor, and the owner. Held, This latter contract became of force and binding on all parties, including the owner; also that it provided for payment of all subsequent estimates of amounts due on the buildings for work by a subcontractor to be made directly to him, and this to apply to the whole sum of any and all such estimates, inclusive of the 15 per cent. which was to be retained by the owner under the original contract and by the original contractor under the contract of the subcontractor. School District of Beatrice v. Thomas, 51 Neb. 740 (71 N. W. 731).

249. (1905.) Before one contract is merged in another and superseded thereby, the last contract must be between the same parties as the first, and must embrace the same subject matter, and must have been so intended by the parties. Walsh v. Lunney, 75 Neb. 337 (106 N. W. 447).

249*a*. (1908.) Where a plaintiff, who, after having entered into a valid contract, has by means of sharp, unconscionable and fraudulent practices, and by a threat to repudiate the contract at a critical period during its execution, secured a change thereof greatly to his own advantage, brings a suit in equity for a specific performance of the contract as changed, he may not, after the court has determined the contract as so changed invalid for such misconduct, still prosecute such suit for the specific performance of the contract as originally made. Blondel v. Bolander, 80 Neb. 531 (114 N. W. 574).

Contemporaneous parol agreement.

250. (1878.) When the parties have reduced their contract to writing, the law presumes that all previous and contemporaneous negotiations and conversations leading to the contract are merged in it, and cannot be varied by parol testimony. Hamilton v. Thrall, 7 Neb. 210.

251. (1883.) One C., a depositor, purchased sight drafts at a bank to pay for cattle that he expected to purchase in Colorado. At the same time he made a parol agreement with the bank that if he did not purchase cattle he might return the drafts to the bank and receive credit for the amount thereof with interest. Held, That the parol agreement was valid, and did not contradict the written agreement, as it merely showed the purpose for which the drafts were procured and delivered. Collingwood v. Merchants Bank, 15 Neb. 118 (17 N. W. 359).

252. (1895.) Parol evidence is not admissible to establish a contemporaneous oral agreement not to negotiate a negotiable instrument. Waddle v. Owen, 43 Neb. 489 (61 N. W. 731).

253. (1896.) Parol evidence of prior or contemporaneous conditions modifying a written proposition afterwards submitted and acted upon cannot be received in evidence to vary the terms of the writing. Commercial State Bank of Neligh v. Antelope County, 48 Neb. 496 (67 N. W. 465).

254. (1899.) A written contract cannot be varied, modified, or contradicted by parol evidence of a prior or contemporaneous agreement between the parties. Te Poel v. Shutt, 57 Neb. 592 (78 N. W. 288).

255. (1901.) The terms of a promissory note cannot be contradicted, altered or varied by evidence of a prior or contemporaneous parol agreement. Garneau v. Cohn, 61 Neb. 500 (85 N. W. 531).

256. (1902.) Parol evidence tending to establish a separate oral agreement between the parties to a written contract, as to matters upon which such contract is silent, and not against its terms, is admissible. Huffman v. Ellis, 64 Neb. 623 (90 N. W. 552).

257. (1903.) Evidence of a contemporaneous oral agreement is inadmissible to contradict or vary the terms of a written contract. Peterson v. Ferbrache, 4 Unof. 249 (93 N. W. 1011).

258. (1903.) Where a contract to sell machinery and put it in place is in writing and free from ambiguity, evidence as to a prior or contemporaneous parol warranty is inadmissible. Kummer v. Dubuque Turbine & Roller Mills Co., 4 Unof. 347 (93 N. W. 938).

IV. RESCISSION AND ABANDONMENT.

Of marriage contract, see Breach of Marriage Promise, § 2.

Right of common carrier to rescind, see Carriers, § 125.

Necessity of notice of repudiation of wagering contract, see Gaming, § 16.

Avoidance of insurance policy, see Insurance, §§ 160-198.

Forfeiture of rights under insurance policy, see Insurance, §§ 199-267.

Rescission of contract for sale of goods, see Sales, III.

Contract for sale of land, see Vendor and Purchaser, III.

Option to rescind.

Option to terminate contract, see ante, §§ 229, 230.

259. (1879.) Generally a contract cannot be rescinded unless by consent of all the parties to it, except in cases of fraud. And a declaration by one party that he rescinds the contract, followed by a refusal on his part further to perform it, not acquiesced in by the other party, does not amount to a rescission, but only a breach. Nebraska City v. Gas Co., 9 Neb. 339 (2 N. W. 870).

260. (1890.) A party to an executory contract has the right to rescind the contract, and terminate it wholly, without the consent of the other party, who is in no fault; the first party becoming liable to the other in any damages he may have sustained, or any compensation he may have earned, by reason of the rescission. Hale v. Hess, 30 Neb. 42 (46 N. W. 261).

261. (1904.) Either party to an executory contract may abandon or renounce his contract at any time before performance is due, on the usual terms of compensation to the other for damages which the law recognizes and allows,—subject to the jurisdiction of equity and decree of specific performance in proper cases. Hixson Map Co. v. Nebraska Post Co., 5 Unof. 388 (98 N. W. 872).

Abandonment of contract.

262. (1896.) An abandonment of a contract may be effected by acts of one of the parties thereto, which are inconsistent with its existence and acquiesced in by the other party. Hall v. Eccles, 46 Neb. 880 (65 N. W. 1058).

263. (1901.) One who contracts to cultivate lands of another to a specific crop, upon shares, is entitled only to such possession of the land as is necessary and convenient for the use intended. In such case the owner of the premises will not be held to have worked an eviction, or an abandonment or rescission of the contract, by entering upon them after the season is too far advanced for the planting of the specified crop and clearing them of weeds and planting another crop thereon. Culley v. Taylor, 62 Neb. 651 (87 N. W. 334).

264. (1906.) A contract will be treated as abandoned, where the acts of one party, inconsistent with its existence, are acquiesced in by the other. Herpolsheimer v. Christopher, 76 Neb. 352 (107 N. W. 382).

Grounds for rescission.

——— Incapacity.

265. (1877.) In order to set aside a contract on the ground of drunkenness it is not sufficient that the party was under undue excitement from liquor. It must rise to that degree which may be called excessive drunkenness, where a party is utterly deprived of his reason and understanding. Johnson v. Phifer, 6 Neb. 401.

——— Duress.

266. (1895.) To set aside a contract for duress it must be shown first that the will of one of the parties was overcome, and that he was thus subjected to the power of another, and that the means used to induce him to act were of such a kind as would overcome the mind and will of an ordinary person. Hargreaves v. Korcek, 44 Neb. 660 (62 N. W. 1086).

——— Fraud and misrepresentations.

267. A contract procured by fraud will be rescinded at the suit of the party defrauded. But in such action the particular and precise circumstances which constitute the alleged fraud must be set forth in the petition. Arnold v. Baker, 6 Neb. 134.

268. (1877.) In morals the failure to perform a promise may be without excuse or justification; but in law false representation to authorize the rescission of a contract must be made in regard to existing facts. Perkins v. Lougee, 6 Neb. 220.

269. (1877.) A court of equity will relieve a party against contracts made by him while temporarily insane from the use of intoxicating liquor, where such contracts have been procured by the fraud or imposition of the other party. Johnson v. Phifer, 6 Neb. 401.

270. (1896.) The jurisdiction of equity to relieve against mutual mistakes is, in general, confined to cases where, because of such mistake, the minds of the parties never met, and there was therefore no contract, and to cases where the contract made was not correctly expressed by the instrument evidencing it. Relief cannot be given because of misapprehensions in regard to a collateral matter, as in regard to a fact incidentally affecting the value of the subject-matter of the contract, there being no deception or wrongful concealment. Moore v. Scott, 47 Neb. 346 (66 N. W. 441).

271. (1896.) False representations as the basis of an action, whether for damages or for rescission of a contract, are such only as in some manner actually mislead the complaining party to his damage. American Building & Loan Ass'n v. Bear, 48 Neb. 455 (67 N. W. 500).

272. (1896.) Actionable fraud must relate to matters material to the transaction involved. Mere collateral inducement, although fraudulently made, of itself affords no ground for the rescission of a contract, or for the recovery of damage against the offending party. American Building & Loan Ass'n v. Bear, 48 Neb. 455 (67 N. W. 500).

273. (1901.) Where a party is induced to his damage to enter into a contract by the false and fraudulent representations of the other party, and where such false and fraudulent representations have been relied on as the inducing cause for entering into such contract, and where such representations are of facts peculiarly within the knowledge of the party making them, and not mere expressions of opinion, the party so defrauded may elect whether he will stand by the contract or rescind it. Perry v. Rogers, 62 Neb. 898 (87 N. W. 1063).

274. (1903.) The rule, that the carelessness of negligence of a person in signing a written contract estops him from afterwards asserting that the writing does not truly express the agreement of the parties, does not apply in an action for relief on the ground that the contract was obtained by fraud or entered into by mutual mistake. Story v. Gammell, 68 Neb. 709 (94 N. W. 982).

Breach by other party.

Excuse for nonperformance, see post, § 321.

275. (1886.) In an action on a contract whereby one party agreed to take and herd the other's cattle, and agreed not to take more than two hundred head of cattle into his herd, an instruction that if more than two hundred cattle were taken into the herd the defendant had the right to remove his cattle, and would not be liable for breach of his contract should be given. Skinner v. Majors, 19 Neb. 453 (27 N. W. 431).

276. (1889.) The failure or refusal of one party to a contract to perform his part thereof does not justify the other party in making such performance a condition of his own performance of his own part of a separate and independent contract with the same person. Filley v. Walker, 28 Neb. 506 (44 N. W. 737).

277. (1894.) A party who has required payment of sums of money which by a rescission of the contract will be rendered useless to the other contracting party cannot rescind such contract for the mere nonperformance of some conditions thereof, unless such right of rescission is reserved by the express terms of the contract itself. Swobe v. New Omaha Electric Light Co., 39 Neb. 586 (58 N. W. 181).

278. (1896.) Not every breach of a contract by one party thereto will authorize the other to treat it as rescinded. The failure to perform an independent stipulation collateral to the main consideration, not amounting to a condition precedent, and not such as to prevent the performance by the party so in default, of the principal undertaking, although attended by some loss or inconvenience to the other party, does not absolve the latter from liability, or authorize him to treat the contract as abandoned. American Building & Loan Ass'n v. Rainbolt, 48 Neb. 434 (67 N. W. 495).

Waiver of right to rescind.

279. (1882.) If a party become entitled to rescind or terminate a contract, or claim a forfeiture by reason of the default of another, he must do it within a reasonable time. Catlin v. Wright, 13 Neb. 558 (14 N. W. 530).

280. (1896.) One who is deceived by means of the fraudulent representations of another may elect to rescind the contract and reclaim the property parted with, or to affirm the agreement and pursue his ordinary remedy by an action thereon. Such remedies are, however, not concurrent but inconsistent, and by electing to pursue one with a knowledge of the facts he waives his right to the other. First Nat. Bank of Chadron v. McKinney, 47 Neb. 149 (66 N. W. 280); (1896) Pollock v. Smith, 49 Neb. 864 (69 N. W. 312).

281. (1896.) The right to rescind a contract on the ground of fraud must be promptly exercised upon the discovery of the ground therefor. The continued use or employment of property will, in such case, be construed as an election to affirm the contract under which it was received. American Building & Loan Ass'n v. Rainbolt, 48 Neb. 434 (67 N. W. 493); (1896) Pollock v. Smith, 49 Neb. 864 (69 N. W. 312).

282. (1896.) Where time is made the essence of a contract and a forfeiture is provided in case of default, the acceptance of part of overdue payments on the contract is a waiver of the right to declare a forfeiture as to all defaults in payments then existing. White v. Atlas Lumber Co., 49 Neb. 82 (65 N. W. 359).

283. (1907.) To avoid a contract on the ground of excessive intoxication, one must rescind the contract within a reasonable time after recovering his senses, or, if he has received no money or property as a consideration therefor, he must, within a reasonable time, disclaim liability thereon. Case Threshing Machine Co. v. Meyers, 78 Neb. 685 (111 N. W. 602).

Conditions precedent to rescission.

284. (1882.) Where an agreement is made whereby a corporation in consideration of certain bonds, which are to be delivered as securities, agrees to loan another corporation thirty-five thousand dollars for the purpose of permitting the latter to concentrate its debts, after the bonds have been issued and delivered to an agent to deliver to the advancing company or its president to be held in trust, such advancing company, through its president, cannot rescind the contract on the ground of fraud and concealment of facts without placing the other in statu quo. Romig v. West Point Butter Co., 12 Neb. 567 (11 N. W. 884).

285. (1891.) The general rule is that a party who seeks to rescind a contract entered into on fraudulent representation, must return or offer to return the property acquired by such contract within a reasonable time, so as to place the property and the adverse party substantially in the same condition as at the time the property was received. There are some exceptions to this rule, however. Symns & Co. v. Benner, 31 Neb. 593 (48 N. W. 472).

286. (1891.) A party to a contract is not entitled to a rescission when he is unwilling to perform his part of the agreement. Pryor v. Hunter, 31 Neb. 678 (48 N. W. 736).

287. (1893.) Where plaintiff and defendant are induced to give their separate notes to another for the purpose of securing leases on school lands as an investment, and such third party absconds, and when the notes, that have been indorsed, fall due, defendant paid both notes, taking as security certain stock in a cheese company from plaintiff, in an action by plaintiff to compel reassignment of the stock, there being no evidence of fraud, and plaintiff refusing an offer to redeem for the amount of the secured claim, a judgment for defendant affirmed. Rathman v. Peycke, 37 Neb. 384 (55 N. W. 1070).

288. (1896.) One who seeks to rescind a contract on the ground of fraud must, within a reasonable time, offer to return the property or consideration therefor received by him, provided it be of any value. Property, the loss of which would in any way result in disadvantage or inconvenience to the adverse party, must, in such case, be returned although it possesses no intrinsic or market value. Building & Loan Ass'n of Dakota v. Cameron, 48 Neb. 124 (66 N. W. 1109).

289. (1899.) One is not entitled to a rescission of a contract who is unwilling to perform his part of the agreement. Te Poel v. Shutt, 57 Neb. 592 (78 N. W. 288).

290. (1902.) It is a general rule that a party who seeks to rescind a contract entered into fraudulently or under undue influence, must return or offer to return the property acquired by such contract within a reasonable time, and so place the adverse party in statu quo. An exception to that part of the rule requiring a return of the property arises where the party guilty of the fraud and undue influence, and as a part of the general wrongful design, has by advice or interference, induced the other party to part with his property. In such a case, a tender of the value of the property received is sufficient. Meyer v. Fishburn, 65 Neb. 626 (91 N. W. 534).

Partial rescission.

291. (1896.) A contract cannot be rescinded in part on account of fraud, and ratified in part. Baum Iron Co. v. Burg, 47 Neb. 21 (66 N. W. 8).

292. (1898.) A contract rescinded for fraud is rescinded in toto, and an adjustment of matters growing therefrom must proceed on both sides independent of the contract. Olson v. Lamb, 56 Neb. 104 (76 N. W. 433; 71 Am. St. Rep. 670).

293. (1900.) A contract cannot be rescinded in part, and a part remain executed. Alfree Mfg. Co. v. Grape, 59 Neb. 777 (82 N. W. 11).

294. (1905.) Persons claiming under a contract must accept it in its entirety, and will not be permitted to avail themselves of those terms which are favorable and reject those which are onerous. Beer v. Wisner, 74 Neb. 437 (104 N. W. 757).

Effect of rescission.

295. (1898.) One rescinding a contract on the ground of fraud cannot recover damages sustained by reason of the fraud. Smith v. Myers, 56 Neb. 503 (76 N. W. 1084).

Actions for rescission.

296. (1877.) In an action to rescind a contract on the ground of fraud, the particular and precise circumstances which constitute the alleged fraud, and the facts upon which the plaintiff bases his claim for relief, must be stated in the petition. Arnold v. Baker, 6 Neb. 134.

297. (1877.) The allegation in a petition for the rescinding of a contract for a mining claim that the "defendant was not at any time the lawful owner of said claim, or any interest therein, according to the mining laws of said mining district," is not such a statement of facts as will authorize the court to rescind the contract. Arnold v. Baker, 6 Neb. 134.

298. (1897.) Where rescission of a contract is sought on the ground of deceit, the party injured must allege and prove that he relied upon the false representations of the other party. Griswold v. Hazels, 52 Neb. 64 (71 N. W. 972).

299. (1899.) To entitle a party to be relieved from his contract on the ground that he was induced to make it by false representation of the other contracting party, he must plead and prove that the representation was made, that it was false, that he believed it, and acted upon it. Murphy v. Illinois Trust & Savings Bank, 57 Neb. 519 (77 N. W. 1102).

300. (1900.) A pleading for rescission of a contract for a breach in its conditions must allege the ground upon which a right to rescind is based—an offer to rescind without unnecessary delay by a tender of the property received, with a request for a return of the consideration. The offer to return the property must be continuous, and kept good by a proper averment to that effect. Alfree Mfg. Co. v. Grape, 59 Neb. 777 (82 N. W. 11).

301. (1902.) Whether the offer to rescind has been made within a reasonable time, is a mixed question of law and of fact depending upon the peculiar facts and circumstances of each case. Meyer v. Fishburn, 65 Neb. 626 (91 N. W. 534).

V. PERFORMANCE OR BREACH.

Actions for breach, see post, VI.

Recovery on quantum meruit of employment contract, see Master and Servant, §§ 24-29.

Effect of performance of invalid parol contract, see Frauds, Statute of, §§ 161-169*a*.

Measure of damages for breach, see Damages, VI, C.

Penalty for breach, see Damages, § 37.

Breach as ground for rescission, see ante, §§ 275-278.

Ratification by cities, see Municipal Corporations, §§ 284-286.

Duty to perform.

302. (1905.) While public policy forbids the enforcement of an illegal or immoral contract, it is equally insistent on the enforcement of contracts which are lawful and contravene none. Stroemer v. Van Orsdel, 74 Neb. 132 (103 N. W. 1053).

Sufficiency of performance in general.

303. (1895.) A contract to put into a hotel a hot air furnace, and that all work should be done in a workmanlike manner, required that the furnace should be so constructed as not to expose the building to danger from fire when the furnace was used by a person of ordinary prudence in the usual manner. Uhlig v. Barnum, 43 Neb. 584 (62 N. W. 549).

www.lfbtool.com.cn

304. (1898.) The mere setting aside of a decree under section 82 of the code, does not comply or fulfill the terms of an agreement to secure the deed issued after confirmation, and in completion of a sale ordered by the judgment to be vacated, and the property and its title to be settled and fixed in a party to the agreement. Security Abstract Title Co. v. Longacre, 56 Neb. 469 (76 N. W. 1073).

Election as to manner of performance.

305. (1902.) Where an agreement gives one of the parties thereto the option to erect and maintain a structure of a certain description, or to pay a specified amount of money in lieu thereof, and the party exercises his election by building the structure, such election is final, and he can not relieve himself from maintaining the structure by tendering payment of the money. Gloe v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 65 Neb. 680 (91 N. W. 547).

Satisfaction of party, or agent.

306. (1902.) If a contract of sale is expressly made subject to the approval of the purchaser, or of someone for him, and such approval involves either judgment in matters of taste or personal opinion, the person whose approval is required is made the sole arbiter, and his decision is conclusive, provided he really passes upon the question and reaches a conclusion honestly, whether his conclusion is right or wrong. Thurman v. City of Omaha, 64 Neb. 490 (90 N W. 253).

307. (1902.) Where a party stipulates that his contract of purchase shall be subject to the opinion of his attorney as to the title to or legal status of the thing to be purchased, the plain purpose being to make his act dependent upon the personal opinion of his legal adviser, the sole requirement is that such legal adviser in fact pass upon the subject and give his honest opinion, and the merits of an honest opinion actually given are not subject to review. Thurman v. City of Omaha, 64 Neb. 490 (90 N. W. 253).

308. (1902.) The cases in which the courts insist that the opinion or decision subject to which a purchase is made, must be reasonable and well founded, as well as honest, are those in which the contract is for performance of labor in lines not necessarily involving personal taste and opinion, so that any competent person could arrive at a satisfactory determination. Thurman v. City of Omaha, 64 Neb. 490 (90 N. W. 253).

Approval or decision of architect or engineer.

309. (1875.) Where a building contract provides that the work shall be done under the direction and supervision of an architect "to be testified by a certificate or writing under his hand," such architect is thereby constituted sole arbiter between the parties, and by his certificate, stating "balance due in full of contract price," the owner of the building is bound, no fraud being alleged or proven. In such a case evidence offered to show the character and quality of the materials furnished, and a subsequent certificate stating that the architect could not without detriment to his reputation "sign a certificate for the work being done in accordance with the plans and specifications," is admissible. Mercer v. Harris, 4 Neb. 77.

310. (1877.) Where a building contract provides that the work shall be done to the satisfaction of the architect, such architect is the sole arbiter between the parties; but if the owner avers that such agreement was procured by collusion and conspiracy between the builder and architect to cheat and defraud him, evidence tending to show such conspiracy is admissible. School District v. Randall, 5 Neb. 408.

311. (1890.) Where a contract for the construction of a canal provided for monthly payments of 80 per cent of contract price on amounts estimated by the engineer of the canal company to have been completed, the company is bound by the estimate of the engineer and cannot afterwards claim that work on which he had made his estimate and for which the 80 per cent payment had been made, was in fact not completed. Price v. Kearney Canal & W. S. Co., 29 Neb. 33 (45 N. W. 252).

312. (1892.) A provision in a building contract, that the value of changes made in the building is to be estimated by the architect and shall be final, is conclusive on the parties if the agreement is carried out in good faith. Anderson v. Imhoff, 34 Neb. 335 (51 N. W. 854).

Delay in performance.

313. (1877.) Where a day certain is fixed within which the consideration is to be paid, performance or a tender thereof must be made within the time, or the seller will not be bound. Horacek v. Keebler, 5 Neb. 355.

www.libtool.com.cn

Excuses for delay in performance.

314. (1888.) Where a party entered into a contract with a contractor for the erection of a dwelling-house for a son-in-law of the former, the work to be completed by a day named, and there was testimony tending to show that such party had assured the contractor while the work was being performed that "no damages if it is not done according to the time specified," and there was no proof that the son-in-law wished to occupy the dwelling before the time of its completion, held, that a jury was justified in returning no damages for the delay. Erskine v. Johnson, 23 Neb. 261 (36 N. W. 510).

315. (1888.) Where a contract is entered into between an owner and contractor for the erection of a dwelling-house according to certain plans and specifications prepared by an architect named, the work to be under the supervision and control of such architect and performed to his satisfaction, and it is found that a mistake has been made in the plans and specifications, by reason of which changes are necessary at an increased expense, and are made by the direction of such architect in order to enable the contractor to complete his contract, the owner will be liable to such contractor for the extra cost, although probably as between the owner and the architect the latter will be liable. Erskine v. Johnson, 23 Neb. 261 (36 N. W. 510).

316. (1890.) A building contract provided for the completion of the building by a specified date, "provided there be no interference from labor strikes." It was held, that the fact that the mechanics quit work upon the building on account of the contractor failing to pay them their wages as agreed, did not release the contractor from completing the building by the time agreed upon. McLeod v. Genius, 31 Neb. 1 (47 N. W. 473).

Excuses for non-performance.

317. (1883.) Where a contractor agrees to erect a building in a certain manner, he must comply with his agreement; and no plea of lack of skill of himself or any of his workmen or subcontractors will constitute a defense for a failure to comply with the contract. Sherman v. Bates, 15 Neb. 18 (16 N. W. 831).

318. (1890.) Where a contractor agrees with the owner of a building to place therein pipes, radiators, etc., the owner to furnish the boiler, and the latter is unfit for the use intended, the defect cannot be charged to the contractor, who is entitled to recover for the labor and material where the same conform to the contract. Knutzen v. Hansen, 28 Neb. 591 (44 N. W. 1065).

319. (1892.) No exceptions were taken to the instructions nor any ruling of the court on the trial, and it being admitted that the defendants below had failed to comply with their contract to lay out and open a public road, the building of a railway on the proposed route will not relieve them from the payment of damages for the failure to perform. Kingsley v. Butterfield, 35 Neb. 228 (52 N. W. 1101).

320. (1895.) Where a contractor partially erected a building and received payments as the work progressed, owners who agreed to keep the building insured to the extent of their interest are not, after a loss by fire, released from that agreement on the ground they could not procure a responsible company to write insurance to the extent of their interest. Gallagher v. St. Patrick's Church, 45 Neb. 535 (63 N. W. 864).

——— Breach or non-performance by other party.

321. (1899.) Where stipulations of parties are dependent, and to be performed concurrently, mutual readiness to perform is an essential prerequisite to performance. Frenzer v. Dufrene, 58 Neb. 432 (78 N. W. 719).

Discharge by impossibility of performance.

Act of God as releasing carrier from liability for loss of live stock, see Carriers, §§ 139-141.

Floods and high water as defense for failure to perform contract, see Carriers, § 82.

322. (1901.) A party is not released from his obligation to A because B has, by injunction or otherwise, prevented him from performing that obligation. State v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 61 Neb. 545 (85 N. W. 556).

323. (1904.) The parties to a contract, which is legal and possible of performance when made, will be discharged, if it afterwards becomes impossible by act of God or is made illegal by ordinance of the state.

School District No. 16 v. Howard, 5 Unof. 340 (98 N. W. 666).

324. (1904.) The general rule is that where the law interposes to prevent the performance of a contract, but such prohibition is for an indefinite or limited time, performance of the contract will be suspended while the law is in force but the parties will not be discharged from its performance. Whether this rule applies to a contract for personal service not determined. School District No. 16 v. Howard, 5 Unof. 340 (98 N. W. 666).

325. (1906.) Death or disability, which renders the performance of a contract of attorney and client impossible, annuls the contract. Corson v. Lewis, 77 Neb. 446 (109 N. W. 735).

Declaration of intention not to perform.

326. (1894.) A mere declaration by a party to a contract, before performance is due, that he does not intend to comply with the terms of his agreement, will not constitute a breach so as to authorize the other party to maintain an action for damages before the time fixed for performance has elapsed. Carstens v. McDonald, 38 Neb. 858 (57 N. W. 757).

327. (1898.) An action for a breach of executory contract cannot be maintained upon a mere declaration by the other party, before performance is due, that he does not intend to comply with the terms of his agreement. King v. Waterman, 55 Neb. 324 (75 N. W. 830).

328. (1904.) A mere declaration by a party to a contract, before performance thereunder is due, that he does not intend to carry out the terms thereof, will not constitute a breach so as to authorize the other to at once maintain an action; for the party, at any time before the period fixed for performance, has the right to recant and comply with his agreement; but if he fails to withdraw his declaration before the time comes for performance, it will excuse that default of the other party. Hixson Map Co. v. Nebraska Post Co., 5 Unof. 388 (98 N. W. 872).

Substantial performance.

329. (1886.) Where, in an action on a contract to dig a well, the testimony shows a substantial compliance with the terms of the contract as to the quantity of water to be produced, a verdict for the contract price will not be disturbed. Woodworth v. Hammond, 19 Neb. 215 (27 N. W. 106).

330. (1891.) In an action upon a contract to exterminate the prairie dogs upon a certain tract of land, there having been a substantial compliance with the terms of the contract, the plaintiff was entitled to recover. Craig v. Weitner, 33 Neb. 484 (50 N. W. 442).

Waiver of defects and objections.

331. (1873.) Where under a contract whereby defendants were to furnish certain machinery and material for the erection of a dam, but failed to so do within the contract time, plaintiff accepts the delivery of material after the time for the delivery had expired, and completes the dam, he cannot recover back money advanced, there being no rescission of the contract. Holmes v. Wilhite, 3 Neb. 147.

332. (1876.) Waiver is an intentional relinquishment of a known right, and there must be both knowledge of the existence of the right and an intention to relinquish it. Livesey v. Omaha Hotel Co., 5 Neb. 50.

333. (1877.) Where a party has knowledge of the inferior character of seed before he sows the same, the party furnishing the seed is not liable for damages resulting to either the crop or land in consequence of the use of such inferior seed. Oliver v. Hawley, 5 Neb. 439.

334. (1886.) Where a contract to dig a well that should produce a certain quantity of water, and the party doing the work measured the water, which was not in strict compliance with the contract, a failure of the other party to make such measurement is a waiver of that part of the contract. Woodworth v. Hammond, 19 Neb. 215 (27 N. W. 106).

335. (1895.) Where the owner of the building knew that the furnace put in by defendant was so constructed as to imperil the building and continued to use the furnace without having it repaired in such a manner as to obviate the danger, he could not recover from the person constructing the furnace the value of the property destroyed by a resulting fire. Uhlig v. Barnum, 43 Neb. 584 (62 N. W. 549).

336. (1895.) Where the owner of a building permitted the contractor to continue work thereon after the contract time for completing it had expired, he thereby recognized the contract as still in force, and hence the obligation on his part to keep the building insured, as required by the contract, still continued. Gallagher v.

St. Patrick's Church, 45 Neb. 535 (63 N. W. 864).

337. (1901.) Where one agrees to buy of another all that part of a crop to be raised which reaches a certain standard as to quality, and he accepts a part of the crop, he may refuse the remainder if it falls below such standard, even though a part of those accepted fell below it and he had full knowledge thereof. Norfolk Beet Sugar Co. v. Berger, 1 Unof. 151 (95 N. W. 336).

Partial performance.

Sufficiency of pleading to sustain recovery on quantum meruit, see post, §§ 427, 428.

338. (1880.) Where a contract is entire and indivisible and payment is to be made after full performance, no action can be maintained on part performance. McMillan v. Malloy, 10 Neb. 228 (4 N. W. 1004; 35 Am. St. Rep. 471).

339. (1880.) Where a contract is susceptible of division and its entirety has been destroyed by part performance, from which the other party has derived a benefit, the law raises an implied promise to pay to the extent of the benefit received; and an action may be maintained thereon after the time has expired for the completion of the contract. McMillan v. Malloy, 10 Neb. 228 (4 N. W. 1004; 35 Am. Rep. 471).

340. (1880.) Where a person contracts to thresh the whole of another's crop of grain at a certain price per bushel, but, after threshing about one-third, refused to further carry out his contract, the part performance being beneficial to the employer, the employee may recover for the value of his labor less the damage done the other by reason of the breach of the contract. McMillan v. Malloy, 10 Neb. 228 (4 N. W. 1004; 35 Am. Rep. 471).

341. (1894.) An employee is entitled to compensation for services rendered in part performance of a contract and profits to be made where his offer to complete has been rejected by his employer. Roberts v. Drehmer, 41 Neb. 306 (69 N. W. 911).

342. (1894.) Where a contractor agrees with the owner of real estate to furnish the material and labor and erect for him an improvement thereon and the owner rightfully terminates the same by virtue of some provision authorizing him to do so upon the happening of certain contingencies, then the contractor is entitled to recover from the owner the actual benefit he has received from the contractor's partial performance. Von Dorn v. Mengedoht, 41 Neb. 525 (59 N. W. 800).

343. (1896. (Where one contracts to sink a tubular well of a certain size until a certain flow of water per hour is had, the contractor to furnish all the pipes and fittings, at a stipulated price per foot, but not to exceed 500 feet in depth, and the right to stop the work is reserved, and a notice to stop work is given, the contractor may recover for the number of feet completed as to dimensions, casing, etc., in accordance with the contract. Omaha Consolidated Vinegar Co. v. Burns, 49 Neb. 229 (68 N. W. 492).

344. (1896.) Under a contract to sink a tubular well to furnish a certain flow of water per hour, it not being provided that such a flow of water be obtained as a condition precedent to defendant's right to compensation for labor and material furnished, the contract is enforceable, notwithstanding a failure to produce the required quantity of water. Omaha Consolidated Vinegar Co. v. Burns, 49 Neb. 229 (68 N. W. 492).

345. (1899.) Where in a contract there are several undertakings, each supported by a distinct consideration, the contract is generally severable, and suit may be brought on one undertaking without showing plaintiff's compliance with the whole contract. Burwell v. Wilson, 57 Neb. 396 (77 N. W. 762).

346. (1906.) A contract for potatoes in car-load lots at an agreed price per bushel for all that may be loaded during the week, under which the seller has loaded and shipped four car-loads, is entire in the sense that either party had the right to a full performance. Peycke v. Shinn, 76 Neb. 364 (107 N. W. 386).

347. (1906.) If the party to an entire contract for personal services, who is to render the service, becomes, by reason of physical disability, through no fault of his own, unable to perform the same, the contract is discharged, but he may recover the reasonable value of his services rendered upon a quantum meruit. Corson v. Lewis, 77 Neb. 449 (114 N. W. 281).

Offer of performance.

348. (1899.) The doctrine of tender, as understood in cases where the relation of debtor and creditor exists, is not applicable to mutual and concurrent promises. In this class of cases a party who has signified his readiness and willingness to perform has done all that he is required to do, until the other party is also ready and willing to perform his part of the agreement. Frenzer v. Dufrene, 58 Neb. 432 (78 N. W. 719).

349. (1904.) The law does not require vain things and a formal tender, either of money or property, is never required where it appears that if made it would have been futile. Lapham v. Bossemeyer Bros., 5 Unof. 343 (98 N. W. 699).

350. (1906.) When no other place is specified in a contract for a tender, the law will presume that the tender should be made at the place of the contract; but an unconditional refusal to accept the tender at any place waives the necessity for a technical tender at the place of the contract. Hefner v. Robert, 76 Neb. 192 (107 N. W. 258).

Rights and liabilities on breach.

351. (1890.) When a contractor omits to furnish materials called for by his contract, he is liable therefor in damages to the owner. McLeod v. Genius, 31 Neb. 1 (47 N. W. 473).

——— Mutual breach.

352. (1881.) In an action to recover damages for breach of contract by the defendant, if the plaintiff himself is in inexcusable default, he cannot recover. Reynolds v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., 11 Neb. 186 (7 N. W. 737).

353. (1894.) One who refuses to perform the conditions imposed upon him by the terms of a contract cannot recover for a breach thereof by the other party. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Cochran, 42 Neb. 531 (60 N. W. 894); (1897) Hale v. Sheehan, 52 Neb. 184 (71 N. W. 1019).

354. (1895.) In a suit to recover money paid by plaintiffs to a contractor as work progressed on a church building destroyed by fire before completion, the sureties on the contractor's bond are not liable, where the owners of the building violated a provision of the contract requiring them to keep the property insured to the extent of their interest, although the fire was caused by the contractor's negligence. Gallagher v. St. Patrick's Church, 45 Neb. 535 (63 N. W. 864).

355. (1905.) Law will not aid a party to recover damages for the breach of a contract, where the failure to comply with the contract was his own. Apking v. Hoefer, 74 Neb. 325 (104 N. W. 177).

Restraining performance or breach.

356. (1898.) An agreement in partial restraint of trade, which is not within the inhibition of the statute, is valid and may in a proper case be enforced by injunction. Downing v. Lewis, 56 Neb. 386 (76 N. W. 900).

357. (1900.) An injunction will not lie to enjoin the breach of a contract where the party complaining has a plain and adequate remedy at law. Wabaska Electric Co. v. City of Wymore, 60 Neb. 199 (82 N. W. 626).

358. (1903.) A court of equity will not enjoin the further execution of a contract and enjoin the prosecution of any claim for compensation for work and material already furnished in good faith under it, except on condition of the payment of a fair value for the work and material so furnished. Clark v. County of Lancaster, 69 Neb. 717 (96 N. W. 593).

359. (1903.) Where defendant was proceeding under color of a lawful contract, the institution of an action to enjoin further proceedings under it, and the ordering of a temporary injunction on condition of the furnishing of a bond, which is not given, do not necessarily deprive the subsequent proceedings of defendant under the contract of their good faith and color of lawfulness. Clark v. County of Lancaster, 69 Neb. 717 (96 N. W. 593).

360. (1905.) A valid agreement in restraint of trade must be established by clear and satisfactory proof to warrant a court in restraining its breach by injunction. Roberts v. Lemont, 73 Neb. 365 (102 N. W. 770).

360*a*. (1907.) The breach of an oral contract by one of the parties will not be restrained, where the terms of the contract are in doubt, or so indefinite and uncertain that a court would not decree specific performance thereof. Platte County Independent Telephone Co. v. Leigh Independent Telephone Co., 80 Neb. 46 (116 N. W. 511).

Right of action.

Right of action on illegal contract, see ante, §§ 149-157.

Right of action or defense by person not a party to contract, see ante, §§ 203-209.

362. (1906.) To entitle one to recover in an action in damages for the breach of a contract, he must show that the wrong done and the injury sustained bear toward each other the relation of cause and effect. The damages which one has sustained to entitle him to recover must be the natural and proximate consequence of the wrongful act complained of. Bahr v. Manke, 77 Neb. 552 (110 N. W. 300).

Accrual of right of action.

Declaration of intention not to perform as giving right of action, see ante, §§326-328.

363. (1877.) If a condition or promise is to perform some act for the plaintiff's benefit, the neglect to perform the act is a breach of the contract, and will give an immediate right of action. Gregory v. Hartley, 6 Neb. 356.

364. (1892.) One who has hauled lumber for a person who had contracted to furnish such lumber to the government, may bring suit for his compensation as soon as the hauling is completed, and in the absence of an agreement to that effect need not wait until the contractor has received his pay for the lumber. Fransen v. Eller, 34 Neb. 664 (52 N. W. 284).

365. (1895.) H. agreed to furnish to G. a designated herd of cattle on the 1st day of May, to be cared for and herded by the latter during the ensuing season at a stipulated rate per head. On May 13, H. having refused to furnish said cattle or any of them, an action for damage was brought by G. on the said contract. Held, That the action was not premature. Hamilton v. Goff, 45 Neb. 339 (63 N. W. 807).

366. (1903.) A contract by the lender of money to use the money to pay off an existing note and mortgage and to save the borrower harmless, is an undertaking to indemnify the borrower against such note and mortgage and no cause of action accrues until the borrower has been damnified by reason of the note and mortgage against which he was indemnified. O'Connor v. Ætna Life Ins. Co., 67 Neb. 129 (99 N. W. 845).

367. (1903.) By a contract to pay off and discharge a note and mortgage by the lender of money borrowed for that purpose, there is an absolute undertaking to pay the debt and upon a failure thereof a cause of action at once accrues in favor of the borrower or his legal representatives. O'Connor v. Ætna Life Ins. Co., 67 Neb. 129 (99 N. W. 845).

368. (1906.) An express repudiation and denial of a contract to divide the profits of a land purchase by the party having the title will give rise to a cause of action at law for damages. Rice v. Parrott, 76 Neb. 501 (107 N. W. 840).

Limitation of action.

369. (1899.) An action to recover on an implied assumpsit is barred at the expiration of four years after the cause of action arose. Markey v. School District No. 18, 58 Neb. 479 (78 N. W. 932).

Defenses.

370. (1891.) A party who refuses to perform a contract for a stated reason, cannot, after suit commenced, be heard to adopt a different reason. Ballou v. Sherwood, 32 Neb. 666 (49 N. W. 790; 50 N. W. 1131).

371. (1895.) If parties to a contract agree that if a dispute arises between them that such dispute shall be submitted to arbitration, refusal to arbitrate or no arbitration is not a defense to an action brought on such contract by one of the parties thereto, as to the effect of such agreement is to oust the courts of their jurisdiction, and is contrary to public policy and therefore void. National Masonic Accident Ass'n v. Burr, 44 Neb. 256 (62 N. W. 466).

372. (1895.) A cause of action arising upon contract may properly be pleaded by way of set-off in an action for damages. Jones v. Driscoll, 46 Neb. 575 (65 N. W. 194).

373. (1897.) A defendant cannot object that the description by which the contract sued upon was entered into by plaintiff is not a sufficiently full description of such plaintiff and of the capacity in which he brings his action. Eiseley v. Taggart, 52 Neb. 658 (72 N. W. 1039).

Parties.

374. (1898.) In a suit on a joint contract, all who are jointly liable should be joined as defendants, and if service of summons cannot be had upon all, the action may proceed against those served. Perkins County v. Miller, 55 Neb. 141 (75 N. W. 577).

www.libtool.com.cn

375. (1905.) If a defendant admits by answer or demurrer that he entered into a contract with plaintiffs by an associate name in which the suit is brought, such admission, without further explanation, is equivalent to an admission that the plaintiffs have sufficient capacity to bind and to be bound by the instrument, and to enforce the same in the contract name. Miller v. Loverene & Browne Co., 74 Neb. 557 (105 N. W. 84).

Joinder of causes of action.

376. (1899.) Two causes of action on two separate contracts cannot be united in one petition unless each cause of action affects all parties made defendants. Barry v. Wachosky, 57 Neb. 534 (77 N. W. 1080).

376*a*. (1907.) A petition which seeks a recovery for several breaches of one contract states but one cause of action, and is not subject to a motion to separately state and number. Haurigan v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 80 Neb. 132 (113 N. W. 983).

Petition.

Requisite and sufficiency of pleading damage, see Damages, §§ 118-124.

Necessity of pleading statute under which city executed, see Municipal Corporations. § 287.

377. (1886.) Where in an action on a written contract a copy of the contract is attached and referred to in the petition, a statement of the terms of the contract in the body of the petition will not be stricken out, on motion, as redundant nor as irrelevant matter. Post v. Garrow, 18 Neb. 682 (26 N. W. 580).

378. (1886.) Where the conditions of a contract have been altered by the consent of the parties, the contract as modified should be set out in the petition, and then an allegation of performance may be made. Such modified contract should not be set up in the reply if inconsistent with the allegations of the petition. Evarts v. Smucker, 19 Neb. 41 (26 N. W. 596).

379. (1891.) Where a motion to require a copy of a contract to be attached to a petition is sustained, but the order is not complied with until after the time fixed by the court, defendant should be notified when the copy is filed. Taylor v. Trumbull, 32 Neb. 508 (49 N. W. 375).

380. (1891.) In an action for breach of contract, the petition sets up the terms of the contract, avers performance on the part of the plaintiffs of the conditions to be performed on their part, and alleges non-performance by the defendant of the stipulations on his part to be kept and performed. Held, Sufficient as against a demurrer. Bryan v. Barton, 32 Neb. 613 (49 N. W. 331).

381. (1894.) In pleading a contract which need not by common law be in writing, but where a writing is required by a positive statute, it is not necessary to plead that the contract was written, a least where no objection is made by motion to the certainty of the pleading. York Park Building Ass'n v. Barnes, 39 Neb. 834 (58 N. W. 440).

382. (1894.) A petition describing in ordinary and concise language the contract sued on and alleging compliance therewith is sufficient after trial of issues framed without question as to the sufficiency of the description. Darst v. Perfect 42 Neb. 574 (60 N. W. 928).

383. (1897.) A breach of the contract on which an action is based must be pleaded in the petition. Hudelson v. First Nat. Bank of Tobias, 51 Neb. 557 (71 N. W. 304).

384. (1900.) Petition examined, and held to state a cause of action for damages for breach of contract for non-performance and failure to comply with its terms, and held that it does not contain essential averments necessary in order to construe it as a petition for a rescission of the contract and recovery of the consideration paid Alfree Mfg. Co. v. Grape, 59 Neb. 777 (82 N. W. 11).

385. (1902.) A pleading should state the ultimate fact alleged to exist, and not the evidence by which that fact may be proved. It is proper therefore to allege in a petition that a contract was entered into by the defendant, although the proof may be that he made the contract through the medium or instrumentality of an agent. Blotcky v. Miller, 3 Unof. 344 (91 N. W. 523).

386. (1903.) When it does not clearly appear on the fact of the petition that the contract declared on is void because of illegality, it is error to sustain an objection to the introduction of plaintiff's evidence on that ground. Horton v. Rohlff, 69 Neb. 95 (95 N. W. 36).

387. (1904.) Petition examined, and held sufficient to withstand a demurrer except for the fact that the letters alleged to constitute the contract are not shown or alleged to have been signed. Bradley & Co. v. Bower, 5 Unof. 542 (99 N. W. 490).

388. (1906.) In an action to recover the contract price of a book that under the contract plaintiff agreed to prepare and reserve for defendant, it is not necessary to allege acceptance of the order and preparation of such book. Harris v. Paine, 76 Neb. 523 (107 N. W. 748).

389. (1906.) A petition alleging the making of a verbal building contract and partial performance thereof by the plaintiff, and claiming damages on account of defendant's failure to perform the same, is not subject to demurrer because it fails to allege the time within which the contract was to be performed. Stansbury v. Storer, 77 Neb. 67 (108 N. W. 162).

——— Allegation as to performance of happening of conditions precedent.

390. (1876.) In an action upon a contract containing a condition precedent, the plaintiff must aver performance to show a cause of action against the defendant Livesey v. Omaha Hotel Co., 5 Neb. 50.

391. (1876.) To maintain an action upon a contract without performance, the plaintiff must aver all the facts necessary to show a waiver of the condition precedent and fix the defendant's liability without such performance. Livesey v. Omaha Hotel Co., 5 Neb. 50.

392. (1876.) In an action upon contract the plaintiff must aver performance of all the conditions precedent in the contract to be performed on his part, in order to constitute a cause of action against the defendant, unless he states in his petition all the necessary averments which will take the case out of the general rule, and fix the defendant's liability without such full performance on his part. Estabrook v. Omaha Hotel Co., 5 Neb. 76; (1876) Boehme v. Omaha Hotel Co., 5 Neb. 80.

393. (1898.) Where the promise of a party to pay the debt of another is expressly contingent upon the happening of a certain event, the happening of such event must be alleged and proved to render the promisor liable. Husenetter v. Gullikson, 55 Neb. 32 (75 N. W. 41).

394. (1899.) In suing on a contract consisting of reciprocal promises, to be concurrently performed, the plaintiff must allege either performance an his part or a tender of performance before suit brought. Burwell v. Wilson, 57 Neb. 396 (77 N. W. 762); (1904) Lapham v. Bossemeyer Bros., 5 Unof. 343 (98 N. W. 699).

395. (1902.) A petition, based on a contract which fails to allege performance on the part of the plaintiff, or facts showing a valid excuse for non-performance, is fatally defective. Deering & Co. v. Claypool, 2 Unof. 520 (89 N. W. 373).

——— Sufficiency in actions on particular contracts.

396. (1879.) A petition alleging that defendant contracted to cut plaintiff's crop of wheat at an agreed price per acre; and when the grain was ripe plaintiff notified defendant of the fact, but the defendant "refused to cut plaintiff's wheat as he had agreed and contracted, whereby said wheat was damaged and wasted," state a good cause of action, and a general demurrer was properly overruled. Kelley v. Peterson, 9 Neb. 76 (2 N. W. 346).

397. (1881.) In an action for the price of breaking under a contract for the conveyance of real estate when title should be acquired under the United States homestead law, and providing for part payment in breaking prairie at $2.50 per acre, the breaking to be paid for in cash if the land was not conveyed, the petition must state the failure to convey. Simmons v. Yurann, 11 Neb. 516 (9 N. W. 690).

398. (1888.) A petition, on account for labor performed in the construction of a building under a certain contract, which alleges the execution of a contract, the performance of the labor thereunder by the plaintiff, the acceptance of the work by defendant, and the amount due thereon, with the usual prayer for judgment, held to state a cause of action, when assailed by demurrer. Davenport v. Jenning, 25 Neb. 87 (40 N. W. 952).

399. (1893.) A petition that alleges plaintiff to have been in the employe of defendant's assignor and that there was owing him a sum certain as wages, and a purchase of the business, a livery stable, by defendant who agreed to pay plaintiff; that this agreement was omitted from an instrument in the form of a receipt, states a cause of action against the defendant. Barnett v. Pratt, 37 Neb. 349 (55 N. W. 1056).

400. (1894.) In an action for the breach of a contract not to use certain premises for hotel purposes for a specified period of time, the petition examined and held error to sustain a motion for a judgment on the pleadings for defendant. Mollyneaux v. Wittenberg, 39 Neb. 547 (58 N. W. 205).

401. (1897.) Averments that plaintiff, "replying upon said representations of the defendant" on a certain day entered into an agreement in writing for the sale of real estate, and relying upon said representations plaintiff conveyed the property in pursuance to said contract, states a cause of action for deceit. Griswold v. Hazels. 52 Neb. 64 (71 N. W. 972).

402. (1902.) On action brought to compel specific performance of a contract to maintain a structure of a certain description, the defendant, on the trial, tendered to the plaintiff payment of the money, which the defendant might, in the first instance, have paid in lieu of the work to be done. Held, That this was an admission that the contract had been made as claimed by the plaintiff, and defendant could not thereafter complain that the plaintiff's petition was defective or his evidence insufficient to establish the contract. Gloe v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 65 Neb. 680 (91 N. W. 547).

Answer.

403. (1903.) The plea of duress as a defense to an action upon a contract is sufficient if it shows that, by reason of threats or other unlawful means, the defendant was deprived of his free will and understanding, and that the contract sued upon was not his free and voluntary act. Nebraska Mutual Bond Ass'n v. Klee, 70 Neb. 383 (97 N. W. 476).

404. (1902.) Where both parties allege a contract voidable at the pleasure of the postmaster general, and avoided by him, a counter-claim of damages on account of such avoidance which fails to state that it was caused by the default of the other party presents no ground of recovery. Stillings v. Van Alstine, 2 Unof. 684 (89 N. W. 756).

405. (1903.) An anaswer which sets forth a contemporaneous agreement varying the terms of a writen contract which is the subject of the suit, but from which it does not appear, either expressly or by necessary intendment, that such agreement was oral, is not obnoxious to a general demurrer. Tablet & Ticket Co. v. Le Feber, 4 Unof. 105 (93 N. W. 414).

406. (1903.) Fraud must be specifically alleged and the fraudulent motive charged in the answer; otherwise the answer will be insufficient to lay the basis for the introduction of testimony. Bauer v. Taylor, 4 Unof. 701 (96 N. W. 268). [Modified on rehearing. 4 Unof. 710.]

Reply.

407. (1892.) In an action on a building contract, for extra material furnished and work performed by the contractor, the answer was, that there was a stipulation in the contract that the same was to be estimated by the architect and such estimate had been made and the amount thereof tendered. The reply was, in substance, that the architect by collusion and fraud had refused to make proper estimates, etc. Held, That a motion to make the reply definite and certain, was properly overruled. Anderson v. Imhoff, 34 Neb. 335 (51 N. W. 854).

Issues, proof and variance.

408. (1888.) Under the code of civil procedure a written contract is admissible in evidence under a general allegation that the party contracted, without indicating how. Hamilton v. Lau, 24 Neb. 59 (37 N. W. 688).

409. (1894.) A party whose cause of action is founded upon a written contract is limited as to his rights by the terms of such contract, and a recovery contrary thereto cannot be sustained. Patterson v. Murphy, 41 Neb. 818 (60 N. W. 1).

410. (1900.) Evidence tending to show that forfeiture was waived will not be considered where the question of waiver is not raised by the pleadings. Jewett v. Black, 60 Neb. 173 (82 N. W. 385).

411. (1901.) In an action to recover damages for negligence in threshing grain, an averment that the thresher represented he had a good machine and could, and would, do a good job, is immaterial and need not be established by proof. Van Nortwick v. Holbine, 62 Neb. 147 (86 N. W. 1057).

412. (1901.) An allegation of a contract with a party is supported by proof that the contract was made with his authorized agent. Hare v. Winterer, 1 Unof. 854 (96 N. W. 179).

413. (1901.) There is no variance between an allegation on a verbal contract and an unsigned memorandum of such contract alleged to have been made by the party charged at the time the contract was entered into, because such unsigned memorandum is not a written contract. Brown v. Silver, 2 Unof. 164 (96 N. W. 281).

414. (1902.) When, in an action for damages for the alleged breach of a contract, the petition misrecites the agreement in an important particular, but the answer gives a true recital thereof, which is accepted by the plaintiff as correct, and the action proceeds to trial and judgment in all respects as an action upon the contract set out in the answer, so that it is apparanent that the defendant has not been misled, the variance between the petition and the proof should, under section 138 of the code, be treated as immaterial. Chicago House-Wrecking Co. v. Stewart Lumber Co., 66 Neb. 835 (92 N. W. 1009).

415. (1902.) Where a written agreement alleged to have superseded prior verbal negotiations, is pleaded in a reply as a matter of defense to the allegations contained in the answer, evidence of fraud or mistake in procuring such agreement will be received without further pleading. Martens v. Pittock, 3 Unof. 770 (92 N. W. 1038).

——— Defenses which must be specially pleaded.

416. (1872.) The fraud need not be specially pleaded in order to admit proof of it. Franklin v. Kelley, 2 Neb. 79.

417. (1884.) If, in an action upon a contract, fair and legal on its face, it is claimed by the defendant that the contract is void as being illegal and against public policy, such illegality must be pleaded or it will be disregarded by the court in which such action is pending. Atchison & N. R. Co. v. Miller, 16 Neb. 661 (21 N. W. 451).

418. (1892.) The unlawful purpose which it is claimed renders the contract illegal and void must be pleaded, and unless so pleaded, should not be submitted to the jury. Hellman v. Oliver, 35 Neb. 334 (53 N. W. 145).

419. (1893.) Where there is nothing on the face of a contract to suggest that it is founded upon an unlawful consideration the illegality thereof must, as a rule, be pleaded when relied upon as a defense. But if on the trial it is appearent from evidence material to the issues that the cause of action or defense rests upon an agreement contra bonos mores the court will of its own motion refuse to enforce such immoral agreement, even should both parties assent to its enforcement. Wilde v. Wilde, 37 Neb. 891 (56 N. W. 724).

420. (1896.) When suit is brought upon a contract, a general denial puts the making of the contract in issue, and the burden devolves upon the plaintiff of establishing it substantially as alleged. Rawlings v. Young Men's Christian Ass'n, 48 Neb. 216 (66 N. W. 1124).

421. (1909.) An affirmative defense to an action upon a contract should be pleaded. Denney v. Stout, 59 Neb. 731 (82 N. W. 18).

422. (1901.) In an action for the value of materials sold under a verbal contract the defendant may, under a general denial, prove that the contract on which the cause of action is based was made with, and the material sold to, a third party. Wiedeman v. Hedges, 63 Neb. 103 (88 N. W. 170).

423. (1903.) Where the defense relied on is the illegality of the contract used on it is necessary to plead and prove such defense. Horton v. Rohlff, 69 Neb. 95 (95 N. W. 36).

424. (1905.) Where a party to a contract inserts a provision exempting him from fulfilling because of a condition which may afterwards arise, he must, when sued for a breach of the contract, plead in defense the existence of the condition in order to have the advantage thereof. Omaha Feed Co. v. Rushforth, 75 Neb. 340 (106 N. W. 25).

425. (1906.) In an action for damages on account of an alleged breach of contract, evidence is admissible under a general denial to show that, in fact, no contract existed. Olsen v. Collins, 75 Neb. 749 (106 N. W. 784).

426. (1906.) In an action on an express contract the defendant may show under a general denial that the contract differed in terms from that pleaded, or that no contract was in fact made. Sorenson v. Townsend, 77 Neb. 499 (109 N. W. 749).

——— Recovery on quantum meruit.

Right of recovery on partial performance see ante, §§ 338-347.

427. (1893.) An action on a quantum meruit cannot be sustained by proof of a contract to pay an agreed price for the services, since a party is not allowed to allege in his petition one cause of action and prove another upon the trial. Imhoff v. House, 36 Neb. 28 (53 N. W. 1032).

428. (1893.) A party cannot recover upon a quantum meruit where he pleads and relies on the trial, solely upon a special contract. Powder River Live Stock Co. v. Lamb, 38 Neb. 339 (56 N. W. 1019); (1895) Mayer v. Ver Bryck, 46 Neb. 221 (64 N. W. 691); (1897) Dorrington v. Powell, 52 Neb. 440 (72 N. W. 587).

Presumptions.

429. (1894.) Our statute having abolished private seals it abolished at the same time their incidents, and an instrument in the form of a bond must be now deemed a simple contract not conclusively importing a consideration. Luce v. Foster, 42 Neb. 818 (60 N. W. 1027).

430. (1903.) It will not be presumed that the parties to a contract intended to provide for the doing of an illegal act, or one which would render their agreement void. Horton v. Rohlff, 69 Neb. 95 (95 N. W. 36).

431. (1904.) In the absence of fraud or imposition, persons of mature years and ordinary intelligence and education are presumed to have read the contracts executed by them, or to have otherwise made themselves acquainted with their contents. Bradley & Co. v. Basta, 71 Neb. 169 (98 N. W. 697).

432. (1905.) The possession of a written contract is prima facie evidence of its delivery, but the presumption of delivery arising from such possession may be explained or rebutted by oral evidence. Dodd v. Kemnitz, 74 Neb. 634 (104 N. W. 1069).

433. (1907.) In the absence of proof to the contrary, the constitution and laws in force in this state will be presumed to have been in force at the place of the making of of the contract which is in issue. Cook v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 78 Neb. 64 (110 N. W. 718).

Burden of proof.

434. (1881.) The burden is on defendant, sued for work and labor, to prove the allegation in his answer that such services were to be performed. Ewarth v. Nier, 11 Neb. 441 (9 N. W. 569).

435. (1885.) In a cross-action to require the execution of a mortgage, the agreement to execute it must be clearly proved. Pereau v. Frederick, 17 Neb. 117 (22 N. W. 235).

436. (1889.) In an action to recover on a contract to dig a well the answer consisting of a general denial, and also setting up that plaintiff had warranted a certain quantity of water and in case of failure nothing should be paid for the work done, the burden of proving such warranty was on the defendant. Johnson v. Bowman, 26 Neb. 745 (42 N. W. 754).

437. (1890.) Where a contract for the construction of a canal provided for monthly payments of 80 per cent. on estimates of work done, the balance being retained to insure a completition of the contract, the canal company could not off set its counter-claim for completing unfinished work against the reserved 20 per cent. earned by the contractor without establishing the amount and value of the work both completed and incomplete by the contractor as well as that finished by the company according to the terms of the contract. Price v. Kearney Canal & W. S. Co., 29 Neb. 33 (45 N. W. 252).

438. (1895.) One who predicates his right to relief upon the alleged performance by him of all the terms of a written contract must show a substantial compliance with each requirement thereof, where there has been neither a waiver nor acceptance of benefits thereunder by the other contracting party. Omaha Consolidated Vinegar Co. v. Burns, 44 Neb. 21 (62 N. W. 301). [Overruled on rehearing. 49 Neb. 229.]

439. (1897.) The burden of proving fraud or misrepresentation in the making of a contract is upon the party alleging it. Woods v. Hart, 50 Neb. 497 (70 N W. 53).

440. (1901.) Where one is dealing with an unlettered man, who can neither read nor write, and makes his mark to the instrument he executes, and there is testimony tending to show that he did not understand the contents of such paper, or that his signature was obtained by fraud, it is incumbent on the former to show by a preponderance of the evidence that the latter fully understood the object and import of the writing which he executed. Spelts & Klosterman v. Ward, 2 Unof. 177 (96 N. W. 56).

Admissibility of evidence.

Admissibility in evidence, see Evidence, §§ 319-326.

Admissibility in evidence of custom to interpret, see Customs and Usage, §§ 9-12.

441. (1875.) Where a building contract provides that the work shall be done under the direction and supervision of an architect "to be testified by a certificate or writing under his hand," such architect is thereby constituted sole arbiter between the parties, and by his certificate, stating "balance due in full of contract price," the owner of the building is bound, no fraud being alleged or proven. In such a case evidence offered to show the character and quality of the materials furnished, and a subsequent certificate stating that the architect could not without detriment to his reputation "sign a certificate for the work being done in accordance with the plans and specifications," is admissible. Mercer v. Harris, 4 Neb. 77.

442. (1876.) A paper offered in evidence to establish a tripartite contract, being signed by one party only, is inadmissible. Wilcox v. Saunders, 4 Neb. 569.

443. (1888.) Only as between the parties to the instrument, must an agreement stand as written, as to all others extrinsic evidence is admissible to show the real agreement. Rosewater v. Hoffman, 24 Neb. 222 (38 N. W. 857).

444. (1890.) Evidence of dealing of the parties, tending to show the contsruction which they had placed upon the contract, is admissible. Esterly Harvesting Machine Co. v. Veeder, 29 Neb. 664 (45 N. W. 1103).

445. (1890.) In an action for the removal of earth at twenty cents per cubic yard, one S. testified that he had cross-sectioned the work before the grading was done, and in substance that the measurements were accurate. A Mr. H. then testified that he and S. had made estimates from the data furnished by S., and from such data a certain number of cubic yards of earth had been removed. Held, That the evidence of H. was properly received. Clarke v. Williams, 29 Neb. 691 (46 N. W. 82).

446. (1890.) Where the engineers of the city have cross-sectioned certain grading to be done for the city, made estimates thereof and filed the same in the engineer's department, such estimates are admissible as prima facie evidence of the correctness of such estimates. Clarke v. Williams, 29 Neb. 691 (46 N. W. 82).

447. (1892.) Where a building is not erected within the time limited by the contract through the contractor's default or neglect, the owner is entitled to recover damages. In the trial of such a case it is not error for the owner to prove that the building had been leased for a stipulated sum, and that the tenant was to take possession as soon as the work was completed, when it is shown that the reasonable rental value exceeded the amount of rent reserved by the lease. Consaul v. Sheldon, 35 Neb. 247 (52 N. W. 1104).

448. (1893.) Where the parties to a verbal contract call in as witness a third person, and then carry on a part of their conversation in a foreign language, with which the witness is unfamiliar, such witness' evidence of the terms of the contract made is admissible, it appearing that both parties at the time knew his ignorance of such lanaguage, and it not appearing that any part of the agreement was made in that language. Roberson v. Reiter, 38 Neb. 198 (56 N. W. 877).

449. (1897.) Under a quantum meruit count for services rendered under a contract, the contract is admissible to prove the value of the services. The stated rates of compensation, if any, are competent evidence tending to show the reasonable value. Hibbard v. Wilson, 51 Neb. 436 (71 N. W. 65).

450. (1898.) In an action by a contractor to recover for repairs made to a building the rejection of an unrecorded lease, as showing a liability only against a tenant, held not error. Herzke v. Blake, 54 Neb. 465 (74 N. W. 959).

451. (1900.) In the trial of an action on a contract, where the answer is a general denial, it is not error to exclude evidence which has no tendency to disprove the averments of the petition. Denney v. Stout, 59 Neb. 731 (82 N. W. 18).

452. (1901.) Where the answer admits the execution of the contract sued on it is prejudicial error to receive evidence that such contract did not exist at the time the answer admits its execution. Faulkner v. Gilbert, 61 Neb. 602 (85 N. W. 843).

453. (1903.) A witness cannot be interrogated on his cross-examination as to the length of time it took him to perform another contract, different from and independent of the one which is the basis of the action. School District of Omaha v. McDonald, 68 Neb. 610 (94 N. W. 829).

454. (1903.) Where a written contract made the basis of an action is impeached by proper pleadings on the ground that it was procured by the fraud of the plaintiff, evidence is admissible in support of the fraudulent representations alleged. Bauer v. Taylor, 4 Unof. 701 (96 N. W. 268).

455. (1903.) The particular place where witness put an executed contract after set-

——— Parol evidence.

Evidence of contemporaneous parol agreement, see ante, §§ 250-258.

Evidence of parol agreement made prior to written contract, see ante, §§ 244-249.

456. (1873.) Parol evidence is admissible to supply an omission in a written contract, which, in case of a disagreement between the parties, would otherwise be ambiguous and wholly inexplicable. Goodrich v. McClary, 3 Neb. 123.

457. (1895.) It is competent for a party when sued upon a written contract to show by parol that he was induced to execute the contract by the fraud or material false representation of the party seeking to enforce it. Gerner v. Church, 43 Neb. 690 (62 N. W. 52).

458. (1895.) In an action on a written contract agreeing to donate a certain sum if an opera house of a certain size should be built, parol evidence that the donee agreed orally that the building should be of certain material, tends to contradict, rather than explain, the written contract, and hence is no admissible. Gerner v. Clark, 43 Neb. 690 (62 N. W. 52).

459. (1896.) It is not competent to change or vary the terms of a written contract by parol evidence. Stoner v. Keith County, 48 Neb. 279 (67 N. W. 311).

460. (1898.) Where negotiating parties reduce their agreement to writing, and sign and deliver the same, the writing, in absence of fraud, mistake, or ambiguity, constitutes the best and only competent evidence of the contract originally made. Sylvester v. Carpenter Paper Co., 55 Neb. 621 (75 N. W. 1092).

461. (1898.) A written contract, the meaning of which is certain and patent from its terms, may not be varied by direct explanation or interpretation in oral testimony. Latenser v. Misner, 56 Neb. 340 (76 N. W. 897).

462. (1902.) Doctrine as to inadmissibility of oral evidence to vary a contract has no application as between a party to it and a stranger where there appears no estoppel against showing the truth. Crockett v. Miller, 2 Unof. 292 (96 N. W. 491).

463. (1902.) A written building contract provided that the work was to be done according to certain plans and specifications to the satisfaction of one of the parties "in design, workmanship, and finish." The plans and specifications contained no details as to certain materials required, and nothing was specified as to where they were to be obtained. Held, That parol evidence was admissible to show that at the time the contract was made such party insisted that said materials must be obtained in the east, because he considered the eastern designs, workmanship and finish superior, and to show that a subsequent purchase of such materials in the east was in pursuance of the understanding when the contract was made and to comply with the requirements he was empowered to make by its express terms. Creedon v. Patrick, 3 Unof. 459 (91 N. W. 872).

464. (1903.) Oral testimony may be introduced for the purpose of explaining an ambiguity in a written instrument. Fidelity Mutual Fire Ins. Co. v. Murphy, 4 Unof. 578 (95 N. W. 702).

465. (1903.) Where the controversy is between a party to a written contract and one who is neither a party nor a privy to it, the rule excluding parol evidence tending to vary, modify or contradict the writing does not apply. First Nat. Bank of Wayne v. Tolerton & Stetson Co., 5 Unof. 43 (97 N. W. 248).

466. (1904.) Parol evidence cannot be received for the purpose of changing, modifying or explaining a clear, plain and unambiguous written agreement. Agnew v. Montgomery, 72 Neb. 9 (99 N. W. 820).

467. (1904.) If a written agreement is incomplete upon its face, parol evidence not in conflict therewith is admissible to supply its deficiencies. Bell v. Wiltson, 5 Unof. 486 (98 N. W. 1049).

468. (1905.) Where a contract of sale has been consummated by writing, the presumption is that the writing contains the whole contract, and, in the absence of fraud, mistake or ambiguity of expression in the contract itself, parol evidence is inadmissible to change or vary its terms. Apking v. Hoefer, 74 Neb. 325 (104 N. W. 177).

469. (1905.) The admission of oral evidence to explain the possession of and to prove that the delivery of a written contract was conditional, and that such delivery was not to become effective until the happening of some other event, is not a violation of the rule which would prohibit the introduction of oral evidence to contradict or vary the terms of the contract. Dodd v. Kemnitz, 74 Neb. 634 (104 N. W. 1069).

www.hbtool.com.cn

470. (1906.) If a written memorandum confirmatory of a previous oral agreement does not purport to recite the whole of the later, oral testimony is admissible to supply omitted covenants not inconsistent with the writing. De Laval Separator Co. v. Jelinek, 77 Neb. 192 (109 N. W. 169).

471. (1907.) The defense of fraud and want of consideration may be shown by parol, not to contradict or vary, but to destroy the legal and binding effect of a written contract. Minneapolis Threshing Machine Co. v. Otis, 78 Neb. 233 (110 N. W. 550).

472. (1907.) In the absence of ambiguity, and of fraud, accident or mistake, parol evidence is not admissible to assist in the interpretation of a written contract. Wheeler v. Moore, 78 Neb. 484 (111 N. W. 120).

Weight and sufficiency of evidence.

473. (1886.) Under the peculiar facts and circumstances of the case at bar, held, that the evidence which tended to prove plaintiff's claim for extra compensation for performing the work set out in the petition tended also to disprove and controvert defendants' counterclaim for damages alleged to have been sustained by them by reason of said work not having been performed in accordance with the terms of the original contract. Morrissey v. Schindler, 18 Neb. 672 (26 N. W. 476).

474. (1891.) Evidence examined, and held not sufficient to show that the plaintiff signed the contract under duress. Pryor v. Hunter, 31 Neb. 678 (48 N. W. 736).

475. (1892.) Where the defendant, in effecting a settlement of his claim against plaintiff, agrees to pay off a judgment against the plaintiff, evidence showing that a sum of money had been turned over to defendant, though denied by defendant, is sufficient to sustain a verdict for plaintiff in an action to recover such payment. Brecher v. Treitschke, 33 Neb. 699 (50 N. W. 1041).

476. (1892.) In action to recover compensation for hauling lumber evidence held to sustain finding for plaintiff. Fransen v. Eller, 34 Neb. 664 (52 N. W. 284).

477. (1894.) Proof of a defective compliance with the laws of congress as to acquiring right of way, without proof that the railway company had been evicted or required to yield possession, will not entitle it to recover damages against the party whose duty it was to procure the right of way. Fitzgerald v. Fitzgerald & Mallory Construction Co., 41 Neb. 374 (59 N. W. 838).

478. (1894.) One cold air box took fire and there was evidence tending to show that this was because the valves attached to a furnace put into the building by defendant were so arranged that air forced into the other box drove the hot air back into the one which ignited. The evidence tended to show that in so arranging the valves the owner followed the instructions given by those who sold the furnace and placed it in the building. Held, That the jury was justified in finding the owner had used the furnace in a reasonably prudent manner. Uhlig v. Barnum, 43 Neb. 584 (62 N. W. 549).

479. (1896.) Evidence tending to show that plaintiff made a proposition to defendant to raise the latter's store building, and, also, showing that there was no acceptance of the same, sustains a verdict for defendant in an action by plaintiff for damages for a breach of such contract by defendant. Kreamer v. Irwin, 46 Neb. 827 (65 N. W. 885).

480. (1896.) Defendant held not liable on a conditional agreement to pay plaintiff a certain sum upon completion of a contract with others. Barsby v. Warren, 47 Neb. 275 (66 N. W. 409).

481. (1898.) In an action by a mortgagor of several houses against the mortgagee for a balance alleged to be due on the contract, evidence held to sustain a verdict for plaintiff as against a defense that defendant was to retain the sum of $75 on each property until each purchaser thereof shall have paid off a certain part of the mortgage. Continental Building & Loan Ass'n v. Aulgur, 54 Neb. 115 (74 N. W. 405).

482. (1902.) Evidence examined, and held sufficient to sustain finding that the note in suit was given in consideration of plaintiff's promise not to prosecute one of the defendants for embezzlement. Smith Premier Typewriter Co. v. Mayhew, 65 Neb. 65 (90 N. W. 939).

483. (1902.) Testimony of a subscribing witness to an instrument that he recognizes his signature thereto and is acquainted with the parties, and, from that and his uniform practice not to witness any paper unless actually executed before him, he is satisfied and will testify that it was so executed, there being no showing to the contrary, is sufficient evidence of its execution. Cheston v. Wilson, 2 Unof. 674 (89 N. W. 764).

484. (1902.) Evidence and contract examined, and held that the construction given to the contract and the meaning ascribed to the word "proceeds" therein by the trial court, are reasonable and should be approved. Wheeler & Wilson Mfg. Co. v. Winnett, 3 Unof. 293 (91 N. W. 514).

485. (1904.) Evidence showing defendant signed the contract in suit, wherein she agreed to pay plaintiff a certain sum of money in consideration of his abandoning a prosecution of defendant's son for statutory rape, and consented to the marriage of his daughter to defendant's son, it appearing that the two were minors and had sustained an illicit relation with each other, sustains a judgment for plaintiff. Henry v. Dussell, 71 Neb. 691 (99 N. W. 484).

486. (1904.) In an action to recover on a contract whereby plaintiff was to cut standing timber on a tract of land belonging to defendant and deliver the same to defendant's saw mill in consideration of which the defendant agreed to convey the land so cleared to plaintiff, evidence of a settlement of plaintiff's claim after an abandonment of the work held not to sustain a verdict for plaintiff. Strong v. Eggert, 71 Neb. 813 (99 N. W. 647).

487. (1906.) Where one son of a testator appeared for the purpose of contesting the will, and an agreement between him and another brother is executed whereby the former withdraws such contest in consideration that the latter divide whatever of the property remains after the terms of the will have been fulfilled, evidence held sufficient to sustain a decree for plaintiff in an action for his portion under such agreement. Grochowski v. Grochowski, 77 Neb. 510 (112 N. W 335).

487*a*. (1908.) Evidence held to sustain finding that articles manufactured by plaintiff under an order to furnish them "as soon as possible" had been furnished in sufficient time to comply with the contract. Childs & Co. v. Omaha Paraphernalia House, 80 Neb. 673 (114 N. W. 941).

Questions for court or jury.

488. (1876.) If a condition precedent in the contract has not been fully performed on the part of the plaintiff, the question whether the defendant has or has not waived his legal rights and by his acts become estopped from denying his ability under the contract is one of fact, which is alone within the province of the jury. Estabrook v. Omaha Hotel Co., 5 Neb. 76.

489. (1876.) If waiver of the condition precedent by defendant is pleaded, then the question whether the defendant has or has not waived his legal rights and by his own acts become estopped from denying his liability under the contract is a question of fact, which is alone within the province of the jury. Boehme v. Omaha Hotel Co., 5 Neb. 80.

490. (1888.) Questions of fraud are for the jury to determine, in the light of the circumstances surrounding the transaction complained of, as shown by the testimony. Riley v. Melquist, 23 Neb. 474 (36 N. W. 657).

491. (1891.) The existence of the contract sued on is a question of fact. School District v. Foster, 31 Neb. 501 (48 N. W. 267).

492. (1892.) Where the architect whose estimate as to the value of changes, was to be final and conclusive, is charged in the pleadings with fraud, partiality, or other improper cause, whereby one of the parties has been defrauded, and there is testimony in support of such charges, the question is one for the jury to determine. Anderson v. Imhoff, 34 Neb. 335 (51 N. W. 854).

——— Construction of contract.

493. (1888.) While it is the province of the courts to construe contracts, yet where the meaning of a contract is obscure and depends upon facts aliunde in connection with the written language, the question of construction may be one of fact for the jury. Coquellard v. Hovey, 23 Neb. 622 (37 N. W. 479; 8 Am. St. Rep. 134).

494. (1894.) When a contract is to be construed by its terms alone, without the aid of extrinsic facts, it is the duty of the court to interpret it, and not for the jury. Simms v. Summers, 39 Neb. 781 (58 N. W. 43); (1897) Rosenthal v. Ogden, 50 Neb. 218 (69 N. W. 779); (1897) Meyer v. Shamp, 51 Neb. 424 (71 N. W. 57); (1902) Dillon v. Watson, 3 Unof. 530 (92 N. W. 156); (1898) Ricketts v. Rogers, 53 Neb. 477 (73

N. W. 946; (1898) Western Mfg. Co. v. Rogers, 54 Neb. 456 (74 N. W. 849); (1901) McCormick Harvesting Machine Co. v. Davis, 61 Neb. 406 (85 N. W. 390).

495. (1897.) If a written contract is to be construed with reference to its terms alone, it is the duty of the court to interpret it; but if the construction or application must depend upon other and extrinsic facts, the contract, in connection with these questions of fact, should be submitted to the jury, under proper instructions. Rosenthal v. Ogden, 50 Neb. 218 (69 N. W. 779); (1897) Meyer v. Shamp, 51 Neb. 424 (71 N. W. 57); (1902) Dillon v. Watson, 3 Unof. 530 (92 N. W. 156).

496. (1898.) Where, after a contract for sale of land was made, it was discovered that the vendor had no title to a small portion thereof, and, after a dispute, the contract was consummated, except that $250 of the purchase price was retained by the vendee, a written statement given to the vendor, "Mr. F. J. Rogers has left in my hands two hundred and fifty dollars to cover damages for a strip of land 130 feet wide and 1,000 feet long. * * * The condition of this contract is this. If Mr. F. J. Rogers makes A. D. Ricketts a good warranty deed for said strip of land, then the said Ricketts is to refund the $250 to Rogers," presents no reason for committing its interpretation to a jury. Ricketts v. Rogers, 53 Neb. 477 (73 N. W. 946).

497. (1898.) Where a written contract is the basis of an action and neither party asks for a reformation thereof, it is the duty of the court to ascertain its meaning and enforce it accordingly. Clark v. Hall, 54 Neb. 479 (74 N. W. 856).

498. (1898.) Where the answer to a petition for the recovery of damages for a breach of contract presents an equitable counter-claim which is traversed by a reply, the issues of fact thus arising are triable to the court without a jury. Hotaling v. Tecumseh Nat. Bank, 55 Neb. 5 (75 N. W. 242).

499. (1900.) Contradictory evidence as to the construction of an ambiguous contract, should be submitted to the jury. McCord-Brady Co. v. Moneyhan, 59 Neb. 593 (81 N. W. 608).

500. (1901.) When an action is predicated upon a written contract it is the duty of the court to construe the contract, but if the jury is fully instructed upon the issues generally, and no proper instruction construing the contract is requested, such failure to instruct is not reversible error. McCormick Harvesting Machine Co v. Carpenter, 1 Unof. 273 (95 N. W. 617).

501. (1902.) An instruction which submits the construction of a contract to a jury is erroneous. Hinman v. Austin Mfg. Co., 65 Neb. 187 (90 N. W. 934).

502. (1903.) Where a written contract requires extrinsic evidence to explain its terms, the interpretation to be given in view of such evidence is a question of fact. Haskell v. Read, 68 Neb. 107 (93 N. W. 997).

503. (1903.) In an action for breach of a contract where no evidence is introduced in support of the only defense properly pleaded, it is the duty of the court to construe the contract, and determine the measure of damages, and direct the jury to return a verdict accordingly. School District of Omaha v. McDonald, 68 Neb. 610 (94 N. W. 829).

504. (1904.) When the evidence as to the alleged breach of contract is all contained in letters which had passed between the parties, and there is no conflict as to what the letters show, it is for the court to determine the legal effect of such evidence and to so instruct the jury. Hixson Map Co. v. Nebraska Post Co., 5 Unof. 388 (98 N. W. 872).

Direction of verdict.

505. (1897.) In an action to recover damages against defendant for a breach of his contract to notify plaintiff where a certain tract of land would be sold on foreclosure of a first mortgage, plaintiff holding a second mortgage thereon, the only evidence being an unattested copy of a sheriff's return of the sale and the satisfying of the first lien only, such being incompetent, a direction of a verdict for defendant was proper. Westerman v. Sheppard, 52 Neb. 124 (71 N. W. 950).

506. (1902.) Where a breach of contract is established, the injured party is entitled, at least, to nominal damages, but his adversary cannot complain of an instruction which authorizes the jury to find in his favor if it is found that the breach has resulted in no damage Jones v. Wattles, 66 Neb. 533 (92 N. W. 765).

507. (1904.) Where, in an action on a contract, the defendant pleads illegality of consideration and duress, upon a return of a finding as to the two defenses pleaded adverse to the defendant, it is proper for the court to instruct the jury to find for the plaintiff, if, under the pleadings and the evidence, facts sufficient to show that the contract is upon a valid consideration appear uncontradicted. Henry v. Dussell, 71 Neb. 691 (99 N. W. 484.)

508. (1904.) When the assignment of a written contract, by a third person, to the plaintiff in an action, bears upon its back the general indorsement of such third person; and the undisputed evidence shows that the contract was delivered to plaintiff under such indorsement, and that the plaintiff is the owner thereof; and plaintiff actually has possession of such contract and produces it upon the trial, it is the duty of the court to instruct the jury, as a matter of law, that plaintiff is entitled to maintain the action, if a right of action in other respects exists. Hixson Map Co. v. Nebraska Post Co., 5 Unof. 388 (98 N. W. 872).

Instructions.

509. (1886.) Where there is evidence tending to prove a rescission of a contract an instruction stating the supposed facts of the case, and telling the jury that if they believed such facts from the evidence they should find for the defendant, is erroneous where the question of rescission is ignored in the instructions. McPherson v. Wiswell, 19 Neb. 117 (26 N. W. 916).

510. (1887.) In an action to recover for services as carpenter in erecting a building the instructions set out in the opinion, held to be correct. Driscoll v. Troughton, 22 Neb. 260 (34 N. W. 497).

511. (1889.) In an action to recover the contract price for digging a well, defended on the ground of a breach of a warranty as to the quantity of water to be procured, an instruction that if there was a warranty and breach thereof, but that if the plaintiff did not expressly agree that in case the well did not yield the quantity of water named in the answer, he would charge nothing therefor, and if the jury found the well was of any value the plaintiff's recovery should be the contract price less the amount it would cost to complete the well, was not erroneous as inapplicable to the evidence. Johnson v. Bowman, 26 Neb. 745 (42 N. W. 754).

512. (1893.) In a suit for balance due on account of pasturing cattle, the defendant pleaded settlement, counter-claim for damages sustained by loss of and injury to cattle on account of plaintiff's negligence. The instructions of the court to the jury on the subject of the defenses of settlement and counter-claim approved and set out at length in the opinion. Loomer v. Thomas, 38 Neb. 277 (56 N. W. 973).

513. (1899.) The existence of an alleged memorandum of agreement being one of the facts in issue, it was proper to instruct the jury that it might first determine whether the agreement ever in fact had an existence, and if not to drop it from further consideration. Summers v. Simms, 58 Neb. 579 (79 N. W. 155).

514. (1900.) An instruction to the effect that a waiver of provisions contained in a written instrument must be proved by evidence which is clear and unequivocal, is erroneous. McCord-Brady Co. v. Moneyhan, 59 Neb. 593 (81 N. W. 608).

515. (1900.) Instructions set out in the opinion held erroneous as giving action a double aspect, one for damages for breach of contract, and the other for a rescission thereof and the recovery of the purchase price. Alfree Mfg. Co. v. Grape, 59 Neb. 777 (82 N. W. 11).

516. (1902.) When evidence tends to show only a joint liability of parties sued jointly on a contract, it is error to instruct jury that finding may be against one or all. Sutherland v. Holliday, 65 Neb. 9 (90 N. W. 937).

517. (1902.) When, in an action for damages for an alleged breach of a contract, a party requests of the court alternatively two inconsistent instructions with respect to the interpretation of the agreement, and an example of what would constitute a breach thereof, and the court accepts and gives one of such requests and refuses the other, such party cannot complain that the court erred in making the refusal. By such conduct the party has said to the court, in effect, that he will be satisfied with either of such requests and will abide by the choice which the court shall make of them. Chicago House-Wrecking Co. v. Stewart Lumber Co., 66 Neb. 835 (92 N. W. 1009).

518. (1903.) Instructions as to the law of duress held proper. Nebraska Mutual Bond Ass'n v. Klee, 70 Neb. 383 (97 N. W. 476).

519. (1904.) Where plaintiff's claim is for services under an alleged contract of a certain date, and the evidence tends to show an offer to engage services at a fixed price at that time on defendant's part, and immediately afterwards a beginning of such services on plaintiff's part, with defendant's knowledge and with no retraction of the proposition, it is error to instruct the jury, in substance, that there can be no recovery unless an express agreement on both sides was reached at the time alleged. Pettis v. Green River Asphalt Co., 71 Neb. 513 (99 N. W. 235).

520. (1904.) If the issue of illegality of consideration and that of duress are properly submitted to the jury, upon which their verdict is adverse to defendant, it is not error to defendant that the court, instead of directing the jury to find for the plaintiff upon the issue of consideration, instructs the jury incorrectly as to what constitutes a valid consideration for the contract. Henry v. Dussell, 71 Neb. 691 (99 N. W. 484).

521. (1905.) In an action on a building contract, the issue being that by reason of interference by the owner the plaintiff was unable to complete the contract within the specified time, an instruction that amounted to a direction of a verdict on the evidence, after instructing that if the jury found such interference caused the delay to find for plaintiff, is erroneous. Havens v. Robertson, 75 Neb. 205 (106 N. W. 335).

Right to open and close.

522. (1894.) The plaintiff alleged the payment to a third person of specific sums of money for the benefit and at the request of the defendant. The answer made no denial of the allegations of the petition, but pleaded insanity as a defense. Held, That under this state of the issues the defendant was required to first introduce testimony and was entitled to the opening and closing of the case. Rea v. Bishop, 41 Neb. 202 (59 N. W. 555).

Damages.

Adequacy of recovery for breach, see Damages, § 108.

Duty to reduce loss on breach, see Damages, §§ 25-30.

523. (1894.) Where a breach, by defendant, of an actually existing contract between plaintiff and defendant is proven, plaintiff is entitled to at least nominal damages. Mollyneaux v. Wittenberg, 39 Neb. 547 (58 N. W. 205).

524. (1895.) It is the duty of a party suffering damages from breach of a contract to exert himself to lighten damages, and he cannot recover damages which would have been avoided had he performed such duty. Uhlig v. Barnum, 43 Neb. 584 (62 N. W. 549).

525. (1895.) Where the time for completing a continuing contract has not expired the plaintiff, in an action for a breach thereof, can only recover the damages sustained before the suit was instituted. Terry v. Beatrice Starch Co., 43 Neb. 866 (62 N. W. 255).

526. (1899.) The time of a stipulation was fixed by its terms at two years. In this action, commenced prior to the expiration of the full time, there could be no recovery of damages for breaches of the agreement which occurred subsequent to the institution of the suit. Wittenberg v. Mollyneaux, 59 Neb. 203 (80 N. W. 824).

527. (1901.) If the measure of damages fixed in the contract to be paid for its breach, will more than compensate the innocent party, the court will regard such sum as a penalty. Lee v. Carroll Normal School Co., 1 Unof. 681 (96 N. W. 65).

528. (1901.) When parties to a contract stipulate that in case of a violation thereof the party making default shall pay to the other a stipulated sum as liquidated damages, the courts will take the sum so fixed as the innocent party's measure of damages, only, when it appears that to do so will no more than compensate his loss. Lee v. Carroll Normal School Co., 1 Unof. 681 (96 N. W. 65).

529. (1902.) The general rule is that the injured party is entitled to recover such damages as naturally and reasonably result from a breach of a contract or as may reasonably be supposed to have been in contemplation of the parties as a result of such breach when the contract was made. Punteney-Mitchell Mfg. Co. v. Northwall Co., 66 Neb. 5 (91 N. W. 863).

530. (1904.) In an action for breach of a contract to perform services, plaintiff can recover the excess he is obliged to pay to another for the services, only from the date of the breach to the date when the action was commenced, and not to the date when the contract would have expired. Brown v. Cowles, 72 Neb. 896 (101 N. W. 1020).

531. (1904.) The rule is elementary that in an action for damages for breach of contract such damages only may be recovered as are the probable, direct and proximate consequences of the wrong complained of, and such as may fairly be supposed to have been within the contemplation of the parties at the time of the making of the contract as a probable result of the breach of the same. Brown v. Cowles, 72 Neb. 896 (101 N. W. 1020).

www.libtool.com.cn

532. (1906.) No recovery can be had on an agreement to loan money on real estate to enable plaintiff to take up a certain mortgage when it is not shown that he suffered a loss by not being able to borrow of another. Bahr v. Manke, 77 Neb. 552 (110 N. W. 300).

——— Items.

533. (1871.) When the owners of a mill in the course of erection are not ready for the installation of the machinery when the contracted time came, they cannot, in an action for breach of contract, show what their mill would have earned from the time the machinery was to have been in, had it then been ready. Holmes v. Boydston, 1 Neb. 346.

534. (1883.) Where a contract calls for the completion of a stone flume by a certain date, it being the intention to erect a mill thereon, and such flume is not completed until several months after the time fixed and the mill was never built, the loss of the use of the mill, being too remote and uncertain, no recoupment can be had therefor in an action for the contract price for building the flume. Bridges v. Lanham, 14 Neb. 369 (15 N. W. 704; 45 Am. St. Rep. 121).

535. (1894.) Where a contractor agrees with the owner of real estate to furnish the material and labor and erect for him an improvement thereon, and such contractor voluntarily abandons the work before completion, the owner may charge the contractor with the necessary costs of completing the improvement as the contractor agreed to complete it, the amount of all payments made to the contractor on the contract, the amount of all valid liens on the real estate for labor and material furnished the contractor and used by him in such improvement, and the amount of actual damages the owner has sustained by reason of the contractor's default. The difference between the total of these items and the contract price is the measure of damages of both the owner and contractor. Von Dorn v. Mengedoht, 41 Neb. 525 (59 N. W. 800).

536. (1898.) A party injured by breach of contract may recover for gains prevented, provided they are within the established rules permitting consequential damages, and provided they can be proved to a reasonable degree of certainty. Wittenberg v. Mollyneaux, 55 Neb. 429 (75 N. W 835).

537. (1902.) In an action brought by plaintiff to recover damages for a breach of contract, whereby he was to receive as compensation for caring for a flock of sheep, one-half of the increase and one-half of the wool clip, held, that plaintiff was entitled to recover for such profits or advantages, the direct and immediate fruits of his contract as were lost by such breach of contract on the part of the defendant. Schrandt v. Young, 2 Unof. 546 (89 N. W. 607).

——— Measure of damages.

538. (1871.) The value of services cannot be shown by proof of what was paid therefor, but only by proof of what they are worth. Holmes v. Boydston, 1 Neb. 346.

539. (1871.) Damages for breach of a contract for machinery, sustained by reason of furnishing imperfect articles, cannot be shown by proof of what the party to whom the same were furnished actually paid for replacing them with such as the contract required. Holmes v. Boydston, 1 Neb. 346.

540. (1879.) Where one causes a loss to a crop of wheat by breach of his contract to cut the same when ripe, the measure of damages is the value of the crop. Kelley v. Peterson, 9 Neb. 76 (2 N. W. 346).

541. (1879.) A party may recover as damages for the breach of a contract to cut grain; the value of the entire crop, if it is shown the damage amounted to so much, and they are the proximate result of the breach. Kelley v. Peterson, 9 Neb. 76 (2 N. W. 346).

542. (1889.) When a contract has been established, the measure of recovery in such case is the price agreed upon in the contract less the damages sustained by the employer by the breach of the same. McMillan v. Malloy, 10 Neb. 228 (4 N. W. 1004; 35 Am. Rep. 471).

543. (1884.) When two parties have made a contract which one of them has broken, the damages which the other party ought to receive in respect of such breach of contract should be such as may fairly and reasonably be considered either arising naturally, i. e., according to the usual course of things from such breach of contract itself, or such as may reasonably be supposed to have been in the contemplation of both parties at the time they made the contract as the probable result of the breach of it.

Aultman & Co. v. Stout, 15 Neb. 586 (19 N. W. 464).

544. (1887.) Where A, being indebted to B, fraudulently procured C to execute to B a mortgage for $2,650, with statements that B would furnish that amount, the proceeds to be applied to the payment of a mortgage of $1,200 already on the land and a $900 note held by A, with remainder in cash, and instead A procured only $1,000 from B and applied the $1,650 to the payment of his indebtedness, the measure of C's damages in an action against A would be the $1,650 and legal interest thereon, notwithstanding the fact that by the increased mortgage liens on C's land he was unable to borrow sufficient to discharge them, and by subsequent foreclosure proceedings the land was sold and C's title destroyed. Forbes v. Thomas, 22 Neb. 541 (35 N. W. 411).

545. (1890.) Where one contracts to furnish a heating apparatus in complete working order, to a specified degree of temperature, for a newly erected building, and the owner of the building rescinds the contract and refuses to allow the furnace to be placed in the building, the measure of damage recoverable by the seller is the amount of the profits that would have been realized under the contract. Hale v. Hess, 30 Neb. 42 (46 N. W. 261).

546. (1893.) In a suit for violation of a contract the courts will not, for the measure of damages, apply a rule which would give plaintiff a greater compensation for a breach of the contract than he could receive had it been performed. Bates v. Diamond Crystal Salt Co., 36 Neb. 900 (55 N. W. 258).

547. (1894.) Where there has been a partial performance of a contract and an offer to perform the balance the measure of damages is compensation for the part performed, and the profits to be made under the contract. Roberts v. Drehmer, 41 Neb. 306 (59 N. W. 911).

548. (1894.) The measure of plaintiff's recovery for partial performance of a building contract, is found by ascertaining the reasonable worth of such partial performance appropriated or received by the owner, and deducting therefrom payments made to the contractor and the actual damages, if any, the owner has sustained by the contractor's default. Von Dorn v. Mengedoht, 41 Neb. 525 (59 N. W. 800).

549. (1894.) Where a contractor agrees with the owner of real estate, to furnish the material and labor, and erect for him an improvement thereon, and the owner wrongfully terminates the same or the contractor's employment thereunder before the completion of the work, the contractor's measure of damages is the reasonable value of his partial performance increased by all actual damages sustained by him by reason of the owner's unjustifiable termination of the contract. Von Dorn v. Mengedoht, 41 Neb. 525 (59 N. W. 800).

550. (1894.) In an action by an agent against a manufacturer for breach of a contract granting the former the exclusive right to sell manufactured articles in a specified territory, the measure of damages is the profit which he shows he was prevented from realizing. Russell v. Horn, Brannen & Forsyth Mfg. Co., 41 Neb. 567 (59 N. W. 901).

551. (1896.) In a suit against a party for wrongfully terminating work under a contract, plaintiff's measure of damages is the profit he would have made by completing it. Kreamer v. Irwin, 46 Neb. 827 (65 N. W. 885).

552. (1896.) The general rule is that the party injured by breach of contract is entitled to recover all his damages, including gains prevented as well as losses sustained, provided they are certain and such as might naturally be expected to follow the breach. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Wilhelm, 48 Neb. 910 (67 N. W. 870).

553. (1897.) In a suit on a quantum meruit for services performed, the reasonable value of the services furnishes the measure of recovery. Hibbard v. Wilson, 51 Neb. 436 (71 N. W. 65).

554. (1897.) In an action on a quantum meruit, the only competent evidence of the reasonable value of services performed was the contract price. The plaintiff in the action offered other proof of the value of the services, which, on objection of defendant, was excluded. Held, That the contract price was the proper measure of damages. Hibbard v. Wilson, 51 Neb. 436 (71 N. W. 65).

555. (1897.) There is, in principle, as well as on authority, a wide distinction between contracts for personal service and for the doing of specific acts. In the former case, unless the plaintiff, who has been discharged without sufficient cause, is able to secure other employment, the contract price furnishes the exact measure of his damage.

In the latter class of cases the measure of damage upon the violation of the agreement by the employer is that asserted by the district court, viz., the plaintiff's probable profit; in other words, the difference, if any, in his favor between the contract price and the sum it would have cost to complete the work. Jewett v. Wilmot, 51 Neb. 700 (71 N. W. 775).

556. (1897.) Where one party to an express contract is wrongfully prevented by the other party from completing, he may sue upon the contract for a breach thereof, and the measure of his damages will be the value of the part performed as measured by the contract price plus the profits, if any, which would have accrued to him had he completed the contract according to its terms; or he may ignore the contract and declare upon a quantum meruit or quantum valebat, in which case the measure of his damage will be the fair and reasonable value of what he has done. Thompson v. Gaffey, 52 Neb. 317 (72 N. W. 314).

557. (1901.) When one commits a total breach of his contract to cultivate lands of another in a workmanlike manner to a specific crop, the measure of damages is the injury to the lands, if any, from allowing them to lie idle and become foul with weeds, and the probable value of the landowner's share of the crop, had the contract been fulfilled. Culley v. Taylor, 62 Neb. 651 (87 N. W. 334).

558. (1901.) The measure of damages for the breach of a contract to complete a building within the contract time is the loss of the possession of the building as a thing of use. Lee v. Carroll Normal School Co., 1 Unof. 681 (96 N. W. 65).

559. (1901.) Under a contract by a merchant and his creditors whereby the latter were to assume the management of the business in order to pay off their debts and also were to keep the stock of goods supplied with new goods, in an action for a breach of such contract by an alleged sale of the goods at public auction in violation of the contract a refusal to instruct that the measure of the damages was the difference in amount for which the price for which they would have sold for at private sale, erroneous. Paxton & Gallagher v. Vaddonker, 1 Unof. 776 (96 N. W. 378).

560. (1903.) When the contract is entire, is one for personal services only and the breach of it is total, the measure of damages is what the plaintiff would have earned, less what it would have cost him to perform it according to its terms. School District of Omaha v. McDonald, 68 Neb. 610 (94 N. W. 829).

Verdict.

561. (1886.) In an action to recover for labor and skill in the erection of certain buildings under a written contract, and for certain extras and expenses claimed under an alleged modification of said contract, a verdict, "We, the jury, * * * do find for the plaintiff and assess his damages," etc., is correct in form, since the action is not one of debt, but for damages for breach of the contract. Morrissey v. Schindler, 18 Neb. 672 (26 N. W. 476).

562. (1889.) Where none of the witnesses, in an action for damages for non-performance of a contract, placed the value of the profits which would have arisen therefrom at less than $239, a verdict for $90 was set aside as not based on the evidence. Hancock v. Stout, 28 Neb. 301 (44 N. W. 446).

Judgment.

563. (1874.) The plaintiff asserted a claim for an allowance for waste attending public printing, and the defendant admitted that an allowance was due but not to the extent claimed; held, that it was error for the court to reject all claim for allowance. It should have found, upon this claim, for the plaintiff, at least to the extent admitted by the pleadings. People, ex rel. Gere, v. Gosper, 3 Neb. 285).

Appeal and error.

564. (1891.) There being no material error in an action for the breach of a contract securing advancement of money, a judgment for the plaintiff will not be disturbed. Payne v. Jones, 33 Neb. 260 (50 N. W. 8).

565. (1898.) Where the trial court erroneously disposed of a case on the theory that a contract involved did not express the agreement of the parties and was, therefore, unenforceable, the supreme court may eliminate from the findings below the errors resulting from the failure to construe and enforce the contract, and order the judgment below to be modified accordingly. Clark v. Hall, 54 Neb. 479 (74 N. W. 856).

566. (1902.) When a petition misrecites a contract sued on, but it is properly set out in the answer, and the action is tried upon the contract so set out, if the court has given to the jury the correct rule of damages for the alleged breach of the contract set forth in the answer, it is not error prejudicial to the defendant if he afterwards instructs them what is the measure of damages for a breach of a contract substantially such as is set out in the petition, if the measure so given is also equally applicable to the like breach of the contract as recited in the answer. Chicago House-Wrecking Co. v. Stewart Lumber Co., 66 Neb. 835 (92 N. W. 1009).

1. (1892.) In determining whether one joint wrong-doer is entitled to contribution from another the test is, whether the former knew, at the time of the commission of the act for which he has been compelled to respond, that such act was wrongful. Johnson v. Torpy, 35 Neb. 604 (53 N. W. 575; 37 Am. St. Rep. 447).

2. (1895.) In an action for contribution by one joint wrong-doer against another the test of recovery is whether the plaintiff, at the time of the commission of the act for which he has been compelled to respond, knew that such act was wrongful. Torpy v. Johnson, 43 Neb. 882 (62 N. W. 253).

3. (1903.) When a joint and several judgment for trespass is satisfied by one of the parties, contribution will be enforced, where it appears that the parties acted in good faith and without any intention of committing a trespass. The basis of contribution in such cases is the ratio the claims of the several attaching creditors bear to each other. First Nat. Bank of Pawnee v. Avery Planter Co., 69 Neb. 329 (95 N. Stockholders of corporations.

4. (1898.) An agreement by stockholders of a corporation to indemnify one for the personal assumption or payment of a corporate debt, or to contribute, may be enforced. Gorder v. Connor, 56 Neb 781 (77 N. W. 383).

5. (1898.) A voluntary assumption of the debt of a corporation, or a voluntary payment of its debt, or the two in combination, will not alone confer on a stockholder of the corporation the right to contribution from the other members. Gorder v. Connor, 56 Neb. 781 (77 N. W. 383).

6. (1898.) As between the stock subscribers and the creditors of a corporation, each stock subscriber is liable to the extent of his unpaid stock subscription As between themselves, each stock subscriber is liable for his proportionate share of the corporate debts, and one stock subscriber who has been compelled to pay more than his proportionate share may sue his co-subscribers for contribution. *Van Pelt v. Regulation of prisons, see Prisons.

Pardon of convicts, see Pardons.

Disqualification of convicted person to hold office, see Officers, § 14.

Right to vote, see Elections, § 34.

Statutory provisions.

1. (1896.) Section 5, chapter 66, Session Laws, 1895, providing for the leasing of convict labor, is not within the title of the act, and is, therefore, in conflict with the provisions of section 11, article III of the constitution, requiring the subjects of acts to be clearly expressed in their titles. State, ex rel. Leidigh, v. Holcomb, 46 Neb. 612 (65 N. W. 873).

2. (1896.) The power conferred upon the board of public lands and buildings by section 17, Session Laws 1877, page 194, to lease the convict labor of the state for a period not exceeding ten years is not a continuing power, but was exhausted by a single user. State, ex rel. Leidigh, v. Holcomb, 46 Neb. 612 (65 N. W. 873).

Right to lease convict labor.

3. (1896.) The board of public lands and buildings is by section 19, article V of the constitution, and the act of February 13, 1877 (Session Laws 1877, p. 188), invested with the genaral management and control of all of the public institutions of the state, except those for educational purposes, and may, in its discretion, lease the convict labor, penitentiary grounds, shops, and machinery therein, together with any property connected with or incident thereto. State, ex rel. Leidigh, v. Holcomb, 46 Neb. 612 (65 N. W. 873).

4. (1903.) The board of public lands and buildings is vested with the general management and control of the penitentiary and may, at its direction, let out by contract the labor of any or all the convicts. State, ex rel. Davis, v. Mortensen, 69 Neb. 376 (95 N. W. 831).

Validity and rights of labor contracts.

5. (1903.) A contract for convict labor, made between the warden of the penitentiary and a manufacturer would, if valid, impose no active duties upon the board of public lands and buildings, and hence cannot be enforced by mandamus against such board. State, ex rel. Davis, v. Mortensen, 69 Neb. 376 (95 N. W. 831).

6. (1903.) A written contract for the hiring of convict labor, drawn under the provisions of section 16, chapter 86, Compiled Statutes, is not valid unless executed by the warden of the penitentiary, and approved by the governor and the board of public lands and buildings. State, ex rel. Davis, v. Mortensen, 69 Neb. 376 (95 N. W. 831).

7. (1903.) The state, like an individual or private corporation, may refuse to keep its engagements; and the board of public lands and buildings, as a governmental agency having full authority in all matters relating to the management of the penitentiary, is vested with power to determine whether a contract for the leasing of convict labor shall be kept or broken. The action of the members of the board in the matter is the action of the state; their determination is its determination. State, ex rel. Davis, v. Mortensen, 69 Neb. 376 (95 N. W. 831).

Power of lessee of convict labor.

8. (1896.) The contractor or lessee, of convict labor, cannot, even with the assent of the board of public lands and buildings, usurp any of the functions of the warden as the keeper of the prison, although he may, and doubtless should, be accorded such privileges, consistent with the rules prescribed for the government of the prison and the health and safe-keeping of the convicts, as are necessary to carry into execution his agreement with the state. State, ex rel. Leidigh, v. Holcomb, 46 Neb. 612 (65 N. W. 873).

Contract to feed convicts.

9. (1896.) It is within the power of the board of public lands and buildings to provide by contract for the feeding and clothing of the convicts in the penitentiary as one of the considerations for the leasing of their labor, and such a contract is a sufficient justification for a proceeding to compel the state board to furnish provisions and supplies. State, ex rel. Leidigh, v. Holcomb, 46 Neb. 612 (65 N. W. 873).

Agent to manage convict labor, and machinery.

10. (1896.) An agreement whereby the state board of public lands and buildings gives control of all convict labor, and the machinery in the penitentiary, to another, who is to account for the earnings of the convicts and to retain not less than $3,000 per year for services is a mere appointment of such person as an agent of the state to lease the convict labor to third persons and to disburse the funds appropriated for the support of the penitentiary. State, ex rel. Leidigh, v. Holcomb, 46 Neb. 612 (65 N. W. 873).

11. (1896.) In absence of statutory restriction it is within the power of the board of public lands and buildings to appoint an agent to lease or manage the convict labor and the shops and machinery within the penitentiary. State, ex rel. Leidigh, v. Holcomb, 46 Neb. 612 (65 N. W. 873).

Application of proceeds from convict labor.

12. (1877.) Proceeds of "convict labor" uncollected for the year 1876 may properly be applied in payment of outstanding indebtedness for support of convicts incurred during that year. Opinion of the Judges, 5 Neb. 566.

Actions on labor contract.

13. (1903.) A contract with the board of public lands and buildings for the leasing of convict labor is in substance a contract with the state; and an action against the members of the board to compel specific performance of such a contract is in substance an action against the state. State ex rel. Davis, v. Mortensen, 69 Neb. 376 (95 N. W. 831).

COPYRIGHTS.

CROSS-REFERENCES.

See, also, Literary Property.

Infringement on right to trade-marks or trade-names, see Trade-Marks and Trade-Names, §§ 4-15.

1. (1906.) The word "copyright" is generally used to mean the "exclusive right of multiplying copies of a work already published." This right can only be preserved by complying with the act of congress for that purpose. The word has sometimes also been used to denote the right which an author has in his literary work to keep it for his own private use, to publish it, or to refrain from publishing it, at his pleasure. This right exists at common law. It does not depend upon any statute. It can only exist as long as the work is kept private. If it is published without complying with the copyright act the right is abandoned. State v. State Journal Co., 77 Neb. 752 (110 N. W. 763).

2. (1906.) Manuscript of the state law reports intrusted to a publishing company to enable it to perform its contract to publish such reports for the state is not copyrighted, and is already given to the public. ANALYSIS.

Inquest, when, §§ 1, 1a.
Definition of viewing, § 2.
Fees, §§ 3-3c.
Action on bond, § 4.

CROSS-REFERENCE.

Authority to serve process or summons, see Process, §§ 62-68.

Inquest, when.

1. (1893.) A coroner can lawfully hold an inquest upon the dead bodies of only such persons as are supposed to have died by unlawful means. Lancaster County v. Holyoke, 37 Neb. 328 (55 N. W. 950; 21 L. R. A. 394).

1a. (1907.) Jurisdiction to hold an inquest is conferred upon a coroner by his finding and custody in his county of the body of a person who has apparently come to his death by violent, mysterious or unknown means, and such jurisdiction is not defeated by the mere fact that the violence was inflicted or the death occurred in another county. Moore v. Box Butte County, 78 Neb. 561 (111 N. W. 469).

Definition of viewing.

2. (1893.) The word "viewing" as found in section 7, chapter 28, Compiled Statutes, means something more than looking, seeing, beholding; it means inspection and investigation by a coroner and a jury. Lancaster County v. Holyoke, 37 Neb. 328 (55 N. W. 950; 21 L. R. A. 394).

Fees.

3. (1893.) A coroner, without impaneling a jury is not entitled to any fees for inspection and examination of a person found dead in his county. Lancaster County v. Holyoke, 37 Neb. 328 (55 N. W. 950; 21 L. R. A. 394).

3a. (1907.) An undertaker who, acting in good faith pursuant to a direction by a coroner, causes the decent burial of a dead body found and being in the county, upon which the latter had held an inquest, will not be denied reasonable compensation for his services and expenses for the sole reason that it may afterwards be shown that the inquest was unnecessary. Darling v. Box Butte County, 78 Neb. 564 (111 N. W. 470).

3b. (1907.) Whether, in any case, the circumstances are such as to require an inquest into the cause of the death of a person whose body is found within the county is a matter left very largely to the discretion of the coroner, and he will not be denied compensation for his services in holding such an inquest in the absence of a showing that he has acted in bad faith. Moore v. Box Butte County, 78 Neb. 561 (111 N. W. 469).

3c. (1907.) Jurors and witnesses have no discretion justifying their disobedience to a summons by a coroner to attend upon an inquest held by him, and cannot be denied their fees, solely because it may afterwards appear to have been unnecessary. Moore v. Box Butte County, 78 Neb. 561 (111 N. W. 469).

Action on bond.

4. (1898.) In an action on the bond of a coroner the introduction of evidence of a copy of such bond is not erroneous, where the execution, delivery, and approval are admitted by the answer. Maul v. Drexel, 55 Neb. 446 (76 N. W. 163).

I. INCORPORATION AND ORGANIZATION.

What are corporations.

1. (1894.) A de jure corporation is one whose right to exercise a corporate function would prove invulnerable if assailed by the state in quo warranto proceedings. Capps & McCreary v. Hastings Prospecting Co., 40 Neb. 470 (58 N. W. 956; 42 Am. St. Rep. 677; 24 L. R. A. 259).

Kinds and classes of corporations.

2. (1892.) Private corporations distinguished from public. Overton Bridge Co. v. Means, 33 Neb. 857 (51 N. W. 240; 29 Am. St. Rep. 514).

3. (1903.) The character of a corporation is determined from its articles of incorporation and the statute authorizing its formation. McLeod v. Lincoln Medical College, 69 Neb. 550 (96 N. W. 265).

——— Corporation for pecuniary benefit.

4. (1903.) The fact that an educational institution may acquire and convey property necessary to the accomplishment of its object, and may charge tuition for instruction, does not render it an incorporation for the pecuniary benefit of its members. McLeod v. Lincoln Medical College, 69 Neb. 550 (96 N. W. 265).

——— Manufacturing corporation.

5. (1903.) A corporation organized to "plant, harvest, store, purchase, manufacture, market, sell and deal in chicory" held a manufacturing corporation within the purview of section 37, chapter 16, Compiled Statutes. Bolton v. Nebraska Chicory Co., 69 Neb. 681 (96 N. W. 148).

Instalment investment companies.

6. (1894.) A corporation which has for its object the purchase of land and the construction of houses thereon (the funds being realized from the capital stock paid in by subscribers in instalments), and finally the allotment of the lots and houses among the stockholders in satisfaction of their stock, is one organized for the purpose of carrying on a lawful business and authorized by the general incorporation law. York Park Building Ass'n v. Barnes, 39 Neb. 834 (58 N. W. 440).

7. (1904.) Compiled Statutes, chapter 16, sections 216-227, defining and regulating instalment investment companies, is not in violation of article III, or of section 1 of article VI, of the constitution, nor does it give the state banking board such arbitrary powers as to be unconstitutional for that reason. State, ex rel. Prout, v. Northwestern Trust Co., 72 Neb. 497 (101 N. W. 14).

8. (1904.) If the organization of a corporation and its plan of doing business involve receiving from each of its members a stated sum at stated intervals until a specified amount is received from such members, and investing this money in property for the benefit of its members, it is an instalment investment company within the meaning of chapter 29, laws of 1903. (Comp. Stat., ch. 16, secs. 216-227.) State, ex rel. Prout, v. Northwestern Trust Co., 72 Neb. 497 (101 N. W. 14).

Homestead associations.

9. (1898.) Section 2 of an act passed February 18, 1873, entitled "Homestead Associations," being section 146, chapter 16, Compiled Statutes 1897, was repealed by the adoption of section 4, article XI, constitution 1875, under "Miscellaneous Corporations." Van Pelt v. Gardner, 54 Neb. 701 (75 N. W. 874).

General laws.

10. (1876.) The general incorporation statute and the articles of a corporation are considered in the nature of a grant from the state, and, taken together, constitute its charter. Livesey v. Omaha Hotel Co., 5 Neb. 50.

www.libtool.com.cn

11. (1876.) Sections 126 and 132 of the general incorporation act were not intended to nullify the settled rule of law in regard to the qualifications of a corporation, to enable it to commence business. Livesey v. Omaha Hotel Co., 5 Neb. 50.

12. (1879.) Where the charter—which is the general law in most cases in this state—contains provisions or conditions for the protection of the public against the evils of corrupt and irresponsible organizations, which are not inconsistent with the organic law of the state, they enter into and become a part of the charter, and must be complied with. Smith v. Steele, 8 Neb. 115.

13. (1891.) In a condemnation proceeding by a railroad for a right of way, the proof showing that certificate of organization of the railroad in the state of Nebraska, and the articles of incorporation filed and recorded in the office of a county clerk and the secretary of state, and later articles of consolidation, with another company were filed, held to be a corporation under the laws of this state. Trester v. Missouri P. R. Co., 33 Neb. 171 (49 N. W. 1110).

14. (1895.) In this state the legislature does not by a special act charter a corporation, but all corporations are formed under general laws, and these laws and the articles of incorporation adopted in pursuance of and in conformity with such laws constitute the charter of a corporation in this state. Lincoln Shoe Mfg. Co. v. Sheldon, 44 Neb. 279 (62 N. W. 480).

——Construction in general.

15. (1901.) The charter or grant of franchise rights to a corporation is to be construed strictly, and a claim of exemption can not be sustained which is not in express terms granted or clearly implied from the terms of the grant. Lincoln Street R. Co. v. City of Lincoln, 61 Neb. 109 (84 N. W. 802).

——Filing articles of incorporation.

16. (1876.) In this state, the filing of articles of incorporation, with the county clerk, is a condition precedent to the existence of any corporate franchise. The law and the articles so filed, taken together, are considered in the nature of a grant from the state, and constitute the charter of the company. Abbott v. Omaha Smelting Co., 4 Neb. 416.

17. (1894.) The Hastings Prospecting Company was organized for the purpose of boring for gas. Its articles of association fixed its principal place of business in Adams county, Nebraska. It did not file its articles of incorporation in the office of the county clerk of said Adams county. Held, That by such default it failed to become a corporation de jure. Abbott v. Omaha Smelting & Refining Co., 4 Neb. 416, followed. Capps & McCreary v. Hastings Prospecting Co., 40 Neb. 470 (58 N. W. 956; 42 Am. St. Rep. 677; 24 L. R. A. 259).

18. (1900.) The record of the articles of incorporation of a corporate body in office of county clerk, or a certified copy thereof, is primary proof of the right of the association to transact business. Equitable Building & Loan Ass'n v. Bidwell, 60 Neb. 169 (82 N. W. 384).

19. (1900.) Under section 126, chapter 16, Compiled Statutes, 1895, a corporation, previous to the commencement of any business, except its own organization, must file its articles of incorporation for record in the office of the county clerk in the county or counties in which the business is to be transacted. Equitable Building & Loan Ass'n v. Bidwell, 60 Neb. 169 (82 N. W. 384).

Special charters.

20. (1901.) Under the constitution and laws of this state, special charters to corporations, with the exceptions mentioned, are prohibited. Corporations receive their franchises only by general law, and are subject to all the legal rules and statutes as to the reserve power of the lawmaking body of alteration and amendment; the laws of the state and the articles of incorporation are considered in the nature of a grant and constitute the charter of the company. Lincoln Street R. Co. v. City of Lincoln, 61 Neb. 109 (84 N. W. 802).

Fraudulent incorporation.

21. (1902.) The question of whether or not the incorporation of Hubbard Bros. Company was fraudulent, held, to depend upon whether or not the $5,000 indebtedness of Hubbard Bros., a partnership, to Enoch Hubbard, whose payment was the main object of incorporating, was bona fide. McNerney v. Hubbard, 3 Unof. 108 (93 N. W. 1123).

Incorporation of partnership.

22. (1906.) Where a corporation is organized by the members of an existing partnership and a third person, who contributes the funds necessary to properly finance the new enterprise, and receives therefor his agreed proportionate share of its capital stock, the partners contributing thereto the stock in trade, bills receivable and real estate of the firm, for which they receive their proportionate share of such capital stock, in the absence of fraud, the new corporation cannot be said to be a mere continuation of the old firm. Baker Furniture Co. v. Hall, 76 Neb. 93 (111 N. W. 129).

23. (1906.) A corporation organized for the sole purpose of continuing the business of a partnership firm, which takes over to itself the ownership and control of the assets thereof, thereby assumes the debts of such firm to the extent of the property so received. Baker Furniture Co. v. Hall, 76 Neb. 88 (107 N. W. 117).

24. (1906.) To render a newly organized corporation liable for the debts of an established corporation or firm to whose business and property it has succeeded, it should, in the absence of a special agreement to assume such liabilities, affirmatively appear from the pleadings and proof that the transaction in question is fraudulent as to creditors, or that the circumstances attending the creation of the new and its succession to the business and property of the old corporation or partnership are of such character as to warrant the finding that it is a mere continuation of the old firm or corporation. Baker Furniture Co. v. Hall, 76 Neb. 93 (111 N. W. 129).

25. (1906.) If the new corporation takes all of the property of the old corporation or partnership, and pays for same entirely in its stock issued to the stockholders of the old corporation or members of the former partnership, the creditors of the former partnership or corporation may enforce their claims in equity against the interests of the former partners or stockholders, and a court of equity will seize such property rights in the hands of fraudulent grantees, as in other cases of fraudulent transfer of property, but an innocent purchaser in good faith, without notice, will be protected. A stockholder in the new corporation may be an innocent purchaser. Baker Furniture Co. v. Hall, 76 Neb. 93 (111 N. W. 129).

De facto corporations.

26. (1893.) Where there was a substantial compliance with the law requiring the articles of incorporation to be filed and published, mere defects, even if they existed, did not render the articles void, and it was held that the company was a de facto corporation. Porter v. Sherman County Banking Co., 36 Neb. 271 (54 N. W. 424).

27. (1894.) An organization which attempts in good faith to incorporate a body under lawful authority and exercises corporate functions is a corporatinn de facto, and the legal existence thereof cannot ordinarily be attacked collaterally. Haas v. Bank of Commerce, 41 Neb. 754 (60 N. W. 85).

28. (1899.) An unincorporated bank, exclusively owned by one person, is not a corporation de facto, though the business be conducted by a president and cashier. Longfellow v. Barnard, 59 Neb. 455 (81 N. W 307).

29. (1904.) Where the law authorizes a corporation and there has been an attempt in good faith to organize, and the requirements of the statute have been colorably complied with and corporate functions thereafter exercised, there exists a corporation de facto, which cannot ordinarily be called in question collaterally. Lusk v. Riggs, 70 Neb. 718 (102 N. W. 88).

Collateral attack.

30. (1878.) Though a corporation may be so defective as to render the franchise wholly invalid in a proceeding against it by the state, still its corporate existence, when acting under color of a franchise, cannot be questioned in a suit where it would arise collaterally. Lincoln Building & Savings Ass'n v. Graham, 7 Neb. 173.

31. (1895.) Where parties in good faith organized as a corporation and substantially complied with the conditions prescribed as precedent to the commencement of business by the law governing the formation of corporations, such as the adoption of articles of incorporation and filing the same with the county clerk of the county in which the business was to be conducted, and have entered upon the discharge of corporate functions and so continued for a considerable length of time, although if challenged by the state in a proper proceeding it might be declared illegal, such organization was not vulnerable to a collateral attack by a person who contracted with it in its corporate capacity and thus acknowledged and recognized its corporate existence, the object of such attack being to recover upon the contract, against the stockholders of the corporation individually, or to render them liable thereon as members of an unincorporated association or partnership. Kleckner v. Turk, 45 Neb. 176 (63 N. W. 469).

32. (1896.) Where a corporation has had a de facto existence for a considerable time, its corporate character cannot be collaterally assailed by persons contracting with it in such capacity, relying upon its corporate credit, in order to hold stockholders thereof individually liable on account of the failure to observe the statutory requirements essential to constitute it a technical de jure corporation. Hogue v. Capital Nat. Bank, 47 Neb. 929 (66 N. W. 1036).

33. (1901.) The legality of the organization of a de facto corporation cannot be called in question in a collateral proceeding. Otoe County Fair & Driving Park Ass'n v. Doman, 1 Unof. 179 (95 N. W. 327).

34. (1904.) Where a collection of persons claim to have organized themselves into a corporation, the invalidity of their organization may be shown, even when questioned collaterally, by evidence that no articles of incorporation were filed as required by statute. Lusk v. Riggs, 70 Neb. 713 (97 N. W. 1033). [Overruled. 70 Neb. 718.]

II. CORPORATE EXISTENCE AND FRANCHISE.

Estoppel to deny corporate existence.

35. (1891.) The maker of a note, payable to a bank, cannot, in an action on the note, raise the question of the incorporation of the bank. Exchange Nat. Bank v. Capps, 32 Neb. 242 (49 N. W. 223; 29 Am. St. Rep. 433).

36. (1894.) Persons subscribing for the stock of an association, then acting as and assuming to be a corporation, are estopped in a suit on such subscription from questioning the legal existence of such corporation. Capps & McCreary v. Hasting Prospecting Co., 40 Neb. 470 (58 N. W. 956; 42 Am. St. Rep. 677; 24 L. R. A. 259).

37. (1894.) A subscription of stock to preliminary articles of association, not purporting to be a contract with an existing corporation, does not estop the subscriber from afterwards denying the legal existence of the corporation in a suit by the alleged corporation upon the subscription. Capps & McCreary v. Hastings Prospecting Co., 40 Neb. 470 (58 N. W. 956; 42 Am. St. Rep. 677; 24 L. R. A. 259).

38. (1896.) When a party contracts with, sues, and obtains judgment against an imperfectly organized corporation, he is estopped from denying its corporate existence, and is precluded from recovering from its members individually, as if they were partners, upon the same indebtedness. Nebraska Nat. Bank of York v. Ferguson, 49 Neb. 109 (68 N. W. 370; 59 Am. St. Rep. 522).

39. (1896.) Where one enters into a contract with a body acting as a corporation, he is estopped from denying its corporate existence when sued on the contract. Livingston Loan & Building Ass'n v. Drummond, 49 Neb. 200 (68 N. W. 375).

40. (1900.) One who has entered into a contract with a body assuming to act as a corporation, is not permitted, when sued on such contract, to question the capacity of such body to contract or to sue. Equitable Building & Loan Ass'n v. Bidwell, 60 Neb. 169 (82 N. W. 384).

41. (1901.) Where one had dealt with a company in its corporate name, he cannot set up as a defense to an action to reform a deed the plaintiff's want of legal existence. Otoe County Fair & Driving Park Ass'n v. Doman, 1 Unof. 179 (95 N. W. 327).

42. (1901.) One who has entered into a contract with a body of men acting as a corporation cannot, when sued on such contract, be heard to plead the want of legal organization of such corporation. Crete Building & Loan Ass'n v. Patz, 1 Unof. 768 (95 N. W. 793).

43. (1906.) When the required number of individuals attempt in good faith to organize a corporation, and for that purpose sign articles of incorporation which contain substantially the provisions required by statute, and file the same with the county clerk of the proper county and proceed to do business as a corporation in the name adopted by the articles, one who transacts business with such company in its corporate name will not be allowed to deny its existence as a corporation de facto. Lincoln Butter Co. v. Edwards-Bradford Lumber Co., 76 Neb. 477 (107 N. W. 797).

44. (1906.) If, in an action against the company in its corporate name, plaintiff attaches its property upon a claim arising from business transacted with the corporation, he will not be allowed to deny that the business of the company was conducted by it in its corporate capacity. Lincoln Butter Co. v. Edwards-Bradford Lumber Co., 76 Neb. 477 (107 N. W. 797).

Evidence of corporate existence.

45. (1876.) Where one of an association of persons, charged as partners, seeks relief from liability on the ground that such association is a corporation, legally organized, and doing a corporate business, the burden of proof rests on him to show the existence of such corporation. Failing to establish it, he cannot avoid liability on the ground that he does not appear as a subscriber to the capital stock of such association. Abbott v. Omaha Smelting Co., 4 Neb. 416.

46. (1876.) To establish the existence of a corporation de facto a charter or some law under which the assumed powers are claimed to be conferred, and uses of the franchise thereby obtained, must be shown. Abbott v. Omaha Smelting Co., 4 Neb. 416.

47. (1903.) It is sufficient for a corporation which seeks to defend upon the ground of a franchise to show that it is actually possessed of the franchise. Whether such franchise was acquired or is held rightfully, is to be determined only in a direct proceeding to oust the corporation or in a proceeding to which some one who claims a better title is a party. Bronson v. Albion Telephone Co., 67 Neb. 111 (93 N. W. 201; 60 L. R. A. 609).

III. CORPORATE SEAL.

Right to use seal.

48. (1895.) Municipal and private corporations may, in absence of limitations express or implied, as an incident to their general corporate powers, adopt and use a common seal. Board of Directors of Alfalfa Irrigation District v. Collins, 46 Neb. 411 (64 N. W. 1086).

IV. CAPITAL STOCK AND DIVIDENDS.

Corporation stock as subject to garnishment, see Garnishment, §§ 16-18.

A. Subscription to Stock.

Liability of subscriber to stock of building and loan associations, see Building and Loan Associations, §§ 10, 11.

Estoppel of subscriber to deny corporate existence, see ante, §§ 36, 37.

Liability of creditors on unpaid subscriptions, see post, §§ 169-174.

Power of corporation to hold stock in other company, see post, §§ 266-268.

Contract of subscription.

49. (1894.) The plaintiffs in error were sued on a writing signed by them, as follows: "For the purpose of organizing a corporation * * * to bore for gas, we, the undersigned, agree to subscribe and pay for the amount of stock set opposite our names * * * within thirty days from the organization of said corporation." Held, That by this writing the plaintiffs in error promised to take and pay for stock of a corporation de jure, not of a corporation de facto, thereafter to be organized. Capps & McCreary v. Hastings Prospecting Co., 40 Neb. 470 (58 N. W. 956; 42 Am. St. Rep. 677; 24 L. R. A. 259).

50. (1895.) A contract in writing whereby one agrees to purchase certain stock in a then forming corporation held to be a subscription to the capital stock of the corporation. Lincoln Shoe Mfg. Co. v. Sheldon, 44 Neb. 279 (62 N. W. 480).

51. (1907.) Section 39, chapter 16, Compiled Statutes 1905, authorizing the opening of books for stock subscriptions, does not limit the right of individuals to subscribe for stock by special agreement for that purpose made either before or after the filing of the articles of incorporation. Nebraska Chicory Co. v. Lednicky, 79 Neb. 587 (113 N. W. 245).

52. (1907.) A contract to subscribe to the stock of a forming corporation is based upon a sufficient consideration. There is a mutuality of promise in the act of the particular subscriber in subscribing with others which obliges him to make good his promise to the corporation after it comes into existence. Nebraska Chicory Co. v. Lednicky, 79 Neb. 587 (113 N. W. 245).

53. (1907.) A subscription by a number of persons to the stock of a corporation, to be thereafter formed by them, constitutes a contract between the subscribers themselves to become stockholders when the corporation is formed, upon the conditions expressed in the agreement, and, as such, it is binding and irrevocable from the date of the subscription. Nebraska Chicory Co. v. Lednicky, 79 Neb. 587 (113 N. W. 245).

54. (1907.) A subscription to corporate shares, made before the corporation comes into existence, but accepted by the corporation after coming into existence, either expressly by issuing the share certificates, or impliedly by recognizing the subscriber as a shareholder, makes him a shareholder, and the corporation may maintain an action upon the subscription against the signers. Nebraska Chicory Co. v. Lednicky, 79 Neb. 587 (113 N. W. 245).

55. (1902.) A claim upon a stock subscription payable on call of the directors does not accrue within the meaning of section 262, chapter 23, Compiled Statutes, until a call is made and that only for the amount of the call. Estate of Fitzgerald v. Union Savings Bank, 65 Neb. 97 (90 N. W. 994).

56. (1907.) Any agreement by which a person shows an intention to become a stockholder in a corporation is sufficient as a contract of subscription, as against both himself and the corporation. Nebraska Chicory Co. v. Lednicky, 79 Neb. 587 (113 N. W. 245).

Conditional subscriptions.

57. (1876.) Where a subscription is made to the capital stock of an insurance company, upon the condition that the same is not payable until a certain specified amount has been subscribed, such condition is a condition precedent, performance of which is essential before the company can enforce the payment of a note given for such subscription; nor will it avail the company that the condition is complied with after suit brought, but before the trial; the right to recover must exist at the time the action is commenced. McCann v. American Central Ins. Co., 4 Neb. 256.

Withdrawal or cancelation.

58. (1896.) Mismanagement of the affairs of the corporation by its officers or agents does not warrant the withdrawal of stockholders or the repudiation of the obligations assumed by them. American Building & Loan Ass'n v. Rainbolt, 48 Neb. 434 (67 N. W. 493).

59. (1896.) A stockholder who acted as a director of the corporation for three years and had notice of its business methods and financial condition, cannot, in a suit against it, recover the money he paid for his stock on the ground that his subscription was procured by fraud of defendant's agents. American Building & Loan Ass'n v. Rainbolt, 48 Neb. 434 (67 N. W. 493).

Release or discharge.

60. (1896.) The mismanagement of the affairs of a corporation will not release a stockholder from his obligation to pay for the stock subscribed. Hards v. Platte Valley Improvement Co., 46 Neb. 709 (65 N. W. 781).

Payment.

61. (1894.) An agreement made between promoters of a corporation and a subscriber to its stock, that such subscriber is to have the stock for the sake of the influence of his name, and that he will not be required to pay his subscription therefor, is void, and the corporation may enforce payment of such subscription, notwithstanding such agreement. York Park Building Ass'n v. Barnes, 39 Neb. 834 (58 N. W. 440).

62. (1895.) Subscriptions for stock of a corporation may be paid in money or in property such as is within the power of a corporation to acquire and hold, or in labor for the corporation in the proper furtherance of its purposes and business. Gilkie & Anson Co. v. Dawson Town & Gas Co., 46 Neb. 333 (64 N. W. 1097).

63. (1895.) Where payment of subscriptions for stock is made in property or labor, it must be of such value as to be the money's worth; if property, of the value of the amount of the par value of the stock; and if labor, it must be reasonably of the face value of the stock. Gilkie & Anson Co. v. Dawson Town & Gas Co., 46 Neb. 333 (64 N. W. 1097).

64. (1895.) When property is conveyed to a corporation in payment of subscriptions for stock, it may be at a valuation agreed upon between the parties to the transaction, provided the valuation is one made in good faith or in the fair exercise of judgment and discretion honestly directed. Gilkie & Anson Co. v. Dawson Town & Gas Co., 46 Neb. 333 (64 N. W. 1097).

65. (1895.) Where the property conveyed in payment for stock is knowingly and advisedly overvalued, it is but a formal and illusory compliance with the requirements of the law and fair dealing in this regard and is not sufficient, and the transaction may be impeached by a creditor of the corporation as a fraud, and the liability of the subscriber for stock, to the amount of the difference between the fair and true value of the property at the time it was conveyed and the fictitious value at which it was received, be enforced against such subscriber as an unpaid portion of his subscription to the stock and appropriated, in a proper action, to the satisfaction of the debts of the corporation.

Gilkie & Anson Co. v. Dawson Town & Gas Co., 46 Neb. 333 (64 N. W. 1097).

66. (1895.) In an action against a corporation to impeach a transfer of stock to stockholders for property of a fictitious value, and hold the stockholders liable for the unpaid stock on judgment debts, an amended petition setting out additional defendant stockholders and the transfer of stock for overvalued property is sufficient in its statements of the fraudulent character of the transactions. Gilkie & Anson Co. v. Dawson Town & Gas Co., 46 Neb. 333 (64 N. W. 1097).

67. (1895.) The books of a corporation are its private books, as to third persons, and such persons are not chargeable with notice of what is contained therein, nor with the duty of examining them for the purpose of ascertaining the condition of the capital stock in respect to whether fully paid in or not and at what valuation, before granting credit to the corporation, to the extent that a failure to do so will bar the right to a proper action to impeach the transfer of stock to a party in consideration of the conveyance of corporate property, which may be shown in the books, and prove its fraudulent character. Gilkie & Anson Co. v. Dawson Town & Gas Co., 46 Neb. 333 (64 N. W. 1097).

68. (1898.) A purchaser of stock from one who fully paid for it in property cannot be held liable to creditors of the corporation solely on the theory that the property thus received in payment was accepted at too high a valuation. Troup v. Horbach, 53 Neb. 795 (74 N. W. 326).

69. (1898.) Owners of property have a right, in disposing of it, to place such valuation thereon as they see fit; and if, with such property at an overvaluation, they pay for capital stock issued to them by a corporation, the excess above the real value of the property cannot subsequently be treated by creditors of the corporation as never having been paid, in the absence of fraud, misrepresentation, suppression of the truth, and the violation of the obligations of law or morality, express or implied. Troup v. Horbach, 53 Neb. 795 (74 N. W. 326).

70. (1898.) In an action to hold liable to creditors of a corporation certain of its stockholders because, as found by the court, the property conveyed by such stockholders in payment for their stock was greatly overvalued, a judgment against the stockholders was improperly rendered in view of the further finding that defendants acted in good faith. Penfield v. Dawson Town & Gas Co., 57 Neb. 231 (77 N. W. 672).

Forfeiture of stock.

71. (1876.) A corporation has no authority to declare a forfeiture of, and sell the shares of, its capital stock for the nonpayment of assessments levied thereon, unless specially authorized so to do by its charter. Williams v. Lowe, 4 Neb. 382.

Actions on assessments or subscriptions.

Creditor's right to enforce liability for unpaid subscription, see post, §§ 151-220.

72. (1876.) When the subscription contract or charter of a corporation specifically fixes the capital stock at a certain amount, divided into shares of a certain amount each, the capital so fixed must be fully subscribed before an action will lie against a subscriber to recover assessments, unless there is a waiver of such condition precedent. Livesey v. Omaha Hotel Co., 5 Neb. 50; (1897) Macfarland v. West Side Improvement Ass'n, 53 Neb. 417 (73 N. W. 736).

73. (1891.) A banking organization in Franklin county proposed to move to Grand Island and organize there with a capital stock of $125,000, and erect a business house of a certain description on a lot designated, provided that R. and other persons would subscribe $30,000 to the capital stock. $35,000 were, in fact, subscribed by R. and others. In an action by the bank against R., the facts were stated, together with the contract of R. and others, and it was alleged that the bank had duly performed all the conditions on its part to be performed. Held, That the petition stated a cause of action against R. Security State Bank v. Raine, 31 Neb. 517 (48 N. W. 262).

74. (1892.) When there is testimony in the record which tends to show that the defendant waived the conditions of the contract in respect to the amount of stock to be subscribed before entering upon the main purpose of the corporation, viz., the construction of a public hall, this should have been submitted to the jury. Hards v. Platte Valley Improvement Co., 35 Neb. 263 (53 N. W. 73).

75. (1892.) In an action on the subscription to corporation stock, evidence held to sustain a finding for plaintiff. Hays v. Franklin County Lumber Co., 35 Neb. 511 (53 N. W. 381).

76. (1894.) One to whom stock is issued, who pays assessments thereon, acts as an officer and takes part in management of corporation, is estopped to deny his subscription. York Park Building Ass'n v. Barnes, 39 Neb. 834 (58 N. W. 440).

77. (1896.) In an action by a corporation against a stockholder, who defends on the ground of a misrepresentation as to the number of subscribers to stock already obtained, evidence that shows there are more subscribers than required by the representation, and no evidence that any were not bona fide purchasers, justifies a direction of the verdict for plaintiff. Hards v. Platte Valley Improvement Co., 46 Neb. 709 (65 N. W. 781).

78. (1896.) Where a defendant in a suit on a subscription files a counter-claim alleging that he was induced to subscribe through a promise that capital stock to the amount subscribed would be isued to him, he must aver payment or tender before he can claim anything by reason of plaintiff's failure to issue the stock. Nebraska Exposition Ass'n v. Townley, 46 Neb. 893 (65 N. W. 1062).

79. (1897.) One who acts as treasurer of a corporation, receives payment of assessments from other subscribers, himself pays certain assessments and disburses the funds of the corporation in carrying out its main objects, is estopped to set up that the stock has not all been subscribed, although at the time of such act he was ignorant of the deficiency. Macfarland v. West Side Improvement Ass'n, 53 Neb. 417 (73 N. W. 736).

80. (1897.) One elected treasurer of a corporation, who with the consent of its promoters permits an agent to perform all the active duties of the office, but in the name of the treasurer, is responsible for the consequences of the agent's acts as if they were his own. and is charged with notice of all facts learned by the agent by reason of his performance of such duties. Macfarland v. West Side Improvement Ass'n, 53 Neb. 417 (73 N. W. 736).

81. (1898.) When the directory of a corporation, before it is put into the hands of a receiver, makes a call or assessment on the stock subscribers for all or a part of their unpaid stock subscriptions, such calls become at once corporate property or assets of the corporation and may be sued for and collected by a receiver subsequently appointed as any other asset of the corporation. Wyman v. Williams, 53 Neb. 670 (74 N. W. 48).

82. (1898.) In an action on subscription to the stock of a banking corporation evidence showing the same was obtained by fraud in fraudulently representing that a certain other had subscribed sustains a verdict for defendant. Gretna State Bank v. Grabow, 54 Neb. 547 (74 N. W. 956).

83. (1898.) Where, in a suit by a corporation against a subscriber to its stock to recover his unpaid subscription, the defense is that the entire capital stock was not subscribed, a reply which avers that the defendant waived the non-payment of the entire stock is good as against a demurrer. Such a plea is not a conclusion of law, but the averment of an ultimate fact, included in which are all the ingredients which constitute waiver. Macfarland v. West Side Improvement Ass'n, 56 Neb. 277 (76 N. W. 584).

84. (1898.) In an action by a corporation against subscribers to its stock to recover unpaid subscription, where the defense is that the entire capital stock was not subscribed and a reply that defendants waived such non-payment under such a plea the acts and omissions of the defendant which tend to show or from which may be inferred, an intention on his part to waive subscription of the entire capital stock are competent and relevant. Macfarland v. West Side Improvement Ass'n, 56 Neb. 277 (76 N. W. 584).

85. (1902.) If made in good faith for the purpose of the corporation, stockholders when sued upon their subscription, cannot question the necessity of or occasion for a call. The necessity or advisability of making it rests entirely with the directors or officers of the corporation to whom the power has been entrusted. Estate of Fitzgerald v. Union Savings Bank, 65 Neb. 97 (90 N. W. 994).

——— Conditions precedent.

86. (1876.) When the subscription contract or charter of a corporation specifically fixes the capital stock at a certain amount, divided into shares of a certain amount each, the capital so fixed must be fully subscribed before an action will lie against a subscriber to recover assessments. Livesey v. Omaha Hotel Co., 5 Neb. 50.

87. (1884.) Where articles of incorporation fix the amount of the capital stock, the entire amount must be subscribed before a stockholder is liable to assessment for the accomplishment of the main object of the corporation unless the articles otherwise provide, or there is a waiver of the conditions. Hale v. Sanborn & Follett, 16 Neb. 1 (20 N. W. 97).

88. (1892.) Unless otherwise provided, the whole amount of capital fixed by a subscription contract must be fully secured by a bona fide subscription before an action will lie upon the personal contract of a subscriber to recover an assesment on the several shares. Hards v. Platte Valley Improvement Co., 35 Neb. 263 (53 N. W. 73).

89. (1895.) The fact that all the stock authorized by the articles of incorporation of a manufacturing company formed under sections 37, 38, and 39, chapter 16, Compiled Statutes 1893, entitled "Corporations," has not been subscribed, is not a defense to a subscriber for part of such stock when sued on his contract of subscription, if ten per cent. of the stock of such manufacturing corporation has been subscribed. Lincoln Shoe Mfg. Co. v. Sheldon, 44 Neb. 279 (62 N. W. 480).

90. (1895.) The fact that all of the stock authorized by the articles of a corporation has not been subscribed is not a fense to an action on a contract of subscription of stock. Lincoln Shoe Mfg. Co. v. Sheldon, 44 Neb. 279 (62 N. W. 480).

91. (1897.) The capital stock of a corporation must be fully subscribed before an action will lie against a subscriber to recover assessments thereon, unless by law or charter provision the corporation is permitted to proceed with its main design with a less subscription. A subscriber may, however, by his conduct, either waive or estop himself from setting up such a defense. Macfarland v. West Side Improvement Ass'n, 53 Neb. 417 (73 N. W. 736).

92. (1898. A suit by the receiver of a corporation against subscribers to its stock to recover their unpaid stock subscriptions will not lie until the amount justly due from the corporation has been ascertained and the corporate property exhausted. Wyman v. Williams, 53 Neb. 670 (74 N. W. 48).

Liability of corporation on subscription.

93. (1896.) Under a subscription contract with builders for the construction of a factory for operation by a company to be incorporated by the subscribers whose liability was several, it was held that the corporation was not liable on the contract, and that the builders could not enforce a mechanic's lien for the amount of the unpaid subscriptions. Davis v. Ravenna Creamery Co., 48 Neb. 471 (67 N. W. 436).

B. Issue of Certificate.

Fraudulent issue.

94. (1892.) A fraudulent issue of stock in corporation to one of the directors, by the secretary, to give his control thereof, is illegal and will be enjoined. Humboldt Driving Park Ass'n v. Stevens, 34 Neb. 528 (52 N. W. 568; 33 Am. St. Rep. 654).

Waiver of right to allege invalidity.

95. (1897.) Stock in a bank was issued to A, who pledged it as collateral security to a loan procured from another bank. The bank issuing the stock accepted a surrender of the certificate and issued a new one in its place to the cashier of the bank. Held, That it thereby waived any right it might have had to rescind its contract with the original holder and cancel the stock on the ground of fraud in its procurement. Tecumseh Nat. Bank v. Russell, 50 Neb. 277 (69 N. W. 763).

Ratification of unauthorized issue.

96. (1878.) O., the president of a bank, informed one R. that they were about to reorganize the bank, and that, if he would act as director thereof, and his firm would give the bank all their business as they had done before, and use their influence in its behalf, they would give him ten shares of the stock. R. accepted the proposition and was elected and served as a director, and the firm of which he was a member continued to do business with the bank. Held, That the agreement was a sufficient consideration to entitle R. to the ten shares of stock; and that the president professing to act for the bank in the transaction, and the bank receiving the benefits derived from the contract, thereby ratified his action. Rich v. State Nat. Bank, 7 Neb. 201 (29 Am. Rep. 382).

C. Transfer of Shares.

Effect on right to dividend, see post, § 120.

In general.

97. (1876.) Stock of a corporation, being the separate property of the individual, is, in a legal sense, personal property; it may be sold by the owner of it; it may be conveyed by will, and it may descend from an intestate to the administrator. Williams v. Lowe, 4 Neb. 382.

Requisites of contract.

98. (1902.) A contract for the purchase of certain shares of stock in a corporation and for the repurchase of the same upon the happening of a certain event, where it has been fully performed by one of the parties thereto, is not within the statute of frauds. Fremont Carriage Mfg. Co. v. Thomsen, 65 Neb. 370 (91 N. W. 376).

99. (1907.) Where by reason of an agreement made by the president of a bank with a proposed purchaser of its stock that the bank will accept certain notes and mortgages held by him, amounting to the face value of said stock, in payment therefor, and that if such purchase is made he will hold the purchaser harmless and indemnify him against any action of the bank to recover any further or other amount either on his indorsement of said notes or otherwise, in payment for said stock, the bank stock is actually purchased and paid for, according to its terms, such purchase is a sufficient consideration to support the agreement. Patrick v. Barker, 78 Neb. 823 (112 N. W. 358).

Regulation by corporation.

100. (1907.) Section 124, chapter 16, Compiled Statutes 1905, is not only definitive of the general powers of a corporation, but is also expressive of certain corporate qualities or properties, or consequences which follow the act of incorporation. The fifth clause of that section, which purports to give a corporation the power "to render the interest of the stockholders transferable," was not intended to make the transferability of stock dependent on some affirmative act of the corporation authorizing its transfer, but to impress the stock with that quality as a consequence of the act of incorporation. Miller v. Farmers Milling & Elevator Co., 78 Neb. 441 (110 N. W. 995).

101. (1907.) The regulation of stock transfers is a legitimate subject of corporate legislation, in the form of by-laws, to enable the corporation to know who are stockholders, to whom dividends are payable, who are entitled to vote, and, where the company has a lien on the stock for debts due to it from the stockholders, to enable it to prevent a transfer in derogation of its rights. Miller v. Farmers Milling & Elevator Co., 78 Neb. 441 (110 N. W. 995).

102. (1907.) Corporate legislation in the form of by-laws regulating stock transfers will not be enforced beyond what is reasonably necessary to serve such purposes, where its enforcement would operate as an infringement on the property rights of others, or as an unreasonable restraint upon the transfer of property in the stock of the corporation. Miller v. Farmers Milling & Elevator Co., 78 Neb. 441 (110 N. W. 995).

103. (1907.) A by-law of a corporation organized under the laws of this state which limits the number of shares which a person may hold, or forbids a transfer of stock by a stockholder to a non-stockholder without the consent of the directors, is void as an unreasonable restriction upon the transfer of property. Miller v. Farmers Milling & Elevator Co., 78 Neb. 441 (110 N. W. 995).

Title and rights of purchaser.

104. (1897.) One claiming stock by purchase from a cashier who wrongfully used the funds of his bank to buy the stock, held, under evidence set out in opinion, not an innocent purchaser for value. Tecumseh Nat. Bank v. Russell, 50 Neb. 277 (69 N. W. 763).

105. (1903.) If the debtor has sold or pledged corporate stock owned by him, in good faith before the levy on such stock by garnishment, the right of such bona fide purchasers will not be affected by the levy, even though, by the books of the corporation, the stock appears to be the property of the debtor and is so regarded by the corporation. Farmers & Merchants Nat. Bank v. Mosher, 68 Neb. 724 (100 N. W. 133).

Fraud.

106. (1894.) Where an officer of a corporation knows the secretary's report is false and induces one who relies upon it to make a purchase of corporate stock on the faith of the report, the purchaser may have the contract canceled. Foley v. Holtry, 43 Neb. 133 (61 N. W. 120).

107. (1899.) Assuming it to be the right of a stockholder to examine the books of the company, it is not, as a matter of law, his duty to do so, after becoming a stockholder, to ascertain whether or not he has been defrauded in the purchase, he not being aware of any fact leading to a suspicion. Gerner v. Mosher, 58 Neb. 135 (78 N. W. 384; 46 L. R. A. 244).

Sale by corporation.

108. (1902.) A corporation, when not prohibited by its articles or by statute, may buy and sell its own stock and hold, reissue or retire the same, provided such act is done in entire good faith and in no manner injures the rights of its creditors or its stockholders. Fremont Carriage Mfg. Co. v. Thomsen, 65 Neb. 370 (91 N. W. 376).

109. (1903.) The general manager of a corporation in effectuating a sale of the entire capital stock of his company, acts as the agent of all stockholders, and he cannot receive and retain a secret compensation from the vendee for effectuating the contract of sale. Barber v. Martin, 67 Neb 445 (93 N. W. 722).

110. (1903.) In an action by a stockholder against the manager of an insurance company, charging the manager, as agent, with fraudulently concealing from plaintiff the actual consideration received for plaintiff's stock, sold by him as agent, evidence of representations made to other stockholders similarly situated is admissible when such representations are so related in character and point of time as to furnish a basis for a reasonable inference as to the main issue. Barber v. Martin, 67 Neb. 445 (93 N. W. 722).

111. (1903.) Where the evidence shows conclusively that all the negotiations for the purchase of the capital stock of an insurance company contemplated all the stock, it is not error to exclude, on cross-examination, the statement of a witness, who was the vendee, as to what he would have given per share for less than all the stock. Barber v. Martin, 67 Neb. 445 (93 N. W. 722).

Guaranty of resale.

112. (1897.) One who purchased stock in a corporation under a guaranty that it could be resold for $3,000 within a year, held not required to submit to the guarantor for acceptance or rejection all offers received during that time. Lobeck v. Duke, 50 Neb. 568 (70 N. W. 36).

113. (1897.) Where defendant sold stock in a corporation to plaintiff, and guaranteed that it could be sold within a year for $3.000, and there was evidence tending to show exchanges of property for other stock in the same corporation during the year, it was proper to instruct the jury that the agreement contemplated a sale for money, and that D. was not required to make any efforts to exchange it for other property. Lobeck v. Duke, 50 Neb. 568 (70 N. W. 36).

114. (1902.) A contract with a corporation by which it sells certain of its shares of stock and agrees to repurchase the same upon the happening of a certain specified event is not ultra vires; and for a breach thereof the purchaser may recover of the corporation the amount agreed upon as the price of such repurchase. Fremont Carriage Mfg. Co. v. Thomsen, 65 Neb. 370 (91 N. W. 376).

Registration of transfer on corporate books.

115. 1891.) Although an assignment of bank stock as collateral was not entered upon the books of the corporation, as required, yet where the officers of the corporation had actual notice of such assignment, the bank is liable to the assignee for dividends, payment to the assignor being no defense. Central Nebraska Nat. Bank v. Wilder, 32 Neb. 454 (49 N. W. 369).

116. (1905.) When under its by-laws or under a statute it is necessary that the transfer of the stock be made on its books, and the corporation wrongfully refuses to make the transfer, such refusal is a conversion of the stock. Herrick v. Humphrey Hardware Co., 73 Neb. 809 (103 N. W. 685).

Action for purchase price.

117. (1898.) To maintain an action at law for the purchase price of corporation stock plaintiff, ordinarily, must plead and prove a delivery or tender of such stock before the bringing of his suit. Bartlett v Scott, 55 Neb. 477 (75 N. W. 1102).

Judicial sales.

118. (1876.) A sale of shares of stocks in a ferry company under a decree pro confesso to subject them to the payment of an assessment thereon where the charter of the company gave it no authority so to do, is void. Williams v. Lowe, 4 Neb. 382.

Enjoining transfer.

119. (1901.) The transfer of shares of stock of a corporation may be enjoined at the suit of the owner when a bank of another state has wrongfully received the certificates of stock in pledge from one not the owner thereof, and not authorized to so pledge the same, and in attempting to have the stock transferred to the bank as the owner thereof upon the books of the corporation. Reynolds v. Touzalin Improvement Co., 62 Neb. 236 (87 N. W. 24).

D. Dividends and New Stock.

Allowance of unpaid dividends on foreclosure by building and loan association, see Building and Loan Associations, §§ 48-53.

Effect of pledge or sale of stock.

120. (1901.) The vendee or pledgee of shares of stock in a corporation is entitled to all dividends which are declared on the stock after the sale or pledge, regardless whether the transfer has been made upon the books of the corporation. Farmers & Merchants Bank v. Mosher, 63 Neb. 130 (88 N. W. 522).

Effect of garnishment of corporation.

121. (1903.) A stockholder's interest in a corporation, and in all of its property and rights, is represented by his stock. A levy upon the stock of a debtor by garnishment of the corporation pursuant to the statute will impound dividends upon the stock declared while the proceedings are pending. Farmers & Merchants Nat. Bank v. Mosher, 68 Neb. 724 (100 N. W. 133).

Assignment of dividends.

122. (1895.) Dividends declared by a corporation upon shares of its stock belong to the parties in whose names the shares of stock are registered in the books of the corporation at the time the dividends are declared, but such dividends may be made the subject of a valid contract in like manner and to the same extent as other personal property. Cook v. Monroe, 45 Neb. 349 (63 N. W. 800).

Preference in purchase of new stock.

123. (1892.) A corporation can issue its stock only by direction of the corporation, and unless there are stipulations in its charter to the contrary, its stockholders are entitled pro rata to a preference in the purchase of the new stock. Humboldt Driving Park Ass'n v. Stevens, 34 Neb. 528 (52 N. W. 568; 33 Am. St. Rep. 654).

V. MEMBERS AND STOCKHOLDERS.

Right of stockholders of railroad to repudiate sale of property, see Railroads, § 155.

Power of corporation to hold stock in another company, see post, §§ 266-268.

Representation of corporation by stockholders, see post, §§ 274, 275.

A. Rights and Liabilities to Corporations.

Corporate property.

124. (1903.) Stockholders, as such, have no title to the corporate property which they may convey or incumber in their own name; but this is only another way of saying that the corporation must act through its proper agents, and in the prescribed way. Home Fire Ins. Co. v. Barber, 67 Neb. 644 (93 N. W. 1024; 108 Am. St. Rep. 716; 60 L. R. A. 927).

——— Garnishment of corporation.

125. (1901.) The real and not the apparent interest of a stockholder in the property of the corporation represented by shares of stock registered in his name, may be reached by garnishee process served on the corporation. Farmers & Merchants Nat. Bank v. Mosher, 63 Neb. 130 (88 N. W. 552).

126. (1901.) The real actual rights and interests of a stockholder, will be reached by the garnishment upon the corporation without regard to the appearent interest of the owner. Farmers & Merchants Nat. Bank v. Mosher, 63 Neb. 130 (88 N. W. 552).

Dues and assessments.

127. (1898.) The charter of the Omaha Law Library association examined, and held to confer authority on the board of directors of the corporation to enact a by-law imposing on annual due on each of its stockholders. Omaha Law Library Ass'n v. Connell, 55 Neb. 396 (75 N. W. 837).

128. (1898.) The by-laws of the Omaha Law Library Association examined, and held not to attempt an assessment of the stock of the corporation. Omaha Law Library Ass'n v. Connell, 55 Neb. 396 (75 N. W. 837).

129. (1898.) An assessment, as that term is understood in corporation law, is a levy made upon the stock of the corporation requiring the stockholder to pay in proportion to the amount of stock owned by him. Omaha Law Library Ass'n v. Connell, 55 Neb. 396 (75 N. W. 837).

130. (1899.) In absence of statutory authority or power given by articles of incorporation there can be no assessment against paid-up stock. Enterprise Ditch Co. v. Moffitt, 58 Neb. 642 (79 N. W. 560; 76 Am. St. Rep. 122; 45 L. R. A. 647*n*).

131. (1899.) The fully paid-up stock of a corporation is the personal property of the owner. and the articles of incorporation and laws of the state are elemental of the contract existing between the corporation and the owner of stock, and may not be so amended by legislative enactment as to make the paid-up stock subject to an assessment or general or specific assessments, and forfeitable, or subject to summary sale by the corporation, for the non-payment of such assessment. Enterprise Ditch Co. v. Moffitt, 58 Neb. 642 (79 N. W. 560; 76 Am. St. Rep. 122; 45 L. R. A. 647*n*).

132. (1906.) Where corporate stock is fully paid up, an assessment levied thereon, as provided for by the articles of incorporation and stock certificate, and levied by a board of which the objecting stockholder was a member, is valid and enforceable. Mirage Irrigation Co. v. Sturgeon, 77 Neb. 175 (108 N. W. 977).

Rights of corporation as creditor of stockholder.

133. (1905.) A corporation has no lien upon the shares of its stockholders for debts due from them to the company, unless such lien is provided for by statute or by the charter or by-laws of the corporation. Herrick v. Humphrey Hardware Co., 73 Neb. 809 (103 N. W. 685).

133*a*. (1907.) Where a stockholder in a bank which is in process of liquidation, who is indebted to the bank, refuses to pay his indebtedness and litigates the question, thereby preventing the distribution of funds on hand, and the litigation is determined adversely to him, he should be charged with interest upon the amount of his indebtedness, as found by the court, down to the time of the entry of judgment, regardless of the fact of the existence of such funds. Gund v. Ballard, 80 Neb. 385 (114 N. W. 420).

B. Meetings.

Election of officers, see post, §§ 221-224.

Calling meeting.

134. (1903.) Whether less than a majority of the shares of stock in a corporation having a fixed capital stock, divided into a definite number of shares, may hold a valid meeting and bind the corporation, in the absence of any rule upon the subject, left undecided. Haskell v. Read, 68 Neb. 115 (96 N. W. 1007).

135. (1903.) Whatever may be the rule in case of stated meetings, or those regularly called or convened, a minority of the shares, after failure of the stated meeting for election of officers, cannot call a new meeting on their own authority and hold a valid election. Haskell v. Read, 68 Neb. 115 (96 N. W. 1007).

Right to vote.

136. (1898.) Prima facie, at least, the right to vote stock does not exist until it has been registered in the name of the person seeking to vote it. Reynolds v. Bridenthal, 57 Neb. 280 (77 N. W. 658).

137. (1903.) As a general rule the right to vote pledged shares of stock remains in the pledgor until foreclosure. Haskell v. Read, 68 Neb. 107 (93 N. W. 997).

138. (1903.) It is not necessary that a stockholder shall have paid for his stock in full to enable him to vote all his shares at an election. Haskell v. Read, 68 Neb. 107 (93 N. W. 997).

139. (1903.) Whatever might be the rule as to a bona fide purchaser of or subscriber for an overissue of shares of stock, one who procures the overissue without consideration, by false representations, will not be heard to assert that a stockholder who voted therefor, relying on such representations, is estopped to question the validity of the shares. Haskell v. Read, 68 Neb. 107 (93 N. W. 997).

140. (1903.) A stockholder may maintain a suit to enjoin the holder of shares issued in excess of the amount authorized by the articles of incorporation, and without consideration, from voting such shares in prejudice of his rights, and to procure cancelation thereof. Haskell v. Read, 68 Neb. 107 (93 N. W. 997).

141. (1903.) The officers of a corporation, in conducting an election, will not look behind the books of the corporation which show who are registered as stockholders; but a court of equity may do so, and may enjoin a pledgee from voting the shares pledged in prejudice of the rights of the pledgor. Haskell v Read, 68 Neb. 107 (93 N. W. 997).

C. Suing or Defending on Behalf of Corporation.

Right in general.

142. (1900.) A corporation holds its property in trust for its shareholders who, like other beneficial owners, may insist that it shall be properly managed and preserved from waste. State, ex rel. Bugbee, v. Holmes, 60 Neb. 39 (82 N. W. 109).

143. (1900.) Where the officers of a corporation fail and refuse to protect and conserve the corporate property, the shareholders may intervene in pending suits for the purpose of protecting their own interests. State, ex rel. Bugbee, v. Holmes, 60 Neb. 39 (82 N. W. 109).

Action to set aside conveyance by corporation.

144. (1881.) A stockholder in a corporation has a remedy in chancery against individuals, in whatever character they profess to act, if the subject of complaint is an imputed violation of a corporate franchise, or the denial of a right growing out of it, for which there is not an adequate remedy at law. Such an action lies to set aside conveyances made by officers of the company to defendants in fraud of the stockholders. Wilcox v. Bickel, 11 Neb. 154 (8 N. W. 436).

145. (1903.) The minority stockholders can maintain an action in their own names to set aside an illegal transfer of all property and good will of the corporation, when such transfer is made by the board of directors of the corporation pursuant to instructions of the majority of the stockholders. McLeod v. Lincoln Medical College, 69 Neb. 555 (98 N. W. 672).

Conditions precedent.

146. (1894.) Any stockholder of a corporation, whose officers have abused their trust in the interest of another corporation, may without previous demand upon the directors to bring suit, maintain in his own name, in behalf of his corporation, an action for redress and for an accounting between the two corporation, impleading both as defendants. Fitzgerald v. Fitzgerald & Mallory Construction Co., 41 Neb. 374 (59 N. W. 838).

147. (1894.) Where the directors of a corporation having the authority to direct its litigation are themselves guilty of the wrong complained of, a court of equity will interfere at the instance of the stockholders without a demand and refusal upon the part of the directors to bring the suit, for it would be against the plainest principles of justice to permit the perpetrators of the wrong to conduct a litigation against themselves. Fitzgerald v. Fitzgerald & Mallory Construction Co., 41 Neb. 374 (59 N. W. 838).

Estoppel.

148. (1894.) Acquiescence by a stockholder will not bar a recovery in a suit brought by him, in behalf of a corporation, to recover for wrongs committed by its officers in the interest of another corporation. Fitzgerald v. Fitzgerald & Mallory Construction Co., 41 Neb. 374 (59 N. W. 838). [Overruled. 44 Neb. 463; 67 Neb. 644.]

Pleading.

149. (1881.) In a suit by stockholders to set aside an alleged fraudulent conveyance of the company's property by its officers to defendant, were it not for the alleged disorganized condition of the said corporation, it would be necessary for the petition to state that the plaintiff had first applied to the officers or managing directors of the company and demanded that proper proceedings be taken in the name of the corporation for the protection of the property, but the allegations of the petition to the effect that all of the officers of the company have absconded and their whereabouts unknown, etc., constitute a sufficient showing that it was impossible for the plaintiff to make such demand. Wilcox v. Bickel, 11 Neb. 154 (8 N. W. 436).

Burden of proof.

150. (1894.) In an action on behalf of a corporation to recover the discount at which certain bonds held by said corporation had been by its board of directors ostensibly authorized to be sold to the stockholders of said corporation, resulting, however, in such sale only to the individual directors who voted to authorize it. and to parties in privity with them in wrongfully making such sale, held, that the burden of proof strongly devolved upon the purchasers of said bonds at the discount authorized to show affirmatively that the price paid was the fair value of such bonds; and the proofs, as well as the finding of the trial court, having been adverse to such showing, held further, that the discount was properly recoverable. Fitzgerald v. Fitzgerald & Mallory Construction Co., 41 Neb. 374 (59 N. W. 838).

D. Liability for Corporate Dates and Acts.

Nature and grounds in general.

151. (1898.) Within the common-law rule there was no individual liability of stockholders in a corporation for its debts. Our constitution states and also limits the liability of a stockholder in a corporation for its debts. Gorder v. Conner, 56 Neb. 781 (77 N. W. 383).

Constitutional and statutory provisions.

152. (1896.) The provisions of section 7, article XI, of the constitution of Nebraska, designated "Corporations," that "every stockholder in a banking corporation or institution shall be individually responsible and liable to its creditors over and above the amount of stock by him held to an amount equal to his respective stock or shares so held, for all its liabilities accruing while he remains such stockholder," are enforceable without special supplementary statutory enactments. Farmers Loan & Trust Co. v. Funk, 49 Neb. 353 (68 N. W. 520).

Contracts and securities for payment of corporate liabilities.

153. (1895.) An agreement by the creditors of an insolvent bank with the stockholders and officers thereof to discount their claims against the bank ten per cent, to throw off all interest after a certain date, and to extend the time of payment of the claims for a definite period, is a sufficient consideration for a bond given to a trustee of such creditors by such stockholders and officers to secure the payment of the indebtedness of the bank. Mullen v. Morris, 43 Neb. 596 (62 N. W. 74).

154. (1902.) Where the creditors of a bank agree to an extension of time of the payment of their claims on the condition, among others, that certain of the stockholders of the bank shall secure the payment of such claims by the execution of a trust deed to real estate, the grantors in such deeds cannot, by an agreement among themselves and without the consent of the creditors, determine the order in which the trust property shall be sold, or compel the creditors to exhaust the property of one before that of another is resorted to. Michigan Trust Co. v. City of Red Cloud, 3 Unof. 722 (92 N. W. 900).

Failure to publish list of indebtedness.

Judgment and execution against corporation as condition precedent, see post, §§ 182-191.

155. (1878.) Where the president and a majority of the board of directors of a corporation fail to make and publish the notice required by the statute, of all the existing debts of the corporation, the stockholders will be jointly and severally liable for all debts contracted by such corporation, while the officers are thus in default. Smith v. Steele, 8 Neb. 115.

156. (1881.) Debts mentioned in sections 136 and 139, page 200, General Statutes, Comp. Stats., sec. 136, are debts arising upon contracts, express or implied, and not damages for torts. Doolittle v. Marsh, 11 Neb. 243 (9 N. W. 54).

157. (1882.) The liability of a stockholder for debts contracted by the corporation, while it was in default of publication of the annual notice required by law, as to the amount of its debts, is purely statutory, and cannot and should not be extended beyond the strict letter of the statute, as primarily a stockholder is only liable for the amount remaining unpaid upon his stock. Cady v. Smith, 12 Neb. 628 (12 N. W. 95).

158. (1893.) The stockholders are not liable under the provisions of sections 136 and 139, chapter 11, General Statutes, for a debt which was not incurred while the officers of the bank were in default in publishing notice of the condition of the bank. Porter v. Sherman County Banking Co., 36 Neb. 271 (54 N. W. 424); (1893) Gorder v. Plattsmouth Canning Co., 36 Neb. 548 (54 N. W. 830).

159. (1895.) Sections 136 and 139, chapter 11, General Statutes 1873, imposing a liability on stockholders for omission to do certain acts, were repealed by act of April 6, 1891. Kleckner v. Turk, 45 Neb. 176 (63 N. W. 469).

160. (1895.) Corporators will not be heard to allege failure to become a de jure corporation in order to escape individual liability for neglecting to comply wth statutory requirements. Kleckner v. Turk, 45 Neb. 176 (63 N. W. 469).

161. (1895.) The act of the legislature approved April 6. 1891, entitled "An act to amend section 136 and section 139 of chapter 16, Compiled Statutes 1889, and to repeal said original sections," is not unconstitutional on the ground that the subject matter of the portion of the act, which makes its provisions operative as to actions pending or accrued, is not expressed in or not sufficiently stated in the title. Kleckner v. Turk, 45 Neb. 176 (63 N. W. 469).

162. (1895.) Section 139, chapter 11, General Statutes 1872, making stockholders individually liable for corporate debts where there has been a failure to give notice and other requisites of organizaton, is penal. Kleckner v. Turk, 45 Neb. 176 (63 N. W. 469).

——— Effect of repeal of statute.

163. (1894.) Where the law commands corporations to do certain acts, as to publish annually a notice of their indebtedness, and declares that all the stockholders of such a corporation shall be liable for all the debts of the corporation, if it fails to comply with the requirements of the statute, then such a law is designed as a punishment of the stockholders, and is penal, and not contractual, and hence its repeal pending an action against stockholders abates the action. Globe Publishing Co. v. State Bank of Nebraska, 41 Neb. 175 (59 N. W. 683; 27 L. R. A. 854).

www.lstool.com.cn

164. (1896.) The liability imposed by section 139, chapter 16, Compiled Statutes, as originally enacted, was penal in its character, and rights of action thereunder not reduced to judgment, abated with the repeal of said section without a saving clause. Hogue v. Capital Nat. Bank of Lincoln, 47 Neb. 929 (66 N. W. 1036).

Defective organization.

165. (1894.) Where a statute provides that until certain things are done by persons forming a corporation, such as the filing of its articles of association in the office of a public officer, the stockholders in such corporation shall be liable for the debts thereof, such a statute is only declaratory of the common law. Globe Publishing Co. v. State Bank of Nebraska, 41 Neb. 175 (59 N. W. 683; 27 L. R. A. 854).

166. (1894.) Until the requirements of a statute providing that certain things are to be done by persons desiring to form a corporation, have been complied with, a de jure corporation does not exist, and the stockholders thereof are jointly and severally liable for the debts contracted by such voluntary unincorporated association of persons; and such a statute and the rights of creditors acquired thereunder are contractual in their nature. Globe Publishing Co. v. State Bank of Nebraska, 41 Neb. 175 (59 N. W. 683; 27 L. R. A. 854).

167. (1894.) Where persons attempt in good faith to incorporate themselves into a valid corporation, and such a corporation actually enters upon the discharge of corporate functions and so continues for a considerable time unchallenged by the state, persons who contract with such a corporation cannot hold the stockholders thereof liable on such contract because it transpires that by some mistake or oversight the corporation had never become a technical de jure corporation. Globe Publishing Co. v. State Bank of Nebraska, 41 Neb. 175 (59 N. W. 683; 27 L. R. A. 854).

168. (1896.) Promissory notes purporting to be executed by a corporation construed to be the obligations of the corporation, and not of the members thereof. Nebraska Nat. Bank of York v. Ferguson, 49 Neb. 109 (68 N. W. 370; 59 Am. St. Rep. 522).

Liability for unpaid subscriptions.

169. (1893.) Under section 4, article XI, of the constitution of Nebraska the original subscribers for stock of a corporation or joint stock association are liable to the creditors of such corporation or association for the amount unpaid on said subscription, and such liability shall follow the stock without releasing such subscriber. Commercial Nat. Bank of Omaha v. Gibson, 37 Neb. 750 (56 N. W. 616).

170. (1895.) The capital, including unpaid subscriptions for stock of a corporation, is a trust fund for the payment of its creditors. Gilkie & Anson Co. v. Dawson Town Gas Co., 46 Neb. 333 (64 N. W. 1097).

——— Right of creditor to enforce liability.

171. (1898.) One creditor of a corporation cannot maintain an action in his own name and for his own benefit against the debtor stock subscribers of a corporation; but, to subject unpaid stock subscriptions to the payment of corporate debts, all debtor stock subscribers and all creditors of the corporation should be made parties, and a receiver appointed. Van Pelt v. Gardner, 54 Neb. 701 (75 N. W. 874).

172. (1901.) The liability of a stockholder for the unpaid subscription, whether it is due to the corporation or not, does not run direct to the creditor, but his obligation is through the corporation. Bohrer v. Adair, 61 Neb. 824 (86 N. W. 495).

173. (1901.) In this state an action at law cannot be maintained by a creditor of an insolvent corporation against a stockholder in such corporation for his unpaid subscription; such action can only be maintained by a bill in equity for the benefit of all the creditors of such corporation and against all the stockholders thereof whose subscriptions are unpaid. Reed v. Burg, 2 Unof. 117 (96 N. W. 414).

——— Release of subscriber by corporation.

174. (1898.) A provision in the charter of a corporation organized under the laws of this state which provides that the private property of a stockholder shall not be liable for the debts of the corporation is void, in so far as it attempts to exempt the stockholder from liability—for his unpaid stock subscription—for the payment of corporate debts. Van Pelt v. Gardner, 54 Neb. 701 (75 N. W. 874).

Persons liable.

175. (1903.) After acquiring the stock of another corporation, a savings bank becomes subject to any liability thereon the same as other stockholders. Hill v. Shilling, 69 Neb. 152 (95 N. W. 24).

Extent of liability.

176. (1893.) W. and T. were conducting a private bank at L., and on November 1, 1887, organized a corporation with an alleged capital of $50,000, of which they retained a controlling interest. They turned over the deposits and assets of the private bank to the new corporation, and notes were taken from a number of the stockholders for the amount of their stock. Held, That the stockholders were liable for the unpaid stock held by each, and for a sum equal to the shares so held by each for all liabilities of the bank accruing while he was a stockholder. Porter v. Sherman County Banking Co., 36 Neb. 271 (54 N. W. 424).

177. (1894.) When the law prescribes what the liability of a shareholder shall be, for instance, that such shareholder shall be liable to the creditors of the corporation for double the amount of his stock, or for a sum equal to the amount of his stock, or for the amount remaining unpaid on his subscription to the stock of such company, the law is then speaking of and fixing the liability of a stockholder in a corporation de jure, as, without an express statute, a stockholder in such a corporation would not be liable for any debt whatsoever of such corporation. Globe Publishing Co. v. State Bank of Nebraska, 41 Neb. 175 (59 N. W. 683; 27 L. R. A. 854).

178. (1894.) Persons who organize themselves into a de jure corporation, when a statute is in force fixing the liability of stockholders for debts of the corporation, incorporate it into, and it becomes a part of, their charter, and they impliedly agree and assent that their liability for the debts of the corporation shall be as fixed by such a law. Globe Publishing Co. v. State Bank of Nebraska, 41 Neb. 175 (59 N. W. 683; 27 L. R. A. 854).

179. (1898.) Section 4, article XI, of the constitution (Miscellaneous Corporations), by fixing the liability of stockholders, limits such liability, and it is not within the power of the legislature to extend it. Van Pelt v. Gardner, 54 Neb. 701 (75 N. W. 874).

180. (1898.) The liability of a stock subscriber, for corporate debts, except he be a stock subscriber of a banking corporation, is limited to the amount of his unpaid stock subscription. Van Pelt v. Gardner, 54 Neb. 701 (75 N. W. 874); (1898) Gorder v. Conner, 56 Neb. 781 (77 N. W. 383).

Set-off against suit by stockholder.

181. (1898.) In an action by a stockholder of an insolvent corporation to enjoin an execution sale of real estate which had been purchased by him from the members of a firm against whom the defendant had recovered the judgment on which the execution was issued, the answer charged that all the stockholders of such corporation were liable for the payment of the debt which was the basis of the judgment, and asked that they be brought in and required to pay the same. Held, Not to constitute a counter-claim within the meaning of section 99 of the code of civil procedure. Wehn v. Fall, 55 Neb. 547 (76 N. W. 13; 70 Am. St. Rep. 397).

Necessity of judgment and execution against corporation.

182. (1893.) The constitutional requirements, that the exact amount justly due shall be first ascertained, and that the corporate property shall have been exhausted before enforcing individual liability for unpaid subscription for stock, are sufficiently met by the rendition of a judgment and the return of an execution nulla bona against the corporation whose stockholders are sought to be held liable to its creditors. Commercial Nat. Bank of Omaha v. Gibson, 37 Neb. 750 (56 N. W. 616); (1898) Van Pelt v. Gardner, 54 Neb. 701 (75 N. W. 874).

183. (1894.) The creditors of a de jure corporation have no right of action against the stockholders thereof until they have reduced their claims against the corporation to judgment, and until execution issued upon such judgment has been returned, wholly or in part, unsatisfied. Globe Publishing Co. v. State Bank of Nebraska, 41 Neb. 175 (59 N. W. 683; 27 L. R. A. 854).

184. (1894.) The word "ascertained," in section 4, article XI, of the constitution, means "judicially ascertained;" and to "judicially ascertain" the amount due from a corporation to a creditor thereof means to have the finding and judgment or decree of a court as to such amount, and such a creditor's cause of action does not accrue until the return unsatisfied in whole or in part of an execution issued on a judgment rendered in his favor against the corporation for the corporate debt. Globe Publishing Co. v. State Bank of Nebraska, 41 Neb. 175 (59 N. W. 683; 27 L. R. A. 854); (1898) German Nat. Bank v. Farmers & Merchants Bank, 54 Neb. 593 (74 N. W. 1086).

185. (1895.) An action to enforce the statutory liability of a stockholder arising from a corporation's failure to publish an annual notice of its indebtedness as required by law, cannot be maintained until after a judgment has been rendered against such corporation by which has been judicially ascertained the amount owing by it. Following Globe Publishing Co. v. State Bank of Nebraska, 41 Neb. 175. Ball v. Wicks, 45 Neb. 367 (63 N. W. 806).

186. (1895.) In all cases of claims against corporations and joint stock associations the exact amount justly due shall be first ascertained, and after the corporate property shall have been exhausted the individual subscribers thereof shall be individually liable to the extent of their unpaid subscriptions, and the liability for the unpaid subscriptions shall follow the stock. Gilkie & Anson Co. v. Dawson Town Gas Co., 46 Neb. 333 (64 N. W. 1097).

187. (1896.) The constitutional requirement (const., art. XI, sec. 4, under "Miscellaneous Corporations") that the indebtedness of a corporation shall be ascertained and the corporate assets exhausted before the enforcement of individual liability of stockholders, applies to banking corporations. Farmers Loan & Trust Co. v. Funk, 49 Neb. 353 (68 N. W. 520).

188. (1897.) Section 4, article XI, of the constitution, under miscellaneous corporations, makes the liability of subscribers for unpaid subscriptions a secondary liability to be enforced only after the amount of the debts has been judicially ascertained and the corporate property exhausted. State v. German Savings Bank, 50 Neb. 734 (70 N. W. 221).

189. (1897.) A proceeding by the receiver of an insolvent bank to collect unpaid subscriptions to its capital stock is one on behalf of creditors of the corporation, and is a "case of claims" against it within the meaning of section 4, article XI, of the constitution requiring the amount due to be ascertained and the corporate property first exhausted. State v. German Savings Bank, 50 Neb. 734 (70 N. W. 221).

190. (1898.) Until the legal remedy has been exhausted a creditor of an insolvent and dissolved corporation cannot obtain satisfaction of his claim by suit against a stockholder who has in any way come into possession of corporate assets. Wehn v. Fall, 55 Neb. 547 (76 N. W. 13; 70 Am. St. Rep. 397).

191. (1902.) It is not necessary that a receiver of an insolvent bank procure executions against himself and a return of nulla bona on all claims against the bank before commencing action to enforce stockholder's liability. Brinkworth v. Hazlett, 64 Neb. 592 (90 N. W. 537).

——— Waiver or estoppel affecting necessity.

192. (1897.) The members of a board of directors of an insolvent corporation who took part in a meeting of said board at which, by a unanimous vote, an assessment upon the unpaid subscriptions of such directors was declared necessary to discharge the debts of the corportaion and accordingly there were made such assessments, are in no situation to question their liability for the amount of such assessments because of the fact that no judgment had been rendered against the corporation, and its want of assets established by the return, nulla bona, of an execution against it. Wyman v. Williams, 52 Neb. 833 (73 N. W. 285).

Conclusiveness of judgment against corporation.

193. (1900.) A stockholder is bound by a decree of a court of equity against a corporation in enforcement of a corporate duty, although not a party as an individual, but only through representation by the company. Commonwealth Mutual Fire Ins Co. v. Hayden Bros., 60 Neb. 636 (83 N. W. 922; 83 Am. St. Rep. 545). [Rehearing. 61 Neb. 454.]

Judgment against stockholder in suit against corporation.

194. (1901.) A court having jurisdiction of an insolvent corporation for the purpose of winding up its affairs has no authority to render a personal judgment against one of its stockholders who is not a party to the action by service of process or voluntary appearance. Neither has the court in such case authority to adjudicate the fact of membership in the corporation.

Commonwealth Mutual Fire Ins Co. v. Hayden Bros., 61 Neb. 454 (85 N. W. 443); (1907) Howell v. Malmgren, 79 Neb. 16 (112 N. W. 313).

195 (1900.) The theory upon which a stockholder is held to be concluded by a judgment rendered against him in a suit brought to enforce a corporate obligation is that, although not personally served with process, he is before the court as an integral part of the corporation and that the corporation represents him. Commonwealth Mutual Fire Ins. Co. v. Hayden Bros., 60 Neb. 636 (83 N. W. 922; 83 Am. St. Rep. 545).

196. (1901.) In an action for winding up the affairs of an insolvent corporation an assessment upon stockholders is conclusive only to the extent that it ascertains the amount of corporate assets and liabilities and declares the necessity for making the assessment. Commonwealth Mutual Fire Ins. Co. v. Hayden Bros., 61 Neb. 454 (85 N. W. 443).

Actions to enforce liability.

——— Parties.

197. (1896.) The special individual liability of a stockholder in a banking corporation or institution, superadded to his ordinary liabilty by secton 7, article XI, of the constitution, is for the creation of a trust fund for the benefit of all creditors of the banking corporation or institution in which stock is held, and an action to render available such liabilty must be prosecuted by one credtor of such corporation or institution for the benefit of all other creditors, or by the receiver of such corporation or institution when there is a receiver. Farmers Loan & Trust Co. v. Funk, 49 Neb. 353 (68 N. W. 520).

198. (1898.) The corporation is not a necessary party to a suit by creditors against stockholders for unpaid stock subscription. Van Pelt v. Gardner, 54 Neb. 701 (75 N. W. 874).

199. (1899.) An action for the enforcement of the individual liability of the stockholders of a banking corporation must be prosecuted by one creditor for the benefit of all, or by the receiver of the corporation. Brown v. Brink, 57 Neb. 606 (78 N. W. 280).

200. (1899.) In a suit by a receiver to enforce individual liability of stockholders a creditor cannot intervene unless plaintiff abuses his trust or acts in bad faith. Brown v. Brink, 57 Neb. 606 (78 N. W. 280).

201. (1902.) When a bill in equity is filed by the creditors of an insolvent corporation for the purpose of subjecting the unpaid subscriptions of the capital stock of such corporation to the payment of the corporate debts, it is necessary that each one of the delinquent subscribers to such capital stock be made a party defendant; and unless all are made parties defendant, or some good and sufficient reason appears upon the face of the petition, such as death, insolvency, or inability to reach with the process of the court the delinquent subscribers not joined as defendants, the petition is bad because of a non-joinder of parties defendant. Fremont Package Mfg. Co. v. Storey, 2 Unof. 325 (96 N. W. 416).

202. (1904.) A single creditor cannot maintain an action at law against a part of the stockholders of an insolvent corporation for a violation of the provisions of section 136, chapter 16, Compiled Statutes. Such action should be brought in equity, by the receiver if there be one, or by a creditor on his own behalf, and for all the other creditors similarily situated, against all of the stockholders of the corporation. Emanuel v. Barnard, 71 Neb. 756 (99 N. W. 666).

——— Defenses.

203. (1897.) A judgment rescinding a purchase of corporate stock on the ground of fraudulent representations of the seller, is a bar to a subsequent action by a creditor of the corporation against the buyer to enforce his liability as a stockholder. Creighton v. Keith, 50 Neb. 810 (70 N. W. 406).

204. (1900.) It is no defense to a stockholder in an insolvent national bank, who is sued by the receiver on his individual liability upon an assessment ordered by the comptroller of the currency, to say that the recever has unlawfully disposed of such claim, and that the creditors of such bank will not receive of the proceeds thereof as much as they are entitled to have. Schaberg v. McDonald, 60 Neb. 493 (83 N. W. 737).

205. (1902.) In an action by the receiver of an insolvent bank, to enforce a stockholder's liability, misconduct of the receiver and his possession of unreported assets is no defense. Brinkworth v. Hazlett, 64 Neb. 592 (90 N. W. 537).

206. (1904.) The overruling of objections to the discharge of a receiver of a corporation, on the ground that the double liability of stockholders had not been enforced, is not a bar to an action to enforce such liability. Hamilton Nat. Bank v. American Loan & Trust Co., 72 Neb. 81 (100 N. W. 202).

——— Limitation of action.

207. (1890.) An action against stockholders of a corporation under section 136, chapter 16, Compiled Statutes, for failing to publish the amount of its indebtedness, is quasi-penal only, and not barred in one year as a penal action, the limitation being the same as in other contracts. Howell Bros. v. Roberts, 29 Neb. 483 (45 N. W. 923). [Disapproved. Globe Publishing Co. v. State Bank, 41 Neb. 175.]

208. (1890.) Section 136, chapter 16, Compiled Statutes, which makes stockholders in a corporation liable for debts contracted by the corporation while its officers are in default in publishing an annual notice stating "the amount of all of its existing debts," is quasi-penal, only, but is not a penalty, the evident purpose being to secure the rights of creditors, and an action to recover such debts is not barred by the statute of limitations in one year. Coy v. Jones, 30 Neb. 798 (47 N. W. 208; 10 L. R. A. 658). [Overruled. Globe Publishing Co. v. State Bank, 41 Neb. 175.]

209. (1898.) A cause of action against stockholders of a corporation, by a creditor, to subject their unpaid stock subscriptions to the payment of his debt, accrues when the exact amount justly due the creditors from the corporation has been ascertained and the corporate property exhausted, and is barred in four years thereafter. Van Pelt v. Gardner, 54 Neb. 701 (75 N. W. 874).

——— Weight and sufficiency of evidence.

210. (1902.) Where evidence is merely conflicting, finding of the trial court that a party was owner of certain shares in the bank on which liability is sought to be enforced, at the time of insolvency will not be disturbed. Brinkworth v. Hazlett, 64 Neb. 592 (90 N. W. 537).

——— Judgment.

211. (1898.) The decree should not be a joint one against all subscribers for the amount of the corporate debts, but a several judgment against each subscriber for the amount of his unpaid subscription. Van Pelt v. Gardner, 54 Neb. 701 (75 N. W. 874).

212. (1898.) The decree should provide for an execution against each subscriber for his proportionate share of the corporate debts, interest, and costs, and, if any execution should not be collected in full, then for the issuance, upon order of the court, of additional executions from time to time against each solvent subscriber for his proportionate share of the corporate debt remaining unpaid. Van Pelt v. Gardner, 54 Neb. 701 (75 N. W. 874).

——— Execution and enforcement of judgment.

213. (1880.) A homestead cannot be subjected to the payment of a stockholder's liability for the debt of a corporation of which the homesteader is a stockholder. Smith v. Schmitz, 10 Neb. 600 (7 N. W. 329).

——— Review.

214. (1897.) In an action by a receiver of a bank against one who had held some of its unpaid stock, and his transferee thereof for the amount of an assessment thereon, in which it was sought to obtain judgment against one defendant if certain allegations of fraud against him should be sustained by the proofs to be adduced, and if not so sustained then against the other defendant, the cause must be tried on appeal as one for alternative relief; and the evidence not being found sufficient to charge the original holder of the stock on the theory proceeded on against him in the district court, he cannot be held liable in the supreme court on a different theory. Morrill v. Crawford, 51 Neb. 284 (70 N. W. 954).

Contribution among stockholders.

215. (1898.) Where a stock subscriber discharges a debt of an insolvent corporation for which all the stock subscribers thereof are liable, he may maintain an action for contribution against his co-subscribers. Bennison v. McConnell, 56 Neb. 46 (76 N. W. 412).

216. (1898.) A subscriber to corporate stock who has paid off a deficiency judgment against the corporation is not estopped from maintaining a suit for contribution against his co-subscribers by the fact that he participated in a distribution made of the assets of the corporation by the stockholders, the debt discharged by him not being provided for in such distribution. Bennison v. McConnell, 56 Neb. 46 (76 N. W. 412).

217. (1898.) An agreement by stockholders of a corporation to indemnify one for the personal assumption or payment of a corporate debt, or to contribute, may be enforced. Gorder v. Connor, 56 Neb. 781 (77 N. W. 383).

www.libtool.com.cn

218. (1898.) A voluntary assumption of the debt of a corporation, or a voluntary payment of its debt, or the two in combination, will not alone confer on a stockholder of the corporation the right to contribution from the other members. Gorder v. Conner, 56 Neb. 781 (77 N. W. 383).

219. (1898.) As between the stock subscribers and the creditors of a corporation, each stock subscriber is liable to the extent of his unpaid stock subscripton. As between themselves, each stock subscriber is liable for his proportionate share of the corporate debts, and one stock subscriber who has been compelled to pay more than his proportionate share may sue his co-subscribers for contribution. Van Pelt v. Gardner, 54 Neb. 701 (75 N. W. 874).

220. (1904.) Where a stockholder of a state bank advances his own funds to pay the debts of the bank in pursuance of an agreement of the stockholders that each should contribute in proportion to the number of shares of stock held by him, the advancing stockholder may maintain an action against the other stockholders for an accounting and contribution, without having first exhausted the assets of the bank. Davidson v. Gretna State Bank, 59 Neb. 63 (80 N. W. 256).

VI. OFFICERS AND AGENTS.

By-bidding by officer of loan association, see Building and Loan Associations, § 8.

Representation of corporation by officers and agents, see post, §§ 272-325.

A. Election and Qualifications.

Right of stockholder to vote, see ante, §§ 136-141.

Number of votes necessary for election.

221. (1903.) Where a corporation has a fixed capital stock, divided into a definite number of shares, a majority of all the shares is necessary to a valid election in the absence of some rule to the contrary. Haskell v. Read, 68 Neb. 107 (93 N. W. 997). [Withdrawn on rehearing. 68 Neb. 115.]

Effect of illegal election.

222. (1898.) A stockholder may obtain an injunction to restrain persons claiming to have been elected directors from acting as such, when the election was illegal and void. Reynolds v. Bridenthal, 57 Neb. 280 (77 N. W. 658).

Action to test validity of election.

223. (1903.) It seems that in this state a stockholder may maintain a suit in equity to try the validity of an election of officers and directors of a private corporation, and determine whether persons claiming to be such are entitled to act in that capacity. Haskell v. Read, 68 Neb. 107 (93 N. W. 997).

224. (1903.) Whether or not a stockholder may maintain a suit to try the validity of an election of corporate officers, the court may inquire into the validity of the election and pass upon the title to corporate officers when necessary to do complete justice in a suit of which it has jurisdiction on other grounds. Haskell v. Read, 68 Neb. 107 (93 N. W. 997).

B. Authority and Functions.

Right of officer to set off claim due corporation, see Set-off and Counter-claim, § 39.

Right of officer to sign petition for paving or street improvement, see Municipal Corporations, §§ 334-338.

Right to vote.

225. (1899.) The sale of corporate property and the disposition of the proceeds thereof, being distinct acts, a director may be qualified to vote upon a proposition to ratify the sale, although disqualified from voting upon a question affecting the application of the purchase-money. German Nat. Bank of Hastings v. First Nat. Bank of Hastings, 59 Neb. 7 (80 N. W. 48).

Resolutions.

226. (1902.) A resolution which authorizes the officers of a corporation to convey away or incumber all of its property by a trust agreement and a deed to trustees must at least be adopted by a majority of the board of directors duly assembled at a regular or called meeting of which due notice must have first been given. A resolution of that kind adopted at a called meeting of which the proper notice had not been given, and at which only one director was actually present, who voted for himself and for another absent director by proxy, is not the act of the corporation and is void. First Nat. Bank of Omaha v. East Omaha Box Co., 2 Unof. 820 (90 N. W. 223).

C. Rights, Duties and Liabilities as to Corporation and Its Members.

Compensation.

227. (1903.) Where a general manager of a corporation after the expiration of a contract which fixed his salary at $5,000 per annum continues, without any new agreement, and draws salary at the rate of $3,000 per annum, no action having been taken with reference to the salary, cannot recover the $2,000 difference, as if under the old contract. Home Fire Ins. Co. v. Barber, 67 Neb. 644 (93 N. W. 1024; 108 Am. St. Rep. 716; 60 L. R. A. 927).

228. (1903.) Where service of an officer under a contract of employment for a fixed period continues after such period has expired, it is presumed to be under the same contract; but this presumption must yield to evidence showing a change of terms. Home Fire Ins. Co. v. Barber, 67 Neb. 644 (93 N. W. 1024; 108 Am. St. Rep. 716; 60 L. R. A. 927).

Duty imposed by statute.

229. (1879.) One or more of the stockholders of a corporation may compel its officers, by mandamus, to make and publish the statement required by the statute. Smith v. Steele, 8 Neb. 115.

230. (1900.) Where the officers of a quasi-public corporation are required immediately to perform a certain act for the benefit of the corporation, the duty will, ordinarily, be regarded as a continuing one. Baltes v. Farmers Irrigation District, 60 Neb. 310 (83 N. W. 83).

231. (1900.) A statute which directs officers of a quasi-public corporation such as an irrigation district to immediately issue bonds which have been voted, and which also provides that they "may sell the bonds resolution declare its intention to sll a spec from time to time" and "before making any sale the board shall, at a meeting, by resolution declare its intention to sell a specified amount of the bonds," imposes upon such officers a duty which continues until such provision is complied with. Baltes v. Farmers Irrigation District, 60 Neb. 310 (83 N. W. 83).

Contracts and dealings with corporation.

232. (1893.) The relation of the directors to stockholders of a corporation is of a fiduciary character and their contracts and dealings with the corporation with respect to the corporate property will be carefully scrutinized by the courts. Such contracts are not, however, necessarily void. Where it is clear that the transaction is in good faith on the part of the director and beneficial to the corporation which has with the sanction of the stockholders received and appropriated the consideration without offering to make restitution, it may be upheld when assailed even in a court of equity. Gorder v. Plattsmouth Canning Co., 36 Neb. 548 (54 N. W. 830).

233. (1893.) Evidence examined and held to sustain the finding that the indebtedness of the defendant company to the plaintiffs, directors thereof, was contracted with the knowledge and approval of the interveners, who were stockholders, and that the execution of certain mortgages to secure such indebtedness was sanctioned by such stockholders. Gorder v. Plattsmouth Canning Co., 36 Neb. 548 (54 N. W. 830).

234. (1895.) Directors of a solvent corporation may convey property of the company to themselves in payment of debts due to them. Tillson v. Downing, 45 Neb. 549 (63 N. W. 836).

235. (1899.) Directors of a corporation each made a loan of money to it with the understanding that in payment or enforcement of the debts thereby created no one should have or obtain preference over another. It was subsequently ordered, all being present and acting, that negotiable promissory notes be executed and delivered to the parties evidencing the debts which originated in the loan transactions. Held, That the latter adjustment was under such circumstances and attendant facts as evinced the intention to annul and abrogate the agreement which accompanied the loans. Nebraska Nat. Bank v. Clark, 58 Neb. 183 (78 N. W. 527).

236. (1901.) The purchase of property of a corporation by one of its directors is voidable at the option of the corporation. Miller v. Brown, 1 Unof. 754 (95 N. W. 797).

Acquiring adverse title or interest.

237. (1893.) An officer of a corporation for pecuniary profit, who in good faith purchases at judicial sale the property of the corporation, will be protected in such purchase, provided he shows affirmatively that he has, as indicated, paid the full value of the property of which he so became the purchaser. Horbach v. Marsh, 37 Neb. 22 (55 N. W. 286).

238. (1893.) A stockholder of a corporation who seeks as such to impress with an express trust the property of such corporation regularly sold at judicial sale to an officer of such corporation should commence proceedings within a reasonable time after such sale, and must, when such proceedings are unreasonably delayed, establish by a preponderance of the evidence the facts upon which such trust is based. Horbach v. Marsh, 37 Neb. 22 (55 N. W. 286).

239. (1894.) Question whether the president of a loan company, who claimed to have advanced money to purchase a leasehold interest in land acted for himself or for the benefit of the company, found in favor of the latter. Nebraska Mortgage Loan Co. v. Van Kloster, 42 Neb. 746 (60 N. W. 1016).

240. (1895.) Where the president of a loan company consented that securities in the nature of trust deeds should be made to himself, described as trustee, he thereby gained no right to use such designation to the injury of the company of which he was president and which was in fact the beneficiary named or contemplated in such trust deeds. Tulleys v. Keller, 45 Neb. 220 (63 N. W. 388).

241. (1905.) Where the president of a bank who was a creditor of a firm who were also debtors of the bank, secured an assignment of all of the debtors property in his individual name, and obligated himself to pay the indebtedness to the bank by signing a note in its favor with the debtor, he is primarily liable to the bank for the amount of the bank. Gund v. Ballard, 73 Neb. 547 (103 N. W. 309).

242. (1905.) Where a person occupies a fiduciary relation to a bank and its stockholders, and engages in litigation in which his individual interests are in conflict with those he represents in a fiduciary capacity, actual fraud is not essential in order to avoid the proceedings thus had and entered into. Gund v. Ballard, 73 Neb. 547 (103 N. W. 309).

Liability for negligent or unauthorized acts.

243. (1887.) As between the corporation and himself, a president of a bank ordinarily has no authority to sell the property of the corporation of which he is such officer. Before he can legally do so he must have authority by the charter, the direction of the board of directors, managing committee, or by usage. And where the property of a bank is sold by a president without authority and the bank suffers loss thereby, he may be held to respond in damages to the extent of such loss. First Nat. Bank v. Lucas, 21 Neb. 280 (31 N. W. 805).

244. (1887.) Where the president of a bank without authority disposes of the property of the bank, and the bank is damaged thereby, and for the purpose of making good the loss, either temporarily or permanently, transfers to the bank promissory notes held by him in an amount equal to the loss sustained; and where afterwards he disposes of his interest in the bank and induces others to purchase a controlling interest in the stock upon the representation that he has no demand against the bank, he cannot afterwards recover of the bank the amount of the notes transferred to it for the purpose of making up the deficiency caused by the loss resulting from the sale of the bank's property. First Nat. Bank v. Lucas, 21 Neb. 280 (31 N. W. 805).

245. (1903.) Subsequent stockholders have no standing, as a general rule, to attack prior mismanagement of the corporation. Home Fire Ins Co. v. Barber, 67 Neb. 644 (93 N. W. 1024; 108 Am. St. Rep. 716; 60 L. R. A. 927).

246. (1903.) A subsequent stockholder ought not to be allowed to sue unless the mismanagement or its effects continue and are injurious to him, or it affects him specially and peculiarly in some other manner. Home Fire Ins. Co. v. Barber, 67 Neb. 644 (93 N. W. 1024; 108 Am. St. Rep. 716; 60 L. R. A. 927).

247. (1903.) Stockholders who have acquired their shares and their interest in the corporation from the alleged wrongdoers and through the prior mismanagement, have no standing to complain thereof. Home Fire Ins. Co. v. Barber, 67 Neb. 644 (93 N. W. 1024; 108 Am. St. Rep. 716; 60 L. R. A. 927).

248. (1903.) Where an officer of a bank gives a bond conditioned that he will "honestly, faithfully, and efficiently" perform his duties, he and his sureties are liable for loss resulting from his negligence, even though the directors may not have used due diligence. Fiala v. Ainsworth, 68 Neb. 308 (94 N. W. 153).

Individual profits.

249. (1903.) The officers and directors of a corporation and the shareholders thereof sustain to each other the relation of trustees and cestuis que trustent, and public policy forbids those who have accepted such positions of trust to take secret profits antagonistic to their duties as trustees. Barber v. Martin, 67 Neb. 445 (93 N. W. 722).

250. (1903.) Where the manager of an insurance company who, during negotiations to sell stockholders stock in the corporation, advised the latter that he had received a certain cash offer for the same when in fact no such offer had been received, but the stock was later sold at a much higher figure, such manager acted as agent for the shareholder and is liable for an accounting for the real amount received. Barber v. Martin, 67 Neb. 445 (93 N. W. 722).

Actions between shareholders and officers.

251. (1906.) The stockholders bear the same relation substantially to the corporate officers that the cestui que trust bears to the trustee, and has for the protection of his interest in the corporation the same remedies that are provided for the beneficiary in a trust estate. Hards v. Platte Valley Improvement Co., 46 Neb. 709 (65 N. W. 781).

252. (1903.) In an action by a stockholder in an insurance company against the manager thereof, who acted as agent in the sale of plaintiff's stock, for the difference between the amount actually received and that accounted for to plaintiff, letters leading up to negotiations for the sale of the stock are admissible in evidence. Barber v. Martin, 67 Neb. 445 (93 N. W. 722).

253. (1903.) Where a manager of an insurance company offered to make a sale of a shareholder's stock, and the shareholder expressly authorized a sale for a stated sum within a limited period, and there is evidence that both parties regarded the contract of agency to sell the stock as a continuing one, the limitation of time being only upon the power to sell at the sum stated, it was not error to admit in evidence the letter of the manager offering to make the sale, and the reply of the shareholder authorizing a sale within a limited period at a stated sum, as tending to show the existence of a contract of agency at a later period. Barber v. Martin, 67 Neb. 445 (93 N. W. 722).

D. Liabilities for Corporate Debts and Acts.

Order authorizing receiver to enforce liability, see post, § 441.

Note or contract of corporation executed by officers.

254. (1902.) Where one acting as the agent of a corporation makes a contract on its behalf, which is binding upon it, his acts in that behalf create no individual or personal liability against him. Fremont Carriage Mfg. Co. v. Thomsen, 65 Neb. 370 (91 N. W. 376).

255. (1903.) A note signed "Globe Loan & Trust Co., H. O. Devries, Presdt., W. B. Taylor, Secy.," on its face shows no personal liability on the part of Devries or Taylor. English & Scottish American Mortgage & Investment Co. v. Globe Loan & Trust Co., 70 Neb. 435 (97 N. W. 612).

Mismanagement of corporate affairs.

256. (1903.) An officer or agent of a corporation is not liable personally to third persons for mere failure to perform some duty which the corporation may have owed them. Penney v. Bryant, 70 Neb. 127 (96 N. W. 1033).

Misappropriation of corporate assets.

257. (1902.) It was error, in a creditors' bill, on a judgment against a corporation, to discharge the president of the corporation and the managing officer from an accounting for the assets which the evidence clearly showed he had received. Benedict v. T. L. V. Land & Cattle Co., 66 Neb. 236 (92 N. W. 210).

Actions to enforce liability.

258. (1893.) The evidence in an action for services rendered was insufficient to support a verdict against officers of a company, individually, where the testimony showed that the contract was made with and the work performed for the company. Imhoff v. House, 36 Neb. 28 (53 N. W. 1032).

Contribution among officers.

259. (1903.) Where trustees of an insolvent corporation have, with knowledge of the pendency of an action against it, divided among shareholders nearly all its available assets; one of the trustees, who is also treasurer and who paid out the money divided, cannot recover contribution from another director, because of payment of a judgment against him, as trustee, for so converting the company's assets. Sharp v. Call, 69 Neb. 72 (95 N. W. 16).

VII. CORPORATE POWERS AND LIABILITIES.

Capacity to act as administrator, see Executors and Administrators, §§ 28-30.

A. Extent and Exercise of Powers in General.

Scope of powers in general.

260. (1890.) Corporations can be organized under the laws of this state for a lawful purpose only. Unlawful acts of a corporation are not limited to those which are mala prohibita and malum in se, but include powers which the corporation is not authorized to exercise, and contracts which they are not empowered to make. State v. Nebraska Distilling Co., 29 Neb. 700 (46 N. W. 155).

261. (1905.) The powers of a corporation in effecting its objects are as broad and comprehensive as those of an individual, when not expressly prohibited. Herrick v. Humphrey Hardware Co., 73 Neb. 809 (103 N. W. 685).

Construction of statutes or charter.

262. (1876.) Sections 124 and 137 of the general incorporation act were intended only to define and grant the general powers which may be exercised by a corporation when legally organized. Livesey v. Omaha Hotel Co., 5 Neb. 50.

263. (1888.) The powers of a corporation organized under legislative statutes are such, and such only, as the statutes confer. The charter of a corporation is the measure of its powers, and the enumeration of those powers implies the exclusion of all others. State, ex rel. Leese, v. Atchison & N. R. Co., 24 Neb. 143 (38 N. W. 43; 8 Am. St. Rep. 164).

264. (1903.) The power of a corporation to make valid contracts is measured by its charter; and the scope of the authority of its officers and agents acting for it is limited, and a person dealing with such corporation is chargeable with notice of such limitations. Sturdevant Bros. & Co. v. Farmers & Merchants Bank of Rushville, 69 Neb. 220 (95 N. W. 819).

265. (1905.) When the exercise of corporate power has been regulated by statute, the corporation cannot, by its by-laws or resolutions, change the mode of the exercise of this power. Lange v. Royal Highlanders, 75 Neb. 188 (106 N. W. 124; 10 L. R. A. [n. s.] 666).

Purchasing and holding stock in other corporations.

266. (1893.) A banking corporation, organized under the laws of this state, has no power to become a stockholder in an insurance company. Bank of Commerce v. Hart, 37 Neb. 197 (55 N. W. 631; 40 Am. St. Rep. 479; 20 L. R. A. 780).

267. (1903.) Unless authorized by statute, a corporation has no power to subscribe to the capital stock of another corporation, and such a subscription is not binding. Nebraska Shirt Co. v. Horton, 3 Unof. 888 (93 N. W. 225).

268. (1903.) Where no money or property of any kind has been acquired or held by virtue of a subscription by one corporation to the capital stock of another, mere inaction and neglect to repudiate it will not estop the subscribing corporation when sued upon such a subscription. Nebraska Shirt Co. v. Horton, 3 Unof. 888 (93 N. W. 225).

Compromises.

269. (1896.) A corporation has power to compromise a doubtful claim against it, although such doubt arises in regard to the power of the corporation to enter into the contract creating the claim. Farmers Mut. Ins. Co. v. Meese, 49 Neb. 861 (69 N. W. 113).

Confession of judgment.

270. (1898.) The statute conferring power upon any person to confess judgment applies to such corporations whe such judgment has been rendered as described in the case at bar. Solomon v. Schneider, 56 Neb. 680 (77 N. W. 65).

Persons entitled to question corporate powers.

271. (1898.) Where a corporation borrows money and executes a mortgage on its real estate to secure the payment thereof, a third person cannot assail the transaction on the ground of ultra vires, or that the corporation exceeded its power. Beels v. North Nebraska Fair & Driving Park Ass'n, 54 Neb. 226 (74 N. W. 581).

B. Representation of Corporation by Officers and Agents.

Knowledge of officer as affecting bona fides of purchase of note, see Bills and Notes, § 235.

Service of process in officer, see post, §§ 358-366.

Limitation by statutory regulation.

272. (1900.) A person dealing with the officers or agents of a public corporation is required to act with reference to the authority, limitations and restrictions imposed upon such officers by the legislation authorizing the organization and government of such corporation. Lincoln & Dawson County Irrigation District v. McNeal, 60 Neb. 613 (83 N. W. 847).

Restriction of authority by by-laws.

273. (1895.) One dealing with the agent of a business corporation, in a matter relating to its business operations and not involving its corporate functions, is not charged with notice of its by-laws. Therefore, the apparent authority of such agent cannot be extended or restricted by such by-laws in the absence of actual notice thereof. Johnson v. Milwaukee Investment Co., 46 Neb. 480 (64 N. W. 1100).

Representation by stockholders.

274. (1871.) A corporation whose governing power is vested in a board of directors is not bound by the act of its stockholders. Columbus Co. v. Hurford, 1 Neb. 146.

275. (1898.) Where money is borrowed by stockholders of a corporation for its benefit, and actually used in its business, the corporation is legally liable for the repayment of such money. Stough v. Fonca Mill Co., 54 Neb. 500 (74 N. W. 868).

Scope of authority in general.

276. (1894.) Agents of corporations have no implied authority to give away corporate property or create corporate obligations gratuitously. Robertson v. Buffalo County Nat. Bank, 40 Neb. 235 (58 N. W. 715).

277. (1895.) A treasurer and bookkeeper of a corporation, where the articles of incorporation require every officer of the company to be a stockholder, may verify the claim for a mechanic's lien. Chapman v. Brewer, 43 Neb. 890 (62 N. W. 320; 47 Am. St. Rep. 779).

278. (1903.) The president or secretary of a corporation, either singly or jointly, cannot bind the corporate property by signing the corporate name to a petition asking for a street improvement without being specially authorized. Morse v. City of Omaha, 67 Neb. 426 (93 N. W. 734).

Liability for acts of officers and agents in general.

279. (1894.) A corporation is not chargeable with the knowledge nor bound by the acts of one of its officers in a matter in which he acts in behalf of his own interests, and deals with the corporation as a private individual, and in no way represents it in the transaction. Buffalo County Nat. Bank v. Sharpe, 40 Neb. 123 (58 N. W. 734).

280. (1894.) One who deals with the officers or agents of a corporation is bound to know their powers, and the extent of their authority, and the corporation is only bound by their acts, and contracts which are within the scope of their authority. Robertson v. Buffalo County Nat. Bank, 40 Neb. 235 (58 N. W. 715).

281. (1895.) Directors of a railroad company have no authority to sell at a discount below value its corporate bonds earned by a construction company in building a railroad, and the railroad company is not liable to minority stockholders of the construction company for the loss occasioned by such a sale where the directors have a controlling interest in both companies. Fitzgerald v. Fitzgerald & Mallory Co., 44 Neb. 463 (62 N. W. 899).

282. (1902.) The acts of a bank officer, outside the usual scope of his authority, in a matter to which it is no party and of which it is not chargeable with notice, do not bind the bank. Jones v. First Nat. Bank of Lincoln, 3 Unof. 73 (90 N. W. 912).

283. (1902.) As a general rule, acts done by an officer of a bank away from its place of business, and not authorized or ratified, are not binding upon it. Jones v. First Nat. Bank of Lincoln, 3 Unof. 73 (90 N. W. 912).

284. (1902.) A bank is not chargeable with notice of the fraudulent act of its employee, outside the scope of his authority and in furtherance of his own personal designs, solely because he is an employee. Jones v. First Nat. Bank of Lincoln, 3 Unof. 73 (90 N. W. 912).

Conduct of corporate business.

285. (1878.) As a rule, the officers of a bank are held out to the public as having authority to act according to the usage and course of business of such institutions, and their acts, within the scope of their authority, bind the bank in favor of persons having no knowledge to the contrary. Rich v. State Nat. Bank, 7 Neb. 201 (29 Am. Rep. 382).

286 (1878.) Like other agents, the president of a bank must act within the scope of his authority, in order to bind his principal, unless his acts have been ratified. Kennedy v. Otoe County Nat. Bank, 7 Neb. 59.

287. (1882.) Indorsement of a note by officers of a corporation to whom it is made payable, taken in connection with the allegation by the indorsee that there was due from the defendant to the plaintiffs the sum of $250, is sufficient to show a cause of action in favor of the indorsee. Sanborn v. Hale, 12 Neb. 318 (11 N. W. 302).

Contracts in general.

288. (1878.) No officer of a bank can bind it by a promise to pay a debt which the corporation does not owe and was not liable to pay. Rich v. State Nat. Bank, 7 Neb. 201 (29 Am. Rep. 382).

289. (1884.) A stockholder in a corporation surrendered his stock to the corporation secretary and procured from him a "due bill" or promise to pay a certain sum in printing, etc. There is no proof that the secretary had any authority to execute or deliver the writing. Held, That neither the corporation nor the other stockholders were liable to such stockholder in an action on such instrument. Gregory v. Lamb, 16 Neb. 205 (20 N. W. 248).

290. (1893.) One who is shown to be the general manager of a corporation engaged in the business of feeding and raising cattle is presumably empowered to buy feed for them. Powder River Live Stock Co. v. Lamb, 38 Neb. 339 (56 N. W. 1019).

291. (1900.) The manager of a business corporation has no implied authority to furnish medical aid and assistance to a servant of the corporation who has been injured outside the line of his duties. Chase v. Swift & Co., 60 Neb. 696 (84 N. W. 86; 83 Am. St. Rep. 552).

292. (1902.) The directors of a corporation, by the mere act of employing another to give a fireworks exhibition for and on behalf of such corporation on its own grounds, are not made personally liable for the negligent acts of the person thus employed to give such exhibition. Bianki v. Greater American Exposition, 3 Unof. 656 (92 N. W. 615).

293. (1907.) Any general officer of a corporation may summon medical attendants to care for an employee who has received serious injuries while engaged in dangerous work for the company, and such injury occurred at a place distant from such employee's home, and the corporation is bound for the reasonable value of such medical services. Salter v. Nebraska Telephone Co., 79 Neb. 373 (112 N. W. 600).

293*a*. (1907.) Emergency services, unless expressly limited at the time of procuring them, ought to extend to a sufficient time for the party employed to communicate with the the company, and, if it declines to be further responsible, for notice to the proper poor authorities, if the injured party is entitled to public care. Salter v. Nebraska Telephone Co., 79 Neb. 373 (112 N. W. 600).

294. (1907.) In case of serious injury to an employee of a corporation, receiving immediate medical care, if no general officer of the company is present, the highest officer or person highest in authority then present may bind the company for medical services as the emergency may demand. Salter v. Nebraska Telephone Co., 79 Neb. 373 (112 N. W. 600).

Disposal of corporate property.

295. (1871.) A deed executed in the name of the president of a corporation, purporting to convey its lands, is inoperative. Zoller v. Ide, 1 Neb. 439.

296. (1893.) Where a deed or mortgage purporting to have been executed by a corporation is signed and acknowledged in its behalf by the president and secretary thereof, with the corporate seal attached, the presumption is that it was executed by authority of such corporation and the burden of proof is upon one who denies such authority. Gorder v. Plattsmouth Canning Co., 36 Neb. 548 (54 N. W. 830).

297. (1901.) The signature of one of the general officers of a corporation to the assignment of a mortgage which is attested by the corporate seal of the company, is prima facie evidence that the assignment was executed by authority of the company and the burden of proving want of authority is upon the party seeking to attack such assignment. Wilson v. Neu, 1 Unof. 42 (95 N. W. 502).

297*a*. (1908.) Under the facts set forth in the opinion, held, that one C. was the last acting manager of a dissolved corporation, and was therefore sole trustee and competent to sell and convey the real estate of the corporation. Heenan & Finlen v. Parmele, 80 Neb. 514 (118 N. W. 324).

Wrongful acts.

298. (1879.) A corporation is liable the same as a natural person for the tortious acts of its servants or agents in the course of their employment. But to make a corporation liable for such acts they must be committed in the course of the agent's employment, or connected with the transaction of the business of the corporation. Miller v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., 8 Neb. 219.

299. (1879.) When an injury is committed by an employee of a corporation wilfully, and of his own malice, and not in the course of his employment, the corporation is not bound by his acts. Miller v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., 8 Neb. 219.

300. (1894.) A corporation is liable civilly for all damages occasioned by the torts of its officers or agents committed within the scope of their employment as such. Fitzgerald v. Fitzgerald & Mallory Construction Co., 41 Neb. 374 (59 N. W. 838).

301. (1895.) The term "scope of authority," as used in the law defining the liability of corporations for the tortious acts of their officers and agents, is not susceptible of a precise definition, but is limited to acts in some way incident to the employment and duties of such agents and having some relation to the obvious purpose of their appointment. Fitzgerald v. Fitzgerald & Mallory Construction Co., 44 Neb. 463 (62 N. W. 899)

302. (1895.) The fact that bonds of a railroad due a construction company on a construction contract may have been withheld for a considerable time after they were earned by the construction company, to the damage of the latter in the loss of promised subsidies and prospective profits, although actionable in the proper proceeding, will not render the railroad company liable for loss by reason of the negligent or corrupt action of the directors of the last named company in disposing of said bonds for less than their value. Fitzgerald v. Fitzgerald & Mallory Construction Co., 44 Neb. 463 (62 N. W. 899).

Representation of different corporations by same person.

303. (1895.) Persons who are directors of two corporations have no implied authority to bind either by contracts with respect to subjects in which their interests are adverse. Fitzgerald v. Fitzgerald & Mallory Construction Co., 44 Neb. 463 (62 N. W. 899).

304. (1898.) If a transaction between two corporations, affected by the votes of directors common to both, can in any event be sustained, it must only be on an affirmative showing of good faith. German Nat. Bank v. First Nat. Bank, 55 Neb. 86 (75 N. W. 531).

305. (1898.) Where the president, one director, and a stockholder sold all visible assets of an insolvent corporation and turned the proceeds over to a corporation in which two of the persons so acting were interested, it was held that such acts amounted to a conversion of the corporate property. German Nat. Bank v. First Nat. Bank, 55 Neb. 86 (75 N. W. 531).

306.)1903.) The directors of a corporation cannot bind it by contract with another corporation of which they are also directors, and which they represent in making such contract. McLeod v. Lincoln Medical College, 69 Neb. 555 (98 N. W. 672).

Estoppel to deny authority.

307. (1871.) A corporation which has enjoyed the fruits of a loan, which it has authorized to be made, cannot avoid the security which its officer has given, until it has done equity by repaying the money loaned. Cook v. Kuhn, 1 Neb. 472.

Ratification.

308. (1878.) Although no officer of a bank can bind it by a promise to pay a debt which the corporation does not owe and was not liable to pay, ratification is equivalent to original authority to act in the matter, and corporations are bound in the same manner as natural persons. Rich v. State Nat. Bank, 7 Neb. 201 (29 Am. Rep. 382).

309. (1895.) Ratification by a corporation of an unauthorized act of an agent or officer may be proved by a direct recognition of the act or by an inference from facts and circumstances. Reed v. First Nat. Bank of Weeping Water, 46 Neb. 168 (64 N. W. 701).

310. (1895.) The unauthorized acts of an agent or officer of a corporation may be ratified by it indirectly or by express action. Reed v. First Nat. Bank of Weeping Water, 46 Neb. 168 (64 N. W. 701).

311. (1898.) Although the fact that after the act of the president, a director and a stockholder who was not a director, in selling all the available assets of the corporation and turning the proceeds over to a single creditor, was reported to a meeting of the board of directors, attended by four out of seven members, two of the four being directors of the preferred corporation also, no action was taken, this did not constitute a ratification of the acts of the persons selling the assets and paying out the proceeds. German Nat. Bank v. First Nat. Bank, 55 Neb. 86 (75 N. W. 531).

312. (1899.) A sale of corporate assets, made by an agent in excess of his authority, will be, ordinarily, ratified by the acts of the corporation in dealing with the purchaser as the owner of the property. German Nat. Bank of Hastings v. First Nat. Bank of Hastings, 59 Neb. 7 (80 N. W. 48).

313. (1899.) Ratification of the unauthorized act of a corporate officer may be inferred from silence, inaction and other circumstances indicating acquiescence and consent. German Nat. Bank of Hastings v. First Nat. Bank of Hastings, 59 Neb. 7 (80 N. W. 48).

www.libtool.com.cn

314. (1899.) The rule that the ratification of an unauthorized act of an agent estops disavowal, applies to a corporation. German Nat. Bank of Hastings v. First Nat. Bank of Hastings, 59 Neb. 7 (80 N. W. 48).

315. (1901.) An act done in behalf of a corporation by one having no authority to represent it may be ratified by conduct implying approval and adoption. Alexander v. Culbertson Irrigation & Water Power Co., 61 Neb. 333 (85 N. W. 283).

316. (1901.) A corporation having power to ratify or repudiate a contract made in its name by a self-constituted agent, or one acting outside of his authority, should within a reasonable time determine which it will do, and if it do not disavow the agency and dissent from the contract, assent and approval may be presumed. Alexander v. Culbertson Irrigation & Water Power Co., 61 Neb. 333 (85 N. W. 283).

317. (1902.) The action of the officers of a corporation based upon a void resolution is void; but it may be ratified by the directors or stockholders by proper corporate action for that purpose, and also by a continued acquiescence therein on the part of the stockholders with full knowledge of all of the facts, but such ratification can not make the transaction valid as to third persons, creditors, where the same unlawfully hinders and delays them in the collection of their just claims against the corporation. First Nat. Bank of Omaha v. East Omaha Box Co., 2 Unof. 820 (90 N. W. 223).

318. (1903.) A corporation can not ratify an ultra vires act of an agent. Preston v. Northwestern Cereal Co., 67 Neb. 45 (93 N. W. 136).

Notice to officer as notice to corporation or stockholders.

319. (1891.) A corporation is not chargeable with the knowledge nor bound by the acts of one of its officers in a matter in which he acts in behalf of his own interests, and deals with the corporation as a private individual, and in no way represents it in the transaction. Koehler v. Dodge, 31 Neb. 328 (47 N. W. 913; 28 Am. St. Rep. 518).

320. (1896.) Stockholders represented by an agent who was for three years an acting director and a stockholder in the corporation, held chargeable with the knowledge possessed by him in respect to the affairs of the corporation. American Building & Loan Ass'n v. Rainbolt, 48 Neb. 434 (67 N. W. 493).

321. (1902.) The rule is well settled that a bank or other corporation, being once charged with notice of the character of a transaction, continues to be affected by such notice, whatever changes may occur in the personnel of its working force. United States Nat. Bank of Holdrege v. Forstedt, 64 Neb. 855 (90 N. W. 919).

322. (1902.) A corporation can act only by its agents who are empowered to act for it, and can only be bound by notice to some of its officers or agents who have the power to act upon the notice, or to one whose duty it is to communicate the notice to its officers or agents who have this power. Nehawka Bank v. Ingersoll, 2 Unof. 617 (89 N. W. 618).

Evidence as to authority.

323. (1871.) The existence of an agency of a corporation may be inferred by implication from the acts of the parties, or deed, informal writings, or verbal delegation. Columbus Co. v. Huford, 1 Neb. 146.

324. (1871.) A resolution recorded at length on the journal of the proceedings of a corporation, authorizing a party to negotiate a loan for it, and execute a mortgage to secure the same, is sufficient authority in that behalf. Cook v. Kuhn, 1 Neb. 472.

325. (1902.) Where a contract has been made by the corporation, by and through its president and general manager, it will not be permitted to receive and retain the benefits of a portion thereof and repudiate and reject the remainder. Fremont Carriage Mfg. Co. v. Thomsen, 65 Neb. 370 (91 N. W. 376).

C. Property and Conveyances.

Authority of officer to dispose of corporate property, see ante, §§ 295-297*a*.

Capacity to acquire and hold property.

326. (1872.) A corporation is presumed to be capable in law, to take a conveyance of real estate. Myers v. Croft, 2 Neb. 481 (13 Wall. (U. S.) 291).

Digitized by Google

327. (1894.) The right of a corporation to hold title to real estate, or to purchase and hold a lien thereon, cannot be questioned collaterally, but can only be attacked in a direct proceeding instituted for the purpose. Such purchase and holding are not void but are voidable, and none but the sovereign can object. Watts v. Gantt, 42 Neb. 869 (61 N. W. 104).

www.libtool.com.cn

Right to question power.

328. (1872.) A grantor of land to a corporation, or his subsequent grantee, cannot question the capacity of the corporation to take the conveyance. Myers v. Croft, 2 Neb. 481 (13 Wall. (U. S.) 291).

329. (1881.) Want of capacity in a corporation, which is the vendor in a contract for the sale of real estate, to take a title to or hold such property, cannot be successfully urged by the vendee or his assignee, to defeat a recovery of the agreed price, in an action on the contract. Missouri Valley Land Co. v. Bushnell, 11 Neb. 192 (8 N. W. 389).

330. (1881.) Where a corporation is incompetent by its charter to take a title to real estate, a conveyance to it is not void, but only voidable, and the sovereign only can object. It is valid until assailed in a direct proceeding for that purpose. Missouri Valley Land Co. v. Bushnell, 11 Neb. 192 (8 N. W. 389).

331. (1902.) A party who has entered into a contract for the sale of real property to a corporation, in reliance whereon the corporation has erected valuable improvements on the property for the purposes of its corporate business, will not be heard to assert that such property was not necessary for the business of the corporation. Coleridge Creamery Co. v. Jenkins, 66 Neb. 129 (92 N. W. 123).

Mortgage of corporate property.

332. (1893.) Evidence held to sustain the findings of the district court that the indebtedness secured by the mortgage of the defendant corporation was not in excess of the limitation named in its charter. Gorder v. Plattsmouth Canning Co., 36 Neb. 548 (54 N. W. 830).

——— of defective organization.

333. (1901.) Note and mortgage running to Creighton University, trustee for Creighton College, are valid and enforceable obligations, notwithstanding that there has been no legal incorporation of Creighton College. Goddard v. Clark, 1 Unof. 769 (96 N. W. 350).

D. Contracts and Indebtedness.

Contracts before incorporation.

334. (1887.) Where, after articles of incorporation were drawn up and signed by the promoters of a cattle company, but before they were recorded or filed for record in the office of the county clerk, and before the time fixed in such articles for the commencement of the business of such corporation, a president was selected by such promoters, who in the presence and with the approval of all of such promoters, executed and delivered to one M. a note, in payment for certain horses, cattle, ranch, and other property, which, after the perfecting of the said corporation and the time fixed for the commencement of the business thereof, came into its hands as its property, and continued to be used and enjoyed by it as such, the indorsee of M. could recover on said note. Paxton Cattle Co. v. First Nat. Bank, 21 Neb. 621 (33 N. W. 271; 60 Am. Rep. 852).

Manner of making contract.

335. (1877.) Corporations manifest their assent to and make contracts by deed or vote of the company, or by the agreement of their authorized agents, and not by the unauthorized declarations or promises of its individual members. Clarke v. Omaha & S. W. R. Co., 5 Neb. 314.

Promissory notes of corporation.

336. (1898.) One who buys a corporation note unlawfully issued is not an innocent purchaser where it appears on the face of the note that the payee therein named and the officer by whom it was executed is the same person. Stough v. Ponca Mill Co., 54 Neb. 500 (74 N. W. 868).

337. (1902.) A draft, drawn by an authorized agent of a corporation, on such corporation or the treasurer thereof in favor of a third party, for a debt due such third party from the corporation, is, in effect, the promissory note of the corporation. National Fire Ins. Co. v. Eastern Building & Loan Ass'n, 65 Neb. 483 (91 N. W. 482).

——— Accommodation indorsement.

338. (1903.) An accommodation indorsement by a manufacturing and trading corporation is ultra vires. Preston v. Northwestern Cereal Co., 67 Neb. 45 (93 N. W. 136).

Taking mortgage.

339. (1895.) Where a bank takes a mortgage to secure a debt, a third person cannot attack the transaction or treat the mortgage as void on the ground that it is ultra vires of the bank to take such security. Smith v. First Nat. Bank of Chadron, 45 Neb. 444 (63 N. W. 796).

www.libtool.com.cn

340. (1896.) A notary public is not disqualified from taking an acknowledgment of a mortgage made to a corporation, merely because it is shown that he was at the time secretary and treasurer of the mortgagee, it not appearing that he was a stockholder in such corporation or otherwise beneficially interested in having the mortgage made. Horbach v. Tyrrell, 48 Neb. 514 (67 N. W. 485; 37 L. R. A. 434).

Validity of contracts.

341. (1906.) A clause of a contract of a corporation of quasi-public character, which, if enforced, would prevent its serving the public on such terms is illegal and void. Sammons v. Kearney Power & Irrigation Co., 77 Neb. 580 (110 N. W. 308).

Contracts impossible to perform.

342. (1902.) Contracts in which a corporation, in consideration of stated payments made to it, makes promises, which are the main inducement to such contracts and are impossible to perform, are unlawful, being against public policy. State, ex rel. Prout, v. Nebraska Home Co., 66 Neb. 349 (92 N. W. 763; 103 Am. St. Rep. 706; 60 L. R. A. 448).

Ratification of contract.

343. (1900.) A corporation can not ratify a contract which it had not the power to make. Thompson v. West, 59 Neb. 677 (82 N. W. 13; 49 L. R. A. 337).

Creation of trust fund for payment of debts.

344. (1898.) A corporation resolved to remove its stock of merchandise to a distant city and effect a consolidation there with another corporation. Afterwards its managing officers determined, in order to avoid trouble with creditors, to retain a portion of the goods, sell them, and apply the proceeds to the payment of debts. No trust was created and no provision made for the manner of the application of the proceeds. Held, That this arrangement did not constitute the goods a trust fund for the payment of creditors pro rata. German Nat. Bank v. First Nat. Bank, 55 Neb. 86 (75 N. W. 531).

E. Civil Actions.

Actions by or against foreign corporations, see post, §§ 473-481.

Actions to enforce liability of stockholders, see ante, §§ 197-220.

After dissolution, see post, §§ 462-465.

Judgment against stockholder in suit against corporation, see ante, §§ 194-196.

Right of stockholder to sue or defend on behalf of corporation, see ante, §§ 142-150.

Capacity to sue and be sued.

345. (1898.) Corporations for pecuniary profit may sue and be sued, complain and defend in courts of law and equity. Solomon v. Schneider, 56 Neb. 680 (77 N. W. 65).

Right of action.

346. (1903.) Where a corporation proceeding in equity to assert rights of an equitable nature, or is seeking relief upon rules or principles of equity, the court of equity will not forget that the stockholders are the real and substantial beneficiaries of a recovery; and if the stockholders have no standing in equity, and are not equitably entitled to the remedy sought to be enforced by the corporation in their behalf and for their advantage, the corporation will not be permitted to recover. Home Fire Ins. Co. v. Barber, 67 Neb. 644 (93 N. W. 1024; 108 Am. St. Rep. 716; 60 L. R. A. 927).

347. (1903.) Where a corporation is proceeding at law, or where it is asserting a title to property, or the title to property is involved, the corporation is regarded as a person separate and distinct from its stockholders, or any or all of them. Home Fire Inc. Co. v. Barber, 67 Neb. 644 (93 N. W. 1024; 108 Am. St. Rep. 716; 60 L. R. A. 927).

348. (1905.) Where a claim has been rejected or disallowed in part by the auditing board of a corporation (an irrigation district), an original action may be instituted on the claim, in the absence of a statute directing other proceedings to enforce it. Willow Springs Irrigation District v. Wilson, 74 Neb. 269 (104 N. W. 165).

Venue.

349. (1894.) An action against a domestic corporation may be brought in any county where it maintains a place of business and has an agent to conduct such business, though its principal office and chief officer are in another county. Fremont Butter & Egg Co. v. Snyder, 39 Neb. 632 (58 N. W. 150).

350. (1894.) A domestic corporation, except those governed by sections 56, 57, and 58 of the code of civil procedure, may be sued in any county where it is situated, and it is situated in any county where it has and maintains a place of business, and servants, employees, or agents engaged in conducting and carrying on the business for which it exists. Fremont Butter & Egg Co. v. Snyder, 39 Neb. 632 (58 N. W. 149).

www.libtool.com.cn

351. (1894.) A corporation whose principal place of business, as provided by its charter, was Dodge county, may, when it has a branch place of business in Saunders county, be sued in Saunders county. Fremont Butter & Egg Co. v. Snyder, 39 Neb. 632 (58 N. W. 149).

352. (1895.) That a corporation has been sued in a county in which it could not be lawfully sued under the statute is a defense which such corporation may waive; and if a corporation is wrongfully sued in a county and answers generally to the merits of the action without either specially appearing and challenging the jurisdiction of the court or without alleging as a defense to the action that such suit was wrongfully brought in said county, then the corporation will be conclusively presumed to have waived such defense. Exeter Nat. Bank v. Orchard, 43 Neb. 579 (61 N. W. 833).

353. (1901.) A domestic corporation may be sued only in the places provided by law, and the temporary presence of one or more of the officers of such corporation in another jurisdiction does not authorize the corporation to be sued there. Western Travelers Accident Ass'n v. Taylor, 62 Neb. 783 (87 N. W. 950).

354. (1901.) When the legislature provides the county in which a domestic corporation may be sued, such provision is exclusive. Western Travelers Accident Ass'n v. Taylor, 62 Neb. 783 (87 N. W. 950).

355. (1901.) The purpose of section 73 of the code is to provide the manner of service upon a corporation. That section does not enlarge the number of jurisdictions in which suit may be brought. Western Travelers Accident Ass'n v. Taylor, 62 Neb. 783 (87 N. W. 950).

356. (1906.) The residence of a person who is employed as the agent of a domestic corporation is personal, and is immaterial in an inquiry as to whether a domestic corporation is situated in a county within the meaning of said section. Security Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Ress, 76 Neb. 141 (106 N. W. 1037).

357. (1906.) The fact that an agent is temporarily employed in transacting the business of a domestic corporation in a county other than the one where the corporation has its principal place of business does not subject such corporation to the jurisdiction of the courts of that county under the provisions of section 55 of the code. Security Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Ress, 76 Neb. 141 (106 N. W. 1037).

Process.

Process on foreign corporation, see post, §§ 476-479.

Service of process or notice in garnishment, see Garnishment, §§ 47-50.

358. (1871.) An agent invested with the general conduct and control, at a particular place, of the business of a corporation, is a managing agent, within section 75 of the code, upon whom a summons may be served. It is immaterial where he resides. Porter v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 1 Neb. 14.

359. (1882.) Where the president or chief officer of a corporation is absent from the county, service may be made upon the treasurer. McMurtry v. Tuttle, 13 Neb. 232 (13 N. W. 213).

360. (1888.) Under section 912 of the civil code, a summons against a corporation may be served upon its chief officer, if he be found in the county; if not so found, then upon its cashier, treasurer, secretary, clerk, or managing agent; or if none of these can be found, by copy left at the office or usual place of business of such corporation, with the person having charge thereof. This, as well as section 914, applies to the foreign corporations, except where there are special provisions to the contrary. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Manning, 23 Neb. 552 (37 N. W. 462).

361. (1897.) Where attempt is made to serve a summons upon a corporation, and the persons served are not at the time officers of, or connected with, the corporation, the case is one of total absence of service, and a judgment founded thereon is void. Campbell Printing Press & Mfg. Co. v. Marder, 50 Neb. 283 (69 N. W. 774; 61 Am. St. Rep. 573).

362. (1899.) In suing a corporation it is not necessary that in the summons it be described as such. German Ins. Co. v. Frederick, 57 Neb. 538 (77 N. W. 1106).

363. (1902.) A manager of an agency established in this state by a foreign railroad corporation for the purpose of soliciting traffic over its line of road is a "managing agent," within the meaning of the statute with reference to service of summons on such corporations. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. New York, C. & St. L. R. Co., 66 Neb. 159 (92 N. W. 131; 59 L. R. A. 939).

www.libtool.com.cn

364. (1906.) No jurisdiction is obtained over a domestic corporation by service of process in a county in which it is neither situated nor has its principal office or place of business. Cobbey v. State Journal Co., 77 Neb. 619 (110 N. W. 643).

365. (1906.) Section 65 of the code applies to corporations as well as individuals, and, if an action is rightly brought in one county, summons may be issued to another county for service upon a corporation. Cobbey v. State Journal Co., 77 Neb. 619 (110 N. W. 643).

366. (1906.) One having authority to make sales of the products of his principal, with no additional privileges or duties, is not a general agent on whom process may be served. Ord Hardware Co. v. Case Threshing Machine Co., 77 Neb. 847 (110 N W. 551).

Garnishment.

367. (1901.) Prior to the adoption of section 485*a* of the code of civil procedure, a corporation may properly be made a garnishee, where the only property sought to be attached is the capital stock of the corporation owned by the defendant. Farmers & Merchants Nat. Bank v. Mosher, 63 Neb. 130 (88 N. W. 552).

Parties.

368. (1895.) Stockholders of a corporation, merely as such, are not proper parties respondent in a proceeding to compel the corporation by mandamus to perform a corporate act. State, ex rel. Gillilan, v. Home Street R. Co., 43 Neb. 830 (62 N. W. 225).

Pleading.

369. (1891.) At common law, a corporation may sue and be sued by the corporate name, without an averment of the act of incorporation, and the code has not changed the common law in that regard. Exchange Nat. Bank v. Capps, 32 Neb. 242 (49 N. W. 223; 29 Am. St. Rep. 433).

370. (1898.) A petition in a suit to foreclose a real-estate mortgage executed to "Western Trust and Security Company," and by it sold and assigned to the plaintiff, did not fail to state a cause of action, although the mortgagee's character as a legal entity did not affirmatively appear. Barber v. Crowell, 55 Neb. 571 (75 N. W. 1109).

371. (1899.) A petition, at least after answer to the merits, is not open to attack because it does not allege the corporate character of the defendant. German Ins. Co. v. Frederick, 57 Neb. 538 (77 N. W. 1106).

372. (1899.) In an action by a corporation, if its name imports a corporation, it is not essential to aver in terms its corporate existence or to plead the act of incorporation. Fletcher v. Co-operative Publishing Co., 58 Neb. 511 (78 N. W. 1070).

373. (1902.) At common law a corporation may sue and be sued in its corporate name without an averment of its corporate capacity, and the provisions of our Code have not changed the common law rule in that regard. Loan & Trust Savings Bank v. Stoddard, 2 Unof. 486 (89 N. W. 301).

374. (1905.) A petition which alleges that a contract of a corporation was made, executed and delivered by it by its officer and agent, naming him, is not demurrable on the ground that authority by the agent does not sufficiently appear. Johnson County v. Chamberlain Banking House, 74 Neb. 549 (104 N. W. 1061).

374*a*. (1908.) Where the original action is brought against a corporation in its corporate name and certain persons alleged to be its officers, for the specific performance of a contract to convey real estate made by the alleged officers for the corporation, an amendment to the petition, pleading that at the time the contract was made the corporation was dissolved and some of the defendants were the trustees thereof, does not change the cause of action. Heenan & Finlen v. Parmele, 80 Neb. 514 (118 N. W. 324).

——— Verification.

375. (1895.) The fifth subdivision of section 120 of the code of civil procedure authorizes the verification of pleadings for a corporation by its attorney at law as such, irrespective of the consideration that a summons might or might not legally be served upon such attorney. Beatrice Rapid Transit & Power Co. v. German Nat. Bank, 45 Neb. 147 (63 N. W. 374).

——— Issues and proof.

376. (1879.) A general denial, in an action by a corporation, does not put in issue the corporate character of the corporation, or it's power to sue or be sued. National Life Ins. Co. v. Robinson, 8 Neb. 452; (1899) Fletcher v. Co-operative Publishing Co., 58

Neb. 511 (78 N. W. 1070); (1902) Chamberlain Banking House v. Kemper, etc., Dry Goods Co., 3 Unof. 549 (92 N. W. 175).

377. (1882.) The existence of a corporation plaintiff is not put in issue by a general denial of an alleged cause of action. Dietrichs v. Lincoln & N. W. R. Co., 13 Neb. 43 (13 N. W. 13).

www.lptool.com.cn

378. (1888.) In an action on a note executed and delivered to plaintiff by its corporate name, it is unnecessary to prove plaintiff's corporate existence. Holland v. Commercial Bank, 22 Neb. 571 (36 N. W. 113).

379. (1889.) In order to throw the burden of proving its corporate existence upon a corporation plaintiff, the allegation of the petition alleging such corporate character must be denied other than by a general denial of all allegations of the petition not admitted to be true. Herron v. Cole Bros., 25 Neb. 692 (41 N. W. 765).

380. (1892.) An action for personal injuries was brought against "G. F. S. & Co., a corporation formed and doing business in Douglas county, Nebraska." In the answer and amended answer of G. F. S. & Co. they styled themselves the defendants, and denied that the corporation was formed under the laws of Nebraska, but made no denial that it was a corporation. An amended petition was thereupon filed against S. & Co., a corporation formed under the laws of Illinois and doing business in Nebraska. To this amended petition the corporation answered as defendant and denied the injuries of the plaintiff and pleaded negligence on his part. Held, There being no denial of the corporation of S. & Co. and G. F. S. & Co., that, so far as the pleadings show, they formed one and same corporation, and that the place where the corporation was formed was not a material fact in the case. Swift & Co. v. Crawford, 34 Neb. 450 (51 N. W. 1034).

381. (1895.) Where a pleading in one portion of it contains a denial of the corporate existence of a company and in another paragraph of the pleading the issue is raised of the right of the company, as a foreign corporation, to acquire or enforce a mechanic's lien in this state, the pleading will be construed as an admission of the corporate capacity of such company. Chapman v. Brewer, 43 Neb. 890 (62 N. W. 320; 47 Am. St. Rep. 779).

382. (1898.) A denial that the relator "is a corporation duly organized under the laws of the state of New York" does not put in issue the relator's corporate existence. State, ex rel. Seth Thomas Clock Co., v. County Commisioners of Cass County, 53 Neb. 767 (74 N. W. 254).

383. (1900.) The defense of ultra vires is not available under a general denial. Citizens State Bank v. Pence, 59 Neb. 579 (81 N. W. 623).

384. (1900.) A denial that plaintiff "is a corporation duly organized as a national bank under the act of congress of June 3, 1864, or any other act," does not put in issue the plaintiff's corporate existence. First Nat. Bank v. Gibson, 60 Neb. 767 (84 N. W. 259).

Presumptions and burden of proof.

385. (1893.) Contracts of a corporation which are not contrary to the express provisions of its charter are presumed to be within its powers, and the burden is upon one denying their valdity to prove the facts which render them ultra vires. Gorder v. Plattsmouth Canning Co., 36 Neb. 548 (54 N. W. 830).

386. (1895.) Where the charter or powers of a railroad company are not shown by the pleadings or evidence, the court will not presume that the act of the company in organizing and conducting a relief department is ultra vires. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Bell, 44 Neb. 44 (62 N. W. 314).

387. (1896.) The fact that one is shown to be secretary and treasurer of a corporation will not authorize the presumption that he is a stockholder. Horbach v. Tyrrell, 48 Neb. 514 (67 N. W. 485; 37 L. R. A. 434).

388. (1897.) The plaintiff sued as a corporation. The defendants, in their answer, specifically denied the corporate existence of plaintiff. Held, That the answer in this respect stated a defense and cast upon the plaintiff the burden of proving its corporate existence. Davis v. Nebraska Nat. Bank of Omaha, 51 Neb. 401 (70 N. W. 963).

389. (1905.) In an action against a corporation based on a contract, the presumption obtains that the contract is within the power of the corporation to make, and that the officers executing it on behalf of the corporation acted within the law, unless the petition states facts showing the contrary. Willow Springs Irrigation District v. Wilson, 74 Neb. 269 (104 N. W. 165).

Admissibility of evidence.

Admissibility in evidence of by-laws of building association, see Building and Loan Assocations, § 54.

Evidence of corporate existence, see ante, §§ 45-47.

390. (1878.) Representations of the president of a bank, made in transacting its business, are admissible in evidence against the bank; but statements made by him away from the bank, in reference to matters in which the bank has no interest, are not admissible. Kennedy v. Otoe County Nat. Bank, 7 Neb. 59.

391. (1888.) The written instrument presented in evidence by the plaintiff at the trial in the court below, as containing the articles of incorporation of the plaintiff in said action, though certified by the secretary of state as a copy, contained intrinsic evidence of being the original articles, the signatures thereto of the corporators being proved as genuine; held, admissible in evidence. Holland v. Commercial Bank, 22 Neb. 571 (36 N. W. 113).

392. (1896.) The testimony on another trial of an officer of a corporation with relation to previous corporate acts cannot be proved as an admission binding upon the corporation. Columbia Nat. Bank v. Rice, 48 Neb. 428 (67 N. W. 165).

Weight and sufficiency of evidence.

393. (1894.) Where a bank brought an action upon a note indorsed to it and the answer denied the corporate existence of the bank, proof showing the adoption and recording of articles of incorporation, and that the bank had acted thereunder for a period of years, was sufficient to establish its corporate existence. Haas v. Bank of Commerce, 41 Neb. 754 (60 N. W. 85).

394. (1895.) Where there was contained in a mortgage a copy of resolutions described as having been adopted by the board of directors of the mortgagor, a corporation, from which resolutions it appeared that said board had, as required, authorized the making of such mortgage, no further proof was necessary to a prima facie showing of authorization by the board of directors. Hayden v. Lincoln City Electric R. Co., 43 Neb. 680 (62 N. W. 73).

395. (1895.) Evidence held sufficient to establish the existence of a corporation so as to relieve it from collateral attack. Chapman v. Brewer, 43 Neb. 890 (62 N. W. 320; 47 Am. St. Rep. 779).

396. (1903.) Evidence in an action on a note signed by a corporation as surety, held to sustain a finding that the signature of the corporation was that of an accommodation indorsement, and created no liability. Preston v. Northwestern Cereal Co., 67 Neb. 45 (93 N. W. 136).

Instruction.

397. (1895.) An instruction that "a director of a corporation, or a number of directors, cannot convey the property of a corporation to themselves for the purpose of securing them for indorsing notes for the corporation to the exclusion of other creditors," is erroneous since it withdraws from the jury the question whether the company was solvent, the rule stated applying only to insolvent companies. Tillson v. Downing, 45 Neb. 549 (63 N. W. 836).

Execution.

398. (1892.) Property of a public corporation, such as a bridge company, which is essential to the exercise of its franchise and the discharge of the duties it has assumed toward the general public, cannot, in the absence of statutory authority, be seized and sold to satisfy an ordinary judgment. The only remedy of creditors in such case is to obtain the appointment of a receiver and a sequestration of the company's earnings. Overton Bridge Co. v. Means, 33 Neb. 857 (51 N. W. 240; 29 Am. St. Rep. 514).

VIII. INSOLVENCY AND RECEIVERS.

Action by receiver on unpaid subscription, see ante, § 92.

Assets.

399. (1898.) The assets of an insolvent corporation constitute a trust fund in the hands of its directors to be used by them in paying corporate debts. Stough v. Ponca Mill Co., 54 Neb. 500 (74 N. W. 868).

Preferences to creditors.

400. (1897.) An insolvent corporation may, in the absence of actual fraud, prefer one or more of its creditors to the exclusion of others. Wallachs & Sons v. Robinson & Stokes Co., 50 Neb. 469 (70 N. W. 52); (1898) Seeds Dry-Plate Co. v. Heyn Photo-Supply Co., 57 Neb. 214 (77 N. W. 660).

401. (1897.) There is no inflexible rule in existence which, under all conditions, prevents an insolvent corporation from transferring or incumbering its property in good faith and for proper purposes. Shaw & Co. v. Robinson & Stokes Co., 50 Neb. 403 (69 N. W. 947).

402. (1897.) Whether or not a conveyance by an insolvent corporation is fraudulent as to creditors cannot be determined as a question of law, but is a question of fact, to be determined from a consideration of the evidence in each particular case. Shaw & Co. v. Robinson & Stokes Co., 50 Neb. 403 (69 N. W. 947); (1897) Wallachs & Sons v. Robinson & Stokes Co., 50 Neb. 469 (70 N. W. 52).

403. (1898.) An insolvent corporation, merely because it is a corporation, is not prohibited from preferring particular creditors. German Nat. Bank v. First Nat. Bank, 55 Neb. 86 (75 N. W. 531).

404. (1902.) The fact that a corporation, which is being pressed by its creditors for the payment of their claims, makes a trust agreement and deed, whereby it conveys practically all of its property to trustees to secure debts due, to the amount of about $2,500 and additional credit up to $10,000, that its property so conveyed is worth many times that amount, and that such conveyance did in fact hinder and delay its other creditors and prevent them from collecting their just claims against it, taken together with conflicting evidence on the question of the intention of the parties to the transaction and all other facts and circumstances surrounding it is sufficient to sustain the finding of the trial court that the act was fraudulent and void as to such creditors. First Nat. Bank of Omaha v. East Omaha Box Co., 2 Unof. 820 (90 N. W. 223).

Preferences to officers and stockholders.

405. (1894.) The relation of the directors and managing officers of an insolvent private corporation toward the property and assets thereof is that of trustees for all of the creditors. Such officers cannot take advantage of their position to secure a preference for themselves, but are required to share ratably with other creditors. Ingwersen v. Edgecombe, 42 Neb. 740 (60 N. W. 1032).

406. (1895.) Directors of an insolvent corporation cannot take advantage of their position to obtain a preference of debts owing by the corporation to themselves. Tillson v. Downing, 45 Neb., 549 (63 N. W. 836).

407. (1895.) Where the holder of stock of an insolvent corporation, just before its final suspension of business, obtained assignments to himself of such an amount of the corporation's bills receivable as to fully secure claims owing to such stockholder and a partnership firm of which he was a member, leaving almost no assets for the payment of the other creditors of the corporation, the intent with which such preference was made and received was a question of fact for the jury, and its verdict upon proof of the above facts, that such preference was fraudulent as against creditors of the corporation, will not be disturbed as unwarranted in fact or in law. Wortendyke v. Salladin, 45 Neb. 755 (64 N. W. 215).

408. (1897.) A corporation may not prefer a debt owing to its own directors. Campbell Printing Press & Mfg. Co. v. Marder, 50 Neb. 283 (69 N. W. 774; 61 Am. St. Rep. 573).

409. (1898.) The directors of an insolvent corporation cannot lawfully appropriate its assets to the payment of debts due them from it to the entire exclusion of other corporate creditors. Wyman v. Williams, 53 Neb. 670 (74 N. W. 48).

410. (1898.) A mortgage executed by an insolvent corporation to secure a debt due from it to one of its officers or directors is illegal and void. Stough v. Ponca Mill Co., 54 Neb. 500 (74 N. W. 868).

411. (1898.) A corporation may not prefer a debt owing to its director, secretary, and treasurer. Seeds Dry-Plate Co. v. Heyn Photo-Supply Co., 57 Neb. 214 (77 N. W. 660).

412. (1899.) A director of an insolvent corporation may not through any advantage gained by reason of, or which may be taken of, his directorship obtain or secure a preference of debts of the corporation to him or in which he is materially interested, but a judgment for such debt secured without any such advantage will be upheld even though it may work a preference of the debt. Nebraska Nat. Bank v. Clark, 58 Neb. 183 (78 N. W. 527).

413. (1899.) One of the directors of the corporation who had made it a loan, and who, under the order of the managing board relative to issuance of promissory notes to members who had made loans to the company, was entitled to receive such a note, died and his son was appointed administrator of the estate, also became a director of the company, and applied for, and there was executed and delivered to him as administrator, a note of the corporation in the amount of the loan debt. The corporation became insolvent, and thereafter there was recovered a judgment against it, and in favor of the administrator, by default for the amount due on the note. Held, From the evidence, that there had been no advantage taken by the son of deceased director, and administrator of his estate, of the former's postion of director of the corporation to obtain in the suit and judgment on the note a preference over other creditors of the corporation. Nebraska Nat. Bank v. Clark, 58 Neb. 183 (78 N. W. 527).

414. (1900.) An insolvent corporation may not prefer a creditor of one of its officers and stockholders. Ingwersen v. Edgecombe, 42 Neb. 740; Tillson v. Downing, 45 Neb. 549; Seeds Dry-Plate Co. v. Heyn Photo-Supply Co., 57 Neb. 214, followed. Reynolds v. Smith, 60 Neb. 197 (82 N. W. 627).

415. (1902.) The capital stock of a corporation is a trust fund for the benefit of creditors, in the sense that there can be no distribution of its capital among the stockholders without provision being first made for the payment of corporate debts; and the courts will be astute to detect and defeat any scheme or device which is calculated to withdraw the fund, or in any way place it beyond the reach of creditors. State v. Bank of Ogallala, 65 Neb. 20 (91 N. W. 497).

——— Preference of claims on which officers are personally liable.

416. (1895.) An insolvent corporation cannot prefer a debt on which its officers and directors are bound as sureties. Tillson v. Downing, 45 Neb. 549 (63 N. W. 836); (1897) Campbell Printing Press & Mfg. Co. v. Marder, 50 Neb. 283 (69 N. W. 774; 61 Am. St. Rep. 573); (1902) Williams v. Turner, 63 Neb. 575 (88 N. W. 668).

417. (1898.) A mortgage executed by an insolvent corporation to a third person to secure a debt, for the payment of which one of its officers or directors is personally bound, is illegal and void. Stough v. Ponca Mill Co., 54 Neb. 500 (74 N. W. 868).

418. (1901.) Officers of an insolvent corporation cannot prefer debts to a third person for which they are obliged as sureties. Merchants Nat. Bank v. McDonald, 63 Neb. 363 (88 N. W. 492; 89 N. W. 770).

419. (1902.) Directors of an insolvent corporation who turn over its property and assets to third persons for the purpose of preferring claims upon which such directors are personally liable as sureties, may be required to account for such property and assets in an action by a receiver of the corporation appointed at the instance of other creditors. Williams v. Turner, 63 Neb. 575 (88 N. W. 668).

420. (1903.) When an insolvent corporation transfers all of its assets to a creditor in settlement of a claim upon which the officers of the corporation are personally liable, and the transfer is for that reason held invalid, the transferee holds the property in trust for all creditors of the corporation, and is entitled to participate in the distribution of the assets. National Wall Paper Co. v. Columbia Nat. Bank, 68 Neb. 47 (93 N. W. 1004).

421. (1904.) Where, by an attachment proceedings, without any fraud or irregularity, certain bona fide creditors of an insolvent corporation secure the application of all of the corporate assets to the payment of their claims, the fact that the directors of the corporation who had guaranteed the payment of such claims requested, and thus induced, the creditors to institute the attachment suits, without giving the said creditors any advantage or rights, other than those which as a matter of law they already possessed, does not make such directors liable in an action at law to the other creditors of the corporation. Emanuel v. Barnard, 71 Neb. 756 (99 N. W. 666).

Priorities of claims.

422. (1898.) Creditors of an insolvent corporation do not acquire any specific lien on the corporate assets. Wehn v. Fall, 55 Neb. 547 (76 N. W. 13; 70 Am. St. Rep. 397).

423. (1901.) A creditor of an insolvent corporation who has reduced his claim to judgment and had execution thereon returned unsatisfied, intervening in a creditor's action for distribution of assets, is entitled to a preference in the payment of his claim. Merchants Nat. Bank v. McDonald, 63 Neb. 363 (88 N. W. 492; 89 N. W. 770).

424. (1901.) A creditor whose claim has not been reduced to judgment cannot maintain an action against an insolvent corporation for distribution of its assets, and a creditor who has reduced his claim to judgment and had execution thereon returned unsatisfied, who intervenes in such action is entitled to a preference in the payment of his claim. Merchants Nat. Bank of Omaha v. McDonald, 63 Neb. 363 (88 N. W. 492; 89 N. W. 770).

Appointment of receiver.

425. (1898.) Where wrong-doers are in control of a corporation, both through its stock and by being officers, it is not essential for a complaining stockholder to show, as a condition of maintaining his suit for a receiver, that he first made demand on the officers to proceed on behalf of the corporation to remedy the wrongs. Ponca Mill Co. v. Mikesell, 55 Neb. 98 (75 N. W. 46).

426. (1903.) The holder of a contract, purporting to be for the purchase of a diamond, issued by a tontine company, who has not reduced his claim to judgment, and who has no lien upon the property of the company, has no standing in a court of equity in an action to sequester or impound the assets of such company. Mann v. German-American Inv. Co., 70 Neb. 454 (97 N. W. 600).

427. (1903.) The holder of a contract, purporting to be for the purchase and sale of a diamond, issued by what is commonly called a tontine company, is not a stockholder in such company, and cannot secure the appointmet of a receiver for such company because of the mismanagement of its affairs by its officers. Mann v. German-American Inv. Co., 70 Neb. 454 (97 N. W. 600).

428. (1905.) A receiver will not readily be appointed in a stockholder's suit for mismanagement of corporate affairs where neither the corporation nor the corporate officers are insolvent and the corporation is a going concern profitably conducted. Miller v. Kitchen, 73 Neb. 711 (103 N. W. 297).

429. (1905.) Where it is within the ordinary powers of a court of equity to grant sufficient relief to a complaining minority stockholder who alleges mismanagement by corporate officers, a receiver will not be appointed. Miller v. Kitchen. 73 Neb. 711 (103 N. W. 297).

——— Grounds.

430. (1898.) A receiver will not be appointed for a corporation, at the instance of a stockholder, merely because of a difference of opinion between him and the officers, or the holders of a majority of the stock, as to the proper policy of managing the corporate affairs. Ponca Mill Co. v. Mikesell, 55 Neb. 98 (75 N. W. 46).

431. (1898.) A receiver will be appointed for a corporation, at the instance of a stockholder when it is shown that the officers and the holders of a majority of the stock are fraudulently mismanaging the corporate business, converting its property to their individual use, and abusing their powers to the injury of other stockholders. Ponca Mill Co. v. Mikesell, 55 Neb. 98 (75 N. W. 46).

432. (1903.) Jurisdiction to appoint a receiver of corporate property, cannot be conferred by the mere consent of the corporation where neither equitable nor statutory grounds exists and where other parties whose rights are affected have not been notified; nor is a stockholder concluded by such an order. Vila v. Grand Island Electric Light, Ice & Cold Storage Co., 68 Neb. 222 (94 N. W. 136; 110 Am. St. Rep. 400; 60 L. R. A. 791).

433. (1903.) Unless expressly authorized by statute, a court has no jurisdiction to appoint a receiver of corporate property upon grounds which would not be sufficient were the owner a natural person. Vila v. Grand Island Electric Light, Ice & Cold Storage Co., 68 Neb. 222 (94 N. W. 136; 110 Am. St. Rep. 400; 60 L. R. A. 791).

434. (1904.) The mere fact that the officers and stockholders of a corporation are incapable of managing the affairs of the company is not ground for the appointment of a receiver thereof Smiley v. Sioux Beet Syrup Co., 71 Neb. 581 (99 N. W. 263).

435. (1904.) A petition by a stockholder of a corporation that states that there are sufficient assets to more than pay all debts but that the officers of the company are incapable of properly managing its affairs does not, in the absence of a charge of fraud of such officers, state grounds sufficient for the appointment of a receiver. Smiley v. Sioux Beet Syrup Co., 71 Neb. 586 (101 N. W. 253).

——— Jurisdiction.

436. (1903.) In the absence of statutory authority, courts of equity do not possess jurisdiction over corporate bodies to the extent of, on the application of private parties, appointing a receiver, sequestrating the property and business and selling the same through the instrumentality of such receiver, and thereby wind up the affairs and terminate the business and indirectly dissolve the corporation. Vila v. Grand Island Electrict Light, Ice & Cold Storage Co., 68 Neb. 222 (97 N. W. 613).

437. (1903.) An order of the district court appointing a receiver for a corporation, in an action wherein such relief is the only relief sought, will be vacated for want of authority in such court to make the same. Mann v. German-American Investment Co., 70 Neb. 454 (97 N. W. 600).

——— Petition.

438. (1898.) A stockholder, seeking the appointment of a receiver because of mismanagement and fraud by the majority stockholders and officers, alleged among other wrongful act that the officers had conveyed away corporate property in secret trust for one of their number and for a grossly inadequate price; that plaintiff had been compelled to resort to a stockholder's suit to set aside the conveyance, and that the court had imposed as a condition that the corporation repay a certain sum of money, giving him the right to do so if the corporation refused, and a consequent lien upon the property to indemnify him; that he had been compelled to make the payment. He asked the establishment and foreclosure of the lien. Held, That the two transactions were connected with the same subject of action, within the meaning of section 87 of the code of civil procedure, and could be joined. Ponca Mill Co. v. Mikesell, 55 Neb. 98 (75 N. W. 46).

439. (1903.) Petition in the case at bar examined, construed, and held defective in substance, and insufficient to support the orders of the court appointing a receiver to take charge of and sequestrate the property and busniess of the defendant corporation, directing a sale thereof, and the confirmation of the sale made under such orders. Vila v. Grand Island Electric Light, Ice & Cold Storage Co., 68 Neb. 233 (97 N. W. 613).

Collection of assets.

440. (1897.) The authority of the receiver of an insolvent corporation to collect assessments made by its board of directors before his appointment as such receiver is sufficiently established by showing that such receiver, under his order of appointment, was required to collect all sums due such insolvent corporation from whomsoever such indebtedness might be owing. Wyman v. Williams, 52 Neb. 833 (73 N. W. 285).

Enforcement of liability of officers.

441. (1902.) An order appointing a receiver "of the property, effects, credits, and rights of action of every character" of an insolvent corporation, and directing him to bring such action as may be "necessary to enforce the payment of such debts and rights of action and for the recovery of the assets of such company," sufficiently authorizes an action against the directors to hold them to account for property and assets disposed of by them in unlawfully preferring debts for which they were personally liable. Williams v. Turner, 63 Neb. 575 (88 N. W. 668).

Receiver as party to action against corporation.

442. (1894.) A receiver appointed by a court in another state than Nebraska is not a necessary party in this state to a suit on behalf of or against the corporation for which such receiver was appointed. Fitzgerald v. Fitzgerald & Mallory Construction Co., 41 Neb. 374 (59 N. W. 838).

443. (1898.) A receiver of a corporation, appointed after the commencement of a suit against the corporation, may intervene in such action to defend the rights of the corporation. Andrews v. Steele City Bank, 57 Neb. 173 (77 N. W. 342).

Expenses of receivership.

444. (1901.) The expenses of procuring a receivership of an insolvent corporation, including services of an attorney in consultations, preparing papers and procuring the appointment of a receiver, are properly chargeable against the fund so brought into the court's control. Stone v. Omaha Fire Ins. Co., 61 Neb. 834 (86 N. W. 468).

445. (1904.) Where a receiver is appointed for a corporation on application of a stockholder but no notice was served on a trustee who executed mortgages to secure a bond issued by the corporation, receivers certificate issued for expenses incidental to the receivership are not prior liens to that of the mortgage executed by the trustee. Smiley v. Sioux Beet Syrup Co., 71 Neb. 581 (99 N. W. 263).

IX. REINCORPORATION AND REORGANIZATION.

Property of original corporation.

446. (1903.) The majority stockholders of a corporation have no power to exclude the minority stockholders therefrom, by organizing a new corporation and transferring all the property and good will of the old to the new corporation, without the consent of the minority stockholders. McLeod v. Lincoln Medical College, 69 Neb. 555 (98 N. W. 672).

Liabilities of original corporation.

447. (1896.) Where a partnership banking company sells out to a newly formed banking corporation, evidence that the latter assumed only a portion of the liabilities of the old company, and that it had in reality paid out more that it had agreed to do, sustains a judgment for such new company as against a holder of a certificate of deposit from the old company. Campbell v.

Farmers & Merchants Bank of Elk Creek, 49 Neb. 143 (68 N. W. 344).

448. (1896.) The purchase of part of the assets of a copartnership or corporation by a new corporation, organized by the members of the old corporation or copartnership, does not raise a conclusive persumption against the new corporation that by its purchase it assumed or became liable for the debts of the old corporation or copartnership, notwithstanding the fact that the new corporation engaged in and continued to carry on the business in which the old corporation or copartnership had been engaged. Campbell v. Farmers & Merchants Bank of Elk Creek, 49 Neb. 143 (68 N. W. 344).

449. (1896.) In order to render a newly organized corporation liable at common law for the debts of an established corporation or firm to whose business and property it has succeeded, it should in the absence of a special agreement, affirmatively appear from the pleadings and proofs that the transaction in question is fraudulent as to creditors of the old corporation, or that the circumstances attending the creation of the new and its succession to the business and property of the old corporation are of such character as to warrant the finding that it is a mere continuation of the former. Austin v. Tecumseh Nat. Bank, 49 Neb. 412 (68 N. W. 628; 59 Am. St. Rep. 543; 35 L. R. A. 444)

450. (1897.) One corporation having acquired all the stock of another, and then, through its officers, having procured that other to execute to it a bill of sale of all its assets to secure an existing indebtedness, and there remaining as a consequence of such acts no officers or place of business or tangible assets of such second corporation, semble, that another creditor of the second corporation need not procure judgment against it preliminary to an action against the first for the purpose of enforcing its claim against the second. Campbell Printing Press & Mfg. Co. v. Marder, 50 Neb. 283 (69 N. W. 774).

451. (1903.) Where a debtor corporation transfers all of its assets to a new one, organized for the purpose of continuing the business of the old, and no provision is made for payment of its debts and it ceases to do business, one holding a judgment against the old corporation may bring an action at law against the new one. Douglas Printing Co. v. Over, 69 Neb. 320 (95 N W. 656).

452. (1907.) Where an insolvent corporation, in fraud of its creditors, transfers its assets to a new corporation, not the successor of the old, without consideration other than the issuance of stock to the stockholders of the old corporation, an action at law will not lie against the receiving corporation. Sharples Co. v. Harding Creamery Co., 78 Neb. 795 (111 N. W. 783).

453. (1907.) Where an insolvent corporation, in fraud of its creditors, transfers its assets to a new corporation, not the successor of the old, without consideration other than the issuance of stock to the stockholders of the old corporation, the corporation receiving such assets is liable to the creditors of the old corporation only to the extent of the value of the property received. Sharples Co. v. Harding Creamery Co., 78 Neb. 795 (111 N. W. 783).

X. CONSOLIDATION.

Consolidation of railroads, see Railroads, §§ 163-169.

Consolidation of street railroads, see Street Railroads, §§ 24-26.

In general.

454. (1888.) By virtue of a consolidation of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad company, an Illinois corporation, and the Burlington & Missouri River Railroad Company, a Nebraska corporation, in compliance with the laws of this state, the corporation so created become a body corporate in accordance with the laws of this state, and is not a foreign corporation. State, ex rel. Leese, v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 25 Neb. 156 (41 N. W. 125; 2 L. R. A. 564*n*).

454*a*. (1879.) When the president of a railway company becomes a partner in a construction company and such company assumes the debts of the railway company and agrees to pay all claims and expenses of the latter, the said president cannot recover against a subsequent purchaser of the railroad, a claim for his unpaid salary, as the construction company had assumed to pay the same. Nebraska R. Co. v. Lett, 8 Neb. 251.

XI. DISSOLUTION AND FORFEITURE OF FRANCHISE.

Deficiency of members.

455. (1897.) That one person becomes the owner of a majority of all of the shares of stock of the corporation does not work a dissolution of the corporation nor necessarily destroy its identity or individuality as a business concern. Property conveyed to the corporation does not become the property of such person individually. Harrington v. Connor, 51 Neb. 214 (70 N. W. 911).

Misuse of franchise.

456. (1881.) Repeated and wilful acts of misuser or nonuser by a corporation which are of the essence of the contract between it and the state, constitute a just ground of forfeiture of the franchise. State v. Council Bluffs & N. Ferry Co., 11 Neb. 354 (9 N. W. 563).

457. (1900.) Sections 3 and 4 of the "Anti-trust law" (Compiled Statutes 1899, chapter 91*a*), providing for ousting corporations by civil action from the exercise of powers and privileges which have been abused, is declaratory of the common law. State v. Standard Oil Co., 61 Neb. 28 (84 N. W. 413; 87 Am. St. Rep. 449).

458. (1902.) A corporation, organized under the laws of this state, which is engaged in a business forbidden by statute, or unlawful as against public policy, may be deprived of its charter and dissolved by proceedings in quo warranto. State, ex rel. Prout, v. Nebraska Home Co., 66 Neb. 349 (92 N. W. 763; 103 Am. St. Rep. 706; 60 L. R. A. 448).

Jurisdiction of proceedings.

459. (1906.) Equity has no jurisdiction to dissolve and put an end to corporations unless expressly authorized to so do by statute. State v. Omaha Elevator Co., 75 Neb. 654 (106 N. W. 979).

Parties to proceedings.

460. (1888.) In a proceeding by quo warranto against a corporation to forfeit its franchises and oust it from the same for nuisance or nonuser thereof, the corporation is the only necessary party defendant. State, ex rel. Leese, v. Atchison & N. R. Co., 24 Neb. 143 (38 N. W. 43; 8 Am. St. Rep. 164). [Rehearing. State v. Atchison & N. R. Co., 38 Neb. 437.]

Management of assets.

460*a*. (1907.) Where the managing directors or trustees of a bank in process of liquidation have in their hands funds of the bank, and the distribution of such funds is prevented by litigation or otherwise, and the custom of responsible banks in the community where they reside is to pay interest upon such deposits, and said funds were in fact bearing interest at and prior to the time such trustees obtained the custody of the same, and said trustees withdraw the moneys from such banks and deposit them in a bank in which one of the trustees is a stockholder, without interest, such trustees will be held personally liable for the customary rate of interest paid by responsible banks in such community for deposits of like character. Gund v. Ballard, 80 Neb. 385 (114 N. W. 420).

Distribution of property.

461. (1890.) The franchise of a corporation being annulled, the question of the rights of property and of an intervenor therein will not be determined until all claimants can be heard. State v. Nebraska Distilling Co., 29 Neb. 700 (46 N. W. 155).

Compensation of trustees.

461*a*. (1907.) Where certain stockholders of a bank in process of liquidation employ counsel to litigate for them their contention as to the distribution of a fund which is already in existence in the hands of the trustees or managing directors, and subject to distribution to the parties entitled thereto, as their respective rights may be determined by the court, they will not be entitled to recover their attorneys' fees out of such fund. Gund v. Ballard, 80 Neb. 385 (114 N. W. 420).

461*b*. (1907.) The mere fact that managing directors of trustees of a bank in process of liquidation have not been active in interposing defenses to an action by one of their number against the bank upon an individual claim will not defeat their right to a reasonable compensation for services rendered and responsiblity assumed in closing up and settling the other affairs of said bank. Gund v. Ballard, 80 Neb. 385 (114 N. W. 420).

Actions by or against corporation after dissolution.

462. (1898.) Under the provisions of section 68, chapter 16, Compiled Statutes 1897, an action against a dissolved corporation may be commenced and prosecuted to final judgment. Wehn v. Fall, 55 Neb. 547 (76 N. W. 13; 70 Am. St. Rep. 397).

463. (1900.) A dissolved domestic corporation may, after such dissolution, prosecute any suit in its corporate name in the same manner and with like effect as if the corporation had not ceased to exist. Schmitt Bro. Co. v. Mahoney, 60 Neb. 20 (82 N. W. 99).

465. (1906.) After the dissolution of a corporation by the expiration of its franchise, or otherwise, an action may be maintained in the corporate name upon a cause of action which accrued to the corporation. Lincoln Butter Co. v. Edwards-Bradford Lumber Co., 76 Neb. 477 (107 N. W. 797).

465*a*. (1908.) Under section 62, chapter 16, Compiled Statutes 1907, a dissolved corporation may be sued in the corporate name and service made upon the trustee or person in charge of the assets. Heenan & Finlen v. Parmele, 80 Neb. 514 (118 N. W. 324).

XII. FOREIGN CORPORATIONS.

Right of foreign corporation to mechanic's lien, see Mechanics' Lien, § 10.

Right of foreign corporation to exercise right of eminent domain, see Eminent Domain, §§ 13-22.

Validity of contract with foreign building and loan company, see Building and Loan Associations, §§ 14-19.

Right of state to impose conditions.

466. (1903.) The state may impose such conditions and limitations as it sees fit upon foreign corporations seeking the privilege of doing business in this state. State, ex rel. Breckenridge, v. Fleming, 70 Neb. 523 (97 N. W. 1063).

467. (1904.) The state may impose on a foreign corporation, as a condition of coming into and doing business within its territory, any terms, conditions and restrictions it may think proper, not repugnant to fundamental laws. State v. Insurance Co. of North America, 71 Neb. 320 (99 N. W. 36).

Revocation of privilege.

468. (1900.) Foreign corporations do business here not by right, but by comity, and the state may, at pleasure, revoke the privilege which it has granted such corporations. State v. Standard Oil Co., 61 Neb. 28 (84 N. W. 413; 87 Am. St. Rep. 449).

469. (1900.) The revocation of the privilege given a foreign corporation to do business here is not the infliction of a penalty. State v. Standard Oil Co., 61 Neb. 28 (84 N. W. 413; 87 Am. St Rep. 449).

——— Proceedings.

470. (1900.) A foreign corporation, by reason of having done one or more of the criminal acts mentioned in section 2 of the "Anti-trust law" (Compiled Statutes 1899, chapter 91*a*), may, by injunction or quo warranto, be excluded from the state. State v. Standard Oil Co., 61 Neb. 28 (84 N. W. 413; 87 Am. St. Rep. 449).

471. (1900.) A foreign corporation doing business in violation of the "Anti-trust law" (Compiled Statutes 1899, chapter 91*a*), may be required under section 394 of the code of civil procedure, to furnish evidence against itself in an action brought to exclude it from the state. State v. Standard Oil Co., 61 Neb. 28 (84 N. W. 413, 87 Am. St. Rep. 449).

Acquiring property.

472. (1890.) Where a foreign corporation purchased real estate in this state at a judicial sale, its title is valid against every one but the state, and can be divested only by proceedings brought by the state for that purpose. Carlow v. Aultman & Co., 28 Neb. 672 (44 N. W. 873).

Actions by or against.

473. (1896.) Where a foreign corporation has business transactions in the state with residents thereof, out of which accounts arise against the corporation, the accounts may be enforced in the courts of the state if jurisdiction can be obtained. Council Bluffs Canning Co. v. Omaha Tinware Mfg. Co., 49 Neb. 537 (68 N. W. 929).

474. (1900.) By comity of the states, corporations of one state may sue in the courts of another state the same as can a domestic corporation, unless prohibited by legislative enactment. Schmitt & Bro. Co. v. Mahoney, 60 Neb. 20 (82 N. W. 99).

475. (1901.) A foreign corporation may sue in the courts of this state without a compliance with the provisions of section 215, chapter 16, Compiled Statutes. Holt v. Rust-Owen Lumber Co., 2 Unof. 170 (96 N. W. 613).

——— Process.

476. (1892.) Where a foreign corporation contracts a debt in this state, as for labor and materials, service in this state upon the managing agent is sufficient, although he be but temporarily within the state. Klopp, Bartlett & Co. v. Creston City Guarantee Waterworks Co., 34 Neb. 808 (52 N. W. 819; 33 Am. St. Rep. 666).

477. (1896.) Service made within the state upon the managing agent of a foreign corporation is sufficient to confer jurisdiction upon a district court, under section 59 of the code. Council Bluffs Canning Co. v. Omaha Tinware Mfg. Co., 49 Neb. 537 (68 N. W. 929).

478. (1906.) Under the provisions of sections 73, 75 of the code, a citizen of this state, who has a cause of action against a foreign corporation growing out of business transactions in this state, may have recourse to the courts of this state by the service of process upon the managing agent of such corporation. Ord Hardware Co. v. Case Threshing Machine Co., 77 Neb. 847 (110 N. W. 551).

479. (1906.) An agent of a foreign corporation, whose contract of agency demands of him the exercise of judgment in the business matters of his principal, and who has charge of the business of his principal in the territory covered by his contract, is a managing agent within the meaning of sections 73 and 75 of the code, providing for the service of summons upon the managing agent of a foreign corporation. Ord Hardware Co. v. Case Threshing Machine Co., 77 Neb. 847 (110 N. W. 551).

——— Pleading.

480. (1903.) Where the fact that a plaintiff, a foreign corporation, has been doing business in this state without complying with the conditions prescribed in the statute as to such corporations, does not appear affirmatively, a demurrer will not lie. Such defense must be set up by answer. Northern Assurance Co. v. Borgelt, 67 Neb. 282 (93 N. W. 226).

481. (1903.) Where the record discloses affirmatively that the plaintiff, a foreign corporation, has been doing business in this state without complying with the conditions prescribed by the statutes, a demurrer is properly sustained. Northern Assurance Co. v. Borgelt, 67 Neb. 282 (93 N. W. 226).

I. NATURE, GROUNDS, AND EXTENT OF RIGHTS IN GENERAL.

Nature and grounds of right.

1. (1880.) A party can in no case recover costs from his adversary unless he can show some statute which gives him the right. Stanton County v. Madison County, 10 Neb. 304 (4 N. W. 1055); (1881) Dow v. Updike, 11 Neb. 95 (7 N. W. 857); (1897) City of Hastings v. Mills, 50 Neb. 842 (70 N. W. 381); (1898) Wallace v. Sheldon, 56 Neb. 55 (76 N. W. 418); (1902) Douglas County v. Moores, 66 Neb. 284 (92 N. W. 199).

Stipulations and agreements.

2. (1902.) Discontinuance of a pending cause and agreement not to prosecute any further claim are sufficient consideration for a promise to pay accrued costs and attorneys' fees. Weilage v. Abbott, 3 Unof. 157 (90 N. W. 1128).

Discretion of court.

3. (1890.) The awarding of costs on the granting of a continuance is discretionary with the trial court. Coombs v. Brenklander, 29 Neb. 586 (45 N. W. 929).

4. (1895.) The awarding and taxation of costs rests in the discretion of the trial court, where no statutory provision controls. Woodward v. Baird, 43 Neb. 310 (61 N. W. 612).

5. (1898.) The discretion conferred on the courts by section 623 of the code, relating to costs, is not an arbitrary, but a legal, one, to be exercised within the limits of legal and equitable principles. Wallace v. Sheldon, 56 Neb. 55 (76 N. W. 418); (1902) State, ex rel. Johnson, v. Holm, 3 Unof. 768 (92 N. W. 1006); (1903) Albers v. Dillavou, 4 Unof. 340 (93 N. W. 937); (1905) In re Clapham's Estate, 73 Neb. 492 (103 N. W. 61).

6. (1901.) In other actions than those in which costs follow of course, the discretion of the trial court in awarding costs will not be interfered with, except where facts regularly brought before the supreme court shows abuse of such discretion. Porter v. Trompen, 2 Unof. 76 (96 N. W. 226).

7. (1906.) In an action in equity the trial court has a sound discretion in taxing the costs of the action to the different litigants, but this discretion is subject to review when unreasonably or arbitrarily exercised. Hering v. Simon, 77 Neb. 60 (108 N. W. 154).

Prevailing party.

8. (1876.) When a petition is filed to set aside a sale in which the sheriff levied on the wrong property and the defendant did not appear to be in default, the cost should be taxed to the plaintiff. Frasher v. Ingham, 4 Neb. 531.

9. (1892.) In an action to compel a county board to call an election to change the county seat, the relator, on the granting of the relief sought, is entitled to costs against the county. State, ex rel. Wilcox, v. Crabtree, 35 Neb. 106 (52 N. W. 842).

10. (1898.) The provisions of the code on the subject of costs examined, and held to establish the following principles: (1) Generally, costs follow the judgment—are awarded the successful and taxed to the losing party; (2) prima facie, the unsuccessful litigant is liable for costs; and, to justify a judgment awarding him costs, either an express statute must intervene, or the circumstances be such that a judgment against him for costs would be inequitable. Wallace v. Sheldon, 56 Neb. 55 (76 N. W. 418).

Amount or value of recovery.

11. (1879.) When the plaintiff sues for $50 and recovers only $15, he is entitled to costs. Martin v. Grover, 9 Neb. 263 (2 N. W. 354).

12. (1881.) D. sued M. & H. in the county court for a balance of $154.67. M. & H. answered denying D.'s cause of action and setting up an offset against him amounting to $138. The jury found that there was due from the defendants to the plaintiff upon the cause of action set forth in his bill of particulars, the sum of $193.40, and that there was due from the plaintiff to the defendants upon their set-off the sum of $118.40. That there was therefore found to be due to the plaintiff from the defendants the sum of $75.00. Held, On error, that the plaintiff was not entitled to costs. Moore v. Darrow, 11 Neb. 462 (9 N. W. 637).

13. (1884.) In an action under section 15, of chapter 50, of the Compiled Statutes, where the damages claimed were $500, in the county court, where the action was commenced, the plaintiff recovered $205. Upon appeal by the defendant to the district court the plaintiff recovered $181. Held, That plaintiff could not recover her costs. Rosenbaum v. Dunston, 16 Neb. 111 (19 N. W. 610).

14. (1892.) In an action for an accounting by principal against his agent the recovery of cost is not dependent upon the amount of the recovery. Carlson v. Beckman, 35 Neb. 392 (53 N. W. 203).

15. (1894.) Where, in an action to foreclose a mechanic's lien, there was a finding for less than $200, and a personal judgment, but no decree of foreclosure, the general finding established the right to a lien and determined that the action was not one within the jurisdiction of a justice of the peace, and entitled the plaintiff to recover his costs. The fact that the court failed to enter judgment in accordance with the finding did not render a judgment for costs erroneous. Guthrie v. Brown, 42 Neb. 652 (60 N. W. 939).

Action which might have been brought in lower court.

16. (1872.) A plaintiff cannot have costs of his action, if he bring it in the district court, when it is within the jurisdiction of a justice of the peace, even though the district court have concurrent jurisdiction. Geere v. Sweet, 2 Neb. 76.

17. (1877.) Where a justice of the peace has jurisdiction of an action, and it has been brought in any other court, the plaintiff cannot recover costs. Ray v. Mason, 6 Neb. 101; (1887) Goodman v. Pence, 21 Neb. 459 (32 N. W. 219); (1894) Pickens v. Polk, 42 Neb. 267 (60 N. W. 566).

18. (1880.) R. brought an action against a sheriff and an attachment creditor in the district court to recover the sum of $300, the value of certain property levied upon by the sheriff under an order of attachment against S. R., and recovered judgment for the sum of $52.58. Held, Not an action against an officer for misconduct in office, and that a justice of the peace had jurisdiction, the amount recovered being less than $100. Miller v. Roby, 9 Neb. 471 (4 N. W. 65).

19. (1881.) Where plaintiff in county court claims more than $100 and finding in his favor exceeds that sum, but is by counter-claim or set-off reduced to less than $100, he is not entitled to costs. Moore v. Darrow, 11 Neb. 462 (9 N. W. 637).

20. (1894.) In an action brought in the district court where plaintiff obtains a judgment for $200, the costs of each party should be taxed to him. Shields v. Gamble, 42 Neb. 850 (61 N. W. 101).

21. (1897.) Mills sued the city in the district court claiming $5,000 damages which he alleged he had sustained by falling into an excavation in one of its streets negligently left unguarded. He recovered a verdict for $200. Held, That, assuming the excavation was a nuisance within the meaning of section 621 of the code of civil procedure, a justice of the peace had jurisdiction to render judgment for the amount of the verdict and therefore Mills was not entitled to recover costs; that the amount claimed by Mills in his petition deprived a justice of the peace of jurisdiction to try the case but the amount recovered determined his right to recover costs. City of Hastings v. Mills, 50 Neb. 842 (70 N. W. 381).

22. (1897.) Where a justice of the peace has jurisdiction of a cause, and the same has been brought in any other court, plaintiff cannot recover costs. Each party, in such case, is liable for his own costs. Morsch v. Besack, 52 Neb. 502 (72 N. W. 953).

Costs needlessly incurred.

Effect of including unnecessary papers in record, see Appeal and Error, §§ 1152, 1153.

23. (1880.) If costs are needlessly incurred, they should be taxed to the party at fault. Miller v. Roby, 9 Neb. 471 (4 N. W. 65).

24. (1880.) So far as it is consistent with its duty in enforcing and protecting the rights of the parties, the court should discourage the accumulation of costs. Miller v. Roby, 9 Neb. 471 (4 N. W. 65).

25. (1885.) Where a party to a proceeding before the county board causes the attendance of unnecessary witnesses, or in any other manner needlessly augments the costs and expenses of a trial, it is within the power of the board to tax such unnecessary costs to the party making them, and it should in all proper cases exercise such power. State, ex rel. Castor, v. Saline County, 18 Neb. 422 (25 N. W. 587).

Establishment of partial defense.

26. (1885.) In an action on a contract where it is pleaded that illegal interest has been contracted for or taken or reserved, and the truth of such plea shall be proved or admitted, the defendant is entitled to recover costs. Cattle v. Haddox, 17 Neb. 307 (22 N. W. 565).

27. (1897.) Where, in an action on a promissory note, the defense of usury is established, the defendant is entitled to recover his costs even though plaintiff has judgment and such recovery applies to costs incurred in the suing out of an attachment in the case. Montgomery v. Albion Nat. Bank, 50 Neb. 652 (70 N. W. 239).

28. (1899.) In a suit on a contract for payment of money, where the defense of usury is established, plaintiff is not entitled to costs on the judgment awarded him. Interstate Savings & Loan Ass'n v. Strine, 58 Neb. 133 (78 N. W. 377).

Effect of offer of judgment.

29. (1879.) An offer to confess judgment duly made in the court where the action is brought, under section 1004 of the code of civil procedure, need not be renewed in the appellate court in order to make it available to the party making it on final judgment. Kleffel v. Bullock, 8 Neb. 336; (1887) Underhill v. Shea, 21 Neb. 154 (31 N. W. 510).

30. (1886.) In a case pending in the district court an offer made by defendant to allow judgment to be taken by the plaintiff in a certain amount therein stated and costs, which offer was in writing and filed in the office of the clerk of said court, but was not served upon the plaintiff or his attorney, nor was it made in open court, the plaintiff being present or having notice thereof. Held, Unavailing to throw the costs made after the filing of such offer upon the plaintiff. Rose v. Peck, 18 Neb. 529 (26 N. W. 363).

31. (1887.) Where docket of justice shows that prior to trial, defendant offered to confess judgment, which plaintiff refused to accept, there is no presumption that the offer was made in writing; and the decision of the district court to tax costs to plaintiff, for the reason that judgment did not exceed the offer, will not be molested. Underhill v. Shea, 21 Neb. 154 (31 N. W. 510).

32. (1890.) In an action before a justice of the peace, if the defendant before trial offers in writing to allow judgment to be taken against him for a specified sum, and the plaintiff declines to accept the same, and fails to recover a sum equal to the offer, he cannot recover costs made after the offer. Elsanger v. Grovijohn, 29 Neb. 139 (45 N. W. 273).

33. (1896.) Section 565 of the code of civil procedure, providing that a defendant may serve on the plaintiff, or his attorney, an offer in writing to allow judgment to be taken against him for a specified sum, and that if such offer be not accepted, and the plaintiff fails to obtain judgment for more than the offer, he shall pay defendant's costs from the time of the offer, contemplates that where there is only one defendant, all costs from the time of the offer shall in such case be taxed against plaintiff. Wachsmuth v. Orient Ins. Co., 49 Neb. 590 (68 N. W. 935).

34. (1898.) An offer to confess judgment duly made in a cause pending before a justice of the peace need not be renewed in the appellate court to make the provisions of said section 1004 of the code available to the defendant on final judgment. Flower v. Nichols, 55 Neb. 314 (75 N. W. 864).

35. (1898.) In an action before a justice of the peace, where the defendant before trial offers in writing to allow judgment to be taken against him for a specified sum, and the plaintiff declines to accept the same, and fails to recover a sum equal to the offer, he is not entitled, under section 1004 of the code of civil procedure, to recover costs subsequently made, but the same should be adjudged against him. Flower v. Nichols, 55 Neb. 314 (75 N. W. 864).

36. (1907.) An acceptance of an offer to allow judgment for a specified sum, coupled with the condition that the judgment shall include costs, is an acceptance of the offer according to its legal effect, and entitled the plaintiff to judgment for the amount offered, and costs, without further litigation. Palmer v. Stiles, 78 Neb. 362 (110 N. W. 1004).

37. (1907.) Where an acceptance of an offer to allow judgment in a specified sum is coupled with a condition that the judgment shall include costs, and is rejected by the defendant, his rejection thereof amounts to a withdrawal of his offer, and leaves the parties standing, with respect to costs, as though the offer had not been made. Palmer v. Stiles, 78 Neb. 362 (110 N. W. 1004).

38. (1907.) Section 1004 of the code, which provides that, in an action brought before a justice of the peace, if the defendant, at any time before trial, offer to allow judgment to be taken against him for a specified sum, and the plaintiff reject such offer and fail to recover a sum equal to the offer, he cannot recover costs subsequently accruing, contemplates an offer made in terms that, when accepted as made, entitles the plaintiff to judgment therefor, and costs, without further litigation. Palmer v. Stiles, 78 Neb. 362 (110 N. W. 1004).

Effect of reversal of judgment.

39. (1885.) Where upon a new trial being granted the plaintiff was permitted to amend his petition by stating more fully a cause of action arising on his contract, not a new cause of action, an order requiring him to pay only a part of the costs then accrued would not be set aside. Wallingford, Shamp & Co. v. Burr, 17 Neb. 137 (22 N. W. 350).

40. (1901.) Where a decree was rendered denying one of the litigants any relief and taxing him with half the costs, and it was reversed, it also reversed the decree as to costs. Olson v. Lamb, 61 Neb. 484 (85 N. W. 397).

Condition to granting continuance.

41. (1879.) Under the act of February 25, 1875, the court may require the party moving for a continuance to pay a sum not exceeding $10 as costs. Smith v. Silvis, 8 Neb. 164.

On change of venue.

In criminal prosecutions, see post, § 159.

42. (1901.) The taxation of costs on a change of venue in justice court to the party applying therefor, is absolute, and the party paying the same, although ultimately successful in the suit, cannot recover the amount so paid. Moss v. Lindsey, 62 Neb. 829 (88 N. W. 119).

Presentation of claim as condition.

43. (1884.) Section 80, chapter 14, Compiled Statutes, does not require claims arising on tort for the death of a person through the negligence of the city, to be presented to the council in order to entitle plaintiff to recover costs. Nance v. Falls City, 16 Neb. 85 (20 N. W. 109).

Ownership of costs awarded.

44. (1897.) Unclaimed witness fees and costs remaining in the hands of the clerk of the district court are not public moneys, and the legislation of the state, in so far as it attempts to divest the persons for whose benefit such fees and costs were paid of title thereto, is unconstitutional and void. State, ex rel. Broatch, v. Moores, 52 Neb. 770 (73 N. W. 299).

45. (1902.) Since no costs of any kind can be taxed in a case unless the statute makes provision therefor, the legislature may, in providing for the taxation of witness fees and other costs, make a condition that such fees and costs shall be called for within a certain specified time, in default of which they shall be paid into the county treasury for the benefit of the school fund. Douglas County v. Moores, 66 Neb. 284 (92 N. W. 199).

II. PERSONS ENTITLED.

Defendant disclaiming interest.

46. (1897.) "Where defendants disclaim having any title or interest in land or other property the subject matter of the action, they shall recover costs, unless for special reasons the court decides otherwise," is declaratory merely of the rule in equity, since the discretion reserved to the court implies a determination from an inspection of the pleadings of defendant's right to be dismissed from the action. Fowler v. Brown, 51 Neb. 414 (71 N. W. 54).

III. PERSONS LIABLE.

Liability of infant for costs, see Infants, §§ 64-66.

Incompetent persons.

47. (1879.) The action of an infant must be brought by his guardian or next friend, who alone is liable for the costs. The infant is not liable to a judgment therefor. Kleffel v. Bullock, 8 Neb. 336.

48. (1879.) An infant is not liable to a judgment for costs after arriving at full age, in an action brought without a guardian or next friend, but not terminated during infancy, if on reaching majority at the first opportunity, he disclaims all benefit from the proceeding, and refuses to proceed further. Kleffel v. Bullock, 8 Neb. 336.

49. (1887.) Where an action was brought against certain minor heirs and others to quiet the title of real estate in the plaintiff, the principal object of the action being to divest the title of the minor heirs, as such minor heirs were unable to convey by deed, they should not be taxed with the costs of the action, and the relief will be granted to the plaintiff upon the payment of all costs. Clark v. Clark, 21 Neb. 402 (32 N. W. 157).

Official or representative capacity of party.

erty in the possession of the execution defendant, without knowledge or notice that such property belongs to a third person, cannot be made liable for the costs in an action of replevin brought by the owner to recover possession, unless a demand has been made for the surrender of the possession before the commencement of the action. Littlefield v. Wilson, 1 Unof. 581 (95 N. W. 677).

On intervention.

51. (1892.) An intervener cannot, in any event, be taxed with costs which accrued prior to the intervention. Railsback, Mitchell & Co. v. Patton, 34 Neb. 490 (52 N. W. 277).

IV. SECURITY FOR PAYMENT.

In criminal prosecutions, see post, §§ 152, 153.

Want of security for costs, as grounds for dismissal, see Dismissal and Nonsuit, §§ 57, 58.

Necessity.

52. (1881.) When an action is brought by partners in their firm name, the statute requires them to give security for costs. Haskins v. Citizens Bank, 12 Neb. 39 (10 N. W. 466).

53. (1882.) The plaintiff in an action, and also the defendant, is primarily liable for all costs which he makes, and their payment or security may be required in advance. Nor does the fact that his adversary may ultimately be compelled to pay them by the judgment of the court, relieve him from such liability to the officer entitled thereto. Sechler v. Stark, 12 Neb. 242 (11 N. W. 320).

54. (1895.) Prejudice does not result from an order overruling a motion to require plaintiff to give additional security, where a valid judgment including costs goes against defendant. Watson v. Roode, 43 Neb. 348 (61 N. W. 625).

55. (1897.) Refusal to require a nonresident plaintiff to give security for costs is not reversible error where, on final hearing, the costs are properly taxed to defendant. Hard v. Hard, 51 Neb. 412 (70 N. W. 1122).

56. (1898.) After judgment had been entered for defendant an order requiring plaintiff, on a motion filed before trial, to give security for costs, held not prejudicial error where plaintiff did not comply with the order. Elliott v. Carter White-Lead Co., 53 Neb. 458 (73 N. W. 948).

57. (1898.) Under facts stated in opinion an order overruling a motion to require a cross-petitioner to give security for costs, held not erroneous. Moss v. Robertson, 56 Neb. 774 (77 N. W. 403).

Waiver.

58. (1881.) The requirement of security for costs, being for the benefit of defendant, may be waived by him, and he does waive it by failing properly to insist upon its being given. Haskins v. Citizens Bank, 12 Neb. 39 (10 N. W. 466).

Bond or undertaking.

59. (1901.) There is no substantial difference between "a bond for costs" and "an undertaking for costs." Each expression is the recognized equivalent of the other. McPherson v. Commercial Nat. Bank, 61 Neb. 695 (85 N. W. 895).

60. (1901.) An undertaking for costs is enforceable although no obligee is named therein. McPherson v. Commercial Nat. Bank, 61 Neb. 695 (85 N. W. 895).

Summary remedies against sureties.

61. (1902.) The provisions of sections 612 to 616 of the code of civil procedure, and especially of the latter section, do not authorize by summary proceedings the entry of a judgment for costs against sureties on a cost bond which is required to be given by the plaintiff in error or appellant under rule 12 adopted by the supreme court, with reference to security for costs in actions brought here on error or by appeal. Dunn v. Bozarth, 64 Neb. 862 (90 N. W. 954).

62. (1902.) The court is not authorized by the issuance of a writ of scire facias, or on a motion and notice to the adverse party in lieu thereof, to order an execution to issue against sureties on a cost bond, given in pursuance of the provisions of supreme court rule 12, for the costs made in the action in which the cost bond was given, and which are assessed against a plaintiff in error or appellant, or for the amount thereof remaining unpaid. Dunn v. Bozarth, 64 Neb. 862 (90 N. W. 954).

Action on bond or undertaking.

63. (1902.) The right to enforce the liability of a surety on a cost bond given in pursuance of supreme court rule 12, is by proceeding in an ordinary civil action on the undertaking and in pursuance of the rules governing civil actions generally.

V. AMOUNT, RATE AND ITEMS.

In general.

www.libtool.com.cn

64. (1906.) Nothing can be taxed as costs in an action except such items as are prescribed by statute or are expressly authorized by the consent or agreement of the parties. Langan v. Whalen, 77 Neb. 658 (110 N. W. 668).

65. (1906.) Where a new trial is granted for the reason that a correct transcript to perfect an appeal was not obtainable for the reason that the official reporter had absconded, the costs of an attempt to procure such transcript is not taxable in the second trial. Langan v. Whalen, 77 Neb. 658 (110 N. W. 668).

Attorneys' fees.

66. (1875.) Where an allowance is made for an attorney's fee, as provided by section 23, General Statutes, the amount thereof should be specifically stated and kept distinct from the amount of the judgment proper. Rich v. Stretch, 4 Neb. 186. [Changed by statute. Hardy v. Miller, 11 Neb. 395.]

67. (1877.) When the instrument sued on provides for an attorney's fee, the allowance of the fee is no part of the judgment for the debt itself, but it is taxed as costs, and is subject to exceptions and review in like manner as the taxation of other costs may be. Hendrix v. Rieman, 6 Neb. 516.

68. (1878.) Attorneys' fees are in the nature of costs and are to be taxed as such. Rosa v. Doggett, 8 Neb. 48.

69. (1878.) No attorneys' fees can be allowed except in cases where a judgment has been recovered, and only in cases where the instrument upon which the action is brought in express terms provides for their allowance. And in no case can such fee be recovered unless it is allowed by the court. Rosa v. Doggett, 8 Neb. 48. [Changed by statute. Hardy v. Miller, 11 Neb. 395.]

70. (1881.) There is no authority to allow attorney fees in actions founded on instruments executed since June 1, 1879. Hardy v. Miller, 11 Neb. 395 (9 N. W. 475); Dow v. Updike, 11 Neb. 95 (7 N. W. 857).

71. (1881.) The repeal of the act allowing attorney's fees on foreclosure, did not affect a contract entered into while the act was in force. White v. Rourke, 11 Neb. 519 (9 N. W. 689).

72. (1884.) If an allowance of attorneys' fees is made, the record should show the fact, and it should be kept entirely distinct from the judgment proper. It is considered in the nature of costs, and should be treated as such. Aultman & Co. v. Stout, 15 Neb. 586 (19 N. W. 464).

73. (1884.) In the absence of a statute authorizing it, there is no authority in this state to allow an attorney's fee, and tax the same as costs in the action. Otoe County v. Brown, 16 Neb. 394 (20 N. W. 274).

74. (1884.) There is no statute in this state authorizing the taxation of attorney's fee as part of the costs in an action by county commissioners to foreclose a tax lien. Otoe County v. Brown, 16 Neb. 398 (20 N. W. 641).

75. (1885.) Where a note was executed prior to the taking effect of act of February 24, 1879, a provision for attorneys' fees therein may be enforced. Bond v. Dolby, 17 Neb. 491 (23 N. W. 351).

76. (1886.) Under a statute which authorizes the allowance of an attorney's fee in certain cases, proportioned to the amount of recovery, the debtor cannot, by paying a considerable portion of the debt immediately proceding the rendition of judgment, defeat the recovery by the attorney of fees upon the entire sum for which, but for the payment, judgment would have been rendered. Hand v. Phillips, 18 Neb. 593 (26 N. W. 388; 54 Am. Rep. 824).

77. (1886.) An attorney's fee under the act of February 18, 1872, when allowable, should "be fixed" and allowed by the trial court upon a recovery of judgment by a plaintiff, and when once fixed within the statutory limits the amount thereof will not be changed by the supreme court. Sedgwick v. Dixon, 18 Neb. 545 (26 N. W. 247). [Changed by statute. Hardy v. Miller, 11 Neb. 395.]

78. (1888.) As vindictive damages cannot be recovered in this state, attorney fees are not recoverable in actions of tort, except where specifically provided for by statute. Winkler v. Roeder, 23 Neb. 706 (37 N. W. 607; 8 Am. St. Rep. 155).

79. (1891.) From the earliest history of this state until 1873 attorney fees were not allowed to the plaintiff in any action arising upon contract. In 1873 an act was passed to allow attorney fees not to exceed ten per cent of the recovery in an action upon a mortgage or promissory note. This act was repealed in 1879, taking effect June 1, 1879, and since that time a court has had no authority to allow attorney fees to the plaintiff in any action upon a promissory note or for the foreclosure of a mortgage. In re Breckinridge, 31 Neb. 489 (48 N. W. 142).

80. (1893.) A provision in a note executed since June 1, 1879, for the payment of attorneys' fees for collection is invalid. Security Co. of Hartford v. Eyer, 36 Neb. 507 (54 N. W. 838; 38 Am. St. Rep. 735).

81. (1893.) In a real estate mortgage foreclosure on property in this state it appeared that a resident of Nebraska executed the note and mortgage and agreed in the note to pay an attorney's fee for collection in case of foreclosure. The payee was a resident of Iowa. The papers were executed and delivered and the money paid to the borrower in this state. The note was payable in New York. The provision for payment of attorney's fee is binding in Iowa. It was stipulated in the note and mortgage that these instruments were made and executed in, and are to be construed by, the laws of Iowa. Held, That the law of the place of the forum governs the application of the remedy, such as the recovery of costs, and that the said provision in the note for attorney's fee, being contrary to the settled law of this state, will not be enforced. Security Co. of Hartford v. Eyer, 36 Neb. 507 (54 N. W. 838; 38 Am. St. Rep. 735).

82. (1894.) The provisions of chapter 48 of the Session Laws of 1889 empowered the courts of this state, upon rendering judgment against an insurance company on any policy of insurance on real property, to allow plaintiff a reasonable sum as an attorney's fee, to be taxed as part of the costs of the case in which judgment is rendered. Hanover Fire Ins. Co. v. Gustin, 40 Neb. 828 (59 N. W. 375).

83. (1894.) Where attorneys' fees are taxed as costs, it is no objection that they were allowed to the attorneys of record by name. Phœnix Ins. Co. v. Covey, 41 Neb. 724 (60 N. W. 12).

84. (1894.) The taxation of attorneys' fees by a federal court is a matter of which such courts have sole cognizance, and such taxation cannot in the state courts be impeached as being contrary to public policy. Mead v. Weaver, 42 Neb. 149 (60 N. W. 385).

85. (1895.) On the foreclosure of a tax lien, based on a valid tax sale, the court should award the plaintiff an attorney's fee equal to ten per cent of the amount of the decree. Alexander v. Thacker, 43 Neb. 494 (61 N. W. 738).

86. (1897.) Under section 45, chapter 43, Compiled Statutes, the court may, in a suit on a policy covering both realty and personalty, allow a reasonable attorney's fee, based on the amount recovered on account of the realty. Omaha Fire Ins. Co v. Thompson, 50 Neb. 580 (70 N. W. 30).

87. (1897.) Upon review of a judgment for plaintiff in an action on a fire insurance policy covering realty, attorney's fees for services in the supreme court should not be allowed. Home Fire Ins. Co. v. Skoumal, 51 Neb. 655 (71 N. W. 290).

88. (1897.) In an action on a policy for insurance written on real property, the court in rendering judgment against the insurance company may allow the plaintiff a reasonable sum as an attorney's fee, to be taxed as part of the costs. Home Fire Ins. Co. v. Skoumal, 51 Neb. 655 (71 N. W. 290).

89. (1898.) A provision, in a note, for payment of attorney's fees in case suit should be brought against the maker, will not be enforced in Nebraska, though the note was executed and made payable in Iowa where the provision was lawful. Hallam v. Telleren, 55 Neb. 255 (75 N. W. 560).

90. (1898.) Courts cannot award attorney's fees to an unsuccessful contestant of a will solely because he acted in good faith, and probable cause for the contest existed. Wallace v. Sheldon, 56 Neb. 55 (76 N. W. 418).

91. (1902.) The provision of section 3 of the valued policy law (Comp. Stat. 1899, ch. 43, sec. 45), permitting the taxation as costs of a reasonable attorney's fee upon rendering judgment against an insurance company on a contract insuring real estate, is grounded on considerations of public policy, and is constitutional. Farmers & Merchants Ins. Co. v. Dobney, 62 Neb. 213 (86 N. W. 1070; 97 Am. St. Rep. 624).

92. (1903.) A recovery of counsel fees for the trial of a case will not be allowed as an element of damages for an injunction wrongfully obtained if the injunction proceedings be only ancillary to the main case. Barr v. Post, 4 Unof. 32 (93 N. W. 144).

93. (1906.) Where the court, instead of taxing the fees, enters a judgment therefor in favor of the attorneys by name, it is a mere error of form and not of substance, and does not constitute reversible error. Chambers v. Chambers, 75 Neb. 850 (106 N. W. 993).

94. (1906.) Attorneys' fees cannot be taxed as costs against the successful litigant in an action at law or in equity. Hering v. Simon, 77 Neb. 60 (108 N. W. 154).

Officers' fees for attendance.

95. (1895.) No fee is allowable by law to a sheriff or constable for attendance during the trial of a civil case before a justice of the peace. Kissinger v. Staley, 44 Neb. 783 (63 N. W. 55).

Interest or costs allowed.

96. (1891.) The judgment debtor is not liable for interest on the taxable costs where payment is delayed by error proceedings and plaintiff had not advanced the costs. O'Donnell v. Omaha, N. & B. H. R. Co., 31 Neb. 846 (48 N. W. 880).

VI. TAXATION.

Effect of reversal on costs in lower court, see ante, §§ 39, 40.

Entry.

97. (1895.) A judgment of a justice of the peace, "It is therefore considered by me that the plaintiff recover from the defendant the sum of $7.48 and his costs herein expended, taxed at $37.55, as follows: See margin," is correct in form in its reference to costs, as it only allowed the recovery by plaintiff of his costs expended in the suit; and separately stating or entering the costs in itemized tables on the margin of the record was a sufficient compliance with the requirements of the law in regard to separate taxing and entering the costs on the record. Kissinger v. Staley, 44 Neb. 783 (63 N. W. 55).

Parties.

98. (1887.) Under section 30, chapter 28, Compiled Statutes 1885, the costs of the parties to an action must be taxed and entered on the record separately. Cooper & Co. v. Hall, 22 Neb. 168 (34 N. W. 349).

99, 100. (1887.) In all actions, motions and proceedings in the district court the costs of the parties should be taxed and entered on the record separately. Wallace v. Flierschman, 22 Neb. 203 (34 N. W. 372); (1895) Kissinger v. Staley, 44 Neb. 783 (63 N. W. 55).

Retaxation.

101. (1880.) Where the costs taxed appear to be excessive, the proper remedy is by motion to retax made to the court where the error occurred. Woods v. Colfax County, 10 Neb. 552 (7 N. W. 269).

102. (1885.) A motion for retaxation of costs made necessary by mistake, neglect, or omission of the clerk, or irregularity in obtaining a judgment or order, may be made at any time within three years after judgment upon reasonable notice to the adverse party, or his attorney in the action. Cattle v. Haddox, 17 Neb. 307 (22 N. W. 565).

103. (1885.) Where costs taxed in a cause appear to be exorbitant or excessive, the proper remedy is by a motion to retax, made to the court where the alleged mistakes are made. Cozine v. Hatch, 17 Neb. 694 (24 N. W. 389); (1898) Citizens Nat. Bank v. Gregg, 53 Neb. 760 (74 N. W. 273).

104. (1897.) Where the supreme court in remanding a cause directs the trial court to tax all costs to appellee, the latter may move for a rehearing or for a modification of the order as to costs. Oliver v. Lansing, 51 Neb. 818 (71 N. W. 735).

105. (1901.) A court is without jurisdiction to act upon a motion to retax costs given by a decree filed at a subsequent term. Olson v. Lamb, 61 Neb. 484 (85 N. W. 397).

106. (1906.) Any mistake made by the clerk in taxing fees in favor of or against a party may be corrected by the court on motion at any time; but an award of costs in favor of a party is a part of the judgment as much as the award of damages, and this cannot be changed after the term, except for some statutory cause allowing the court to set aside or modify its judgment at a subsequent term. Meade Plumbing, Heating & Lighting Co. v. Irwin, 77 Neb. 385 (109 N. W. 391).

107. (1907.) While the award of costs made in a judgment cannot be changed after the term, except for some cause provided by statute for modifying a judgment after the term at which it was entered, this rule does not apply to an application made by a party to retax items of the costs illegally or through mistake taxed against him. Smith v. Bartlett, 78 Neb. 359 (110 N. W. 991).

Review of order.

108. (1895.) Where from statements in the record it appears certain items of the costs as taxed are proper charges, in the absence of any showing to the contrary they will be presumed to be correct. Kissinger v. Staley, 44 Neb. 783 (63 N. W. 55).

www.libtool.com.cn

109. (1897.) An order of the district court taxing costs as directed by a mandate of the supreme court held not reversable. Oliver v. Lansing, 51 Neb. 818 (71 N. W. 735).

110. (1901.) A party who claims that unnecessary costs were taxed against him must point out the items of which he complains. National Life Ins. Co. v. Butler, 61 Neb. 499 (85 N. W. 437; 87 Am. St. Rep. 462).

111. (1901.) A foreign statute provided for the reference, by the court, of a solicitor's bill to a taxing master, on the application of the party to be charged, and that the amount taxed by such master should be binding and conclusive on the parties, unless set aside or altered; plaintiff's bill, as solicitors, was so referred, and taxed by such master; at the time of ordering the reference, it was also ordered by the court that the party to be charged should pay the amount taxed by such master within a given time. Held, That the order of the court was a final judgment against the party to be charged for the amount found and taxed by the master. Linton v. Janson, 1 Unof. 352 (95 N. W. 675).

112. (1906.) Where the court, instead of taxing the fees, enters a judgment therefor in favor of the attorneys by name, it is a mere error of form, and not of substance, and does not constitute reversible error. Chambers v. Chambers, 75 Neb. 850 (106 N. W. 993).

——— Necessity for motion to retax.

In criminal prosecutions, see post, § 154.

113. (1886.) A party complaining of the taxation of costs in the district court must file a motion in that court to retax the same. The ruling on the motion to retax is subject to review. Whitall v. Cressman, 18 Neb. 508 (26 N. W. 245); (1892) Railsback, Mitchell & Co. v. Patton, 34 Neb. 490 (52 N. W. 277).

114. (1887.) Before judgment for costs will be reviewed in the supreme court, there must be a motion to retax sustained or overruled, in whole or in part, by the trial court. Wilkinson v. Carter, 22 Neb. 186 (34 N. W. 351); (1894) Real v. Honey, 39 Neb. 516 (58 N. W. 136); (1894) Richards v. Borowsky, 39 Neb. 774 (58 N. W. 277); (1894) Cahn v. Lipson, 39 Neb. 776 (58 N. W. 280); (1894) Haskell v. Valley County, 41 Neb. 234 (59 N. W. 680); (1894) Roberts v. Drehmer, 41 Neb. 306 (59 N. W. 911); (1894) Shields v. Gamble, 42 Neb. 850 (61 N. W. 101); (1895) Insurance Co. of North America v. Bachler, 44 Neb. 549 (62 N. W. 911); (1896) Yankton, N. & S. W. R. Co. v. State, 49 Neb. 272 (68 N. W. 487).

115. (1897.) A motion to retax costs is essential to obtain a review of a mistake, neglect, or omission of the clerk of the trial court in the taxation of costs, but such motion is unnecessary where the court has determined that a party is liable for certain costs and rendered judgment against him therefor. Hartford Fire Ins. Co. v. Corey, 53 Neb. 209 (73 N. W. 674).

116. (1897.) Where the question as to liability for costs was directly considered by the trial court, the party against whom they were taxed may have the ruling reviewed without having filed a motion to retax. Lamaster v. Elliott, 53 Neb. 424 (73 N. W. 925).

117. (1898.) A motion in the lower court to retax costs is unnecessary to review a judgment awarding an attorney's fee in an action on an insurance policy. American Fire Ins. Co. v. Landfare, 56 Neb. 482 (76 N. W. 1068).

VII. ON APPEAL AND ERROR.

Review of decisions of justice of the peace, or county court.

118. (1880.) In an appeal from the justice of the peace, where the district court rendered judgment in favor of the plaintiff for costs, the judgment was reversed, and each party is required to pay his own costs. Miller v. Roby, 9 Neb. 471 (4 N. W. 65).

119. (1880.) Where a plaintiff appeals from judgment in a justice court, and does not recover more than $20 on the appeal, exclusive of interest, he cannot recover his costs, but shall be adjudged to pay all costs in the appellate court, including $5 to defendant's attorneys. Weast v. Sheppard, 10 Neb. 508 (7 N. W. 284).

120. (1906.) When a plaintiff in an action in a justice's court, in which no set-off is pleaded, recovers a judgment from which the defendant appeals, and the plaintiff has judgment also in the district court, he is entitled to recover costs in the latter court without regard to the amount of his judgment therein. Miller v. Henderson, 76 Neb. 383 (107 N. W. 586).

Expenses of record.

121. (1881.) If unnecessary matter appear in a record, costs thereof taxed to party in fault. Eaton v. Carruth, 11 Neb. 231, (9 N. W. 58).

122. (1891.) In preparing a transcript for the supreme court, the clerk of the district court is not entitled to charge a fee for a certificate and seal attached to each paper and journal entry of which a copy is made, one certificate at the end of the transcript being sufficient. Lydick v. Palmquist, 31 Neb. 300 (47 N. W. 918).

123. (1892.) Where unnecessary papers are included in the transcript, as the original petition where there is an amended one, the summons and return to the same, together with motions and demurrers to the petition where no point is made upon such pleadings or papers, the costs of the same will be taxed to the party at fault. Streitz v. Hartman, 35 Neb. 406 (53 N. W. 215).

124. (1904.) The necessary expense of settling a bill of exceptions upon the determination of a cause in the district court is taxable as costs incurred in that court to be adjudged against the unsuccessful party in the final determination of the litigation. Pettis v. Green River Asphalt Co., 71 Neb. 519 (101 N. W. 333).

Effect of petition for removal.

125. (1881.) Although the timely filing of a proper petition and bond under the provisions of the act of congress, approved March 3, 1875, may render it the imperative duty of the state court to make an order removing the cause to the circuit court of the United States for the proper district, yet when it does not appear from the record that the attention of the district court has ever been called to such petition and bond, nor any motion made to set aside a judgment rendered after the filing of such petition and bond, this court will deny costs in a proceeding in error to reverse such judgment. Merriam v. Dunbar, 11 Neb. 208 (7 N. W. 443).

Dismissal.

126. (1895.) An appellant, against whom there was no finding below, may be released from payment of costs where the appeal from a judgment against the other appellants has been dismissed. Scott v. Cornish, 44 Neb. 376 (62 N. W. 1065).

Recovery of more favorable judgment.

127. (1884.) In an action under section 15 of chapter 50 of the Compiled Statutes, where the damages claimed were five hundred dollars; in the county court, where the action was commenced, the plaintiff recovered $205. Upon appeal by the defendant to the district court the plaintiff recovered $181. Held, That plaintiff could not recover her costs. Rosenbaum v. Dunston, 16 Neb. 111 (19 N. W. 610).

128. (1884.) On trial in the county court the plaintiff recovered judgment for $38.77½ when the defendant appealed to the district court, and in that court the plaintiff recovered judgment for $18, whereupon the district court refused to render judgment in favor of plaintiff for his costs. Held, No error. Wilde v. Boldt, 16 Neb. 539 (20 N. W. 849).

Modification.

129. (1889.) Where a judgment is affirmed as to some items and reversed as to others, the costs in the supreme court will be divided equally between the parties. Carter v. Munson, 27 Neb. 172 (42 N. W. 1032).

Reversal.

130. (1889.) Where a judgment is reversed in the supreme court and remanded, the plaintiff in error is entitled to recover his costs which accrue in said court. Republican V. R. Co. v. Finck, 28 Neb. 397 (44 N. W. 434).

131. (1899.) Where, in an error proceeding, a judgment of reversal is entered in this court, the plaintiff in error is entitled to recover his costs made in said court from the defeated party. Those which accrued in the district court abide the final determination of the cause. National Masonic Accident Ass'n v. Burr, 57 Neb. 437 (77 N. W. 1098).

VIII. PAYMENT AND REMEDIES FOR COLLECTION.

Sufficiency.

132. (1891.) One H. was permitted to file an amended petition upon payment of costs. He paid a large amount of costs and filed an amended petition on which the case was tried and a decree rendered. Held, That as the court below had deemed the order of the court as to payment of costs satisfied by trying the cause and rendering a decree, if more costs were still due, the remedy of the defendant was a motion to retax, and that should additional costs still be due from the plaintiff it would not be cause for the reversal of the judgment. Hoagland v. Van Etten, 31 Neb. 292 (47 N. W. 920).

www.libtool.com.cn

Evidence of payment.

133. (1903.) The testimony of the witness who paid them is competent proof of a payment of costs. Arabian Horse Co. v. Bivens, 4 Unof. 823 (96 N. W. 621).

Summary remedies.

134. (1886.) Judgments for costs in mandamus cases can only be collected by execution in the same way as other judgments. A respondent failing to pay such judgment is not in contempt and cannot be proceeded against therefor. State, ex rel. Mechleny, v. Jaynes, 19 Neb. 697 (28 N. W. 295).

Lien and enforcement thereof.

Costs in criminal prosecutions, see post, §§ 175, 176.

135. (1903.) The costs of the error proceeding, like other costs incident to the litigation, are secured by the attachment lien, and the attached property may be sold to satisfy the same. Rhodes v. Samuels, 67 Neb. 1 (93 N. W. 148).

Enjoining collection.

136. (1898.) A court of equity will not enjoin the collection of a fee bill where all the legal costs therein taxed have not been paid or tendered. Citizens Nat. Bank v. Gregg, 53 Neb. 760 (74 N. W. 273).

IX. IN CRIMINAL PROSECUTION.

See, also, specific crimes or offenses.

Costs of prosecution for breach of the peace, see Breach of the Peace, §§ 1, 2.

In prosecution for violating liquor laws, see Intoxicating Liquors, § 319.

Validity of law taxing costs in prosecution for violating liquor laws, see Intoxicating Liquors, § 27.

Statutory provisions in general.

137. (1880.) The several provisions of the criminal code relative to costs are clearly embraced in the title of the act, which is, "An act to establish a criminal code," and are constitutional. Boggs v. Washington County, 10 Neb. 297 (4 N. W. 984).

Rights and liabilities on conviction.

138. (1885.) The constitution does not deprive the legislature of the authority to impose a reasonable jury fee to be taxed as a part of the costs against a person convicted of an offense. Shaw v. State, 17 Neb. 334 (22 N. W. 772).

139. (1896.) An attorney's fee cannot be taxed against a defendant, under section 22, chapter 50, Compiled Statutes, in a case prosecuted by the county attorney. Hornberger v. State, 47 Neb. 40 (66 N. W. 23).

140. (1902.) Costs properly taxable to a defendant in a criminal case are not all the costs which the person having charge of the prosecution may see fit to make, but only such as there was actual, apparent or probable necessity for incurring. Biester v. State, 65 Neb. 276 (91 N. W. 416).

141. (1902.) In determining what costs were actually, apparently or probably necessary, the district court is vested with a large discretion, which will not be interfered with if fairly exercised. Biester v. State, 65 Neb. 276 (91 N. W. 416).

142. (1902.) The costs of prosecution which may be taxed against the defendant in a criminal case are the costs incurred in establishing guilt, and not those made in connection with an accusation shown to be groundless. Biester v. State, 65 Neb. 276 (91 N. W. 416).

143. (1902.) Litigants should ordinarily anticipate the discretion of the trial court to limit the number of witnesses to prove a collateral issue, and where an unnecessary number are subpœnaed costs should not be taxed as to all of them. Biester v. State, 65 Neb. 276 (91 N. W. 416).

144. (1902.) Costs made by the state in a futile effort to prove that an assault was felonious cannot be taxed against the defendant, although convicted of an assault and battery. Biester v. State, 65 Neb. 276 (91 N. W. 416).

——— Lesser offense than that charged.

145. (1883.) Where one is charged with a felony before a justice of the peace, but ought to have been for a misdemeanor only, the county board may, in their discretion, allow or disallow the entire bill for costs, or any part thereof. Kepley v. Irwin, 14 Neb. 300 (15 N. W. 719); Dodge County v. Gregg, 14 Neb. 305 (15 N. W. 741).

146. (1902.) Costs made by the state in a futile effort to prove that an assault was felonious cannot be taxed against the defendant, although convicted of an assault and battery. Biester v. State, 65 Neb. 276 (91 N. W. 416).

Liability of prosecuting witness.

147. (1880.) Where a complaint in a prosecution for assault and battery fails, only the costs of the prosecution may be taxed against the complainant, and not the cost of defending. Errickson v. State, 10 Neb. 585 (7 N. W. 333).

148. (1882.) In cases of complaint for misdemeanor, before a magistrate, whether the case is tried on the merits or dismissed before trial, costs can be adjudged against the complainant only after a finding that the complaint was without probable cause or malicious. Cobbey v. Berger, 13 Neb. 463 (14 N. W. 396).

149. (1892.) S. was arrested on a charge of felony on complaint made by B. The accused waived examination and gave bond for his apearance at the next term of the district court, at which an information was filed by the county attorney for the crime charged in the complaint of B. Subsequently the prosecution was dismissed upon the motion of the county attorney, whereupon the court entered judgment against B. for the costs of prosecution. Held, Error. Burton v. State, 34 Neb. 125 (51 N. W. 601).

——— Statutory provisions.

150. (1886.) Section 287 of the criminal code does not apply to prosecutions instituted by a public officer. State, ex rel. Thomas, v. McCutcheon, 20 Neb. 304 (30 N. W. 58).

151. (1902.) Section 322 of the code of criminal procedure, in so far as it authorizes the question of the good faith of the prosecuting witness in instituting the prosecution to be tried and determined at the same time that the defendant is tried, and the taxation of costs against him in case it is found that in filing the information he acted maliciously or without probable cause, is unconstitutional and void. Rickley v. State, 65 Neb. 841 (91 N. W. 867; 61 L. R. A. 489*n*).

——— Security for costs.

152. (1886.) Where the complainant in a prosecution for misdemeanor is a public officer, he is not required to furnish security for costs before the issuance of a warrant. State, ex rel. Thomas, v. McCutcheon, 20 Neb. 304 (30 N. W. 583).

153. (1889.) In cases of misdemeanor the statute authorized the magistrate to require the complaining witness to give security for costs. This security is designed as a protection to all persons entitled to fees in the case in the event that the complaint is dismissed; but the law does not authorize a constable to demand his fees in advance in such cases as a condition precedent to performing his duty in the county, as by summoning a jury. Beach v. State, ex rel. Emmons, 27 Neb. 398 (43 N. W. 177).

——— Review.

154. (1892.) Where costs are improperly taxed to a complaining witness on dismissal of the prosecution by the county attorney, a motion to retax costs is not neccssary in order to entitle him to have the judgment reviewed in the supreme court. Burton v. State, 34 Neb. 125 (51 N. W. 601).

155. (1896.) The right of appeal from the county court to the district court in a criminal case is restricted to defendant, and appeal will not lie in favor of the complaining witness against whom a judgment for costs has been rendered. O'Chander v. Hansen, 48 Neb. 485 (67 N. W. 604).

——— Actions.

156. (1882.) Whether under our code an action can be maintained, in any event, by an officer for fees earned in a misdemeanor case before a magistrate, against the complainant, or security for costs given under the provisions of section 287 of the criminal code, quære. But no such action can be maintained unless it has been found by such magistrate that the complaint in such misdemeanor case was malicious or without probable cause. Cobbey v. Berger, 13 Neb. 463 (14 N. W. 396).

Liability of county.

157. (1880.) The complaint under which costs are made, although charging a felony, is not conclusive on the question of allowance and payment. If upon investigation by the commissioners they shall find that it ought to "have been for a misdemeanor only, they may, in their discretion, disallow the entire bill or any part thereof." Boggs v. Washington County, 10 Neb. 297 (4 N. W. 984).

158. (1880.) Costs incurred in prosecutions for felony or misdemeanor before magistrates are payable from the county treasury only as provided in sections 536 and 541 of the criminal code. Boggs v. Washington County, 10 Neb. 297 (4 N. W. 984).

159. (1880.) Upon a change of venue under section 456 of the criminal code, the expenses of the county in which the cause is tried, including jurors, bailiffs, use of court room, etc., are not costs within the meaning of said section, "to be borne by the county where the indictment is found." Whether the language of the statute includes anything more than clerk's fees for transcript of the record of the case, quære. Stanton County v. Madison County, 10 Neb. 304 (4 N. W. 1055).

160. (1883.) A county is not liable for fees of witnesses of a defendant, who is indicted for a felony. Hewerkle v. Gage County, 14 Neb. 18 (14 N. W. 549). [Changed by statute, section 461, Compiled Statutes.]

161. (1883.) The county is liable for costs of a criminal examination before the magistrate. Dodge County v. Gregg, 14 Neb. 305 (15 N. W. 741).

162. (1894.) An act appropriating a definite sum of money to reimburse a county for expenses of a murder trial, and directing the auditor to draw a warrant in favor of the county treasurer for the amount appropriated, is not unconstitutional. State, ex rel. Sayre, v. Moore, 40 Neb. 854 (59 N. W. 755; 25 L. R. A. 774).

163. (1901.) Prior to the amendment in 1885 of section 461 of the criminal code, a county was not liable for defendant's witness fees where he was indicted for a felony. Worthen v. Johnson County, 62 Neb. 754 (87 N. W. 909).

164. (1901.) Under section 461 of the criminal code the county is not liable for the fees and mileage of witnesses for the defendant unless the statutory affidavits have been filed. Such liability arises only by provision of statute. Worthen v. Johnson County, 62 Neb. 754 (87 N. W. 909).

165. (1901.) The liability of a county for the per diem and mileage of defendant's witnesses in a prosecution for a felony, even though an acquittal follows, must arise by some express provisions of the statute, and not by implication. Worthen v. Johnson County, 62 Neb. 754 (87 N. W. 909).

166. (1906.) The county from which a change of venue in a criminal case is taken is not liable to the county in which the trial is had for the fees of such jurors of the regular panel as did not sit upon the trial of that case. Dawes County v. Sioux County, 77 Neb. 567 (110 N. W. 378).

Liability of city.

167. (1903.) Fees of officers and witnesses for services rendered in a prosecution for the violation of an ordinance of a city, either in police court or in district court upon appeal, cannot be collected from such city, unless their payment by the city is required by statute or by ordinance authorized by statute. Kreader v. City of Fremont, 69 Neb. 762 (96 N. W. 616).

Imprisonment for non-payment.

168. (1881.) Where a complaint is found to be without probable cause, and judgment for costs is entered against complainant, such judgment is a mere civil liability and complainant cannot be imprisoned for the costs. State, ex rel. McGraw, v. Ensign, 11 Neb. 529 (10 N. W. 449).

169. (1881.) The provisions of section 322 of the criminal code, that a complainant against whom costs are adjudged may be imprisoned unless they are paid, are void, since the costs are a mere civil liability, for which imprisonment cannot be had. State, ex rel. McGraw, v. Ensign, 11 Neb. 529 (10 N. W. 449).

170. (1893.) Where a person is convicted of a criminal offense it is the duty of the court in which the conviction was had to render judgment against the prisoner for the costs of prosecution, and the court may make it a part of the sentence that the party be imprisoned in jail until the costs are paid, or secured to be paid, or he is otherwise legally discharged. (Criminal code, secs. 500, 501.) In re Dobson, 37 Neb. 449 (55 N. W. 1071).

171. (1893.) A defendant in a criminal case confined in jail for the nonpayment of costs assessed against him, and who is unable to pay the same, is not entitled to be discharged from further imprisonment for such costs, under section 528 of the criminal code, where it appears he has not been imprisoned at least one day for each three dollars of the costs. In re Dobson, 37 Neb. 449 (55 N. W. 1071).

172. (1894.) A court or magistrate, upon entering judgment in a criminal prosecution against a prisoner, may order that he shall stand committed until the fine and costs are paid, or secured to be paid. In re Newton, 39 Neb. 757 (58 N. W. 436).

173. (1894.) Imprisonment for the nonpayment of fines and costs is no part of the punishment, but is merely one of the means of enforcing compliance with the order of the court. In re Newton, 39 Neb. 757 (58 N. W. 436).

174. (1894.) Where the offender is unable to pay the amount adjudged against him, he may obtain relief under section 528 of the criminal code. In re Newton, 39 Neb. 757 (58 N. W. 436).

Lien and enforcement thereof.

175. (1899.) By section 524 of the criminal code a judgment of the district court in favor of the state for costs is a lien on all real estate, within the county, owned by the accused at the time of docketing the cause. Predohl v. O'Sullivan, 59 Neb. 311 (80 N. W. 903).

176. (1899.) A judgment in favor of the state for costs of a criminal prosecution becomes dormant and ceases to be a lien on real estate at the end of five years from the date of the assignment. Predohl v. O'Sullivan, 59 Neb. 311 (80 N. W. 903).

I. CREATION, ALTERATION, EXISTENCE AND POLITICAL FUNCTIONS.

Nature and status.

1. (1880.) A county is a mere subdivision of the state created by it without the request or consent of the people residing therein. Woods v. Colfax County, 10 Neb. 552 (7 N. W. 269).

Constitutional and statutory provisions.

2. (1885.) A special act of the legislature, which provides that certain territory, the boundaries of which are given, shall be designated Harlan county, appoints certain persons commissioners, and requires them within thirty days to call an election for the purpose of electing county officers and selecting a site for a county seat, is not in conflict with the constitution, which inhibits the conferring of corporate powers by special act. State, ex rel. Harvey, v. Piper, 17 Neb. 614 (24 N. W. 204).

Digitized by Google

Unorganized territory.

www.libtool.com.cn

3. (1893) B. county was organized in 1891, at which time it was unorganized territory, and has never, by general apportionment law or special act, been attached to any representative district. It is a narrow strip lying between H. county and the northern boundary of the state, eight townships long from east to west and has less than three townships in width. It adjoins K. county along its entire eastern boundary, although further west it extends north to the 43d parallel about ten miles beyond the northern boundary of K. county, at which point it is bounded on the east by the state of South Dakota. Held, That it is directly west of K. county, within the meaning of section 146, chapter 18, Compiled Statutes, and was, while unorganized territory, attached to said county for election purposes. State, ex rel. Norton, v. Van Camp, 36 Neb. 91 (54 N. W. 113).

Establishment of boundaries.

4. (1887.) Act of March, 1855, defining boundaries of Blackbird county, held inoperative and void as being in violation of organic act of territory of Nebraska. State, ex rel. Peebles, v. Thayer, 22 Neb. 413 (35 N. W. 200).

5. (1903.) The banks of a river are essential parts thereof, and when a county boundary is fixed at "the south bank," the river may be said to divide the county from the one on the opposite side, within the meaning of section 87, chapter 78, Compiled Statutes. Dodge County v. Saunders County, 70 Neb. 442 (97 N. W. 617).

6. (1906.) The boundary line between Colfax and Butler counties is the south bank of the Platte river, which flows between those counties. State, ex rel. Sumption, v. Smith, 77 Neb. 1 (108 N. W. 173).

Alteration, and creation of new counties.

7. (1881.) When a new county, formed by the legislature from "unorganized territory" taken from two judicial districts, becomes organized for county purposes, as the statute directs, it thereupon ceases to be "unorganized territory," and is entitled to all the rights and privileges, under the constitution, bestowed upon these governmental divisions of the state. Its territory is no longer divided between the two judicial districts, but is completely severed from both, and of necessity must so remain until the legislative duty of assigning it to one of them is performed. Under the constitution a county cannot be parts of two judicial districts. Olive v. State, 11 Neb. 1 (7 N. W. 444).

8. (1881.) Upon the holding of an election for county and precinct officers, pursuant to the call of the special commissioners appointed by the governor for the purpose of organizing a new county, and the canvassing of the votes cast at such election by such special commissioners, such county "is permanently organized according to law." Behr v. Willard, 11 Neb. 601 (10 N. W. 525).

9. (1886.) Upon the organization of a new county, and the election and qualification of its officers, the ligament which bound to the county to which it was attached for election, judicial, and revenue purposes is severed, and all business must thereafter be transacted with the new county. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Brown County, 18 Neb. 516 (26 N. W. 194).

10. (1890.) New county cannot be formed from old one, so as to reduce latter to less than constitutional area. State, ex rel. Pennell, v. Armstrong, 30 Neb. 493 (46 N. W. 618; 9 L. R. A. 382).

——— Submission of question to popular vote.

11. (1888.) When it is proposed to erect a new county from an old one, it is the duty of the county commissioners to issue an order submitting the proposition to the people at the next general election, when a petition, describing the proposed new county, shall be presented. State, ex rel. Anderson, v. Newman, 24 Neb. 40 (38 N. W. 40).

12. (1888.) When it is sought to erect from a county more than one new county, and petitions for the submission of the proposition to erect such new counties are severally presented, they may be separately submitted at the same election, without reference to the number of propositions to be voted upon thereat. State, ex rel. Anderson, v. Newman, 24 Neb. 40 (38 N. W. 40).

13. (1890.) A county board cannot lawfully submit, to be voted upon at the same election, two propositions to erect from a county two new counties, when the territory described in one proposition embraces a part of that included in the other. When conflicting petitions for the submission of the question of creating new counties are presented, it is the duty of the county board to grant the petition that is first filed, provided it meets all the requirements of the law, and refuse to submit the others. State ex rel. Pennell, v. Armstrong, 30 Neb. 493 (46 N. W. 618; 9 L. R. A. 382).

14. (1892.) The provisions of section 2, article X of the constitution, which declares that "No county shall be divided or have any part stricken therefrom without first submitting the question to a vote of the people of the county, nor unless a majority of all the legal voters of the county voting on the question shall vote for the same," is a restriction upon the powers of the legislature to the extent named, but is not a prohibition upon that power to require more than a majority in favor of the proposition —as three-fifths of the legal votes cast upon that question. State, ex rel. Packard, v. Nelson, 34 Neb. 162 (51 N. W. 648).

15. (1892.) The boundaries of an organized county cannot be lawfully changed so as to add to such county adjoining unorganized territory, unless a majority of the inhabitants of such territory so petition the county board of the county to which it is proposed to be added, nor unless the proposition has received the sanction of a majority of the voters of such county at an election duly called and held therein for that purpose. Wayne County v. Cobb, 35 Neb. 231 (52 N. W. 1102).

16. (1893.) In 1883 an act was approved extending the boundaries of H. county directly north, so as to include the unorganized territory which is now B. county, but providing that it should not take effect until a majority of the legal voters of said county should give their assent at the time of the next general election. At the general election in 1883 there was cast in said county 1821 votes, of which 878 only were in favor of said proposition. Held, That the proposition was defeated, and an order entered by the county board in 1885 declaring it adopted is a nullity. State, ex rel. Norton, v. Van Camp, 36 Neb. 91 (54 N. W. 113).

17. (1900.) Under section 11, article I, chapter 18, Compiled Statutes, to effect the division of a county, the proposition therefor must receive a majority of the legal votes cast at the general election, at which the same was submitted, whether cast for the filling of an office or on any proposition. State, ex rel. Saunders, v. Clark, 59 Neb. 702 (82 N. W. 8).

18. (1900.) The provisions of section 2, article X of the constitution, do not preclude the legislature from passing a law requiring that the question of county division shall receive a majority of all votes cast at the election at which the same was submitted to the electors, to effect the erection of a new county out of one then existing. State, ex rel. Saunders, v. Clark, 59 Neb. 702 (82 N. W. 8).

19. (1900.) Section 2, article X of the constitution, prohibits the division of a county where the proposition has not received a majority of the legal votes cast thereon. State, ex rel. Saunders, v. Clark, 59 Neb. 702 (82 N. W. 8).

20. (1900.) Section 11, article I, chapter 18, Compiled Statutes, is not inimical to section 2, article X of the state constitution. State, ex rel. Saunders, v. Clark, 59 Neb. 702 (82 N. W. 8).

21. (1900.) In determining the question of whether the county division has been adopted, the total vote cast in the county, at the election at which the same was submitted, will be presumed to be the highest vote cast for any office or on any proposition. But this presumption, if not conclusive, may be overcome by proper evidence. State, ex rel. Saunders, v. Clark, 59 Neb. 702 (82 N. W. 8).

——— Adjustment of rights and liabilities.

22. (1886.) Brown county was created in March, 1883, being attached to Holt county under the general statute for election, judicial, and revenue purposes. In June, 1883, the county commissioners of Holt county levied state, county, and school taxes upon the property in Brown county. In July, 1883, an election was had for county officers, and officers elected, who qualified and entered upon the duties of their office. In April, 1884, the Fremont, Elkhorn & Missouri Valley Railway Company paid to the treasurer of Holt county the taxes levied by the county commissioners of that county on the railroad in Brown county. Held, That the taxes should have been paid to the treasurer of Brown county. Fremont, E. & M. V. R. Co. v. Brown County, 18 Neb. 516 (26 N. W. 194).

23. (1886.) It is the duty of the clerk of a county to take or procure a transcript of all deeds, mortgages, judgments, and liens of every description upon real or personal property lying and being in the newly organized county. Morse v. Hitchcock County, 19 Neb. 566 (27 N. W. 637).

24. (1886.) A mere taxpayer cannot, in the first instance at least, institute proceedings against the county clerk of the county to which the new county was attached to compel him to furnish a transcript of deeds, mortgages, judgments, etc. Morse v. Hitchcock County, 19 Neb. 566 (27 N. W. 637).

25. (1889.) On an application for mandamus to compel the treasurer of a county to collect taxes due from the taxpayers of another county which had been organized out of a portion of the former, the question as to which county is entitled to the taxes cannot be determined, where the latter county is not a party. State, ex rel. Malloy, v. Clevenger, 27 Neb. 422 (43 N. W. 243; 20 Am. St. Rep. 674).

26. (1889.) Where a county is formed by dividing one already organized, jurisdiction of the county treasurer of the old county over the new ceases, and it is not his duty to collect from the latter unpaid taxes levied prior to the division. State, ex rel. Malloy, v. Clevenger, 27 Neb. 422 (43 N. W. 243; 20 Am. St. Rep. 674).

27. (1897.) In an action for the recoveary of a proper proportion of the value of real property retained and used by a county from the territory of which the territory of another county has been segregated, it is no defense to show that said real property was originally conveyed by a deed with conditions, when thereafter the said property was dedicated as county property by a plat duly recorded by the grantor and as such was accepted by the county and at great expense improved by the erection thereon of county buildings. Brown County v. Rock County, 51 Neb. 277 (70 N. W. 943).

28. (1899.) Where a new county is formed out of the territory of a county previously organized, the county boards of the two counties are authorized by section 16, article I, chapter 18, Compiled Statutes 1897, to meet and agree upon a division of the corporate property and of the corporate liabilities. Perkins County v. Keith County, 58 Neb. 323 (78 N. W. 630).

29. (1899.) Where a county has been divided and a new one formed, and the balance due one from the other has been definitely settled, the claim may be made the subject of an original suit in the district court without having been presented to the county board for examination and allowance. Perkins County v. Keith County, 58 Neb. 323 (78 N. W. 630).

Annexation of territory.

30. (1902.) An unconstitutional act attaching territory to a county, accepted and acquiesced in, will suffice to render the acts of the register of deeds of such county, as to such territory, done before the law was declared unconstitutional, acts of a de facto officer. State Bank of Pender v. Frey, 3 Unof. 83 (91 N. W. 239).

Precincts and subdivisions.

31. (1880.) Precincts are mere territorial divisions or districts created for certain political and administrative purposes, and without the semblance of corporate character. They can neither plead nor be impleaded in actions, nor are they capable of imposing upon themselves any obligation or liability, except in pursuance of express legislative authority. State, ex rel. Chandler, v. Dodge County, 10 Neb. 20 (4 N. W. 370).

32. (1897.) Under section 8, article II, chapter 14, Compiled Statutes, 1885, providing that "each city governed by this act shall be divided into not less than four nor more than six wards," and section 9, providing "precinct lines in that part of any county not under township organization, embraced within the corporate limits of a city of the second class, shall correspond with the ward lines in such city, and such precincts shall correspond in number with the wards of the city, and be co-extensive with the same," the county commissioners of Otoe county, in which is situated Nebraska City, a city of the class referred to, divided into four wards, have no power to establish a precinct designated as Nebraska City precinct, and included therein the whole territory of Nebraska City and a number of sections of land. Morton v. Carlin, 51 Neb. 202 (70 N. W. 966).

33. (1901.) The board of county commissioners in counties having over 125,000 population is empowered by section 54, article I, chapter 18, Compiled Statutes, 1901, to alter the boundary lines of the different commissioner districts of such county, for the purpose of adjusting such districts to changing population, not oftener than once in three years. State, ex rel. Connolly, v. Haverly, 62 Neb. 767 (87 N. W. 959).

34. (1903.) For purposes of taxation and revenue, a precinct actually formed and organized will be deemed a de facto organization, whether the meeting of the county commissioners at which it was made was lawfully adjourned and held or not. City of South Omaha v. O'Rourke, 70 Neb. 479 (97 N. W. 608).

Classification.

35. (1902.) The United States census reports, showing the population of a county, are not conclusive evidence that the population is in fact as given in such report. State, ex rel. Blessing, v. Davis, 66 Neb. 333 (92 N. W. 740).

36. (1902.) Evidence aliunde the census reports may be resorted to for fixing the population of a county. State, ex rel. Blessing, v. Davis, 66 Neb. 333 (92 N. W. 740).

37. (1902.) Finding of referee that Valley county had less than 8,000 inhabitants in 1899, held supported by the evidence. State, ex rel. Blessing, v. Davis, 66 Neb. 333 (92 N. W. 740).

II. GOVERNMENT AND OFFICERS.

A. Organization and Powers of Government in General.

Governmental powers in general.

38. (1885.) Counties and bounty boards can only exercise such powers as are expressly granted by statute, and such grant of power must be strictly construed. State, ex rel. Grady, v. Lincoln County, 18 Neb. 283 (25 N. W. 91); (1897) Morton v. Carlin, 51 Neb. 202 (70 N. W. 966).

Public improvements.

Construction and maintenance of public bridges, see Bridges.

Construction of county roads, see Highways.

39. (1897.) The act of Douglas county in making an improvement extending across a highway, one-half of which was in the city of Omaha, held not ultra vires, though it was the duty of the city to improve the part of the street within its jurisdiction. Douglas County v. Taylor, 50 Neb. 535 (70 N. W. 27).

40. (1901.) Section 6, article IX of the constitution, does not prohibit the legislature from conferring the power to make local improvements by special assessments upon counties. Dodge County v. Acom, 61 Neb. 376 (82 N. W. 292).

41. (1901.) The findings of the county board as to the necessity of a proposed drainage ditch cannot be made the subject of controversy as to whether they are correct and well founded. Dodge County v. Acom, 61 Neb. 376 (82 N. W. 292).

B. County Seat.

Validity of note given to secure location of county seat, see Bills and Notes, § 65.

Location.

42. (1884.) In a proceeding in the district court to contest an election held for the purpose of locating a county seat, it is competent for the contestee or any other party to the action to plead by way of answer any facts which would show a want of jurisdiction on the part of the county commissioners to call said election. Laws v. Vincent, 16 Neb. 208 (20 N. W. 213).

43. (1884.) In 1871 an election was held in H. county under the provisions of an act of the legislature, for the location of a county seat and the election of county officers. A majority of the votes cast were in favor of "A." as the county seat. The returns of the election were duly certified to and filed by the secretary of state, but the county officers elected failed to qualify. In 1872 the acting governor of the state issued his proclamation calling an election for the election of county officers and the location of a county seat. At this election county officers were elected who subsequently qualified. There being no choice as to the location of the county seat, two other successive elections were held, resulting in an apparent majority for M., but the final vote was not canvassed by the county clerk, and the result of said election was not officially declared. The county offices were not held, nor were the records kept, at any one place until the year 1875. From that time to the present the county offices and records have all been kept. and the district courts have all been held, at "A." In 1881 the board of county commissioners, without the presentation of a petition therefor, called an election for the location of a county seat. Held, They had no authority or jurisdiction to call said election. Laws v. Vincent, 16 Neb. 208 (20 N. W. 213).

44. (1885.) At an election held in Harlan county on the 3d day of July 1871, the place which received the majority of all the votes cast thereby became the county seat of that county; and the court will not in collateral proceeding, fourteen years afterwards, inquire into irregularities at such election where no direct proceedings have been had to set it aside. State, ex rel. Harvey, v. Piper, 17 Neb. 614 (24 N. W. 204).

Election for removal.

45. (1876.) A party who charges that an election for the relocation of the county seat of M. county was carried in favor of M. by fraudulent means, must state the facts on which he bases his charge; and an affidavit for a continuance of an application for a peremptory writ of mandamus to compel the removal of the county records and offices to M., the place declared by the county commissioners to be the county seat, is not sufficient where it merely states that the affiant is informed and believes that a greater number of fraudulent votes were cast in one of the precincts of said county in favor of M. than the entire majority in favor of that place, and that certain votes were cast in favor of B. that were not counted. State, ex rel. Barnes, v. Thatch, 5 Neb. 94.

46. (1876.) Where the intention of the voter, in an election to relocate a county seat, is clearly ascertainable from the ballot, with the aid of extrinsic facts of a public nature connected with the election, the law will require his vote to be counted. State, ex rel. Birmingham, v. Dinsmore, 5 Neb. 145.

47. (1876.) In an election for the relocation of a county seat, where three points only can be voted for, designated as "Fairfield, Sutton, or Harvard," and ballots voted for the first are entitled "Fairfield ticket," describing accurately a subdivision of land within the limits of the town site of Fairfield, such ballots must be counted for Fairfield. State, ex rel. Birmingham, v. Dinsmore, 5 Neb. 145.

48. (1888.) Where the returns of an election for the relocation of a county seat show new and illegal votes to have been put into the ballot box, mandamus will not issue to compel the canvassing board to canvass the votes as returned. State, ex rel. Hanna, v. Kavanaugh, 24 Neb. 506 (39 N. W. 431).

49. (1892.) Where, at an election called for the purpose of relocating a county seat, the place at which the county seat is then located receives three-fifths of all the votes cast, there is a relocation within the meaning of the statute, and there is no authority for the calling of another election to relocate the county seat in such county within five years next following such relocation. Solomon v. Fleming, 34 Neb. 40 (51 N. W. 304).

50. (1892.) No form of bribery to secure votes will be sanctioned by the courts. This rule is equally as important in county seat elections as in other cases. The design of the law is to secure the free and voluntary expression of each voter of his choice for the county seat. Ayers v. Moan, 34 Neb. 210 (51 N. W. 830).

51. (1896.) A county seat can only be relocated by a three-fifths vote of all the electors of the county at an election held for that purpose. State, ex rel. Hocknell, v. Roper, 46 Neb. 724 (61 N. W. 753). [Overruled. State v. Roper, 47 Neb. 417.]

52. (1896.) Within the meaning of section 1, article III, chapter 17, Compiled Statutes, a county seat shall not be relocated in any place unless three-fifths of all the electors of the county shall express their will to that effect by their votes at an election held for that purpose; and that the law presumes when such an election is held all the electors of the county vote at such election. State, ex rel. Hocknell, v. Roper, 46 Neb. 724 (61 N. W. 753).

53. (1896.) Where there were cast upon the question of relocation of the county seat of Red Willow county 867 votes for Indianola, and for McCook 1,339 votes, and the return of county canvassers showed ballots to have been rejected or not to have been voted or accounted for, held, that McCook, having received more than three-fifths of the numbers above given, became the county seat of said county. State, ex rel. Hocknell, v. Roper, 47 Neb. 417 (66 N. W. 539).

54. (1896.) Under the provisions of the act for the relocation of county seats, there being no requirement that abortive ballots shall be certified to the county canvassing board, such ballots cannot be counted for the purpose of making up the grand total, of which a place other than the existing county seat must receive three-fifths to be entitled to the relocation of the county seat, merely because in the certified return of the county election board such ballots were referred to as "ballots not reported or accounted for," or as "rejected" or "blank ballots." State, ex rel. Hocknell, v. Roper, 47 Neb. 417 (66 N. W. 539).

——— Petition for submission of question.

55. (1878.) The proper place to raise questions concerning the sufficiency of a petition for the relocation of a county seat is before the commissioners themselves; and if no objection be made there, the party complaining not being prevented from so doing, equity will not interfere to prevent a removal, conformably with the result of the election, because of defects in the petition. Ellis v. Karl, 7 Neb. 381.

56. (1878.) The act of 1875, for the relocation of county seats, gives the board of county commissioners exclusive authority to receive petitions for that purpose, and also, incidentally, to determine whether the signatures to such petitions are genuine, and of persons authorized to sign them. And when, in the exercise of this jurisdiction, the commissioners receive a petition for the relocation of a county seat, and judge it to be in all respects sufficient, and call an election accordingly, no objection being interposed either to the petition or to the action of the commissioners until after the election has been held and the result declared, it is too late to question the sufficiency of the petition; and an injunction to restrain the removal of the county officers to the new county seat, on the ground that such petition did not conform to the requirements of the law, will not be granted. Ellis v. Karl, 7 Neb. 381.

57. (1880.) Signers of a petition for an election to relocate a county seat are in the attitude of plaintiffs, and may withdraw their names at any time before the petition is acted upon. State, ex rel. Morgan, v. Nemaha County, 10 Neb. 32 (4 N. W. 373).

58. (1880.) To authorize the board of county commissioners in calling an election for the purpose of relocating a county seat, the petition must contain the requisite number of names at the time it is acted upon by them. State, ex rel. Morgan, v. Nemaha County, 10 Neb. 32 (4 N. W. 373).

59. (1887.) A finding of a board of county commissioners, that a petition for a special election for the relocation of a county seat, was not signed by the requisite number of lawful petitioners, for the reason that a portion of the signers were minors and non-residents, is not subject to collateral attack, but if erroneous must be reviewed on error. State, ex rel, Hymer, v. Nelson, 21 Neb. 572 (32 N. W. 589).

60. (1892.) Under the provisions of section 1, article III of chapter 17, Compiled Statutes, a petition for the removal of a county seat must be signed by "resident electors" of the county equal in number to three-fifths of all the votes cast in the county at the last general election. The words "resident electors" are used to distinguish actual residents of the county from such persons as are temporarily therein. Ayers v. Moan, 34 Neb. 210 (51 N. W. 830).

61. (1892.) In addition to the name of each petitioner the petition for removal of a county seat must show the section, township, and range on which, or the town or city in which, he resides, together with his age and time of residence in the county. The omission of any of these particulars will be sufficient to cause his rejection as a petitioner. Ayers v. Moan, 34 Neb. 210 (51 N. W. 830).

62. (1892.) In examining the names of the petitoners for removal of a county seat, it is the duty of the board to carefully scrutinize the entire list and reject all that are fictitious, false, or repetitions, and to permit proof tending to show that some or all of those who have signed the petition or remonstrance were not in fact resident electors of the county. Ayers v. Moan, 34 Neb. 210 (51 N. W. 830).

63. (1892.) The petition for removal of a county seat, when presented, must contain the names of all persons who desire to sign the same as petitioners. A supplemental petition is unauthorized. Ayers v. Moan, 34 Neb. 210 (51 N. W. 830).

64. (1893.) Where objections are made to a petition for an election for the relocation of a county seat, by any resident elector on oath charging that a certain number of the petitioners are minors, certain other number are not electors, certain names are fictitious, a certain number have been bribed, the aggregate of which will reduce the number of petitioners below three-fifths of the votes cast at the preceding general election, it is the duty of the board to set a reasonable time for a hearing of said objections to enable parties to offer proof in support of their charges. Crews v. Coffman, 36 Neb. 824 (55 N. W. 265).

65. (1893.) The petition for an election for the relocation of a county seat must show the section, township, and range on which, or the town or city in which the petitioner resides, together with his age and time of residence in the county. Crews v. Coffman, 36 Neb. 824 (55 N. W. 265).

66. (1893.) To entitle a county board to call an election for the removal of a county seat a petition must be presented to it by resident electors of the county equal in number to three-fifths of all the votes cast in the county at the last general election. Crews v. Coffman, 36 Neb. 824 (55 N. W. 265).

67. (1893.) Persons interested in the removal of a county seat are entitled to examine the original petition in the office of the county clerk before the election is called and should have a reasonable time for that purpose. It is not sufficient to furnish a certified copy as such parties have the right to see the purported signatures of the petitioners. Crews v. Coffman, 36 Neb. 824 (55 N. W. 265).

68. (1901.) Action of county board, in reckoning, among the petitioners for a call of a special election upon the question of relocation of county seat, certain signers who had subsequently signed a remonstrance and then, before action by the county board, signed a withdrawal of such remonstrance and a request that their names be counted among the petitioners, held, no error. Hoffman v. Nelson, 1 Unof. 215 (95 N. W. 347).

——— Notice.

69. (1874.) It is an imperative requirement, in an election for the removal of a county seat, that the notice thereof should in all respects conform to the law authorizing such election. State, ex rel. Darnell, v. Hamilton County, 3 Neb. 244.

70. (1874.) Where the law provides that in the notice of an election for the removal of a county seat, the electors shall be directed "to designate on their ballots the place of their choice for the county seat," and the notice merely authorizes the electors to vote "for removal of a county seat; against removal of county seat," such notice is insufficient, the vote taken at the election is void. State, ex rel. Darnell, v. Hamilton County, 3 Neb. 244.

71. (1878.) In ordering an election on the question of the relocation of a county seat, thirty days' notice is required. But even if the notice be for a less time than this, a court of equity will not, for this reason alone, declare the election void at the suit of a party who participated therein, especially where it is not shown that a different result would probably have been obtained if the full statutory notice had been given. Ellis v. Karl, 7 Neb. 381.

——— Mandamus to compel holding of election.

72. (1899.) An action of mandamus may be maintained to require a board of county commissioners to order a special election for the purpose of voting upon the removal of a county seat, if a proper petition for such election has been presented and the refusal of the prayer of the petition is the exercise of an arbitrary or capricious authority. Barry v. State, ex rel. Hampton, 57 Neb. 464 (77 N. W. 1096).

Mandamus to compel removal.

73. (1876.) If it appears that the number of fraudulent votes cast at an election to remove a county seat were sufficient to give the successful place a majority, it is sufficient grounds for mandamus to compel a relocation and renewal of county records. State, ex rel. Barnes, v. Thatch, 5 Neb. 94. [Overruled. State v. Roper, 46 Neb. 730.]

74. (1883.) Where mandamus is sought to compel the county officers to remove and keep their offices to a town having received 293 of a total of 400 votes cast on the question of removal of the county seat, mere allegations of fraud and illegal voting without any statement of facts will not sustain a defense thereto. Hunter v. State, ex rel. Patterson, 14 Neb. 506 (16 N. W. 830).

75. (1883.) Where, in the defense to a mandamus to require certain county officers to remove and hold their respective offices at a town receiving more than three-fifths of all the votes cast at an election for the removal of the county seat, there was no claim or allegation of the bribery of voters, held, that that matter must be pleaded to be available. Hunter v. State, ex rel. Patterson, 14 Neb. 506 (16 N. W. 830).

76. (1896.) A petition in mandamus to compel the removal of a county seat which fails to show that the new location received three-fifths of all the electors of the county, does not state a cause of action. State, ex rel. Hocknell, v. Roper, 46 Neb. 724 (61 N. W. 753). [Overruled. State v. Roper, 47 Neb. 417.]

77. (1896.) On an application for a mandamus to compel the removal of a county seat in pursuance of the declared result of a canvass of the vote on the question of relocation, the court cannot go behind the returns and investigate issues of fraud and illegality in the manner of conducting the election. State, ex rel. Hocknell, v. Roper, 46 Neb. 730 (65 N. W. 802).

78. (1896.) On application for mandamus to compel the removal of a county seat pursuant to the declared result of an election, an answer tendering only issues as to fraud in the election presents no defense. State, ex rel. Hocknell, v. Roper, 46 Neb. 730 (65 N. W. 802).

Enjoining removal.

79. (1883.) There was an election on the question of relocation of a county seat, which resulted in favor of the proposition. An action was then brought to enjoin county officers from removing their offices, etc., to the place selected, on grounds which would have been available, if at all, in a contest of the election, under the statute. Held, That the action would not lie. Scott v. McGuire, 15 Neb. 303 (18 N. W. 93).

C. County Board.

Powers of commission in location of public road, see Highways.

Review of decision of county board by supreme court, see Appeal and Error, § 53.

Nature in general.

80. (1896.) While boards of county commissioners exercise functions judicial in their nature in the allowance and rejection of claims against the county, such boards are not courts in a constitutional sense, or within the general recognized acceptation of that term. Sternberg v. State, ex rel. Keller, 48 Neb. 299 (67 N. W. 190).

81. (1901.) County boards are not courts in a constitutional sense. Sheibley v. Dixon County, 61 Neb. 409 (85 N. W. 399).

Statutory provisions.

82. (1895.) Chapter 28, Session Laws 1895, which provides for seven supervisors in all counties under township organization, is valid. Van Horn v. State, ex rel. Abbott, 46 Neb. 62 (64 N. W. 365).

Election and appointment.

83. (1886.) Where a vacancy occurs in the office of county commissioner more than thirty days before a general election, it is to be filled thereat; and the failure of the county clerk to call attention to such vacancy in the election notices posted by him, where the fact is generally known and acted on by the voters of the county, will not invalidate the votes cast to fill said vacancy. State, ex rel. Malloy, v. Skirving, 19 Neb. 497 (27 N. W. 723).

84. (1892.) The act approved April 9, 1891, provides that in counties containing less than 125,000 inhabitants the board of county commissioners shall consist of three persons, but also providing that in counties containing less than 125,000 inhabitants which had five commissioners when the act took effect the incumbents "shall continue to hold and occupy said offices until the expiration of the terms for which elected." There is also a provision for redistricting counties where the number was changed from five to three. Section 7, chapter 26, Compiled Statutes, also provides that in counties not under township organization, "one county commissioner shall be elected annually, who shall serve three years," etc. Held, That a county commissioner who was elected in November, 1891, to fill the vacancy caused by the expiration of the term of the commissioner of the third district, was properly elected, and that the fourth and fifth commissioners would hold until the expiration of their respective terms. State, ex rel. Snell, v. Wescott, 34 Neb. 84 (51 N. W. 599).

85. (1896.) A court of equity will not, at the suit of a private individual, enjoin the county clerk, treasurer, and county judge from appointing county commissioners under section 68, article IV, chapter 18, Compiled Statutes, the remedy being complete at law, by quo warranto against the appointees. Fort v. Thompson, 49 Neb. 772 (69 N. W. 110).

86. (1901.) Where a vacancy occurs in a board of supervisors in a county under township organization the remaining members of the board constitute a proper authority to fill such vacancy. State, ex rel. Hunker, v. West, 62 Neb. 461 (87 N. W. 176).

87. (1901.) Under chapter 18, article IV, Compiled Statutes 1901, where a county is divided into supervisor districts in which cities are located, entitled to two supervisors, they are to be elected at large by the electors of such city and contiguous territory, if any, and not by formation of two supervisor districts. State, ex rel. Brown, v. Welsh, 62 Neb. 721 (87 N. W. 529).

88. (1901.) In mandamus proceedings to compel a county officer to call an election in one commissioner district, a determination that a vacancy existed in such district, because the commissioner elected therefrom had, by a change in boundary lines, become a resident of another district, is not an adjudication that such commissioner would succeed the regular incumbent from such other district upon the expiration of the latter's term of office, nor that no vacancy would exist in such other district by reason of the expiration of the incumbent's regular term, to be filled at the succeeding general election. State, ex rel. Connolly, v. Haverly, 62 Neb. 767 (87 N. W. 959).

89. (1901.) By an alteration of boundary lines of commissioner districts of a county an officer becoming a resident of another commissioner district does not thereby succeed to and hold the office of commissioner from such other district after the expiration of the incumbent's regular term of office. State, ex rel. Connolly, v. Haverly, 62 Neb. 767 (87 N. W. 959).

Eligibility and qualifications.

90. (1886.) A county commissioner must continue to reside in the district in and from which he was elected, and his removal from the district, although he remains in the county, vacates the office. State, ex rel. Malloy, v. Skirving, 19 Neb. 497 (27 N. W. 723).

91. (1901.) Alterations of boundary lines of commissioner districts, when made, are prospective in character, and do not have the effect of depriving a county commissioner then holding office from exercising the duties thereof for the full term for which such officer was elected, even though by the change of boundary lines such officer's residence is without the boundary lines of the district from which he was elected. State, ex rel. Connolly, v. Haverly, 62 Neb. 767 (87 N. W. 959).

Term of office, vacancies and holding over.

92. (1879.) The effect of the repeal and re-enactment of a statute is to continue the uninterrupted operation of the statute. The act approved March 1, 1879, did not therefore vacate the office of county commissioner. State, ex rel. Baldwin, v. McColl, 9 Neb. 203 (2 N. W. 213).

93. (1879.) Section 55 of the act concerning counties, approved March 1, 1879, is a re-enactment of section 9 of the act concerning counties and county officers, approved February 27, 1873 (Gen. Stat. 233), and is a continuation of that act. State, ex rel. Baldwin, v. McColl, 9 Neb. 203 (2 N. W. 213).

94. (1889.) Where a new county is created by the division of a larger one, the county commissioners elected at an election of officers, merely continue in office until the next general election for such officrs, and until their successors are elected and qualified. State, ex rel. Nichols, v. Field, 26 Neb. 393 (41 N. W. 988); (1891) Wheeler v. State, ex rel. Lonarosh, 32 Neb. 472 (49 N. W. 442).

Removal.

95. (1877.) Two members of the board of county commissioners have no authority under the provisions of chapter 13, General Statutes, to try a third member for an alleged misdemeanor. Hutchinson v. Ashburn, 5 Neb. 402.

96. (1877.) The words "all county officers" in the first section of the act (Gen. Stat., 250) are not from the nature of the case intended to include county commissioners. Hutchinson v. Ashburn, 5 Neb. 402.

Compensation.

97. (1904.) There is no warrant of law for the allowance of extra salary to the chairman of a board of county commissioners. Otoe County v. Stroble, 71 Neb. 415 (98 N. W. 1065).

Powers and functions in general.

98. (1875.) A board of county commissioners is a quasi corporation. A grant of powers to it must be strictly construed. People, ex rel. Putman, v. Commissioners of Buffalo County, 4 Neb. 150.

99. (1877.) The authority of the county commissioners to license the sale of intoxicating liquors is confined to those portions of the county lying outside the limits of incorporated towns and cities. Phillips v. City of Tecumseh, 5 Neb. 312.

100. (1877.) County commissioners possess no powers except such as are expressly granted, or are incidentally necessary to carry such powers into effect. Hamlin v. Meadville, 6 Neb. 227.

101. (1878.) The board of county commissioners is a tribunal possessed of but very limited jurisdiction, which is clearly defined by the statutes. If they presume to act without an observance of these plain statutory requirements, their acts would be void. Doody v. Vaughn, 7 Neb. 28.

102. (1895.) There is no principle more firmly established or resting on sounder reasons than the rule which requires public bodies when acting under special powers to act strictly within the conditions prescribed. Douglas County v. Keller, 43 Neb. 635 (62 N. W. 60).

103. (1898.) A board of county commissioners, in addition to the powers specially conferred by statute, has such other powers as are incidentally necessary to enable such board to carry into effect the powers granted. Lancaster County v. Green, 54 Neb. 98 (74 N. W. 430).

104. (1898.) The word "necessary" considered and, in respect to the implied powers of boards of county commissioners, held to mean no more than the exercise of such powers as are reasonably required by the exigencies of each case as it arises. Lancaster County v. Green, 54 Neb. 98 (74 N. W. 430).

Mode of action in general.

105. (1877.) The board of county commissioners consists of three persons, and the entire board must sit to hear the case, although a majority may pronounce a valid judgment. Hutchinson v. Ashburn, 5 Neb. 402.

106. (1895.) County commissioners cannot legally transact county business except at a regular session of the county board, or one specially called by the county clerk of which notice is given in the mode provided by law. Morris v. Merrell, 44 Neb. 423 (62 N. W. 865).

Meetings.

107. (1876.) When the county commissioners are assembled in meeting they are not confined strictly to the business specified in the notice thereof, but may make orders respecting property of the county. Commissioners of Kearney County v. Kent, 5 Neb. 227.

108. (1876.) In calling special meetings of the board of county commissioners, the county clerk is required to state in the notice the "object of calling the commissioners together." Commissioners of Kearney County v. Kent, 5 Neb. 227.

109. (1880.) County commissioners are required by law to hold their sessions at the county seat, and they have no authority to enter into contracts in relation to county business at any other place Merrick County v. Batty, 10 Neb. 176 (4 N. W. 959).

110. (1901.) Where the minutes show a session of the county board for the transaction of business of the county, the session will be presumed to have been legally convened, and the burden is on the party assailing its legality to prove that it was neither a called nor a regular session. Green v. Lancaster County, 61 Neb. 473 (85 N. W. 439).

Minutes and records.

111. (1888.) The only limitations upon the power and duty of the county board of any county to cause to be published at the close of each annual, regular, or special meeting of such board, a brief statement of the proceedings thereof, in one newspaper of general circulation, published in the county, or to in like manner publish their proceedings upon the equalization of the assessment roll, is, that such publication shall not be required unless the same can be done at an expense not exceeding one-third of the legal rates for advertising notices. State, ex rel. Huse, v. Dixon County, 24 Neb. 106 (37 N. W. 936).

Orders.

112. (1893.) Where the county board has before it a matter which it may reject or allow, and its action thereon will be final unless appealed from, its order in the premises cannot be attacked collaterally, except for fraud. Ragoss v. Cuming County, 36 Neb. 375 (54 N. W. 683).

113. (1901.) The rule that there must be a finding of fact set out to support the judgment of the court has no application to the orders made by the county board. Lexington Mill & Elevator Co. v. Dawson County, 1 Unof. 872 (96 N. W. 62).

Reconsideration and rescission of action.

114. (1878.) The board of county commissioners has no power to review, vacate, or set aside its former adjudications. Kemerer v. State, 7 Neb. 130. [Changed by statute. State v. Baushausen, 49 Neb. 558.]

Appeals from decision.

115. (1894.) Appeals from the decision of a county board should be entered, tried, and determined in the district court the same as appeals from justices of the peace. Haskell v. Valley County, 41 Neb. 234 (59 N. W. 680).

116. (1894.) Where an appeal from the county board has been tried in the district court without pleadings the supreme court will not examine the evidence on error to ascertain what issues were litigated. Haskell v. Valley County, 41 Neb. 234 (59 N. W. 680).

117. (1894.) A district court should never proceed with the trial of an appeal from a county board, until the parties to such appeal have made up the issues therein, by filing the proper pleadings in the case. Haskell v. Valley County, 41 Neb. 234 (59 N. W. 680).

118. (1901.) Where a county board has acquired jurisdiction to act, the presumption is in favor of the correctness and regularity of the proceedings taken, and its action should only be overturned where it is made to affirmatively appear that the action taken is erroneous. Dodge County v. Acom, 61 Neb. 376 (85 N. W. 292).

119. (1902.) A bill of exceptions of the evidence offered in a proceeding before the board of county commissioners must be signed, settled, and allowed by the chairman of such board. Union Stock Yards Nat. Bank v. Thurston County, 65 Neb. 408 (91 N. W. 286).

119*a*. (1907.) Generally, where the determination of a matter has been committed to a particular administrative or legislative board or officer, and no appeal is provided for from such decision, its order or determination is final, and will not be subject to collateral attack. Campbell v. Youngson, 80 Neb. 322 (114 N. W. 415).

Liabilities of members.

120. (1902.) The duty imposed upon county commissioners under section 11, subdivision 2, chapter 79, Compiled Statutes, of levying the tax voted by a school district meeting and certified by the district board is one owing to the public only, and county commissioners who in good faith but by mistake levy a less tax than that voted are not personally liable to the school district. School District v. Burress, 2 Unof. 554 (89 N. W. 609).

121. (1904.) The fact that the county commissioners have made a settlement with the treasurer, by which he is allowed to retain fees in excess of the statutory limit, does not, of itself, render the county commissioners liable for the excess of fees retained by the treasurer with their consent. A fraudulent participation on their part, with corrupt knowledge, of a wrong to the county, or else a change of situation owing to their negligence in failing to bring an action against him, which would prevent a recovery from the treasurer, would be necessary. Otoe County v. Dorman, 71 Neb. 408 (98 N. W. 1064).

122. (1904.) Where, by the action of the board of county commissioners, a warrant is drawn upon the county treasury without any legal authority so to do, each member of the board voting for such illegal claim is jointly and severally liable to the county for the amount of money so disbursed. Otoe County v. Stroble, 71 Neb. 415 (98 N. W. 1065).

Election or appointment.

123. (1880.) Where a county clerk issued notice of an election of a clerk of the district court, as one of the officers to be elected, the person receiving the majority of the votes cast is not entitled to possession of the office, by means of quo warranto, where it appears that at the last census the the county had a population of only fifty-five hundred, but that the population has been constantly increasing since, without showing that the present population is over eight thousand. State, ex rel. Welna, v. Steuffer, 10 Neb. 506 (6 N. W. 604).

124. (1884.) Section 7, chapter 26, Compiled Statutes, providing that in counties under township organization certain county officers shall be elected "at the first general election held after the adoption of township organization," means the first general election at which county officers are to be chosen. State, ex rel. Crossley, v. Hedlund, 16 Neb. 566 (20 N. W. 876).

125. (1893.) A county having less than 18,003 inhabitants at the national census of 1890 was not entitled to elect a register of deeds, even though the state census of 1885 shows it possessed more than the above number of inhabitants. State, ex rel. Miller, v. Lewis, 38 Neb. 191 (56 N. W. 885).

126. (1893.) Each county in this state having a population of 18,003 or more, as shown by the last national census, was entitled to elect a register of deeds at the last general election. State, ex rel. Miller, v. Lewis, 38 Neb. 191 (56 N. W. 885).

127. (1905.) The legislature cannot appoint county officers, nor by an act solely for that purpose extend the terms of such officers. State, ex rel. Hensley, v. Plasters, 74 Neb. 653 (105 N. W. 1092).

128. (1907.) In a contest of an election to the office of county treasurer under sections 80 and 81, Compiled Statutes 1907, it is necessary to allege and prove that the contestant is an elector of the county in and for which the contestee is declared elected. Dodson v. Bowlby, 78 Neb. 190 (110 N. W. 698).

——— Deputies.

129. (1893.) Under the provisions of section 42, chapter 28, Compiled Statutes 1893, where the fees of the county clerk exceed $1,500, the county board may appoint such number of deputies as may be necessary and fix their salary at not to exceed $700, the same to be paid out of the fees received by the clerk. Ragoss v. Cuming County, 36 Neb. 375 (54 N. W. 683).

Eligibility and qualifications.

130. (1882.) Section 10 of the election law of 1879, which provides that county treasurers shall be ineligible for more than two consecutive terms, has no retroactive effect. State, ex rel. Glenn, v. Stein, 13 Neb. 529 (14 N. W. 481).

131. (1888.) The relator was elected to the office of county treasurer at the annual election held November 3, 1885. At that date he had been a resident of the state for five months only, but was otherwise eligible. At the commencement of the term his residence in the state had been continuous for seven months. Held, That being ineligible to such election at the date thereof, under a fair construction of section 1, article VII of the constitution, and section 64, chapter 26, Compiled Statutes, such ineligibility was not removed, for the purposes of that election, by reason of six months' continuous residence previous to the commencement of the term. State v. McMillen, 23 Neb. 385 (36 N. W. 587).

132. (1893.) The judgment in State, ex rel. Richards, v. McMillen, 23 Neb. 385, is conclusive of the question of the eligibility of the relator therein to the office of treasurer of Dawes county by election at the general election in 1885, but not of his eligibility to said office by appointment in the month of January, 1886. Richards v. McMillin, 36 Neb. 352 (54 N. W. 566).

133. (1907.) Section 10 of the general election law of 1879 (laws 1879, p. 240), providing that "A county treasurer shall be ineligible to office for more than two consecutive terms," is not unconstitutional, since the subject of the section is germane to the act and is sufficiently expressed in the title, "An act to provide a general election law," the procedure relative to contested elections, and the filling of vacancies in office. Dobson v. Bowlby, 78 Neb. 190 (110 N. W. 698).

134. (1907.) By section 10 of the general election law (laws 1879, p. 240), a county treasurer is disqualified to be elected to office for more than two consecutive terms. An appointment to complete the term of another is not an election to office for a term, and such appointment and holding for ten months thereunder does not disqualify one to be elected to the office for the two consecutive terms immediately following the term during which he was so appointed. Dobson v. Bowlby, 78 Neb. 190 (110 N. W. 698).

——— Bond.

135. (1895.) Under the statute which provides that the official bonds of all county officers, except county commissioners and supervisors, shall be approved by the county board, the approval to be indorsed on the bond, and that no bond shall be filed and recorded until so approved, where the bond of a county treasurer is not accepted and approved by the county board, but is rejected, such person is not a de jure officer. McMillin v. Richards, 45 Neb. 787 (64 N. W. 242).

136. (1897.) By section 21, chapter 10, Compiled Statutes, a county board is empowered, according to circumstances, to require the treasurer either to give an additional bond, or to give additional sureties on the subsisting bond. Holt County v. Scott, 53 Neb. 176 (73 N. W. 681).

137. (1899.) Bonds of county officers must be joint and several in form. Clark v. Douglas, 58 Neb. 571 (79 N. W. 158).

www.nbook.com.cn

138. (1899.) The provisions of section 17, chapter 10, Compiled Statutes, that a re-elected officer shall furnish a bond, are mandatory, and are applicable to any person elected to the office of county treasurer as his own successor who has failed to account for or produce to the proper accounting officers all the public funds or property of which he had control. Woodward v. State, ex rel. Thomssen, 58 Neb. 598 (79 N. W. 164).

139. (1900.) A county officer elect may properly rely upon the presumption that a board of county commissioners will do its duty and convene in timely session to act upon official bonds presented to it for approval, within the time limited by statute. Duffy v. State, ex rel. Edson, 60 Neb. 812 (84 N. W. 264).

140. (1905.) The act of April 1, 1901, entitled "An act to amend section 19 of chapter 10, Compiled Statutes 1899, and to repeal said section as now existing (laws 1901, ch. 11), and providing that premiums to sureties of official bonds of county officers, should be paid by the county, is void, because the matter sought to be added by amendment is not germane to the subject of the section as enacted. Knight v. Lancaster County, 74 Neb. 82 (103 N. W. 1064).

141. (1907.) The bond of a county treasurer who has been elected to serve a second term should be approved by the board of county commissioners when he has accounted, or stands ready to account, for all funds collected by him during his first term. State, ex rel. Clark, v. Vinnedge, 79 Neb. 270 (112 N. W. 858).

Term of office, vacancies and holding over.

142. (1884.) The adoption of township organization by a county does not shorten the term of office of county judge, clerk, treasurer, sheriff, superintendent of public instruction, or coroner. State, ex rel. Crossley, v. Hedlund, 16 Neb. 566 (20 N. W. 876).

143. (1886.) County boards have authority to fill vacancies in all county offices. Where an officer of court is merely suspended it is the duty of the court of which he is such officer to "supply his place by appointment for the term" of such court. The word "suspended," in section 9 of article II, chapter 18 of the Compiled Statutes, is not synonymous with the word "removed," in section 1 of the same article. State, ex rel. Dodson, v. Meeker, 19 Neb. 444 (27 N. W. 427).

144. (1893.) A county board is not authorized to declare vacant a county office and make an appointment to fill such vacancy on the sole ground that an officer elect is ineligible and therefore unable to qualify. The incumbent of such office has a right to qualify within ten days after it is ascertained that his successor elect is ineligible, and upon qualifying in the manner provided by law will be entitled to hold over until a successor is elected and qualified. Richards v. McMillin, 36 Neb. 352 (54 N. W. 566).

145. (1895.) Section 4, article X of the constitution, enacting that the legislature shall provide by law for the election of such county and township officers as may be necessary, does not prevent the legislature when it reduces the number of officers from providing that those already elected shall cast lots to determine whose terms of office shall be discontinued; nor does it prevent the legislature from providing for the filling of vacancies provisionally by appointment. Van Horn v. State, ex rel. Abbott, 46 Neb. 62 (64 N. W. 365).

Removal.

146. (1880.) It is not sufficient for the board of county commissioners to declare and resolve that the office of county treasurer is vacant. There must be a judgment of ouster. State, ex rel. Craig, v. Sheldon, 10 Neb. 452 (6 N. W. 757).

147. (1883.) Repeated acts of removal of government section corner-stones by a county surveyor, under a claim of right so to do, for the purpose of rectifying the original government survey, amount to wilful maladministration in office within the meaning of section 1, article II, chapter 18, Compiled Statutes. Minkler v. State, 14 Neb. 181 (15 N. W. 330).

148. (1883.) The trial and ousting from office of a sheriff, for corruption, under paragraph 5 of section 1, article II, chapter 18, Compiled Statutes, by the board of county commissioners, is not the exercise of judicial power, nor of the power of impeachment. but of a quasi political and administrative power, not denied to such bodies by the constitution. State, ex rel. Walters, v. Oleson, 15 Neb. 247 (18 N. W. 45).

149. (1885.) While the supreme court can by a mandamus compel a board of county supervisors to act upon a complaint against a county officer, yet it can in no way control its judgment or legal discretion. State, ex rel. Castor, v. Saline County, 18 Neb. 422 (25 N. W. 587).

150. (1885.) When the board of supervisors has assumed jurisdiction of a complaint against a county officer, and has passed upon the sufficiency of the complaint, and afterwards refused to act in the case, and upon an application to the supreme court in the exercise of its original jurisdiction for a mandamus to compel action, the court will not inquire into the sufficiency of the complaint further than to ascertain if it is such a complaint. To that extent the complaint was examined, and held sufficient. State, ex rel. Castor, v. Saline County, 18 Neb. 422 (25 N. W. 587).

151. (1894.) Chapter 18, article II, Compiled Statutes, relating to the removal of county officers, was not repealed by the act of 1879, specifying powers of county boards. Hopkins v. Scott, 38 Neb. 661 (57 N. W. 391).

152. (1901.) It is official misconduct for a county clerk to permit ballots committed to his official care to be abstracted from his office. He cannot urge as a defense to a proceeding to remove him from office that the ballots so abstracted possessed no evidential value. Stewart v. Bole, 61 Neb. 193 (85 N. W. 33).

——— Proceedings.

153. (1880.) Proceedings to remove a county treasurer from office for wilful neglect of duty must be instituted by a complaint containing the charges against him, with the necessary specifications under them, and verified by the oath of an elector of the state. State, ex rel. Craig, v. Sheldon. 10 Neb. 452 (6 N. W. 757).

154. (1885.) A respondent, in a proceeding to remove him from a county office, has the right to present as many legal questions for decision by the county board as he may think necessary for his proper defense, but the board has the authority and right to decide such questions either with or without argument, as it may deem proper. It is not required to waste time in listening to unnecessary arguments. State, ex rel. Castor, v. Saline County, 18 Neb. 422 (25 N. W. 587).

155. (1885.) Where a party to a proceeding before the county board causes the attendance of unnecessary witnesses, or in any other manner needlessly augments the costs and expenses of a trial, it is within the power of the board to tax such unnecessary costs to the party making them, and it should in all proper cases exercise such power. State, ex rel. Castor, v. Saline County, 18 Neb. 422 (25 N. W. 587).

156. (1885.) In a proceeding before a board of supervisors to remove from office a county officer two-thirds of all the members elected constitute a quorum. It is not essential that all the members be present. But of a special meeting all must be notified. State, ex rel. Castor, v. Saline County, 18 Neb. 422 (25 N. W. 587).

157. (1885.) In counties under township organization the board of supervisors have authority to hear and determine complaints against county officers under the provisions of article II, chapter 18 of the Compiled Statutes 1885. State, ex rel. Castor, v. Saline County, 18 Neb. 422 (25 N. W. 587).

158. (1885.) When a complaint against a county officer is made and filed with the county clerk it is the duty of the county board to hear it. They have no authority to order its removal to the district court for trial. State, ex rel. Castor, v. Saline County, 18 Neb. 422 (25 N. W. 587).

159. (1894.) In proceedings by supervisors to remove a county treasurer, the fact that he appears and obtains a continuance and then goes to trial without objection will prevent him from being heard to claim in supreme court that he was not allowed sufficient time. Hopkins v. Scott, 38 Neb. 661 (57 N. W. 391).

160. (1894.) It is not necessary that all the members of the board of supervisors be present at the hearing of a proceeding to remove a county officer. A quorum is sufficient. Hopkins v. Scott, 38 Neb. 661 (57 N. W. 391).

161. (1894.) There is no authority of law for the settlement of a bill of exceptions embodying the evidence taken on the hearing of proceedings by supervisors to remove a county officer. Hopkins v. Scott, 38 Neb. 661 (57 N. W. 391).

162. (1894.) In proceedings by supervisors to remove a county treasurer the fact that some of the supervisors who tried the case were also witnesses does not invalidate the judgment. Hopkins v. Scott, 38 Neb. 661 (57 N. W. 391).

www.libtool.com.cn

163. (1895.) An appeal does not lie from the judgment of a board of supervisors removing from office a county officer impeached before and convicted by them on charges of maladministration in office. State, ex rel. Skirving, v. Betha, 43 Neb. 451 (61 N. W. 578).

Employment of attorney by county board.

164. (1891.) The county attorney is the law officer of the county. The county board cannot lawfully employ an attorney to perform the duties required by law to be discharged by the county attorney, and pay for such services out of the treasury of the county. Brome v. Cuming County, 31 Neb. 362 (47 N. W. 1050).

Fees and compensation.

Compensation of county attorney, see County Attorneys, §§ 15, 16.

165. (1892.) A county board has no power to allow a public officer compensation in excess of that allowed by statute or where none is authorized. Logan County v. Doan, 34 Neb. 104 (51 N. W. 598).

——— Statutory provisions.

166. (1882.) The act to regulate fees, approved February 15, 1877, is not an amendment of sections 1, 5, 8 and 14 of chapter 19 of the Revised Statutes of 1866, but an original act. State, ex rel. County Commissioners, v. Whittemore, 12 Neb. 252 (11 N. W. 310).

167. (1884.) The act of February 15, 1877, to regulate fees of county officers, is not one primarily to raise revenue, but to fix a limit to the amount of compensation to be received by the officers named, and is not unconstitutional. State, ex rel. Hamilton County, v. Ream, 16 Neb. 681 (21 N. W. 398).

168. (1884.) The act of February 15, 1877, to regulate the fees of county judges, etc., held to be a complete act in itself and not an amendment. State, ex rel. Hamilton County, v. Ream, 16 Neb. 681 21 N. W. 398).

——— Deputies.

169. (1893.) A deputy county clerk is to be paid his salary out of the fees received by the county clerk in excess of the amount which he is authorized to retain. The county is not liable for such salary. Gage County v. Wilson, 38 Neb. 165 (66 N. W. 810).

170. (1893.) The county judge, clerk, treasurer, and sheriff, where the fees exceed the amount fixed by statute, and are authorized to appoint a deputy or deputies, may, in addition to their own salary, retain from the fees of their respective office "such amount as may be necessary to pay the salaries of such deputies or assistants as the same shall be fixed by the county board, but in no instance shall such officers receive more than the fees by them respectively and actually collected, nor shall any money be retained for deputy service unless the same be actually paid to such deputy for his services." The county is not liable for the deputy's salary. It is to be paid out of the fees of the particular office. Gage County v. Wilson, 38 Neb. 168 (56 N. W. 880).

——— Increase or reduction.

171. (1891.) Section 16, article III, constitution, prohibiting increase or reduction of compensation of "any public officer" during his term, applies alone to those offices created by the constitution; hence the legislature may increase the compensation of a county commissioner during his term. Douglas County v. Timme, 32 Neb. 272 (49 N. W. 266).

——— Allowance by board.

172. (1878.) Where the compensation for services rendered for the county is definitely fixed by law, the audit of the same and drawing a warrant therefor, by the board, are merely ministerial duties unattended with the exercise of any official discretion, and therefore, in such case, the board cannot make such compensation any greater nor any less than that fixed by the law. Kemerer v. State, 7 Neb. 130; (1889) State, ex rel. Grable, v. Roderick, 25 Neb. 629 (41 N. W. 404).

173. (1898.) By chapter 52, laws 1893, the legislature legalized settlements already made between county treasurers and county boards of counties under township organization, in and by which said treasurers had been allowed to retain fees, to which by law they were not entitled. Kearney County v. Taylor, 54 Neb. 542 (74 N. W. 965).

174. (1898.) Chapter 52, Session Laws 1893, legalizing the payment and allowance of fees to county treasurers, is retroactive in its nature, in a sense special legislation and will not be so construed as to embrace any subject not specifically named therein. Kearney County v. Taylor, 54 Neb. 542 (74 N. W. 965).

175. (1898.) Chapter 52, laws 1893, did not, in express terms nor by necessary implication, satisfy or attempt to vacate a judgment already obtained by a county against its treasurer on a cause of action to recover fees unlawfully allowed him by the county board. Kearney County v. Taylor, 54 Neb. 542 (74 N. W. 965).

176. (1901.) Where a claim for salary and extra compensation is presented by a county clerk to the county board and allowed, the order of allowance is available to the clerk as an adjudication, only to the extent that the board acted judicially. Hayes County v. Christner, 61 Neb. 272 (85 N. W. 73).

177. (1901.) If the clerk relies on the action of the board as an adjudication in his favor for the allowance of a claim for salary and extra commission he must show affirmatively what part of the claim allowed was for extra compensation and what part for salary. Hayes County v. Christner, 61 Neb. 272 (85 N. W. 73).

178. (1901.) When a board of county commissioners audit and adjust the claim of an officer whose salary is prescribed by statute, it acts ministerially and not judicially. Gallaher v. Lincoln, 63 Neb. 339 (88 N. W. 505); (1903) Chase County v. Kelly, 69 Neb. 426 (95 N. W. 865); (1904) Otoe County v. Stroble, 71 Neb. 415 (98 N. W. 1065).

179. (1903.) Where on settlment of the accounts of a county officer, by the county commissioners, the compensation to be allowed the officer is fixed by law, the allowance of the claim is formal only. Mitchell v. Clay County, 69 Neb. 779 (96 N. W. 673).

180. (1903.) If the amount to be allowed a county officer for compensation, on the settlement of his accounts, is in the discretion of the commissioners, or if, in fixing such amount, the law requires them to decide questions of fact, their action is quasi judicial. Mitchell v. Clay County, 69 Neb. 779 (96 N. W. 673).

181. (1903.) When the law commits to any officer the duty of looking into facts and acting upon them, not in a way which it specifically directs, but after a discretion in its nature judicial, the function is quasi judicial. Mitchell v. Clay County, 69 Neb. 779 (96 N. W. 673).

182. (1904.) The powers exercised by the county board in examining the accounts of and settling with the county treasurer in this case are ministerial only; and in so far as they allowed such officer to retain a greater compensation than that fixed and limited by law, their action is void, and the county is not bound thereby. Maurer v. Gage County, 72 Neb. 441 (100 N. W. 1026).

183. (1904.) Where the county board in examining the accounts of and settling with a county treasurer have allowed him to retain a greater compensation than that fixed and limited by law, the county may, in a proper action recover from the officer the amount of the excess so allowed and retained by him. Maurer v. Gage County, 72 Neb. 441 (100 N. W. 1026).

——— Additional compensation.

184. (1885.) A county clerk is not entitled to extra compensation for making out the tax list. Bayha v. Webster County, 18 Neb. 131 (24 N. W. 457). [Changed by statute. Richardson County v. Mussleman, 25 Neb. 624.]

185. (1895.) By the statute in force in 1883 county clerks of counties having less than 25,000 inhabitants were required as a part of the duties of their office to make out the tax lists of such counties for said year, and for this service such clerks were not entitled to any extra compensation. Heald v. Polk County, 46 Neb. 28 (64 N. W. 376).

186. (1901.) An agreement or understanding between the county board and county clerk that the latter shall receive, for performing his official duties, compensation in excess of the limit fixed by law is null and void. Hayes County v. Chrisner, 61 Neb. 272 (85 N. W. 73).

187. (1901.) A county board may lawfully contract with a county judge to perform extra-official services in connection with the records of his office; and where such services have been performed without any valid contract, the county may accept the product of the judge's labor and pay him therefor. In such case, a taxpayer cannot maintain an equitable action against the county judge on the theory that the money received by him for such services belongs in equity and good conscience to the county and should be paid over to the county treasurer. Shepard v. Easterling, 61 Neb. 882 (86 N. W. 941). [Overruled. Wilson v. Otoe County, 71 Neb. 435.]

188. (1904.) A contract between a county and one of its officers, whereby such officer undertakes to perform extra-official services, for which the county undertakes to pay him compensation in addition to the fees and salary allowed by law, is in violation of section 51, article I, chapter 18, Compiled Statutes, and will not support an action for such extra compensation. Wilson v. Otoe County, 71 Neb. 435 (98 N. W. 1050).

——— Payment.

189. (1893.) Where a county has once made payment of the salary of a county officer to one actually in possession of the office, performing its duties with color of title, before his right to the office has been determined against him by a competent tribunal, it cannot afterwards be compelled to pay the same salary to the de jure officer. State v. Milne, 36 Neb. 301 (54 N. W. 521; 38 Am. St. Rep. 724; 19 L. R. A. 689*n*).

——— Recovery.

190. (1901.) Where a county clerk seeks to recover from the county, compensation for making and correcting the assessor's books, the county may, by way of counterclaim, set up fees collected by plaintiff, by virtue of his office, which he failed to report and account for. Sheibley v. Dixon County, 61 Neb. 409 (85 N. W. 399).

——— Clerk.

191. (1879.) The latter clause of section 3 of an act entitled "An act to amend sections 1, etc.," approved February 19, 1877, is in these words: "The county clerk shall receive for making out the tax list and duplicate thereof, the sum of four cents each for every description of lots and lands, and extension thereof, upon such tax list, and duplicate, including footings and recapitulation." Held, That the word "each," as it occurs in the said subdivision, refers to the "descriptions of lots and lands," and not to the "tax list and duplicate thereof." Lamb v. Stanton County, 8 Neb. 279.

192. (1879.) The compensation allowed county clerks by the act to amend the revenue law, approved February 18, 1877, of four cents for each description of lots and lands upon the tax list and duplicate, is in excess of the limitation of $1,500, and is for extra servies. State v. Silver, 9 Neb. 85 (9 N. W. 215).

193. (1879.) The act making an allowance for preparing the duplicate and tax list, being passed after that fixing the salary of clerk, appears to have been intended as compensation for extra labor. Gilbert v. Brown, 9 Neb. 90 (2 N. W. 376).

194. (1880.) Under section 3 of the act of February 9, 1877, Session Laws, page 44, the compensation of a county clerk for completing the tax list and duplicate thereof is fixed at four cents for each separate tract or lot of land properly entered therein for taxation. Jackson v. Washington County, 10 Neb. 381 (6 N. W. 463).

195. (1889.) Section 2, chapter 42, laws 1887, providing for fees of the county clerk for preparing tax lists, is not repealed or modified by section 1, chapter 44, laws 1887. Richardson County v. Mussleman, 25 Neb. 624 (41 N. W. 553).

196. (1889.) Under the provisions of chapter 42, laws 1887, the county clerk is entitled to four cents per line for preparing the tax list, but is not required to enter the same on his fee book. Richardson County v. Mussleman, 25 Neb. 624 (41 N. W. 553).

197. (1890.) While the county clerk of a county under township organization is entitled to four cents per line for preparing the tax list he is not entitled to any compensation for the making of a duplicate. Radford v. Dixon County, 29 Neb. 113 (45 N. W. 275).

198. (1894.) A county clerk has no authority to charge for official services less than the fees prescribed by statute. State, ex rel. Holt County, v. Hazelet, 41 Neb. 257 (59 N. W. 891).

199. (1898.) In the absence of a contract to the contrary, the first county clerk of a newly organized county, who compiles a numerical index therefor, is entitled to a compensation of fifteen cents for each necessary entry made in compiling such index, to be paid by such county. Bastedo v. Boyd County, 57 Neb. 100 (77 N. W. 387).

200. (1903.) The county board acts judicially in fixing the amount of the salary of the clerk when acting as clerk of the board, but when such fees have been allowed, as such, and paid to the clerk, if the total amount of his fees for the year, including the fees so allowed, is more than the limit of his annual salary as fixed by statute, he is liable to the county for the excess. Mitchell v. Clay County, 69 Neb. 796 (96 N. W. 657).

201. (1906.) In counties of more than 25,000 inhabitants the salary of the county clerk is fixed at $2,500 per annum by chapter 72, laws 1905, and he is also entitled to one deputy whose salary shall be $1,000 per annum. State, ex rel. Douglas County, v. Drexel, 75 Neb. 614 (106 N. W. 791).

——— Treasurer.

202. (1889.) The compensation of county treasurers, for moneys collected by them, is fixed by section 20 of chapter 28 of the Compiled Statutes, and cannot exceed ten per cent. on the first $3,000; four per cent. on all sums over $3,000 and under $5,000; and two per cent. on all sums over $5,000 (school moneys excluded); and in computing the amount collected, for the purpose of charging percentage, all sums, from whatever funds derived, shall be included together (except the school fund), the fees to be charged to the different funds pro rata, and allowed but once. State, ex rel. Grable, v. Roderick, 25 Neb. 629 (41 N. W. 404).

203. (1892.) Under section 20, chapter 28, Compiled Statutes, allowing the county treasurer fees on all money collected by him, a county treasurer is not entitled to fees on tax money paid to him by a township treasurer collected under section 87, chapter 77. Taylor v. Kearney County, 35 Neb. 381 (53 N. W. 211).

204. (1896.) A county treasurer is not entitled to a commission or collection fee on funds, the proceeds of sales of bonds paid or delivered to him as such officer. Stoner v. Keith County, 48 Neb. 279 (67 N. W. 311).

205. (1896.) The words, "on all moneys collected by him"—the county treasurer—in section 20, chapter 28, Compiled Statutes, in relation to fees, refer solely to such taxes as he has collected from the taxpayers. Stoner v. Keith County, 48 Neb. 279 (67 N. W. 311).

206. (1897.) Section 1, chapter 44, Session Laws of 1887, limited the compensation of county treasurers of counties of 25,000 inhabitants or less to $2,000 per annum for all services rendered by such treasurers by virtue of their office. Bedwell v. Custer County, 51 Neb. 387 (70 N. W. 945).

207. (1897.) By chapter 80, Session Laws of 1887, allowing a county treasurer of counties having 25,000 inhabitants or less, a fee of one per cent on educational land funds collected and remitted by them to the state treasurer, the legislature intended the state to reimburse such county for the services rendered by its treasurer in the collection and remittance of such fund. Bedwell v. Custer County, 51 Neb. 387 (70 N. W. 945).

208. (1898.) A county treasurer is not entitled to ten per cent commission on the first $3,000 of state taxes, and a like percentage on the first $3,000 of county moneys, collected by him for each fiscal year, but a fee of ten per cent alone is chargeable on the first $3,000 from whatever source derived, without regard to the year the taxes were levied, except school moneys, and such fees or commissions are to be apportioned pro rata among the various funds on account of which the collections were made. State, ex rel. Pearson, v. Cornell, 54 Neb. 647 (75 N. W. 25).

209. (1901.) A county treasurer is not liable to the county for any fees earned and collected by him unless such fees in any one year exceed the compensation allowed the officer by law, together with the amount paid out by him as salary of deputy and assistants. Barnes v. Red Willow County, 62 Neb. 505 (87 N. W. 319).

210. (1901.) When a county treasurer dies and a successor is appointed, who serves for the unexpired portion of the year, the amount of fees to be retained by both cannot exceed in the aggregate the sum fixed by statute as compensation for one year, plus the amount expended for a deputy and clerk hire. Barnes v. Red Willow County, 62 Neb. 505 (87 N. W. 319).

211. (1904.) Section 42 of chapter 28 of the Compiled Statutes of 1901, which provides that in counties having more than 25,000 inhabitants the county treasurer shall receive a salary of $3,000 a year, and such an amount as may be allowed by the county board as compensation for clerks and assistants, not exceeding $2,400 per annum, also limits the sum which may be retained by the treasurer for all such purposes to the amount of the fees and commissions actually received and collected by him. Maurer v. Gage County, 72 Neb. 441 (100 N. W. 1026).

——— Accounting.

212. (1884.) Under the title of "An act to regulate the fees of county judges, county clerks, sheriffs, and county treasurers" the legislature may require such officers to report the fees received, and pay the excess over a sum named into the county treasury. The authority to regulate includes the power to control. State, ex rel. Hamilton County v. Ream, 16 Neb. 681 (21 N. W. 398).

www.libtool.com.cn

213. (1885.) The numerical index of instruments affecting the title of real estate filed in the office of the county clerk, which he is required to keep, is a public record, and fees received by him for certified copy of the same must be reported to the county board. State, ex rel. Miller, v. Sovereign, 17 Neb. 173 (22 N. W. 353).

214. (1885.) Where the law has provided a tribunal to which the county clerk is required to report the fees received by him by virtue of his office, it is the duty of such tribunal to require him to make such report, and a mere taxpayer cannot proceed against such clerk by mandamus to return certain fees in his report. State, ex rel. Miller, v. Sovereign, 17 Neb. 173 (22 N. W. 353).

215. (1888.) It is the duty of the county treasurer to make searches of the tax lists, books, and records in his care and custody as such county treasurer, and to make abstracts and copies therefrom, and attach his certificate and seal thereto, when lawfully demanded, and to demand and receive reasonable fees therefor. And it is also his duty to enter in the fee book, to be kept by him for that purpose, every item of fees received by him, including those received for such abstracts, copies and certifiates, and make quarterly report thereof to the county board. State, ex rel. Buffalo County, v. Allen, 23 Neb. 451 (36 N. W. 756).

216. (1890.) It is the duty of a county clerk to report all the fees of his office and pay the excess over the amount to which he is entitled into the county treasury. State, ex rel. Cuming County, v. Shearer, 29 Neb. 477 (45 N. W. 784).

217. (1890.) The duty of a county clerk to pay into the county treasury the excess of his fees over the amount to which he is entitled, is personal to himself, and in case of his failure to perform his duty in that regard, a mandamus may be issued even after the expiration of his term of office to compel the performance of such duty. State, ex rel. Cuming County, v. Shearer, 29 Neb. 477 (45 N. W. 784).

218. (1890.) It is only the fees received by a county clerk which are in excess of the salary fixed by law that he is required to pay into the county treasury. State, ex rel. Frontier County, v. Kelly, 30 Neb. 574 (46 N. W. 714).

219. (1890.) The county clerk of a county containing less than 18,003 inhabitants is required to report to the county board all fees received by him for making and certifying to abstracts of title, although he may be a bonded abstracter, and performed the services as such abstracter. State, ex rel. Frontier County, v. Kelly, 30 Neb. 574 (46 N. W. 714).

220. (1890.) Where a county clerk, who is also a notary public, takes acknowledgments of deeds and mortgages, and takes affidavits and depositions as a notary public, it is his duty to enter upon his fee book as county clerk and report to the county board every item of fees received by him for such services. State, ex rel. Frontier County, v. Kelly, 30 Neb. 574 (46 N. W. 714).

221. ((1890.) Either the county or county board is a proper party plaintiff in a proceeding to compel the county clerk to account for fees received by him and which it is his duty to report. State, ex rel. Frontier County, v. Kelly, 30 Neb. 574 (46 N. W. 714).

222. (1894.) Where lands are seized on execution or order of sale, it is the duty of the county clerk of the county wherein such real estate is situated, on application of the sheriff in writing, to certify to the sheriff, under his seal of office, the amount and character of all liens existing of record against said lands which are prior to the lien of the levy, and for which certificate, and the necessary search therefor, said county clerk is authorized and required to collect and enter upon his fee book, and report to the county board, the sum of $2, even though the labor of examining the records and preparing the certificate was performed out of office hours by an employe of the office, or some person other than the county clerk or his authorized deputy. State, ex rel. Holt County, v. Hazelet, 41 Neb. 257 (59 N. W. 891).

223. (1895.) The county board, under the laws in force in 1883, exercised ministerial functions in examining the reports of fees received by the county clerk and in adjusting the account between him and the county. Heald v. Polk County, 46 Neb. 28 (64 N. W. 376).

224. (1896.) The requirements of the law in regard to a fee book to be kept by the county clerk, and the reports of his fees, to be regularly made to the county board, are sufficient to charge the board with notice of any discrepancy between the amounts of the fees of the officer reported by him as collected and the true amounts; from which it follows that the right of action to enforce the duty of making a true report for any current year, and to pay any excess of fees into the county treasury, would accrue at the time the report was due. State, ex rel. Commissioners of Brown County, v. Boyd, 49 Neb. 303 (68 N. W. 510).

225. (1897.) The fees paid by the state to a county treasurer of a county of 25,000 inhabitants or less, for collecting and remitting the educational land fund, should by the latter be added to all other fees received by him as such treasurer, and if the aggregate exceeds the sum of $2,000 per annum the excess should be turned into the treasury of his county by him. Bedwell v. Custer County, 51 Neb. 387 (70 N. W. 945).

226. (1897.) A county board, in its examination of reports of a county clerk, of fees received by him, and in the adjustment of the account between him and the county, acts ministerially; and if, through fraud or mistake, he is allowed to retain fees which he should not, such adjustment is no defense or bar to an action by the county to recover such fees. Hazelet v. Holt County, 51 Neb. 716 (71 N. W. 717).

227. (1897.) It is a duty in respect to which the statute is mandatory, that a county clerk shall keep a fee book and shall enter therein every item of fees received or earned by him in the manner and with the particular information in regard to it prescribed by statute; also to make a correct report, as required by law, of the same to the county board, and to pay, without demand, any excess received over and above the amount stated and which may be allowed by law, into the county treasury. Hazelet v. Holt County, 51 Neb. 716 (71 N. W. 717).

228. (1897.) Under the provisions of chapter 28, Compiled Statutes, it is the duty of the county clerk to enter in the proper fee book a full statement of the several amounts paid him for his services as clerk of the board of county commissioners and for making out the tax lists during his incumbency of office, and the performance of these duties may be compelled in an action of mandamus brought by the county as relator after the expiration of the term of office of such clerk. State, ex rel. Wayne County, v. Russell, 51 Neb. 774 (71 N. W. 785).

229. (1897.) A county board, in examining the reports and adjusting the accounts of a county officer, acts ministerially, and an adjustment so made is no bar to an action subsequently brought to recover moneys unlawfully withheld by the officer. Trites v. Hitchcock County, 53 Neb. 79 (73 N. W. 215).

230. (1901.) A county clerk must account to the county board for all money received by him as salary. Hayes County v. Christner, 61 Neb. 272 (85 N. W. 73); (1901) Holcombe v. Dawson County, 1 Unof. 743 (95 N. W. 835).

231. (1901.) A county clerk must account for all fees earned by him whether collected or not. Sheibley v. Dixon County, 61 Neb. 409 (85 N. W. 399).

232. (1901.) The approval by the county board of the report of a county officer made in compliance with the requirements of section 43, chapter 28, Compiled Statutes 1899, is not a judicial order; it has not the force or conclusiveness of a judgment and is not appealable. Shepard v. Easterling, 61 Neb. 882 (86 N. W. 941).

233. (1903.) The action of county commissioners in adjusting the accounts of county officers under sections 43 and 44, article I, chapter 18, Compiled Statutes, is ministerial only. Mitchell v. Clay County, 69 Neb. 779 (96 N. W. 673).

234. (1903.) A settlement with a county officer which, in substance, is an adjustment of his accounts, does not become quasi judicial, so as not to be reviewable otherwise than by appeal, merely because claims were filed for sums claimed to be due such officer and allowed for the purpose of enabling warrants to be drawn therefor. Mitchell v. Clay County, 69 Neb. 779 (96 N. W. 673).

235. (1903.) The salary allowed a county clerk for services as clerk of the county board must be accounted for as fees of his office. Mitchell v. Clay County, 69 Neb. 796 (96 N. W. 657).

236. (1903.) A county officer is not required to account for and pay over to his county money received by him in payment for services performed for another, by private agreement, which are no part of the duties of his office, and which are not incompatible with, and are not included within his official duties. State, ex rel. Board of County Commissioners, v. Holm, 70 Neb. 606 (97 N. W. 821; 64 L. R. A. 131).

Authority and powers.

Authority of clerk to take acknowledgment, see Acknowledgment, § 14.

237. (1877.) Where power is given to public officers in the permissive form, "may," if the public interests of individual rights call for its exercise, it is peremptory. State, ex rel. Clark, v. Buffalo County, 6 Neb. 454.

238. (1897.) Sections 40 and 41, chapter 8, Compiled Statutes (laws 1879, ch. 156, secs. 1, 2), providing that the successors of public officers who have made deposits or loans of public moneys may maintain actions to recover the same, operates prospectively as well as retrospectively. McIntosh v. Johnson, 51 Neb. 33 (70 N. W. 522).

239. (1898.) A public corporation is bound by the acts and contracts of its authorized agents within the scope of their authority. Dean v. Saunders County, 55 Neb. 759 (76 N. W. 450).

240. (1907.) County officers have by implication such powers as are necessary to enable them to perform the duties expressly enjoined upon them. Christner v. Hayes County, 79 Neb. 157 (112 N. W. 347).

——— Ratification.

241. (1895.) There is no authority for submission to electors of a county of a proposition to ratify the unauthorized acts of its officers. Douglas County v. Keller, 43 Neb. 635 (62 N. W. 60).

Duties and liabilities.

242. (1888.) A county treasurer is not liable for the penalty provided by section 12 of chapter 93, Compiled Statutes of 1885, for the failure to register a county warrant presented to him for such registration, prior to the expiration of ten days after it is issued, that time being given in which an appeal may be taken by a taxpayer, and within which the county clerk is prohibited from delivering the warrant. Means v. Webster, 23 Neb. 432 (36 N. W. 809).

243. (1902.) The duty imposed upon the county clerk by section 85, article I, chapter 77, Compiled Statutes, of apportioning railroad property among the several school districts for purposes of taxation is one owing to the public only; hence a county clerk is not personally liable to a school district for an honest mistake in the apportionment. School District v. Burress, 2 Unof. 554 (89 N. W. 609).

244. (1902.) The duty imposed upon the county clerk by section 77, article I, chapter 77, Compiled Statutes, is one owing to the public only; hence a county clerk who by mistake omits to levy the tax reported in accordance with said section is not personally liable to the school district. School District v. Burress, 2 Unof. 554 89 N. W. 609).

245. (1904.) Chapter 32, laws of 1903, entitled "An act to constitute the county surveyor ex-officio county engineer in addition to his powers and duties of the county surveyor," etc., is in violation of section 15, article III of the constitution, which prohibits the passage of local or special laws regulating county or township offices, and further provides that, in all cases where a general law can be made applicable, no special law shall be enacted, and is void. State v. Scott, 70 Neb. 685 (100 N. W. 812).

246. (1904.) An information in the nature of quo warranto will not lie to inquire into the right of county surveyors, in counties having more than 50,000 population, to perform and exercise the duties of county engineer, as provided for by chapter 32 of the laws of 1903. State v. Scott, 70 Neb. 681 (97 N. W. 1021).

247. (1904.) Under Compiled Statutes, chapter 18, article III, sections 18 and 20, and chapter 83, article XIII, section 3*a*, as amended by the act of 1891, it is the duty of each county treasurer to keep at all times on deposit in each of the depository banks of his county such a proportionate share of the public money subject to deposit as the amount of the paid up capital stock of each bank bears to the whole amount of paid up capital stock of all of such banks. State, ex rel. First Nat. Bank of Atkinson, v. Cronin, 72 Neb. 636 (101 N. W. 325).

——— Custody of public funds.

248. (1893.) Chapter 50, laws 1891, relating to the keeping of state and county funds, did not operate to repeal article II, chapter 18, Compiled Statutes, relating to the removal of county officers. Hopkins v. Scott, 38 Neb. 661 (57 N. W. 391).

249. (1897.) The statutes in force in 1888 and 1889 made it the duty of the county treasurers of counties having 25,000 inhabitants or less, to collect and remit to the state treasurer moneys owing to the state arising from the leasing and sale of the educational lands of the state situate in such counties. Bedwell v. Custer County, 51 Neb. 387 (70 N. W. 945).

250. (1907.) In the absence of bad faith, a county treasurer is not liable for depositing county funds in a legal depository in excess of the depository bank's pro rata share of such funds, as provided by section 18, ch. 18, art. III, Comp. St. 1905, unless the amount of such deposit exceeds the sum which might lawfully be deposited under the provisions of section 20 of the same chapter. Holt County v. Cronin, 79 Neb. 424 (112 N. W. 561).

Accounting for public funds and property.

251. (1880.) The fact that the public funds have been stolen from the treasury is no legal justification for the failure of the treasurer to account for them. State, ex rel. Craig, v. Sheldon, 10 Neb. 452 (6 N. W. 757).

252. (1883.) The payment of money in the hands of a county treasurer, at the termination of his office, to his successor, can be effectuated only by the delivery of that which by the law of the land is recognized as money. Cedar County v. Jenal, 14 Neb. 254 (15 N. W. 369).

253. (1883.) The mere delivery of certificates of deposit of a banker—no money having been realized from them, even if assented to by the successor, is not a payment; nor will it relieve the outgoing treasurer and his sureties from liability on his official bond, for failing to pay over money found to be due from him to the county on final settlement. Cedar County v. Jenal, 14 Neb. 254 (15 N. W. 369).

254. (1892.) A proceeding by mandamus to compel a county treasurer to pay over county funds in his hands at the expiration of his term of office is barred by the statute of limitations at the expiration of four years from the time the right to the writ accrued. State, ex rel. Gage County, v. King, 34 Neb. 196 (51 N. W. 754; 33 Am. St. Rep. 635).

255. (1896.) Negligence or carelessness of the county board in the examination and settlement of the accounts or report of the county treasurer is not a defense available to the sureties of the treasurer in a suit to recover funds which he failed to turn over. Bush v. Johnson County, 48 Neb. 1 (66 N. W. 1023; 58 Am. St. Rep. 741; 32 L. R. A. 223).

256. (1896.) The periodical settlements assigned by our statutes to be made between the county board and the treasurer of the county do not have in them the elements of a judicial determination of the subjects involved. Bush v. Johnson County, 48 Neb. 1 (66 N. W. 1023; 58 Am. St. Rep. 741; 32 L. R. A. 223).

257. (1896.) An incoming county treasurer, receives from the outgoing one, a certificate of deposit representing the county funds in his hands, and delivered the same to the bank which had issued it, and it was canceled and a new one issued to him in its stead. Held, That he and his bondsmen were chargeable with the amount thereof, and a subsequent failure of the bank during the time the deposit was continued, and his consequent inability to realize the money, did not relieve them of the liability. Bush v. Johnson County, 48 Neb. 1 (66 N. W. 1023; 58 Am. St. Rep. 741; 32 L. R. A. 223).

258. (1896.) The duty imposed on a county treasurer by law, and assumed by him, of safely keeping, accounting for and turning over the public funds which come into his hands by virtue of his office, is an absolute one; and where his bond is conditioned for the faithful performance of the duties of the office by him, the sureties on the bond are bound and liable in like manner and their responsibility is the same as that of their principal, and it will be no defense for either of the parties, in an action on the bond to recover public funds, predicated on an alleged failure of the treasurer to account for or pay them over, that the funds have been lost or stolen without the fault or negligence of the treasurer. Bush v. Johnson County, 48 Neb. 1 (66 N. W. 1023; 58 Am. St. Rep. 741; 32 L. R. A. 223).

259. (1896.) A county treasurer, during his first term, had on deposit in a bank $6,000 of the public funds, such deposit being evidenced by a certificate of deposit. At the close of this term of office and the beginning of the second term, in his report to and settlement with the county board, he included and stated the amount of the certificate of deposit as so much cash, the board possessing no knowledge of the existence of the certificate, or of the deposit of the money. Before the close of the treasurer's first term, the bank failed. Held, That such settlement did not bind the county as an acceptance or approval of the certificate of deposit as so much cash accounted for, nor did its retention by the treasurer, or turning it over to himself as his own successor, constitute a paying over of the public funds, but was a failure to do so which rendered him, and the obligors on his bond for his first term, liable. Bush v. Johnson County, 48 Neb. 1 (66 N. W. 1023; 58 Am. St. Rep. 741; 32 L. R. A. 223).

260. (1897.) An incoming county treasurer accepting a bank check in payment of public funds due from his predecessor is chargeable with the amount of such payment, where the check is surrendered by the incoming officer to the bank which issued it, the amount deposited therein in open account under the depository law, other deposits of county funds are likewise made therein from time to time, checks against the account drawn by the treasurer aggregating a sum in excess of said first deposit are honored and paid by the depository bank, and said acts have been ratified by the county. Whitney v. State, 53 Neb. 287 (73 N. W. 696).

261. (1901.) Where a full and complete settlement of a county officer with the county commissioners, who are authorized to make the same, has been made, such settlement is final and conclusive unless there is fraud, mistake or imposition in making the same. Douglas County v. Bennett, 61 Neb. 660 (85 N. W. 833). [Overruled. Mitchell v. Clay County, 69 Neb. 794.]

262. (1902.) In this state a county treasurer is an insurer of the funds which come into his hands ex officio, and such treasurer and his bondsmen cannot, in an action by the county to recover funds not accounted for, plead that such funds were lost without any fault or neglect on the part of the treasurer, by the failure of a bank in which they were deposited for safe keeping only, and in good faith, believing such bank to be solvent. Thomssen v. Hall County, 63 Neb. 777 (89 N. W. 389; 57 L. R. A. 303).

263. (1902.) A county treasurer is not excused from liability for loss of county funds, deposited in a bank that afterwards fails, on the ground that the supervisors fail to provide a safe place for the keeping of such funds in his office. Thomssen v. Hall County, 63 Neb. 777 (89 N. W. 389; 57 L. R. A. 303).

264. (1903.) Where a full and complete settlement of a county officer with the county commissioners, who are authorized to make the same, has been made, such settlement is final and conclusive, unless there is fraud, mistake or imposition in making the same. Wilcox v. Perkins County, 70 Neb. 139 (97 N. W. 236; 113 Am. St. Rep. 779).

265. (1907.) Where the refusal of county commissioners to settle with a county treasurer is based on his failure to account for interest due on taxes collected by him, such commissioners should call the treasurer's attention to the same, or pay the cost of legal proceedings brought to compel an approval of his bond, if such objection is not disclosed before an action brought to require acceptance and approval of his official bond for a second term of office. State, ex rel. Clark, v. Vinnedge, 79 Neb. 270 (112 N. W. 858).

266. (1907.) Where irregularities occur, in the disbursement of county funds by a county treasurer, on the advice of the county attorney, it is not a valid objection to the approval of the settlement of such treasurer's accounts or to the approval of his bond for a second term of office. State, ex rel. Clark, v. Vinnedge, 79 Neb. 270 (112 N. W. 858).

——— Employment of person to examine accounts.

267. (1882.) County commissioners have authority under section 160 of the revenue law of 1879 to employ a competent person at a reasonable compensation to examine the accounts of the county treasurer when in their opinion it is necessary to do so. And where such appointment has been made, and the services rendered, necessity for the appointment will be presumed. Laws v. Harlan County, 12 Neb. 637 (12 N. W. 114).

268. (1884.) County commissioners have authority under section 160, chapter 77 of the Compiled Statutes, to employ competent persons to examine the accounts of the county treasurer, when in their opinion it is necessary to do so. And they are the sole judges as to when the necessity exists. Kearney County v. Tuttle, 16 Neb. 34 (19 N. W. 637).

Liabilities on bonds.

269. (1897.) The official bond of a county treasurer with the oath indorsed thereon was filed within the statutory limit for such act. It had not then been approved, and was not approved until a date beyond the limit prescribed. He entered upon the duties of the office and during the time he continued therein, received the fees and emoluments appertaining thereto. In an action on the bond for an alleged breach of its conditions, held, that the fact of the lack of approval at the time prescribed by law was not matter of forceful defense for the sureties on the bond. Holt County v. Scott, 53 Neb. 176 (73 N. W. 681).

www.libook.com.cn

270. (1897.) A person who was holding the office of county treasurer, and was re-elected, filed a bond with the oath of office indorsed thereon within the time fixed by law. The bond then, however, lacked approval, and was not approved until a date without the time fixed by law for such action. The treasurer continued in the office. Held, That he was in the office as of the new term under color of right, and was an officer de facto, and the sureties on the bond were precluded or estopped from denying that he was in possession of the office of the second term and de jure. Holt County v. Scott, 53 Neb. 176 (73 N. W. 681).

271. The failure of a county judge to pay to his successor in office or the person entitled thereto money which was deposited with him in condemnation proceedings constitutes a breach of the obligation of his official bond, and there accrues a cause of action in favor of the person damaged by said breach. (1898) Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Philpott, 56 Neb. 212 (76 N. W. 550); (1899) Clark v. Douglas, 58 Neb. 571 (79 N. W. 158).

——— Validity of bond.

272. (1896.) A county treasurer's bond should be approved by the county board. Stoner v. Keith County, 48 Neb. 279 (67 N. W. 311).

273. (1896.) Consideration held sufficient for an additional official bond of county treasurer which was executed, delivered, and approved during the principal's term of office. Stoner v. Keith County, 48 Neb. 279 (67 N. W. 311).

274. (1896.) The approval of the official bonds of county, precinct, and township officers, is the act of the county board as a body, and not the act of an individual member or members. Stoner v. Keith County, 48 Neb. 279 (67 N. W. 311).

275. (1896.) An official bond which has been presented to a county board and approved, binds the sureties though they signed the bond conditionally, the board having no notice of the condition and there being nothing to raise the duty of inquiry as to the manner of executing the bond. Stoner v. Keith County, 48 Neb. 279 (67 N. W. 311).

276. (1896.) The knowledge of one member of a county board, at the time of its approval by them, of the conditional signing of a county treasurer's bond by the sureties, not shown to have been imparted to the board, is not knowledge of or notice to the board of such fact. Stoner v. Keith County, 48 Neb. 279 (67 N. W. 311).

277. (1896.) Parties who signed a county treasurer's bond subsequent to its approval, as additional sureties must be presumed to have known what would be the effect of such signing, including the discharge of the prior sureties, and they became bound and liable for any subsequent failure or default of the principal in the bond to perform its obligations. Stoner v. Keith County, 48 Neb. 279 (67 N. W. 311).

278. (1898.) The official bond of a county officer is not void because it does not specify or designate the term for which the principal obligee was elected or appointed. Perkins County v. Miller, 55 Neb 141 (75 N. W. 577).

279. (1898.) The official bond of county clerk is not void by reason of its being, in form, joint, instead of joint and several as required by statute, nor because it fails to designate the term for which he was elected. Perkins County v. Miller, 55 Neb. 141 (75 N. W. 577).

280. (1899.) If the bond of a county officer is given and approved, the office obtained and enjoyment of the fees and emoluments, in an action on the bond for damages for a breach of the obligation it will not, in favor of the signers of it, be adjudged void because joint alone, but will be held good to the extent it in form complies with the statutory requirements in such regard. Clark v. Douglas, 58 Neb. 571 (79 N. W. 158).

281. (1903.) The fact that an official bond of a county officer as executed, is joint, instead of joint and several as required by statute, is not an objection thereto of which the obligors upon the instrument can avail themselves as a defense. The bond is good to the extent it complies with the staute in that regard. Wilcox v. Perkins County, 70 Neb. 139 (97 N. W. 236; 113 Am. St. Rep. 779).

——— Indemnification of sureties.

282. (1902.) Although a county may not demand of a county treasurer to indemnify the sureties on his official bond, a mortgage given by him to indemnify his sureties is not illegal or void because at the time it was given the grantor was suspected of embezzling public funds, and the mortgage was given to protect the sureties in case a defalcation should ensue. Harlan County v. Whitney, 65 Neb. 105 (90 N. W. 993, 101 Am. St. Rep. 610).

——— Discharge of sureties.

283. (1896.) Additional sureties, by signing a county treasurer's bond after its approval without the knowledge and consent of the original sureties, release the latter from future liability on the bond and become liable thereon for any subsequent default of the principal. Stoner v. Keith County, 48 Neb. 279 (67 N. W. 311).

284. (1897.) Sureties executed a county treasurer's bond with the provision of section 21, chapter 10, Compiled Statutes, in contemplation and forming a part of their contract, and they are not released from liability on the bond by the board's requiring additional sureties. Holt County v. Scott, 53 Neb. 176 (73 N. W. 681).

Action on bond.

285. (1888.) Where a county treasurer is in default in respect to the county, state, school district, precinct bond, city, and other funds, and his bond has been canceled and bondsmen discharged by a judgment of the district court of the proper county, an action will lie against him in the name of the proper county for all such funds in respect to which he is a defaulter. In such case the county proceeds under a form analogous to that of a trustee of an express trust, in respect to all of such funds other than those of the county proper. Thorne v. Adams County, 22 Neb. 825 (36 N. W. 515).

286. (1891.) Prior to the act of 1891, p. 347, a civil action by the county would not lie to recover back profits made by its treasurer in dealing with the public funds; the only remedy was a prosecution under sec. 124 of the criminal code. Wayne County v. Bressler, 32 Neb. 818 (49 N. W. 782).

287. (1901.) Where through mistake a county clerk is allowed to retain fees in excess of his salary, the adjustment of the account between him and the county is not a bar to an action by it to recover the excess. Sheibley v. Dixon County, 61 Neb. 409 (85 N. W. 399).

——— Accrual of cause of action.

288. (1896.) A county treasurer, at the close of his term of office, must pay over to his successor all moneys in his hands belonging to the county, or for which he is liable to account. If there has been no proof of any particular date at which it is claimed that the money was misappropriated by a county treasurer, or other proof than that he failed to account for and pay over to his successor at the close of the term of office all funds for which he was liable to account, it will be presumed to have occurred at the close of the term and the liability accrues as of such time. Stoner v. Keith County, 48 Neb. 279 (67 N. W. 311).

289. (1902.) An action brought against a county treasurer and his bondsmen for the recovery of moneys alleged to have been converted by such treasurer, is not prematurely brought if commenced after the termination of the term of office of such treasurer, and after he has given a bond and qualified as his own successor in office. Thomssen v. Hall County, 63 Neb. 777 (89 N. W. 389; 57 L. R. A. 303).

——— Defenses.

290. (1898.) That plaintiffs were not the owners of the claim on which the action was predicated and were not the real parties in interest were proper matters of defense in an action by one holding tax certificates to recover against sureties of a county treasurer for the latter's failure to turn over redemption money in his bonds. Levy v. Cunningham, 56 Neb. 348 (76 N. W. 882).

——— Limitation of action.

291. (1887.) The statute of limitations commences to run against an action on the bond of a county treasurer, by the purchaser of land at an illegal tax sale, from the date of such sale. Merriam v. Miller, 22 Neb. 218 (34 N. W. 625).

292. (1887.) An action on the official bond of a county treasurer for selling to the plaintiff certain lands for delinquent taxes, which sale is alleged to be void for the want of legal proceedings by the said county treasurer and other taxing officers, as to the time within which the same may be commenced, comes within the provisions of section 14 of the code of civil procedure, and may be commenced at any time within ten years from the time the cause of action accrued. Merriam v. Miller, 22 Neb. 218 (34 N. W. 625); (1887) Alexander v. Overton, 22 Neb. 227 (34 N. W. 629).

——— Parties.

293. (1891.) An action brought by a county on the bond of its treasurer to recover taxes collected by him for the state, was properly brought in the name of the county, while the taxes were due the state, yet they were levied and collected through the county authorities and were a charge against the county until paid into the state treasury. Valley County v. Robinson, 32 Neb. 254 (49 N. W. 356).

294. (1896.) Where the bond of a county treasurer was presented and approved at or prior to the commencement of his term of office, which bond was signed by additional sureties during the term and also an additional bond given and approved, and the default or failure, if any, of the principal in the discharge of the duties of the office occurred at the close of his term, it was proper to join all the sureties as defendants in one action on the bonds. Stoner v. Keith County, 48 Neb. 279 (67 N. W. 311).

295. (1898.) That plaintiffs were not the owners of the claim on which the action was predicated and were not the real parties in interest were proper matters of defense in an action by one holding tax certificates to recover against sureties of a county treasurer for the latter's failure to turn over redemption money in his bonds. Levy v. Cunningham, 56 Neb. 348 (76 N. W. 882).

——— Pleading.

296. (1879.) A suit on behalf of the public against a county treasurer, for a breach of conditions of his bond must be brought by the county clerk at the direction of the state auditor or the county commissioners, and the petition must allege that it is so instituted. Albertson v. State, 9 Neb. 429 (2 N. W. 742, 892).

297. (1884.) A petition in an action on a county treasurer's bond, which contains no allegation that the treasurer had any of the county money in his hands during the term covered by the bond, is insufficient. Buffalo County v. Van Sickle, 16 Neb 363 (20 N. W. 261).

298. (1884.) A petition in an action on a county treasurer's bond, which contains no allegation that the treasurer had any of the county money in his hands during the term covered by the bond, lays no foundation for the introduction of evidence tending to prove that the treasurer committed a defalcation by taking money belonging to one fund to pay warrants drawn upon another fund, or by his taking money collected by him during one term of office, and applying it to purposes which should have been supplied by funds collected in a former term, and by him misapplied. Buffalo County v. Van Sickle, 16 Neb. 363 (20 N. W. 261).

299. (1891.) In an action on bond of county treasurer to recover taxes collected by him for the state, the petition held to state a cause of action. Valley County v. Robinson, 32 Neb. 254 (49 N. W. 356).

300. (1896.) In an action on the bonds of a county treasurer, the county pleaded the reception by him of the proceeds of the sales of certain bonds, the disbursement of a part of the funds, and the failure to turn over to his successor in office an amount of such money. The treasurer and his bondsmen admitted receiving the money, but as to his failure to turn any portion thereof over to his successor in office the answer was a general denial. The county introduced proof showing that the treasurer charged a per cent. of the amount of the proceeds of the bonds as collection fees, which sum he retained and did not pay to his successor. Held, Under the issues joined by the pleadings, to be sufficient to show a failure to comply with the obligations of his bonds and that it did not devolve upon the county to further show that the treasurer had received all the fees to which he was by law entitled for his services; that if there was any sum or sums due the treasurer from the county, the legitimate subject of set-off or counter-claim in his favor, or which he had allowed to remain in the county treasury in payment of the amount claimed by the county as before indicated, they were matters constituting a defense and should have been pleaded as such and proved. Stoner v. Keith County, 48 Neb. 279 (67 N. W. 311).

301. (1897.) In an action on the official bond of a county treasurer, answer held to plead an adjudication against the county by the allowance of a claim by the county board in its judicial capacity rather than an allowance of the accounts of such treasurer, and hence to state a defense. Trites v. Hitchcock County, 53 Neb. 79 (73 N. W. 215).

302. (1901.) In an action by a county on an official bond of a county officer for fees, an answer alleging a full settlement with the county commissioners presents a good defense, and in the absence of a reply entitles the defendant to a judgment on the pleadings. Douglas County v. Bennett, 61 Neb. 660 (85 N. W. 833).

——— Evidence.

303. (1879.) In an action against a county treasurer for moneys collected by him for the state, the original receipts received by him from the state treasurer, and used by him in his settlement with the county commissioners, prima facie control as to the amount paid by him to the state. Albertson v. State, 9 Neb. 429 (2 N. W. 742, 892).

304. (1884.) The payment by a county treasurer, in his third term, of warrants drawn against the several funds during his second term, held, under the circumstances disclosed by the evidence, no evidence of defalcation during the third term. Buffalo County v. Van Sickle, 16 Neb. 363 (20 N. W. 261).

305. (1893.) In an action on a county clerk's official bond to recover fees collected by him while in office he may prove that the county board appointed a deputy and fixed his salary, and that the deputy actually rendered the services, even if there is no record of such order in the minutes of the county board. Ragoss v. Cuming County, 36 Neb. 375 (54 N. W. 683).

——— Amount of recovery.

306. (1897.) In an action on the bond of a county clerk, the sureties are liable for interest on a claim for fees retained by him in excess of his salary, though the county made no demand upon him for payment of the excess. Hazelet v. Holt County, 51 Neb. 716 (71 N. W. 717).

307. (1902.) In an action by a county against a county treasurer and his bondsmen to recover funds alleged to have been converted by the treasurer, it is not error to compute interest on such funds from the date at which, under the terms of the statute and the official bond, the funds should have been accounted for and turned over to the successor in office of such treasurer. Thomssen v. Hall County, 63 Neb. 777 (89 N. W. 389; 57 L. R. A. 303).

Sale.

309. (1897.) The question of the title to the land attempted to be sold by the commissioners, and the validity of the conveyance or deed, were but incidental to the main one of the validity of the sale and must follow its decision, hence were not so involved in the consideration and adjudication of the claim before the commissioners as to present the question of their effect on the jurisdiction to hear and pass thereon. Stenberg v. State, ex rel. Keller, 50 Neb. 127 (69 N. W. 849).

——— Submission of question to popular vote.

310. (1889.) The language of section 30 of part 1, chapter 18, of the Compiled Statutes, held to require a number of votes equal to two-thirds of all the votes cast upon any one question, or for all of the candidates for any one office voted for, or to be filled, at the election at which is submitted a question of selling the public grounds or buildings of a county, to be cast in favor of such proposition, in order to the adoption of such proposition. State, ex rel. Mann, v. Anderson, 26 Neb. 517 (42 N. W. 421).

311. ((1889.) The "two-thirds of the votes cast" at an election, as provided for by section 30 of chapter 18, Compiled Statutes, means two-thirds of the votes cast at the election. State, ex rel. Mann, v. Anderson, 26 Neb. 517 (42 N. W. 421).

312. (1895.) The provision of section 24, chapter 18, Compiled Statutes, that county boards shall not sell the public grounds of any county without having first submitted the question to the electors thereof, is mandatory and an express limitation upon the powers of the several counties. Douglas County v. Keller, 43 Neb. 635 (62 N. W. 60).

313. (1895.) A sale of the public property of a county made without the consent of a majority of the electors voting at an election authorized by law, is a nullity and passes no title to the purchaser. Douglas County v. Keller, 43 Neb. 635 (62 N. W. 60).

314. (1895.) Where a county board offers for sale the public property of the county, claiming as authority for such action the consent of a majority of the electors expressed at a general election, a purchaser at such sale in an action to recover the price paid (the sale having been adjudged void for want of authority), will not be chargeable with constructive notice of the fact that the proposition to sell was in fact defeated. Douglas County v. Keller, 43 Neb. 635 (62 N. W. 60).

315. (1896.) The mere segregating by the county board of the fifty acres from the poor-farm tract and the platting thereof into blocks and lots, did not confer power upon the county commissioners to sell such lots until first empowered to make such sale in the mode indicated by section 24, article I, chapter 18, Compiled Statutes. Stenberg v. State, ex rel. Keller, 48 Neb. 299 (67 N. W. 190).

316. (1897.) The requirements of section 30, article I, chapter 18, Compiled Statutes, in regard to the proportion of votes which must have been cast in favor of a proposition submitted at an election, to work its adoption, held applicable to the submission of a proposition to sell the public grounds of a county. Stenberg v. State, ex rel. Keller, 50 Neb. 127 (69 N. W. 849).

317. (1897.) The act passed during the legislative session of 1887 entitled "An act to amend section 23 of an act entitled 'An act concerning counties and county officers,' approved March 1, A. D. 1879," did not repeal the succeeding section 24 of the act of 1879, as dependent upon section 23; neither did it repeal section 24 by implication. (Session Laws, 1887, p. 350, ch. 26.) Stenberg v. State, ex rel. Keller, 50 Neb. 127 (69 N. W. 849).

318. (1897.) The determination of whether or not the proposition to sell the public grounds of the county received the required number of votes to work its adoption, was not a matter for the official determination of the county board. The authority to make the sale depended upon it appearing from the abstract of the votes made during the official canvass of the returns of the election and filed with the county clerk that in favor of the proposition the requisite number of votes had been cast. As no official finding of the board which attempted the sale was necessary, the action of the county board which subsequently entertained and passed upon the claim of purchasers at the sale for repayment of the consideration, the claim being based on the void character of the sale for lack of authority in the commissiners to make it, did not involve a review of reversal of the finding of the former board. Stenberg v. State, ex rel. Keller, 50 Neb. 127 (69 N. W. 849).

Construction of public buildings.

319. The act approved February 26, 1889, to amend the second division of section 25 of chapter 18 of Compiled Statutes of 1887, relating to county buildings and offices, as amended by act of March 31, 1887, held, to be constitutional and valid from the date of passage. (1888) State, ex rel. Burnham, v. Babcock, 23 Neb. 128 (36 N. W. 348); (1889) Fenton v. Yule, 27 Neb. 758 (43 N. W. 1140); (1889) Baird v. Todd, 27 Neb. 782 (43 N. W. 1143); (1889) State v. Partridge, 29 Neb. 158 (45 N. W. 290).

320. (1889.) Designation of the ground upon which a public building is to be erected in proposition for erection thereof, is mere surplusage, unless it appear plainly that voters were misled thereby. Fenton v. Yule, 27 Neb. 758 (43 N. W. 1140).

321. (1889) The act of February 26, 1889, by amending section 25, chapter 18, Compiled Statutes 1887, also amends by implication section 30 of the same chapter, and the vote therein required for the erection of public buildings, is to be understood as changed from two-thirds to a simple majority, though said section verbally remains as before. Fenton v. Yule, 27 Neb. 758 (43 N. W. 1140); (1890) State v. Partridge, 29 Neb. 158 (45 N. W. 290).

Record books.

322. (1892.) The record books of a county are purchased and paid for by the county and owned by it, although they may relate to private transactions between individuals. Toncray v. Dodge County, 33 Neb. 802 (51 N. W. 235).

Court reports distributed to county judges.

323. (1900.) Under the provisions of section 20, chapter 19, Compiled Statutes, the supreme court reports distributed to county judges belong to the office and not to the individual. Clifford v. Hall County, 60 Neb. 506 (83 N. W. 661; 50 L. R. A. 733).

324. (1900.) A county as a municipal corporation has no such interest in or right of possession to the reports of the supreme court, distributed to county judges in accordance with law, as will authorize it to maintain replevin proceedings against one who wrongfully retains possession of the same. Clifford v. Hall County, 60 Neb. 506 (83 N. W. 661; 50 L. R. A. 733).

Rental of offices.

325. (1898.) Where a county rents rooms for one of its officers and puts him in possession thereof with the records and property pertaining to his office, it is bound to pay the stipulated rental so long as such officer continues in possession. Dean v. Saunders County, 55 Neb. 759 (76 N. W. 450).

B. Contracts.

Specific performance of contract by county to purchase lands, see Specific Performance, § 38.

Claims by contractors for compensation, see post, § 606.

Contracts at meetings of board away from county seat, see ante, § 109.

Employment of person to examine accounts of officers, see ante, §§ 267, 268.

Limitation on power to incur indebtedness, see post, §§ 404-409.

Contract to prevent competition in bids for public contracts, see Contracts, §§ 133-135.

Liabilities for necessaries furnished to pest house, see Health, § 3.

Contracts for repair or construction of highway, see Highways, §§ 155-157.

Compelling award of contract to lowest bidder, see Mandamus, §§ 193-203.

Compelling letting contract to bidder for publishing tax list, see Mandamus, §§ 208, 209.

Formal requisites.

326. (1880.) A county is not liable on a contract entered into by the commissioners with another to grade an approach to a bridge where such contract was made verbally and not while the board was in public session. Merrick County v. Batty, 10 Neb. 176 (4 N. W. 959).

327. (1895.) Where a contract was made by plaintiff and the county board whereby the former was to construct a bridge before the act requiring counties to build and keep all bridges repaired went into effect, an action for extra work ordered by the commissioners cannot be maintained when the petition does not show that such extra work was ordered after the above statute took effect, and that the proper proceedings had been complied with by the board in awarding such contract. Tullock v. Webster County, 46 Neb. 211 (64 N. W. 705).

328. (1904.) Unless the statute regulating the letting of contracts for the furnishing of county supplies is strictly complied with, the proceeding and consequent contract will be void. Woodruff v. Welton, 70 Neb. 665 (97 N. W. 1037).

329. (1907.) A resolution adopted by a county board whereby a particular newspaper is designated as the one in which delinquent tax list shall be published does not constitute a contract between the county and the newspaper publishers. World Publishing Co. v. Douglas County, 79 Neb. 849 (113 N. W. 539).

Compliance with vote authorizing contract.

330. (1902.) Where county commissioners, acting for a precinct which has voted bonds in aid of internal improvements under section 14, chapter 45, Compiled Statutes, have entered into a contract differing substantially as to the parties thereto or terms thereof from that voted upon, it is not binding upon the municipality. Keith County v. Ogallala Power & Irrigation Co., 64 Neb. 35 (89 N. W. 375).

331. (1902.) Where bonds are voted by a precinct in aid of a work of internal improvement under section 14, chapter 45, Compiled Statutes, the terms of the proposition set forth in the notice of election are to be taken as defining the authority of the county commissioners in contracting with reference to such improvement. Keith County v. Ogallala Power & Irrigation Co., 64 Neb. 35 (89 N. W. 375).

Proposals or bids.

332. (1882.) Bids for supplies, when filed, must conform to advertisement; bid to furnish articles "at what it cost to lay them down," held indefinite; omission of two articles of insignificant value, held not to invalidate bid. State, ex rel. Whedon, v. York County, 13 Neb. 57 (12 N. W. 816).

333. (1882.) All bids for books, blanks, and stationery, for supplies for county officers must be filed with the county clerk on or before the first day of January. The commissioners have no authority to consider a bid filed thereafter. State, ex rel. Whedon, v. York County, 13 Neb. 57 (12 N. W. 816).

334. (1882.) A bid for supplies must state the price for which the articles will be furnished, a proposal to furnish them for "what it costs to lay them down" being insufficient. State, ex rel. Whedon, v. York County, 13 Neb. 57 (12 N. W. 816).

335. (1882.) The omission of two articles of insignificant value from a bid to furnish supplies will not invalidate it. State, ex rel. Whedon, v. York County, 13 Neb. 57 (12 N. W. 816).

336. (1886.) The county board may reject all bids for supplies; but upon doing so it is its duty to again advertise for the furnishing of supplies. State, ex rel. Globe Publishing Co., v. Saline County, 19 Neb. 253 (27 N. W. 122).

337. (1886.) A taxpayer, in a proper case, may compel the county board to take the necessary steps to let the contract for supplies to the lowest bidder. State, ex rel. Globe Publishing Co., v. Saline County, 19 Neb. 253 (27 N. W. 122).

338. (1894.) Under the provisions of section 83, chapter 78, Compiled Statutes, an increase of $500 from the contract price for the erection of a bridge cannot be enforced when such increase was contracted for without bids being required or made in respect thereto. Townsend v. Holt County, 40 Neb. 852 (59 N. W. 381).

339. (1897.) The question of the responsibility of the bidder for public contracts was not left for the general judgment and discretion of the board. State, ex rel. Woodruff-Dunlap Co., v. Cornell, 52 Neb. 25 (71 N. W. 961).

——— Advertisement.

340. (1885.) Where a county board advertises for bids for the erection of a public bridge which will cost to exceed $500, in a newspaper printed and of general circulation in the county, and also with a considerable circulation throughout the state, but one advertisement continued for four consecutive weeks is necessary. Brown v. Merrick County, 18 Neb. 355 (25 N. W. 356).

341. (1885.) Where the county board act in good faith, their decision as to the selection of a paper in which to advertise cannot be attacked in a collateral proceeding. Brown v. Merrick County, 18 Neb. 355 (25 N. W. 356).

——— Plans and specifications.

342. (1875.) The commissioners have no authority to require each bidder for the erection of a bridge to accompany his bid with his own plans and specifications, they adopting such plans as they see fit and accepting the bid accompanying the same, no opportunity being given to others to bid on such plans. Such conduct opens the door to corruption, favoritism, and fraud; and a contract awarded on such a letting is void. State v. Buffalo County, 4 Neb. 150.

343. (1903.) The adoption of plans and specifications is a necessary preliminary to advertising for and letting a contract by the year for the building of bridges, and such advertising and letting must be in accordance with the plans and specifications so adopted. Clark v. County of Lancaster, 69 Neb. 717 (96 N. W. 593).

——— Duty to let to lowest bidder.

344. (1875.) In letting contracts for the erection of county buildings, and for improvement of such roads as may be of general necessity, county commissioners must award the same to the lowest responsible bidder. State v. Buffalo County, 4 Neb. 150.

345. (1875.) Public bridges are part of public roads, and the provisions of section 16, chapter 67, General Statutes, requiring contracts for the construction of roads to be let to the lowest competent bidder, apply to the letting of contracts for the erection of bridges; and it is the duty of county commissioners to adopt plans and specifications, in advance of the letting, as a basis on which bids may be received. State v. Buffalo County, 4 Neb. 150.

346. (1875.) Where precinct or county bonds are placed at the disposal of county commissioners for the purpose of erecting a wagon bridge over the Platte river, it is their duty to let the contract for the construction of the same to the lowest responsible bidder; failing to do so, such bidder or a taxpayer of the county may maintain an action to compel them to so award the contract. State v. Buffalo County, 4 Neb. 150.

347. (1880.) Contracts for the permanent improvement of roads must be let to the lowest responsible bidder. Merrick County v. Batty, 10 Neb. 176 (4 N. W. 959).

348. (1886.) In the absence of fraud, where the board rejects all bids, the lowest bidder cannot compel the awarding of the contract to himself. State, ex rel. Globe Publishing Co., v. Saline County, 19 Neb. 253 (27 N. W. 122).

349. (1886.) In procuring the supplies for a county mentioned in section 149, chapter 18, Compiled Statutes, where the cost exceeds $200, it is the duty of the county board, after due notice, to let the contract to the lowest bidder that can give adequate security for the performance of the agreement and there is no authority to let such contracts in any other way. State, ex rel. Globe Publishing Co., v. Saline County, 19 Neb. 253 (27 N. W. 122).

350. (1888.) There being no law making it the duty of a county board to let by contract to the lowest bidder the printing and publishing of the delinquent tax list, or the proceedings of such board, a mandamus will not be issued from this court to compel such action by them. State, ex rel. Huse, v. Dixon County, 24 Neb. 106 (37 N. W. 936).

351. (1893.) Where the cost of a county bridge exceeds $100, contracts for the erection of the same must be let to the lowest competent bidder after due advertisement stating the general character of the work. State, ex rel. Scott, v. Cunningham, 37 Neb. 687 (56 N. W. 485).

Indemnity against liens

352. (1895.) It was stipulated in a contract for the erection of a county court house that the contractor should receive eighty-five per cent. of the money earned thereunder, payable on monthly estimates; also "that in each case of payment a certificate shall be obtained by the contractor from the clerk of the county that he has carefully examined the records and finds no liens or claims against said work or an account of said contractor. Neither shall there be any lawful claims against the contractor in any manner, from any source whatever, for work or material furnished on said work." Held, A promise by the contractor to satisfy the lawful claims of laborers and material-men, and that the sureties on his bond for the faithful performance of the contract are liable for a breach of such condition. Korsmeyer Plumbing & Heating Co. v. McClay, 43 Neb. 649 (62 N. W. 50).

Annual or continuing contracts.

353. (1903.) There is no authority for the letting of annual contracts for repairing of bridges or for the doing of such repairing under an annual contract, where the amount exceeds $100. Clarke v. County of Lancaster, 69 Neb. 717 (96 N. W. 593).

353*a*. (1908.) Where a county board has entered into a contract for the construction of bridges for the period of one year, and before the expiration thereof attempts to supersede the same with a contract much less favorable to the county, damages to the taxpayers will be presumed. Whedon v. Lancaster County, 80 Neb. 682 (114 N. W. 1102).

353*b*. (1908.) Where the county board has a yearly contract for the construction of all bridges in the county, it may not make another to take effect before the expiration of the first; but it may, if the occasion for building a bridge arises during the life of the yearly contract, require it to be done thereunder, even though the same cannot be completed within the term thereof. Whedon v. Lancaster County, 80 Neb. 682 (114 N. W. 1102).

353*c*. (1908.) Under the statute authorizing the county board to make yearly contracts for the construction of all bridges, such contracts may not be made for a shorter period than one year, nor may the county board evade the provisions of the statute by terminating before its expiration a contract made for one year. Whedon v. Lancaster County, 80 Neb. 682 (114 N. W. 1102).

Contracts with county officials.

354. (1877.) County commissioners have no authority either personally or by agent to engage in the business of erecting public bridges on the credit of the county. The law defines their power and points out the mode of its exercise, and that mode is exclusive. Follmer v. Nuckolls County, 6 Neb. 204.

355. (1904.) Section 51, article I, chapter 18, Compiled Statutes, which prohibits county officers from being pecuniarily interested in or receiving the benefit of any contract executed by the county for the furnishing of supplies or any other purpose, is general in its nature, and applies to all county officers and to every class of contracts. Wilson v. Otoe County, 71 Neb. 435 (98 N. W. 1050).

Implied contracts.

356. (1902.) One who furnishes labor and materials for the creation of a public work, in good faith, but in the absence of a contract such as is required by statute, is entitled to recover their reasonable value, in the absence of a statute expressly or by necessary implication denying such right. Cass County v. Sarpy County, 66 Neb. 476 (97 N. W. 352).

www.libtool.com.cn

Estoppel to deny validity of contract.

357. (1884.) Parties dealing with a county, or other municipal corporation, are under peculiar obligation to act with fairness and good faith, as such corporation can only act through its records and other instrumentalities given it by law. Such persons are bound to take notice of such records, not only what they show, but also, if such be the case, of their failure to show, matters material to the business in hand. Merriam v. Otoe County, 15 Neb. 408 (19 N. W. 479).

358. (1901.) A party who has received the benefits of an executed contract entered into with the county at a meeting of the county board is estopped from denying the legality of the session at which such contract was entered into. Green v. Lancaster County, 61 Neb. 473 (85 N. W. 439).

Enjoining letting of contract or payment.

359. (1877.) Where a contract provides for the payment of the cost of a bridge in excess of the $9,000 received from county bonds, on warrants drawn on the bridge and road fund, a petition that alleges the want of sufficient money in the road fund to justify such contract is fatally defective if no mention is made of the condition of the special bridge fund. Clark v. Dayton, 6 Neb. 192.

360. (1904.) The fact that a taxpayer seeking to enjoin a county board from letting a contract for the furnishing of supplies, is also a member of a company competing with the person to whom such contract has been attempted to be let, does not estop him from maintaining the proceeding. Woodruff v. Welton, 70 Neb. 665 (97 N. W. 1037).

Validity of particular contracts.

361. (1879.) County commissioners have no power to purchase a private bridge over a stream within the county; and an award made under such a contract is a nullity. McCann v. Otoe County, 9 Neb. 324 (2 N. W. 707).

362. (1882.) A contract between county commissioners and a firm of attorneys whereby the latter were to assist in placing on the tax list all property erroneously left off, for which they were to receive as compensation 25 per cent. of the taxes so collected, is void. Platte County v. Gerrard, 12 Neb. 244 (11 N. W. 298).

363. (1886.) A contract between an attorney and the county commissioners to procure the refunding of certain bonds issued to a railroad, for a per cent. of the proceeds is void, as being without authority on the part of such commissioners to enter into such a contract. State, ex rel. Webster, v. Lancaster County, 20 Neb. 419 (30 N. W. 538).

364. (1907.) A county attorney, who is required by law and by the order of the county board to institute actions for the benefit of the county, may bind the county to pay the reasonable and necessary expense incident thereto. Christner v. Hayes County, 79 Neb. 157 (112 N. W. 347).

Rights and remedies of contractor.

365. (1877.) The publisher of the delinquent tax list for a county has no right to withhold from the treasurer the proof of publication, which the statute requires him to deliver to that officer, because of the non-payment of his fees, and if he do so it is good ground for a refusal of the county commissioners to allow his account for publishing the list. Brown v. Otoe County, 6 Neb. 111.

366. (1877.) Although a contract was illegal by reason of the failure of the commissioners to advertise for proposals under a plan and specifications, still the contractor having completed the bridge, and the same having been accepted by the commissioners, he is entitled to compensation. Under such circumstances payment will not be enjoined at the suit of taxpayer. Clark v. Dayton, 6 Neb. 192.

367. (1880.) When the state conveys land to a county in aid of the erection of a bridge and the same is conveyed to a contractor who erects the bridge as required, he may recover the value of the bridge when his title to the land fails in consequences of the state having no title to the same. Clark v. Saline County, 9 Neb. 516 (4 N. W. 246).

368. (1886.) Where a county employs an agent to refund its bonds, and before the revocation of the authority he necessarily performs labor and expends money in the prosecution of the business from which the county derives benefit, he is entitled to a fair compensation for said labor, and the repayment of said money. State, ex rel. Webster, v. Lancaster County, 20 Neb. 419 (30 N. W. 538).

C. County Expenses and Charges.

Liability of county for redemption money paid to treasurer, see post, § 560.

Expenses connected with administration of justice.

369. (1906.) Where the judgment of conviction of one found guilty of a felony is suspended and he is remanded to the sheriff of the county where the alleged crime was committed, the county is liable for the cost of keeping the prisoner between the time of the first conviction and his final acquittal. Brown County v. Lampert, 76 Neb. 536 (107 N. W. 746).

370. (1906.) The county from which a change of venue in a criminal case is taken is not liable to the county in which the trial is had for the fees of such jurors of the regular panel as did not sit upon the trial of that case. Dawes County v. Sioux County, 77 Neb. 567 (110 N. W. 378).

Necessity of presentation of claim, see post, § 597.

371. (1877.) A county is not liable at the suit of a private person for damages occasioned by reason of the erection of a county jail in near proximity to his residence. Neither is it liable if the jail be kept in so filthy a condition as to become an actual nuisance to those persons living near it. Wehn v. Commissioners of Gage County, 5 Neb. 494 (25 Am. Rep. 497).

Injuries from construction of highway or ditch.

372. (1897.) Although an action for tort does not lie against a county, in the absence of a statute authorizing it, yet since section 21, article I, constitution, provides that property shall not be taken or damaged for public use without compensation, an action will lie against a county, by a property owner, a portion of whose property is appropriated and the balance injured by the grading of a highway. Douglas County v. Taylor, 50 Neb. 535 (70 N. W. 27).

373. (1901.) Nominal damages can not be recovered in an action against a county upon an allegation that the same were sustained by reason of the grading of a street adjacent to the property of the owner on the theory that the board of county commissioners were guilty of a breach of official duty to plaintiff in not serving notice and having an assessment of damages and benefits. Omaha Loan & Trust Co. v. Douglas County, 62 Neb. 1 (86 N. W. 936).

374. (1903.) A county is not liable to landowners for injuries caused by the discharge of surface water from ditches constructed by the county authorities diverting such water from its natural course. Stocker v. Nemaha County, 4 Unof. 230 (93 N. W. 721).

375. (1905.) A county is not liable in damages to an individual landholder for the negligent diversion of surface water in the improvement and construction of its public highways. Hopper v. Douglas County, 75 Neb. 329 (106 N. W. 330).

Negligence in maintenance of highways.

376. (1903.) Counties governed by the township organization act of 1895 are relieved from the duty and liability to construct, maintain and keep in repair ordinary highways and culverts. Goes v. Gage County, 67 Neb. 616 (93 N. W. 923).

377. (1903.) The township in counties under township organizations are bound to maintain and repair the highways within the township districts, and are liable for injuries resulting from defects in such highways. Goes v. Gage County, 67 Neb. 616 (93 N. W. 923).

378. (1903.) Counties which have adopted the ownership organization act, were thereby taken out of the operation of section 4 of chapter 7 of the Session Laws of 1889, making counties liable for damages sustained by means of the insufficiency or want of repair of highways and culverts. Not being liable at common law for a failure to properly construct and repair the same, no recovery can be had against a county so governed for damages sustained by reason of such failure or neglect. Goes v. Gage County, 67 Neb. 616 (93 N. W. 923).

Negligence in maintenance of bridges.

379. (1880.) At common law a county is not liable for the failure of the commissioners to keep a bridge in repair. Woods v. Colfax County, 10 Neb. 552 (7 N. W. 269). 269).

380. (1880.) A county is not liable in damages at common law, or under the Revised Statutes of 1866, for injuries caused by the breaking down of a public bridge, which was caused by the negligence of the county commissioners. Woods v. Colfax County, 10 Neb. 552 (7 N. W. 269). [Overruled by statute. 36 Neb. 141; 50 Neb. 535; 53 Neb. 755.]

381. (1893.) A person injured by the failure of a county board to keep a public bridge in repair may maintain an original action for damages against the county in any court of competent jurisdiction. He is not required to present his claim to the county board for allowance or rejection. Hollingsworth v. Saunders County, 36 Neb. 141 (54 N. W. 79).

382. (1895.) A county is liable in damages for injuries resulting from an unsafe county bridge, though no notice of the defect, not discernible from the ordinary tests county. Raasch v. Dodge County, 43 Neb. 508 (61 N. W. 725).

383. (1904.) The county cannot be held as an insurer of those who have occasion to use a county bridge. If the defect in a bridge, from which injury and damages occur to the person using it, is a latent defect, not discernible from the ordinary tests and examinations usually made to ascertain its condition, and if those charged with such examination have not been negligent in their duty in that regard, the county cannot be held liable for damages caused by such latent and undiscovered defects. Johnson County v. Carmen, 71 Neb. 682 (99 N W. 502).

384. (1905.) A party attempting to cross a bridge which is a part of a highway in the absence of notice to the contrary, or facts sufficient to put him on inquiry, has a right to assume that it is reasonably safe for the accommodation of the public at large in the various occupations pursued in the locality where the bridge is situated. City of Central City v. Marquis, 75 Neb. 233 (106 N. W. 221).

385. (1906.) One who is injured by reason of a defective bridge while riding in a private vehicle may recover from a county otherwise liable, notwithstanding the negligence of the driver, which may have contributed to produce the injury, the injured party being free from negligence and having no authority or control over the driver. Loso v. Lancaster County, 77 Neb. 466 (109 N. W. 752).

Acts of officers and agents.

386. (1877.) There is nothing in the legislation of this state, either directly or by reasonable implication, recognizing the liability of counties to private actions for the neglect of their officers in the performance of public duties. Wehn v. Commissioners of Gage County, 5 Neb. 494 (25 Am. St. Rep. 497).

387. (1879.) It is the duty of the treasurer of each county to take all proper measures to secure to each school district the amount of liquor licenses to which it is entitled. But the county is in no way answerable for the acts of the treasurer in respect of this duty. School District No. 2 v. Saline County, 9 Neb. 403 (2 N. W. 877).

388. (1903.) A county is only liable under section 131 of the revenue act for the mistakes and wrongful acts of its own officers —the officers through whom its taxes are levied and collected. Kelley v. Gage County, 67 Neb. 6 (93 N. W. 194).

389. (1905.) A county is not liable in damages for the negligent acts of its officers, unless made so by legislative enactment. Hopper v. Douglas County, 75 Neb. 329 (106 N. W. 330).

Limitation of amount of indebtedness.

391. (1872.) The provisions of the constitution, that "the state shall never contract any debt for works of internal improvement, or be a party in carrying on such works," and that the debts of the state "shall never in the aggregate exceed fifty thousand dollars," refer to the state alone, and not to municipal corporations. Hallenbeck v. Hahn, 2 Neb. 377.

www.libool.com.cn

392. (1881.) The limitation upon county indebtedness, imposed by section 2, article XII of the constitution, relates solely to such as is created to aid in the construction of works of internal improvement. De Clerq v. Hager, 12 Neb. 185 (10 N. W. 697).

393. (1891.) A county board cannot lawfully incur an indebtedness against the county in excess of the taxes levied for the current year. State, ex rel. Wessel, v. Weir, 33 Neb. 35 (49 N. W. 785).

——— Warrants.

394. (1880.) No warrant can be drawn on the treasury in excess of the fifty per cent. unless there are funds therein available for the payment of that particular warrant. State, ex rel. Cody, v. Colfax County, 10 Neb. 29 (4 N. W. 377).

395. (1891.) As under the present statute each warrant must specify the amount levied and appropriated to the fund upon which it is drawn, and the amount already expended of such sum, and any warrant drawn after seventy-five per cent. of the amount levied for the year is exhausted, where there are no funds in the treasury for the payment of the same, shall not be chargeable against the county, it will be impossible for any county to issue warrants in excess of the amount authorized by the statutes now in force without amending such statutes. In re House Roll 284, 31 Neb. 505 (48 N. W. 275).

396. (1891.) A county board cannot lawfully issue warrants in any one year, exceeding in the aggregate 85 per cent. of the levy, unless there is money in the treasury for the payment of the same. State, ex rel. Wessel, v. Weir, 33 Neb. 35 (49 N. W. 785).

397. (1902.) Warrants drawn upon the general fund of the county, in excess of 85 per cent. of the levy for that fund, and where there is no money in the treasury belonging to that fund, are void. Bacon v. Dawes County, 66 Neb. 191 (92 N. W. 313); (1903) National Life Ins. Co. v. Dawes County, 67 Neb. 40 (93 N. W. 187).

——— Bonds.

398. (1878.) Where a county votes aid to a railroad company in excess of the amount authorized by law, it is simply a void act, conferring no authority on the county commissioners to issue the bonds of the county in any amount whatever. Reineman v. Covington, C. & B. H. R. Co., 7 Neb. 310.

399. (1882.) The amount for which a county may vote its bonds is not affected by the precinct bonds voted at the same time which if considered would make the amount exceed that for which the county could vote bonds. Jones v. Hurlburt, 13 Neb. 125 (13 N. W. 5).

400. (1882.) Unpaid interest on former donations made by a county to railroads should not be considered in making up aggregate which county is entitled to vote for another donation. Jones v. Hurlburt, 13 Neb. 125 (13 N. W. 5).

401. (1885.) Under the provisions of the act of 1873, as amended in 1883, authorizing counties to issue bonds "to pay the outstanding unpaid bonds, warrants, and indebtedness of a county," such bonds, with those previously issued and unpaid, cannot exceed 10 per cent. of the assessed valuation of the county. State v. Babcock, 18 Neb. 141 (24 N. W. 556).

402. (1889.) County bonds for internal improvements, creating a public debt prior to November 1, 1875, to be satisfied by levy on the total valuation of the county, are not an assessment of taxes within the limitation of section 5 of article IX of the constitution, but are an "indebtedness existing at the adoption of the constitution," not subject to the restriction "of one and a half dollars per one hundred dollars valuation" of the total levy of the board of county commissioners. Baird v. Todd, 27 Neb. 782 (43 N. W. 1143); (1890) State, ex rel. Powers, v. Partridge, 29 Neb. 158 (45 N. W. 290).

403. (1904.) Where, by the terms of the proposition voted on, the bonds are not to be issued until a future time and on the happening of a future event, the assessed valuation of the county last made before such bonds are actually issued should be taken as the basis in limiting the amount of such issue. Colburn v. McDonald, 72 Neb. 431 (100 N. W. 961).

Contracts involving indebtedness or expenditure.

404. (1877.) Section 16 of the road law, as construed by this court in the case of People v. Commissioners of Buffalo County, 4 Neb. 150, applies to contracts for erection of bridges as well as to those for the improvement of roads, and prohibits the commissioners from entering into a contract for the expenditure of more than double the amount of money on hand to the credit of the bridge fund. Clark v. Dayton, 6 Neb. 192.

405. (1902.) Under the provisions of section 34, article I, chapter 18, Compiled Statutes 1899, it is not unlawful for a county board, after estimate made and prior to its meeting as a board of equalization, to anticipate the levy for the current year, and contract an indebtedness upon a particular fund within the estimate, although there is at the time no money in the treasury to the credit of such fund for the payment of the indebtedness, if in contracting such indebtedness the board remain within the limits prescribed by the constitution and the statutes. Austin Mfg. Co. v. Brown County, 65 Neb. 60 (90 N. W. 929). [Modified. Clark v. Lancaster County, 69 Neb. 717.]

406. (1903.) It is unlawful for the county board of any county in this state to make any contracts for or incur any indebtedness against the county in excess of the tax levied for county expenses during the current year. Austin Mfg. Co. v. Colfax County, 67 Neb. 101 (93 N. W. 145).

407. (1903.) A contract by county commissioners to purchase a road scraper, to be paid for in three payments from tax levies for three following years, is void. Austin Mfg. Co. v. Colfax County, 67 Neb. 101 (93 N. W. 145).

408. (1903.) The limitation on the power of the county board to contract for bridge building to cost a sum not greater than the amount of money on hand in the county bridge fund derived from a levy of previous years and two-thirds of the levy of the current year, gives no authority to the board to take into account the levy of the current calendar year prior to the making of such levy. Until it is made there is no "levy of the current year." Clark v. County of Lancaster, 69 Neb. 717 (96 N. W. 593).

409. (1907.) In mandamus to compel repair of bridges, the court will not presume, when the whole contracted sum is in excess of the statutory allowance, that any one contract is in excess of the amount allowed, and therefor void. State, ex rel. Ellis, v. Switzer, 79 Neb. 78 (112 N. W. 297).

Borrowing money.

410. (1896.) A county has sufficient authority to raise money otherwise, and an agreement of its treasurer that if money is advanced by a bank for certain county purposes, such bank shall be relieved to a certain extent from liability to the county as a depository is not enforceable. Commercial State Bank of Neligh v. Antelope County, 48 Neb. 496 (67 N. W. 465).

Custody and deposit of funds.

411. (1888.) A county treasurer may be compelled, by mandamus, to pay over money belonging to a city. State, ex rel. Grable, v. Roderick, 23 Neb. 505 (37 N. W. 77).

412. (1894.) Chapter 50, Session Laws, 1891, relating to the keeping of state and county funds, is not in conflict with the constitution, either as containing more than one subject, or because of its providing that it shall not apply until the expiration of the terms of office of the state treasurer and of the several county treasurers in office at the time of its passage. Hopkins v. Scott, 38 Neb. 661 (57 N. W. 391).

413. (1894.) The mere fact that a county treasurer has assumed to designate the bank in which he himself shall deposit current funds of the county, and to fix the penal sum of the necessary bond, confers upon the bank designated no right by mandamus to compel the county board to approve the sufficiency of the sureties on such bond. State, ex rel. First Nat. Bank, v. Owen, 41 Neb. 651 (59 N. W. 886).

414. (1897.) Where a county treasurer collected taxes to pay a school district bond and, without the knowledge and consent of the holder, lost the money by depositing it in insolvent banks, it was held that the loss did not fall on the bondholder, and that the collection of a tax levied on the property of the district to pay the amount due on the bond would not be restrained by injunction. Jacobson v. Cary, 51 Neb. 762 (71 N. W. 723).

415. (1898.) A county treasurer is a trustee of moneys which come into his hands by virtue of his office, and if he wrongfully deposits them to his own credit in a bank aware of their character, which afterwards becomes insolvent, the county is entitled to have its claim decreed a first lien upon any asset of the insolvent which it shows is the product of its moneys. State v. Bank of Commerce, 54 Neb. 725 (75 N. W. 28).

416. (1898.) The county treasurer of Hall county wrongfully deposited to his own credit in the Bank of Commerce $15,860.18 of public funds, the bank being aware of their character. The bank failed, having in its vaults only $140 in cash. It had used the treasurer's deposit in paying off its other depositors. It was not shown that any part of this public money was represented by or embraced in any asset of the bank which came into the possession of its receiver. Held, (1) That the county was entitled to reclaim the $140 as being part of the trust fund; (2) that it was not entitled to have its claim against the insolvent bank decreed a first lien upon the other assets thereof. State v. Bank of Commerce, 54 Neb. 725 (75 N. W. 28).

417. (1900.) A county treasurer is the custodian of the funds of his office and it is for him, within the provisions and restrictions of the depository act, to deposit and withdraw, as the requirements in the discharge of his official duties shall make necessary, all the funds coming into his custody as such treasurer. State, ex rel. Irrigators Bank, v. Whipple, 60 Neb. 650 (83 N. W. 921).

418. (1904.) The act of 1903, amending sections 18 and 20 of article III, chapter 18, and section 3*a* of article XIII, chapter 83 of the Compiled Statutes of 1901, so far as it relates to the deposit of county funds, was constitutionally adopted and is a valid law. State, ex rel. First Nat. Bank of Atkinson, v. Cronin, 72 Neb. 636 (101 N. W. 325).

419. (1907.) The amount received by the county treasurer as interest from depository banks should be credited to the general fund of the county immediately on its receipt, and can be disbursed only as other moneys belonging to that fund. State, ex rel. Mann, v. Clark, 79 Neb. 263 (112 N. W. 857).

Disbursements in general.

420. (1880.) The money with which to meet the obligations of a precinct is raised and paid out with the same formality, and through precisely the same agencies, as are the ordinary county funds, and, except where there is some special provision of statute authorizing it, payment therefrom can be legally made only on "warrants issued by the county commissioners according to law." State v. Thorne, 9 Neb. 458 (4 N. W. 63).

421. (1881.) The county treasurer not authorized to pay out county school fund until it has been apportioned by county superintendent. Donnelly v. Duras, 11 Neb. 283 (9 N. W. 45).

General fund.

422. (1882.) The "general fund" of a county, as its name implies, is one devoted to a variety of uses, and its expenditure is left mainly to the discretion of the board of county commissioners. Burlington & M. R. R. Co. v. Lancaster County, 12 Neb. 324 (11 N. W. 332).

Special funds.

423. (1876.) There is no such fund known to the law as a "court house fund." Buildings of this kind should be paid for out of the fund derived from the ordinary revenue, and warrants drawn on that fund. Commissioners of Jefferson County v. State, 5 Neb. 127.

424. (1877.) County funds must be devoted exclusively to the object for which the levy was made. Clark v. Dayton, 6 Neb. 192).

425. (1882.) The county commisisioners have no authority to divert a sinking fund tax from the purpose for which it was raised and transfer it to the general fund. Union P. R. Co. v. Dawson County, 12 Neb. 254 (11 N. W. 307).

426. (1882.) The act of 1875 merely authorizes the transfer to the general fund of the surplus sinking fund, after the debt for which it was levied is extinguished. Union P. R. Co. v. Dawson County, 12 Neb. 254 (11 N. W. 307).

427. (1898.) The provisions of chapter 89, article I, Compiled Statutes, examined, and held to require the formation of a special ditch fund, which alone is available for payments for improvements made entirely within a single county, under the provisions of said article, and that for the purpose of making such payments moneys can only be obtained from the county general fund by borrowing as provided by section 26 of said article. Hall v. State, ex rel. Renard, 54 Neb. 280 (74 N. W. 590).

428. (1902.) Section 4, article III, chapter 18 of the Compiled Statutes of 1901, provides that the county commissioners may appropriate to the general fund certain money that remains on hand in the county treasury, not required for the purposes for which it was levied. The levy made for another fund can not be transferred by the county board to the general fund before the tax has been collected. Bacon v. Dawes County, 66 Neb. 191 (92 N. W. 313).

429. (1903.) Allowance of a claim and drawing a warrant for its payment against the "advertising fund" of a county will be deemed, in an action on such warrant, equivalent to allowance of the claim, and drawing a warrant against the county general fund. Such so-called "advertising fund" is legally only a part of the general fund, known by a term which designates its source. Dakota County v. Bartlett, 67 Neb. 62 (93 N. W. 192).

Warrants and certificates of indebtedness.

Necessity for presentation for examination and adjustment, see post, § 600.

430. (1880.) A warrant, in fact, is a mere certificate of indebtedness, although negotiable in form, as it does not partake of the character of negotiable paper so far as to estop the county from availing itself of any defense it may have against it, even in the hands of a bona fide purchaser for value without notice. Union P. R. Co. v. Buffalo County, 9 Neb. 449 (4 N. W. 53).

431. (1882.) Warrants of county are not commercial paper. Burlington & M. R. R. Co. v. Clay County, 13 Neb. 367 (13 N. W. 628); (1903) National Life Ins. Co. v. Dawes County, 67 Neb. 40 (93 N. W. 187).

——— Power to issue.

432. (1879.) A county clerk has no authority to draw warrants upon the county treasury. Such warrants must be drawn by the chairman of the board of county commissioners, be countersigned by the county clerk, and be sealed with the county seal. State, ex rel. Conger, v. Maccuaig, 8 Neb. 215.

433. (1879.) Section one of chapter two, General Statutes, to the extent that it authorized county clerks to draw warrants upon the county treasury, was repealed by implication by the "act concerning counties and county officers," passed February 27, 1873. State, ex rel. Conger, v. Maccuaig, 8 Neb. 215.

434. (1879.) County commissioners have no authority to issue certificate of indebtedness after the exhaustion of a levy. Union P. R. Co. v. Buaffalo County, 9 Neb. 449 (4 N. W. 53).

435. (1880.) County commissioners have no authority to draw warrants after 50 per cent. of the amount levied for the year is exhausted, unless there is money in the treasury to the credit of the particular fund for the payment of the same. If they do so they are personally liable thereon. State, ex rel. Cody, v. Colfax County, 10 Neb. 29 (4 N. W. 377).

436. (1880.) The authority to draw warrants on a fund which had been levied but not collected was derived entirely from the statute, and that the limitations in the act of 1879 applied to all claims. State, ex rel. Hayes, v. Richardson County, 10 Neb. 198 (4 N. W. 967).

437. (1885.) Under the provision of the constitution of the state, that "no money shall be drawn from the treasury, except in pursuance of a specific appropriation made by law," the auditor of public accounts has no authority to draw a warrant upon the treasury for commissions due county treasurers for money collected by them and paid into the treasury, unless a specific appropriation had been made for that purpose. State, ex rel. Graham, v. Babcock, 18 Neb. 221 (24 N. W. 683).

438. (1897.) It is only after the allowance of a claim upon the treasury of a county that a warrant in payment thereof may be properly drawn. Wilson v. State, ex rel. Plasters, 53 Neb. 113 (73 N. W. 456).

——— Funds against which warrants may be drawn.

439. (1894.) Under the revenue law of 1869 and the road law of 1866 (Gen. Stats., 1873, pp. 896, 950) money in the hands of a county treasurer belonging to the road districts of a county was held in trust by him for such road districts, and such money was at the disposal of the supervisors of said road districts, and at their disposal only, and the chairman of the board of county commissioners of a county had no authority to draw warrants against such funds. Oakley v. Valley County, 40 Neb. 900 (59 N. W. 368).

——— Issuance, requisites and validity.

440. (1903.) The purpose of the requirement that county warrants shall express on their face the amount levied and appropriated to the fund upon which they are drawn, and the amount already expended of such sum, is to guard against the overdrawing of warrants against the fund. National Life Ins. Co. v. Dawes County, 67 Neb. 40 (93 N. W. 187).

www.libtool.com.cn

——— Interest.

441. (1883.) Where county warrants issued in compliance with a judgment on mandamus, which provided for interest at 10 per cent., contain no recital as to the rate of interest which they are to draw, and after their issue, but before they were presented for payment, an act was passed reducing the rate of interest on county warrants to 7 per cent., mandamus will not issue to compel the clerk to pay 10 per cent. thereon, since the right to such interest cannot be tested in such a proceeding. State, ex rel. Clark, v. Scott, 15 Neb. 147 (17 N. W. 263).

——— Validity of unauthorized warrants.

442. (1883.) Warrants issued by county commissioners for a purpose not within their jurisdiction are void, and do not bind the county. Walsh v. Rogers, 15 Neb. 309 (18 N. W. 135).

443. (1883.) Where one purchases what purports and is supposed to be the genuine warrants of a county, but which are void because issued without authority, the purchaser, upon discovering their true character, may at once rescind the contract of purchase, and recover the price paid for them, and in order to recover from the seller the price paid for them, it is not necessary for the purchaser to first seek their payment from the county. Walsh v. Rogers, 15 Neb. 309 (18 N. W. 135).

444. (1894.) Warrants issued by a board of county commissioners for a purpose not within their jurisdiction are void and do not bind the county. Walsh v. Rogers, 15 Neb. 309, followed. Oakley v. Valley County, 40 Neb. 900 (59 N. W. 368).

——— Payments.

445. (1871.) An act requiring the holder of a county warrant, which is overdue and which draws 10 per cent. per annum interest, to present the same at the treasury, and surrender it and take in its place bonds drawing interest at 7 per cent. per annum payable at a distant day, is unconstitutional as impairing the obligation of a contract. Brewer v. Otoe County, 1 Neb. 373.

446. (1880.) Warrants must be paid in the order of their entry upon the record. State, ex rel. Cody, v. Colfax County, 10 Neb. 29 (4 N. W. 377).

447. (1881.) Money raised by a tax levy cannot be used for the payment of county warrants of a preceding year, unless such warrants were included in the estimate made by the county commissioners, or, at least, until all expenditures contemplated by the estimate have been paid. State, ex rel. Hitchcock, v. Harvey, 12 Neb. 31 (10 N. W. 406).

448. (1898.) A county board cannot be compelled to provide, through a use of the county general fund, for the payment of a warrant which, upon its face, requires that payment thereof, when made, shall be charged to a certain designated ditch fund. Hall v. State, ex rel. Renard, 54 Neb. 280 (74 N. W. 590.)

449. (1907.) A county warrant issued against the general fund of a certain year is not payable out of the general fund of a subsequent year, unless included in the estimate of the latter year, or unless, after deducting the items included in such estimate, sufficient remains to pay such warrant. State, ex rel. Mann, v. Clark, 79 Neb. 263 (112 N. W. 857).

——— Actions.

450. (1871.) The statute of limitations does not limit the time within which proceedings to enforce the payment of county warrants shall be instituted. Brewer v. Otoe County, 1 Neb. 373.

451. (1871.) The cause of action upon a county warrant does not accrue when the warrant is issued, but only when the money for its payment is collected, or time sufficient for the collection of the money has elapsed. Brewer v. Otoe County, 1 Neb. 373).

452. (1899.) County warrants in suit disclosed that they were for road district funds. They were in terms in favor of private individuals and by law should have been to road supervisors. A petition which contained no statement that they were issued to road supervisors held defective and open to attack by general demurrer. Pollock v. Stanton County, 57 Neb. 399 (77 N. W. 1081).

453. (1902.) No right of action accrues upon county warrants until there is money for their payment in the fund upon which they are drawn, or the proper authorities have had opportunity to provide funds to pay them, and have neglected to do so.

Bacon v. Dawes County, 66 Neb. 191 (92 N. W. 313).

454. (1903.) Where the record contains a general admission that county warrants were "issued" by and signed by the proper county authorities, a subsequent objection to them, and motion to strike them from the record because not bearing the county seal, is too late. Dakota County v. Bartlett, 67 Neb. 62 (93 N. W. 192).

455. (1903.) Mere testimony by a county clerk to the conclusion that prior to a certain time the general fund levy of that year was exhausted, and the last warrant drawn on it bore date about a month before the one sued on, does not require a reversal of a finding that the latter is valid. Such a conclusion does not overcome the presumption that officers do their duty. Dakota County v. Bartlett, 67 Neb. 62 (93 N. W. 192).

456. (1905.) An action to recover a money judgment upon a county warrant may be maintained when the money for the payment of such warrant has been collected and wrongfully applied by the county authorities to the payment of other claims against the county. Thurston County v. McIntyre, 75 Neb. 335 (106 N. W. 217).

Mandamus to compel issue of warrant.

457. (1898.) One whose claim against a county has been duly allowed by the county board may compel the issuance of a warrant for its payment. State, ex rel. Seth Thomas Clock Co., v. County Commissioners, 53 Neb. 767 (74 N. W. 254).

458. (1902.) The board of county commissioners should draw a warrant in favor of the judgment creditor for the amount of any judgment tax collected, when demand is made by him therefor, and when any considerable amount has been collected, and is in the hands of the county treasurer applicable to the payment of the judgment; and the duty of the treasurer to pay such warrant may be enforced by mandamus. State, ex rel. Clark & Leonard Investment Co., v. Scott's Bluff County, 64 Neb. 419 (89 N. W. 1063).

459. (1902.) When an application for a writ of mandamus and the alternative writ to require the chairman of the county commissioners to sign a warrant drawn against an "advertising" fund contain no allegation of money in the treasury or tax levied, or appropriation, for such fund, they state no cause of action. Patterson v. State, 2 Unof. 765 (89 N. W. 989).

Power to issue bonds.

Bonds in aid of bridge construction, see Bridges, §§ 4-11.

460. (1877.) Counties have no authority at common law to issue bonds. They are quasi corporations, mere governing agencies, charged with certain objects of necessary local administration. Hamlin v. Meadville, 6 Neb. 227.

461. (1877.) A vote of the people of a county authorized the county commissioners to subscribe for stock in a railroad company, does not empower the commissioners to donate the bonds of the county to a railroad company. Hamlin v. Meadville, 6 Neb. 227).

462. (1879.) Counties and precincts have no authority to issue bonds unless authorized to do so by express statute. Dundy v. Richardson County, 8 Neb. 508; (1885) State, ex rel. Wiant, v. Babcock, 18 Neb. 141 (24 N. W. 556).

463. (1891.) The legislature has authority to pass a law to authorize the county board of any county of the state "to issue bonds of the county to an amount not exceeding 3 per cent. of the assessed valuation of the county for the year 1890, and not exceeding the sum of $20,000, for the purpose of raising money to purchase grain to be planted and sown for the purpose of raising crops for the year 1891, and for feeding teams used in raising said crops." The question of issuing such bonds must be submitted to the people in the mode provided in sections 27 and 28, article I, chapter 18, Compiled Statutes, and they cannot be issued on a mere petition for the issuance thereof signed by a majority of the electors of the county. In re House Roll 284, 31 Neb. 505 (48 N. W. 275).

464. (1898.) An appropriation of the money arising from the sale of the bonds issued under chapter 24, laws 1897, for the erection of suitable buildings, and maintaining the same, and a county exhibit at the Trans-Mississippi and International Exposition to be held in the city of Omaha in 1898, is for a public purpose or use, and not in violation of the constitution. State, ex rel. Douglas County, v. Cornell, 53 Neb. 556 (74 N. W. 59; 68 Am. St. Rep. 629; 39 L. R. A. 513).

——— Statutory provisions.

465. (1872.) The act of the legislature of February 15, 1869, authorizing any county or city of this state to issue bonds to aid the construction of railroads, does not conflict with the provision of the Bill of Rights, that "the property of no person shall be taken for public use without just compensation therefor." Hallenbeck v. Hahn, 2 Neb. 377.

466. (1872.) (U. S.) A statute authorizing a county to issue bonds in aid of a railroad company, beyond the limits of the state, is constitutional. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Otoe County, 2 Neb. 496.

467. (1876.) The legislature has full constitutional power to pass an act authorizing the commissioners of Jefferson county to provide funds for the payment of certain outstanding warrants, by issuing bonds, the proceeds from the sale of which to pay off the warrants issued for the construction of a court house. Commissioners of Jefferson County v. State, 5 Neb. 127.

468. (1878.) The act of February 15, 1869, as amended March 3, 1870, and February 17, 1875, enabling counties, cities, and precincts to issue bonds to aid works of internal improvement, in force at the adoption of the new constitution, is not in conflict with section 2, article XII of that instrument, and is still in full force. Reineman v. Covington, C. & B. H. R. Co., 7 Neb. 310.

469. (1878.) Section 2 of article XII of the constitution is to be taken as restrictive only upon the exercise of legislative discretion in the authorization of county and municipal indebtedness in aid of railroads and other internal improvements. It fixes a boundary beyond which the legislature cannot go, but within which its authority is still supreme. Reineman v. Covington, C. & B. H. R. Co., 7 Neb. 310.

470. (1879.) The act approved February 14, 1873, "to authorize Falls City precinct to issue bonds to aid in the construction of a courthouse for Richardson county" is in conflict with section 1, article VIII of the constitution of 1867, and bonds issued thereunder are void. Dundy v. Richardson County, 8 Neb. 508.

471. (1880.) The act entitled "An act to enable counties, cities, and precincts to borrow money on their bonds, or to issue bonds, to aid in the construction of works of internal improvement in this state, and to legalize bonds already issued for such purpose," approved February 15, 1869, and the act amendatory thereof, approved March 3, 1870, are constitutional. Dawson County v. McNamar, 10 Neb. 276 (4 N. W. 991).

472. (1887.) Section 14, chapter 45, Compiled Statutes 1885, authorizing precincts, townships, etc., to issue bonds in aid of works of internal improvement and providing a method therefor, is constitutional. State v. Babcock, 21 Neb. 187 (31 N. W. 682).

473. (1888.) Chapter 28, laws 1887, authorizing county boards to borrow money and issue bonds for the payment thereof, to erect or otherwise provide the necessary county buildings, is constitutional. State, ex rel. Burnham, v. Babcock, 23 Neb. 128 (36 N. W. 348).

474. (1890.) The act of the legislature, approved February 26, 1889, amending the second division of section 25 of chapter 18 of the Compiled Statutes of 1887, relating to county buildings and offices, as amended by the act of March 31, 1887, having been considered in the case of State, ex rel., etc., v. Babcock, 23 Neb. 128, and held valid and in force from its passage and not obnoxious to sections 11 and 15 of article III of the constitution of this state, held, that the seventy-five bonds of the denomination of $1,000 each, issued by the county of Adams and dated July 1, 1889, for the purpose of erecting a court house and jail, are issued in accordance with law and are valid, and that it is the duty of the county clerk to levy the tax for the payment of the annual interest and a sinking fund for the final redemption of the principal according to the tenor of the bonds, and for this purpose the relator will take his writ. State v. Partridge, 29 Neb. 158 (45 N. W. 290).

475. (1895.) Statutes which authorize the issuance of bonds by the minor political subdivisions of the state are subjects for strict construction when an interpretation is necessary, and where from a careful study and analysis of the whole act and its several parts the meaning and intent is doubtful, the doubt should be resolved in favor of the public or taxpayers. State, ex rel. School District, v. Moore, 45 Neb. 12 (63 N. W. 130).

476. (1898.) Chapter 24, laws 1897, authorizing counties to participate in interstate expositions, to issue bonds for such purpose, and to provide for the levy of a tax for their payment, does not contravene the constitution on the ground that the object of the statute is to advance individual interest merely and not to promote the public welfare. State, ex rel. Douglas County, v. Cornell, 53 Neb. 556 (74 N. W. 59; 68 Am. St. Rep. 629; 39 L. R. A. 513).

477. (1898.) The amendment to section 134, article I, chapter 18, Compiled Statutes, pertaining to the issuing of bonds for county funds, made by the legislature of 1883 (Session Laws 1883, p. 191) is germane to the original section, and fairly within the scope of the title of the amendatory act. State, ex rel. Douglas County, v. Cornell, 54 Neb. 72 (74 N. W. 432).

——— In aid of internal improvements.

478. (1876.) County bonds issued for the purpose of erecting a public bridge over the Platte river, conformable in all respects to the laws of this state, authorizing the issuance of bonds in aid of works of internal improvement, are valid. Union P. R. Co. v. Colfax County, 4 Neb. 450).

479. (1876.) A bridge over the Platte river is a work of internal improvement, and from the course of legislation, in this state, it is clear that aid may be granted in its erection by the issuance of county bonds, by grant from the state, donations, or by two counties bordering on the river uniting in the enterprise. Union P. R. Co. v. Colfax County, 4 Neb. 450).

480. (1876.) In determining what constitutes a work of internal improvement it must be tested by the benefits to be derived by the public, and not by its extent or cost. Union P. R. Co. v. Colfax County, 4 Neb. 450.

481. (1878.) Under the act of February 15, 1869, enabling counties, cities and precincts to issue bonds in aid of internal improvements, precincts may issue such bonds to aid in the construction of bridges for public use, and when such bonds are issued in conformity with the provisions of the law, they are valid, and the collection of taxes, levied on the property of the precinct to pay the interest thereon, may be legally enforced. South Platte Land Co. v. Buffalo County, 7 Neb. 253. [Changed by statute. 19 Neb. 159; 26 Neb. 705.]

482. (1878.) Until the adoption of the constitution of 1875, the whole matter of municipal aid to works of internal improvement was within the sole control of the legislature, and subject to no restraint other than such as that body saw fit to impose. Reineman v. Covington C. & B. H. R. Co., 7 Neb. 310.

483. (1880.) Authority for a county to issue bonds for the building of a court house is given in sections 21 and 22, chapter 9, Revised Statutes 1866, and such bonds are valid. Dawson County v. McNamar, 10 Neb. 276 (4 N. W. 991).

484. (1880.) The building of a county courthouse is not a work of internal improvement, nor was it contemplated by the internal improvement act (Gen. Stats., 448) authorizing the issue of bonds in aid of internal improvements. Dawson County v. McNamar, 10 Neb. 276 (4 N. W. 991).

485. (1881.) Bridges built by a county upon the line of its highways and wholly within such county, are not "works of internal improvement," according to the constitutional meaning of that term; and money raised and expended therefor cannot be counted as a donation to a work of internal improvement. De Clerq v. Hazer, 12 Neb. 185 (10 N. W. 697).

486. (1883.) A water grist-mill erected for public use, the rates of toll to be determined by the county commissioners and being subject to regulation by the legislature, is a work of internal improvement within the meaning of the act of 1869, and bonds voted to aid its construction are valid. Traver v. Merrick County, 14 Neb. 327 (15 N. W. 690; 45 Am. Rep. 111).

487. (1883.) The test of determining the character of an improvement is the use of which it is designated. Traver v. Merrick County, 14 Neb. 327 (15 N. W. 690; 45 Am. Rep. 111).

488. (1884.) There is no statute in this state authorizing the voting of aid to steam grist mills, and bonds voted for that purpose are invalid. State v. Adams County, 15 Neb. 568 (20 N. W. 96).

489. (1884.) A bridge across the Platte river is a work of internal improvement, and county bonds voted to erect the same are valid. Nor does the fact that the entire bridge is within the limits of the county voting the bonds, change its character or affect the validity of the bonds. State v. Keith County, 16 Neb. 508 (20 N. W. 856).

490. (1885.) Under the provisions of the law of 1879, now in force, county commissioners have no authority to issue county bonds for the purpose of raising money to build a jail, and a vote of the people of the county instructing them to issue such bonds will confer no authority so to do. State, ex rel. Grady, v. Lincoln County, 18 Neb. 283 (25 N. W. 91).

491. (1886.) Bonds issued pursuant to law for grist mill propelled by water are valid. State, ex rel. Perry, v. Clay County, 20 Neb. 452 (30 N. W. 528).

492. (1890.) A proposition to issue bonds to a railway company is in the nature of a contract, upon the acceptance of which both parties are bound by the agreement. Wullenwaber v. Dunigan, 30 Neb. 877 (47 N. W. 420; 13 L. R. A. 811).

493. (1902.) A grant of power to a county to issue bonds in aid of internal improvements, if seasonably challenged, should be strictly construed; but after a long acquiescence in the exercise of the power, and after the consideration has fully passed and bonds are issued under an apparent authority which have passed into the hands of purchasers for value, a more liberal rule of construction in favor of the existence of the power should be applied. Washington County v. David, 2 Unof. 649 (89 N. W. 737).

——— Submission of question to popular vote.

494. (1876.) (U. S.) In the absence of a provision to the contrary in the statute authorizing the issue, county commissioners may issue bonds in aid of a railroad, without first submitting to a vote the question of issuing the bonds and levying a tax to pay them. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Otoe County, 2 Neb. 496.

495. (1877.) Where the vote is regular in all other respects it is not a valid objection to bonds issued in aid of bridges constructed that the proposition provided for the collection of tolls. Fremont Building Ass'n v. Sherwin, 6 Neb. 48.

496. (1877.) Where the question of issuing bonds to any railroad company was submitted to the people of a county, but without accompanying the same by a proposition to levy a tax to meet the liability incurred, bonds issued in pursuance of such vote were void. Hamlin v. Meadville, 6 Neb. 227.

497. (1877.) In voting aid to works of internal improvement, it is not necessary that the proposition shall contain a provision for the levy of a tax to pay the principal of the bonds, but simply to pay the interest as it falls due. As to the principal, it is made the duty of the proper officers to levy taxes to pay it independently of any vote on that subject; but this cannot be done until after the year 1880. Fremont Building Ass'n v. Sherwin, 6 Neb. 48.

498. (1880.) County bonds may be issued to raise money to meet current expenses in case of a deficit in the county revenue, but to do this, they must be first authorized by "a vote of the electors of the county." Dawson County v. McNamar, 10 Neb. 276 (4 N. W. 991).

499. (1882.) A proposition to vote county bonds in aid of railroads, to be given to two persons or corporations in the alternative is insufficient to pass title, unless power of election is given. Jones v. Hurlburt, 13 Neb. 125 (13 N. W. 5).

500. (1882.) The proposition submitted to the legal voters of Seward county for the issuance and donation of $36,000 of its bonds to aid in the construction of the railroad therein named, contained the following provision: "Provided said county commissioners shall be authorized by a two-thirds vote of the legal voters of said county of Seward to issue and give thirty-six thousand dollars of Seward county bonds to aid the construction of said line of railroad, and be also authorized by a two-thirds vote of the legal voters of the precincts through which said line of railroad shall be located, to issue and give thirty-nine thousand dollars to aid the construction of said line of railroad, which amount of precinct bonds shall be made up as follows: 'P' precinct, three thousand dollars," etc. Held, To vitiate the election, and the issuance and delivery of the bonds voted thereon enjoined, since such a condition cannot be attached to such a proposition. Jones v. Hurlburt, 13 Neb. 125 (13 N. W. 5).

501. (1883.) No vote of the people is necessary in the issue of bonds under the act of February 19, 1877, to authorize the issue of county bonds. State v. Alexander, 14 Neb. 280 (15 N. W. 365).

502. (1887.) Under the provisions of section 14, chapter 45, of the Compiled Statutes of 1885, to authorize the county commissioners to call a special precinct election for the purpose of voting bonds in a precinct in aid of works of internal improvements, etc., a petition signed by not less than fifty freeholders of such precinct must be presented to such county commissioners, setting forth the nature of the work contemplated, the amount of bonds sought to be voted, the rate of interest, and the date when the principal and interest shall become due. An election called and held without such petition is of no validity. State v. Babcock, 21 Neb. 187 (31 N. W. 682).

503. (1887.) The provision of section 28 of chapter 18 of the Compiled Statutes of 1885, which requires the adoption of the amount of tax to be levied to meet the liability incurred by the issuance of bonds, is mandatory and must be complied with in the issuance of precinct bonds under the provisions of chapter 58 of the Session Laws of 1885, as well as in the issuance of county bonds. State, ex rel. Berry, v. Babcock, 21 Neb. 599 (33 N. W. 247).

504. (1887.) Proposition to vote bonds in aid of a railroad must designate the donee; an alternative proposition to issue to one of two named corporations, even if adopted by the voters, is ineffectual to authorize issuance of bonds. State, ex rel. Gardner, v. Roggen, 22 Neb. 118 (34 N. W. 108); (1890) North v. Platte County, 29 Neb. 447 (45 N. W. 692) 26 Am. St. Rep. 395).

505. (1888.) On the 7th day of October, 1880, the county commissioners of Otoe county submitted to the voters of said county the proposition to issue the coupon bonds of said county for the purpose of refunding the bonded indebtedness of said county, and called a special election, for the purpose of voting thereon, said election to be held on the 2d day of November following. At that time the commissioners had no authority to submit such proposition, nor to call such election. Held, That the vote adopting said proposition was without legal effect. State, ex rel. Otoe County, v. Babcock, 23 Neb. 802 (37 N. W. 645).

506. (1890.) Where petitioners to an election were induced, by misrepresentations, to sign, such facts may be set up in a suit to enjoin the issuing of the bonds. Wullenwaber v. Dunigan, 30 Neb. 877 (47 N. W. 420; 13 L. R. A. 811).

507. (1890.) At least fifty freeholders, residents of the township, etc., must sign a petition to the county commissioners requesting them to call an election in said township for the purpose of voting aid for a railway. Without a petition so signed by the full number required, the commissioners have no jurisdiction. Wullenwaber v. Dunigan, 30 Neb. 877 (47 N. W. 420; 13 L. R. A. 811).

508. (1895.) Under section 14, chapter 45, Compiled Statutes, it is necessary, to confer jurisdiction upon county commissioners to order the holding of an election on a proposition to vote bonds by a township in aid of a work of internal improvement, that a petition should be presented to such commissioners signed by not less than fifty freeholders of such township. Hoxie v. Scott, 45 Neb. 199 (63 N. W. 387).

509. (1897.) After the commissioners of Otoe county had unlawfully established a precinct including all of the city of Nebraska City, they issued a call for an election in the so-called Nebraska City precinct, at which was to be submitted to vote of the electors thereof a proposition to issue bonds of the precinct in the sum of $40,000 to aid in the construction of a railroad. This call was issued under the provisions of section 14, chapter 45, Compiled Statutes, by which precincts were authorized to issue bonds for such purpose if the proposition so to do be approved by a specified majority of the votes of the electors at an election called and held pursuant to and in accordance with the provisions of the section. The proposition received the requisite majority and the commissioners issued, or caused the bonds to be issued. Held, That there was no precinct in existence which could, by its vote, authorize the issuance of bonds in its name and the bonds were void. Morton v. Carlin, 51 Neb. 202 (70 N. W. 966.

510. (1898.) An affirmative vote of two-thirds of all of those cast on the proposition is sufficient to carry county bonds issued under chapter 24, Session Laws 1897, for the purpose of making a county exhibit at an interstate exposition. State, ex rel. Douglas County, v. Cornell, 53 Neb 556 (74 N. W. 59; 68 Am. St. Rep. 629; 39 L. R. A. 513).

511. (1898.) A married woman who holds lands in fee is a "freeholder" within the meaning of the word as used in section 14, chapter 45, of the Compiled Statutes, relative to the signers of a petition calling an election and submission to the vote of the electors for the issuance of bonds in aid of works of internal improvements, it being therein prescribed that the signers shall be "freeholders." Cooley v. Jansen, 54 Neb. 33 (74 N. W. 391).

512. (1898.) Under section 134, article I, chapter 18, Compiled Statutes, a majority of all the votes cast at the election is sufficient for the adoption of a proposition to issue county funding bonds, where, by their issuance, the amount of the county indebtedness is not increased, and the rate of interest is reduced. State, ex rel. Douglas County, v. Cornell, 54 Neb. 72 (74 N. W. 432).

513. (1899.) Under section 27, article I, chapter 18, Compiled Statutes, providing that notice of a proposition submitted to the electors of a county to issue bonds to build a court house must be given "for four weeks in some newspaper published in the county," in case one is printed therein, the word "for," means "during," and the notice must be published for, or during, four weeks before the day of election. Four full weeks must elapse between the date of the first publication and the day fixed for the election. State v. Cherry County, 58 Neb. 734 (79 N. W. 825).

514. (1901.) A proposition to issue county bonds for internal improvement, and the result of the vote, must be entered on the records of the county, and notice of adoption must be published for two weeks in a newspaper in said county, if one be published therein, before such bonds can be legally issued. Wilbur v. Wyatt, 63 Neb. 261 (88 N. W. 499).

515. (1904.) A proposition to vote bonds to aid in the construction of a railroad or other work of internal improvement, otherwise in due form, will not be rendered void because it contains a clause authorizing the county to accept capital stock of the company. Colburn v. McDonald, 72 Neb. 431 (100 N. W. 961).

——— Refunding.

516. (1892.) In 1877 the legislature passed "An act to authorize the issue of county bonds in certain cases." This provided for issuing refunding bonds to replace bonds issued to railroad companies or any work of internal improvement. This act was carried into the Compiled Statutes of 1881 as sections 11, 12, and 13, chapter 45. In 1883 the legislature passed an act to authorize counties to issue refunding bonds, at not to exceed six per cent. interest, to replace other bonds previously issued by the county and then payable. Held, That the act of 1883 applied to all bonds previously issued by a county and then payable. State, ex rel. Seward County, v. Benton, 33 Neb. 823 (51 N. W. 140).

517. (1892.) Under the act of 1883, where a county has issued refunding bonds bearing interest at six per cent, it may, after such bonds are payable, issue other refunding bonds at a lower rate of interest, as four and one-half per cent, to replace them. State, ex rel. Seward County, v. Benton, 33 Neb. 823 (51 N. W. 140).

518. (1892.) County bonds issued to aid in the construction of works of internal improvement can be refunded only under the provisions of the act of February 28, 1883, entitled "An act to authorize counties to issue bonds for refunding their bonded indebtedness, and providing for registering and certifying the same, and for levying a tax to pay the interest and principal thereof." State, ex rel. Gage County, v. Benton, 33 Neb. 834 (51 N. W. 144).

519. (1904.) Chapter 8 of the laws of 1899, commonly known as the "Refunding Bond Act," as found in chapter 9 of the Compiled Statutes of 1903, provides for an appeal from the findings of the district court as to the validity of county bonds sought to be refunded, and authorizes the supreme court to make a finding and decision in such a proceeding which is binding upon the county board, the protestant and other parties to the record. Colburn v. McDonald, 72 Neb. 431 (100 N. W. 961).

520. (1904.) In an appeal from the findings of the district court as to the validity of county bonds sought to be refunded the supreme court should attempt to do no more than render a decision as to the validity of the bonds, and thereby affirm or reverse the finding of the district court as the case may be. It is not necessary to determine the effect of the decision as to innocent purchasers of the bonds, who are not parties to the record. Colburn v. McDonald, 72 Neb. 431 (100 N. W. 961).

Issuance, requisites and validity of bonds.

521. (1877.) The power to issue commercial paper must be conferred by statute. And such power must be exercised in the manner prescribed; but if the authority to issue the bonds existed at the time of their issuance, a mere irregularity in its exercise will not invalidate the bonds. Hamlin v. Meadville, 6 Neb. 227.

522. (1880.) A recital in county bonds that the same were issued under authority of the internal improvement act (Gen. Stats., 448) is not ground for declaring such bonds invalid, so long as ample authority was found elsewhere which had been observed. Dawson County v. McNamar, 10 Neb. 276 (4 N. W. 991).

523. (1880.) Although county bonds have been issued to run for a period longer than the ten years contemplated by statute, a court of equity will not hold them void for that reason, where there is no positive prohibition in the statute against a longer credit than ten years being given. Dawson County v. McNamar, 10 Neb. 276 (4 N. W. 991).

524. (1882.) Bonds properly voted in aid of railroad are not void because signed and sealed in adjoining county, although not delivered on account of service of writ of injunction. Jones v. Hurlburt, 13 Neb. 125 (13 N. W. 5).

525. (1887.) Bonds issued by a county as a donation to a railroad company are invalid unless they have endorsed thereon a certificate, signed by the secretary and auditor of state, showing that they were issued pursuant to law. State ex. rel. Gardner, v. Roggen, 22 Neb. 118 (34 N. W. 108).

526. (1895.) The antedating of county bonds, which were dated January 2 when in fact they were not issued until in April following, was not a substantial defect. State, ex rel. Hoffman, v. Moore, 46 Neb. 590 (65 N. W. 193; 50 Am. St. Rep. 626).

527. (1901.) Where an election was held on August 16 to vote on a proposition to issue county bonds to aid in the construction of an irrigation ditch, and on the 21st day of the same month notice was ordered published, and the bonds were issued on September 1, following, the bonds were illegally issued. Wilbur v. Wyatt, 63 Neb. 261 (88 N. W. 499).

528. (1902.) While a recital in bonds that they were ordered to be issued on a certain date would be notice of their invalidity to all persons acquiring them, if issued prior to the time fixed by law, the recital is not conclusive, but, if such was the fact, it may be shown that they were not ordered to be issued and were not issued until after the expiration of the statutory period. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co v. Dundy County, 3 Unof. 391 (91 N. W. 554).

Mandamus to compel issue of bonds.

529. (1876.) In an action of mandamus to compel county commissioners to issue bonds to replace outstanding warrants, any valid defense existing against the payment of the warrants should be set up by a statement of the facts constituting such defense in the answer. Commissioners of Jefferson County v. State, 5 Neb. 127.

Sale of bonds.

530. (1881.) Commissioners have no power to permit one bid for county bonds to be privately amended so as to make it better than another. State, ex rel. Clark, v. Douglas County, 11 Neb. 484 (9 N. W. 691).

531. (1881.) In a sale of county bonds the commissioners have no right to consider a bid proposing payment in anything except money. Certificates of deposit are not sufficient. State, ex rel. Clark, v. Douglas County, 11 Neb. 484 (9 N. W. 691).

532. (1881.) Where a notice inviting bids for county bonds proposed two plans, one for payment of the whole amount when the bonds were delivered, and one for payment in installments, a bid offering to pay in certificates of deposit payable at a future date is invalid. State, ex rel. Clark, v. Douglas County, 11 Neb. 484 (9 N. W. 691).

533. (1881.) Where one purchases void county warrants, illegally issued, he may recover back the price paid for them. Rogers v. Walsh, 12 Neb. 28 (10 N. W. 467).

Estoppel to deny validity of bonds or warrants.

534. (1886.) Where a county has issued refunding bonds in exchange for general bonds, in aid of the construction of a railroad, in the hands of a bona fide purchaser, it is estopped to deny the validity of the refunding bonds. State, ex rel. Leese, v. Wilkinson, 20 Neb. 610 (31 Neb. 376); (1887) State v. Dakota County, 22 Neb. 448 (35 N. W. 225).

535. (1902.) Where bonds of a county are issued without any authority, the subsequent conduct of the officers of the county toward bonds so issued cannot create an estoppel which will supply this want of original authority. Washington County v. David, 2 Unof. 649 (89 N. W. 737).

536. (1903.) A county warrant in excess of 85 per cent. of the levy against which it is drawn is void. The county board cannot estop the county to assert the invalidity of such warrant by indorsing on the warrant a false statement of the amount of the levy, which makes the warrant on its face appear to be within the statutory limit. National Life Ins. Co. v. Dawes County, 67 Neb. 40 (93 N. W. 187).

537. (1904.) A municipality ought not to be allowed to repudiate its bonds after the compromise of a suit, in which their validity was an issue, by which it received a substantial decrease of the interest rate thereon, and after it has paid the interest for thirty years and a part of the principal thereof, unless such bonds were absolutely void at the time they were issued. Colburn v. McDonald, 72 Neb. 431 (100 N. W. 961).

Registration of bonds.

538. (1883.) In registering and certifying bonds issued under the act "To authorize the issue of county bonds in certain cases," approved February 19, 1877, the auditor and secretary of state have no right to review the action of their predecessors upon the original bonds. State v. Alexander, 14 Neb. 280 (15 N. W. 365).

539. (1884.) Where a county presents its refunding bonds to the auditor for registration, it must pay one-fourth of one per cent upon the dollar for each bond registered. State v. Wallichs, 16 Neb. 110 (20 N. W. 27).

540. (1888.) It is not the duty of the auditor of state to register or certify bonds issued by virtue of an illegal election, and a writ of mandamus will not issue to require him to do so. State, ex rel. Otoe County, v. Babcock, 23 Neb. 802 (37 N. W. 645).

541. (1903.) By section 10, chapter 9, Compiled Statutes, 1901, it is made the duty of proper county officers, when bonds are issued, to make registration in a book kept for that purpose of all of the several transactions connected with the issuance of such bonds as therein enumerated, and transmit to the auditor of state a certified statement of such registry for his information. State, ex rel. Niles, v. Weston, 67 Neb. 175 (93 N. W. 182).

Payment of bonds.

542. (1879.) The money with which to pay precinct bonds is raised and disbursed with the same formality, and through precisely the same agencies, as are ordinary county funds; and the county treasurer is authorized to make payment of such bonds only on warrants issued by the county commissioners. Dell v. Oppenheimer, 9 Neb. 454 (4 N. W. 51).

Actions on bonds.

543. (1886.) Where bonds are issued by a county for the erection of a grist mill on the Little Blue river, after erection of the mill, and there is no question made in the pleadings that the mill is not propelled by water, it will be presumed that it is propelled. State, ex rel. Perry, v. Clay County, 20 Neb. 452 (30 N. W. 528).

Taxation.

Levy and collection of taxes in general, see Taxation.

544. (1883.) County warrants that have not been paid out of a former levy cannot be included in an estimate and levy of taxes in excess of the maximum fixed by law; where the ordinary tax is insufficient the remedy is to fund the debt. State, ex rel. Bank, v. Gosper County, 14 Neb. 22 (14 N. W. 801).

545. (1891.) Where bonds are issued by a county in favor of works of internal improvement, they become a charge against the county, the principal and interest to be paid by a levy upon the property therein, whether such property was in the county when the bonds were voted or was afterwards brought in. And where additional territory has been added to a county after voting on such bonds, the taxable property in such additional territory is liable, like other property in the county, to taxation, for the payment of said obligations. Chicago, St. P., M. & O. R. Co. v. Cuming County, 31 Neb. 374 (47 N. W. 1121).

546. (1897.) The discretion and action of a county board in levying taxes to the constitutional limit should not be controlled by the court. State, ex rel. Rock County v. Sheldon, 53 Neb. 365 (73 N. W. 694).

547. (1897.) When taxes levied by a county exceed the maximum permitted by the constitution, the excess is levied for an illegal and unauthorized purpose. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Nemaha County, 50 Neb. 393; (1899) Chase County v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 58 Neb. 274 (78 N. W. 502).

548. (1899.) The constitution permits a levy of taxes by a county in excess of 15 mills on the dollar valuation in only two classes of cases: First, to pay debts existing when the constitution was adopted; and secondly, when authorized by a vote of the people. This brings within the general limitation taxes levied to pay judgments rendered against the county on debts not contracted before the constitution was adopted, when such additional levy has not been authorized by vote of the people. Chase County v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 58 Neb. 274 (78 N. W. 502).

549. (1901.) An order of a county board allowing a claim against a county is not a judgment, within the meaning of the statute providing for the levy of a tax to pay judgments against the county. Custer County v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 62 Neb. 657 (87 N. W. 341).

——— Levy for special purposes.

550. (1879.) A provision in the constitution that "the legislature may vest the corporate authorities of cities, towns, and villages with power to make local improvements by special assessments, or by taxation of property benefits," merely prescribes the rule of apportionment of such special taxes, and does not prohibit the legislature from conferring the power to make local improvements by special assessments or taxation upon property benefited, upon other municipal corporations than those designated. State, ex rel. Abbott, v. Dodge County, 8 Neb. 124 (30 Am. Rep. 819).

551. (1885.) The "act concerning counties and county officers," approved March 7, 1879, did not take effect till September 1 of that year. The provisions of section 26 of that act have no application to valid county bonds issued before September 1, 1879. Burlington & M. R. R. Co. v. Saunders County, 17 Neb. 318 (22 N. W. 560).

552. (1892.) The county board is authorized to make a special levy to provide for the payment of judgments against the county since the levy for general expenses. Jackson v. Washington County, 34 Neb. 680 (52 N. W. 169).

553. (1892.) The act approved February 18, 1867, entitled "An act to provide for the payment of judgments against municipal corporations," article V, chapter 77, Compiled Statutes, entitled "Revenue," is not repealed by the provisions of section 77 of the general revenue law. Jackson v. Washington County, 34 Neb. 680 (52 N. W. 169).

554. (1899.) By section 77, article I, chapter 77, Compiled Statutes 1899, the power conferred on the board of county commissioners to levy a road tax is limited to the levy of such tax for county purposes. Libby v. State, ex rel. Davis, 59 Neb. 264 (80 N. W. 817).

555. (1901.) Where county commissioners have made a levy of nine mills for general fund purposes, they cannot levy a local tax in excess of the statutory limit without a vote of the people. Grand Island & W. C. R. Co. v. Dawes County, 62 Neb. 44 (86 N. W. 934).

556. (1902.) Where a county board has levied the full amount of tax allowed by law for a county general fund, and also designedly levies a larger amount of bridge tax than is necessary for use in that fund, and immediately transfers a large part thereof to said general fund, the tax so unnecessarily levied and transferred is levied for an illegal and unauthorized purpose and is void. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Lincoln County, 66 Neb. 228 (92 N. W. 208).

557. (1902.) It is not a valid objection to a tax levied against the taxable property of a precinct in a county not under township organization, for local improvements, that such improvements are for the use of the public at large. Union P. R. Co. v. Howard County, 66 Neb. 663 (97 N. W. 280).

——— Division of county after levy.

558. (1882.) In June, 1872, Kearney county, which till then had been attached to Adams county for election, revenue and judicial purposes, was organized, and prepared to transact its own business. On the 13th of July following, the commissioners of Adams, as they had been accustomed to do, and in good faith, made a formal levy of a tax for Kearney county, upon the property therein, which levy the commissioners of Kearney adopted and caused to be extended upon their own tax books. Held, That this adoption of the levy by the commissioners of Kearney county made it their own; and, although irregular, was not a valid objection to the collection of the tax in an equitable point of view. Hull v. Kearney County, 13 Neb. 539 (14 N. W. 529).

559. (1886.) Where an unorganized county is attached to an organized one for election, judicial, and revenue purposes, and the proper officers of the organized county levy taxes upon the property of the unorganized one, and prior to the time such taxes become due the unorganized county becomes organized by the election and qualification of the proper officers, such taxes are to be paid to the treasurer of the new county. Morse v. Hitchcock County, 19 Neb. 566 (27 N. W. 637).

——Liability of county for redemption money paid to treasurer.

560. (1881.) A county is not liable for money paid to the county treasurer for the redemption of land sold for taxes, unless same has been paid into county treasury. Eaton v. Cass County, 11 Neb. 229 (9 N. W. 60); (1881) Richardson County v. Meyer, 11 Neb. 357 (9 N. W. 549).

——Wrongful exaction of redemption money.

561. (1881.) When money is wrongfully exacted in the nominal redemption of lands, where no sale was in fact made, to the extent of the taxes and interest actually due, it is a payment; beyond this it is an unauthorized exaction, for which the treasurer, but not the county, is liable. State, ex rel. Myers, v. Richardson County, 11 Neb. 403 (9 N. W. 550).

Mandamus to compel levy to pay claim.

Compelling county to include agriculture expenses in tax list, see Agriculture, § 3.

562. (1880.) The statute provides for the payment of precinct bonds issued to aid works of internal improvement by means of special taxes to be levied and collected on all the taxable property in the precinct. In case of the failure or refusal of the proper officers to levy the necessary taxes and make payment to the holders of such bonds, it is provided that they may be compelled by mandamus to do so. And this is the appropriate remedy. State, ex rel. Chandler, v. Dodge County, 10 Neb. 20 (4 N. W. 370).

563. (1880.) In the application for a mandamus to compel the payment of bonds issued to aid in the construction of works of internal improvement, it is not sufficient to show merely that they were issued "for works of internal improvement"; there should be such particular descriptions of the works as to enable the court to see, by an inspection of the petition alone, that they were really of that character. State, ex rel. Osborne, v. Thorne, 9 Neb. 458 (4 N. W. 63).

564. (1880.) A writ of mandamus to compel the county commissioners to levy a tax for the payment of a judgment against the county, of which the plaintiff claims as assignee, will be denied, when it appears that proceedings in garnishment had been instituted by a creditor of the assignee, which action is still pending. State, ex rel. Warren, v. Otoe County, 10 Neb. 384 (6 N. W. 464).

565. (1883.) In a proper case, county commissioners will be compelled to include in their estimate of taxes for the current year a sufficient amount, within the limits fixed by law, to pay claims against the county. State, ex rel. Bank, v. Gosper County, 14 Neb. 22 (14 N. W. 801).

566. (1888.) Where an account has been duly allowed against a county in a case where the county board had jurisdiction, it is the duty of such board to include the same in its estimates of the taxes to be levied for the ensuing year, and if it fails to do so it may be compelled by mandamus to perform its duty. State, ex rel. Clarke, v. Cather, 22 Neb. 792 (36 N. W. 157).

567. (1891.) Where a county board audits and allows bona fide claims against the county, mandamus lies to compel it to include the same in the estimate of taxes to be levied for the ensuing year. State, ex rel. Wessel, v. Weir, 33 Neb. 35 (49 N. W. 785).

568. (1892.) Mandamus lies to compel board of county supervisors to include in its estimate of expenses the amount payable to an agricultural society under section 12, chapter 2, Compiled Statutes. State, ex rel. Agricultural Society, v. Robinson, 35 Neb. 401 (53 N. W. 213; 17 L. R. A. 383).

569. (1896.) The allowance of a writ of mandamus to compel a county board to include relators' claim in its estimates of the taxes to be levied for the ensuing year is not necessarily an adjudication that a definite sum is due from the county to the relators. State, ex rel. Marquett, v. Baushausen, 49 Neb. 558 (68 N. W. 950).

570. (1897.) The discretion and action of a county board in levying taxes to the constitutional limit should not be controlled by the court. State, ex rel. Rock County, v. Sheldon, 53 Neb. 365 (73 N. W. 694).

571. (1903.) When the statute requires of an official board the duty of doing a particular act on a particular day as, for instance, the levy of a tax, and the body has announced its determination not to comply therewith, a mandamus may issue to compel the performance of the duty at the prescribed time. State, ex rel. State Journal Co., v. Knievel, 5 Unof. 219 (98 N. W. 798).

572. (1904.) The levy of a tax under the provisions of sections 1 to 5, inclusive, of article VI, chapter 77, Compiled Statutes, with which to satisfy a judgment against a county, school district, or municipality, will not be enforced by a writ of mandamus where such proposed levy is in excess of constitutional or statutory limitations. State, ex rel. Young, v. Royse, 71 Neb. 1 (98 N. W. 459).

Rights and remedies of taxpayers.

573. (1879.) To entitle a taxpayer to enjoin a county officer, it must appear that his rights will be greatly or irreparably affected by the acts sought to be restrained, and the right must be clear and the remedy at law inadequate. Normand v. Otoe County, 8 Neb. 18.

574. (1879.) Taxpayers of the proper county may maintain an action for themselves and all other taxpayers of the county, to restrain the county commissioners from an illegal exercise of their powers to the injury of such taxpayers. Normand v. Otoe County, 8 Neb. 18.

575. (1882.) The collection of a tax levied for the payment of county warrants issued in settlement of an amount found to be due for building a bridge under a contract with the county, will not be enjoined at the suit of taxpayers on the ground that the commissioners exceeded their authority in letting the contract, the contract having been let, the bridge built, and the settlement made in good faith and without objection at the time. Hull v. Kearney County, 13 Neb. 539 (14 N. W. 529).

576. (1884.) One attacking the validity of county bonds on the ground that they were issued under an unconstitutional act, thirteen years after the bonds were issued, during which time the interest has been paid without objection, must show that the taxes sought to be enjoined, levied to pay interest on such bonds, are inequitable and unjust. Burlington & M. R. R. Co. v. Saunders County, 16 Neb. 123 (19 N. W. 698).

577. (1885.) A taxpayer who seeks to enjoin the payment of money for the erection of a public bridge which he claims is being constructed in violation of law, must act with reasonable promptness. If he is guilty of gross laches, and knowingly permits the contractor to incur liabilities in good faith in the construction of the greater portion of the work, an injunction will be denied. Brown v. Merrick County, 18 Neb. 355 (25 N. W. 356).

578. (1890.) While a proposition to vote county bonds in aid of railroads, submitted in alternative form is void, their payment will not be enjoined after they passed into the hands of an innocent purchaser. North v. Platte County, 29 Neb. 447 (45 N. W. 692; 26 Am. St. Rep. 395).

579. (1891.) Where objections are made to certain assessments on the ground of irregularities, the court, as a condition of granting relief, may require the property owner to do equity by paying the amount which his property is benefited by the improvement. Darst v. Griffin, 31 Neb. 668 (48 N. W. 819).

580. (1891.) A party who sees a public improvement being carried on calculated to benefit his property, cannot wait until it is completed and the expenditure has been made and his property received the benefit before proceeding to avoid the tax, but must, as a condition of relief by injunction, do equity by paying the amount thereof justly chargeable against such property. Darst v. Griffin, 31 Neb. 668 (48 N. W. 819).

581. (1894.) Appeal by a taxpayer will not lie from an order of a county board directing a warrant to be drawn for an illegal purpose. Ackerman v. Thummel, 40 Neb. 95 (58 N. W. 738).

582. (1894.) An injunction lies at the suit of a taxpayer of the proper county to restrain the issuance by the county clerk of a warrant on the county treasurer for an illegal or unauthorized purpose, and to enjoin the payment of such warrant by the county treasurer. Ackerman v. Thummel, 40 Neb. 95 (58 N. W. 738).

583. (1895.) A party who is not guilty of laches may invoke the aid of a court of equity to restrain the collection of a void tax or assessment. Morris v. Merrell, 44 Neb. 423 (62 N. W. 865).

584. (1898.) A court of equity will not, at the suit of a private individual, enjoin the payment of a warrant issued upon a claim duly audited by the county board, the remedy being complete at law, by appeal from the order allowing the claim. Taylor v. Davey, 55 Neb. 153 (75 N. W. 553).

585. (1904.) A resident taxpayer, without showing any interest or injury peculiar to himself, may enjoin illegal expenditures by a public board or officer. Woodruff v. Welton, 70 Neb. 665 (97 N. W. 1037).

586. (1904.) In an action by a resident taxpayer to enjoin an illegal expenditure by a public board or officer, the plaintiff will not be required to show what the amount of the expenditure would have been if the law had been obeyed. Woodruff v. Welton, 70 Neb. 665 (97 N. W. 1037).

587. (1906.) On an appeal to the district court by a taxpayer from an order of the county board allowing aid to an agricultural society under section 12, article I, chapter 2, Compiled Statutes 1903, the appellee is not required to plead that the county board included the amount allowed by it in its annual estimate, nor that there were funds in the treasury, or taxes levied, against which a warrant could be drawn. Sheldon v. Gage County Society of Agriculture, 75 Neb. 485 (106 N. W. 474).

V. CLAIMS AGAINST COUNTY.

Allowance of claim of officers for compensation, see ante, §§ 172-183.

Character of county board as a court, see ante, §§ 80, 81.

Levy of tax to pay claim, see ante, §§ 544-561.

Liability of commissioners allowing illegal claim, see ante, §§ 120-122.

Mandamus to compel levy to pay claim, see ante, §§ 562-572.

Right of original action on claim in district court, see post, §§ 672-677.

Statutory provisions.

588. (1899.) Section 37, article I, chapter 18, Compiled Statutes, regarding the audit and allowance of claims against a county, is not a grant of power to the county board, but is a provision regulating the exercise of the power granted in section 23 of said chapter. Perkins County v. Keith County, 58 Neb. 323 (78 N. W. 630).

Jurisdiction to examine claims.

589. (1877.) The board of county commissioners is invested by statute with exclusive original jurisdiction in the examination and allowance of accounts against a county. Brown v. Otoe County, 6 Neb. 111; (1896) Stenberg v. State, 48 Neb. 299 (67 N. W. 190).

590. (1882.) The board of county commissioners have exclusive original jurisdiction in the examination and allowance of claims against a county, and the only mode of prosecuting an action on such claims is by appeal from their decision. Dixon County v. Barnes, 13 Neb. 294 (13 N. W. 623).

591. (1897.) A county board may not delegate to its chairman and clerk the power to audit claims against the county. Wilson v. State, ex rel Plasters, 53 Neb. 113 (73 N. W. 456).

592. (1900.) Article I, chapter 18, page 37, Compiled Statutes, merely regulates the grant of power and mode of procedure of the county board in the allowance of claims against the county, and failure to observe its provisions does not deprive the commissioners of jurisdiction to act upon claims against the county. State, ex rel. Seth Thomas Clock Co., v. County Commissioners of Cass County, 60 Neb. 566 (83 N. W. 733).

593. (1900.) The power and jurisdiction of the county board to act upon claims is derived from article I, chapter 18, page 23, Compiled Statutes, and not from page 37. State, ex rel. Seth Thomas Clock Co., v. County Commissioners of Cass County, 60 Neb. 566 (83 N. W. 733).

593*a*. (1908.) The allowance by the board of county commissioners of a claim against the county, there being no money in the treasury at the time, and no tax levy against which a warrant can be drawn, while it may be irregular, is not in excess of the power given the board to examine and settle all claims against the county. State, ex rel. McDonald, v. Farrington, 80 Neb. 628 (114 N. W. 1100).

Presentation.

594. (1890.) A railroad company claiming compensation for constructing a crossing on a highway laid out across its right of way, must, under section 16, chapter 78, Compiled Statutes, file its claim with the county clerk. State, ex rel. Lancaster County, v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 29 Neb. 412 (45 N. W. 469).

595. (1894.) Where a tax purchaser under an illegal levy seeks to recover back the amount paid by him he must file his claim with the county clerk, have it passed upon by the board of commissioners, and if unsatisfied, appeal to the district court. In no other manner can the district court acquire jurisdiction on such a claim. Pennock v. Douglas County, 39 Neb. 293 (58 N. W. 117; 42 Am. St. Rep. 579; 27 L. R. A. 121).

596. (1895.) All claims against a county must be filed with the county clerk thereof and presented to the county board, and it alone has power and authority to audit and allow such claims. State, ex rel. Wyckoff, v. Merrell, 43 Neb. 575 (62 N. W. 754).

597. (1897.) A claim against a county for damages for the appropriation of and injury to plaintiff's property by the grading of a highway, is not such a one as is required to be filed with the county clerk by section 37, article I, chapter 18, Compiled Statutes. Douglas County v. Taylor, 50 Neb. 535 (70 N. W. 27).

598. (1900.) A claim against a county is filed when delivered to the county clerk to be acted upon by the county board, even though the clerk fail to indorse upon such claim the fact and time of filing. State, ex rel. Seth Thomas Clock Co., v. County Commissioners of Cass County, 60 Neb. 566 (83 N. W. 733).

599. (1901.) A claim against a county must be presented, in writing, to the county board before that body has jurisdiction or authority to act upon it. Shepard v. Easterling, 61 Neb. 882 (86 N. W. 941).

600. (1901.) County warrants are not within the class of claims which must, in the first instance, be presented to the county board for examination and adjustment. Ayres v. Thurston County, 63 Neb. 96 (88 N. W. 178).

Time for presentation.

601. (1897.) A claim against a county cannot be audited and allowed in advance of the furnishing of the items or the rendition of the services therein charged. Wilson v. State, ex rel. Plasters, 53 Neb. 113 (73 N. W. 456).

Claims which may be audited and allowed.

602. (1900.) A claim in favor of a party for property sold to a county under a contract with the county, wherein it is recited that the property was sold to the county commissioners of such county as per agreement, held to be a claim against the county, and the failure to designate the county by name as debtor was only an irregularity which did not affect the validity of the claim. State, ex rel. Seth Thomas Clock Co., v. County Commissioners of Cass County, 60 Neb. 566 (83 N. W. 733).

603. (1901.) The only claim which the county board is, by section 37, article I, chapter 18, Compiled Statutes, 1899, authorized to examine, adjust and allow, or reject, is one which must be paid by the issuance of a warrant upon the county treasurer. Shepard v. Easterling, 61 Neb. 882 (86 N. W. 941).

Allowance or disallowance.

604. (1879.) While the commissioners, in passing upon claims against the county, act judicially, it is not essential or even proper for them to enter a formal judgment after the manner of courts of law. It is sufficient if it appear that the claim was duly presented, and that it was allowed or rejected. Block v. Saunders County, 8 Neb. 440.

605. (1882.) Commissioners have no authority to audit claims against the county unless there are funds in the treasury, or sufficient taxes have been levied for the payment of the same. Lancaster County v. State, ex rel. Miller, 13 Neb. 523 (14 N. W. 517).

606. (1888.) A claim by a contractor for the construction of a bridge across the Republican river, in Webster county, was duly allowed by the county board in 1875, and a number of payments made thereon up to the year 1881. In 1884 the contractor and county board made a computation of the amount still due such contractor, which was found to be $1,605.71. Held, That this was not the allowance of a new account, but the determination of the balance remaining due on a claim allowed in 1785, after deducting all the payments, and hence a statute passed in 1879 respecting allowance of claims did not apply. State, ex rel. Clarke, v. Cathers, 25 Neb. 250 (41 N. W. 182).

607. (1901.) When a city council or a board of county commissioners audit and adjust the claim of an officer whose salary is prescribed by statute, they act ministerially and not judicially. Gallaher v. City of Lincoln, 63 Neb. 339 (88 N. W. 505).

608. (1903.) County commissioners, in passing upon claims against the county, have no judicial power or discretion as to interpretation of the law. Whenever the course to be pursued or the amount to be allowed is fixed by law, they must follow the law, and their acts in so doing or endeavoring so to do are ministerial only. Mitchell v. Clay County, 69 Neb. 779 (96 N. W. 673).

609. (1903.) County commissioners act quasi-judicially in passing upon claims against the county, whenever their action is not merely a formal prerequisite to the issuance of a warrant, but involves the determination of questions of fact, upon evidence or the exercise of discretion in ascertaining or fixing the amount to be allowed. Mitchell v. Clay County, 69 Neb. 779 (96 N. W. 673).

610. (1903.) Where judicial discretion is called for in the allowance of a claim presented, the board then acts as any other judicial body, and its findings can be questioned and set aside only by an appeal taken from the decision as provided by statute. Neither can the members of the board be made liable for a mere mistake made in passing judgment on the claim, the commissioners, in such case, being entitled to the same immunity as other judicial officers. Crouch v. Pyle, 70 Neb. 60 (96 N. W. 1049).

611. (1903.) The board of county commissioners in allowing claims made for salaries of county officers and other claims against the county, where the amounts to be allowed therefor are fixed by law and where no judicial inquiry is required to determine the amount, act in a mere ministerial capacity and have no power or jurisdiction to allow an amount in excess of the fixed statutory compenseation. Crouch v. Pyle, 70 Neb. 60 (96 N. W. 1049).

——— Effect.

612. (1877.) The legislature having provided that an appeal may be taken to the district court from the decision of the commissioners in any matter within their jurisdiction, by any person aggrieved, this remedy must be followed or the decision of the board is final and conclusive. Brown v. Otoe County, 6 Neb. 111.

613. (1877.) In the audit, adjustment, and allowance or disallowance of a claim against the county, the board of county commissioners acts judicially, and its judgment in the matter is conclusive, unless appealed from, or reversed in the mode prescribed by law. State, ex rel. Clark, v. Buffalo County, 6 Neb. 454; (1893) State, ex rel. Ensey, v. Churchill, 37 Neb. 702 (56 N. W. 484); (1895) Sioux County v. Jameson, 43 Neb. 265 (61 N. W. 596); (1895) Heald v. Polk County, 46 Neb. 28 (64 N. W. 376); (1895) State, ex rel. Franklin County, v. Vincent, 46 Neb. 408 (65 N. W. 50); (1897) Gage County v. Hill, 52 Neb. 444 (72 N. W. 581) [overruled, Mitchell v. Clay County, 69 Neb. 794]; (1897) Trites v. Hitchcock County, 53 Neb. 79 (73 N. W. 215); (1898) Taylor v. Davey, 55 Neb. 153 (75 N. W. 553).

614. (1895.) Where a county clerk files and is allowed a claim for making up a tax list, the county board in allowing such claim exercises judicial functions, and where not appeal from its decision is final. Heald v. Polk County, 46 Neb. 28 (64 N. W. 376).

615. (1896.) Where a claim presented to the county board for examination and audit is disallowed, which decision is appealed from by the claimant, and he afterwards dismisses such appeal, the action of the board is final and conclusive. State, ex rel. Marquett, v. Baushausen, 49 Neb. 558 (68 N. W. 950).

616. (1901.) An order of a county board, acting in pursuance of section 145, article I, chapter 77, Compiled Statutes, in the rejection of a claim, is not such an adjudication as will bar the claimant's right to maintain an original action on such claim in the district court. Custer County v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 62 Neb. 657 (87 N. W. 341).

617. (1907.) Action of the board of county supervisors in disallowing a claim against the county is final, unless appealed from. Lincoln Township v. Kearney County, 79 Neb. 299 (112 N. W. 608).

——— Reconsideration.

618. (1877.) The board of county commissioners has no power to review, reverse, vacate, or set aside, its former adjudication of a claim against the county. State, ex rel. Clark, v. Buffalo County, 6 Neb. 454. [Changed by statute. 7 Neb. 267; 39 Neb. 745; 49 Neb. 558.]

619. (1888.) Whatever effect the statute of 1879, which authorizes the disallowance of claims after they are allowed, may have, it can only apply to claims allowed since the act took effect, and cannot destroy vested rights in claims allowed before the act took effect. State, ex rel. Clarke, v. Cathers, 25 Neb. 250 (41 N. W. 182).

620. (1896.) Under section 40 of the act of the legislature of 1879, entitled "An act concerning counties and county officers" (Compiled Statutes, ch. 18), a county board has authority to once reconsider its action in the allowance of a claim against the county, upon notice to the parties interested. State, ex rel. Marquett, v. Baushausen, 49 Neb. 558 (68 N. W. 950).

621. (1896.) The formal notice required by section 40, chapter 18, Compiled Statutes, to be given may be waived by the person entitled thereto. State, ex rel. Marquett, v. Baushausen, 49 Neb. 558 (68 N. W. 950).

622. (1898.) Upon due notice to parties interested, a county board may once reconsider its action in allowing or disallowing a claim against the county. Dean v. Saunders County, 55 Neb. 759 (76 N. W. 450).

623. (1898.) Where an order disallowing a claim against a county has been reconsidered, such order of disallowance will not operate as an adjudication of the claim. Dean v. Saunders County, 55 Neb. 759 (76 N. W. 450).

——— By succeeding county board.

624. (1896.) In the absence of statutory authority one county board cannot review or reverse the act of a prior board performed within the scope of authority conferred by law. Sternberg v. State, ex rel. Keller, 48 Neb. 299 (67 N. W. 190).

——— Notice of disallowance.

625. (1907.) The action of the board of county supervisors in disallowing a claim of a township is not affected by the fact that the notice of such disallowance was mailed to a person who was an officer of the township at the time of the filing of the claim, but who had resigned his office, when the written notice was delivered by such ex-official to his successor in office within five days from the order of disallowance. Lincoln Township v. Kearney County, 79 Neb. 299 (112 N. W. 608).

Appeal from decision.

626. (1897.) A question of fact determined by a county board cannot be reviewed on error in absence of a statute providing a method for preserving the evidence. Keens v. Buffalo County, 53 Neb. 1 (73 N. W. 214).

627. (1901.) The right of a taxpayer to test the validity of a claim against the county does not arise until there has been an adjudication by the county board in favor of the claimant. Shepard v. Easterling, 61 Neb. 882 (86 N. W. 941).

628. (1903.) An appeal by a claimant from a decision of the county board upon a claim presented for adjustment and allowance vacates the decision, even though it be in part favorable to the claimant. Dakota County v. Borowsky, 67 Neb. 317 (93 N. W. 675).

629. (1905.) Appeals from the decision of a county board should be entered, tried and determined in the district court the same as appeals from justices of the peace. Loup County v. Wirsig, 73 Neb. 505 (103 N. W. 56).

——— Right of appeal.

630. (1879.) When the record of the proceedings of the board, as kept by the county clerk, shows the proper presentation of the claim, and that they refused to grant it, this is enough to authorize an appeal by the claimant to the district court. Black v. Saunders County, 8 Neb. 440.

631. (1880.) As the owner of the claim or a taxpayer could appeal from their decision allowing or rejecting a claim against the county, an admission by them of the justness of the claim could not prevent such appeal. State, ex rel. Hagberd, v. Furnas County, 10 Neb. 361 (6 N. W. 434).

632. (1881.) Where an account is filed with the board of county commissioners and allowed in part, and a warrant, drawn for the sum thus allowed, is accepted by the claimant, he thereby waives his right of appeal. Hamilton County v. Bailey, 12 Neb. 56 (10 N. W. 539).

633. (1883.) An appeal from the final decision of the county board by an applicant for damages claimed to be caused by the establishment of a road, should be taken under the provisions of section 39, chapter 78, Compiled Statutes, and not under those of section 37, article I, chapter 18. Richardson County v. Miles, 14 Neb. 311 (16 N. W. 150).

634. (1892.) An appeal will lie from the action of a county board in allowing or rejecting claims against the county, but to authorize such an appeal it must appear from the proceedings of the board that they have taken final action upon such claim by either allowing or rejecting the same in whole or in part, an order adopting the report of a committee as to the amount due not being appealable. State, ex rel. Thiele, v. Slocum, 34 Neb. 368 (51 N. W. 969).

635. (1898.) A taxpayer may prosecute an appeal to the district court from the decision of a county board in the allowance of claims. Taylor v. Davey, 55 Neb. 153 (75 N. W. 553).

636. (1899.) A taxpayer may appeal from the allowance by a county board of a claim against a county. Such appeal is not entirely a personal and private matter of the appellant, but is of public interest and concern. Gage County v. King Bridge Co., 58 Neb. 827 (80 N. W. 56).

www.libtool.com.cn

637. (1901.) No appeal lies from an order of the county board disallowing a claim made in pursuance of the provisions of section 145, article I, chapter 77, Compiled Statutes. Custer County v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 62 Neb. 657 (87 N. W. 341).

638. (1903.) When a claim is by the county board allowed in part and rejected in part, the claimant must deal with the decision as an entirety. He cannot accept the part that is in his favor and appeal from the remainder. Dakota County v. Borowsky, 67 Neb. 317 (93 N. W. 675).

639. (1904.) The application of an agricultural society for assistance from the county funds is a claim, and an appeal from its allowance by a taxpayer will lie to reexamine the facts as to the organization and competency of the society. No reexamination as to the public interest in assisting such a society is permissible. Sheldon v. Gage County Society of Agriculture, 71 Neb. 411 (98 N. W. 1045).

——— Parties.

640. (1899.) On appeal by a taxpayer, form the allowance by the county board, of a claim against the county, the county is a party to the suit in the appellate court, but may not by any action therein rob the appeal of its significance or hinder or prevent the hearing of the appeal. Gage County v. King Bridge Co., 58 Neb. 827 (80 N. W. 56).

——— Proceedings for transfer of cause.

641. (1884.) A bond for an appeal from an order of the board of county commissioners disallowing an account is not invalid because signed immediately beneath the penal of the bond. Gage County v. Fulton, 16 Neb. 5 (19 N. W. 781).

642. (1892.) The appeal of a taxpayer from the allowance of a claim against a county will not be dismissed on account of informalities or omission in the undertaking, but an opportunity will be given to file a proper bond in the district court. Rube v. Cedar County, 35 Neb. 896 (53 N. W. 1009).

643. (1901.) An appeal to the district court, from an order of the county board rejecting a claim, should be dismissed, unless the appeal bond has been approved by the county clerk. Cedar County v. McKinney Loan & Investment Co., 1 Unof. 411 (95 N. W. 605).

644. (1902.) A notice of appeal from an order of the county board disallowing a claim for money paid for a void tax sale certificate, addressed to the county clerk, is served within the meaning of section 37, chapter 18, article I, Compiled Statutes 1901, by delivery to such clerk, and the fact of delivery to the clerk is a necessary inference from a statement in the record that it was filed with the clerk by appellant. Jarvis v. Chase County, 64 Neb. 74 (89 N. W. 624).

645. (1902.) Where a claim has been disallowed by the county commissioners and a notice of appeal given to the county clerk within the time limited by statute, an indorsement upon such notice as follows: "I hereby accept service of the within notice," is sufficient proof that the service of the notice has been made. Greeley County v. Gebhardt, 2 Unof. 661 (89 N. W. 753).

646. (1905.) Where an appeal is taken from the order of a board of county commissioners disallowing a claim, and a bond as required by statute is filed with the county clerk within the time allowed, and approved by him, the mere fact that such officer, who is also ex-officio clerk of the district court, is not a sufficient irregularity to defeat the ends of the appeal. Hitchcock County v. Brown, 73 Neb. 254 (102 N. W. 456).

——— Dismissal of appeal.

647. (1888.) Dismissal of an appeal from the decision of a county board upon a claim presented to it is a final disposition of the case from which appeal will lie. Richardson County v. Hull, 24 Neb. 536, (39 N. W. 608).

648. (1899.) Where a taxpayer's appeal from a county board's allowance of a claim against the county has been prosecuted for corrupt purposes, the appeal may be dismissed. The attack on the appeal may be by motion to dismiss. Gage County v. King Bridge Co., 58 Neb. 827 (80 N. W. 56).

649. (1899.) The findings herein, upon which the order of dismissal of the appeal of a taxpayer from an allowance of a claim against the county was predicated on the ground that such appeal was taken for corrupt motives were sustained by the evidence. Gage County v. King Bridge Co., 58 Neb. 827 (80 N. W. 56).

Review.

650. (1898.) The validity of an order of a county board allowing a claim cannot be raised for the first time in the supreme court on error or appeal. State, ex rel. Seth Thomas Clock Co., v. County Commissioners, 53 Neb. 767 (74 N. W. 254).

651. (1898.) In a case appealed from an order of a county board issues should be joined in the district court as in cases appealed from justices of the peace. Box Butte County v. Noleman, 54 Neb. 239 (74 N. W. 582).

652. (1898.) In a case appealed from an order of a county board disallowing a claim the district court cannot lawfully render judgment against the county without pleadings being filed or a trial had. Box Butte County v. Noleman, 54 Neb. 239 (74 N. W. 582).

653. (1898.) An appeal from an order of a county board, allowing a claim against the county, brings the matter to the district court for trial de novo. Box Butte County v. Noleman, 54 Neb. 239 (74 N. W. 582).

654. (1901.) The rule requiring issues in the appellate court to be the same as in the court of original jurisdiction, does not apply to appeals as to the district court from the decision of the county board in the allowance and rejection of claims. Sheibley v. Dixon County, 61 Neb. 409 (85 N. W. 399).

655. (1902.) On appeal from an order of the county commissioners disallowing a claim for purchase money under a void tax sale, the pleadings and issues need not be the same as before the commissioners, it being merely necessary that the claims be identical. Battelle v. Douglas County, 65 Neb. 329 (91 N. W. 412).

Payment.

656. (1876.) County commissioners may pay a debt due from the county by transferring to its creditor chattel property of the county. Commissioners of Kearney County v. Kane, 5 Neb. 227.

657. (1877.) Upon the final adjudication of a claim against the county, it is the duty of the board to issue to the claimant his warrant for the amount, or so much thereof as shall not exceed the aggregate amount levied by tax for the current year for the fund out of which it is payable. State, ex rel. Clark, v. Buffalo County, 6 Neb. 454.

658. (1880.) Indebtedness against a county in the form of accounts audited and allowed are to be paid out of the ordinary levy, but when this cannot be done, the only remedy is that provided in the statute, by submitting a proposition to the people of the county for authority to borrow the necessary funds. Union P. R. Co. v. Buffalo County, 9 Neb. 449 (4 N. W. 53).

659. (1880.) One having a claim for services rendered during a previous year is entitled to be paid out of the levy for a following year. State, ex rel. Hagberd, v. Furnas County, 10 Neb. 361 (6 N. W. 434).

660. (1883.) Where county warrants issued in compliance with a judgment on mandamus, which provided for interest at 10 per cent., contain no recital as to the rate of interest which they are to draw, and after their issue, but before they were presented for payment, an act was passed reducing the rate of interest on county warrants to 7 per cent., mandamus will not issue to compel the clerk to pay 10 per cent. thereon, since the right to such interest cannot be tested in such a proceeding. State, ex rel. Clark, v. Scott, 15 Neb. 147 (17 N. W. 263).

Set-off against claim.

661. (1898.) Where mutual demands arise out of a contract between a county board and plaintiff, the latter is entitled to an allowance of his claim only to the extent that it exceeds the claim of the county against him. Box Butte County v. Noleman, 54 Neb. 239 (74 N. W. 582).

Mandamus to compel action on claim.

662. (1880.) Mandamus will not lie to compel county commissioners to audit an account due for services, rendered the previous year. State, ex rel. Hagberd, v. Furnas County, 10 Neb. 361 (6 N. W. 434).

663. (1892.) Mandamus will issue in a proper case, to compel a county board to act upon a claim against the county where final action has been refused, but in a proceeding in mandamus the court will not determine the validity of any offset set up by the county. State, ex rel. Thiele, v. Slocum, 34 Neb. 368 (51 N. W. 968).

664. (1893.) A county board in the adjustment of claims against a county acts judicially, and this court cannot, by mandamus, control the judicial discretion of such board. State, ex rel. Ensey, v. Churchill, 37 Neb. 702 (56 N. W. 484); (1895) State, ex

rel. Wyckoff, v. Merrell, 43 Neb. 575 (62 N. W. 754).

665. (1895.) The supreme court has no authority under the constitution and the laws of the state to compel by mandamus the county board of a county to allow a claim against such county, although the court may be of opinion that such claim is a valid obligation against the county and that it has no defense thereto. State, ex rel. Wyckoff, v. Merrell, 43 Neb. 575 (61 N. W. 754).

666. (1901.) In the allowance of the claim of an agricultural society which has complied with all the requirements of section 12, chapter 2, Compiled Statutes 1899, a board of county supervisors acts ministerially and not judicially, and when it refuses to act on such a claim it may be compelled to do so by mandamus. State v. Coufal, 1 Unof. 128 (95 N. W. 362).

Mandamus to compel payment of warrants

667. (1881.) Where it appears that there are sufficient funds in the treasury, a peremptory writ of mandamus will be issued to compel a county treasurer to pay certain county warrants. State, ex rel. Moore, v. Gandy, 12 Neb. 232 (11 N. W. 296).

668. (1895.) Mandamus will not issue to compel a treasurer to pay a warrant unless the right of relator to receive payment is clear. State, ex rel. First Nat. Bank, v. Cook, 43 Neb. 318 (61 N. W. 693).

669. (1898.) Mandamus will not lie to compel the payment of a county warrant, charged to a designated fund, out of the general fund. Hall v. State, ex rel. Renard, 54 Neb. 280 (74 N. W. 590).

VI. ACTIONS.

Conduct of supervisor while on witness stand as evidence, see Eminent Domain, § 294.

Action by county against officer on official bond, see ante, §§ 285-307.

Action on county bond, see ante, § 543.

Actions on warrants, see ante, §§ 450-456.

Capacity to sue or be sued.

670. (1901.) Where a public corporation incurs a legal liability, it may be sued and a money judgment recovered against it. Ayres v. Thurston County, 63 Neb. 96 (88 N. W. 178).

671. (1901.) Section 20, article I, chapter 18, Compiled Statutes 1901, declaring that counties may be sued either in law or in equity, is express authority to enforce by action any claim of which the county board has not exclusive original cognizance. Ayres v. Thurston County, 63 Neb. 96 (88 N. W. 178).

Right of action.

672. (1877.) An original action on an account against a county does not lie. The account must be presented to the county board, and the remedy of a party aggrieved by the decision is by appeal to the district court. Brown v. Otoe County, 6 Neb. 111.

673. (1888.) A cause of action against a county, under the provisions of section 71 of the revenue act of 1869 (General Statutes), held, to be a claim against a county within the meaning of section 37 of chapter 18 of the Compiled Statutes, and that no action can be maintained on such claim other than by presenting the same to the county board for audit and allowance. Richardson County v. Hull, 24 Neb. 536 (39 N. W. 608).

674. (1888.) A cause of action against a county under the provisions of section 71 of the revenue act of 1869 is a claim against a county within the meaning of section 37 and chapter 18 of the Compiled Statutes, and no action can be maintained on such claim other than by presenting the same to the county board for audit and allowance. Richardson County v. Hull, 24 Neb. 536; (1890) Richardson County v. Hull, 28 Neb. 810 (45 N. W. 53).

675. (1894.) One seeking to recover back from a county taxes illegally levied, must file his claim with the county clerk of the county, have it passed upon by the board of county supervisors, or commissioners, and appeal from their decision, if unsatisfactory, to the district court. In no other manner could the district court acquire jurisdiction of a suit founded on such a claim. Pennock v. Douglas County, 39 Neb. 293 (58 N. W. 117; 42 Am. St. Rep. 579).

676. (1901.) The jurisdiction of the district court to hear and determine actions for the enforcement of claims against counties arising ex contractu and embraced within the provisions of section 37, chapter 18, article I, Compiled Statutes 1899, is derivative and not original. Shepard v. Easterling, 61 Neb. 882 (86 N. W. 941).

677. (1901.) An action to recover a money judgment upon a county warrant may be maintained when the money for the payment of such warrant has been collected and wrongfully applied by the county authorities to the payment of other claims against the county. Ayres v. Thurston County, 63 Neb. 96 (88 N. W. 178).

Garnishment.

678. (1882.) A county is not subject to garnishment. State, ex rel. Crawford, v. Eberly, 12 Neb. 616 (12 N. W. 96).

Appearance.

679. (1903.) A county attorney has authority to waive issuance and service of summons in error in a case against a county in which he has appeared for it at the trial. Dakota County v. Bartlett, 67 Neb. 62 (93 N. W. 192).

Parties.

680. (1901.) A taxpayer has a right of equitable action to enforce a municipal corporate right which its governing body refuses to enforce, but he should make the corporation a party defendant. Shepard v. Easterling, 61 Neb. 882 (86 N. W. 941).

681. (1905.) A county in its corporate character is a competent and proper party to sue for the enforcement of all contracts and obligations in its behalf, unless the statute expressly provides otherwise. This right is not impaired by the fact that the obligation may be, or is required by law to be, discharged by payment of a liquidated sum to the county treasurer or to his order, upon demand. Johnson County v. Chamberlain Banking House, 74 Neb. 549 (104 N. W. 1061).

Limitation of action.

682. (1887.) The legal maxim, "Lapse of time does not bar the right of the state," can only apply in favor of the sovereign power, and has no application to school districts or other municipal corporations deriving their power from the sovereign. The statute of limitations runs for or against school districts in the same manner as it does for or against individuals. May v. School District, 22 Neb. 205 (34 N. W. 377; 3 Am. St. Rep. 266).

683. (1898.) The proviso clause of section 4, chapter 7, laws 1889, which requires an action against a county for injury or damages resulting from a defective public highway to be brought within thirty days after the occurring of such injury or damages, is not inimical to that part of section 11, article III of the constitution, which declares that "no bill shall contain more than one subject, and the same shall be clearly expressed in its title." Bryant v. Dakota County, 53 Neb. 755 (74 N. W. 313).

683*a*. (1908.) The duty of the board of county commissioners to provide for the payment of all allowed claims, where such allowance is not absolutely void, is a continuing duty against which the statute of limitations is no defense. State, ex rel. McDonald, v. Farrington, 80 Neb. 628 (114 N. W. 1100).

Pleading.

684. (1871.) A petition alleging the issue and non-payment of a county warrant, without alleging that there is money in the treasury for its payment, or that time has elapsed for the collection of the money by taxation, will be dismissed without prejudice. Brewer v. Otoe County, 1 Neb. 373.

685. (1877.) An allegation in a petition that a claim presented to the county commissioners for allowance "was unjust, and was audited and allowed through fraudulent and undue means," is too general for either the admission of proof, or the entry of a decree establishing fraud against any of the parties to the transaction. Clark v. Dayton, 6 Neb. 192.

686. (1893.) The petition to recover damages from a county for injuries resulting from a failure of the county board to keep a public bridge in repair, set out in the opinion, held to state a cause of action. Hollingsworth v. Saunders County, 36 Neb. 141 (54 N. W. 79).

687. (1902.) In an action against a county to recover the purchase price of certain road machines which have been received and retained by the county, an answer which alleges that at the time the contract of purchase was made there was no money in the treasury to the credit of the proper fund for the payment of the same, fails to state a defense. Austin Mfg. Co. v. Brown County, 65 Neb. 60 (90 N. W. 929).

688. (1902.) A petition in an action to enforce against a public corporation a purely statutory obligation, is demurrable, unless it states all the facts necessary to make the alleged liability complete. And in such cases, the party must bring himself within the terms of a statutory proviso. Town of Clearwater v. Town of Garfield, 65 Neb. 697 (91 N. W. 496).

689. (1904.) A demurrer is not the proper pleading by which to raise a question as to whether or not an action in the county's name by the county attorney was sufficiently authorized. Otoe County v. Dorman, 71 Neb. 408 (98 N. W. 1064).

690. (1904.) In a suit against a county for damages on account of the death of a party caused by the giving way of a county bridge, the petition contained a general statement that the bridge was "out of repair and unsafe," a motion for a more specific statement should be sustained. Johnson County v. Carmen, 71 Neb. 682 (99 N. W. 502).

Presumptions.

691. (1896.) When a petition alleges and a demurrer admits that the plaintiff was employed by the county board to render professional services as a physician for a pauper, the presumption will be indulged that the county board kept within the law in employing the physician, and that a poorhouse, had, prior to that time, been established and opened in said county for the reception of its paupers. Red Willow County v. Davis, 49 Neb. 796 (69 N. W. 138).

Admissibility of evidence.

692. (1902.) The declarations of a deceased person made to a third party, as to his knowledge of the condition of a bridge, which gave way while he was attempting to cross it and caused his death, before the accident occurred, may be properly received in evidence as tending to establish contributory negligence. Seyfer v. Otoe County, 66 Neb. 566 (92 N. W. 756).

693. (1902.) In an action against a county by the administrator of the estate of a deceased person to recover damages alleged to have been caused by the breaking down of a bridge while the deceased was attempting to cross it with a steam traction engine and separator, it is for the jury to determine whether the bridge was properly constructed and maintained, and whether the use the deceased was making of it was unusual and extraordinary, and such as the county was not bound to anticipate. Seyfer v. Otoe County, 66 Neb. 566 (92 N. W. 756).

Weight and sufficiency of evidence.

694. (1897.) Evidence held sufficient to sustain a judgment for plaintiff for $500 in a suit against a county for damages resulting from the action of the county in grading a street in front of plaintiff's lots. Douglas County v. Taylor, 50 Neb. 535 (70 N. W. 27).

695. (1898.) Evidence of delivery of a warrant to the husband of claimant's agent held insufficient to sustain a plea of payment of a claim against a county. State, ex rel. Seth Thomas Clock Co., v. County Commissioners, 53 Neb. 767 (74 N. W. 254).

Instructions.

696. (1898.) An instruction which withdrew from a jury the consideration of the necessity of employing brokers to refund county bonds, because in the contract, for the performance of which the recovery was sought against the county, its commissioners had assumed to determine the existence of such necessity, held erroneous. Lancaster County v. Green, 54 Neb. 98 (74 N. W. 430).

697. (1901.) In an action on a claim for commission in selling county bonds, wherein the defense of accord and satisfaction was relied on by the county, ruling of the trial court, refusing an instruction requested to the effect that the claims filed by the plaintiffs were in part only of their demands against the county, was proper. Green v. Lancaster County, 61 Neb. 473 (85 N. W. 439).

698. (1905.) In an action for injuries caused by a defect in a bridge at a point near one side, an instruction that it is not necessary that defendant keep the entire width of its highways and bridges in good condition for travel, while stating a correct proposition of law, held erroneous under the circumstances of this case. Clingan v. Dixon County, 74 Neb. 807 (105 N. W. 710).

699. (1905.) In an action to recover for personal injuries resulting from the defective condition of a bridge, it is not error to instruct the jury that actual notice to the municipality is not necessary, where "the defects are of such a nature or have existed for such a length of time that they might by the exercise of ordinary diligence have been discovered and repaired." City of Central City v. Marquis, 75 Neb. 233 (106 N. W. 221).

Confession of judgment.

700. (1901.) A resolution by a county board will not confer authority on the county attorney to confess judgment against the county. Custer County v. Chi- cago, B. & Q. R. Co., 62 Neb. 657 (87 N. W. 341).

701. (1901.) A county attorney has no authority to enter a voluntary appearance in court, and confess judgment against the county. Custer County v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 62 Neb. 657 (87 N. W. 341).

Execution and enforcement of judgment.

702. (1902.) Article VI of chapter 77 of the Compiled Statutes, making provision for the levy and collection of a tax to pay judgments entered against a county or other municipal corporation in this state, contains no special provision for disbursing the fund; hence the usual course of drawing money from the county treasury by obtaining a warrant against the fund must be pursued by the judgment creditor. State, ex rel. Clark & Leonard Investment Co., v. Scott's Bluff County, 64 Neb. 419 (89 N. W. 1063).

——— Mandamus to compel payment.

703. (1896.) A writ of mandamus to compel county officers to pay judgments against the county is not void because the judgments were void. Boasen v. State, 47 Neb. 245 (66 N. W. 303).

704. (1896.) The validity of a judgment against a county may be determined on application for a mandamus to compel the county officers to pay the judgment. Boasen v. State, 47 Neb. 245 (66 N. W. 303).

In general.

1. (1901.) The terms "prosecuting attorney" and "county attorney" are used interchangeably in our statutes, and are synonymous. Bush v. State, 62 Neb. 128 (86 N. W. 1062).

2. (1901.) The words "prosecuting attorney" in sections 579 and 580, criminal code, construed to mean county attorney. Trimble v. State, 61 Neb. 604 (85 N. W. 844).

Creation and existence of office.

3. (1901.) The legislature had the constitutional power to create the office of county attorney. Dinsmore v. State, 61 Neb. 418 (85 N. W. 445).

4. (1901.) The office of district attorney was not created by the constitution, but by general law before the adoption of that instrument. Dinsmore v. State, 61 Neb. 418 (85 N. W. 445).

5. (1901.) The office of district attorney has been abolished. Dinsmore v. State, 61 Neb. 418 (85 N. W. 445).

——— Election, when held.

7. (1900.) Election for county attorney can be held only in even numbered years. State, ex rel. Parker, v. County Commissioners of Saline County, 60 Neb. 275 (83 N. W. 70).

8. (1891.) A county attorney can only be elected at a general election held in even numbered years. State, ex rel. Easterling, v. Rankin, 33 Neb. 266 (49 N. W. 1121).

——— Appointment to fill vacancy.

9. (1890.) Under section 25 of chapter 7, Compiled Statutes 1889, authorizes the county board to fill a vacancy in the office of county attorney by appointment, an appointment made by entering the fact upon the records of the proceedings of the county board is sufficient. State, ex rel. Hull, v. Walker, 30 Neb. 501 (46 N. W. 648).

10. (1891.) Where a vacancy occurs in the office of county attorney, it is the duty of the county board to fill the same by appointment, and the appointee will hold his office until a successor is elected and qualified. State, ex rel. Easterling, v. Rankin, 33 Neb. 266 (49 N. W. 1121).

11. (1900.) A vacancy in the office of county attorney should be filled by appointment, and the appointment holds until his successor is elected and qualified. State, ex rel. Parker, v. County Commissioners of Saline County, 60 Neb. 275 (83 N. W. 70).

Duties in general.

12. (1889.) Upon the removal of a criminal prosecution from the county in which the offense was committed, to an adjoining county upon change of venue, it is not the duty of the county attorney of the former county to follow the case to the latter county, but it is the duty of the county attorney of such adjoining county to represent the state in the prosecution of the case; and in such case where the county attorney of the adjoining county is under the disability of having appeared in the case as counsel for the accused, it is the duty of the court to appoint an attorney to act as county attorney in the prosecution. Gandy v. State, 27 Neb. 707 (43 N. W. 108).

13. (1901.) It is the duty of the county attorney to file informations for crimes and prosecute all criminal cases in his county. Dinsmore v. State, 61 Neb. 418 (85 N. W. 445).

Authority to prosecute state treasurer for embezzlement.

14. (1897.) A county attorney of the proper county may institute a criminal proceeding against a state treasurer for embezzlement of money of the state, notwithstanding such prosecutor had received no direction from the auditor of public accounts to so do. Bartley v. State, 53 Neb. 310 (73 N. W. 744).

Compensation of county attorney.

15. (1882.) Previous to the act of March 1, 1879, the statutory provision requiring a district attorney to give opinions and advice to county commissioners without extra charge, was exclusive of all other lawful methods of obtaining opinions or legal advice. Platte County v. Gerrard, 12 Neb. 244 (11 N. W. 298).

16. (1889.) Where an attorney has been acting as county attorney under a contract with the county board, and after being elected to the office continues to perform the duties of the office without any other agreement as to salary he is held to have accepted to hold under a continuation of the old agreement. Capps v. Adams County, 27 Neb. 360 (43 N. W. 114).

Authority of county to employ special attorney.

17. (1891.) The county attorney is the law officer of the county. The county board cannot lawfully employ an attorney to perform the duties required by law to be discharged by the county attorney, and pay for such services out of the treasury of the county. Brome v. Cuming County, 31 Neb. 362 (47 N. W. 1050).

17*a*. (1907.) A county attorney, who is required by law and by the order of the county board to institute actions for the benefit of the county, may bind the county to pay the reasonable and necessary expense incident thereto. Christner v. Hayes County, 79 Neb. 157 (112 N. W. 347).

Assistants and deputies.

——— Absence or disability of prosecutor.

18. (1896.) The provision of section 21, chapter 7, Compiled Statutes, for the appointment of a county attorney to act during the absence, sickness, or disability of the public prosecutor and his deputies, does not conflict with section 10, article I of the constitution, relating to criminal prosecutions. Korth v. State, 46 Neb. 631 (65 N. W. 792).

19. (1896.) The provision of section 21, chapter 7, Compiled Statutes, for the appointment of a county attorney to act during the absence, sickness, or disability of the public prosecutor and his deputies is applicable to informations under section 579, criminal code. Korth v. State, 46 Neb. 631 (65 N. W. 792).

20. (1901.) Where a county attorney is disqualified, the court may appoint other counsel to prosecute. Spaulding v. State, 61 Neb. 289 (85 N. W. 80).

——— Allowed in criminal prosecutions.

21. The district attorney, in a criminal trial, may have the assistance of counsel employed on private account. (1883) Polin v. State, 14 Neb. 540 (16 N. W. 1898); (1885) Bradshaw v. State, 17 Neb. 147 (22 N. W. 361); (1889) Gandy v. State, 27 Neb. 707 (43 N. W. 747).

22. (1891.) Under the proviso clause of section 20, chapter 7, Compiled Statutes, a county attorney, when the public interests demand, may, under the direction of the district court, procure at the expense of the county an attorney to assist him in the trial of a person charged with a felony. Fuller v. Madison County, 33 Neb. 422 (50 N. W. 255).

23. (1901.) It is proper for the county attorney, under the direction of the district court, to procure an attorney to assist him in the trial of a person charged with a felony, and such assistant is not required to qualify and give a bond as deputy county attorney. Bush v. State, 62 Neb. 128 (86 N. W. 1062).

——— Compensation.

24. (1880.) No authority exists for the payment by a county of compensation to a deputy district attorney or a person appointed by the court to perform the duties of district attorney during his absence. Cuming County v. Tate, 10 Neb. 193 (4 N. W. 1044).

25. (1891.) When services are rendered, in assisting a county attorney in the trial of a person upon a change of venue, compensation therefor is to be made by the county in which the offense was committed. Fuller v. Madison County, 33 Neb. 422 (50 N. W. 255).

26. (1894) Where attorneys claim compensation on account of services rendered as assistants of the county attorney in the trial of a criminal cause, they must make proper proof that their employment by the county attorney was under the direction of the district court of the proper county. Sands v. Frontier County, 42 Neb. 837 (60 N. W. 1017).

27. (1894.) Attorneys duly employed by the county attorney of one county to assist in the trial of a cause therein pending are not required or authorized, even on the request of such county attorney, to follow said cause on change of venue to another county; and if, notwithstanding this fact, they do so, they will not thereby entitle themselves to compensation for such unauthorized assistance as thereafter they may render. Sands v. Frontier County, 42 Neb. 837 (60 N. W. 1017).

28. (1904.) A county is not bound to pay for legal services rendered at the instance of the county attorney, without the previous authorization or subsequent official ratification of the county board. Card v. Dawes County, 71 Neb. 788 (99 N. W. 662).

——— Proof of appointment.

29. (1887.) Where the appointment of a deputy prosecuting attorney is challenged, and there is no copy of his appointment or evidence that he took the oath or gave the bond as required by law, the proof is insufficient to show his appointment as deputy. Richards v. State, 22 Neb. 145 (34 N. W. 346).

I. NATURE AND EXTENT OF JURISDICTION IN GENERAL.

Jurisdiction of justice of the peace and county court, see Justices of the Peace and County Court, §§ 35-86.

Nature and source of jurisdiction.

1. (1873.) Jurisdiction is a power constitutionally conferred upon a judge or magistrate to take cognizance of and determine causes according to law, and to carry his sentence into execution. Johnson v. Jones, 2 Neb. 126.

2. (1871.) The power to hear and determine a matter in controversy, is jurisdictional. It is coram judice, whenever a case is presented which brings the power into action. It may be exercised according to the rules of the common law, or by special direction, or informally. Smiley v. Sampson, 1 Neb. 56.

3. (1897.) The general equity jurisdiction of the district courts, including authority to enjoin the collection of a void tax, cannot be taken away or impaired by the legislature. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Cass County, 51 Neb. 369 (70 N. W. 955).

4. (1900.) The word "court," as used in section 582 of the code of civil procedure, means not only the tribunal over which a judge presides, but also the judge himself when exercising, at chambers, judicial power conferred by statute. Porter v. Flick, 60 Neb. 773 (84 N. W. 262).

5. (1900.) Courts possess a portion of the sovereign power; they are authorized by the constitution to decide between litigants; and authority to decide implies, always, power to make their judgments effective. State, ex rel. Smyth, v. Kennedy, 60 Neb. 300 (83 N. W. 87).

Constitutional and statutory provisions.

6. (1897.) Within the limits of the constitution the legislature may enact laws defining the jurisdiction and powers of all courts in the state, but such a law, to be valid, must be uniform as to all courts of the same grade, wherever situate. State, ex rel. Smyth, v. Magney, 52 Neb. 508 (72 N. W. 1006).

7. (1897.) Construction of section 19, article VI of the constitution, requiring uniformity as to jurisdiction, powers, proceedings, and practice of courts. State, ex rel. Smyth, v. Magney, 52 Neb. 508 (72 N. W. 1006).

8. (1897.) The territorial jurisdiction of the district and county courts, respectively, must be uniform. State, ex rel. Smyth, v. Magney, 52 Neb. 508 (72 N. W. 1006).

9. (1897.) Section 8, chapter 25, Session Laws of 1897, violates the constitutional rule of uniformity of jurisdiction and powers, as regards the district, county, and justices' courts of the state. State, ex rel. Smyth, v. Magney, 52 Neb. 508 (72 N. W. 1006).

10. (1897.) The constitution classifies or grades all courts which exist or may exist in the state and the legislature has no authority to alter such classification. State, ex rel. Smyth, v. Magney, 52 Neb. 508 (72 N. W. 1006).

11. (1897.) The words "jurisdiction and powers," in the sense they are employed in section 19, article VI of the constitution, embrace not only the subject-matter of the cause, but as well the territory within which a court may act or send process for service, so that the territorial jurisdiction of all courts of the same grade or class must be uniform. State, ex rel. Smyth, v. Magney, 52 Neb. 508 (72 N. W. 1006).

County boards as courts.

12. (1896.) While boards of county commissioners exercise functions judicial in their nature in the allowance and rejection of claims against the county, such boards are not courts in a constitutional sense, or within the general recognized acceptation of that term. Sternberg v. State, ex rel. Keller, 48 Neb. 299 (68 N. W. 190).

13. (1901.) County boards are not courts in a constitutional sense. Sheibley v. Dixon County, 61 Neb. 409 (85 N. W. 399).

Jurisdiction of the person.

14. (1878.) In cases arising under the constitution, laws, and treaties of the

Digitized by Google

United States, the subject-matter gives the jurisdiction without regard to the citizenship of the parties. But when questions of that character are not involved, it is the citizenship of the parties alone that confers the jurisdiction, and it must appear on the face of the record that the citizenship of the parties supports the jurisdiction. Blair v. West Point Mfg. Co., 7 Neb. 147.

15. (1878.) Except in proceedings in rem, the party whose rights are to be affected in any proceeding must be brought within the jurisdiction of the tribunal competent to pass upon the subject-matter, by service of process or his voluntary appearance. South Platte Land Co. v. Buffalo County, 7 Neb. 253.

16. (1884.) A cause of action which accrued in the state of Iowa under a staute of that state, which is not in contravention of the public policy of the laws of this state, may be enforced in the courts of this state. Delahaye v. Heitkemper, 16 Neb. 475 (20 N. W. 385).

Jurisdiction of subject-matter.

17. (1905.) A court of chancery has power, in a proper case, to compel a conveyance of land situated in another country or state, when the persons of the parties interested are within the jurisdiction of the court. Fall v. Fall, 75 Neb. 120 (106 N. W. 412).

18. (1905.) A decree and order to convey lands situated in this state, by a court in another state, can act only upon the person and cannot affect the title to the land. It imposes a mere personal obligation enforceable by the usual weapons of a court of chancery. Fall v. Fall, 75 Neb. 120 (106 N. W. 412).

19. (1905.) The court of one state cannot by its decree directly affect the legal title to lands situated in another state, but, if all the parties interested in the land are brought personally before a court of another state, its decree, establishing their equities in the land, would be conclusive upon them and thus in effect determine the title. Fall v. Fall, 75 Neb. 104 (106 N. W. 412).

Jurisdiction by consent of parties.

20. Jurisdiction of the subject-matter of an action cannot be conferred upon a court even by consent. (1897) Burkland v. Johnson, 50 Neb. 858 (70 N. W. 388); (1898) Johnson v. Bouton, 56 Neb. 626 (77 N. W. 57); (1899) Dufrene v. Smeaton, 59 Neb. 67 (80 N. W. 267); (1900) Armstrong v. Mayer, 60 Neb. 423 (83 N. W. 401); (1901) Crawford v. Hathaway, 61 Neb. 317 (85 N. W. 303); (1903) Cizek v. Cizek, 69 Neb. 800 (99 N. W. 28); (1903) Edney v. Baum, 70 Neb. 159 (97 N. W. 252).

21. (1873.) It is the law which gives jurisdiction; and consent of parties cannot, therefore, confer it in a matter which the law excludes. Johnson v. Jones, 2 Neb. 126.

22. (1902.) The jurisdiction of the district court in forcible entry and detainer, being derivative only, is not aided by consent of parties. Selleck v. Feeney, 2 Unof. 739 (89 N. W. 1003).

Scope and extent of jurisdiction.

23. (1871.) The courts have no jurisdiction of matters which are committed to the discretion of the legislature. Bradshaw v. City of Omaha, 1 Neb. 16.

24. (1884.) The courts of this state have jurisdiction of civil actions co-extensive with the boundaries of the state. Chicago, St. P., M. & O. R. Co. v. Lundstrom, 16 Neb. 254 (20 N. W. 198; 49 Am. Rep. 718).

25. (1886.) When a district court has gained jurisdiction of a cause for one purpose, it may and should, retain it generally for relief. Swift v. Dewey, 20 Neb. 107 (29 N. W. 254).

26. (1889.) Courts of general equity and common law jurisdiction are not necessarily limited in exercise thereof by statutory provisions. Earle v. Earle, 27 Neb. 277, (43 N. W. 118; 20 Am. St. Rep. 667).

Exercise of jurisdictional authority.

27. (1878.) The court cannot deprive a suitor of a substantial right under the plea of the exercise of descretion. Blair v. West Point Mfg. Co., 7 Neb. 146.

Determination of jurisdiction from petition.

28. (1876.) The amount claimed in the petition or bill of particulars determines the jurisdiction, yet if the verdict is for less than one hundred dollars the plaintiff is entitled to judgment thereon, but the court can render no judgment for costs in his favor. Beach v. Cramer, 5 Neb. 98.

Jurisdiction presumed.

29. (1901.) In a court of general jurisdiction, jurisdictional facts are presumed. Parsons v. State, 61 Neb. 244 (85 Neb. 65).

Effect of adding name of unnecessary party.

30. (1881.) A plaintiff can not give a court jurisdiction of a given case by adding the name of an unnecessary party as defendant. Behr v. Willard, 11 Neb. 601 (10 N. W. 525).

II. ESTABLISHMENT AND ORGANIZATION, AND PROCEDURE IN GENERAL.

A. Terms, Adjournment, and Time of Holding Court.

Appointment of term of district court.

31. (1879.) The power granted by section 26, article XVI of the constitution, is a continuing power, and is not exhausted by user. Candy v. State, 8 Neb. 482.

32. (1879.) The statute authorizes a judge of a district court, upon request of the county commissioners of a county, to call a special term of court for that county for the transaction of general business, at least twenty days notice thereof to be given. McElvoy v. State, 9 Neb. 157 (2 N. W. 378).

33. (1879.) Section 26, article XVI of the constitution, authorizes the judges of the district court to fix the time of holding courts in their respective districts. This refers to regular terms. There is no authority under this provision to call special terms of court. McElvoy v. State, 9 Neb. 157 (2 N. W. 378).

34. (1879.) A judge may, on his own motion, call a special term of court for any county of his district for the trial of criminal offenses therein. And having authority to make the order, the fact that he recites therein the authority as derived from the constitution will not invalidate it. McElvoy v. State, 9 Neb. 157 (2 N. W. 378).

35. (1880.) The terms of the county courts, as fixed by statute, commence on the first Monday and continue to and include the third Monday of each calendar month. Ryan v. State Bank, 10 Neb. 524 (7 N. W. 370).

36. (1892.) The general rule is that a court cannot be held at a time when there is clearly no authority to hold it, and if there was no statutory authority to that effect the district court in those districts having but one judge could not be held in two counties of the same district at the same time, but, under the constitution and statutes of this state, terms of the district court may be held at the same time in different counties of the same judicial district, and, when necessary, the district court sitting in any county may be continued into and held during the term fixed for holding such court in any other county within the district, or, it may be adjourned and held beyond such time. Tippy v. State, 35 Neb. 368 (53 N. W. 208).

37. (1899.) By section 25, chapter 19, Compiled Statutes 1897, a judge of the district court is authorized to appoint and hold a special term in any county in his district for the transaction of any business that may properly come before such court. Nelson v. Farmland Security Co., 58 Neb. 604 (79 N. W. 161).

37a. (1906.) The judge of the district court may call a special term for the transaction of the general business of the court if he deem it necessary. Russell v. State, 77 Neb. 519 (110 N. W. 380).

38. (1899.) By section 25, chapter 19, Compiled Statutes 1897, a judge of the district court is authorized to appoint and hold a special term of court in any county of his district for the transaction of any judicial business that may properly come before him. Nelson v. Alling, 58 Neb. 606 (79 N. W. 162).

Adjournment.

39. (1876.) Where the written order adjourning a term of court, made by the judge in vacation, entitled to name the term, held, that it was intended to apply to the regular term next following the promulgation of the order. Smith v. State, 4 Neb. 277.

40. (1876.) It is not error to adjourn the regular term of a court, fixed by law to be holden on the 13th of September in vacation by the written order of the judge until the 13th of December following, at which time the grand jury, summoned for the regular term, were returned and impaneled, an indictment found, trial and conviction had. Smith v. State, 4 Neb. 277.

41. (1876.) Under provisions of the statute authorizing the district judge by written order to adjourn court, "if sick or for any other sufficient cause unable to attend," the reasons for such adjournment are not subject to review by the supreme court. Smith v. State, 4 Neb. 277.

42. (1899.) Where the record shows an order adjourning to a future day in the term, and judicial proceedings carried on in the interval, it will be presumed, in favor of regularity, that there has been a reconvention and an express or implied vacation of the order of adjournment. Green v. Morse, 57 Neb. 391 (77 N. W. 925; 73 Am. St. Rep. 761).

www.hptool.com.cn

43. (1899.) Notwithstanding an order adjourning court to a subsequent day of the term the court may revoke it and reconvene before the time fixed in the order of adjournment. Green v. Morse, 57 Neb. 391 (77 N. W. 925; 73 Am. St. Rep. 761).

44. (1899.) An adjournment of court to a subsequent day in the term is merely an intermission, and neither adjourns the term nor deprives the judges of control of the proceedings. Green v. Morse, 57 Neb. 391 (77 N. W. 925; 73 Am. St. Rep. 761).

44*a*. (1906.) The judge of the district court has power for sufficient reason to adjourn a regular term of court to a future time or without day, and this may be done by an order to that effect sent to the clerk of the court before the time fixed for holding the regular term. Russell v. State, 77 Neb. 519 (110 N. W. 380).

45. (1906.) Where the record shows an order adjourning a term of the district court to a future day, and judicial proceedings in the interval, it will be presumed, if necessary to support the jurisdiction of the court over such proceedings, that the order of adjournment was vacated, and the court reconvened. Back v. State, 75 Neb. 603 (106 N. W. 787).

Continuation of term.

46. (1879.) A cause was tried at the November, 1877, term of the district court, and taken under advisement, and a final decree rendered at the March, 1877, term of said court, and the bill of exceptions was signed on the 4th day of May thereafter. Held, On a motion to quash the bill of exceptions, that the trial term continued until a decision was rendered. Wineland v. Cochran, 8 Neb. 528.

Holding court on Sunday or holidays.

47. (1899.) No court can be opened, nor any judicial business be transacted, on Sunday, or on any legal holiday, except certain matters specifically designated in the statutes. Deere, Wells & Co. v. Hodges, 59 Neb. 288 (80 N. W. 897).

Rules of court in general.

——— Power to make.

48. (1896.) Courts of general jurisdiction possess inherent power to make and enforce needful rules for the transaction of business before them, and in the absence of a clear abuse of such power their discretion in that regard will not be controlled by courts of appellate jurisdiction. Andres v. Kridler, 49 Neb. 535 (68 N. W. 938).

——— Effect and conclusiveness.

49. (1899.) If there is room for construction, that given to its rules by a court or a judge thereof will generally be accepted as conclusive. Hunter v. Union Life Ins. Co., 58 Neb. 198 (78 N. W. 516).

50. (1899.) The rules of the supreme court are not necessarily governable in matters before the district courts or the judges thereof. The portion of section 899, code of civil procedure, which made them so was applicable, when enacted, to the courts as then organized and the existing conditions, but the constitutional changes in the organization of the courts and the changes in the conditions have rendered it inapplicable. Hunter v. Union Life Ins. Co., 58 Neb. 198 (78 N. W. 516).

B. Rules of Decisions, Adjudication, Opinions and Records.

Adherence to decisions of English law courts, see Common Law, § 4.

Opinions by court commissioners, see Court Commissioners, § 1.

Previous decisions as controlling precedents.

——— In general.

51. (1890.) A decision of the supreme court as to property rights is controlling on a subsequent case where all the material facts bearing on the question of ownership are the same. Whitney v. Preston, 29 Neb. 243 (45 N. W. 294).

52. (1891.) A construction of a remedial statute, established by a previous case, and long acquiesced in by the bar will not be disturbed, though a different one might have been adopted had it been before the court for the first time. Phenix Ins. Co. v. Swantkowski, 31 Neb. 245 (47 N. W. 917).

53. (1896.) Where a line of decisions, although erroneous, has become a rule of property it should be adhered to until changed by statute; but in the absence of complications resulting from property rights it is the undoubted privilege, if not indeed the duty, of courts to re-examine questions, and modify or overrule previous decisions shown to be fundamentally wrong. State v. Hill, 47 Neb. 456 (66 N. W. 541).

54. (1898.) The judgment below may be affirmed upon a record presenting no proposition of law which has not been settled by repeated decisions. Stevens v. State, 56 Neb. 556 (76 N. W. 1055).

55. (1903.) On a question of practice, the many former decisions of the supreme court will be adhered to without critical investigation of the grounds on which they rest. Palmer v. Mizner, 70 Neb. 200 (97 N. W. 334).

55*a*. (1908.) The decision of the supreme court upon a former hearing of the same case is controlling only as to the actual point then determined. Schwanenfeldt v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 80 Neb. 790 (115 N. W. 285).

——— Ruling in district court as res adjudicata in same case.

56. (1891.) In a district where there are two judges, a demurrer to an amended petition was overruled by Judge B. and leave given the defendant to answer, which he did. Afterwards the cause came on for trial before Judge A., who sustained an objection to the introduction of any evidence, on the ground that the petition failed to state a cause of action. Held, Error. That the ruling of one judge upon a matter directly involved in the case is binding upon the other, unless for cause it is set aside. Marvin v. Weider, 31 Neb. 774 (48 N. W. 825). [Overruled. 61 Neb. 841; 69 Neb. 533; 69 Neb. 764; 1 Unof. 6.]

57. (1903.) The overruling of a demurrer does not prevent a finding, after the evidence has been taken, that there is no cause of action. Sporer v. McDermott, 69 Neb. 533 (96 N. W. 232).

——— Effect of overruling former decision.

58. (1898.) On review the rule stated in an overruled case held not to control a judgment following it, though the judgment was rendered before the case was overruled. Mayer v. Nelson, 54 Neb. 434 (74 N. W. 841).

——— Dictum.

59. (1877.) Dictum or general remarks of a judge, expressed in an opinion, should be understood with reference to the case at bar, and not extended to other classes of cases. McConnell v. Dewey, 5 Neb. 385.

60. (1905.) The determination of a matter which is involved in the litigation and discussed at the bar is not to be regarded as mere dictum, even though it is only indirectly involved in the decision of the question upon which the case turns. Lancaster County v. McDonald, 73 Neb. 453 (103 N. W. 78).

——— Decisions of federal courts as precedents for state courts.

61. (1872.) The construction placed by the United States circuit court upon a federal statute is not binding upon the s. supreme court. Its decision will be respectfully considered, but will not preclude an examination of its soundness. Franklin v. Kelley, 2 Neb. 79.

62. (1872.) The United States supreme court and the supreme court of this state are peers. The decisions of the former upon the federal constitution and laws are binding on the latter; the decisions of the latter upon the constitution and laws of Nebraska are binding on the former. The decisions of neither upon questions of general jurisprudence are binding upon the other. Franklin v. Kelley, 2 Neb. 79.

63. (1889.) Upon questions involving the construction of a law of congress, the decision of the supreme court of the United States is the supreme law, and by which the state courts are bound. Bressler v. Wayne County, 25 Neb. 468 (41 N. W. 356).

64. (1895.) A decision of the United States supreme court that a city may tax intrastate business of telegraph company transacted within its limits is binding on the state courts. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. City of Fremont, 43 Neb. 499 (61 N. W. 724; 26 L. R. A. 698).

65. (1896.) The construction placed upon provisions of the federal constitution by the supreme court of the United States must be followed by state courts in all matters to which such provisions are applicable. State, ex rel. Board of Transportation, v. Sioux City, O. N. & W. R. Co., 46 Neb. 682 (65 N. W. 766; 31 L. R. A. 47).

66. (1903.) The supreme court of the United States is the final expositor of federal statutes, and its decisions construing such statutes and determining their force and effect are conclusively binding upon the state courts. McLucas v. St. Joseph & G. I. R. Co., 67 Neb. 612 (97 N. W. 312).

67. (1904.) The state courts are bound by the decisions of the United States supreme court regarding the proper construction of a clause of the federal constitution and its application to the question involved in the litigation. State v. Insurance Co. of North America, 71 Neb. 348 (102 N. W. 1022).

www.hutool.com.cn

Overruling former decision.

68. (1905.) In order to overrule a former decision deliberately made, the supreme court should be convinced not merely that the case was wrongly decided, but that less injury will result from overruling than from following it. City of Wahoo v. Nethaway, 73 Neb. 54 (102 N. W. 86).

68*a*. (1907.) When a former decision of the supreme court has established a rule of property, which has been relied upon for many years as the foundation of real estate titles, the court will not overturn such rule although it cannot assent to the reasoning upon which it is based. Grandjean v. Beyl, 78 Neb. 354 (114 N. W. 414).

Syllabus as the law of the opinion.

69. (1891.) Law of a case will not be recapitulated in the syllabus where it has been stated on a former hearing. Omaha & R. V. R. Co. v. Chollette, 33 Neb. 143 (49 N. W. 1114).

70. (1892.) There is an unwritten rule in this court that the members thereof are bound only by the points stated in the syllabus of each case. Each judge in the body of an opinion necessarily must be permitted to state his reasons in his own way, without binding the members of the court to assent to all such reasoning, although they may concur in the conclusions reached. Holliday v. Brown, 34 Neb. 232 (51 N. W. 839).

Decision in extradition.

71. (1904.) The courts of this state are bound by a decision of a governor of a sister state in extradition proceedings. Dennison v. Christian, 72 Neb. 703 (101 N. W. 1045; 117 Am. St. Rep. 817).

Previous decisions in same case as law of the case.

——— In general.

72. The determination of questions presented to the supreme court, in an appellate proceeding, becomes the law of the case, and, ordinarily, will not be re-examined when the cause is again brought up for review. 1888) O'Brien v. Gaslin, 24 Neb. 559 (39 N. W. 449); (1896) Fuller v. Cuningham, 48 Neb. 857 (67 N. W. 879); (1895) Ripp v. Hale, 45 Neb. 567 (64 N. W. 454); (1896) Coburn v. Watson, 48 Neb. 257 (67 N. W. 171); (1898) Omaha Life Ass'n v. Kettenbach, 55 Neb. 330 (75 N. W. 827); (1899) Mead v. Tzschuck, 57 Neb. 615 (78 N. W. 262); (1899) Richardson Drug Co. v. Teasdall, 59 Neb. 150 (80 N. W. 488); (1899) Wittenberg v. Mollyneaux, 59 Neb. 203 (80 N. W. 824); (1899) Home Fire Ins. Co. v. Johansen, 59 Neb. 349 (80 N. W. 1047); (1899) Hayden v. Frederickson, 59 Neb. 141 (80 N. W. 494); (1900) Leavitt v. Bell, 59 Neb. 595 (81 N. W. 614; (1900) Motley v. Motley, 60 Neb. 593 (83 N. W. 830); (1900) Nebraska Savings & Exchange Bank v. Brewster, 59 Neb. 535 (81 N. W. 441); (1900) Todd v. Houghton, 59 Neb. 538 (81 N. W. 508); (1900) Barker v. Wheeler, 60 Neb. 470 (83 N. W. 678; 83 Am. St. Rep. 541); (1900) School District v. Fiske, 61 Neb. 3 (84 N. W. 401); (1901) Barton v. Shull, 62 Neb. 570 (87 N. W. 322); (1901) City of Omaha v. Bowman, 63 Neb. 333 (88 N. W. 521); (1901) Holt v. Schneider, 61 Neb. 370 (85 N. W. 280); (1901) Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Yost, 61 Neb. 530 (85 N. W. 561); (1902) Gadsen v. Thrush, 63 Neb. 881 (89 N. W. 403); (1903) Connecticut Trust & Safe Deposit Co. v. Fletcher, 5 Unof. 1 (96 N. W. 988); (1903) Merrill v. Van Camp, 4 Unof. 794 (96 N. W. 617); (1904) Hamilton Nat. Bank v. American Loan & Trust Co., 72 Neb. 81 (100 N. W. 202); (1905) Ridgley v. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co., 73 Neb. 874 (103 N. W. 669); (1905) First Nat. Bank of Plattsmouth v. Gibson, 74 Neb. 236 (105 N. W. 1081); (1905) New Omaha Thomson-Houston Electric Light Co. v. Rombold, 73 Neb. 259 (102 N. W. 475; 106 N. W. 213); (1906) Topping v. Cohn, 77 Neb. 310 (109 N. W. 151).

73. A previous ruling by the appellate court upon a point distinctly made, may be only authority in other cases, to be followed or affirmed, or to be modified or overruled according to its intrinsic merits, but in the case in which it is made it is more than authority; it is final adjudication, from the consequences of which the court cannot depart, nor the parties relieve themselves. (1885) O'Donohue v. Hendrix, 17 Neb. 287 (22 N. W. 548); (1886) Leighton v. Stuart, 19 Neb. 546 (26 N. W. 198); (1886) Lane v. Starkey, 20 Neb. 586 (31 N. W. 238); (1886) Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Hull, 24 Neb. 740 (40 N. W. 280).

74. (1885.) A previous ruling by the appellate court, upon a point distinctly made, may be only authority in other cases, to be followed or affirmed, or to be modified or overruled, according to its intrinsic merits, but in the case in which it is made it is more than authority, it is a final adjudication, from the consequences of which the court cannot depart, nor the parties relieve themselves. Hiatt v. Brooks, 17 Neb. 33 (22 N. W. 73). [Modified. City of Hastings v. Foxworthy, 45 Neb. 676.]

75. (1886.) Matters that have been adjudicated in a former suit will not be considered in a second action. Nelson v. Bevins, 19 Neb. 715 (28 N. W. 331).

76. (1897.) A judgment or ruling of the supreme court in a case or point distinctly and finally made will be held to be the law of the case in which made throughout its course of litigation without regard to the number of times it may be brought before the court, or the intrinsic merits of such judgment or ruling. Meyer v. Shamp, 51 Neb. 424 (71 N. W. 57).

77. (1899.) When the evidence is substantially the same as on a former appeal, the weight and effect to be given such evidence must be considered as foreclosed by the former decision on that point. Mead v. Tzschuck, 57 Neb. 615 (78 N. W. 262).

78. (1899.) Decision on former appeal as to ownership of property held conclusive upon the parties and their privies. Klamp v. Klamp, 58 Neb. 748 (79 N. W. 735).

79. (1900.) It is a settled rule in the supreme court that a legal principle involved in the trial of a case, when once determined, becomes thereafter the law of the case, binding not only upon the trial court, but the supreme court as well, and will not, ordinarily, be re-examined in a subsequent review of the proceedings of an inferior court had in the further trial of the action. This rule, however, is not applicable to decisions rendered on questions of fact; in such cases, the decision as to the sufficiency of testimony on a particular feature of the case, as disclosed by the record on the first trial, is not binding in a subsequent trial, where the testimony is, or may be presumed to be, materially different, in the investigation of which a reviewing court is to be controlled by the record then before it, uninfluenced by such prior decision. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Fox, 60 Neb. 531 (83 N. W. 744).

80. (1900.) When after a deed is held on appeal to be testamentary in character and the case remanded, the pleadings are amended and a reformation of the deed prayed for, the opinion will not be deemed res adjudicata as to the alleged mistake in the deed. Pinkham v. Pinkham, 60 Neb. 600 (83 N. W. 837).

81. (1901.) Decisions on review become the law of the case and settle conclusively the points adjudicated. Anheuser-Busch Brewing Ass'n v. Hier, 61 Neb. 582 (85 N. W. 832).

82. (1901.) The decision of questions presented to the supreme court in reviewing the proceedings of the district court becomes the law of the case and, for the purposes of the litigation, settles conclusively the points adjudicated. Smith v. Neufeld, 61 Neb. 699 (85 N. W. 898).

83. (1901.) Where, in a criminal prosecution, instructions given the jury are assigned as error and on appeal such instructions held properly given, and on a subsequent trial the same instructions are given and again assigned as error, the decision of the question on the first appeal will be held to be the law of the case and followed in reviewing the case on the appeal last taken. Argabright v. State, 62 Neb. 402 (87 N. W. 146).

84. (1904.) The precise question decided by the supreme court upon appeal or error cannot be relitigated upon a retrial of the same case in the district court. Supreme Court of Honor v. Tracy, 72 Neb 742 (101 N. W. 1021).

85. (1905.) When a question in controversy has been once finally decided, it becomes the law of the case, and is binding on the parties and those claiming under or through them in all subsequent stages of the litigation. Lowe v. Prospect Hill Cemetery Ass'n, 75 Neb. 85 (106 N. W. 429).

86. (1905.) The decision of a law question by the supreme court upon the first appeal of a cause will ordinarily be adhered to upon a second appeal as the law of the case. No exception to this rule will be made when the question so determined is one of practice, and the parties have been guided by such decision in the second trial of the case. Williams v. Miles, 73 Neb. 193 (102 N. W. 482; 105 N. W. 181; 106 N. W. 769).

87. (1905.) It is the settled doctrine in this jurisdiction that a legal principle involved in the trial of a case, when once determined, becomes thereafter the law of the case, binding not only upon the trial court, but the supreme court as well, and will not ordinarily be re-examined in a subsequent review of the proceedings of an inferior court had in the further trial of the action. Porter v. State, 73 Neb. 792 (103 N. W. 669).

87*a*. (1906.) The determination of questions presented to the supreme court in its review of the proceedings of an inferior tribunal become the law of the case, and ordinarily will not be re-examined in a subsequent review of the proceedings of the inferior tribunal on a second trial or hearing of the cause. Hargadine v. Omaha B. & T. R. Co., 76 Neb. 729 (107 N. W. 864).

88. (1905.) Where the supreme court has in a proper proceeding declared as a matter of law that a judgment of the district court is valid and cannot be collaterally attacked, such holding will ordinarily be treated as the law of the case in all subsequent proceedings involving the determination of that question. Parrotte v. Dryden, 73 Neb. 291 (102 N. W. 610).

89. (1905.) An amended answer, in an action to recover for injuries from an electric light company by a lineman who alleged negligence in uninsulated wires, on rehearing after a reversal wherein it is admitted such wires were not insulated, it being denied in the original answer, does not put in issue new facts so as to overthrow the law of the case on the former hearing. New Omaha Thomson-Houston Electric Light Co. v. Rombold, 73 Neb. 259 (102 N. W. 475; 106 N. W. 213).

89*a*. (1906.) The supreme court on a second appeal of the same case will not re-examine questions of law presented and determined on the first appeal unless the opinion first expressed is manifestly erroneous. Brewster v. Meng, 76 Neb. 560 (107 N. W. 751).

90. (1906.) An appellate court, on a second appeal of a case, will not ordinarily re-examine questions of law presented by the first appeal, but where the case was on the first appeal remanded generally for a new trial and the same questions are presented on the second trial, the appellate court is not bound to follow opinions on questions of law presented on the first appeal and may re-examine and reverse its rulings on such questions, and should do so when the opinion first expressed is manifestly incorrect. Eccles v. Walker, 75 Neb. 722 (106 N. W. 977).

——— Definition and application.

91. (1901.) "The law of the case" is a rule of expediency which should not be lightly disregarded, but it should be restricted to such questions as have been presented to, and decided by, the supreme court at the former hearing of the same case and those necessarily involved in such decision and should not apply to a mere expression of opinion in regard to matters not actually involved in the decision, nor should it apply to questions referred to by intimation only and not determined. First Nat. Bank of Hastings v. Farmers & Merchants Bank, 2 Unof. 104 (95 N. W. 1062).

——— Divided court.

92. (1902.) The rule that a prior decision of the supreme court in a given cause is the law of the case in all subsequent proceedings as to matters passed upon or involved in the decision, does not apply to propositions of law upon which the members of the court taking part therein were equally divided. Baldwin v. Burt, 2 Unof. 377 (96 N. W. 401).

——— Matters decided by implication.

93. (1900.) A question once decided by the supreme court in the trial of a case will be held to be the law of the case during its future course of procedure, and will not be overturned unless manifestly incorrect. This rules applies, not only to points expressly decided, but to all questions presented in the record and necessarily involved in the decision rendered. State, ex rel. Seth Thomas Clock Co., v. County Commissioners of Cass County, 60 Neb. 566 (83 N. W. 733).

94. (1901.) The settled rule of the supreme court, that the determination of questions presented to it in review of the proceedings in a case in the district court becomes the law of the case for all subsequent proceedings, applies not only to all points expressly touched upon in the opinion, but to all questions raised by the record and necessarily involved in the decision. Oldig v. Fisk, 1 Unof. 124 (95 N. W. 492).

95. (1903.) Matters expressly, or by distinct and necessary implication, adjudicated at a former hearing, will not be considered again in the same case. Edney v. Baum, 70 Neb. 159 (97 N. W. 252).

96. (1905.) A point necessarily determined by the supreme court upon appeal becomes the law of the case, and ordinarily will not be departed from in the further course of the litigation, unless clearly wrong, so that it cannot be supported upon reason or authority. First Nat. Bank of Plattsmouth v. Gibson, 74 Neb. 236 (104 N. W. 174).

www.tdtool.com.cn

——— Matters not actually litigated.

97. (1900.) The rulings upon the first appeal settle definitely, for the purposes of the litigation, all questions adjudicated; but mere expressions of opinion respecting matters not actually involved in the decision have no binding force. Wittenberg v. Mollyneaux, 60 Neb. 583 (83 N. W. 842).

98. (1902.) As it is the settled practice of the supreme court that a judgment will not be reversed for errors not argued in the briefs of counsel, a decision affirming a judgment does not become a precedent as to any question not argued or expressly presented to the court, and left unnoticed in the opinion, although it might have been raised, and, if raised, have been decisive of the case. Larson v. First Nat. Bank of Pender, 66 Neb. 595 (92 N. W. 729).

——— Reversing and correcting former holding.

99. (1895.) Where a judgment has been reversed on appeal and the case remanded generally and the same questions are presented on retrial, the appellate court on a second appeal may re-examine and reverse its former rulings. City of Hastings v. Foxworthy, 45 Neb. 676 (63 N. W. 955; 34 L. R. A. 321). [Modified. 52 Neb. 642; 55 Neb. 330; 59 Neb. 349.]

100. (1900.) It is not permissible for an appellate court, on a subsequent appeal of a cause, to reconsider and correct an erroneous decision made by it in the same case on a former appeal. Wittenberg v. Mollyneaux, 60 Neb. 583 (83 N. W. 842).

——— Question of fact not affected.

101. (1900.) The rule that a question once decided by the supreme court becomes the law of the case applies to questions of law and not of fact, where the conclusion reached is based upon testimony materially different. State, ex rel. Seth Thomas Clock Co., v. County Commissioners of Cass County, 60 Neb. 566 (83 N. W. 733).

102. (1901.) Where on review in error proceedings in the supreme court it is held that the evidence on the trial of the case is insufficient to support an allegation in the pleadings, and on retrial of the case the evidence in support of such allegation is substantially the same as in the first trial, the former ruling will be adhered to and followed as the law of the case as to the sufficiency of such evidence. Bank of Stockham v. Alter, 61 Neb. 359 (85 N. W. 300).

103. (1901.) The defendant on a former trial was found guilty of murder in the first degree, and on error to the supreme court the evidence was examined and found sufficient to support the verdict. A subsequent trial resulted in a like verdict and on error it is again urged that the evidence is insufficient to support the verdict. The evidence against the defendant in the last trial being substantially the same and fully as strong and convincing, the decision on the former trial has become the law of the case. Argabright v. State, 62 Neb. 402 (87 N. W. 146).

104. (1902.) Where the evidence at a new trial is, or may be presumed to be, materially different from that at a trial already reviewed by the supreme court, in a subsequent review it will investigate the record uninfluenced by the former decision, except so far as questions of law were there adjudicated, which apply equally to the evidence at each trial. State v. Paxton, 65 Neb. 110 (90 N. W. 983).

105. (1902.) The rule that a decision of the supreme court is the law of the case, not only as to the points expressly considered in the opinion but as to all matters necessarily involved in the judgment rendered, has not the same application where the evidence at successive trials of the same cause is so materially different as to affect the conclusions reached. State v. Paxton, 65 Neb. 110 (90 N. W. 983).

106. (1902.) The rule of the "law of the case," does not apply to questions of fact determined by the supreme court between the same litigants in the same cause of action, when there is a material and substantial change in the testimony reviewed at the different hearings. Phelps County Farmers Mutual Ins. Co. v. Johnston, 66 Neb. 590 (92 N. W. 576).

Opinions by commissioners.

107. (1893.) The commissioners themselves file no opinions. It is their duty to examine records, hear arguments, consider the authorities bearing upon the questions involved, and write opinions conforming to their views. In all these respects they are to act independently of the court, but their opinions have no force or effect until the syllabus of each case is approved by the court and filed by it. In re Supreme Court Commissioners, 37 Neb. 655 (56 N. W. 298).

108. (1895.) The fact that opinions are prepared by the commissioners of the supreme court is no indication that such cases have not been examined by the judges. All questions of law, and, so far as practicable, questions of fact, are considered by each of the judges and commissioners; and opinions are invariably submitted for examination and criticism by the entire membership of the court. Randall v. National Building, Loan & Protective Union, 43 Neb. 876 (62 N. W. 252).

109. (1903.) Where opinions are prepared by commissioners, they must be permitted, necessarily, to state their reasons in their own way, without binding the court to all that is said arguendo, even though it concurs in the conclusions of law and express findings of fact. Williams v. Miles, 68 Neb. 479 (96 N. W. 151).

110. (1903.) Opinions expressed by the commissioners on matters not essential to the decision, while properly set forth to advise counsel that their arguments in briefs or at the hearing have been duly considered, do not become necessarily the law of the case, and will not preclude further investigation of such points, should they come before the court once more. Williams v. Miles, 68 Neb. 479 (96 N. W. 151).

111. (1903.) Where opinions are prepared by commissioners, they must be permitted, necessarily, to state their reasons in their own way, without binding the court to all that is said arguendo, even though it concurs in the conclusions of law and express findings of fact. Modern Woodmen of America v. Colman, 68 Neb. 665 (96 N. W. 154).

112. (1904.) An unofficial opinion of a court commissioner is not the opinion of the court. The conclusion reached is approved, and the recommendation adopted. The law of the case is to be derived from the judgment of the court, and the questions necessarily determined thereby. Hoagland v. Stewart, 71 Neb. 106 (100 N. W. 133).

113. (1904.) The opinions of the commissioners of the supreme court, designated as "unofficial" have no value as precedent or authority in the sense in which the doctrine of stare decisis is applied. The court has not necessarily approved all the propositions of law advanced as indicated either in the syllabi or in the opinions themselves. Flint v. Chaloupka, 72 Neb. 34 (99 N. W. 825; 117 Am. St. Rep. 771).

114. (1905.) Opinions prepared by the commissioners of this court and published officially, are in all respects to be regarded as the opinions of the court. It is immaterial whether a commissioner or one of the judges formulates the opinion of the court. Lancaster County v. McDo[illegible], 73 Neb. 453 (103 N. W. 78).

Records.

——— How kept.

115. (1901.) The record of the proceedings of the district court as kept in the journal entries, is the legal and authentic evidence of judgments and orders of the court. Morrill v. McNeill, 1 Unof. 651 (91 N. W. 601).

——— Amendment.

116. (1877.) Courts retain authority over their records after the entry of judgment, and possess authority to supply a record which has been lost or destroyed, and in doing so must be governed by the rules of evidence. A court may amend its record to correspond with the facts, and this may be done from the judge's notes, or any other satisfactory evidence. Garrison v. State, 6 Neb. 274.

117. (1900.) A court may amend its records at a subsequent term upon satisfactory evidence. Ackerman v. Ackerman, 61 Neb. 72 (84 N. W. 598).

——— Correcting.

118. (1895.) The power to correct errors in their own proceedings is inherent in all courts of general jurisdiction, and in the exercise of that discretion they are governed not alone by this solicitude for the rights of litigants but also by considerations of justice to themselves as instruments provided for the impartial administration of the law. Webber v. Kirkendall, 44 Neb. 766 (63 N. W. 35).

119. (1896.) A court of record has the inherent authority to amend its records so as to make them conform to the facts. This power extends as well to supplying omissions as to correcting mistakes, and in the exercise of the power the court is not confined to an examination of the judge's minutes or other written evidence; it may proceed upon any satisfactory evidence. School District No. 1 v. Bishop, 46 Neb. 850 (65 N. W. 902).

120. (1896.) A court has power, even after the term at which judgment was rendered, to correct its record for the purpose of making it disclose truthfully what occurred in the course of its proceedings. Wachsmuth v. Orient Ins. Co., 49 Neb. 590 (68 N. W. 935).

121. (1897.) A trial court, after an appeal has been perfected therefrom, has no power to so correct its records, that, in fact, a modification of the judgment already appealed from shall be effected. Andresen v. Lederer, 53 Neb. 128 (73 N. W. 664).

122. (1897.) A court of record has the inherent power to correct its own records, even after appeal, so that such amended record may show correctly the history of the proceedings before the appeal was taken. Andresen v. Lederer, 53 Neb. 128 (73 N. W. 664).

——— Statutes requiring stenographers to furnish copies.

123. (1896.) Section 49 of an act entitled "An act to amend chapter 13, Revised Statutes of 1866, entitled 'Courts,'" and containing a provision requiring stenographers to furnish a copy of the evidence free of charge in certain cases, passed and approved February 27, 1879, is unconstitutional and void, because said act amends section 5 of an act passed and approved February 19, 1877, without referring in its title to said section or act and without repealing said section 5. Morgan v. State, 48 Neb. 798 (67 N. W. 780). [Overruled. State v. Cornell, 50 Neb. 526.]

124. (1897.) The act entitled "An act to amend chapter 13 of the Revised Statutes of 1866, entitled 'Courts,'" approved February 27, 1879 (Session Laws, p. 82), was an act complete in itself, and the provisions therein made for stenographic reporters and their compensation were germane to its purposes. State, ex rel. Carey, v. Cornell, 50 Neb. 526 (70 N. W. 56).

125. (1903.) The law makes no provision for the certification by the shorthand reporter of the proceedings of the district court, hence a transcript of his notes, although accompanied by a formal certificate, is not admissible as independent evidence. Jordan v. Howe, 4 Unof. 667 (95 N. W. 853).

——— Withdrawal or removal.

126. (1896.) A trial court should never permit a document introduced in evidence to be withdrawn unless the party so withdrawing it, at the time, leaves with the reporter a concededly correct copy of the document withdrawn; and the furnishing of such copy should be made a condition precedent for leave to withdraw the original document. Macfarland v. West Side Improvement Ass'n, 47 Neb. 661 (66 N. W. 637).

127. (1896.) The supreme court will not, as a matter of course, permit a record to be withdrawn for the purpose of amending a bill of exceptions; and especially is this true where it appears that a failure to incorporate into the bill of exceptions all the evidence is due to the laches of the party seeking the amendment. Macfarland v. West Side Improvement Ass'n, 47 Neb. 661 (66 N. W. 637).

——— Waiver of record.

128. (1891.) To constitute waiver of the record as required by section 444 of code, plaintiff and defendant must agree thereto at the term when final judgment is rendered. Colonial & United States Mortgage Co. v. Foutch, 31 Neb. 282 (47 N. W. 929; 10 L. R. A. 803).

III. CONCURRENT AND CONFLICTING JURISDICTION.

Jurisdiction of state courts for death in sister state, see Death, § 18.

Jurisdiction of state courts over proceeding in bankruptcy, see Bankruptcy, §§ 61-66.

Jurisdiction of state courts over interstate commerce, see Carriers, §§ 29, 30.

Exclusiveness of special tribunal.

129. (1892.) Where a statute upon a particular subject has provided a special tribunal for the determination of questions pertaining to such subject, the jurisdiction of such tribunal is exclusive, unless otherwise expressed or clearly implied from the act. Hendreschke v. Harvard High School, 35 Neb. 400 (53 N. W. 204).

130. (1900.) Where a right is given by statute and a specific remedy is provided designating the tribunal for the enforcement thereof, the jurisdiction of such tribunal is exclusive unless the law otherwise provides. Armstrong v. Mayer, 60 Neb. 423 (83 N. W. 401).

Jurisdiction of police court in civil actions.

www.libtool.com.cn

See, also, Municipal Corporations, §§ 146-150.

130*a*. (1897.) Section 8, chapter 25, Session Laws 1897, violates the constitutional rule of the uniformity of jurisdiction and powers, as regards the district, county, and justice's courts of the state. State, ex rel. Smyth, v. Magney, 52 Neb. 508 (72 N. W. 1006).

130*b*. (1884.) Under the title of "An act to provide for the organization, government, and powers of cities of the second class having more than ten thousand inhabitants," the legislature cannot invest the police judge with "concurrent and coextensive jurisdiction with county courts of all ordinary civil actions." Holmberg v. Hauck, 16 Neb. 337 (20 N. W. 279).

Priority of decision.

131. (1892.) While the rule founded upon comity which subsists between judicial tribunals is that the court which first acquires jurisdiction of the persons and subject-matter of the action will retain the cause until it is finally determined, yet, where the parties, while such suit is pending and undetermined, submit the controversy therein involved, without objection, to another tribunal having jurisdiction of the subject-matter, the judgment pronounced in the latter court is binding upon the parties. Gregory v. Kenyon, 34 Neb. 640 (52 N. W. 685).

131*a*. (1906.) Where two courts have concurrent jurisdiction, that which first takes cognizance of the case has the right to retain it to the exclusion of the other; and where property is in gremio legis, if it be a court of rightful jurisdiction, no other court can interfere and wrest from it the jurisdiction first obtained. Terry v. State, 77 Neb. 612 (110 N. W. 733).

Priority of jurisdiction.

132. (1895.) It is a rule recognized by both state and federal courts that the court which first acquires jurisdiction of the subject of an action will retain such jurisdiction until the final determination of the controversy. Fitzgerald v. Fitzgerald & Mallory Construction Co., 44 Neb. 463 (62 N. W. 899).

Judgment of sister state.

133. (1905.) The clause of the constitution of the United States requiring full faith and credit to be given in each state to the public acts, records and judicial proceedings of every other state does not prevent the courts of this state from examining the records of the courts of a sister state to ascertain whether or not that court had jurisdiction of the subject-matter. Fall v. Fall, 75 Neb. 120 (106 N. W. 412).

134. (1905.) When the courts of a sister state having jurisdiction of the parties and of their equitable rights in all of the property owned by one or both of them, by its findings and decree determine those rights, such decree must, under the provisions of the federal constitution, be given full faith and credit by the courts of this state. Fall v. Fall, 75 Neb. 104 (106 N. W. 412).

State and federal courts.

135. (1875.) All the territory embraced within the boundaries of the state was withdrawn from the jurisdiction of the federal courts by the act admitting the state into the union. Painter v. Ives, 4 Neb. 122.

136. (1896.) After a federal court has acquired jurisdiction of the parties and subject-matter of a controversy, a state court may not by injunction or otherwise interfere with the exercise of such jurisdiction. Prugh v. Portsmouth Savings Bank, 48 Neb. 414 (67 N. W. 309).

137. (1896.) A state court having no prior jurisdiction of the subject-matter will not, by injunction, restrain a plaintiff in whose favor judgment has been rendered in a federal court from proceeding to the execution of such judgment. A fortiori, it will not restrain a United States marshal from selling property levied upon to satisfy such judgment. Prugh v. Portsmouth Savings Bank, 48 Neb. 414 (67 N. W. 309).

138. (1896.) As a general rule, a state court will not enjoin parties to an action already in progress in a federal court from further proceeding therein. The exceptions to this rule are based upon the doctrine that in courts of concurrent jurisdiction that which first has obtained jurisdiction of the parties and subject-matter retains it for all purposes, and by all necessary process will protect itself in the exercise of that jurisdiction. Prugh v. Portsmouth Savings Bank, 48 Neb. 414 (67 N. W. 309).

139. (1900.) The United States circuit court having jurisdiction over a receiver and questions growing out of the administration of the assets of an insolvent bank, the supreme court will not interfere with such jurisdiction or the carrying out of its orders and judgments. Schaberg v. McDonald, 60 Neb. 493 (83 N. W. 737).

IV. PROBATE COURTS.

Terms of county court, see ante, § 35.

Probate jurisdiction of supreme court, see post, § 170.

Nature of action in adoption proceedings, see Adoption, §§ 4, 5.

Authority of county judge to take depositions, see Depositions, § 5.

Jurisdiction to assign dower, see Dower, § 49.

Of settlement of estates, see Executors and Administrators, § 310.

Review of allowances of claims, see Executors and Administrators, §§ 147-172.

Jurisdiction to hear application by executor to sell realty, see Executors and Administrators, § 206.

Jurisdiction to allow claims against estates, see Executors and Administrators, §§ 97-99.

Dismissal of cause in probate court, see Dismissal and Nonsuit, §§ 46-49.

Jurisdiction in action to quiet title, see Quieting Title, § 43.

Nature and extent of jurisdiction.

In action on covenants, see Covenants, §§ 40-43.

140. (1876.) The probate court, under the provisions of sections 7-11 of the act approved March 3, 1873, in relation to powers and jurisdiction of probate courts, has a distinct jurisdiction as to the amounts authorized to be recovered, from that of a justice of the peace; its jurisdiction extends to cases where the amount claimed in the petition or bill of particulars exceeds $100. Beach v. Cramer, 5 Neb. 98.

141. (1879.) A county judge has the ordinary powers and jurisdiction of a justice of the peace; and in an action before him, under such jurisdiction, where the plaintiff in his bill of particulars claims the sum of $50, but recovers only $15, he is entitled to costs. Martin v. Grover, 9 Neb. 263 (2 N. W. 354).

142. (1881.) County judges have jurisdiction of actions of forcible entry and detainer. Uhl v. Pence, 11 Neb. 316 (9 N. W. 41).

143. (1881.) A county court has authority to amerce a sheriff for failing to return an execution issued by such court and delivered to him. Ghost v. Hill, 11 Neb. 472 (9 N. W. 642).

144. (1886.) County courts have no jurisdiction to hear and determine actions brought against officers for the penalty imposed by section 34, chapter 28, Compiled Statutes of 1885, for taking illegal fees. Crow v. Bowen, 19 Neb. 528 (26 N. W. 251).

144*a*. (1898.) The county court possesses exclusive original jurisdiction in probate matters, and questions relating to the settlement of estates must be adjudicated there in the first instance. Boales v. Ferguson, 55 Neb. 565 (76 N. W. 18).

144*b*. (1901.) In probate matters, the county court is a court of general jurisdiction, and, in such matters, its judgments are entitled to the presumptions that attach to other courts of that character. Beer v. Plant, 1 Unof. 372 (96 N. W. 348).

145. (1902.) The county courts of this state are courts of general jurisdiction as to all matters of probate, settlements of estates and guardianship. Bennett v. Bennett, 65 Neb. 432 (91 N. W. 409).

——— Statutes applicable.

146. (1881.) All provisions of statute applicable to courts of record in general, where no special provision to the contrary exists, must be held to apply to county courts. Noakes v. Switzer, 12 Neb. 176 (10 N. W. 536).

Practice in general.

147. (1885.) In term cases the practice to a considerable extent is the same as in the district court. And without doubt the same power exists to control its judgments during the term at which they are rendered. That the district court possesses the power to vacate or modify their judgments at the term at which they are rendered is unquestioned. Volland v. Wilcox, 17 Neb. 46 (22 N. W. 71).

147*a*. (1906.) An appeal lies from a final order or judgment of a county court in probate matters to the district court, whether such order or judgment be upon the merits or otherwise. Weeke v. Wortman, 77 Neb. 407 (109 N. W. 503).

Hearing out of term.

148. (1879.) The provisions of the statute requiring the probate (county) judge to continue all cases undisposed of on the third Monday of each month, does not prevent the court from rendering judgment by confession or hearing and deciding cases by agreement at any time during the month. Hansen v. Bergquist, 9 Neb. 269 (2 N. W. 858).

149. (1879.) The county court has jurisdiction to try a case that by consent of the parties was continued over the regular term of that court as specified by statute. Mapstick v. Ramge, 9 Neb. 390 (2 N. W. 739; 31 Am. Rep. 415).

Jurisdiction in mandamus, see Mandamus, §§ 232-234.

Jurisdiction of district court over trespass, see Trespass, §§ 29, 30.

In general.

150. (1902.) The district courts are courts of general legal and equitable jurisdiction, and have power to determine legal or equitable relief according to the allegations and proof. State, ex rel. Horton, v. Dickinson, 63 Neb. 869 (89 N. W. 431).

Jurisdiction on appeal.

151. (1883.) Where a district court finds error in a judgment below it should retain the case for trial de novo except where the error consists in the lower court assuming wrongful jurisdiction. Brondberg v. Babott, 14 Neb. 517 (16 N. W. 845).

151*a*. (1906.) Where a judgment of a county court is reversed by a district court in a proceeding in error, the district court may retain such cause for trial. This rule applies to matters of probate jurisdiction as well as to civil actions. Pranie v. Lompe, 77 Neb. 377 (109 N. W. 496).

152. (1898.) Jurisdiction of the district court to review a judgment of an inferior court or board does not attach until a duly authenticated transcript of the record below has been filed. New Home Sewing-Machine Co. v. Thornburg, 56 Neb. 636 (77 N. W. 86).

Equity jurisdiction.

153. (1894.) The district courts of this state, being courts of general equity jurisdiction, are not limited in the exercise of such jurisdiction by statute. Cochran v. Cochran, 42 Neb. 612 (60 N. W. 942); (1907) Rhoades v. Rhoades, 78 Neb. 495 (111 N. W. 122).

VI. SUPREME COURT.

Authority to punish for contempt, see Contempt, § 43.

Compensation of clerks or reporter of supreme court, see Clerks of Courts, §§ 54-56.

Commissioners of, see Court Commissioners.

Opinions by commissioners, see Court Commissioners, § 1.

Authority of supreme judge to issue writ of habeas corpus, see Habeas Corpus, § 38.

Nature of jurisdiction in general.

154. (1889.) The supreme court is intended as a court of review, the principal business being a re-examination of the judgments of the district courts. Bell v. Templin. 26 Neb. 249 (41 N. W. 1093).

154*a*. (1888.) Section 27 of chapter 19 of the Compiled Statutes of 1887, makes it the duty of the clerk of the district court to keep a record of the proceedings of the court, under the direction of the judge of such court. The supreme court has no jurisdiction or authority to exercise the functions of the district court in the matter of the preparation of the records of said court, its jurisdiction, except in certain cases, being appellate and not original. State, ex rel. Wilkins, v. Le Fevre, 25 Neb. 223 (41 N. W. 184).

Original jurisdiction.

Original jurisdiction in mandamus, see Mandamus, §§ 224-231.

To compel charitable institution to render an account, see Charities, § 8.

155. (1891.) The supreme court has jurisdiction to entertain proceedings by information in the nature of quo warranto, instituted for the purpose of determining the rights of persons claiming the office of governor. State, ex rel. Thayer, v. Boyd, 31 Neb. 682 (48 N. W. 739).

www.libtool.com.cn

156. (1892.) The primary object of the supreme court is to review cases tried in the district courts. It is an appellate tribunal and it is given original jurisdiction in a few limited cases, most of which are extraordinary remedies for the purpose of preventing a failure of justice. Miller v. Wheeler, 33 Neb. 765 (51 N. W. 137).

157. (1902.) The superintendent authority of the king's bench over inferior tribunals is, to the extent that it may be exercised by the use of the writ of mandamus, included in, and part of, the original jurisdiction given by the constitution to the supreme court. State, ex rel. Reynolds, v. Graves, 66 Neb. 17 (92 N. W. 144.

158. (1894.) The original jurisdiction conferred by the constitution upon the supreme court, when not expressly restricted, is concurrent with that of the district courts of proper counties, and will be entertained in such cases and manner, and upon such terms, as shall be prescribed by said supreme court by its order made in each case before commencement of the action and in accordance with its rules already or hereafter formulated. In re Petition of Attorney General, 40 Neb. 402 (58 N. W. 945).

159. (1895.) The supreme court is one of limited jurisdiction both original and appellate. Its original jurisdiction is prescribed and limited by the constitution, and its appellate jurisdiction is prescribed and limited by statute. Johnson v. Parrotte, 46 Neb. 51 (64 N. W. 363).

160. (1896.) It is not within the power of the legislature to confer upon the supreme court original jurisdiction over subjects not enumerated in the constitution. State, ex rel. King, v. Hall, 47 Neb. 579 (66 N. W. 642).

161. (1896.) The original jurisdiction of the supreme court is by section 2, article VI of the constitution, restricted to cases relating to the revenue, civil cases to which the state is a party, mandamus, quo warranto, and habeas corpus. The constitution has not conferred upon the supreme court original jurisdiction to award a writ of prohibition as an independent remedy. State, ex rel. King, v. Hall, 47 Neb. 579 (66 N. W. 642).

162. (1896.) The original jurisdiction of the supreme court, conferred upon it by the constitution, is confined to "cases relating to the revenue, civil cases in which the state shall be a party, mandamus, quo warranto, and habeas corpus." State, ex rel. Dahlman, v. Piper, 50 Neb. 25 (69 N. W. 378).

163. (1898.) Jurisdiction conferred upon the supreme court in direct terms by the constitution may be exercised, though no rules of procedure have been provided by the legislature. State, ex rel. Broatch, v. Moores, 56 Neb. 1 (76 N. W. 530).

164. (1901.) Owing to the numerous cases on the docket, it is the practice of the supreme court not to entertain original jurisdiction and advance cases for hearing in applications for a writ of mandamus brought by private persons for the enforcement of private rights, unless some good reason is made to appear why the application is not in the first instance made to the district court. Armstrong v. Mayer, 61 Neb. 335 (86 N. W. 489).

165. (1903.) The designation of cases in which the supreme court has original jurisdiction is a prohibition of it in other cases. Edney v. Baum, 70 Neb. 159 (97 N. W. 252).

165*a*. (1908.) The jurisdiction conferred upon the supreme court by the constitution "in all civil cases in which the state shall be a party" is not confined to cases in which the state has a mere pecuniary interest, but may extend to all cases in which the state, through its proper officers, seeks the enforcement of public right or the restraint of public wrong. State v. Pacific Express Co., 80 Neb. 823 (115 N. W. 619).

165*b*. (1908.) A wrong of a nature which affects the rights and interests of people living in almost every city, town and village in the state, as well as persons living in the country, when committed by a public service corporation, is a public wrong. An action to restrain such a wrong by the state is within the jurisdiction of the supreme court. State v. Pacific Express Co., 80 Neb. 823 (115 N. W. 619).

166. (1894.) The supreme court does not have original jurisdiction of an action to cancel levies of taxes upon insurance companies by a city in which such companies are doing business. Aachen & Munich Fire Ins. Co. v. City of Omaha, 72 Neb. 112 (100 N. W. 137).

Contests of elections.

167. (1892.) There is no power in the legislature to constitute the supreme court a board to try contests of election, as the powers and duties of the court are essentially judicial in their nature and cannot be perverted from that purpose. Miller v. Wheeler, 33 Neb. 765 (51 N. W. 137).

168. (1892.) In an action to contest the election of certain judges of the district courts, held, that the limitation in section 2, article VI of the constitution, of the original jurisdiction of the supreme court to cases relating to the revenue, civil cases in which the state shall be a party, mandamus, quo warranto, and habeas corpus, was a prohibition upon the power of the court to entertain original jurisdiction in other cases, and that a contest of election is essentially a judicial proceeding. Miller v. Wheeler, 33 Neb. 765 (51 N. W. 137).

Jurisdiction of crimes.

169. (1902.) The only authority the supreme court has to take cognizance of crimes, is that given by the constitution in the grant of appellate jurisdiction. State v. Missouri P. R. Co., 64 Neb. 679 (90 N. W. 877).

Probate jurisdiction.

170. (1896.) The supreme court has no original probate jurisdiction, and where a county court makes an order in reference to the disposition of the assets of a decedent's estate, having at the time jurisdiction of the subject-matter and the parties, the supreme court will not pass upon the validity of such order unless presented for review by a direct proceeding. Fitzgerald v. Fitzgerald & Mallory Construction Co., 48 Neb. 386 (67 N. W. 158).

Writ of prohibition.

171. (1896.) Whether a writ of prohibition may be allowed by the supreme court in aid of its appellate jurisdiction, quære. State, ex rel. King, v. Hall, 47 Neb. 579 (66 N. W. 642).

VII. FEDERAL COURTS.

Jurisdiction in general.

172. (1875.) The federal courts have no jurisdiction of the crime of larceny, alleged to have been committed on an Indian reservation in the state of Nebraska. Painter v. Ives, 4 Neb. 122.

173. (1875.) All the territory embraced within the boundaries of the state was withdrawn from the jurisdiction of the federal courts by the act admitting the state into the Union. Painter v. Ives, 4 Neb. 122.

174. (1901.) The judicial power of the United States does not extend to actions brought by individuals or corporations against a state. State v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 61 Neb. 545 (85 N. W. 556).

175. (1901.) An injunction issued by the circuit court of the United States cannot lawfully forbid the attorney general from suing for penalties claimed by the state under section 9 of the Maximum Freight Law (Comp. Stat. 1899, ch. 72, art. XII). State v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 61 Neb. 545 (85 N. W. 556).

Enjoining enforcement of state laws.

176. (1901.) The circuit court of the United States is without jurisdiction to enjoin a state from the enforcement of its own laws, and neither can it do so indirectly by enjoining the attorney general. State v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 62 Neb. 123 (87 N. W. 188).

Jurisdiction over judgment and records of state courts.

177. (1905.) The supreme court of the United States has exclusive final jurisdiction over the subject of the effect to be given in each state to the records and judgments of the courts of sister states. Hadacheck v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 74 Neb. 385 (104 N. W. 818).

I. NATURE AND VALIDITY.

Nature of covenant.

1. (1878.) A covenant against incumbrances is a present engagement that the grantor has an unincumbered title, and is not in the nature of an indemnity. Chapman v. Kimball, 7 Neb. 399.

1a. (1890.) An incumbrance is defined to be any right to or interest in land which may subsist in third persons to the diminution of the value of the land and not inconsistent with the passing of the fee in it by the deed of conveyance. Burr v. Lamaster, 30 Neb. 688 (46 N. W. 1015; 27 Am. St. Rep. 428; 9 L. R. A. 637).

Agreement for use of property.

2. (1900.) A covenant in a deed for the exchange of hotel property by which the grantee in one deed agrees that for a period named he will not use the property acquired by him for hotel purposes, is not void as being contrary to public policy. Wittenberg v. Mollyneaux, 60 Neb. 583 (83 N. W. 842).

II. CONSTRUCTION AND OPERATION.

Waiver of covenant.

3. (1900.) If a party waive a covenant conditionally and the condition is broken, the waiver ceases to be effective for any purpose. Wittenberg v. Mollyneaux, 60 Neb. 583 (83 N. W. 842).

What constitutes incumbrance.

4. (1878.) All incumbrances, within the meaning of the covenant against them, is said to be every right to, or interest in, the land, to the diminution in value of the estate, but consistent with the passage of the fee. Chapman v. Kimball, 7 Neb. 399.

5. (1890.) An incumbrance is any right to, or interest in, land which may subsist in third persons to the diminution of the value of the land and not inconsistent with the passing of the fee in it by deed of conveyance. Burr v. Lamaster, 30 Neb. 688 (46 N. W. 1015; 27 Am. St. Rep. 428; 9 L. R. A. 637).

6. (1903.) An unexpired term or lease, which prevents the grantee in a deed from recovering possession of the land described therein, is an incumbrance. Brass v. Vandecar, 70 Neb. 35 (96 N. W. 1035).

Incumbrances included.

7. (1890.) Covenants against incumbrances cover those unknown to purchaser, as well as those known. Burr v. Lamaster, 30 Neb. 688 (46 N. W. 1015; 27 Am. St. Rep. 428; 9 L. R. A. 637).

8. (1905.) An incumbrance includes all interest in the land which may subsist in a third person to the diminution of the value of the land, but consistent with the passing of the fee by conveyance; hence, an outstanding lease for a period of years is an incumbrance. Albin v. Parmele, 73 Neb. 663 (103 N. W. 304).

Covenants of warranty.

See, also, post, §§ 15-24.

9. (1881.) A covenant of warranty runs with the land, and may be availed of by suit in his own name by any one to whom the same shall come by deed. Davidson v. Cox, 11 Neb. 250 (9 N. W. 95).

10. (1885.) A covenant of warranty runs with the land and passes with the fee to any subsequent grantee of the same title. Real v. Hollister, 17 Neb. 661 (24 N. W. 333).

11. (1897.) Covenants of warranty not broken when made pass with the title, unaffected by the fact that the conveyances are by quitclaim deed. Walton v. Campbell, 51 Neb. 788 (71 N. W. 737).

12. (1899.) Covenants of warranty in a deed for the conveyance of real estate, not broken when made, pass with the title, through the subsequent conveyances are by quitclaim deeds. Troxell v. Stevens, 57 Neb. 329 (77 N. W. 781).

12*a*. (1901.) Conditions in a printed warranty furnished by a vendor which limit its benefit and operation, should be construed strictly as against such vendor. Parsons Band Cutter & Self-Feeder Co. v Gadeke, 1 Unof. 605 (95 N. W. 850).

13. (1902.) A covenant of warranty does not run with the land, but is broken, if at all, when made. Sears v. Broady, 66 Neb. 207 (92 N. W. 214).

Covenants of seizin.

14. (1875.) If a grantor, at the time of conveyance, is in exclusive possession under claim of title, the covenant of seizin is not broken, until the purchaser or those claiming under him are evicted by title paramount. Scott v. Twiss, 4 Neb. 133.

Covenants running with the land.

See, also, ante, §§ 9-13.

——— In general.

15. (1881.) Covenants running with land do not pass to a mortgagee as assignee. Davidson v. Cox, 11 Neb. 250 (9 N. W. 95).

16. (1885.) Where a deed of conveyance is denominated "warranty deed" upon its face, but which deed was a form in common use in other states, but not of the form used in this state, and a year later the grantor executed and delivered to the grantee a deed of the form and kind used in this state, conveying full covenants of warranty, such second deed is for the purpose of correcting the apparent omission in the first, and the covenants of title run with the land and pass to purchasers of the grantee. Real v. Hollister, 17 Neb. 661 (24 N. W. 333).

17. (1890.) A covenant runs with the land when either the liability to perform it or the right to take advantage of it passes to the assignee of the land. Burr v. Lamaster, 30 Neb. 688 (46 N. W. 1015; 27 Am. St. Rep. 428; 9 L. R. A. 637).

18. (1898.) The only difference between a personal covenant and one running with the land is that the latter inures to the benefit of subsequent holders. Hesser v. Johnson, 57 Neb. 155 (77 N. W. 406).

19. (1902.) A covenant in a deed of conveyance "that they are free from all incumbrances" does not run with the land so as to invest a remote grantee thereof with a right of action against the covenantor. Estate of Watters v. Bagley, 3 Unof. 706 (92 N. W. 637).

——— Covenants broken when made.

20. (1878.) Where a covenant is broken at the time of the conveyance, it does not run with the land. The obligation is merely personal, and is limited to the parties to the covenant, and confers no right of action on subsequent purchasers of the estate. Chapman v. Kimball, 7 Neb. 399.

21. (1880.) When a covenant in a conveyance of real estate is broken the instant it is made, it does not run with the land. The obligation is merely personal, and is limited to the parties to the covenant, and confers no right of action upon subsequent purchasers of the estate. Davidson v. Cox, 10 Neb. 150 (4 N. W. 1035).

22. (1895.) A covenant against incumbrances is a personal obligation and does not run with the land where it is broken at the time it is made. Campbell v. McClure, 45 Neb. 608 (63 N. W. 920).

23. (1903.) A covenant against incumbrances does not run with the land, but is broken as soon as made where at the time of the conveyance there is an unexpired lease of the premises. Brass v. Vandecar, 70 Neb. 35 (96 N. W. 1035).

——— Use of property.

24. (1903.) A condition in a deed conveying real estate by which it is provided, "That no malt, spirituous or vinous liquors shall be kept or disposed of on the premises conveyed, and that any violation of this condition, either by the grantee or any person claiming rights under him or her, shall render the conveyance void, and cause the premises to revert to the grantor, his heirs and assigns," is a valid condition subsequent which, until broken, runs with the land. Jetter v. Lyon, 70 Neb. 429 (97 N. W. 596).

III. PERFORMANCE OR BREACH.

Breach as grounds for attachment, see Attachment, § 8.

Breach in general.

25. (1886.) The covenant for title, or of seizin, is an assurance to the purchaser that the grantor has the very estate, in quantity and quality, which he purports to convey. If he has not such title, his covenant is broken immediately upon its being made. Real v. Hollister, 20 Neb. 112 (29 N. W. 189).

Persons liable.

26. (1898.) Where grantees covenanted that the premises should not be used for hotel purposes, and grantor afterward waived the covenant on condition that the maximum rate should be $1 per day and that the waiver should be void upon the charging of a higher rate, the waiver having been made when grantees were contemplating a sale to a stranger, held, on violation of the rate agreement, that original grantees became liable on their covenant. Wittenberg v. Mollyneaux, 55 Neb. 429 (75 N. W. 835).

Voluntary surrender.

27. (1892.) One who voluntarily surrenders to a third party asserting an adverse title, must in an action against his covenantor for a breach of warranty, establish the validity of the title he has recognized. Cheney v. Straube, 35 Neb. 521 (53 N. W. 479).

27*a*. (1884.) If the grantee in a conveyance of land, without the knowledge or consent of his grantor, surrender possession to one claiming under an adverse title, he can not thereafter maintain an action upon the covenants of warranty contained in the deed from his grantor, without alleging and proving that the title to which he surrenders is paramount to the title received form his grantor. Snyder v. Jennings, 15 Neb. 372 (19 N. W. 501).

Digitized by Google

28. (1895.) A covenantee is not required to resist an action by the holder of the paramount title until actually dispossessed by legal process, but may recover against his covenantor after voluntarily surrendering to the holder of the better title. He at most assumes thereby the burden of establishing the title which he has thus recognized after surrendering to the holder of the better title. Cheney v. Straube, 43 Neb. 879 (62 N. W. 234).

29. (1897.) Where a cause has been tried in the district court on the theory that an averment of eviction under a title paramount has been sufficiently established by proof of a yielding to such asserted title by purchase of the adversary interest, the supreme court, while it may accept that theory, will not extend its operation so as to countenance an assumption that the yielding was earlier than the date of the quitclaim deed obtained by purchase of the paramount title. Walton v. Campbell, 51 Neb. 788 (71 N. W. 737).

Cancelation of deed not an eviction.

30. (1899.) A decree canceling a deed under which a grantee asserted title, the appointment of appraisers under the act for the relief of occupying claimants (Compiled Statutes, ch. 63) to assess the value of the lasting improvements of the grantee, and the confirmation of the report of the appraisers by the court, alone do not amount to an eviction, where the owner of the paramount title has neither elected to accept the value of the land nor to pay the occupant the value of his improvements, and the physical possession of the latter has not been disturbed. Troxell v. Stevens, 57 Neb. 329 (77 N. W. 781).

Judgment in ejectment.

31. (1901.) An adverse judgment in ejectment is not, of itself, in the absence of a disposition thereunder, or yielding thereto, an eviction such as will support an action for breach of a covenant of warranty. Lundgren v. Kerkow, 1 Unof. 66 (95 N. W. 501).

Permitting sale of prohibited goods.

32. (1901.) A covenant not to sell a certain class of goods in a building in competition with lessees of a portion thereof is to be broken by permitting other persons, who afterwards went into business therein in connection with the business of the lessors to sell such goods. Herpolsheimer v. Funke, 1 Unof. 471 (95 N. W. 688).

Assessment of taxes against premises.

33. (1902.) The covenants in a deed against incumbrances excepting all taxes and assessments and concluding with "which grantee assumes and agrees to pay," in the absence of any evidence that anything on that account was deducted from the purchase price, will not estop the grantee from defending against the payment of illegal and void assessments. Evidence of admissions examined, and held not to create an estoppel. Orr v. City of Omaha, 2 Unof. 771 (90 N. W. 301).

34. (1895.) A covenant against incumbrances is broken, where at the time of the conveyance, taxes had been assessed against the land, but were not due, and after their maturity the purchaser was obliged to pay them. Campbell v. McClure, 45 Neb. 608 (63 N. W. 920).

IV. ACTIONS FOR BREACH.

Accrual of right of action.

See, also, ante, §§ 20-23.

35. (1875.) An incumbrance by way of taxes upon land must be first paid, before the vendee can plead the same as a set-off in an action for the recovery of the purchase-money. Mills v. Saunders, 4 Neb. 190.

36. (1892.) A cause of action accures to a covenantee on his covenant of warranty, or for quiet enjoyment, upon eviction by the purchaser under a prior mortgage. Cheney v. Straube, 35 Neb. 521 (53 N. W. 479).

37. (1901.) A defendant in ejectment may not maintain an action against his grantor upon a covenant of warranty while remaining in possession of the land pending assessment of the value of improvements under the occupying claimants act. Lundgren v. Kerkow, 1 Unof. 66 (95 N. W. 501).

37*a*. (1908.) A covenant in a deed that "I hold said premises by good and perfect title," if untrue, is broken when made, and right of action at once accrues thereon although there has been no eviction. Webb v. Wheeler, 80 Neb. 438 (114 N. W. 636).

Right of action after buying in outstanding title.

38. (1901.) Where a grantee under a warranty deed conveys the land in turn, and the title fails by reason of the infancy of the one who conveyed to his grantor, and by purchasing the paramount title and conveying the same he satisfies the claims of his vendee and those claiming under him, he becomes reinvested with the covenants running with his deed, and entitled to maintain an action of covenant against his grantor. Pritchett v. Redick, 62 Neb. 296 (86 N. W. 1091).

What law governs.

39. (1894.) Where land in Iowa was sold and the conveyance executed in Nebraska, and there had been several prior conveyances, each of which contained a covenant of warranty against incumbrance, and of each of which there was the same existing breach, the law of Iowa will govern the rights of the parties in the enforcement of the covenant, in so far as it relates to the question of the covenant running with the land. Riley v. Burroughs, 41 Neb. 296 (59 N. W. 929).

Jurisdiction.

40. (1898.) The fact that the land is situated in a state where covenant against incumbrance runs with the land does not affect the question of jurisdiction of the county court, although the nature of the covenant is controlled by the lex loci rei sitæ. Hesser v. Johnson, 57 Neb. 155 (77 N. W. 406).

40*a*. (1895.) A justice of the peace has jurisdiction of an action for damages for breach of a covenant against incumbrances. Campbell v. McClure, 45 Neb. 608 (63 N. W. 920).

41. (1898.) A county court has jurisdiction, within the statutory limit of amount, in actions to recover damages for breach of covenant against incumbrances. Hesser v. Johnson, 57 Neb. 155 (77 N. W. 406).

41*a*. (1901.) An action on a covenant against incumbrances in a warranty deed is not an action involving the title to real estate, and when the amount sued for does not exceed $200, a justice of the peace has jurisdiction of such action. Dafoe v. Keplinger, 1 Unof. 440 (95 N. W. 674).

42. (1903.) A county court has jurisdiction, within the statutory limit of amount, in actions to recover damages for breach of covenant against incumbrances. Brass v. Vandecar, 70 Neb. 35 (96 N. W. 1035).

43. (1904.) A justice of the peace has no jurisdiction of an action to recover damages for a breach of a covenant for quiet enjoyment in a deed conveying real estate, where such breach consists of an eviction by one having a paramount title. Holmes v. Seaman, 72 Neb. 304 (101 N. W. 1030).

44. (1904.) A justice of the peace has jurisdiction of an action to recover damages for breach of a covenant for quiet enjoyment, when the damages do not exceed the same and the title to the land is not drawn in question. Holmes v. Seaman, 72 Neb. 300 (100 N. W. 417). [Overruled. Holmes v. Seaman, 72 Neb. 304.]

Limitations.

45. (1878.) A covenant against incumbrances is a present engagement that the grantor has an unincumbered title, and is not in the nature of a covenant of indemnity. The statute of limitations, therefore, commences to run at once, if an incumbrance existed at the time of the conveyance. Chapman v. Kimball, 7 Neb. 399.

46. (1887.) An action for damages for the breach of covenants of warranty of land is an action upon a specialty, within the meaning of section 10, code of civil procedure, and may be brought at any time within five years after the cause accrued. Kern v. Kloke, 21 Neb. 529 (32 N. W. 574).

47. (1897.) A covenant against incumbrances in a conveyance of land is, in effect, that the premises then are free from incumbrances; and if any incumbrances exist, the covenant is broken and a cause of action therefor accrues in favor of the convenantee, which will be barred by limitation in five years. Bellamy v. Chambers, 50 Neb. 146 (69 N. W. 770).

48. (1901.) An action on a covenant against incumbrances contained in a deed conveying real estate in Colorado is an action on a written contract, within the meaning of section 10 of the limitation law of this state. Johnson v. Hesser, 61 Neb. 631 (85 N. W. 894).

49. (1901.) Premises conveyed by warranty deed were at the time in possession of a third party under a verbal agreement of sale with a previous holder of the title. By subsequent litigation with vendee's grantee, a specific enforcement of this agreement was decreed. Held, That vendee's title failed at the time of the rendition of this decree, and the statute of limitations did not begin to run against action on the covenant of warranty till then. Watson v. Heyn, 62 Neb. 191 (86 N. W. 1064).

50. (1901.) Where a grantee from a minor conveys the property by warranty deed, and the title subsequently fails by reason of a disaffirmance by the minor, the covenants in the second deed were not broken until the disaffirmance of the first, and hence the statute of limitations did not begin to run against an action on such covenants until the disaffirmance. Pritchett v. Redick, 62 Neb. 296 (86 N. W. 1091).

Parties.

51. (1881.) The action for breach of the covenant should be brought by him who is the owner of the land; and as such the assignee of the covenant at the time it is broken. Davidson v. Cox, 11 Neb. 250 (9 N. W. 95).

52. (1887.) An action for the breach of covenants may be maintained by the direct covenantee irrespective of the question whether the covenant upon which it is brought would run with the land. Kern v. Kloke, 21 Neb. 529 (32 N. W. 574).

Pleading.

——— In general.

53. (1875.) A petition alleging that a guardian, from whom plaintiff's grantor derived title, "procured the sale of the premises by order of the proper court, as it is said, but as it now appears there is no record of any of the proceedings of such guardian sale, as required by law, and so far as the proper records show nothing appears properly and according to law," is insufficient as an allegation showing a breach of covenant against incumbrances. Scott v. Twiss, 4 Neb. 133.

54. (1902.) A petition in an action for breach of a covenant of title and quiet enjoyment, an allegation that an outstanding mortgage was foreclosed and the premises sold, but which fails to allege that the sale was confirmed and a sheriff's deed executed or that plaintiff was disturbed in his possession, fails to state a cause of action. Merrill v. Suing, 66 Neb. 404 (92 N. W. 618).

——— Averment of eviction.

55. (1873.) If the petition, in an action for breach of covenants of warranty, does not show when the cause of action accrued, by reason of ouster and dispossession of the premises, the statute of limitations cannot be interposed by a general demurrer. Mills v. Rice, 3 Neb. 76.

56. (1873.) In an action for breach of covenants of warranty, it is necessary to allege substantially an eviction by title paramount. Mills v. Rice, 3 Neb. 76.

57. (1892.) In an action for the breach of a covenant of warranty by the covenantee after eviction under a paramount title, it is not necessary to set out the facts attending the eviction or particularly describe the adverse title. It is sufficient to allege in general terms an eviction under a title paramount to that of the covenantor. Cheney v. Straube, 35 Neb. 521 (53 N. W. 479).

58. (1898.) In an action to recover damages for breach of covenants of warranty of title it is essential to allege in the petition that plaintiff has been evicted by title paramount. Hampton v. Webster, 56 Neb. 628 (77 N. W. 50).

58*a*. (1902.) In an action on a warranty deed for a breach of covenants of title and for quiet enjoyment, the plaintiff must allege and prove that he has been turned out of the possession of the granted premises, or some part thereof, or compelled to yield the possession thereof to one having a paramount title. Merrill v. Suing, 66 Neb. 404 (92 N. W. 618).

59. (1902.) A petition for an alleged breach of the covenant of general warranty in a deed, must allege an eviction, a surrender or an attorning by reason of a paramount title. Sears v. Broady, 66 Neb. 207 (92 N. W. 214).

——— Paramount title.

60. (1884.) If the grantee of a conveyance of land, without the knowledge or consent of his grantor, surrender possession to one claiming under an adverse title, he cannot maintain an action upon the covenant of warranty in the deed, without alleging a title paramount to his own. Snyder v. Jennings, 15 Neb. 372 (19 N. W. 501).

——— Allegation of mistake.

61. (1898.) In an action for damages for a breach of the covenant against incumbrances contained in a deed, an answer charging that the deed executed by the grantors does not contain a correct expression of the intention of the parties in regard to the transaction, sufficiently alleges the mutuality of the mistake. Hotaling v. Tecumseh Nat. Bank, 55 Neb. 5 (75 N. W. 242).

——— Plea of confession and avoidance.

62. (1901.) In an action to recover damages for breach of a covenant against incumbrances, a statement in the answer, to the effect that the plaintiff had retained out of the money due to the defendant a certain sum in settlement and full payment of the incumbrance discharged by the plaintiff, is a plea of confession and avoidance. Such plea is an implied admission of the existence and validity of the incumbrance. Johnson v. Hesser, 61 Neb. 631 (85 N. W. 894).

Necessity of proof of eviction.

63. (1886.) In an action for the breach of covenant for quiet enjoyment, the plaintiff must allege and prove that he has been turned out of the granted premises or of some part thereof, or has yielded the possession thereof to a paramount title. Real v. Hollister, 20 Neb. 112 (29 N. W. 189).

64. (1886.) In an action on warranty deed for a breach of the covenant for quiet enjoyment the plaintiff must allege and prove that he has been turned out of the possession of the granted premises, or of some part thereof, or has yielded the possession thereof to the paramount title. Anderson v. Buchanan, 20 Neb. 272 (29 N. W. 935).

65. (1897.) To sustain an action on a covenant of warranty, or for quiet enjoyment in favor of a covenantee, it must appear that there has been an eviction or surrender by reason of a paramount title. Troxell v. Johnson, 52 Neb. 46 (71 N. W. 968).

66. (1899.) An action cannot be maintained on a covenant of warranty of title, where it appears that there has been no actual eviction or surrender of possession of the granted premises by reason of a paramount title. Troxell v. Stevens, 57 Neb. 329 (77 N. W. 781).

67. (1902.) In an action on a warranty deed for a breach of covenants of title and for quiet enjoyment, the plaintiff must allege and prove that he has been turned out of the possession of the granted premises, or some part thereof, or compelled to yield the possession thereof to one having a paramount title. Merrill v. Suing, 66 Neb. 404 (92 N. W. 618).

68. (1892.) A cause of action on a covenant of warranty, or for a quiet enjoyment, does not accrue in favor of the covenantee until eviction or surrender by reason of a paramount title. Cheney v. Straube, 35 Neb. 521 (53 N. W. 479).

Evidence.

——— Admissibility.

69. (1901.) On the trial of an action grounded on an alleged breach of a covenant against incumbrances a stipulation to the effect that the plaintiff had paid a certain sum to redeem the land from a tax lien, is an admission of the existence and validity of such lien. Johnson v. Hesser, 61 Neb. 631 (85 N. W. 894).

70. (1902.) In an action by a grantee of a deed against his grantor to recover for a breach of covenant against incumbrances, parol evidence is inadmissible to show that taxes were, by contemporaneous oral agreement, excepted from the terms of the deed. Stanisics v. McMurtry, 64 Neb. 761 (90 N. W. 884).

71. (1904.) In an action to recover damages for a breach of a covenant for quiet enjoyment in a deed conveying real estate, the defendant is not concluded by a recital of consideration in the instrument, but the real consideration may be proved by parol. Holmes v. Seaman, 72 Neb. 300 (100 N. W. 417).

——— Sufficiency.

72. (1885.) Where in an action against two defendants charging them with the making and the breach of a joint warranty in the sale and conveyance of real estate, the evidence is sufficient as to one, but insufficient as to the other defendant, the verdict and judgment being against both, and the one against whom the evidence was insufficient made no motion for new trial as to himself alone, the judgment will not be disturbed. Real v. Hollister, 17 Neb. 661 (24 N. W. 333).

73. (1885.) Evidence that real estate conveyed was recently purchased from the owner in possession, and soon afterwards sold and conveyed to another, there being no adverse claimant, the title and possession being conceded to be in the grantors of the lost conveyance, is sufficient to warrant a finding that the grantors were in possession of the land at the time of the execution of the conveyance. Real v. Hollister, 17 Neb. 661 (24 N. W. 333).

74. (1898.) Evidence in an action for damages for breach of warranty held to sustain a finding that the deed, although absolute in form, was intended as an indemnity against contingent liabilities and was in fact a mortgage, and the covenants of warranty were inserted by mistake. Hotaling v. Tecumseh Nat. Bank, 55 Neb. 5 (75 N. W. 242).

——— Sufficiency of proof of eviction.

www.libtool.com.cn

75. (1885.) Evidence that a court of equity has decreed a grantee trustee for another, and required a conveyance to such other person, and set aside such grantee's title, is sufficient proof of eviction to maintain an action for breach of covenant. Real v. Hollister, 17 Neb. 661 (24 N. W. 333.)

76. (1894.) Breach of covenant of warranty of title to land and for quiet enjoyment may be established prima facie by proof that the covenantee has been evicted or kept out of possession by one in actual possession claiming paramount title. Heyn v. Ohman, 42 Neb. 693 (60 N. W. 952).

Damages.

77. (1892.) The measure of damages for the breach of a covenant of warranty, or for quiet enjoyment, is the consideration paid for the land, with interest and the costs and expenses incurred in the suit by which the covenantee is evicted; and if the latter is obliged to purchase an outstanding title in order to protect his own, he may recover the amount paid for such paramount title, not exceeding the consideration paid by him. Cheney v. Straube, 35 Neb. 521 (53 N. W. 479).

77*a*. (1892.) A party who was the actual owner of a farm and in possession thereof, traded the same, subject to a mortgage of $800, but the grantee, in consequence of the omission of a deed in the grantor's chain of title on the record, was unable to effect a loan on the farm, in consequence of which the mortgage was foreclosed and the grants evicted. No fraud was charged against the grantor and he afterwards procured a second deed to supply the missing link in his chain of title. Held, That damages for the loss of the farm were too remote and could not be recovered against the grantor. Lamb v. Buker, 34 Neb. 485 (51 N. W. 285).

78. (1895.) A covenantee who paid taxes to discharge a lien existing when he received a deed containing a covenant against incumbrances may recover the amount of the lien from the covenantor in an action before a justice of the peace, as such an action does not relate to the title to the land. Campbell v. McClure, 45 Neb. 608 (63 N. W. 920).

79. (1897.) In an action for breaches of covenants of warranty in a deed for the conveyance of real property, while there may be a recovery for costs and attorneys' fees incurred but not paid in making a defense against an action hostile to the title purported to be conveyed by the warranty deed, this principle should not be extended to cover interest on such attorneys' fees and costs under the proofs made in this case. Walton v. Campbell, 51 Neb. 788 (71 N. W. 737).

80. (1903.) When the breach of covenant consists of the existence of an unexpired term or lease, the measure of damages, at least in absence of any special circumstances, will be the value of the use of the premises for the time during which the grantee has been deprived of such use. Brass v. Vandecar, 70 Neb. 35 (96 N. W. 1035).

81. (1903.) Where the grantor, who has covenanted against incumbrance, requests the grantee to take proceedings for the purpose of recovering possession, which fail, and agrees to pay the expenses thereof, such expenses, being actually incurred, may be recovered, in addition to the value of the use of the premises. Brass v. Vandecar, 70 Neb. 35 (96 N. W. 1035).

82. (1904.) It seems that in an action to recover damages for breach of a covenant for quiet enjoyment, growing out of an exchange of lands, the measure of damages is the value of the property to which the plaintiff was entitled, but which he failed to receive, in the transaction. Holmes v. Seaman, 72 Neb. 300 (100 N. W. 417).

83. (1908.) The measure of damages for breach of a covenant of title is the difference between the value of the land at the time of the breach, and the price he contracted to receive. Webb v. Wheeler, 80 Neb. 438 (114 N. W. 636).

84. (1908.) When the plaintiff is in possession of the premises and can recover the value of his improvements under the "occupying claimant's act," he cannot recover the value thereof in an action for damages for breach of a covenant of title. Webb v. Wheeler, 80 Neb. 438 (114 N. W. 636).

Nature and scope of remedy.

1. (1901.) The courts will use their efforts to protect a creditor against the fraudulent acts of his debtor, but as against his poor judgment and unfortunate trades they can afford no relief. Selz, Schwab & Co. v. Hocknell, 62 Neb. 101 (86 N. W. 905).

2. (1903.) There are two classes of creditors' bills, one to reach the equitable assets or property of the debtor on which an execution at law cannot be levied; the other in aid of an execution at law, as to set aside an incumbrance or a transfer of property made to defraud creditors. In the first class of cases the creditor must allege and show that he has exhausted his remedy at law, while in the second it is sufficient to show that his claim has been reduced to judgment and docketed in the county where the land lies which he seeks to subject to the payment of his claim. The equity court in such case is merely lending its assistance to the legal tribunal to remove a fraudulent obstruction interposed to the execution of its writ. State Bank of Ceresco v. Belk, 68 Neb. 517 (94 N. W. 617).

3. (1907.) A creditor's suit is an action in rem and not against the debtor personally, and a discharge by a court of bankruptcy is no bar thereto. Flint v. Chaloupka, 78 Neb. 594 (111 N. W. 465).

Adequate remedy at law.

4. (1898.) In absence of special circumstances rendering a levy of execution inadequate, a judgment creditor cannot invoke the aid of equity to subject the land of the debtor to the payment of the judgment. Morrill v. Skinner, 57 Neb. 164 (77 N. W. 375).

5. (1903.) The thing offered at an execution sale of real estate being the title which the judgment debtor had at the time the judgment became a lien, a subsequent fraudulent transfer of the property furnishes no ground for a creditors' bill, the remedy by execution being ample. Newman Grove State Bank v. Linderholm, 68 Neb. 364 (94 N. W. 616).

6. (1904.) Whenever, on the trial of a creditor's action, it appears that the plaintiff has a remedy at law, the equitable proceedings should be dismissed. Brumbaugh v. Jones, 70 Neb. 786 (98 N. W. 54).

Grounds of remedy.

7. (1894.) An action in the nature of a creditors' bill can be maintained in this state upon a judgment of the circuit court of the United States for the district of Nebraska. First Nat. Bank of Chicago v. Sloman, 42 Neb. 350 (60 N. W. 589; 42 Am. St. Rep. 707).

8. (1895.) The foundation of every creditors' bill is an unimpeachable judgment, and the plaintiff who exhibits such a bill as a condition precedent to his right to relief is required to plead and prove his ownership of a valid and unsatisfied judgment. Johnson v. Parrotte, 46 Neb. 51 (64 N. W. 363).

9. A judgment creditor, after an execution has been issued and returned nulla bona, may maintain a suit in equity to make his judgment effective as a lien on the land by removing obstructions calculated to make an execution sale unproductive. (1900) First Nat. Bank v. Gibson, 60 Neb. 767 (84 N. W. 259); (1901) Coffield v. Parmenter, 2 Unof. 42 (96 N. W. 283); (1902) Howard v. Raymers, 64 Neb. 213 (89 N. W. 1004).

10. (1901.) By proceedings in garnishment, an attachment or judgment creditor may acquire a lien upon personal effects in the possession of a vendee who has acquired them by means of a sale or transfer fraudulent as against the creditors of the vendor, and in a case in which an action for damages, as at the common law, would not afford an adequate remedy, the lien may be enforced in equity by an action in the nature of a creditor's bill. Glover v. Hargadine-McKittrick Dry Goods Co., 62 Neb. 483 (87 N. W. 170).

www.ibtool.com.cn

11. (1902.) Where a sreditor has obtained an attarhment lien in debtor's lifetime, and subsequently judgment and order of sale of attached real estate is entered against the debtor's executrix, jurisdiction to clear the title of the attached lands of the debtor's fraudulent deeds, does not depend upon insolvency of the debtor's estate. First Nat. Bank of Madison v. Tompkins, 3 Unof. 328 (91 N. W. 551).

12. (1903.) Allegations of collusion and fraud on the part of an administratrix and a county judge are sufficient to entitle a creditor to bring an action for an accounting without showing a technical refusal by the administratrix to sue. McGlave v. Fitzgerald, 67 Neb. 417 (93 N. W. 692).

——Effect of reversal of judgment after creditor's suit.

13. (1902.) Plaintiff recovered a decree in an action in the nature of a creditors' bill, setting aside an alleged fraudulent conveyance of real estate made by the judgment debtor, and directing a sale of the property to satisfy the judgment. Pending an appeal in the equity action the judgment which formed the basis of the suit was on error proceedings reversed by the supreme court. Held, That the decree rendered in the action in the nature of a creditors' bill is without suport for want of a valid judgment as its foundation, and that such decree should be reversed and the action dismissed. Kudrna v. Ainsworth, 65 Neb. 711 (91 N. W. 711).

Property or rights which may be subjected.

——In general.

14. (1898.) A creditors' bill may be maintained by a judgment creditor to reach any assets of the debtor subject to the payment of his debts, which cannot be reached by ordinary process of law. German Nat. Bank v. First Nat. Bank, 55 Neb. 86 (75 N. W. 531).

15. (1905.) A judgment creditor, with the aid of equity, may reach any property or interest of his debtor not exempt from execution, which with such aid, the said debtor might himself reach. Weckerly v. Taylor, 74 Neb. 84 (103 N. W. 1065).

16. (1897.) Property transferred by an insolvent, or a debtor under failing circumstances, under a contract which is void as against public policy, may be subjected to payment of his debts. Hall v. Hart, 52 Neb. 4 (71 N. W. 1009).

17. (1898.) Where the debtor's property, subject to the payment of his debts, has been wrongfully converted by a stranger, the creditor may, by suit in the nature of creditors' bill, reach the debtor's cause of action for conversion. German Nat. Bank v. First Nat. Bank, 55 Neb. 86 (75 N. W. 531).

——Choses in action or equitable rights.

18. (1871.) A judgment creditor may reach the unpaid purchase-money, for the sale of lands by a creditor's bill. Filley v. Duncan, 1 Neb. 134 (93 Am. Dec. 339).

19. (1871.) If an insolvent convert his property into notes, payable to a third party as his assignee, and the transaction is concealed from his creditors, a creditors' bill will lie to reach the fund, and the plaintiff therein will be entitled to it. Rogers v. Jones, 1 Neb. 417.

20. (1891.) Where a bill of sale given as security for a debt is not filed as the law directs to make it effective as to creditors, the property covered by it is liable to seizure in satisfaction of a judgment against the seller, while the property remains in his possession. Conway v. St. Joseph Iron Co., 33 Neb. 454 (50 N. W. 326).

21. (1892.) Where an officer of a bank received notes, payable to an individual member of a partnership to secure the latter's private debts, knowing that the notes belonged to the company as proceeds of a sale of the firm business and stock, the notes were properly subjected to the payment of the firm debts in a creditors' bill by the partnership creditors. Tolerton v. McLain, 35 Neb. 725 (53 N. W. 667).

——Funds in custody of court.

22. (1887.) While the general rule is that funds in the hands of the clerk of a court are not subject to garnishment in an action at law, yet, in a proper case, a court of equity may subject such funds to the payment of the claims of a creditor. Weaver v. Cressman, 21 Neb. 675 (33 N. W. 478). [Overruled. Anheuser-Busch Brewing Co. v. Hier, 52 Neb. 424].

22*a*. (1897.) An action in equity will

——— Real estate.

23. (1883.) Lands in this state which have been conveyed to a non-resident of the state, to hinder or defraud creditors, may be subject to the payment of the debts of the actual owner thereof Keene v. Sallenbach, 15 Neb. 200 (18 N. W. 75).

24. (1888.) Where property is held by a trustee which cannot be made subject to an execution, an action in the nature of a creditors' bill, and for an accounting, will lie. Stoll v. Gregg, 23 Neb. 228 (36 N. W. 495).

25. (1901.) If a defendant owns real estate having the entire beneficial interest therein, the legal title being in another, a court of equity may, in proper proceedings, subject such real estate to the payment of a judgment against the owner without finding that the title was so placed in another with fraudulent intent. Cochran v. Cochran, 62 Neb. 450 (87 N. W. 152).

26. (1902.) Real estate platted into lots and blocks and dedicated for a public cemetery cannot be reached by an equitable proceeding in the nature of a creditors' bill. First Nat. Bank of Pawnee City v. Hazels, 63 Neb. 844 (89 N. W. 378; 56 L. R. A. 765).

27. (1902.) An action in the nature of a creditors' bill cannot be maintained to set aside the conveyance of property which is exempt to the defendant as a homestead Jayne v. Hymer, 66 Neb. 785 (92 N. W. 1019).

Conditions precedent.

——— Recovery of judgment.

28. (1898.) Before one having a general claim against another can maintain a creditors' bill to enforce the same, he must first have reduced it to judgment. Fairbanks v. Welshans, 55 Neb. 362; (1901) Moore v. Omaha Life Ass'n, 62 Neb. 497 (87 N. W. 321).

29. (1901.) A creditor whose claim has not been reduced to judgment cannot maintain an action against an insolvent corporation for distribution of its assets. Merchants Nat. Bank of Omaha v. McDonald, 63 Neb. 363 (88 N. W. 492; 89 N. W. 770).

30. (1903.) In order to maintain an action in the nature of a creditors' bill in aid of execution, to set aside a deed and subject the land described therein to the payment of a judgment, it is necessary to prove by some competent evidence, the existence of a valid judgment. Hayek v. Pracheil, 4 Unof., 528 (95 N. W. 35).

31. (1904.) A creditor whose claim has not been reduced to judgment and who has neither a general nor specific lien on his debtor's property, is not entitled to have such property impounded as security for the claim, nor is such creditor entitled to an injunction restraining his debtor from disposing of some or all of his property, and mere insolvency and inability to reach a particular fund by garnishee process are not sufficient to take a case out of the general rule above stated. Brumbaugh v. Jones, 70 Neb. 786 (98 N. W. 54).

32. (1905.) A party cannot maintain an action in the nature of a creditors' suit to reach property of his debtor fraudulently conveyed until the claim has been reduced to judgment, and until judgment is obtained by the creditor the statute of limitations will not, under ordinary circumstances, commence to run against such a suit. Ainsworth v. Roubal, 74 Neb. 723 (105 N. W. 248).

——— Exhaustion of legal remedies.

33. (1888.) A judgment against a defendant subjecting personal property, held by the wife, to the payment of plaintiff's judgment against the husband, though silent as to whether such property is subject to execution, will not be molested. Stoll v. Gregg, 23 Neb. 228 (36 N. W. 495).

34. (1891.) In a proceeding to subject to the payment of a judgment property conveyed before judgment was recovered, upon a debt contracted for machinery for a mill, the plaintiff is not obliged to first exhaust his lien on the mill property where prior and superior liens are sufficient to more than absorb the same. Allis v. Newman, 33 Neb. 597 (50 N. W. 1048).

35. (1898.) When the legal estates of a judgment debtor have been exhausted, a petition in the nature of a creditors' bill will lie in order to subject to payment of the judgment land in which his estate is equitable only and which could not be reached on execution, or, if reached, could not be sold to advantage because of the clouded condition of the title. Millard v. Parsell, 57 Neb. 178 (77 N. W. 390).

36. (1900.) The exhaustion of the remedy at law against an indorser on the instrument merged into judgment, and who was not a party to the judgment proceedings, is not essential to the maintenance of an equitable action against the judgment debtors. Thompson v. La Rue, 59 Neb. 614 (81 N. W. 612).

37. (1901.) Upon proceedings in error from a decree in equity, the error assigned in the motion for new trial being that the decision is contrary to law, the finding that execution was duly issued out of the proper court, directed to the sheriff and against the proper defendant in execution, and that the execution was returned unsatisfied, is a sufficient finding that defendant had no property subject to execution. Cochran v. Cochran, 62 Neb. 450 (87 N. W. 152).

38. (1901.) In a creditors' suit brought to set aside a fraudulent conveyance, return of execution nulla bona is conclusive of the question that the creditor has exhausted his legal remedy, and an answer which alleges that the debtor had property subject to levy upon execution, in the absence of an allegation of fraud or collusion on the part of the sheriff, does not state a defense. Nebraska Nat. Bank v. Hallowell, 63 Neb. 309 (88 N. W. 556).

39. (1902.) A creditor will not be required to exhaust the statutory proceedings in aid of execution before resorting to equity, to charge another creditor for chattel property fraudulently obtained and disposed of by the latter. Chamberlain Banking House v. Turner-Frazer Mercantile Co., 66 Neb. 48 (92 N. W. 172).

Enforcing right by attachment.

40. The creditor, if he chooses, may, before reducing his claim to judgment, commence an action aided by attachment and seize the estate fraudulently conveyed by his debtor, and after judgment in the attachment suit he may enforce his lien by an action in the nature of a creditors' bill. This course may be pursued, whether the debtor is a resident of the state or a non-resident. (1883) Keene v. Sallenbach, 15 Neb. 200 (18 N. W. 75); (1885) Kennard, Daniels & Co. v. Hollenbeck, 17 Neb. 362 (22 N. W. 771); (1885) Kimbro v. Clark, 17 Neb. 403 (23 N. W. 788); (1905) Ainsworth v. Roubal, 74 Neb. 723 (105 N. W. 248).

Accounting by officer of insolvent corporation.

41. (1902.) It was error, in a creditors' bill, on a judgment against a corporation, to discharge the president of the corporation and the managing officer from an accounting for the assets which the evidence clearly showed he had received. Benedict v. T. L. V. Land & Cattle Co., 66 Neb. 236 (92 N. W. 210).

Defenses.

42. (1898.) Matters which, if available at all, might have been urged in defense to an application for a deficiency judgment cannot be urged in defense of a creditors' suit to enforce such judgment. Millard v. Parsell, 57 Neb. 178 (77 N. W. 390).

43. (1907.) A fraudulent grantee cannot plead the subsequent discharge in bankruptcy of his grantor as a defense in a creditor's suit brought more than four months prior to the institution of the bankruptcy proceeding, where the land involved was never brought within the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court. Flint v. Chaloupka, 78 Neb. 594 (111 N. W. 465).

Estoppel.

44. (1885.) Where a merchant sells his entire stock of goods to another, taking time notes in payment which he transfers to a third party, and a creditor of the merchant brings suit against him and attaches the goods in the hands of the purchaser, on the ground of fraud, but which suit he abandoned, and sued on a creditor's suit to subject a judgment, recovered by the transferee of the notes given in payment of the stock of goods against the maker thereof, to the payment of his debt, the defendant in such suit is estopped to set up as a defense a satisfaction of plaintiff's debt by means of his attachment suit. Sayre v. Thompson, 18 Neb. 33 (24 N. W. 383).

Creditors entitled to relief.

45. (1874.) An attaching creditor cannot maintain an action, in the nature of a creditor's bill, to have an alleged fraudulent conveyance from his debtor set aside. Such an action can only be maintained by a judgment creditor. Weil v. Lankins, 3 Neb. 384.

46. (1901.) A general creditor cannot maintain a creditor's suit. Merchants Nat. Bank of Omaha v. McDonald, 63 Neb. 363 (88 N. W. 492; 89 N. W. 770).

47. (1902.) A trustee in bankruptcy, acting for the creditors of the bankrupt, may maintain an action in the nature of a creditors' bill to set aside a fraudulent conveyance without reducing the claims of the creditors to judgment. In all other things he possesses only such rights and powers as they can exercise for themselves. Hood v. Blair State Bank, 3 Unof. 432 (91 N. W. 701).

48. (1904.) Where a creditor has acquired a specific lien by the levy of an attachment, he is entitled to maintain a creditors' bill to remove obstructions to a sale of the premises, without reference to whether the judgment at law has, during the pendency of such creditors' suit, become dormant. Coulson v. Saltsman, 71 Neb. 495 (98 N. W. 1055).

Jurisdiction of district court.

49. (1903.) The district court is not deprived of jurisdiction in an action by creditors of an estate against the administratrix thereof and the county judge for an accounting of the estate property because plaintiff might have moved to retax the costs in the county court, or brought an action on the bond of the administratrix, or sued to recover the statutory penalty for taking illegal fees. McGlave v. Fitzgerald, 67 Neb. 417 (93 N. W. 692).

50. (1904.) When a creditors' bill is brought to set aside a cloud upon the title of property which has been seized in an attachment suit against a non-resident debtor, the court will look at the entire record in the attachment case to see whether jurisdiction was obtained therein. If from all the affidavits the essential facts to confer jurisdiction appear, the judgment will not be declared void. The defect in one affidavit may be supplied by the other and, if enough appears from all, it is sufficient. Jones v. Danforth, 71 Neb. 722 (99 N. W. 495).

Limitations.

51. (1888.) A creditor's suit brought to subject certain lands to the payment of a claim against an insolvent partnership, claiming that the premises are fraudulently held by another, is barred in four years after discovery of the fraud. Hellman v. Davis, 24 Neb. 793 (41 N. W. 309).

51*a*. (1905.) Actions for relief on the ground of fraud must be brought within four years from the discovery of the fraud or such facts and circumstances as are indicative thereof, and, if followed up, would lead to its discovery. Weckerly v. Taylor, 74 Neb. 84 (103 N. W. 1065).

Parties.

52. (1897.) A judgment creditor whose debtor has recovered in an action of attachment a sum of money from another which money is in the hands of the clerk of the court, should intervene as a party to the attachment in order to apply such funds to his claim. Anheuser-Busch Brewing Ass'n v. Hier, 52 Neb. 424 (72 N. W. 588).

53. (1901.) In a creditors' suit, where no receiver has been appointed or asked for, it is not necessary to allege that the suit is brought on behalf of all creditors who desire to join and contribute to the expense. Nebraska Nat. Bank v. Hallowell, 63 Neb. 309 (88 N. W. 556).

54. (1903.) To a petition in equity alleging fraudulent transfers of property and seeking to reach the fund conveyed, the debtor who transferred them is a necessary party. First Nat. Bank of Plattsmouth v. Gibson, 69 Neb. 21 (94 N. W. 965).

55. (1904.) Under the decedent law of this state, a non-resident who claims a life interest in lands located in this state, by virtue of a will which has never been probated in the courts of this state, is not a necessary party to a suit against the heirs at law of the decedent to subject the land to payment of the claims of creditors. Coulson v. Saltsman, 71 Neb. 495 (98 N. W. 1055).

Receivers.

56. (1903.) A plaintiff in a creditors' bill, who has been awarded a sale of lands but appeals from the decree because it refuses him any right against personal property, will not be refused the appointment of a receiver in the action on the ground that the lands have been conveyed by the judgment debtor subject to all its debts and liabilities. Benedict v. T. L. V. Land & Cattle Co., 4 Unof. 471 (94 N. W. 962).

57. (1903.) A plaintiff in a creditors' bill, who has been awarded a sale of lands, but appeals from the decree, because it refuses him any right against personal property, will not be refused a receiver merely because his remedy by sale of the land is suspended by his own appeal. Benedict v. T. L. V. Land & Cattle Co., 4 Unof. 471 (94 N. W. 962).

Lien acquired by suit.

58. (1901.) The filing of a creditors' bill establishes a lien in favor of the plaintiff on the property or fund sought to be reached; an intervener in a creditor's suit is entitled to a lien from the date of his intervention. Merchants Nat. Bank of Omaha v. McDonald, 63 Neb. 363 (88 N. W. 492; 89 N. W. 770).

www.libtool.com.cn

59. (1904.) The beginning of a creditor's action gives a specific lien upon the property which it is sought to reach. It is of the nature of an equitable execution, and it is unnecessary to issue a legal execution upon the judgment during the pendency of the creditor's action, in order to prevent the judgment from becoming dormant so far as that specific property is concerned. Flint v. Chaloupka, 72 Neb. 34 (99 N. W. 825; 117 Am. St. Rep. 771).

Pleading.

——— Petition.

60. (1887.) Where an action in the nature of a creditor's bill is brought by a non-resident of the state against a non-resident on a judgment rendered in another state, on which an execution had been returned unsatisfied, to reach funds belonging to the debtor in the hands of a clerk of a district court, the petition must show that there is no property of the debtor within the state subject to attachment or garnishment. Weaver v. Cressman, 21 Neb. 675 (33 N. W. 478).

60*a*. (1881.) When a petition in equity, filed by judgment creditors of the defendant to subject his "interest" in certain real estate to the payment of the judgment, fails to show that such interest is merely equitable, as would render the title of a purchaser at execution sale uncertain, no case for equitable cognizance is presented, and the action will be dismissed. Rosenfield v. Chada, 12 Neb. 25 (10 N. W. 465).

61. (1897.) A creditors' bill to subject to the payment of a judgment against a husband realty conveyed to his wife by a stranger, does not state a cause of action, where plaintiff fails to allege that the debt of the husband existed at the date of the conveyance, or that the latter caused the property to be conveyed to his wife in expectation of becoming indebted. Lavigne v. Tobin, 52 Neb. 686 (72 N. W. 1040).

62. (1898.) Petition set out in opinion held to be a creditors' bill, and as such not to state a cause of action. Fairbanks, Morse & Co. v. Welshans & Co., 55 Neb. 362 (75 N. W. 865).

63. (1898.) In an equitable action to subject the alleged fraudulently conveyed real property of a judgment defendant to the payment of the judgment against him, there is no sufficient foundation for an ordinary judgment against his transferee as a co-defendant if there is a failure to allege that the title of the said property by such transferee has been conveyed or subjected to a lien whereby the equitable relief sought has been rendered unavailable. First Nat. Bank of Plattsmouth v. Gibson, 57 Neb. 246 (77 N. W. 662).

64. (1899.) In a petition in the nature of a creditors' bill to annul a fraudulent conveyance the fact of the asserted fraud must be specifically stated, general allegations not being sufficient. Kemper v. Renshaw, 58 Neb. 513 (78 N. W. 1071).

65. (1902.) The allegation that an execution has been returned nulla bona is not necessary to render a creditors' bill invulnerable to demurrer. Howard v. Raymers, 64 Neb. 213 (89 N. W. 1004).

66. (1902.) Allegations of petition held to sufficiently show that plaintiff's judgment is based upon indebtedness contracted before the transfers of the property complained of. Chamberlain Banking House v. Turner-Frazer Mercantile Co., 66 Neb. 48 (92 N. W. 172).

67. (1902.) In order to maintain a creditors' suit against a wife to set aside a conveyance made to her by a third person, plaintiff must allege and prove that the relation of creditor and debtor existed between himself and the husband at the time such conveyance was executed, or that it was executed fraudulently with the expectation on the part of the husband that he would become indebted to the plaintiff, and to prevent, hinder and delay him in the collection of such debt when contracted. Jayne v. Hymer, 66 Neb. 785 (92 N. W. 1019).

——— Answer.

68. (1888.) Defenses to a suit by a judgment creditor to subject realty, held in the name of the debtor's brother, to the payment of the judgment debt, that the brother was in fact the true owner, and, also, that the premises was a homestead and occupied as such by the debtor, and a prayer to have it so adjudged, are not inconsistent, and it is error to compel an election upon which he will stand. Stubendorf & Co. v. Hoffman, 23 Neb. 360 (36 N. W. 581).

www.libtool.com.cn

69. (1902.) A married woman held title to certain real estate and a judgment creditor of her husband filed a bill to subject the property to the payment of his judgment. The answer among other allegations contained the following: "Defendant denies every material allegation of the petition." Held, That as the plaintiff did not in any manner question the sufficiency of this answer in the district court he could not, on appeal, treat it as insufficient, or as confessing the allegations of the petition. Doering v. Kohout, 2 Unof. 436 (89 N. W. 268).

70. (1904.) Answer examined and held to state a good defense to the plaintiff's petition. Baxter v. Avery, 5 Unof. 316 (98 N. W. 667).

——— Issues and proof.

71. (1885.) Where the payee of a note given as a memorandum to show the amount to be paid by the maker from the proceeds of the sale of property delivered to him by the payee, and upon the maker purchasing real estate with such proceeds, taking title in his wife, the payee of the note by bringing an action in the nature of a creditors' suit to subject the premises to the payment of his judgment, abandons all equities he might have growing out of the original contract, and must prove the fraudulent character of the conveyance as must any other creditor. Kimbro v. Clark, 17 Neb. 403 (22 N. W. 788).

72. (1885.) Where after judgment and before the issuance of execution thereon, the defendant removed to another county, and the plaintiffs issued an execution to the original county, which was returned wholly unsatisfied for want of goods or lands, upon a creditors' bill being brought to subject a certain other judgment to the payment of said first named judgment, on the ground that said last named judgment was held in secret trust for the debtor in said first named judgment, and said bill contained an averment "that the said defendant, William H. Thompson, has no property whatever subject to sale on execution," held, sufficient. Sayre v. Thompson, 18 Neb. 33 (24 N. W. 383).

Evidence.

——— Admissibility.

73. (1884.) Where defendant is charged with the execution of a fraudulent deed, it is proper to allow him to testify to "the facts and circumstances relative to the conveyance." Union Nat. Bank v. Harrison, 16 Neb. 635 (21 N. W. 446).

——— Weight and sufficiency.

74. Evidence in a creditors' suit held sufficient to sustain a decree for plaintiff. (1894) Vandecar v. Johnson, 41 Neb. 577 (59 N. W. 918); (1894) First Nat. Bank v. Sloman, 42 Neb. 350 (60 N. W. 589; 47 Am. St. Rep. 707); (1895) Steinkraus v. Korth, 44 Neb. 777 (62 N. W. 1110); (1899) Millard v. Russell, 57 Neb. 178 (77 N. W. 390); (1899) Parlin O. & M. Co. v. Ulrich, 57 Neb. 780 (78 N. W. 275).

75. (1884.) The equities of the case being all with the defendants, the judgment in their favor upheld. Union Nat. Bank v. Harrison, 16 Neb. 635 (21 N. W. 446).

76. (1889.) In an action in the nature of a creditors' suit, to reach property for the satisfaction of a judgment, alleged to have been fraudulently conveyed by defendant to a nephew, thence by him to the wife, evidence showing the property was purchased with the wife's separate money will sustain a finding for defendant. Wood v. O'Hanlon, 26 Neb. 527 (42 N. W. 733).

77. (1890.) The facts stated at length in the opinion are sufficient to entitle the plaintiff to equitable relief. Smith v. Shaffer, 29 Neb. 656 (45 N. W. 936).

78. (1892.) M. and H., doing business at C. under the name of M., sold their business and stock, taking the notes of the purchasers payable to M. M. sold one of the notes to a bank and indorsed the same. He also delivered to the bank other firm notes to secure his private indebtedness. In a creditors' bill by creditors of the firm to subject the latter notes to payment of the firm debts, held, that the proof clearly showed that the officer of the bank taking the notes as security for a personal debt of M., a member of the firm, knew that they belonged to the partnership and that the creditors of the firm were entitled to the proceeds of such notes. Tolerton v. McLain, 35 Neb. 725 (53 N. W. 667).

79. (1894.) A creditors' bill to restrain a transfer of a certificate of deposit in a bank by a judgment creditor, sustained by the evidence. Rathbun v. Dooley, 39 Neb. 560 (58 N. W. 136).

80. (1894.) Discussion of evidence tending to show that property was conveyed to, and held by, the wife in fraud of the rights of her husband's creditors. First Nat. Bank of Chicago v. Sloman, 42 Neb. 350 (60 N. W. 589; 42 Am. St. Rep. 707).

81. (1894.) The evidence in support of a creditors' bill being sufficient to sustain the finding of the trial court, its judgment must be affirmed when no other question than such sufficiency is presented by the record. Rathbun v. Dooley, 39 Neb. 560 (58 N. W. 136).

82. (1895.) In an action to subject to the payment of her husband's debts real property held by the wife, a finding sustained by sufficient evidence that the said property was wholly acquired by means legally and equitably belonging to the wife, justified the district court in dismissing the action in so far as said property was concerned. Trester v. Pike, 43 Neb. 779 (62 N. W. 211).

83. (1900.) A judgment was obtained in the county court of the county in which the judgment debtors resided, and a transcript thereof filed in the district court, upon which execution was duly issued and returned nulla bona. Action in the nature of a creditors' bill was begun, and the debtors answering alleged and offered proof of ownership of a small tract of real estate of uncertain value in another county subject to execution. Evidence examined, and held insufficient to defeat plaintiffs' right of recovery in their equity action. Thompson v. La Rue, 59 Neb. 614 (81 N. W. 612).

84. (1902.) Evidence examined, and held not sufficient to sustain the judgment. Westervelt v. Filter, 2 Unof. 731 (89 N. W. 994).

85. (1902.) Evidence examined, and held to support the judgment of the district court discussing the bill. First Nat. Bank of Plattsmouth v. Petersen, 3 Unof. 102 (91 N. W. 195).

General judgment as bar to special relief.

86. (1905.) In a creditors' bill asking merely to have the conveyance of land made subject to plaintiff's claim, a judgment for plaintiff will bar a subsequent action by him to have rents and profits previously received by the purchaser, applied to the claim, although the latter relief was not prayed for in the former action. First Nat. Bank of Plattsmouth v. Gibson, 74 Neb. 232 (104 N. W. 174).

Dismissal.

87. (1899.) A motion for dismissal of a proceeding to reverse the adjudication in an action by creditors' bill, the decree which determined the amount due the creditor a judgment debt, and annulled conveyances of titles to land as fraudulent, will not be sustained, for the reason that the debt has, subsequent to the decree, been satisfied and released. Boldt v. First Nat. Bank of West Point, 59 Neb. 283 (80 N. W. 905).

88. (1902.) Where there was evidence in a creditors' bill showing that one of the defendants had purchased property of considerable value from the debtor, and he defaulted and refused to answer, it was error to dismiss as to him. Benedict v. T. L. V. Land & Cattle Co., 66 Neb. 236 (92 N. W. 210).

89. (1902.) It is error to dismiss a creditors' bill on finding that certain of the defendants were indebted to the judgment debtor for rent, for the reason that plaintiff had an adequate remedy by garnishment, as one of the objects of such a bill is to avoid a multiplicity of suits. Benedict v. T. L. V. Land & Cattle Co., 66 Neb. 236 (92 N. W. 210).

Relief awarded.

90. (1905.) In a creditors' bill asking merely to have the conveyance of land made subject to plaintiff's claim, a judgment for plaintiff will bar a subsequent action by him to have rents and profits previously received by the purchaser, applied to the claim, although the latter relief was not prayed for in the former action. First Nat. Bank of Plattsmouth v. Gibson, 74 Neb. 232 (104 N. W. 174).

Lien of judgment.

91. (1904.) Creditors of an insolvent debtor filed a bill against the debtor, joining with him as defendant a bank to whom the debtor was alleged to have been made a fraudulent transfer of chattels, the object of the bill being to cancel the mortgage and subject the fund created by the sale of the chattels to their claims. The decree canceled the mortgage and orderd the bank to pay the fund into court. Held, That the decree did not constitute a lien on the real estate of the bank. Campbell v.

Noyes, Norman & Co., 72 Neb. 201 (100 N. W. 205).

Interest on judgment.

92. (1901.) Where the decree in a suit in the nature of a creditors' bill orders a defendant to pay a fund in his hands into court forthwith, interest is chargeable thereon as upon any other judgment, without an express direction to that effect in the decree. Stuart v. Burcham, 62 Neb. 84 (86 N. W. 898; 89 Am. St. Rep. 739).

93. (1901.) A defendant in a suit to which all the claimants of a fund in his hands are parties, who, being ordered by the decree to pay the fund into court, excepts to such decree and participates in an appeal therefrom by one of the claimants, cannot be heard to claim, after affirmance of the decree, that he was a mere stakeholder and therefore is not chargeable with interest. Stuart v. Burcham, 62 Neb. 84 (86 N. W. 893; 89 Am. St. Rep. 739).

Execution and enforcement of judgment.

94. (1901.) Execution is a proper process to enforce a decree directing a defendant to pay money into court. Stuart v. Burcham, 62 Neb. 84 (86 N. W. 898; 89 Am. St. Rep. 739).

95. (1902.) A supersedeas bond conditioned to pay costs and abide the result of an appeal, is not sufficient to prevent a successful defendant in a creditors' suit brought to set aside an assignment of a judgment from proceedings to collect the judgment, where no provisions as to the conditions of the bond were made in the order of the district court. Carson v. Jansen, 65 Neb. 423 (91 N. W. 398).

Sale of property under decree.

96. (1898.) In a suit to subject realty claimed by a wife to payment of judgments against her husband, where the decree in such suit was for plaintiff, ascertained the amounts due on the judgments, and directed the sheriff to sell the realty as upon execution, it was held that a sale under the decree, rather than upon executions, vested title in the purchaser. Schott v. Machamer, 54 Neb. 514 (74 N. W. 854).

97. (1901.) Issuance of the order of sale pending a motion for a new trial is no ground of objection to the sale. Cochran v. Cochran, 1 Unof. 508 (95 N. W. 778).

98. (1901.) A direction in a decree in a creditor's suit that certain property be "sold as upon execution" is sufficient authority for a sale by the sheriff. Cochran v. Cochran, 1 Unof. 508 (95 N. W. 778).

99. (1901.) Technical irregularities in sale proceedings which are not shown to have been and in their nature could not have been prejudicial, are no ground for setting the sale aside. Cochran v. Cochran, 1 Unof. 508 (95 N. W. 778).

100. (1902.) Under a prayer for general relief in a creditors' bill, a sale of property not attached may be decreed, where the facts entitling a party to such sale are alleged and proved, although the petition asks specifically only for a sale of attached property. Columbia Nat. Bank v. Baldwin, 64 Neb. 732 (90 N. W. 890).

Distribution among creditors.

101. (1901.) Certain judgment creditors consented to a consolidation of their various bills, no order being at the time made or requested determining their respective priorities, and thereafter all shared in the prosecution and expense of such consolidated suit. Held, That it does not affirmatively appear that the trial court erred in requiring such creditors to prorate in the proceeds of the suit. Nebraska Nat. Bank v. Hallowell, 63 Neb. 309 (88 N. W. 556).

102. (1901.) A creditor who has reduced his claim to judgment and had execution thereon returned unsatisfied who intervenes in such action is entitled to a preference in the payment of his claim. Merchants Nat. Bank of Omaha v. McDonald, 63 Neb. 363 (88 N. W. 492; 89 N. W. 770).

103. (1901.) As to judgment creditors who bring individual suits, and prosecute them to judgment on their own account and solely at their own expense, the rule may be regarded as settled that the creditor first in point of time in the commencement of his suit is entitled to priority. Nebraska Nat. Bank v. Hallowell, 63 Neb. 309 (88 N. W. 556).

Review.

104. (1884.) Upon the pleadings and proof, in an action in the nature of a creditor's suit the decree of the district court affirmed in part, and modified in part. Sweet v. Craig, 15 Neb. 349 (18 N. W. 505).

105. (1889.) In an action in equity, in the nature of a creditor's bill to subject certain property held in the name of a wife to the payment of debts of one who conveyed property in fraud of his creditors to her husband, the defense being that the property was the separate estate of the wife derived from her parents, held, that there being a conflict of testimony on that point and doubt as to such separate estate, the judgment of the trial court finding against the same would not be set aside. Hart v. Dogge, 27 Neb. 256 (42 N. W. 1035). [Rehearing. 29 Neb. 237 (45 N. W. 626).]

106. (1901.) Errors of law in a decree and in the proceedings leading thereto are not reviewable upon objections to confirmation of a sale had thereunder. Cochran v. Cochran, 1 Unof. 508 (95 N. W. 778).

I. NATURE AND ELEMENTS OF CRIME AND DEFENSES IN GENERAL.

Making cigarettes as criminal offense, see Cigarettes.

Sale of diseased animals, see Animals, §§ 109-111.

Nature of crime in general.

1. (1882.) The test of whether an action is civil or criminal is whether it is punishable by indictment. Mitchell v. State, 12 Neb. 538 (11 N. W. 848).

2. (1889.) In order that an attempt to commit a crime may be indictable, it must go so far that it would result in the crime if not frustrated by extraneous circumstances. Mere preparation is not sufficient. Johnson v. State, 27 Neb. 687 (43 N. W. 425).

3. (1895.) A crime is a wrong of which the law takes cognizance as injurious to the public, and punishes in a criminal proceeding in the name of the state. Bohner v. Bohner, 46 Neb. 204 (64 N. W. 700).

4. (1899.) The state, in a criminal prosecution, may not invoke against the prisoner the doctrine of estoppel. Bailey v. State, 57 Neb. 706 (78 N. W. 284; 73 Am. St. Rep. 540).

Power to punish crime.

5. (1875.) The same act may constitute an offense against both the state and a municipal government, and both may punish it without infringing any constitutional right. City of Brownville v. Cook, 4 Neb. 101.

Application of common law.

6. (1903.) While there are in this state no common-law crimes, the definition of an act which is forbidden by the statute, but not defined by it, may be ascertained by reference to the common law. State v. De Wolfe, 67 Neb. 321 (93 N. W. 746).

7. (1903.) In this state all public offenses are statutory and no person can be punished for any act or omission not made penal by the plain import of the written law. State v. De Wolfe, 67 Neb. 321 (93 N. W. 746).

8. (1905.) There are no common law crimes in this state. Lange v. Royal Highlanders, 75 Neb. 196 (110 N. W. 1110).

Statutory provisions.

9. (1897.) The defining of crimes and the prescribing of punishment therefor is a legislative function. Davis v. State, 51 Neb. 301 (70 N. W. 984).

10. (1897.) A criminal statute is not void for uncertainty which prescribes as a punishment for doing a certain act the same punishment which is prescribed for doing another named act, when the same criminal code defines the latter act and prescribes its punishment. Davis v. State, 51 Neb. 301 (70 N. W. 984).

11. (1897.) The legislature of Nebraska, in the enactment of the Ohio criminal code, is presumed to have adopted the construction thereof by the courts of Ohio, but such construction may be rejected for reasons which would require the overruling thereof had it been first adopted in Nebraska. Morgan v. State, 51 Neb. 672 (71 N. W. 788).

12. (1898.) In order to punish one as for a crime the offense must be within the plain import of the words of the statute creating or defining the crime. An offense not within the words cannot be adjudged a crime because within the reason or spirit; and this principle cannot be evaded by holding that one performing acts which are denounced as a crime when committed by a particular class of persons is estopped from denying that he is within that class. Moore v. State, 53 Neb. 831 (74 N. W. 319).

13. (1898.) When a penal statute is made to apply only to a certain class of persons, the description of the class is so far descriptive of the offense, and that the person charged is within the class is a substantive element of the crime itself. Moore v. State, 53 Neb. 831 (74 N. W. 319).

14. (1901.) In adopting the criminal code the legislature intended to provide a rational system of procedure for the trial of persons accused of crime, and to abolish the hypertechnical rules of the common law. Burlingim v. State, 61 Neb. 276 (85 N. W. 76).

15. (1901.) A statute which denounces an act as criminal does not cease to be effective because another statute declares the same act to be a crime when done at a particular place or under special circumstances. Chapman v. State, 61 Neb. 888 (86 N. W. 907).

16. (1907.) It is no objection to a criminal statute that it does not provide the minimum penalty which may be imposed for its violation. Siren v. State, 78 Neb. 778 (111 N. W. 798).

——— Retroactive operation.

17. (1884.) Where a new act is in the very words of a statute which it repeals, and it is clear that the repeal and re-enactment were intended to continue in force the uninterrupted operation of the old statute, they will be so construed. And this will apply to crimes committed before the new act took effect. State v. Wish, 15 Neb. 448 (19 N. W. 686).

18. (1884.) A law which makes an action done before its passage, which was innocent when done, criminal, and punishes such action, or that aggravates a crime or makes it greater than when it was committed, or which, in relation to that offense or its consequences alters the situation of the party to his disadvantage, or that changes the punishment and inflicts greater punishment than the law annexed to the crime when committed, is an ex post facto law, and in so far as it affects the punishment of the party to his disadvantage is void. Marion v. State, 16 Neb. 349 (20 N. W. 289, 396).

19. (1884.) On the 20th day of April, 1883, the plaintiff in error was indicted for the crime of murder, alleged to have been committed on the 15th day of May, 1872, which was before the taking effect of the present criminal code. Held, That he must be tried by the law in force at the time of the commission of the alleged offense. Marion v. State, 16 Neb. 349 (20 N. W. 289, 396).

20. (1884.) The repeal of a criminal law by an amendatory act which changes the repealed act only by reducing the punishment, where the repeal and re-enactment were intended to continue in force the uninterrupted operation of the old statute, will apply to crimes committed before the new act took effect, and the offender may be punished under the law as amended. Hair v. State, 16 Neb. 601 (21 N. W. 464).

Criminal intent.

21. (1883.) "Wilful" or "wilfully" means the commission of an act with free activity of the perpetrator's will. Minkler v. State, 14 Neb. 181 (15 N. W. 330).

Digitized by Google

Malice.

www.libtool.com.cn

22. (1899.) "Malice" denotes that condition of mind which is manifested by intentionally doing a wrongful act without just cause or excuse, and means any wilful or corrupt intention of the mind. McVey v. State, 57 Neb. 471 (77 N. W. 1111).

Degrees of offenses.

23. (1880.) When the court, in affixing the punishment for a given offense, is authorized in its discretion to consider it either as a felony or as a mere misdemeanor, and treat it accordingly, the punishment which the court actually inflicts must determine the grade of that offense, especially when in consequence of such offense it is sought to deprive the offender of civil rights. Gandy v. State, 10 Neb. 243 (4 N. W. 1019).

Defenses in general.

24. (1885.) When no confession or admission of guilt has been made by a party on trial for a criminal offense, it is immaterial what inducements may have been held out to him for the purpose of obtaining a confession or admission of guilt. McLain v. State, 18 Neb. 154 (24 N. W. 720).

25. (1887.) The fact that a defendant was acting as the agent of another in the commission of an offense will afford no excuse or justification for the act in a prosecution therefor. Allyn v. State, 21 Neb. 593 (33 N. W. 212).

26. (1896.) The fact that an accomplice gave state's evidence pursuant to a promise of immunity made by the prosecutor without consent of the court, does not constitute a legal defense to a prosecution against the accomplice. Whitney v. State, 53 Neb. 287 (73 N. W. 696).

Alibi.

Instructions as to alibi, see post, §§ 628-633.

27. (1898.) "Alibi," as employed to express the defense of the accused person in a criminal action, means the claim of the party charged of presence at the time the crime is pleaded to have been committed at a place other than the one alleged of the crime. Peyton v. State, 54 Neb. 188 (74 N. W. 597).

II. CAPACITY TO COMMIT CRIME, AND RESPONSIBILITY FOR CRIME.

In general.

28. (1902.) The generally accepted test of responsibility for crime, is the capacity to understand the nature of the act alleged to be criminal, and the ability to distinguish between right and wrong with respect to such act. Schwartz v. State, 65 Neb. 196 (91 N. W. 190); (1904) Bothwell v. State, 71 Neb. 747 (99 N. W. 669).

Insanity.

29. (1876.) The degree of mental unsoundness, in order to exempt a person from punishment, must be such as to create an uncontrollable impluse to do the act charged. If it be found insufficient to deprive the accused of ability to distinguish right from wrong, he should be held responsible for the consequences of his act. Wright v. State, 4 Neb. 407.

30. (1881.) Where an individual lacks the mental capacity to distinguish right from wrong, in reference to the particular act complained of, the law will not hold him responsible. Hawe v. State, 11 Neb. 537 (10 N. W. 452; 38 Am. Rep. 375).

31. (1881.) Where insanity is shown to exist, whether it be general or partial, if there remains a degree of reason sufficient to discern the difference between good and evil at the time the offense was committed, the accused is responsible for his acts. Hawe v. State, 11 Neb. 537 (10 N. W. 452; 38 Am. Rep. 375).

32. (1883.) If one charged with crime have the mental capacity to distinguish right from wrong in respect to the particular act charged, he is responsible. Hart v. State, 14 Neb. 572 (16 N. W. 905).

33. (1889.) A person, though of weak mind, but with sufficient capacity to distinguish right from wrong in respect to the particular act charged, is accountable for his acts, and the plea of insanity will be unavailing. Anderson v. State, 25 Neb. 550 (41 N. W. 357).

34. (1899.) One suffering under a defect of reason to such an extent that he was incapable of distinguishing between right and wrong with respect to a particular act is not amenable to the laws against crime for having committed such act. Knights v. State, 58 Neb. 225 (78 N. W. 508; 76 Am. St. Rep. 78).

——Moral insanity.

35. (1902.) Moral insanity as a criminal defense, is not recognized in this state. One who knows abstractly what is right and what is wrong, must at his peril, choose the right and shun the wrong. He cannot yield to a vicious impluse, and allege mere weakness of will as an excuse. Schwartz v. State, 65 Neb. 196 (91 N. W. 190); (1904) Bothwell v. State, 71 Neb. 747 (99 N. W. 669).

www.libtool.com.cn

Intoxication.

Admissibility of evidence of intoxication of defendant, see post, § 244.

Instructions as to intoxication, see post, § 627.

36. (1879.) Temporary insanity produced immediately by intoxication does not destroy responsibility where the accused, when sane and responsible, made himself voluntarily drunk. Schlencker v. State, 9 Neb. 241 (1 N. W. 857).

37. (1893.) Intoxication is no justification or excuse for crime; but evidence of excessive intoxication, by which the party is wholly deprived of reason, if the intoxication was not indulged in to commit crime, may be submitted to the jury for it to consider whether in fact a crime has been committed, or to determine the degree, where the offense consists of several degrees. O'Grady v. State, 36 Neb. 320 (54 N. W. 556).

38. (1898.) Drunkenness, in law, is no excuse for the commission of crime. Davis v. State, 54 Neb. 177 (74 N. W. 599).

III. PARTIES TO OFFENSES.

Parties to prosecution, see Indictment and Information, §§ 86-107.

Principals.

39. (1878.) Principals in the second degree are those who do not with their own hands commit the act, but are present, aiding and abetting it. Walrath v. State, 8 Neb. 80.

40. (1881.) There is no substantial difference between prinicpals in the first and second degrees. The distinction is nominal merely. Cooney v. Burke, 11 Neb. 258 (9 N. W. 57).

41. (1903.) Under the criminal code, the law does not distinguish between principals in the first and second degrees. Jahnke v. State, 68 Neb. 154 (94 N. W. 158).

——Aiding or abetting.

Aider and abettor to assault, see Assault and Battery, § 53.

42. (1894.) All persons who, being present, aid, assist, or abet in the commission of a felony may be prosecuted as principals. Hill v. State, 42 Neb. 503 (60 N. W. 916).

43. (1895.) Sections 1 and 2 of the criminal code, so far as they define accessories, are declaratory of the common law. One who is present when the crime is committed, aiding and assisting therein, is notwithstanding these sections, a principal, although his hand was not the instrument through which the crime was perpetrated. Dixon v. State, 46 Neb. 298 (64 N. W. 961).

44. (1896.) Section 1 of the criminal code is declaratory merely of the common law rule by which an accessory before the fact is defined as one who aids, abets, or procures the commission of a felony by another in his absence, and does not refer to one who, being present at the commission of a crime, aids or assists therein. Casey v. State, 49 Neb. 403 (68 N. W. 643).

45. (1898.) The effect of section 1 of the criminal code is to make the aiding, abetting, or procuring of another to commit a felony a substantive and independent crime. Oerter v. State, 57 Neb. 135 (77 N. W. 367).

46. (1903.) One by whose incitement or instigation a felony is committed, when he is neither actually nor constructively present, is an aider, abettor or procurer within the meaning of section 1 of the criminal code. Lamb v. State, 69 Neb. 212 (95 N. W. 1050).

47. (1903.) Section 1 of the criminal code, declaring that any person who procures another to commit a felony shall be punished by imprisonment, which was adopted in 1873, is applicable to all acts made felonies by subsequent legislation. Lamb v. State, 69 Neb. 212 (95 N. W. 1050).

Accessories before the fact.

Accessory to crime of abortion, see Abortion, § 2.

Accessories to crime of embezzlement, see Embezzlement,

48. (1894.) Where intent is an element of a crime, one who does not participate in the intent, and is without knowledge of it, cannot be guilty as an accessory before the fact. Wagner v. State, 43 Neb. 1 (61 N. W. 85).

Digitized by Google

49. (1894.) In misdemeanors there are no accessories. Those whose conduct is such that it would constitute them accessories before the fact, if the principal offense were a felony, are, if it be a misdemeanor, guilty as principals. Wagner v. State, 43 Neb. 1 (61 N. W. 85).

49a. (1908.) One who advises others to commit larceny, but who is several miles distant at the time of the commission of the offense, and who takes no part therein, but assists in the disposal of the proceeds after the theft has been fully committed, is not a principal, but an accessory. Skidmore v. State, 80 Neb. 698 (115 N. W. 288).

IV. JURISDICTION.

In general.

50. (1897.) Jurisdiction to pronounce a particular sentence is as essential as jurisdiction of the person and subject-matter. In re [illegible], 50 Neb. 481 (70 N. W. 51).

Supreme court.

51. (1902.) The only authority the supreme court has to take cognizance of crimes, is that given by the constitution in the grant of appellate jurisdiction. State v. Missouri P. R. Co., 64 Neb. 679 (90 N. W. 877).

County judge.

52. (1886.) When a defendant is arrested upon a complaint filed with the county judge charging a misdemeanor, and such defendant upon arraignment before such judge pleads guilty to the charge preferred, the county judge has authority, under section 313 of the criminal code, to render judgment of a conviction, within his jusridiction, and enforce the same by imprisonment, as in other cases of a conviction of misdemeanor. Ex parte Maule, 19 Neb. 273 (27 N. W. 119).

53. (1898.) The criminal jurisdiction of a county court or county judge is the same as that of a justice of the peace. In re Chenoweth, 56 Neb. 688 (77 N. W. 63).

54. (1898.) Section 16, article VI of the constitution, does not invest the county courts of the state with any criminal jurisdiction whatsoever, but authorizes the legislature to define the criminal jurisdiction of such courts within certain limitations. In re Chenoweth, 56 Neb. 688 (77 N. W. 63).

Justices of the peace.

55. (1893.) A justice of the peace has no jurisdiction to sit as a trial court in a criminal case where the statute creating the offense provides that the punishment may be both a fine and imprisonment. In such case the justice can proceed only as an examining magistrate. State v. Yates, 36 Neb. 287 (54 N. W. 429).

56. (1895.) The jurisdiction of justices of the peace is by section 18, article VI of the constitution, limited to offenses for which the penalty prescribed does not exceed three months' imprisonment in the county jail, or a fine not exceeding $100. Keeshan v. State, 46 Neb. 155 (64 N. W. 695).

57. (1895.) The only authority of a justice of the peace under section 17, criminal code, previous to the amendment thereof in 1893, was that of an examining magistrate. Keeshan v. State, 46 Neb. 155 (64 N. W. 695).

Police judge.

58. (1877.) The police judge in cities of the first class has no jurisdiction in cases of felony, except to recognize the accused to appear before the district court for trial. Thompson v. State, 6 Neb. 102).

Crimes committed on Indian reservations.

59. (1875.) The federal courts have no jurisdiction of the crime of larceny alleged to have been committed on an Indian reservation in the state of Nebraska. Painter v. Ives, 4 Neb. 122.

60. (1884.) The courts of this state have jurisdiction and authority to try and punish parties for crimes committed on the Indian reservations within the state. Marion v. State, 16 Neb. 349 (20 N. W. 289, 396); (1886) Marion v. State, 20 Neb. 233 (29 N. W. 911; 57 Am. Rep. 825).

61. (1886.) The courts of this state have no authority to prosecute and punish one Indian for a crime committed against another on the reservation to which they each belong, so long as they maintain their tribal relations. Ex parte Cross, 20 Neb. 417 (30 N. W. 428).

V. VENUE.

A. Place of Bringing Prosecution.

Venue of prosecution for embezzlement, see Embezzlement, § 12.

County or district where offense is committed.

62. (1881.) A district court while sitting in one county, has no jurisdiction over crimes committed in any other organized county. Olive v. State, 11 Neb. 1 (7 N. W. 444).

63. (1881.) Under section 11 of the bill of rights, providing that one accused of crime shall have a trial in the "county or district" in which the offense is alleged to have been committed, the term "district" means the division of the state, from which a jury, for the particular term, may legally be drawn. Olive v. State, 11 Neb. 1 (7 N. W. 444).

64. (1894.) By the word "district," as used in section 11, bill of rights, providing place of trial in criminal cases, is not meant "judicial district," but that portion of the territory of the state over which a court may at a particular sitting exercise power in criminal matters. State, ex rel. Scott, v. Crinklaw, 40 Neb. 759 (59 N. W. 370).

65. (1894.) The object of the provision in section 11 of the bill of rights, for the trial of criminal prosecutions in the county or district where the crime is allaged to have been committed, was to embody in the fundamental law of the state the rule of the common law by which the accused was entitled to a trial before a jury of the vicinage or neighborhood, in order that he might have the benefit of his good character. State, ex rel. Scott, v. Crinklaw, 40 Neb. 759 (59 N. W. 370).

66. (1894.) The word "district," as used in section 11, bill of rights, providing place of trial, may, and generally does, refer to the county where the crime is supposed to have been committed, but also includes any and all territory, by law, attached to such county for judicial purposes. State, ex rel. Scott, v. Crinklaw, 40 Neb. 759 (59 N. W. 370).

67. (1894.) The constitutional right to a trial before a jury of the county or district where the crime is alleged to have been committed is a mere personal privilege of the accused, and not conferred upon him from any consideration of public policy. State, ex rel. Scott, v. Crinklaw, 40 Neb. 759 (59 N. W. 370).

——— Waiver of right.

68. (1894.) When the defendant in a criminal case makes application for a change of venue under the provisions of the criminal code, he thereby waives the constitutional right to a trial before a jury of the county or district where the crime is alleged to have been committed. State, ex rel. Scott, v. Crinklaw, 40 Neb. 759 (59 N. W. 370).

Offenses committed in unorganized territory.

69. (1876.) The act of February 25, 1875, authorizing any judge of the district court to designate the county in his district where an indictment may be found, and persons tried for felony committed in any unorganized county attached to such district, or in any county where no district courts are held, so far as it applies to such unorganized counties, is not unconstitutional; and the court of any county so designated has jurisdiction of the offense. Dodge v. State, 4 Neb. 220.

70. (1876.) If the indictment contain an averment of designation under the act authorizing the district judge to designate the county in which to find the same, sufficient appears of record to show that the court had jurisdiction, though no distinct copy of the order of the judge be set forth therein. Dodge v. State, 4 Neb. 220. [Overruled. Aultman v. Martin, 49 Neb. 103 (68 N. W. 340).]

71. (1881.) A county which has been organized for local government, under the law providing therefor, must be considered as organized for judicial purposes within the meaning of act of February 24, 1879, providing that when a crime is committed "within any unorganized county" the indictment may be found and the trial had in another county. Olive v. State, 11 Neb. 1 (7 N. W. 444).

72. (1882.) Unorganized territory attached to a county for "election, judicial, and revenue purposes" is, for such purposes a part of such county, and the district court sitting in that county has jurisdiction over crimes committed in said unorganized territory. Ex parte Crawford, 12 Neb. 379 (11 N. W. 494).

73. (1887.) Under chapter 10 of the Revised Statutes of 1866, all unorganized counties were attached to the nearest organized county directly east, for election, judicial, and revenue purposes; therefore, where a murder was alleged to have been committed in the county of Sioux, the party accused of committing the same could not be indicted and tried for the offense in Cheyenne county, it being directly south of Sioux county. Ex parte Carr, 22 Neb. 535 (35 N. W. 409).

74. (1904.) Statutes examined, and held that, by law, the territory defined by the legislative act of 1887 as Arthur county is attached to, and is within the jurisdiction of, McPherson county, and that the district court of that county has jurisdiction of crimes committed within such territory. Robinson v. State, 71 Neb. 142 (98 N. W. 694).

B. Change of Venue.

Power of court in general.

75. (1889.) The statute as to change of venue in criminal cases confers upon the district court in the county where the offense was committed power to order a change of venue to an adjoining county, but such power is confined to the jurisdiction of the county where the offense was committed. Gandy v. State, 27 Neb. 707 (43 N. W. 747, 44 N. W. 108).

Discretion of court.

76. (1881.) An application by accused for a change of the place of trial, is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial court, and unless abuse thereof is clearly shown, a decision on such application, will not be interfered with. Olive v. State, 11 Neb. 1 (7 N. W. 444).

77. (1876.) Applications for change of venue, are addressed to the sound discretion of the court, and its ruling thereon will not be disturbed, where there is no abuse of that discretion. Smith v. State, 4 Neb. 277; (1900) Welsh v. State, 60 Neb. 101 (82 N. W. 368); (1901) Argabright v. State, 62 Neb. 402 (87 N. W. 146); (1902) Goldsberry v. State, 66 Neb. 312 (92 N. W. 906); (1903) Jahnke v. State, 68 Neb. 154 (94 N. W. 158); (1905) Sweet v. State, 75 Neb. 263 (106 N. W. 31).

78. (1905.) If there is such a prejudice in the minds of the people of the county against the defendant, or such a firm conviction of his guilt of the crime charged against him that there is substantial and well-founded reason to believe that he cannot obtain a fair trial in the county, the constitution requires that the venue be changed. The trial court must exercise discretion in determining these facts, but has no discretion to refuse the change of venue when these facts appear. Lucas v. State, 75 Neb. 11 (105 N. W. 976).

Application.

79. (1881.) A motion for a change of plan of trial to a particular county is bad, and may be overruled for that reason alone Olive v. State, 11 Neb. 1 (7 N. W. 444).

——— Affidavits.

80. (1876.) Counter-affidavits may be filed on application for a change of venue in a criminal prosecution. Smith v. State, 4 Neb. 277.

——— Determination.

80*a*. (1884.) In the trial upon an indictment for rape and assault with intent to commit, the trial coming on a few weeks after the charge was made, the accused filed affidavits of leading citizens showing a strong bias and prejudice against him, so that a fair trial could not be had in that county, and the affidavits filed on behalf of the state did not deny these statements in clear and direct language. Held, That a change of venue should have been granted. Richmond v. State, 16 Neb. 388 (20 N. W. 282).

81. (1901.) It is not error to overrule an application for a change of venue in a criminal trial when from all the evidence introduced in support and in resistance of the application, there is not shown to exist any reasonable ground for the belief that the defendant cannot have a fair and impartial trial in the county from which a change of venue is applied for. Argabright v. State, 62 Neb. 402 (87 N. W. 146).

82. (1902.) If from the showing made in support of and against the motion for a change of venue in a criminal case, there is no reasonable ground shown on which to found a belief that the accused cannot have a fair and impartial trial in the county where the offense is alleged to have been committed, it is not error to deny such motion. Goldsberry v. State, 66 Neb. 312 (92 N. W. 906); (1905) Sweet v. State, 75 Neb. 263 (106 N. W. 31).

83. (1903.) If, upon the showing made in support of and against an application for a change of venue, it does not appear that there exists reasonable grounds on which to found a belief that the defendant cannot have a just trial in the county by a fair, unbiased and impartial jury, the trial court may properly overrule the application. Jahnke v. State, 68 Neb. 154 (94 N. W. 158).

Transmission of record.

84. (1877.) On a change of venue in a criminal case, the original indictment must be transmitted to the clerk of the court to which the venue is changed. Preuit v. People, 5 Neb. 377.

85. (1895.) Upon a change of venue in a criminal cause to an adjoining county, the clerk of the court in which the indictment or information was filed must transmit to the clerk of the court to which the venue is changed a certificate transcript of the proceedings in the case, together with the original indictment or information. Barr v. State, 45 Neb. 458 (63 N. W. 856).

Prosecuting attorney.

86. (1889.) Upon the removal of a criminal prosecution from the county in which the offense was committed, to an adjoining county upon change of venue, it is not the duty of the county attorney of the former county to follow the case to the latter county, but it is the duty of the county attorney of such adjoining county to represent the state in the prosecution of the case; and in such case where the county attorney of the adjoining county is under the disability of having appeared in the case as counsel for the accused, it is the duty of the court to appoint an attorney to act as county attorney in the prosecution. Gandy v. State, 27 Neb. 707 (43 N. W. 749, 44 N. W. 108).

VI. LIMITATION OF PROSECUTION.

Necessity of pleading statute, see post, § 182.

Limitation applicable.

87. (1895.) A prosecution for a misdemeanor, where the penalty fixed by statute is restricted to a fine of not exceeding $100 and to imprisonment not exceeding three months, must be instituted within one year from the time such offense was committed. Jolly v. State, 43 Neb. 857 (62 N. W. 300).

Commencement of prosecution.

88. (1898.) The filing of an information in the district court in term time, and not the filing of the complaint with the county judge, held the commencement of the prosecution within the meaning of the statute of limitations. State v. Robertson, 55 Neb. 41 (75 N. W. 37).

VII. FORMER JEOPARDY.

Plea of former jeopardy, see post, §§ 183-189.

Mistrial or conviction for petit larceny as former jeopardy, see Larceny, §§ 29, 30.

In general.

89. (1882.) The constitutional inhibition as to jeopardy applies only to criminal proceedings, such offenses as are designated by our statute as felonies and misdemeanors, and does not apply to mere civil actions for the recovery of penalties. Mitchell v. State, 12 Neb. 538 (11 N. W. 848).

90. (1892.) The fundamental law of the state as well as that of the United States, forbids that one shall be put twice in jeopardy for the same act. In re Jones, 35 Neb. 499 (53 N. W. 468).

91. (1906.) To constitute a former jeopardy, it must appear that the defendant was put upon trial before a court having jurisdiction, upon an indictment or an information sufficient in form and substance to sustain a conviction, and that the jury were impaneled and sworn, and thus charged with his deliverance. Steinkuhler v. State, 77 Neb. 331 (109 N. W. 395).

Prosecution in foreign country.

92. (1877.) The rule of constitutional law cannot span country and country in such a way as to cause jeopardy in one country to free the party from trial in another, but as "a sort of merciful dispensation" a court may consider favorably the fact, if it exists, that the accused had been prosecuted and punished for the same offense in a foreign country, when it appears that he was convicted and his punishment was full and complete. Marshall v. State, 6 Neb. 120 (29 Am. Rep. 363).

Jurisdiction as element of former jeopardy.

93. (1877.) It is indispensable to the plea of former conviction that the court whose record is relied upon to sustain it, had jurisdiction of the offense. Thompson v. State, 6 Neb. 102.

94. (1907.) The judgment of a court having no jurisdiction of the subject-matter does not constitute a bar to the second prosecution based upon the same charge as that upon which the first judgment was pronounced. Peterson v. State, 79 Neb. 132 (112 N. W. 306).

Preliminary examination.

95. (1880.) Where a person accused of an offense is arrested and taken before a magistrate for examination and is discharged, such discharge does not bar another examination for the same offense, before the same or another magistrate, upon a new complaint being filed. An examination is not a trial. In re Garst, 10 Neb. 78 (4 N. W. 511).

96. (1901.) A plea in abatement, grounded on the fact that defendant had two preliminary examinations and that on the first he was held for a lower grade of crime than upon the one which is the basis of the information filed against him, is demurrable. Thompson v. State, 61 Neb. 210 (85 N. W. 62; 87 Am. St. Rep. 453).

97. (1902.) A second preliminary hearing may be had where the first has resulted in a discharge of the accused. Van Buren v. State, 65 Neb. 223 (91 N. W. 201).

Discharge of jury without verdict.

98. (1884.) The defendants were indicted upon arraignment, pleaded not guilty, and a jury was impaneled to try the cause. The defendants objected to any testimony being given in support of the indictment for the reason that it did not charge the commission of a crime. The objection was sustained and the jury discharged without a verdict and without objection by the defendants; Held, That this did not constitute an acquittal which could be plead and maintained as a plea in bar to a subsequent indictment. State v. Priebnow, 16 Neb. 131 (19 N. W. 628).

99. (1897.) Prisoner held not entitled to a discharge on ground of former jeopardy upon a record showing that after a trial began a member of the jury became sick; that the juror was examined by a commission and found to be insane; and that the jury was discharged. Davis v. State, 51 Neb. 301 (70 N. W. 984).

100. (1897.) Insanity of a juror held to be a calamity authorizing the discharge of a jury. Davis v. State, 51 Neb. 301 (70 N. W. 984).

101. (1901.) Whether a mistrial resulting from the discharge of a jury because of the illness of one of its members constituted former jeopardy not decided. Sharp v. State, 61 Neb. 187 (85 N. W. 38).

Acquittal as to part of counts.

102. (1899.) Where an information, in different counts, charges separate and distinct crimes, and the accused, on the trial, is acquitted on a count charging one crime but is convicted on a count charging another crime, he cannot, on a new trial being granted, be tried for the offense of which he was acquitted at the former trial. George v. State, 59 Neb. 163 (80 N. W. 486).

Judgment reversed.

103. (1895.) When the defendant in a criminal prosecution is adjudged guilty of the crime charged, and subsequently procures a reversal of the judgment of conviction on account of error by the trial court, he will be held to have waived his right to object to further prosecution on the ground that he has been once put in jeopardy. McGinn v. State, 46 Neb. 427 (65 N. W. 46; 50 Am. St. Rep. 617; 30 L. R. A. 450).

104. (1904.) An ineffectual attempt of the district court to render a judgment on a verdict according to the provisions of the law, does not deprive that court of the power to pronounce a valid judgment against the accused. McCormick v. State, 71 Neb. 505 (99 N. W. 237).

——— Confinement under judgment.

105. (1895.) The confinement of a convict from the date of conviction until the date fixed for his execution is not a part of the penalty for a capital offense. McGinn v. State, 46 Neb. 427 (65 N. W. 46; 50 Am. St. Rep. 617; 30 L. R. A. 450).

106. (1895.) While the practice of confining persons convicted of capital offenses from the date of sentence until the day of execution has prevailed from time immemorial, such confinement is not a part of the penalty, although a necessary incident thereof, and the power of the court in that regard does not rest upon any positive provision of statute. McGinn v. State, 46 Neb. 427 (65 N. W. 46; 50 Am. St. Rep. 617; 30 L. R. A. 450).

107. (1904.) Confinement in the penitentiary under a void or erroneous sentence, because of the failure of the accused to obtain a suspension of his sentence during the pendency of his proceedings in error, is in no sense a part execution of a legal sentence; and by the rendition and execution of a legal judgment, the accused is not twice punished for the same offense. McCormick v. State, 71 Neb. 505 (99 N. W. 237).

Identity of offenses.

108. (1877.) A conviction for petit larceny, for stealing goods of the value of $35, by a police court is no bar to an indictment for grand larceny for stealing the same goods. Thompson v. State, 6 Neb. 102.

109. (1877.) If the accused is charged in one count, in an indictment, with an offense for which he was convicted in a foreign country, and also in a second count is charged with a different and distinct offense, the plea of autrefois convict is bad.

Marshall v. State, 6 Neb. 120 (29 Am. St. Rep. 363).

110. (1901.) A prosecution for burglary resulting in a mistrial is not a bar to a prosecution for larceny resulting from the burglary. Sharp v. State, 61 Neb. 187 (85 N. W. 38).

111. (1907.) When a plea of former jeopardy is made by reason of autrefois acquit, the test to determine the identity of the two offenses is whether the evidence necessary to convict in the second case was admissible under the former charge, related to the same crime, and was sufficient to have warranted a conviction upon the former charge. Warren v. State, 79 Neb. 526 (113 N. W. 143).

112. (1907.) An acquittal of the defendant upon the charge of the murder of one Lausten, held not to be a bar to a prosecution for the crime of robbery of Lausten committed at or about the time of the killing. Warren v. State, 79 Neb. 526 (113 N. W. 143).

VIII. PRELIMINARY COMPLAINT AND EXAMINATION.

Pleading want of preliminary examination, see post, §§ 190-193.

Preliminary examination as constituting former jeopardy, see ante, §§ 95-97.

Nature and scope.

113. (1898.) The object of a preliminary examination is to ascertain whether the crime charged has been committed, and, if so, whether there is probable cause to believe the accused committed it, and, if so, to insure his appearance in the district court to answer the complaint of the state therefor. Latimer v. State, 55 Neb. 609 (76 N. W. 207; 70 Am. St. Rep. 403).

114. (1902.) The preliminary hearing of a person accused of a felony, provided for by the criminal code, is in no sense a trial in which the rights of the accused in respect of his guilt or innocence are adjudicated and determined. Van Buren v. State, 65 Neb. 223 (91 N. W. 201).

115. (1902.) The preliminary examination provided for is to ascertain whether the crime charged has been committed and, if so, whether there is probable cause to believe the accused committed it, and if such is found to be the case, to enforce his presence in the district court to answer the charge by either requiring the accused to enter into a recognizance for his appearance in the district court to answer the charge, or in default thereof, committing him to imprisonment to await trial in the district court. Van Buren v. State, 65 Neb. 223 (91 N. W. 201).

Jurisdiction.

116. (1900.) It is discretionary with the district court whether it will sit as an examining magistrate, and its ruling in that regard will not be disturbed where no abuse is shown. State v. Dennison, 60 Neb. 192 (82 N. W. 628).

117. (1902.) A district judge, within his district, is authorized to exercise the powers of examining magistrates generally, with respect to preliminary hearings of persons accused of the commission of a felony. Van Buren v. State, 65 Neb. 223 (91 N. W. 201).

118. (1906.) A county court or county judge has the same powers and jurisdiction in criminal matters as a justice of the peace, and may entertain a complaint, issue a warrant, conduct the preliminary hearing in a case where the offense is beyond his jurisdiction, and may hold the defendant to bail for his appearance in the district court. Stetter v. State, 77 Neb. 777 (110 N. W. 761).

119. (1907.) Upon complaint duly made, a judge of the district court may sit as an examining magistrate to try whether a crime has been committed, and whether there is probable cause to believe that the person charged has committed the crime. Cohoe v. State, 79 Neb. 811 (113 N. W. 532).

Complaint.

120. (1886.) A complaint charging the commission of a misdemeanor under the criminal law of the state will be held sufficient when collaterally assailed, if it contains sufficient to show a violation of law, and will not be held to be vitiated because it contains surplusage or redundant matter. Ex parte Maule, 19 Neb. 273 (27 N. W. 119).

——— Requisites and sufficiency.

121. (1889.) A complaint in writing signed by the complainant and sworn to before the clerk of the district court within his jurisdiction and filed in the office of the justice of the peace, would be sufficient to require him to issue a warrant thereon. State, ex rel. Bryant, v. Lauver, 26 Neb. 757 (42 N. W. 762).

122. (1889.) A complaint must be made on oath and before a magistrate, in order to give him jurisdiction to make a preliminary examination of one accused of a criminal offense. White v. State, 28 Neb. 341 (44 N. W. 443).

——— Amendment or substitution.

123. (1877.) If the original complaint in a case of misdemeanor appealed to the district court be lost, the court may order a new complaint to be substituted covering the same offense as shown by the justice's transcript. Bays v. State, 6 Neb. 167.

123*a*. (1908.) Pending an appeal under section 324 of the criminal code from a judgment of a magistrate, the district court may permit the filing of an amended complaint which does not essentially nor materially alter the original charge. Ruffing v. State, 80 Neb. 555 (114 N. W. 583).

——— Variance.

124. (1887.) Where it appears that the charge in the complaint was substantially the same as that set forth in an information filed in the district court, the plea of want of preliminary examination will be unavailing. Cowan v. State, 22 Neb. 519 (35 N. W. 405).

125. (1896.) Where the charge in the complaint is substantially the same as that in the information, a plea of want of preliminary examination, or of variance, is unavailing. Hockenberger v. State, 49 Neb. 706 (68 N. W. 1037); (1903) Van Syoc v. State, 69 Neb. 520 (96 N. W. 266).

Warrant.

126. (1907.) When a complaint is filed in the district court and the person charged with crime in said complaint is present in court, the judge may in his discretion call upon the defendant to plead to the complaint, and proceed with the examination without the issuing of a warrant upon the complaint. Cohoe v. State, 79 Neb. 811 (113 N. W. 532).

Necessity of preliminary examination.

127. (1889.) An information, filed in the district court by the county attorney, against an accused person for an offense for which said accused person had not had a preliminary examination, as provided by law, confers no jurisdiction upon said district court to try and punish said accused person for such offense, unless in the excepted cases provided for in section 585 of the criminal code. White v. State, 28 Neb. 341 (44 N. W. 443). [Overruled. Coffield v. State, 44 Neb. 417].

128. (1895.) Accused, unless a fugitive from justice, is entitled to a preliminary examination, in absence of a waiver thereof, before he can be placed upon trial under an information. Coffield v. State, 44 Neb. 417 (62 N. W. 875).

129. (1898.) The district court is without jurisdiction to try on information one accused of a felony, except he be a fugitive from justice, unless he has been first accorded the privilege of preliminary examination. Latimer v. State, 55 Neb. 609 (76 N. W. 207; 70 Am. St. Rep. 403).

130. (1903.) In a prosecution by information for a felony, in the absence of his waiver of a right to a preliminary examination, a defendant cannot be put upon trial for the crime charged over his objections, until such preliminary hearing is accorded him, and he is held by the examining magistrate to await a trial in the district court. Jahnke v. State, 68 Neb. 154 (94 N. W. 158).

131. (1903.) The statute providing for preliminary examinations contemplates that before a person can be proceeded against by information, he must be brought before an examining magistrate, charged with the commission of a crime, and that the magistrate shall proceed to hear the complaint, examine such witnesses as are produced in support thereof or to controvert the same, and then exercise judgment or discretion of a judicial character in determining from the evidence adduced whether the accused should be held to appear for trial in the district court, or should be discharged for want of probable cause, or because it is not made to appear that a crime has been committed. Jahnke v. State, 68 Neb. 154 (94 N. W. 158).

——— Waiver.

132. (1895.) It is too late after verdict to raise the objection that a preliminary examination has not been had for the crime charged in the information. Such objection must be raised before going to trial by motion to quash the information or by plea in abatement. Coffield v. State, 44 Neb. 417 (62 N. W. 875).

133. (1895.) Accused may waive a preliminary examination when brought before the magistrate, or when called upon to plead to the information. Coffield v. State, 44 Neb. 417 (62 N. W. 875).

134. (1896.) Where the record of the proceedings in the examining court disclosed that a complaint was filed which contained a charge of the crime for which plaintiff in error was tried in the district court, and that he was arraigned thereupon and waived examination, it is sufficient to show fulfillment of the requirements of section 585 of the criminal code in regard to preliminary examination. Korth v. State, 46 Neb. 631 (65 N. W. 792).

www.libtool.com.cn

135. (1898.) The statute awarding one accused of a crime the right to a preliminary examination was enacted for the benefit of the accused, and since it is a personal privilege it may be waived by accused. Latimer v. State, 55 Neb. 609 (75 N. W. 207; 70 Am. St. Rep. 403).

136. (1898.) If the accused, on being arrested and brought before an examining magistrate, voluntarily pleads that he is guilty of the crime charged against him, he thereby waives his right to a preliminary examination. Latimer v. State, 55 Neb. 609 (76 N. W. 207; 70 Am. St. Rep. 403).

137. (1901.) The objection that the defendant has not had a preliminary hearing is waived unless raised before he enters a plea. Dinsmore v. State, 61 Neb. 418 (85 N. W. 445).

138. (1901.) A preliminary examination may be waived. Reinoehl v. State, 62 Neb. 619 (87 N. W. 355).

Sufficiency of examination.

139. (1889.) An examination, made by a magistrate, of a person accused of crime, where the magistrate has not jurisdiction, is not a "preliminary examination therefor, as provided by law," in the sense of those words as used in section 585 of the criminal code. White v. State, 28 Neb. 341 (44 N. W. 443).

140. (1903.) Held, That a preliminary examination within the meaning of the statute had been accorded the defendant in the case at bar, and that the trial court properly sustained a demurrer to his plea in abatement alleging that no such examination had been had. Jahnke v. State, 68 Neb. 154 (94 N. W. 158).

Dismissal of proceedings.

141. (1902.) Where a person who is charged with a felony is brought before an examining magistrate for the purpose of a preliminary hearing, the complainant at such hearing may dismiss or abandon such proceedings, and file a complaint for the same offense before another magistrate having authority to inquire into the charge; and upon such inquiry, the accused may be recognized to appear at the district court to answer such charge, and in default of such recognizance be committed to prison to await trial. Van Buren v. State, 65 Neb. 223 (91 N. W. 201).

Weight and sufficiency of evidence.

142. (1900.) Evidence that would justify a committing magistrate in finding that probable cause existed for holding a defendant to appear need not necessarily be sufficient to uphold a verdict of guilty. Rhea v. State, 61 Neb. 15 (84 N. W. 414).

143. (1903.) When the quantity or sufficiency of the evidence to justify the holding of a person to answer for a crime in the district court is called in question by a plea in abatement, and it appears that there has been a preliminary hearing in form and substance, and that evidence has been introduced in support of the complaint such as to invoke an honest exercise of judgment or discretion in the weighing of such evidence and in reaching a conclusion as to the order or judgment to be entered, and from which a fair legal deduction may be reached that a crime has been committed, and there is testimony tending to show that the accused committed the offense and he is held to await trial in the district court, a preliminary examination has been had within the meaning of the statute and the plea in abatement would be unavailing. Jahnke v. State, 68 Neb. 154 (94 N. W. 158).

Finding.

144. (1882.) An examination before a magistrate can only be instituted by filing a complaint under oath, alleging positively the commission of an offense, and also that there is reason to believe that the accused committed the same. The finding of the justice that there is or is not probable cause that the accused committed the offense charged may be entirely disregarded by the grand jury, as it is in no sense a judgment. In re Balcom, 12 Neb. 316 (11 N. W. 312).

145. (1891.) A finding of guilty when made by a magistrate, need not necessarily be formal, but must in some way show cause for the sentence. Atwood v. Atwater, 34 Neb. 402 (51 N. W. 1073).

145*a*. (1908.) A complaint was filed before an examining magistrate charging plaintiff in error with maliciously killing and destroying fourteen certain hogs of the value of $120, the personal property of a person named in the complaint as the owner thereof. A warrant was issued and plaintiff held to appear at the next term of the district court. He gave the required recognizance, and was discharged from custody. In the docket entry of the examining magistrate a history of the case was given, and it was recited that, "after hearing the testimony of the witnesses, and being fully advised in the premises, the court finds that there is probable cause to believe that the defendant is guilty as charged in the complaint. It is therefore considered by me that the defendant give bond in the sum of $500 for his appearance" at the next term of the district court, etc. Held, That this sufficiently showed that the magistrate found that an offense had been committed. Carson v. State, 80 Neb. 619 (114 N. W. 938).

Record and return of preliminary examination.

146. (1896.) Where the transcript of the preliminary proceedings has been lost from the files of the district court another transcript may be substituted by order of the court. Korth v. State, 46 Neb. 631 (65 N. W. 792).

147. (1898.) Where an accused, on being brought before an examining magistrate, waives a preliminary examination, then the magistrate should recognize him to appear in the district court and enter upon his docket the proceedings that actually occurred, and a duly certified transcript of this record, filed in the office of the clerk of the district court, will invest that court with jurisdiction to try the accused on information for the crime with which he was accused before the examining magistrate. Latimer v. State, 55 Neb. 609 (76 N. W. 207; 70 Am. St. Rep. 403).

IX. ARRAIGNMENT AND PLEAS.

Arraignment of defendant in bastardy proceedings, see Bastards, §§ 51-53.

Failure to answer in contempt as evidence of guilt, see Contempt, §§ 70-73.

Intoxication as defense to larceny, see Larceny, §§ 118, 119.

Necessity of arraignment and plea.

Necessity of arraignment in contempt, see Contempt, § 52.

148. (1871.) In misdemeanor it is sufficient if the counsel of the prisoner waives the reading of the indictment and enters the plea of not guilty without formal arraignment. Kruget v. State, 1 Neb. 365.

149. (1871.) It is error to put a prisoner upon his trial before he has plead to the indictment. Burley v. State, 1 Neb. 385.

150. (1887.) Where a defendant is put on trial for a misdemeanor without a plea to the indictment having been entered, it is a mere technical error or irregularity which does not affect any of his substantial rights and affords no ground for reversal of a judgment of conviction. Allyn v. State, 21 Neb. 593 (33 N. W. 212).

151. (1898.) A conviction under an amended information charging a felony will not be sustained where the record does not affirmatively disclose that the accused was arraigned, and that he pleaded before trial. Barker v. State, 54 Neb. 53 (74 N. W. 427.)

152. (1898.) When it is discovered during the trial on the charge of a felony that there has been no arraignment and plea, the court should not proceed with the trial without arraigning the accused, entering his plea, and causing the jury to be resworn and the witnesses to be re-examined. Browning v. State, 54 Neb. 203 (74 N. W. 631).

153. (1898.) A judgment of conviction of felony cannot stand where there was no arraignment of, and plea by, the accused before the trial. Browning v. State, 54 Neb. 203 (74 N. W. 631).

154. (1898.) When one is charged with having committed a crime, is arrested, and brought before a magistrate, it is not essential that he should be asked to plead, or plead to the complaint. Latimer v. State, 55 Neb. 609 (76 N. W. 207; 70 Am. St. Rep. 403).

Entry on indictment.

155. (1877.) The statute directing the entry of the prisoner's plea on the back of the indictment is not mandatory, but directory merely, and the failure to so enter it is no ground for a reversal of the judgment, when the plea is contained in another part of the record. Preuit v. People, 5 Neb. 377.

Plea of guilty.

156. (1903.) A plea of guilty of the acts alleged in an information charging no offense is not a plea of guilt of the crime attempted to be charged, and the sufficiency of the information and the authority and jurisdiction of the court to pronounce sentence of imprisonment may properly be challenged by a motion in arrest of judgment. Smith v. State, 68 Neb. 204 (94 N. W. 106).

Plea to the jurisdiction.

157. (1871.) A plea to the jurisdiction which only alleges conclusions of law, and not facts adverse to the jurisdiction, is not good. Burley v. State, 1 Neb. 385.

Pleas in abatement or bar in general.

Necessity of withdrawal of plea of not guilty, see post, §§ 196-203.

158. (1880.) A plea in abatement to an indictment must state facts and not mere conclusions of law. Priest v. State, 10 Neb. 393 (6 N. W. 468).

159. (1881.) A plea in abatement to an indictment upon the ground that the grand jury were not legally selected and chosen must point out the particular cause of illegality. Baldwin v. State, 12 Neb. 61 (10 N. W. 463).

160. (1883.) A plea in abatement may be signed by the prisoner's attorney. If so signed, and verified by the prisoner, it is sufficient. Bohanan v. State, 15 Neb. 209 (18 N. W. 129).

161. (1895.) An objection that the offense charged in the indictment differs from that in the complaint should be made by plea in abatement and not by motion to quash. Whitner v. State, 46 Neb. 144 (64 N. W. 704).

162. (1897.) In a prosecution for embezzlement, the pendency of a former information in another county, charging accused with the embezzlement of the same property, within that county, is no ground for abatement. Bartley v. State, 53 Neb. 310 (73 N. W. 744).

163. (1898.) Matters cannot be presented by a plea in abatement which are triable under a plea of not guilty. State v. Bailey, 57 Neb. 204 (77 N. W. 654).

164. (1898.) A plea in abatement may be made when there is a defect in the record which is shown by facts extrinsic thereto. State v. Bailey, 57 Neb. 204 (77 N. W 654).

165. (1899.) It is unnecessary to plead facts of which the court will take judicial notice. George v. State, 59 Neb. 163 (80 N. W. 486).

166. (1901.) The pendency of a former information for the same offense, in the same court, furnishes no sufficient ground for plea in abatement. Roby v. State, 61 Neb. 218 (85 N. W. 61).

167. (1902.) Where a party has had a preliminary hearing, and has been held to answer to the district court, and an information is filed against him in such court, that no warrant has been issued and served on him, based on the offense charged, and that he has never been arrested and brought into court on such charge, is not a good plea in abatement. Sothman v. State, 66 Neb. 302 (92 N. W. 303).

168. (1907.) A plea in abatement in a criminal prosecution is proper where there is a defect in the record shown by facts extrinsic thereto. (Criminal code, sec. 441.) Steiner v. State, 78 Neb. 147 (110 N. W. 723).

——— Waiver of defects.

169. (1898.) A plea in bar is, by our statute, to be deemed a waiver of a plea in abatement and this is held to follow where both pleas are presented by a single pleading. Bush v. State, 55 Neb. 195 (75 N. W. 542).

170. (1901.) A plea of "not guilty," whether made by the accused or entered by the court for him when on arraignment he stands mute, is a waiver of all defects in an information that can be reached by a motion to quash. Trimble v. State, 61 Neb. 604 (85 N. W. 844).

171. (1901.) On a prosecution for felony, the accused waives all defects which may be objected to by a motion to quash or a plea in abatement, when he demurs or pleads. Reinoehl v. State, 62 Neb. 619 (87 N. W. 355).

——— Demurrer or replication to plea.

172. (1894.) When a plea in bar to an indictment or information is insufficient in form, or when it appears from the face thereof that the facts alleged are not in law a bar to the prosecution, the state may demur; otherwise it should join issue by means of a replication. Smith v. State, 42 Neb. 356 (60 N. W. 585).

173. (1894.) By demurring to a plea in bar the state will be held to have admitted all of the facts well pleaded therein. Smith v. State, 42 Neb. 356 (60 N. W. 585).

174. (1907.) Where a so-called plea in abatement does not state facts sufficient to constitute such plea, and contains no negation of any element of the offense charged, a demurrer thereto is properly sustained. Steiner v. State, 78 Neb. 147 (110 N. W. 723).

——Trial of issues raised.

175. (1883.) If the plea contain a material averment on which issue is joined, it is error for the court to refuse the prisoner a trial of it. Bohanan v. State, 15 Neb. 209 (18 N. W. 129).

176. (1884.) When a plea in bar is interposed to a prosecution upon indictment, which is clearly insufficient, a demurrer may be filed thereto without resorting to the formality of impaneling a jury to try the issue presented by the plea. But if the plea states facts which, if true, would constitute a bar to further prosecution, the truth of the plea must, in the absence of a valid agreement to proceed otherwise, be ascertained by a jury. State v. Priebnow, 16 Neb. 131 (19 N. W. 628). [The language, "in the absence of a valid agreement to proceed otherwise," disapproved in Arnold v. State, 38 Neb. 752; 57 N. W. 378].

177. (1894.) The prosecuting attorney may interpose a demurrer to a plea in bar offered under section 449 of the cdiminal code by a prisoner indicted for a felony, and have the judgment of the court, whether the facts stated in such plea are sufficient, if true, to prevent the trial of the prisoner for the crime for which he stands indicted and arraigned; but where the plea in bar is good, then the issues raised by it, and the state's reply thereto, must, and can only, be tried by a jury, and it is beyond the power of the state's attorney and prisoner, by agreement, to substitute another tribunal than the one prescribed by statute for the trial of such issues. The law is designed for the protection of the state as well as the prisoner, and its mandates cannot be evaded by contract, nor can a prisoner charged with a felony waive the right to a jury trial of such issues. Arnold v. State, 38 Neb. 752 (57 N. W. 378).

178. (1906.) Where a plea in abatement in a criminal prosecution presents questions of law only, it is proper for the trial court to determine such questions without the intervention of a jury. Stetter v. State, 77 Neb. 777 (110 N. W. 761).

——Evidence.

179. (1894.) The state cannot deprive the accused of his right to a trial upon a plea in bar by introducing evidence tending to controvert the facts therein alleged in connection with a demurrer to the plea. Smith v. State, 42 Neb. 356 (60 N. W. 585).

180. (1903.) Waiving a preliminary examination in a misdemeanor case cures all defects in the warrant upon which a defendant is arrested; and where one of the grounds of a plea in abatement is a defect in the warrant, and the state, by denial, joins issue thereon, it is incumbent upon the defendant, in order to sustain his plea, to show that he has not waived his preliminary examination. Everson v. State, 4 Unof. 109 (93 N. W. 394).

181. (1903.) Where a defendant files a plea in abatement to some of the counts in an information, in which he alleges that he has never had a preliminary examination thereon, and the state denies the facts stated in the plea, he must establish such facts by competent evidence or his plea will be overruled. Everson v. State, 4 Unof. 109 (93 N. W. 394).

Plea of limitation.

182. (1895.) The defendant in a criminal prosecution may avail himself of the defense of the statute of limitations under a plea of not guilty. Boughn v. State, 44 Neb. 889 (62 N. W. 1094).

Plea of former jeopardy.

183. (1897.) A plea of former jeopardy should set out the the record including the indictment and acquittal or conviction and the statements of fact as to the identity of the person acquitted or convicted and the offense of which he was acquitted or convicted. Davis v. State, 51 Neb. 301 (70 N. W. 984).

184. (1889.) A plea of former acquittal, in which defendant alleged that, at the May, 1887, term of said court, the county attorney of said county presented his information against her for the same offense with which she now stands charged; that she was duly arraigned in said court on said information, and plead not guilty thereto; that thereupon a jury was duly impaneled and sworn in said cause, and the evidence on the part of the state as well as the defense was all introduced and submitted to said jury; that the jury was thereupon instructed by the court, and that thereupon the jury, in charge of a bailiff of said court, retired to deliberate upon their verdict, and that after said jury had been out a space of twenty hours, and no more, without agreeing on a verdict, they were brought into court, when said jury were discharged by the court without agreeing on a verdict, and without disagreeing, or any other special cause, there being no special necessity for discharging said jury; that defendant then and there objected and protested; is good as against a general demurrer. Conklin v. State, 25 Neb. 784 (41 N. W. 788).

185. (1889.) An indictment was returned into the district court by the grand jury, charging plaintiff in error with four separate violations of the liquor law of the state. He was placed upon trial under three counts in the indictment. Before entering upon the trial he filed his special plea in bar, alleging that the indictment on file consisted of four counts; that upon arraignment he plead not guilty to each of the counts thereof, when he was placed upon trial and the jury empaneled and sworn to try the issue thus joined; that the county attorney, over his objection and protest, then elected to proceed with the trial under but one of the counts of the said indictment; that upon said trial a verdict of not guilty was returned by the jury, when he was discharged by the court. To this plea the county attorney interposed a general demurrer, which was sustained by the district court. Held, Error, since the plea was sufficient to present an issue which should have been joined. Murphy v. State, 25 Neb. 807 (41 N. W. 792).

186. (1897.) Where the prisoner, after a plea of not guilty and without withdrawing, or requesting to withdraw such plea, filed a plea of "former jeopardy" which was neither signed nor sworn to by the prisoner, such plea in bar was invalid; and the state was under no obligation to demur or reply to it, and that the court was justified in disregarding it and, on its own motion, striking it from the files. Davis v. State, 51 Neb. 301 (70 N. W. 984).

187. (1897.) An invalid plea in bar on the grounds of former jeopardy, may be treated as a motion to discharge accused. Davis v. State, 51 Neb. 301 (70 N. W. 984).

188. (1898.) Where the allegations of a plea in bar, liberally and fairly construed, substantially state that the prisoner has previously, by a court having jurisdiction, had a judgment of acquittal, the truth of the averments of the plea must be determined by a jury. Bush v. State, 55 Neb. 195 (75 N. W. 542).

189. (1899.) A plea in bar need not be interposed to call to the attention of the court matters of record, which show that the accused was duly acquitted in the same court, in the same case of the identical charge upon which it is proposed to try him again. George v. State, 59 Neb. 163 (80 N. W. 486).

Plea of want of preliminary examination.

190. (1887.) Question of want of preliminary examination must be raised by plea in abatement, Cowan v. State, 22 Neb. 519 (35 N. W. 405).

191, 192. (1894.) Objection by an accused on the ground that there has been no preliminary examination for the crime charged should be by a plea in abatement. Hill v. State, 42 Neb. 503 (60 N. W. 916); (1902) Reed v. State, 66 Neb. 184 (92 N. W. 321).

193. (1903.) By the interposition of a plea in abatement after the filing of an information against one accused of a felony the question may properly be determined as to whether a preliminary examination has been had or waived. Jahnke v. State, 68 Neb. 154 (94 N. W. 158).

Plea of not guilty.

194. (1896.) A plea of the general issue raises the question of the guilt or innocence of accused, of the principal crime charged, and also of the lesser ones included thereon, and hence the jury should be instructed as to the lesser crimes, although not requested to do so by defendant. Pjarrou v. State, 47 Neb. 294 (66 N. W. 422).

——— Joinder with other pleas.

195. (1877.) When a defendant pleads not guilty, he cannot in connection with such plea, by other pleas raise questions in respect to a former conviction. Marshall v. State, 6 Neb. 120 (29 Am. Rep. 363).

——— Withdrawal.

196. (1871.) If the defendant plead "not guilty," and afterwards file his motion to quash and plea in abatement and they are determined, and the trial proceeds without a renewal of the plea of "not guilty," the presumption is that it, as first interposed, was not withdrawn. Burley v. State, 1 Neb. 385.

197. (1896.) Where a plea to the general issue has been entered and has not been withdrawn, a plea in abatement need not be entertained. Korth v. State, 46 Neb. 631 (65 N. W. 792).

198. (1897.) There can never properly be more than one issue before the court in a criminal case at one time, and so long as the plea of not guilty remains on the record, a plea in bar is improper, and the state is under no necessity of replying or demurring to such plea, and the court, on its own motion, may disregard it. Davis v. State, 51 Neb. 301 (70 N. W. 984).

199. (1897.) If a prisoner, after a plea of not guilty, tenders a lawful and proper plea in bar, stating facts which have occurred or come to his knowledge since the entry of his plea of not guilty, and which facts, if true, entitle him to discharge, then it is the duty of the court to permit the prisoner to withdraw his plea of not guilty and file such plea in bar. Davis v. State, 51 Neb. 301 (70 N. W. 984).

200. (1899.) A plea in bar may be disregarded, if presented while the plea of not guilty remains on the record. George v. State, 59 Neb. 163 (80 N. W. 486).

201. (1899.) Whether a defendant is authorized to withdraw a plea of not guilty after the issue raised by it has been, in the orderly course of procedure, unalterably adjudicated, quaere. George v. State, 59 Neb. 163 (80 N. W. 486).

202. (1399.) Where a court entertains and considers the merits of a plea in bar, without a formal withdrawal of the plea of not guilty, the plea of not guilty will be considered as constructively withdrawn. George v. State, 59 Neb. 163 (80 N. W. 486).

203. (1899.) Where a court entertains and considers the merits of a plea in bar, without a formal withdrawal of the plea of not guilty, it is, at most, a mere irregularity, and the action of the court thereon may be the subject of review. George v State. 59 Neb. 163 (80 N. W. 486).

X. EVIDENCE.

In prosecution for particular crimes, see particular topics.

Competency of insurance policy in prosecution for arson, see Arson, § 3.

Information in extradition as evidence, see Extradition, § 10.

Proof of existence of house of prostitution, see Disorderly Houses, §§ 2, 3.

Taking depositions, see Depositions, § 19.

Variance between preliminary complaint and indictment, see Indictment and Information, §§ 80-82.

A. Judicial Notice, Presumptions, and Burden of Proof.

Presumption from possession of stolen property, see Burglary, §§ 23-25.

Presumption of violation of liquor laws from possession of liquor, see Intoxicating Liquors, §§ 284-290.

Presumption as to larceny, see Larceny, § 50.

Judicial notice.

204. (1894.) Courts will not, as a rule, take notice of municipal ordinances, unless required to do so by special charter or general law. Foley v. State, 42 Neb. 233 (60 N. W. 574).

205. (1894.) Upon trial of a person for the violation of a city ordinance the police court may take notice of the ordinance; and upon trial de novo of an appeal from a judgment of conviction the district court may take notice of whatever facts the lower court could have noticed judicially. Foley v. State, 42 Neb. 233 (60 N. W. 574).

206. (1896.) Where a city or village is incorporated by a special act of the territorial legislature, the courts will take judicial notice of such incorporation, in case the legislautre has in said act declared it to be a public law. Hornberger v. State, 47 Neb. 40 (66 N. W. 23).

207. (1902.) The courts of this state will take judicial notice that beer is an intoxicant. Sothman v. State, 66 Neb. 302 (92 N. W. 303).

208. (1907.) Municipal courts will take judicial notice of the ordinances of the city, and on an appeal therefrom to the district court from a conviction of a violation of a city ordinance the latter court will upon a trial de novo take notice of whatever facts the former court was required to notice judicially before the removal of the cause. Steiner v. State, 78 Neb. 147 (110 N. W. 723).

Presumptions.

Presumption as to adultery, see Adultery, §§ 11-13.

209. (1893.) In the absence of pleadings and proof, it will be presumed that the laws of a sister state are the same as our own. Bailey v. State, 36 Neb. 808 (55 N. W. 241).

210. (1895.) Insanity of accused at the time he committed the homicide will not be conclusively presumed from a previous order of the commissioners of insanity finding that he is a fit subject for treatment in an insane asylum. Pflueger v. State, 46 Neb. 493 (64 N. W. 1094).

211. (1899.) When a rebuttable presumption possessing no inherent probative force is met by opposing evidence, it is entirely destroyed and ceases to be a factor in the trial, unless it be required to turn an evenly balanced scale. Reynolds v. State, 58 Neb. 49 (78 N. W. 483).

212. (1902.) When the legislative thought is cast in the mould of the criminal law, it will be presumed, nothing appearing to the contrary, that the remedies contemplated were those generally used in courts exercising criminal jurisdiction. State v. Missouri P. R. Co., 64 Neb. 679 (90 N. W. 877).

——— Innocence.

213. (1877.) In the absence of evidence to the contrary the law presumes everyone innocent. And this legal presumption of innocence is a matter of evidence, to the benefit of which the party accused is entitled. Garrison v. State, 6 Neb. 274; (1881) Olive v. State, 11 Neb. 1 (7 N. W. 444) (1888) Long v. State, 23 Neb. 33 (36 N. W. 310).

214. (1897.) One accused of a crime is presumed to be innocent, and the presumption begins with the accusation and continues until the state has established his guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. Davis v. State, 51 Neb. 301 (70 N. W. 984); (1900) Williams v. State, 60 Neb. 526 (83 N. W. 681).

——— Identity of persons.

215. (1899.) Identity of name ordinarily affords a presumption of identity of person; and where the name of the victim of a criminal assault is the same in two counts of an information, the law presumes that the reference in both counts is to the same person. Dunn v. State, 58 Neb. 807 (79 N. W. 719).

——— Intent.

216. (1883.) It is a presumption of law, applicable in criminal trials, that a person intended to do that which he voluntarily and wilfully did in fact to. Parrish v. State, 14 Neb. 60 (15 N. W. 357).

——— Failure of defendant to testify.

217. (1883.) The fact that a prisoner does not testify in his own behalf will not operate to his disadvantage; but if he testify, and fail to controvert in any way what has been said by witnesses against him, concerning a fact within his own personal knowledge, it will be taken as an admission that their testimony is true. Comstock v. State, 14 Neb. 205 (15 N. W. 355).

Burden of proof.

Burden of proving drunkenness as defense to larceny, see Larceny, §§ 118, 119.

218. (1877.) Where the accused sets up no defense of distinct and independent facts, but relies upon the plea of not guilty, the burden of proof is on the state to satisfy the jury of his guilt. Garrison v. People, 6 Neb. 274.

219. (1894.) In criminal prosecutions the burden of proof never shifts, but, as to all defenses which the evidence tends to establish, rests upon the state throughout; hence a conviction can be had only when the jury are satisfied, from a consideration of all the evidence, of the defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. That rule applies not alone to the case as made by the state, but to any distinct, substantive defense which may be interposed by the accused to justify or excuse the act charged. Gravely v. State, 38 Neb. 871 (57 N. W. 751).

220. (1898.) The burden of proof in a criminal action is on the state and does not shift to defendent. Davis v. State, 54 Neb. 177 (74 N. W. 599); (1990) Williams v. State, 60 Neb. 526 (83 N. W. 681).

221. (1902.) It will not be presumed in any case that the law has been violated: every alleged violation must be established by competent proof. State, ex rel. Freeman, v. Scheve, 65 Neb. 853, 876 (93 N. W. 169).

——— Insanity.

222. (1876.) Where in a criminal case the accused relies upon insanity as a defense, the burden of proof is on the prosecution to show sanity. Wright v. State, 4 Neb. 407.

223. (1886.) Where in a criminal case the accused relies upon insanity as a defense, and there is testimony tending to prove such insanity, the burden of proof is on the prosecution to show sanity. Ballard v. State, 19 Neb. 609 (28 N. W. 271).

224. (1891.) When insanity is relied upon as a defense and testimony has been introduced which rebuts the presumption that the defendant was sane, the burden is upon the state to establish by the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that the accused was sane at the time of committing the act charged. Furst v. State, 31 Neb. 403 (47 N. W. 1116).

Digitized by Google

225. (1898.) To cast on the state the burden of proving sanity it is only requisite that there be some evidence tending to prove insanity, and it is not necessary that there must first be evidence sufficient to raise a reasonable doubt. Snider v. State, 56 Neb. 309 (76 N. W. 574).

——— Alibi.

226. In a criminal case it is error to instruct that the burden of proof is upon the accused to establish an alibi by a preponderance of the evidence. (1896) Casey v. State, 49 Neb. 403 (68 N. W. 643); (1897) Beck v. State, 51 Neb. 106 (70 N. W. 498).

227. (1898.) The burden of proof is not on accused to establish an alibi. Peyton v. State, 54 Neb. 188 (74 N. W. 597).

B. Facts in Issue and Relevant to Issue, and Res Gestae.

Proof of corpus delicti in larceny, see Larceny, § 84.

In general.

228. (1881.) A witness for the state who had testified, on his direct examination, to having seen a person he took for one of the prisoners near the place of the murder, on the evening preceding the night of its commission, was asked, on cross-examination, how long he had known him, and answered, "Since he has resided in Plum Creek." He was then asked, "How long has he resided there?" and "Have you known him well since he lived there?" These questions were both excluded on the ground of immateriality. Held, Error. Olive v. State, 11 Neb. 1 (7 N. W. 444).

229. (1899.) Evidence which does not tend to establish the guilt or innocence of the defendant of the crime charged should be excluded, even though its admission might afford the jury a remote "basis for a guess." Kastner v. State, 58 Neb. 767 (79 N. W. 713).

230. (1901.) It is error to exclude evidence the legitimate tendency of which is to put an innocent complexion upon inculpatory circumstances proven by the state; the weight of such evidence is for the jury. Burlingim v. State, 61 Neb. 276 (85 N. W. 76).

231. (1901.) The exclusion of testimony relating to a collateral fact and corrobating the defense, is not error where its relation to the main fact is uncertain. Smith v. State, 61 Neb. 296 (85 N. W. 49).

232. (1901.) On the trial of a criminal case every hypothesis that implies the defendant's guilt is pertinent, and any evidence fairly tending to sustain such hypothesis is relevant to the issue. Jerome v. State, 61 Neb. 459 (85 N. W. 394).

233. (1902.) It is not reversible error to permit a witness to testify in regard to the means which he employed to identify property which he had been instructed to seize for the purpose of being used as evidence in a criminal case. Russell v. State, 66 Neb. 497 (92 N. W. 751).

234. (1903.) The word "evidence," in its technical meaning and common acceptation, includes all the means by which any fact in dispute at a judicial trial is established or disproved. O'Brien v. State, 69 Neb. 691 (96 N. W. 649).

235. (1905.) One of two persons jointly charged with the commission of a crime cannot, by being accorded a separate trial, prevent the state from introducing evidence, otherwise competent, to prove his guilt, because such evidence also tends to establish the guilt of his codefendant. Krens v. State, 75 Neb. 294 (106 N. W. 27).

Attempt to suppress evidence.

236. Evidence is relevant which shows that the accused has threatened or assaulted a witness, has endeavored to prevail on him to abscond, has procured his absence, has endeavored to induce him to testify falsely, or has concealed the whereabouts of such witness from the prosecution; and such conduct on the part of an accused person is an incriminating circumstance to be weighed by the jury in determining the question of his guilt. (1902) Hubbard v. State, 65 Neb. 805 (91 N. W. 869); (1904) Blair v. State, 72 Neb. 501 (101 N. W. 17); (1904) Woodruff v. State, 72 Neb. 815 (101 N. W. 1114).

237. (1907.) Evidence that the defendant in a criminal case has hired or procured a witness for the prosecution to leave the state and not appear at the trial as a witness against him is competent as an incriminating circumstance tending to establish his guilt. Crowell v. State, 79 Neb. 784 (113 N. W. 262).

Attempt to escape.

238. (1886.) An escape is not necessarily an admission of guilt. Mathews v. State, 19 Neb. 330 (27 N. W. 234).

239. (1902.) An attempt to stifle the prosecution, and to prevent a trial by flight beyond the jurisdiction, are circumstances from which unfavorable inferences may be drawn against the defendant in a criminal case. Hubbard v. State, 65 Neb. 805 (91 N. W. 869); (1904) Woodruff v. State, 72 Neb. 815 (101 N. W. 1114).

240. (1902.) The fact that the defendant in a criminal case stood his ground until an accusation was lodged against him, is not, under all circumstances, evidence of innocence. Reed v. State, 66 Neb. 184 (92 N. W. 321).

241. (1903.) An attempt to escape by one under arrest accused of crime is an inculpatory circumstance properly to be considered by a jury and to be given such weight as it seems fairly entitled to, with the other evidence introduced at the trial, in determining the question of the guilt or innocence of the accused. Williams v. State, 69 Neb. 402 (95 N. W. 1014).

Motive.

242. (1897.) Where accused was charged with having displaced a rail which caused a wreck of a train on Thursday, and the death of a passenger, and the evidence connecting him with the crime was largely circumstantial, the state may show that accused had a superstition that Thursday was his lucky day, and that anything he attempted on that day would succeed. Davis v. State, 51 Neb. 301 (70 N. W. 984).

Intent.

243. (1897.) Where the intention of the accused is a material fact, and he takes the stand on his own behalf, he may be asked directly what was his intention with regard to the act complained of. Cummings v. State, 50 Neb. 274 (69 N. W. 756).

Intoxication.

244. (1894.) While intoxication is no excuse for an assualt committed when under the influence thereof, it is proper to be considered by the jury for the purpose of determining whether the prisoner was at the time in question capable of entertaining the specific intent charged. Head v. State, 43 Neb. 30 (61 N. W. 494).

Threats.

245. (1874.) Threats of the deceased towards the accused, which were made some time after deceased had received wounds of which he died, constitute no part of the res gestæ. Caw v. State, 3 Neb. 357.

Interest of defendant.

246. (1881.) Interest of prisoner in result of trial may be shown for the purpose of affecting his credibility. Baldwin v. State, 12 Neb. 61 (10 N. W. 463).

247. (1895.) Where defendant in a criminal prosecution becomes a witness in his own behalf, his interest in the result of the trial may be shown for the purpose of affecting his credibility. Basye v. State, 45 Neb. 261 (63 N. W. 811).

Conduct and appearance of defendant.

248. (1878.) The conduct and appearance of the prisoner about the time of the discovery of the homicide with which he is charged, as well as his declarations concerning it, are admissible in evidence against him. Clough v. State, 7 Neb. 320.

249. (1886.) Where a witness, called by a defendant in his defense, is interrogated as to the conduct and presence of the accused up to about the time of the alleged commission of the crime, it is not improper cross-examination for the state's counsel to inquire as to his conduct and presence after that date without being limited to the exact time mentioned in the examination in chief. Marion v. State, 20 Neb. 233 (29 N. W. 911; 57 Am. Rep. 825).

250. (1902.) When, before prosecution, and while not under restraint, parties are accused of living together in a state of fornication, and make no denial, or are silent, this may be shown in evidence as an inculpatory circumstance to be weighed and considered by the jury in determining the truth of the charge preferred against them. Musfelt v. State, 64 Neb. 445 (90 N. W. 237).

C. Other Offenses and Character of Accused.

Admissibility of proof of attempt to commit similar crime, see False Pretenses, §§ 12, 13.

Evidence of good character of defendant in bastardy, see Bastards, §§ 73, 74.

Admissibility of proof of other crime in charge of larceny, see Larceny, § 54.

Proof of other acts of bribery, see Bribery, § 2.

Evidence of other offenses.

251. (1885.) As a general rule, the guilt of the accused, or his participation in the commission of another crime, wholly unconnected with that for which he is put on his trial, cannot be admitted in evidence against him. Smith v. State, 17 Neb. 358 (22 N. W. 780).

252. (1887.) Except in cases where it is necessary to show guilty knowledge, it is not admissible to prove that at another time and place the accused committed or attempted to commit a crime similar to that with which he stands charged. Cowan v. State, 22 Neb. 519 (35 N. W. 405); (1888) Berghoff v. State, 25 Neb. 213 (41 N. W. 136); (1898) Morgan v. State, 56 Neb. 696 (77 N. W. 64).

253. (1892.) Where the accused was a witness in his own behalf the prosecuting officer, on cross-examination, asked him: "Is it not a fact that you stole a horse in Burnett county, Texas? Don't you know the sheriff has a warrant for you for stealing a horse in that county?" and other similar questions not connected with the crime charged. Held, Improper and prejudicial. Elliott v. State, 34 Neb. 48 (51 N. W. 315).

254. (1894.) As a general rule, it is incompetent for the state in a criminal prosecution to prove that the prisoner at some other time committed an offense similar to the one with which he stands charged. Palin v. State, 38 Neb. 862 (57 N. W. 743).

255. (1898.) On trial of one charged with having procured the indorsement of a draft by false representations, evidence that he previously committed a similar offense is inadmissible. Morgan v. State, 56 Neb. 696 (77 N. W. 64).

256. (1899.) Where a person is charged with the commission of a specific crime, testimony may be received of other similar acts, committed about the same time, for the purpose only of establishing the criminal intent of the accused. Knights v. State, 58 Neb. 225 (78 N. W. 508; 76 Am. St. Rep. 78).

257. (1902.) The fact that the prosecution offered direct evidence to prove guilty knowledge as to the offense charged does not preclude the state from also offering testimony of collateral offenses closely related in time and circumstances, for the same purpose. Goldsberry v. State, 66 Neb. 312 (92 N. W. 906).

258. (1905.) Where the accused in a prosecution for rape, was a witness in his own behalf, and the prosecuting officer on cross-examination asked him, in substance, if he had not at a previous time been guilty of a like offense upon another young girl, naming her, and other like questions, and thereafter called the person named to the witness stand and examined her, for the purpose of not only impeaching the accused but of proving him guilty of such independent offense, held, that such conduct was improper and prejudicial, for which the accused should be granted a new trial. Nicholizack v. State, 75 Neb. 27 (105 N. W. 895).

259. (1907.) In cases where the guilt of the defendant depends upon the intent, purpose or design with which the act was done, or upon his guilty knowledge thereof, collateral facts in which he bore a part occurring immediately before and leading up to the transaction complained of are admissible for the purpose of establishing such guilty intent. Clark v. State, 79 Neb. 473 (113 N. W. 211).

Conviction for other crimes.

260. (1884.) When in a prosecution for murder the defendant on his trial becomes a witness in his own behalf, it is incompetent on cross-examination, for the purpose of affecting his credibility as a witness, to ask him if he had not plead guilty to a penitentiary offense in another state; the entering of a plea of guilty without judgment or sentence not being a conviction within the meaning of section 338 of the civil code of Nebraska. Marion v. State, 16 Neb. 349 (20 N. W. 289, 396).

261. (1902.) Cross-examination of an accused by the prosecuting attorney, asking of prior convictions for other crimes, and whether or not he had not served time in the penitentiary is such misconduct as warrants a new trial. Leo v. State, 63 Neb. 723 (89 N. W. 303).

Proof and effect of other offenses.

262. (1894.) Where a single crime is charged in an information, and the state on the trial, for the purpose of proving the offense alleged, introduces testimony tending to prove similar, but distinct crimes, the proper practice is for the accused to move the court to require the prosecutor to elect on which transaction he will rely for a conviction. Palin v. State, 38 Neb. 862 (57 N. W. 743).

Character of accused.

263. (1893.) Where a person on trial for a crime has not himself put his general character in issue, the state cannot do so on the pretext of impeaching a witness by disproving the statements of the witness. Carter v. State, 36 Neb. 481 (54 N. W. 853).

264. (1902.) The general character of the defendant in a criminal case is not necessarily involved in the issue; the presumption is that his character is good; but he is not obliged to rely on this presumption; he may buttress it with evidence, and such evidence may be met by the state with opposing proof. Biester v. State, 65 Neb. 276 (91 N. W. 416).

www.hbtool.com.cn

265. (1902.) Any evidence tending to sustain an hypothesis which implies guilt is relevant to the issue in a criminal case and cannot be excluded on the ground that it impeaches defendant's general character. Russell v. State, 66 Neb. 497 (92 N. W. 751).

266. (1905.) Evidence of good character is always admissible as a circumstance favorable to the accused, to be considered by the jury in connection with the other evidence bearing upon the question of guilt or innocence, and given such weight as the jury believe it fairly entitled to, and when so considered it may be sufficient to create a reasonable doubt, when, without it, none would exist; but the conclusion of the jury is to be drawn from the whole of the evidence, and when, after giving evidence of good character due weight, the proof still shows the accused to be guilty beyond a reasonable doubt, such evidence of good character is unavailing. Sweet v. State, 75 Neb. 263 (106 N. W. 31).

267. (1907.) In a criminal prosecution, the state ordinarily will not be permitted to introduce evidence of the character of the accused, unless he has put his character in issue; but, where counsel for the defendant, by his cross-examination, has made it necessary for a prosecuting witness to give such evidence by way of explanation of his own conduct at the time the offense was alleged to have been committed, he may, under proper restriction, give such evidence on his redirect examination. Craig v. State, 78 Neb. 466 (111 N. W. 143).

268. (1907.) Where a person on trial for a crime testifies in his own behalf, he becomes as any other witness, and his credibility should be subjected to the same tests as are legally applied to other witnesses. Burk v. State, 79 Neb. 241 (112 N. W. 573).

268*a*. (1907.) Proof of reputation is properly confined to the reputation of the individual in the vicinity in which he lives or in which he had formerly resided. Younger v. State, 80 Neb. 201 (114 N. W. 170).

——— Rebuttal of evidence of good character.

269. (1888.) Where accused introduces witnesses to prove his good character, the state may introduce witnesses in rebuttal, although their names are not endorsed on the information. In such case the question of character is collateral to the main issue, and being raised by the defendant the state may call witnesses in rebuttal. State v. Huckins, 23 Neb. 309 (36 N. W. 527).

270. (1902.) Where a defendant has offered evidence to show his previous good character as being a peaceful, law-abiding citizen, it is not error on cross-examination to ask the witness if he has known of the defendant's being arrested. McCormick v. State, 66 Neb. 337 (92 N. W. 606).

——— Particular acts.

271. (1881.) Where a person accused of crime introduces evidence of his good character or reputation, it is not competent for the prosecution, in reply, to put in evidence particular facts tending to prove it to be bad. But if particular facts be admitted, either with or without objection, the accused has the right to show the circumstances under which they occurred. Olive v. State, 11 Neb. 1 (7 N. W. 444); (1894) Patterson v. State, 41 Neb. 538 (59 N. W. 917); (1895) Bayse v. State, 45 Neb. 261 (63 N. W. 811).

272. (1894.) Character, according to its legal construction, is a fact, and means the estimate in which the individual is held in the community in which he lives; and it is not error on the part of a trial court to exclude the knowledge of a witness, purporting to have been gained by personal acquaintance or dealings with the individual whose character is in question, as only the general reputation of such individual is admissible. Berneker v. State, 40 Neb. 810 (59 N. W. 372).

——— Cross-examination of defendant as to credibility.

273. (1904.) The credibility of accused, when a witness in his own behalf, is to be determined and tested by the same principles that are applicable alike to all witnesses who testify in a case. Ferguson v. State, 72 Neb. 350 (100 N. W. 800).

274. (1904.) In a criminal action, when an accused takes the witness stand in his own behalf, he is put in the position of an ordinary witness and subject to the rules governing the usual cross-examination. Ferguson v. State, 72 Neb. 350 (100 N. W. 800).

www.libtool.com.cn

275. (1905.) Where an accused testifies in his own behalf he may be cross-examined as any other witness, but matter not brought out on his direct examination and which tends merely to disgrace him before the jury, cannot be brought out. Razee v. State, 73 Neb. 732 (103 N. W. 438).

D. Materiality and Competency in General.

Evidence on preliminary examination, see ante, §§ 142, 143.

Rules of evidence in general.

276. (1895.) If the evidence offered be legally admissible for any purpose, an objection to such evidence should be overruled. Evidence cannot be excluded because it is not material to every issue in the case. Carleton v. State, 43 Neb. 373 (61 N. W. 699).

277. (1901.) The legislature may change the rules of evidence. State v. Heldenbrand, 62 Neb. 136 (87 N. W. 25; 89 Am. St. Rep. 493).

278. (1905.) A local custom cannot operate to suspend a criminal statute, nor to overthrow the rules of evidence by which the commission of an offense is proved. Crockford v. State, 73 Neb. 1 (102 N. W. 70).

279. (1907.) A wife may testify as to a crime committed against her by her husband, and it is proper for her to state all of the facts relating to the commission of such crime, nothwithstanding her evidence may tend to convict him of another and different offense committed at the same time and in the same transaction. Miller v. State, 78 Neb. 645 (111 N. W. 637).

Nature and source of evidence.

280. (1897.) A party is not prejudiced by the refusal of the court to strike out testimony of a witness as to when a certain fact happened because the witness admits that he entered such fact in a book at that time and testifies from the entry rather than from his recollection, when it appears that the entry was correct and the party moving to strike out introduced in evidence the entry made in the book by the witness. Davis v. State, 51 Neb. 301 (70 N. W. 984).

281. (1904.) When a witness testifies positively to a conversation with an acquaintance over the telephone, an objection to the evidence on the ground that the witness has not sufficiently identified the person with whom the conversation was held should not be sustained, the witness' knowledge of such identity not having been tested by cross-examination or otherwise. The force of the evidence is a question for the jury. Lillie v. State, 72 Neb. 228 (100 N. W. 316).

Evidence wrongfully obtained in general.

282. (1878.) Any circumstance tending to establish the prisoner's guilt may be proved, although it was brought to light by an admission of the prisoner, inadmissible, per se, as having been obtained by improper influence. Walrath v. State, 8 Neb. 80; (1893) Taylor v. State, 37 Neb. 788 (56 N. W. 623).

282*a*. (1907.) Where articles are offered in evidence which are pertinent to the issue, the court will not exclude them on account of the manner in which they were obtained. Younger v. State, 80 Neb. 201 (114 N. W. 170).

Articles wrongfully taken from accused.

283. (1902.) Evidence showing that a pair of old shoes, worn by defendant at the time he was arrested, was taken from the jail in his absence and without his consent, does not establish a violation of his constitutional right to be secure against unreasonable searches and seizures. Russell v. State, 66 Neb. 497 (92 N. W. 751).

E. Best and Secondary and Demonstrative Evidence.

Admissibility of secondary evidence in general.

284. (1878.) When a public officer is called to testify as to payments of money to him in his official capacity by the prisoner, it is proper practice to permit him to refresh his recollection from extracts which he has taken from his own official records, without producing the original. Nor does the fact that the statute permits certified copies from such records to be given in evidence preclude the proof of such payments by the oral testimony of any witness who saw them made. Clough v. State, 7 Neb. 320.

285. (1901.) Prior to the adoption of the constitution, no person had the inherent right to establish his defense in every instance by oral evidence. State v. Heldenbrand, 62 Neb. 136 (87 N W. 25; 89 Am. St. Rep. 493).

286. (1902.) It is error to permit a witness, over a proper objection, to answer a question where such answer involves secondary evidence of the contents of a written instrument, for the admission of which no foundation has been laid, and the conclusion of the witness as to the nature of the instrument. Sothman v. State, 66 Neb. 302 (92 N. W. 303).

287. (1903.) What the law requires is the production of original evidence, the best evidence obtainable; secondary evidence being admissible only when for some reason primary evidence cannot be secured. Donner v. State, 69 Neb. 56 (95 N. W. 40).

Record or other writing as best evidence.

288. (1899.) It is competent to prove the ownership of a store building by parol evidence when it does not appear that such building is real estate. Knights v. State, 58 Neb. 225 (78 N. W. 508; 76 Am. St. Rep. 78).

Preliminaries to admission of secondary evidence.

289. (1887.) Where the record of the indictment against a party accused of committing a crime has been omitted or lost or destroyed, the court will receive secondary evidence as to the essential facts stated in the indictment which conferred jurisdiction on the trial court. Ex parte Carr, 22 Neb. 535 (35 N. W. 409).

290. (1897.) Secondary evidence of the contents of an instrument is admissible upon proof that it once existed, and was last seen in the possession of the adverse party, where he under oath on the trial has denied the existence of such instrument. Whitney v. State, 53 Neb. 287 (73 N. W. 696).

Experiments and measurements.

291. (1878.) The general rule that, in proving a comparison between a boot of the prisoner and a track claimed by the prosecution to have been made by him at the time the murder was committed, it must be shown that such comparison and measurements were made before the boot was placed upon the track, has no application where the imprint is such that no change could be effected in its appearance by placing the boot upon it. Clough v. State, 7 Neb. 320.

292. (1904.) Under some circumstances it is in the discretion of the trial court to permit evidence of experiments to illustrate transactions that have been testified to; and, under the circumstances in this case, the court did not abuse its discretion in permitting such evidence. Lillie v. State, 72 Neb. 228 (100 N. W. 316).

293. (1905.) Evidence describing comparisons made between the shoes worn by the accused and footprints found near the place where the crime was committed, without the opinions of the witnesses, is proper and competent as tending to connect the accused with the commission of the offense. Krens v. State, 75 Neb. 294 (106 N. W. 27).

Result of trailing by dogs.

294. (1903.) The conduct and behavior of bloodhounds, after being set upon the trail of a fugitive criminal, may not be given in evidence by the state, for the purpose of proving that the scent of the accused and the scent of the person who perpetrated the crime which is being investigated are identical. Brott v. State, 70 Neb. 395 (97 N. W. 593; 63 L. R. A. 789).

F. Admissions, Declarations and Hearsay.

Hearsay evidence in prosecution for larceny, see Larceny, § 52

Admissions by accused.

295. (1878.) When the prosecutor depends upon the admissions of the prisoner to establish guilt, if they be reconcilable, and none are disproved, they must be taken all together. Walrath v. State, 8 Neb. 80.

296. (1885.) The admissions or confessions of an accused on trial for a crime, made to an individual, out of court, without proof aliunde that a crime has been committed, will not justify a conviction. Smith v. State, 17 Neb. 358 (22 N. W. 780).

297. (1903.) The conduct of the sheriff, who, upon arresting one charged with crime, immediately furnishes him with intoxicating liquors and proceeds to question him for the purpose of obtaining evidence against him, is unjustifiable, and evidence of admissions made under such circumstances should be excluded. McNutt v. State, 68 Neb. 207 (94 N. W. 143).

298. (1903.) The admission of evidence of statements made by accused after the sheriff had furnished him with liquor will not be held prejudicial so as to require a reversal if there is uncontradicted evidence that the defendant afterwards, when free from the influence of liquor, and without any undue influence of any kind being brought to bear upon him, made the same admissions to various other persons. McNutt v. State, 68 Neb. 207 (94 N. W. 143).

Digitized by Google

299. (1905.) The admission in evidence of testimony of a witness as to a statement by defendant as an admission of guilt, such statement appearing to have been made while under fear of bodily harm, and also, denied, by defendant, to have been made as stated by the witness, is error. Powers v. State, 75 Neb. 226 (106 N. W. 332).

Declarations by accused.

300. (1878.) The statements of a prisoner to be competent evidence must have been voluntarily made. If made under the obligations of an oath they are not voluntary as a general rule. But when the person, although he be subsequently charged with the offense, appears voluntarily, and gives his testimony before any accusation has been made against him, his statements, although under oath, are admissible. Clough v. State, 7 Neb. 320.

301. (1886.) It is not error to allow an officer who arrested a defendant to testify as to statements made by such defendant while in custody, if it be shown that such statements were made voluntarily and without any inducements of hope or fear—being made or offered by such officer or other person. Ballard v. State, 19 Neb. 609 (28 N. W. 271).

302. (1887.) A person to whom one intending to commit burglary confides such intention, and procures such person to act as accomplice, is a competent witness to prove the declarations and acts of the party committing the offense, the credibility of such witness being a question for the jury. State v. Sneff, 22 Neb. 481 (35 N. W. 219).

303. (1901.) Statements in one's own interest, self-serving in their nature, made soon after the commission of the homicide which such person was charged with having committed, even though made under the apprehension of impending death, the person recovering, are inadmissible as evidence, either as declarations in extremis or as a part of the res gestæ. Smith v. State, 61 Neb. 296 (85 N. W. 49).

304. (1899.) A declaration may be a part of the res gestæ. Smith v. State, 61 cisely coincident with the main transaction. It is sufficient that there was between the two an immediate casual relation, and that the statement was a spontaneous characterization of the act. Sullivan v. State, 58 Neb. 796 (79 N. W. 721).

305. (1901.) In order to render statements made by one charged with crime, admissible as declarations against interest it is not necessary that he be informed that such statements would be used against him. Coil v. State, 62 Neb. 15 (86 N. W. 925).

306. (1901.) A prisoner confined in jail is not necessarily under coercion, in such a sense as to preclude his making declarations against interest. Coil v. State, 62 Neb. 15 (86 N. W. 925).

——— Competency of witness.

307. (1888.) While the confessions or statements of a third party, not made in the presence of the accused, are inadmissible in any form in a prosecution against a prisoner charged with the offense of aiding and abetting such third party in the commission of a murder, yet it is competent to prove the statements of the accused, made against his interests, in a conversation in which he is informed that a confession has been made by such third party, he being the principal indicted with the accused, but not in custody, and in such case the whole conversation between the witness and accused may be given in evidence. Long v. State, 23 Neb. 33 (36 N. W. 310).

308. (1878.) It is not necessary to the competency of a witness called to testify as to what he had heard the prisoner say, that he should have heard all he said on that occasion, if what he heard be sufficient to carry an intelligible idea respecting the commissions of the offense, it may be given in evidence against him. Clough v. State, 7 Neb. 320.

Declarations by person injured.

Dying declarations, see Homicide, §§ 127*a*-132.

Admissiblity of dying declaration in abortion, see Abortion, § 4.

309. (1895.) Where one, in company with another while stealing coal from a railroad car, is shot and in a few hours is found unconscious and on regaining his senses stated, "D had shot him accidentally," such declaration, not being made under fear of impending death, is inadmissible in a prosecution of C. for murder. Collins v. State, 46 Neb. 37 (64 N. W. 432).

310. (1895.) Whether the declarations of a person, since deceased, are competent evidence, as being part of the res gestae of some transaction occurring in the life of said deceased, in any case, must be determined from the peculiar facts and circumstances surrounding the case on trial and the basis of which case is the past transaction. Collins v. State, 46 Neb. 37 (64 N. W. 432).

www.libtool.com.cn

311. (1895.) Evidence of the complaints of the injured person in a prosecution for rape is admissible only as corroborative of her testimony, and such complaints are not, except when made in extremis, admissible as independent evidence of the offense charged. State v. Meyers, 46 Neb. 152 (64 N. W. 697; 37 L. R. A. 423)

312 (1895.) When, by reason of her imbecility, the injured female does not testify as a witness, her declarations relating to the alleged assault are not admissible in evidence, and the fact that she is incompetent to testify on account of imbecility or for other reasons is wholly immaterial. State v. Meyers, 46 Neb. 152 (64 N. W. 697; 37 L. R. A. 423)

Declarations by third persons.

313. (1893.) Letters written by third parties in another state to third parties in this, but not in answer to letters written by the accused nor connected therewith, are not admissible in evidence against the accused in a criminal prosecution to prove a material fact in the case. Bedford v. State, 36 Neb. 702 (55 N. W. 263).

——Admission of guilt.

314. (1904.) An ordinary written statement of a third person that he committed the crime in question, which is not sworn to, and is not preserved in the form of a deposition, is not competent evidence, and should not be received as a defense to the prosecution. Mays v. State, 72 Neb. 723 (101 N. W. 979).

315. (1904.) The testimony of a witness that a third person had stated to him that he was guilty of the crime of which the defendant was accused is hearsay evidence, and therefore not admissible. Mays v. State, 72 Neb. 723 (101 N. W. 979).

Hearsay in general.

316. (1903.) Ordinarily hearsay testimony is inadmissible. Donner v. State, 69 Neb. 56 (95 N. W. 40).

317. (1903.) A witness is not permitted to state what appears from books or records where it is shown that the books were not kept by the witness nor the entries made by him nor in his presence, such statements being merely hearsay testimony. Donner v. State, 69 Neb. 56 (95 N. W. 40).

318. (1906.) Insanity cannot be proved by hearsay or reputation, and it is proper to exclude such evidence. Reed v. State, 75 Neb. 509 (106 N. W. 649).

Cross-examination of accused as to contradictory statements.

319. (1895.) Where accused immediately after the killing gave an account thereof different from the one which he gave at the trial, a question on cross-examination, as to when he first told "this story of this transaction as you have told it on the stand," is proper. Carleton v. State, 43 Neb. 373 (61 N. W. 699).

G. Acts and Declarations of Conspirators and Co-Defendants.

Admissibility of declarations of conspirators, see Conspiracy, §§ 9-11.

Furtherance of common purpose.

320. (1903.) On the trial of a person charged with instigating another to steal cattle, the declarations of the thief while engaged in the perpetration of the crime are admissible in evidence as part of the res gestae. Lamb v. State, 69 Neb. 212 (95 N. W. 1050).

321. (1903.) When a conspiracy to commit a crime is once shown to exist by the requisite quantum of proof, the acts and declarations of each of the conspirators, in furtherance of the common design, are the acts and declarations of all. Lamb v. State, 69 Neb. 212 (95 N. W. 1050).

322. (1903.) The acts and declarations of a conspirator, during the pendency of the conspiracy, and in furtherance of the common purpose, are admissible in evidence against his associates. O'Brien v. State, 69 Neb. 691 (96 N. W. 649).

After commission of act.

323. (1880.) A confession by A in B's absence that he and B committed a murder is not evidence against B. Priest v. State, 10 Neb. 393 (6 N. W. 468).

324. (1907.) When an accomplice has confessed and has gone upon the witness stand and testified to all the details of the crime, it is error to allow a number of other witnesses, who have heard him tell the same story at another time and place, to repeat in detail all that he told as to the occurrence. O'Hearn v. State, 79 Neb. 513 (113 N. W. 130).

325. (1907.) A statement made by a person under arrest charged with murder, upon a confession by an accomplice being read to him, and on being asked by a police officer if he wanted to make any statement in regard to it, that he would make his statement at the proper time, or that he would stand trial and tell his story then, shows dissent rather than assent to the statement of the accomplice, and does not render it admissible in evidence as a tacit confession. O'Hearn v. State, 79 Neb. 513 (113 N. W. 130).

326. (1907.) Statements or confessions made in the presence of one accused of crime, who remains silent, are admissible in evidence, if the time, the place and the circumstances are such as to lead to the inference that the accused by his silence assented to the truth of the same. O'Hearn v. State, 79 Neb. 513 (113 N. W. 130).

Preliminary evidence as to conspiracy.

327. (1903.) Before the acts and declarations of a conspirator are entitled to be considered as evidence against his associates, the conspiracy itself must be established, but the order of proof is a matter within the discretion of the trial court. O'Brien v. State, 69 Neb. 691 (96 N. W. 649).

H. Documentary Evidence

Certificate of registration of animal.

328. (1894.) A certificate of registration of the pedigree of a hog, purporting to be signed by the Standard Poland-China Record Association, and authenticated with the seal of such association, is inadmissible to prove registration of the hog. Lamb v. State, 40 Neb. 312 (58 N. W. 963).

Photographs.

329. (1903.) A photograph, used for the purpose of identifying a person implicated in the theft of cattle, is admissible in evidence without showing when, where or by whom it was taken. Lamb v. State, 69 Neb. 212 (95 N. W. 1050).

Account books.

330. (1905.) A charge against a deceased person in a so-called account book, offered in evidence to show that he was alive on the date corresponding to such charge, is not competent evidence unless it is first shown by whom the charge was made, the time when it was entered in the book, that the book itself is such a book of accounts as is admissible in evidence under the statute, and that he personally procured the service charged for at the time the entry was made. Barker v. State, 73 Neb. 469 (103 N. W. 71).

Proof of existence or non-existence of record in general.

331. (1896.) The existence of a record may be proved by its production, or an authenticated copy thereof. The non-existence of a record may be proved by the testimony of one who is cognizant of such fact. Hornberger v. State, 47 Neb. 40 (66 N. W. 23).

I. Opinion Evidence.

Conclusions in general.

332. (1902.) A non-expert witness may give his opinion in regard to a matter which men in general are capable of comprehending, when, from the nature of the case, it is impossible for him to lay before the jury all the pertinent facts so as to enable them to see the thing he is describing just as he saw it. Russell v. State, 66 Neb. 497 (92 N. W. 751).

Mental condition.

333. (1879.) The opinion of a witness, not an expert, is competent evidence upon the question of the prisoner's sanity, where such opinion is formed upon facts within the person knowledge of the witness, and sworn to by him before the jury. Schlencker v. State, 9 Neb. 241 (1 N. W. 857); (1883) Polin v. State, 14 Neb. 540 (16 N. W. 898).

334. (1893.) The testimony of a witness as to the sanity of one accused of homicide must be strictly limited to such sanity or insanity, and confined to those occasions upon which the witness testifies to having observed the conduct and appearances of the individual whose sanity is the subject of inquiry Shults v. State, 37 Neb. 481 (55 N. W. 1080).

335. (1893.) Only such intimate acquaintances of a person accused of crimes as have seen him almost daily for several months preceding the date upon which the alleged crime occurred are competent as non-expert witnesses to testify as to the sanity or insanity of the accused. Shults v. State, 37 Neb. 481 (55 N. W. 1080).

336. (1893.) The rule permitting a non-expert witness to testify as to the sanity or insanity of a party whose legal accountability is the sole matter in issue does not allow such witness to testify that at a certain date such party knew the difference between the right and wrong of an act at that time committed by him. Shults v. State, 87 Neb. 481 (55 N. W. 1080); (1906) Reed v. State, 75 Neb. 509 (106 N. W. 649).

337 (1895.) A non-expert witness may in a prosecution for murder, the necessary foundation therefor having been laid, be examined as to his opinion regarding the sanity of the accused, and may state whether in his judgment the latter was able to distinguish between right and wrong with respect to the particular crime charged. Pflueger v. State, 46 Neb. 493 (64 N. W. 1094).

www.hptool.com.cn

338. (1895.) The opinions of non-expert witnesses who have known the accused for fifteen years and who met and observed him almost daily for six weeks or more immediately preceding the commission by him of a homicide, their attention being particularly directed to his mental condition, are admissible as bearing upon the question of his sanity. Pflueger v. State, 46 Neb. 493 (64 N. W. 1094).

339. (1896.) A non-expert witness should be permitted to express an opinion as to sanity, only when he has shown sufficient qualifications and has stated the facts and circumstances upon which his opinion is based. Hoover v. State, 48 Neb. 184 (66 N. W. 1117); (1904) Bothwell v. State, 71 Neb. 747 (99 N. W. 669).

340. (1898) Non-experts may give their opinions as to a person's sanity only after narrating the facts by them observed on which they base their opinions. Snider v. State, 56 Neb. 309 (76 N. W. 574).

341. (1906.) The opinions of non-expert witnesses on the question of the insanity of one charged with a criminal offense are entitled to little or no regard, unless supported by good reasons founded on facts which warrant them. From such opinions and the facts stated to support them, it is the province of the jury to draw their conclusions as to the sanity or insanity of the defendant. Reed v. State, 75 Neb. 509 (106 N. W. 649).

Identity of footprints.

342. (1878) It is not competent for a witness testifying of a comparison made between one of the prisoner's boots and a bloody footprints found near the place where the homicide was committed, to give his opinion as to whether that boot made the track; but where a witness expresses such opinion and no objection is made until after verdict, it furnishes no ground for a new trial Clough v. State, 7 Neb. 320.

343. (1901.) It is incompetent for a witness testifying to a comparison made between one of the feet of a horse which the prisoner was known to have ridden on the day of the homicide and tracks of a horse found near the place where the crime was committed and leading in the direction of the defendant's home, to give his opinion or belief as to whether the tracks were made by such horse. Russell v. State, 62 Neb. 512 (87 N. W. 344).

344. (1907.) In a prosecution for the crime of arson, evidence describing the shoes worn by the accused and footprints found near the place where the crime was committed is proper and competent. But it is error to allow the witness making such comparisons to express his opinion that the footprints were made by the accused. Heidelbaugh v. State, 79 Neb. 499 (113 N. W. 145).

Subjects of expert testimony.

345. (1897.) In a criminal prosecution, where books of such a character as to render it difficult for the jury to arrive at a correct conclusion as to amounts of items involved are in the court room subject to inspection of accused, an expert accountant who examined the books may be allowed to testify to the result of his examination. Bartley v. State, 53 Neb. 310 (73 N. W. 744).

346. (1905.) Matters of common observation and matters upon which jurymen are as capable of forming an opinion as are physicians and surgeons, are not matters for expert medical testimony. But it is not necessarily reversible error to allow a witness to testify to a truism with which all intelligent men are presumed to be acquainted, nor is it in all cases reversible error to allow a witness, over objection, to testify to a proposition of law, or a fact of science or nature which is a matter of common knowledge. Turley v. State, 74 Neb. 471 (104 N. W. 934).

346*a*. (1907.) In a prosecution for embezzlement or other crime, where the books, records, papers and entries are voluminous and of such a character as to render it difficult for the jury to arrive at a correct conclusion as to amounts, an expert accountant may be allowed to examine such books, etc., and testify as to the result of his examination, and as to particular entries therein, shown to be in the handwriting of the defendant, when such books are in the courtroom subject to inspection by the accused, and the particular entries are also introduced in evidence. Bode v. State, 80 Neb. 74 (113 N. W. 996).

www.libtool.com.cn

Competency of expert.

346*b*. (1889.) In a prosecution for larceny witnesses testifying as to the value of the property stolen, must show that they possess knowledge of such value. Brooks v. State, 28 Neb. 389 (44 N. W. 436).

Examination of experts.

347. (1879.) In the examination of an expert witness as to the apearance of the bullet wound of which the deceased died, it is not improper to state a supposed case as a means of showing what, under different conditions, the appearance of a wound made by the same agency might or would have been. Schlencker v. State, 9 Neb. 241 (1 N. W. 857).

348. (1889.) Where the opinion of an expert is sought upon the question of the insanity of the accused, the hypothetical questions to such expert must be so framed as to fairly reflect the facts admitted or proved by other witnesses. Burgo v. State, 26 Neb. 639 (42 N. W. 701).

J. Testimony of Accomplices and Co-Defendants.

Weight and sufficiency, see post, §§ 393-395.

In general.

349. (1876.) When separate trials are awarded to parties jointly indicted, each is a competent witness for the state upon the trial of the other, without being first acquitted or convicted, and without a nolle prosequi being first entered upon the indictment. Carroll v. State, 5 Neb. 31.

K. Confessions.

Weight and sufficiency, see post, §§ 387-392.

Admissibility in general.

350. (1889.) Where a party accused of crime, voluntarily and without inducement of any kind, makes a confession that he committed the offense, and details the facts and circumstances, such confession is admissible in evidence against him, although at the time of making the same he was held in custody. Anderson v. State, 25 Neb. 550 (41 N. W. 357).

351. (1891.) The confessions proven on trial held to be voluntary, and properly received in evidence. Shepherd v. State, 31 Neb. 389 (47 N. W. 1118).

352. (1891.) Where a prisoner, while under arrest and without threat, promise, or expectation of hopes or favor, voluntarily makes a confession, the same may be proven on the trial. Furst v. State, 31 Neb. 403 (47 N. W. 1116).

353. (1892.) When the crime charged is fully established by competent testimony, the free and voluntarily confession of the defendant may be proven for the purpose of connecting him with the offense. Wernecke v. State, 34 Neb. 14 (51 N. W. 307); (1898) Chezem v. State, 56 Neb. 488 (76 N. W. 1056).

354. (1893.) A confession receivable in evidence, only after proof that it was made voluntarily, is restricted to an acknowledgment of the defendant's guilt, and the word does not apply to a statement made by the defendant of facts which tend to establish his guilt. Taylor v. State, 37 Neb. 788 (56 N. W. 623).

355. (1895.) A voluntary confession or admission of guilt made by a prisoner out of court is admissible in evidence against him. Basye v. State, 45 Neb. 261 (63 N. W. 811); (1901) Burlingim v. State, 61 Neb. 276 (85 N. W. 76); (1901) Hills v. State, 61 Neb. 589 (85 N. W. 836; 57 L. R. A. 155); (1901) Coil v. State, 62 Neb. 15 (86 N. W. 925); (1901) Reinoehl v. State, 62 Neb. 619 (87 N. W. 355).

356. (1895.) Voluntary statements in the nature of confessions by one accused of murder are properly admitted in evidence against him. Pflueger v. State, 46 Neb. 493 (64 N. W. 1094).

357. (1897.) Confessions freely and voluntarily made by one charged with a crime are competent evidence to be considered by the jury in connection with other evidence in determining whether accused did in fact commit the crime. Davis v. State, 51 Neb. 301 (70 N. W. 984).

358. (1903.) In a criminal prosecution, only such confessions of the defendant as are shown to have been made voluntarily, without fear of punishment or hope of reward, are admissible in evidence. State v. Force, 69 Neb. 162 (95 N. W. 42).

358*a*. (1907.) Voluntary admissions or confessions of the accused tending to establish his guilt may usually be received in evidence against him, and the fact that such admissions contain statements tending also to show the commission of an offense other than the one for which the defendant is on trial does not render them inadmissible. Bode v. State, 80 Neb. 74 (113 N. W. 996).

Privileged communication.

359. (1901.) A communication to a minister of the gospel, or a priest, is not privileged where it is shown that it was not made in confidence of the relation, or was not to be kept as a secret. Hills v. State, 61 Neb. 589 (85 N. W. 836; 57 L. R. A. 155).

Promises or inducements.

360. (1891.) When from the cross-examination of an officer it appears that he held out inducements to the accused to confess, a confession thereafter made to him is not admissible in evidence. Bubster v. State, 33 Neb. 663 (50 N. W. 953).

Threats and fear.

361. (1893.) Confessions of the accused in a criminal prosecution are inadmissible where there is reasonable ground for the presumption that they were extorted by threats or induced by means of promises. May v. State, 38 Neb. 211 (56 N. W. 804).

362. (1901.) The true test of the admissibility of a confession is whether there is a casual relation between it and any threat or promise with respect to the crime charged, made by a person having authority over either the prosecution or the prisoner. Strong v. State, 63 Neb. 440 (88 N. W. 772).

363. (1903.) The father of the accused, shortly after the commission of the alleged crime, pointed a shotgun at his head and said: "James, you are my prisoner; I have a right to arrest you; you shall go to Harrison and tell the sheriff, county attorney and coroner's jury all about the killing of H. R., and you will get clear; but if you don't you will get convicted." Accused consented to the demand of his father, and made a confession to the officers named. Held, That evidence of such confession was inadmissible. State v. Force, 69 Neb. 162 (95 N. W. 42).

364. (1903.) Further confessions by the accused, subsequent to an extorted confession, will be equally inadmissible, if so related in point of surrounding circumstances and proximity of time as to raise a presumption that the influences resulting in the first confession have not ceased to operate upon his mind. State v. Force, 69 Neb. 162 (95 N. W. 42).

Deception.

365. (1886.) A confession obtained by a detective in guise of a friend is admissible in evidence against the accused. Heidt v. State, 20 Neb. 492 (30 N. W. 626; 58 Am. Rep. 835).

Preliminary evidence as to voluntary character.

366. (1894.) Before proving a confession the defendant should be permitted to cross-examine the witness as to the circumstances under which the confession was made. Willis v. State, 43 Neb. 102 (61 N. W. 254).

367. (1898.) In laying the foundation for evidence of confessions it is sufficient to prove affirmatively all that occurred prior to and at the time of the confessions, provided such proof excludes the hypothesis of inducements of hope or fear. Snider v. State, 56 Neb. 309 (76 N. W. 574).

L. Evidence at Preliminary Examination or at Former Trial.

Admissibility of testimony taken on preliminary hearing in bastardy, see Bastards, §§ 60-64.

Admissibility in general.

368. (1884.) Where a deceased witness testified upon a former trial of the same party for the same offense, being brought "face to face" with the accused and cross-examined by him, it is competent, upon a subsequent trial, to prove the testimony of such deceased witness, and such proof does not violate the provisions of the constitution of the state which gives to the accused the right to "meet the witnesses against him face to face." Hair v. State, 16 Neb. 601 (21 N. W. 464).

369. (1884.) Where a court reporter is sworn as a witness for the purpose of proving the testimony of a deceased witness, and where such reporter testifies that the notes of the testimony of such deceased witness were accurately taken by him at the time the testimony was given, such notes may be used by the reporter in giving the testimony of the deceased witness, for the purpose of refreshing his memory, and if necessary he may read the testimony to the jury. Hair v. State, 16 Neb. 601 (21 N. W. 464).

M. Weight and Sufficiency.

Weight in general.

370. (1886.) An escape is not necessarily an admission of guilt. Mathews v. State, 19 Neb. 330 (27 N. W. 234).

371. (1896.) Where a witness uses a word having a signification so generally known as to be understood by the jurors, courts will not treat the word as unintelligible merely because from motives of decency and propriety lexicographers have ignored it. Bruce v. State, 48 Neb. 570 (67 N. W. 454).

372. (1902.) Where the record of a witness' previous conviction of a felony is introduced in evidence, under section 330 of the code of criminal procedure, for the purpose of affecting the credibility of the witness, such record is not conclusive, and the witness may show that he was in fact innocent. Reed v. State, 66 Neb. 184 (92 N. W. 321).

www.libtool.com.cn

Conclusiveness of answer of witness.

373. (1891.) The answer, on cross-examination, of a party on trial for a crime as to any matter not material to the issue, is conclusive on the party making the inquiry; as the court will not try a collateral question relating to another offense than the one then being tried. Leahy v. State, 31 Neb. 566 (48 N. W. 390).

374. (1897.) A litigant who propounds a question to a witness and obtains from him an answer responsive thereto cannot complain that the court erred in refusing on his motion to expunge such answer from the record. Davis v. State, 51 Neb. 301 (70 N. W. 921).

375. (1905.) Where the prosecuting attorney, on the cross-examination of the accused in a criminal case, asks him if he has not been guilty of a similar offense upon another person at another time, he is concluded by the answer and cannot call another witness to impeach the accused. Nicholizack v. State, 75 Neb. 27 (105 N. W. 895).

Circumstantial evidence.

376. (1882.) To warrant a conviction upon circumstantial evidence, the circumstances when taken together must be of so conclusive a nature as to show beyond a reasonable doubt that the accused, and no other person, committed the offense. Walbridge v. State, 13 Neb. 236 (13 N. W. 209); (1892) Kaiser v. State, 35 Neb. 704 (53 N. W. 610).

377. (1892.) When a criminal charge is to be proved by circumstantial evidence, the proof ought not only to be consistent with the guilt of the accused, but inconsistent with any other rational conclusion. Walbridge v. State, 13 Neb. 236 (13 N. W. 209).

378. (1893.) In order to sustain a conviction for a felony on purely circumstantial evidence the circumstances pointing to the guilt of the accused must be of so conclusive a character as to exclude every other reasonable hypothesis. It is not sufficient that the circumstances when considered together create a probability, although a strong one, of the guilt of the accused. Dreessen v. State, 38 Neb. 375 (56 N. W. 1024).

379. (1895.) The law does not require in every case independent evidence of the particular intention. On the contrary the circumstances attending the principal act may be of such a character as to exclude every rational hypothesis except the existence of the specified intent charged. Krchnavy v. State, 43 Neb. 337 (61 N. W. 628).

380. (1895.) In criminal cases, as in civil, facts may be established by circumstances as well as by direct evidence, and a verdict of guilty is supported by the evidence when the circumstances proved lead beyond a reasonable doubt to inferences of the facts essential to establish the defendant's guilt. Dixon v. State, 46 Neb. 298 (64 N. W. 961).

381. (1897.) The test by which to determine the sufficiency of circumstantial evidence in a criminal prosecution, is whether the facts and circumstances tending to connect the accused with the crime charged are of such conclusive nature as to exclude to a moral certainty every rational hypothesis except that of his guilt. Morgan v. State, 51 Neb. 672 (71 N. W. 788); (1899) Kastner v. State, 58 Neb. 767 (79 N. W. 713).

382. (1897.) It is the province of the jury to determine the circumstances surrounding, and which shed light upon the alleged crime; and if, assuming as proved the facts which the evidence tends to establish, they can be accounted for upon no rational theory which does not include the guilt of the accused, the proof cannot, as a matter of law, be said to have failed. (Casey v. State, 20 Neb. 138.) Morgan v. State, 51 Neb. 672 (71 N. W. 788).

383. (1901.) To justify conviction on circumstantial evidence, it is necessary that the facts and circumstances essential to the conclusion sought must be proven by competent evidence beyond a reasonable doubt, and, when taken together or as a whole, must be of such a character as to be consistent with each other, and with the hypothesis sought to be established thereby, and inconsistent with any reasonable hypothesis of innocence. Smith v. State, 61 Neb. 296 (85 N. W. 49).

384. (1901.) The intent with which an act is done is inferable from the act itself, and from the facts and circumstances surrounding it. Clary v. State, 61 Neb. 688 (85 N. W. 897).

Testimony or statements of accused.

385. (1884.) The unsupported testimony of the accused in a criminal case, which the jury do not believe, cannot be said to furnish any hypothesis consistent with the innocence of the accused. Binfield v. State, 15 Neb. 484 (19 N. W. 607).

386. (1899.) Circumstances capable of an innocent construction may be interpreted in the light of the defendant's confession, and the fact under investigation be thus given a criminal aspect. Sullivan v. State, 58 Neb. 796 (79 N. W. 721).

Confessions.

387. (1876.) The degree of credit, ordinarily to be given to the confession of a prisoner, should be left to the jury, under proper instructions, with reference to the evidence in each particular case. But a confession alone is not sufficient evidence of the corpus delicti. There should be other proof that a crime has been committed and the confession admitted only for the purpose of connecting the defendant with the offense. Dodge v. State, 4 Neb. 220.

388. (1880.) A confession is not sufficient evidence of the corpus delicti. There must be other evidence that a crime has actually been committed, the confession being used to connect the accused with the crime. Priest v. State, 10 Neb. 393 (6 N. W. 468).

389. (1891.) The jury is not bound to give every part of a confession the same credence, but they can accept one part as true and reject such portion as they believe from the evidence is untrue. Furst v. State, 31 Neb. 403 (47 N. W. 1116).

390. (1893.) Confession or admission of accused is not alone sufficient to convict; but the commission of crime being established by other evidence, confession may be proved to connect accused with offense. Ashford v. State, 36 Neb. 38 (53 N. W. 1036); (1899) Sullivan v. State, 58 Neb. 796 (79 N. W. 721); (1905) Blacker v. State, 74 Neb. 671 (105 N. W. 302).

391. (1897.) The corpus delicti is the foundation of every criminal prosecution and the confession of an accused that he committed the crime is not alone sufficient evidence to sustain his conviction therefor. Davis v. State, 51 Neb. 301 (70 N. W. 984).

392. (1899.) While a voluntary confession is insufficient, standing alone, to prove that a crime has been committed, it is competent evidence of that fact, and may, with slight corroborative circumstances, be sufficient to warrant a conviction. Sullivan v. State, 58 Neb. 796 (79 N. W. 721).

Testimony of accomplice.

393. A conviction may rest on the uncorroborated evidence of an accomplice, when, considered with all the testimony, it satisfies the jury beyond a reasonable doubt of the guilt of the accused. (1881) Olive v. State, 11 Neb. 1 (7 N. W. 444); (1894) Lamb v. State, 40 Neb. 312 (58 N. W. 963); (1896) Lawhead v. State, 46 Neb. 607 (65 N. W. 779).

394. (1894.) It is not error to refuse an instruction to the effect that a person accused of a crime cannot be convicted upon the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice. The weight to be given the testimony of such a witness is for the jury to determine, after a careful examination of the same, in the light of all the other evidence in the case. Lamb v. State, 40 Neb. 312 (58 N. W. 963).

395. (1903.) The evidence of an accomplice should be closely scrutinized. If it appears that such witness has wilfully sworn falsely in regard to a material matter upon the trial, his evidence cannot be sufficient, if uncorroborated, to support a verdict of guilty. Jahnke v. State, 68 Neb. 181 (104 N. W. 154).

Sufficiency in general.

396. (1878.) Evidence merely showing the accused to have been present at the commission of a felony, without more, is not sufficient to make him a principal therein. Walrath v. State, 8 Neb. 80.

397. (1883.) If the proof of guilt be of such moral certainty as convinces the minds of the jury, as reasonable men, beyond all reasonable doubt, it is sufficient. Parrish v. State, 14 Neb. 60 (15 N. W. 357).

398. (1883.) A verdict of guilty cannot be sustained where the evidence fails to show that the accused committed the offense charged. Staman v. State, 14 Neb. 68 (15 N. W. 227).

399. (1884.) Where there is distinct evidence of each material fact necessary to establish the guilt of the accused legally before the jury, a verdict against him will be upheld, although such testimony may be contradicted by other witnesses. Dutcher v. State, 16 Neb. 30 (19 N. W. 612).

400. (1885.) In cases of circumstantial evidence it is necessary that all the necessary facts and circumstances essential to the conclusion to prove beyond a reasonable doubt, but it is not necessary that each link in the evidence "relied upon" should be proven beyond a reasonable doubt. Such facts if not proven should be discarded by the jury. Bradshaw v. State, 17 Neb. 147 (22 N. W. 361).

401. (1897.) A charge that one made a false book-entry in the account of an individual with a bank is not sustained by proof that the entry was in an account with such individual designated as "township treasurer," and the variance is not less fatal because private money of the individual was included in the account referring to him as treasurer. Williams v. State, 51 Neb. 630 (71 N. W. 313).

402. (1897.) It is in a criminal prosecution permissible for the state to introduce evidence of any number of facts and circumstances tending to connect the accused with the crime charged, and if the facts actually proved are sufficient to establish guilt beyond a reasonable doubt he is not entitled to an acquittal because of a failure of proof with respect to one or more of the facts relied upon for a conviction. Morgan v. State, 51 Neb. 672 (71 N. W. 788).

403. (1899.) To sustain a criminal conviction it is not enough for the state to show that the prisoner indicted has violated the spirit of the statute, but the evidence must show beyond a reasonable doubt that he has offended against the very letter of the law. Bailey v. State, 57 Neb. 706 (78 N. W. 284; 73 Am. St. Rep. 540).

404. (1899.) The state may introduce evidence to prove any number of facts and circumstances tending to connect accused with the crime, and if they are sufficient to establish his guilt beyond a reasonable doubt, he is not entitled to an acquittal because of the failure of proof with respect to one or more of the facts relied upon for a conviction. Kastner v. State, 58 Neb. 767 (79 N. W. 713).

405. (1907.) The positive testimony of one apparently credible witness identifying the defendant as the perpetrator of the crime may be sufficient to support a conviction, when the defendant is shown by other witnesses to have been in the vicinity of the commission of the crime at the time it was committed, and there is no explanation of his presence there, and the corpus delicti is clearly proved. Buckley v. State, 79 Neb. 86 (112 N. W. 283).

Degree of proof in general.

406. (1879.) To warrant a verdict of guilty in a criminal case it is not required that the jury be convinced of the prisoner's guilt "beyond" a moral certainty, but it is enough if they are convinced of his guilt "to" a moral certainty. St. Louis v. State, 8 Neb. 405.

407. (1882.) Mere suspicion, however strong, will not authorize a jury to return a verdict of guilty. Morrison v. State, 13 Neb. 527 (14 N. W. 475).

408. (1892.) To authorize a jury to find a verdict of guilty in a criminal case the evidence must point to the accused as the party who committed the offense, and mere conjecture or suspicion, however strong, will not warrant a verdict of guilty. Binkley v. State, 34 Neb. 757 (52 N. W. 708).

409. (1895.) Where in a criminal case the evidence is circumstantial, the circumstances established, must, to warrant a conviction, be such as to exclude every reasonable hypothesis except that of the defendant's guilt. But this rule merely requires the exclusion of such hypotheses as are based on circumstances established by the evidence. It does not require the jury to acquit because of evidence which, if believed, would establish facts consistent with innocence, but which evidence the jury is justified in disbelieving. Carleton v. State, 43 Neb. 373 (61 N. W. 699).

410. (1897.) To warrant a conviction in a criminal prosecution it is not essential that the evidence adduced on the trial should exclude every possible hypothesis but the guilt of the accused. Johnson v. State, 53 Neb. 103 (73 N. W. 463).

411. (1900.) A verdict resting upon conjecture cannot be permitted to stand. Leisenberg v. State, 60 Neb. 628 (84 N. W. 6).

412. (1905.) In criminal trials, the verdict is not supported by the evidence, unless each element of the crime charged is proved beyond a reasonable doubt. A findin of malice or criminal intent must be derived from the facts proven, and not from conjecture. Lucas v. State, 75 Neb. 11 (105 N. W. 976).

Reasonable doubt.

413. (1888.) The guilt of an accused is proven beyond a reasonable doubt when, upon the entire comparison and consideration of all the evidence, the minds of the jurors are in that condition that they can say, from the evidence, they have and feel an abiding conviction, to a moral certainty, of the truth of the charge. A reasonable doubt does not consist of possible or conjectural doubts, not growing out of the evidence, but is one which, when considering the evidence alone, leads the juror to hesitate, and upon which he would refuse to act in the important concerns of life. It is error to charge a jury that it is a doubt for the having of which the juror can give a reason derived from the testimony. Carr v. State, 23 Neb. 749 (37 N. W. 630).

414. (1894.) The rule which requires proof in criminal cases, such as will exclude all reasonable doubt of the guilt of the accused, in order to authorize a conviction, is not limited to prosecutions for felonies, but applies as well to misdemeanors. Vandeventer v. State, 38 Neb. 592 (57 N. W. 397).

415. (1896.) Where the jury, from a consideration of all the evidence, entertains a reasonable doubt of the presence of defendant at the commission of the crime charged, he is entitled to an acquittal. Casey v. State, 49 Neb. 403 (68 N. W. 643).

416. (1897.) While the jury cannot return a verdict of guilty while a juror entertains a reasonable doubt as to defendant's guilt, they are not obliged to acquit accused because of such doubt. Davis v. State, 51 Neb. 301 (70 N. W. 984).

417. (1899.) If the jury entertain a reasonable doubt as to the truth of any material allegation of the indictment, the prisoner is entitled to an acquittal. Atkinson v. State, 58 Neb. 356 (78 N. W. 621).

418. (1904.) When the evidence relied upon to establish the guilt of the defendant is circumstantial, the facts proved beyond a reasonable doubt must be such as to exclude every reasonable hypothesis inconsistent with the guilt of the defendant. When the minds of reasonable men might fairly differ as to whether there is any reasonable doubt of the defendant's guilt, the responsiblity must be left, where the law places it, with the jury. The evidence in this case, under this rule, supports the verdict and judgment. Lillie v. State, 72 Neb. 228 (100 N. W. 316).

419. (1905.) In a criminal case it must be proved beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant committed the crime charged. If the fact that the crime charged was committed is proved beyond all doubt, it is still not sufficient to prove that the defendant had opportunity to commit it, and may have been the guilty party, but, if the evidence excludes all reasonable doubt, it is sufficient. Keeler v. State, 73 Neb. 441 (103 N. W. 64).

Corpus delicti.

420. (1898.) To sustain a conviction for a crime the corpus delicti must be proven beyond a reasonable doubt. Rule applied. Chezem v. State, 56 Neb. 496 (76 N. W. 1056).

Venue.

421. (1892.) The venue of an offense may be proven like any other fact in a criminal case. It need not be established by direct testimony, nor in the words of the information, but if from the facts in evidence the only rational conclusion which can be drawn is that the crime was committed in the county alleged, the proof is sufficient. Weinecke v. State, 34 Neb. 14 (51 N. W. 307).

422. (1905.) If it appears from the whole evidence, beyond a reasonable doubt, that the crime charged was committed in the county of the trial, the venue is sufficiently proved. Keeler v. State, 73 Neb. 441 (103 N. W. 64).

Motive.

423. (1904.) It is not indispensable in criminal trials that a motive be shown for the commission of the crime charged. If the evidence shows beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant committed the crime, the prosecution does not necessarily fail because the real motive for the act cannot be discovered and shown to the jury. Lillie v. State, 72 Neb. 228 (100 N. W. 316).

Insanity.

424. (1876.) In sustaining a defense of insanity, where there is testimony to rebut the legal presumption that the accused was sane, unless the jury are satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that the act complained of was not produced by mental disease, they must acquit. Wright v. State, 4 Neb. 407.

425. (1906.) The opinions of non-expert witnesses on the question of the insanity of one charged with a criminal offense are entitled to little or no regard, unless supported by good reasons founded on facts which warrant them. From such opinions and the facts stated to support them, it is the province of the jury to draw their conclusions as to the sanity or insanity of the defendant. Reed v. State, 75 Neb. 509 (106 N. W. 649).

Alibi.

Sufficiency of evidence of alibi in bastardy proceedings, see Bastards, § 91.

426. (1897.) It is not essential that the proof of an alibi should include the entire period during which the offense might possibly have been committed but will entitle the accused to an acquittal whenever the evidence is sufficient to create in the minds of the jurors a reasonable doubt of his presence at the commission of the offense with which he stands charged. Henry v. State, 51 Neb. 149 (70 N. W. 924; 66 Am. St. Rep. 450).

427. (1898.) Where the defense in a criminal action is an alibi, it is sufficient to call for a verdict of acquittal if the jury, from a consideration of all the evidence, have a reasonable doubt of the presence of the accused at the place and time of the alleged crime, whether such doubt be from lack of proof on the part of the state, or from the evidence adduced in behalf of the party charged. Peyton v. State, 54 Neb. 188 (74 N. W. 597).

428. (1904.) A defendant, to establish an alibi must not only show he was present at some other place about the time of the alleged crime, but also that he was at such other place such a length of time that it was impossible for him to have been at the place where the crime was committed, either before or after the time he was at such other place. Mays v. State, 72 Neb. 723 (101 N. W. 979).

XI. TIME OF TRIAL AND CONTINUANCE.

Denial of continuance as harmless error, see post, § 1109.

Disharge of accused for delay.

429. (1894.) The provision of section 391 of the Criminal Code, for the discharge of any person indicted who after having given bail shall not be brought to trial before the end of the third term of court held after the finding of such indictment, is held to exclude the term at which the indictment is found. Hammond v. State, 39 Neb. 252 (58 N. W. 92); (1895) Whitner v. State, 46 Neb. 144 (64 N. W. 704).

430. (1894.) A defendant in a criminal prosecution who has never been committed to jail, or otherwise detained in custody, is not entitled to be discharged, under the provisions of section 390 of the criminal code, on the ground that he has not been brought to trial before the end of the second term after the finding of the indictment or the filing of the information. Hammond v. State, 39 Neb. 252 (58 N. W. 92).

431. (1895.) A defendant in prison in default of bail is not entitled to be discharged under section 389 of the criminal code unless it is shown that neither an information was filed, nor an indictment found, against him during the term at which he was held to appear. State, ex rel. Conroy, v. Miller, 43 Neb. 860 (62 N. W. 238).

432. (1896.) An application for a discharge under section 391 of the criminal code should be overruled where it fails to show that three terms of court elapsed after the information against accused was filed, without his being brought to trial, and that the delay was not occasioned by want of time to try the case or upon his request. Korth v. State, 46 Neb. 631 (65 N. W. 792).

433. (1897.) An indictment was filed against defendant at the September, 1894, term of the court. There was a February, 1895, term, a May, 1895, term, and a September, 1895, term, at which the latter term he was put on trial and convicted. He was put on trial at the February, 1895, term, and the jury, disagreed and was discharged. Held, Construing section 396, criminal code, that the prisoner was not entitled to be discharged because not brought to trial either before the end of the second or the third term of court, in which his case was pending, held after the indictment against him was found. Davis v. State, 51 Neb. 301 (70 N. W. 984).

434. (1897.) One who has been admitted to bail after a preliminary examination, and who becomes a fugitive, is not, after his return or apprehension, entitled to be discharged because no information was filed against him at the term at which he was recognized to appear, and while he was a fugitive. Ex parte Trester, 53 Neb. 148 (73 N. W. 545).

435. (1900.) Where no information or indictment is filed against the defendant in a criminal proceeding, during the term at which he was held to answer, he is entitled to be discharged. Leisenberg v. State, 60 Neb. 628 (84 N. W. 6).

436. (1901.) Where no information or indictment is filed during the term at which the accused is held to answer, he is entitled to be discharged. Cerny v. State, 62 Neb. 626 (87 N. W. 336).

www.hbook.com.cn

437. (1901.) Although no information or indictment is filed during the term at which accused is held to answer, yet if at a subsequent term of the court an information is filed and defendant pleads not guilty, the court has power to try the issue raised; and, after verdict of conviction has been rendered, it is not error to deny a motion in arrest of judgment. Cerny v. State, 62 Neb. 626 (87 N. W. 336).

Right of accused to continuance in general.

438. (1902.) Every person accused of crime should be afforded reasonable opportunity to marshal his witnesses and prepare for trial, but mere procrastination—delay for delay's sake—should not be tolerated. Hubbard v. State, 65 Neb. 805 (91 N. W. 869).

Discretion of court.

439. (1876.) Applications for continuance are addressed to the sound discretion of the court, and its ruling thereon will not be disturbed, where there is no abuse of that discretion. Smith v. State, 4 Neb. 277.

440. (1889.) In a prosecution for a misdemeanor the granting or the refusal of an application for continuance is largely within the discretion of the trial court. To enable a court of review to find reversible error in the refusal of such application, it must be shown that there was an abuse of such discretion. Burrell v. State, 25 Neb. 581 (41 N. W. 399).

441. (1901.) The granting or refusing of a continuance rests in the sound discretion of the court, and a ruling in that regard will not be disturbed unless an abuse of discretion appears. Dinsmore v. State, 61 Neb. 418 (85 N. W. 445).

Grounds for continuance.

442. (1901.) In a criminal prosecution for a felony, after pleading to the general issue and after a jury has been impaneled and sworn, it is not error to overrule an objection by the defendant to being tried at that term of court on the ground and for the reason that he was, on his preliminary examination, ordered to enter into a recognizance for his appearance at a term subsequent thereto, or because the county attorney had filed an information against him before the term at which he was ordered in the preliminary examination to appear and answer the charge preferred against him. Reinoehl v. State, 62 Neb. 619 (87 N. W. 355).

442*a*. (1908.) The right of a defendant to continuance on account of the unforseen and unavoidable absence of his counsel depends largely upon the nature of the case, his diligence, and the inability to procure other counsel in time properly to prepare for the trial, and, unless the discretion of the trial court in refusing the continuance has been abused, a reviewing court will not interfere. Cate v. State, 80 Neb. 611 (114 N. W. 942).

——— Local prejudice.

443. (1896.) Statements in the affidavits of a prisoner and his counsel that there exists in the county where the case is to be tried a great deal of excitement, are not sufficient to justify the reversal of an order denying a continuance. Hoover v. State, 48 Neb. 184 (66 N. W. 1117).

——— Absence of witnesses.

444. (1887.) Where an information against defendant for forging and uttering a promissory note was filed on October 11, and he was placed on trial October 19, it was error to refuse a continuance when his motion filed prior to the trial was supported by an affidavit in which it was alleged that he could prove by four witnesses, naming them, all non-residents of the state and none of whom were present, that the notes were placed in his hands for the purpose of sale by one B., and that, as requested, he sold the notes simply as an accommodation, and returned all the money to the person for whom the sale was made; the residence of two of the witnesses out of the state was given, so that their depositions might be taken. Newman v. State, 22 Neb. 355 (35 N. W. 194).

445. (1890.) Continuance of a criminal case on account of absent witness, should be allowed when the motion is supported by affidavits showing materiality of testimony, probability of obtaining it by the next term, and reasonable diligence in seeking it. Miller v. State, 29 Neb. 437 (45 N. W. 451).

446. (1890.) In a prosecution for homicide, an affidavit for continuance for absence of a material witness, which alleges that defendant was taken out of the county the day after the killing and confined in a jail in another county until nine days before the trial; that he was without means, and the court assigned counsel to defend him; that letters had been addressed to such witness to places where he had formerly resided, but not answered, and that three days prior to the motion, it was learned that he was in Dakota, makes a sufficient showing of diligence. Miller v. State, 29 Neb. 437 (45 N. W. 451).

447. (1890.) In a prosecution for homicide an affidavit for continuance, for absence of a witness, alleging that such witness was an eye witness of the shooting and would testify that defendant did not do the shooting, and that it did not occur where the prosecution claimed it did, but at a point where it would have been impossible for defendant to have done it, shows that such witness is material. Miller v. State, 29 Neb. 437 (45 N. W. 451).

448. (1901.) In an application for a continuance, where no reasonable probability exists of procuring the proposed evidence which is that of unknown persons, or where it is shown that due diligence and seasonable effort have not been made to procure such evidence, the application for a continuance is properly overruled. Tatum v. State, 61 Neb. 229 (85 N. W. 40).

449. (1902.) The denial of a motion for a continuance in order to secure evidence is not reversible error where it appears that the testimony of the absent witness would be either false or immaterial. Hubbard v. State, 65 Neb. 805 (91 N. W. 869).

450. (1902.) The refusal of the district court to suspend for an indefinite time the trial of a criminal case to enable the defendant to procure the attendance of a witness is not, in the absence of a showing of diligence, an abuse of judicial discretion. Hubbard v. State, 65 Neb. 805 (91 N. W. 869).

——— Diligence.

451. (1902.) An accused person fleeing from justice after arraignment and before trial is not employing the kind of diligence contemplated by the law governing continuances. Hubbard v. State, 65 Neb. 805 (91 N. W. 869).

Admission to prevent continuance.

452. (1897.) Whether the prosecution in a criminal case may avoid a continuance sought by the defendant on a showing which entitles him to a postponement of the trial on the ground of an absent witness, by the state admitting merely that the witness, if present, would testify as represented in the application, is not involved in this case, and consequently not decided. Hans v. State, 50 Neb. 150 (69 N. W. 838).

453. (1897.) A motion by accused for a continuance on the ground that a witness is absent, may be overruled where the state admits that the witness, if present, would testify as stated in the affidavit in support of the motion. Fanton v. State, 50 Neb. 351 (69 N. W. 953; 36 L. R. A. 158).

454. (1897.) Denial of a continuance sought on account of the absence of a witness held not ground for reversal, where the party resisting the application admitted that the witness, if present, would testify as stated in the affidavit for the continuance, and the statements of the affidavit were read in evidence by the party making it. Catron v. State, 52 Neb. 389 (72 N. W. 354); (1901) Russell v. State, 62 Neb. 512 (87 N. W. 344).

455. (1907.) Where the state, in a criminal prosecution offers to admit testimony that an absent witness was alleged would testify to, in a motion for a continuance, it is not error to overrule the motion. Foster v. State, 79 Neb. 259 (112 N. W. 656).

Application for continuance.

456. (1893.) A motion for a continuance in a criminal case on the ground that the attorney for the accused had not been notified of the trial a sufficient length of time to properly prepare therefor, but which fails to show want of notice by the accused himself, is insufficient. May v. State, 38 Neb. 211 (56 N. W. 804).

——— Affidavits.

457. (1877.) An affidavit of the prisoner to the effect that he had been informed that a person absent from the state would swear to certain material facts is not sufficient to warrant a continuance. Williams v. State, 6 Neb. 334.

458. (1877.) On motion for a continuance it is not good practice to permit counter-affidavits as to what an absent witness would testify. Williams v. State, 6 Neb. 334; (1889) Gandy v. State, 27 Neb. 707 (43 N. W. 747, 44 N. W. 108); (1890) Miller v. State, 29 Neb. 437 (45 N. W. 451).

459. (1883.) Where an affidavit for a continuance of a case is based upon information derived from others, it should give their names and whereabouts, and also sufficient reason for not procuring their own affidavits to the facts communicated, which should be done if possible. Comstock v. State, 14 Neb. 205 (15 N. W. 355).

460. (1883.) The facts stated in an affidavit in support of a motion for a continuance for the purposes of the motion will be taken as true. And where sufficient facts are stated a continuance should be granted. Hair v. State, 14 Neb. 503 (16 N. W. 829); (1889) Gandy v. State, 27 Neb. 707 (43 N. W. 747, 44 N. W. 108).

461. (1883.) An affidavit for a continuance, on account of absent witnesses, which fails to show that either their personal attendance or testimony will probably be obtained, if time be granted, is insufficient. Polin v. State, 14 Neb. 540 (16 N. W. 898).

462. (1889.) An affidavit for continuance in a prosecution for an attempt to kill, that sets out that there are two certain witnesses outside of the state, that will testify to hereditary insanity affliction from which defendant is suffering is wholly insufficient. Burgo v. State, 26 Neb. 639 (42 N. W. 701).

463. (1892.) In a prosecution for the larceny of thirty-three horses and also for receiving the same, knowing them to have been stolen, an affidavit for a continuance was filed by the accused, which was overruled. Held, That the facts stated in the affidavit were sufficient to entitle the party to a continuance. Elliott v. State, 34 Neb. 48 (51 N. W. 315).

464. (1895.) Where a continuance is asked for the purpose of meeting evidence unexpectedly adduced by the other party, it must, among other things, be shown that the party seeking the continuance expects to procure evidence to meet the new features, and the nature of such evidence. Dixon v. State, 46 Neb. 298 (64 N. W. 961).

465. (1887.) For the purposes of a decision upon a motion for a continuance, the statement of the affidavit must be taken as true, and cannot even be contradicted by counter affidavits. Newman v. State, 22 Neb. 355 (35 N. W. 194).

466. (1892.) In a prosecution for the larceny of thirty-three horses and also for receiving the same, knowing them to have been stolen, an affidavit for a continuance was filed by the accused, which was overruled. Held, That the facts stated in the affidavit were sufficient to entitle the party to a continuance. Elliott v. State, 34 Neb. 48 (51 N. W. 315).

——— Presence of accused at hearing.

467. (1890.) There is no error in hearing motions to quash the information and for a continuance, and a demurrer to the information and a plea in abatement, in the absence of defendant from the courtroom. Miller v. State, 29 Neb. 437 (45 N. W. 451).

Operation and effect.

468. (1883.) When one is indicted for a felony at the October term of the district court and the cause continued on motion of the state, it being a general continuance operated to continue the case to the next general term, and not to a special term that preceeds the general term. Hair v. State, 14 Neb. 503 (16 N. W. 829).

Competency of spouse to testify against the other, see Witnesses, §§ 154-158.

A. Preliminary Proceedings

Separate trial of co-defendants.

469. (1895.) Defendants jointly indicted for a felony, in the discretion of the court, may be separately tried, on motion of either the state or a defendant. Objection to a severance comes too late after the formation of the jury. Metz v. State, 46 Neb. 547 (65 N. W. 190).

Separate trial of issue of insanity.

470. (1895.) Where insanity did not originate after the commission of the offense, there is no requirement that its existence should be determined by a jury impaneled to determine whether or not the accused is of sound mind. Walker v. State, 46 Neb. 25 (64 N. W. 357).

471. (1905.) Under section 6 of chapter 105, laws 1901, it is the duty of the warden, if a convict confined in the penitentiary under sentence of death appears to be insane, to give notice thereof to a judge of the district court for the county in which the penitentiary is situated, and if such notice is given a jury must be summoned "to inquire into such insanity." Barker v. State, 75 Neb. 289 (106 N. W. 450).

472. (1905.) Under the law prior to the act of 1901, the district court of the county of the conviction and sentence of death of a person charged with a capital offense had jurisdiction, independent of statute, to investigate the question of the sanity of such convict; but that jurisdiction has by the statute been transferred to the judge of the district court for the county in which the penitentiary is situated. Barker v. State, 75 Neb. 289 (106 N. W. 450).

473. (1905.) The jurisdiction of the judge of the district court for Lancaster county to inquire as to the sanity of a convict confined in the penitentiary under sentence of death does not depend upon the giving of the notice by the warden. If it is alleged in a proper application to the judge, under oath, that the convict is insane, and that the warden unjustifiably refuses to give the statutory notice, it is the duty of the judge to make such investigation as will satisfy him whether there are such appearances of insanity as will justify summoning a jury to try the question. Barker v. State, 75 Neb. 289 (106 N. W. 450).

474. (1905.) If upon investigation of the application, the judge finds that the convict appears to be insane, a jury should be impaneled to try the question of insanity. Barker v. State, 75 Neb. 289 (106 N. W. 450).

475. (1905.) If the judge, upon investigation of sanity of one sentenced to be hanged and confined in the penitentiary, is satisfied that the warden was justified in his refusal to give the notice of the prisoners insanity, and that there are no substantial appearances of insanity, the application will be dismissed. Barker v. State, 75 Neb. 289 (106 N. W. 450).

Service of copy of indictment or information.

476. (1892.) Prisoner's right to a copy of the information and to one day to prepare for trial cannot be denied, and applies as well to an amended as to an original information. Zink v. State, 34 Neb. 37 (51 N. W. 294).

477. (1898.) In a prosecution for a felony the right of accused to a copy of the amended information as provided for by section 436, criminal code, and one day to prepare for trial, may be waived. Barker v. State, 54 Neb. 53 (74 N. W. 427).

478. (1901.) The state is required to furnish the defendant with only one copy of the information. Bush v. State, 62 Neb. 128 (86 N. W. 1062).

Indorsement of witnesses on indictment or information.

479. (1888.) The names of witnesses upon which the state relies to prove the charge against one accused of crime should be indorsed on the information at as early a day as practicable after the discovery of such witnesses, and in all cases before the day set for the trial of the case. Gandy v. State, 24 Neb. 716 (40 N. W. 302).

480. (1889.) In a criminal prosecution the names of witnesses cannot, against objection, be added to the information without a showing that they were not known earlier and in time to give the accused notice, in season to anticipate their presence before trial. Gandy v. State, 27 Neb. 707 (43 N. W. 749, 44 N. W. 108).

481. (1890.) The names of additional witnesses may, in the discretion of the trial court, be indorsed on an information after the filing thereof and before the day of trial. Where the name of a witness is indorsed on the day of trial, but not called and examined, error cannot be based thereon. Miller v. State, 29 Neb. 437 (45 N. W. 451).

482. (1892.) In a prosecution for murder the county attorney, on the case being reached for trial, asked leave to indorse the names of additional witnesses on the information, accompanying such request with a showing that it was made at the earliest opportunity after the materiality of their testimony was learned by him. The court ordered said names to be indorsed on the information, but offered to continue the case for a week if requested by the defendant, who declined the continuance offered. Held, Not an abuse of discretion by the court. Johnson v. State, 34 Neb. 257 (51 N. W. 835).

483. (1892.) It is within the discretion of the district court to allow additional names to be indorsed on the information in a criminal prosecution after the case is reached for trial, on the application of the county attorney and a showing of diligence by him, provided a continuance is allowed for sufficient time to enable the defendant to prepare for trial. Johnson v. State, 34 Neb. 257 (51 N. W. 835).

484. (1896.) It is within the discretion of the trial court to permit the county attorney to indorse the names of additional witnesses on the information after the filing thereof and before trial. Rauschkolb v. State, 46 Neb. 658 (65 N. W. 776; (1896) Fager v. State, 49 Neb. 439 (68 N. W. 611); (1901) Trimble v. State, 61 Neb. 604 (85 N. W. 844).

485. (1896.) Permitting names of witnesses to be indorsed on the information more than twenty-four hours after their discovery, contrary to a rule of court, is not ground for reversing a judgment of conviction, where accused was not prejudiced. Barney v. State, 49 Neb. 515 (68 N. W. 636).

486. (1896.) The accused having made no motion for a postponement of the trial because of the indorsement of additional names on the information, no prejudice will be presumed. Barney v. State, 49 Neb. 515 (68 N. W. 636).

487. (1898.) The main purpose of requiring names of witnesses to be indorsed on an information is to inform accused of the identity of the state's witnesses. Carrall v. State, 53 Neb. 431 (73 N. W. 939).

488. (1899.) After the trial of a criminal action has commenced, it is error for the court to permit the name of a witness for the state to be indorsed on the information. Sweenie v. State, 59 Neb. 269 (80 N. W. 815).

——— Necessity.

489. (1886.) In the trial of a criminal prosecution wherein a defendant is arraigned upon an indictment found by a grand jury, the state is not precluded from the examination of witnesses whose names are not indorsed upon the indictment. Ballard v. State, 19 Neb. 609 (28 N. W. 271).

490. (1886.) It is by statute made the duty of the district attorney to indorse on an information the names of the witnesses known to him at the time of filing the same; and at such time before the trial of any case as the court may by rule or otherwise prescribe he shall indorse the names of such other witnesses as shall then be known to him. Stevens v. State, 19 Neb. 647 (28 N. W. 304).

491. (1886.) Upon the trial of a criminal case which is being prosecuted on an information, it is error on the part of the court to permit, over the objection of the accused, a witness to be sworn on the part of the state whose name had not been indorsed on the information before the trial. Parks v. State, 20 Neb. 515 (31 N. W. 5).

492. (1897.) A witness whose name was not indorsed on the information may be called on rebuttal and give testimony which is obviously and purely rebuttal, or on a subject first brought into the case in the evidence of the defense and which is in rebuttal of and made necessary by such evidence introduced by the defense, but may not give testimony which is not directly and plainly rebuttal or which tends to prove the commission of the crime and might properly have been introduced on the part of the state as of its evidence in chief. Kelly v. State, 51 Neb. 572 (71 N. W. 299).

493. (1899.) Testimony purely rebuttal in its nature may be given by a witness whose name is not indorsed upon the information. McVey v. State, 57 Neb. 471 (77 N. W. 1111); (1899) Kastner v. State, 58 Neb. 767 (79 N. W. 713); (1907) Clements v. State, 80 Neb. 313 (114 N. W. 271).

——— Sufficiency.

494. (1895.) The indorsement of the surname and the initials of the Christian or given name of a witness upon an information is a sufficient compliance with the requirements of the statute which requires the names of the state's witnesses to be indorsed upon the information prior to the trial. Bayse v. State, 45 Neb. 261 (63 N. W. 811).

495. (1895.) Where the surname and initials of the Christian name of a witness appear upon the information it is a sufficient compliance with the statute requiring names of the state's witnesses to be indorsed on the information. Perry v. State, 44 Neb. 414 (63 N. W. 26).

496. (1898.) Where a married woman is to be called as a witness in a criminal case her name may be indorsed on the information by writing thereon the abbreviation "Mrs." and her husband's name. Carrall v. State, 53 Neb. 431 (73 N. W. 939).

497. (1898.) The law does not recognize other than the one or first Christian name, but where a person as a matter of fact has a second or middle Christian name and is commonly known or identified by the use of such middle Christian designation, if his wife's purposed use as a witness in a criminal cause is evidenced by an indorsement of her husband's surname and the abbreviation "Mrs.," together with the middle Christian appellation of the husband, it is sufficient where it does not appear or there is no complaint that the accused person was misled thereby or lacked information of what person was to be produced as a witness. Carrall v. State, 53 Neb. 431 (73 N. W. 939).

498. (1898.) The names "Mrs. Fred Steinburg" and "Mrs. Fred Steenburg," the first indorsed on an information as the name of a witness, and the second appearing in testimony as her name, are idem sonans. Carrall v. State, 53 Neb. 431 (73 N. W. 939).

499. (1906.) The main purpose of the requirement that the names of the witnesses be indorsed on the information in a criminal action is to convey to the accused the information or knowledge of the identity of the witnesses to be produced on behalf of the state; and, although a witness is designated on the information by the wrong Christian name, if the accused is not misled thereby, and is aware of the identity of the witness, such mistake affords no ground for the exclusion of his evidence. Reed v. State, 75 Neb. 509 (106 N. W. 649).

Journal entries.

500. (1877.) Where an indictment for rape has been returned, and after several continuances the defendant enters a plea in abatement on the ground that the trial judge, who had since retired from the bench, failed to sign the journal entries, the succeeding judge has authority to order entries to be made to conform to the facts. Garrison v. State, 6 Neb. 274.

B. Course and Conduct of Trial in General.

Proceedure in general.

501. (1886.) A defendant on trial for a criminal offense has no vested right in the manner of procedure established by law at the time of the commission of the alleged crime. It is within the power of the legislature to change the procedure or manner of enforcing a punishment after the commission of the offense, and such a law would not be void as an ex post facto law. Marion v. State, 20 Neb. 233 (29 N. W. 911; 57 Am. Rep. 825).

502. (1899.) In a criminal case but one issue can properly be before the court at one time. George v. State, 59 Neb. 163 (80 N. W. 486).

Appointment of special judge.

503. (1903.) When, in a criminal prosecution before a police judge in a city of the first class, governed by chapter 18 of the laws of 1901, it is shown that the judge is disqualified to act by reason of interest, bias or prejudice, it is not erroneous for the mayor to appoint a justice of the peace of the city to act in place of the judge, as provided by section 117 of that chapter. Seay v. Shrader, 69 Neb. 245 (95 N. W. 690).

Presence of judge.

504. (1905.) It is error for the judge to absent himself from the court room, out of the sight and hearing of the parties, during the argument of a case, unless by consent and agreement of the parties interested, which may work a reversal of the judgment rendered in the action. Powers v. State, 75 Neb. 226 (106 N. W. 332).

Presence of accused.

Presence at hearing of motion for new trial, see post, § 892.

505. (1884.) The voluntary withdrawal of a prisoner from the court room during the progress of his trial, and during the examination of a witness, will not entitle him to a new trial on account of his absence, when it is shown that upon his absence being discovered all further proceedings were suspended until his return, which was but a few minutes, and upon his return the witness was re-examined covering the questions asked during the absence of the prisoner. Hair v. State, 16 Neb. 601 (21 N. W. 464).

Digitized by Google

506. (1902.) Where a defendant, charged with a misdemeanor, is at liberty, on bail or otherwise, while his case is being tried, and voluntarily absents himself from the court room at the time the jury returns its verdict, his counsel being present, and no objection being made to such absence defendant will be held to have waived his right to be present at such time, and the reception of such verdict by the court in the absence of the defendant under such circumstances, is without error. Peterson v. State, 64 Neb. 875 (90 N. W. 964).

Presence of codefendant.

507. (1902.) Where two parties jointly indicted are tried separately, it is not error for the court to require the presence of one of them in the court room during the trial of the other. Cunningham v. State, 56 Neb. 691 (77 N. W. 60).

508. (1905.) Where two persons charged jointly with a criminal offense demand and are accorded separate trials, an order of the court refusing the request of the one on trial for the presence of his codefendant in the court room will not be reviewed by the appellate court, in the absence of any showing of prejudice resulting to the rights of the accused by the refusal of such request. Krens v. State, 75 Neb. 294 (106 N. W. 27).

Presence of third persons.

509. (1904.) In order to predicate error on the fact that the father of a state's witness was permitted, while she was testifying, to sit near her in the court room, it must affirmatively appear that his presence caused her, in giving her evidence, to deviate from the truth, or color her statements to the prejudice of the accused. Gould v. State, 71 Neb. 651 (99 N. W. 541).

Right to inspect brief of evidence of prosecution.

510. (1901.) In the trial of a criminal prosecution the county attorney can not be compelled to produce his private memoranda or brief of evidence for the inspection of the defense. Dinsmore v. State, 61 Neb. 418 (85 N. W. 445).

Counsel for prosecution.

511. (1896.) The provision of section 21, chapter 7, Compiled Statutes, for the appointment of a county attorney to act during the absence, sickness, or disability of the public prosecutor and his deputies, is applicable to informations under section 579, criminal code. Korth v. State, 46 Neb. 631 (65 N. W. 792).

512. (1896.) The provision of section 21, chapter 7, Compiled Statutes, for the appointment of a county attorney to act during the absence, sickness, or disability of the public prosecutor and his deputies, does not conflict with section 10, article I, of the constitution relating to criminal prosecutions. Korth v. State, 46 Neb. 631 (65 N. W. 792).

——Private counsel.

513. (1883.) The county attorney in a criminal prosecution may have the assistance of counsel employed on private account. Polin v. State, 14 Neb. 540; (1885) Bradshaw v. State, 17 Neb. 147 (22 N. W. 361); (1889) Gandy v. State, 27 Neb. 707 (43 N. W. 749; 44 N. W. 108).

514. (1901.) It is proper for the county attorney, under the direction of the district court, to procure an attorney to assist him him in the trial of a person charged with a felony, and such assistant is not required to qualify and give a bond as deputy county attorney. Bush v. State, 62 Neb. 128 (86 N. W. 1062).

515. (1904.) An objection to the appearance of private counsel to assist the county attorney in conducting a criminal prosecution, to be available, should be made at a suitable time and in the proper manner, and must be supported by at least some showing that the county attorney did not request or require any assistance, and the court had not appointed such counsel for that purpose. Blair v. State, 72 Neb. 501 (101 N. W. 17).

Appointment of counsel for defendant.

Fees of attorney appointed to defend prisoner, see Attorney and Client.

516. (1897.) There is no statutory provision for the assignment of counsel for pauper or indigent prisoners in prosecutions for misdemeanors. (Criminal code, sec. 437.) Durfee v. State, 53 Neb. 214 (73 N. W. 676).

Appointment of stenographer.

517. (1877.) The refusal of the court to appoint a shorthand reporter to take down the testimony, is not error. This is a matter resting entirely in the discretion of the court. Preuit v. People, 5 Neb. 377.

Adjournments pending trial.

518. (1883.) The formal adjournment of court to, and opening of it on Thanksgiving Day, no step in the case being taken on that day, is not cause for a new trial. Polin v. State, 14 Neb. 540 (16 N. W. 898).

www.lbtool.com.cn

519. (1896.) It is error for the court to refuse to postpone trial for a reasonable time to enable defendant to meet testimony of a witness whose name was indorsed on the information after it was filed, where the latter gave material testimony for the state during the examination in chief. Rauschkolb v. State, 46 Neb. 658 (65 N. W. 776).

View by jury.

520. (1876.) Whenever the court makes an order that the jury view the place in which any material fact in relation to the trial may have occurred, such view should be made in the presence of the prisoner, unless he waive that privilege. Carroll v. State, 5 Neb. 31.

521. (1891.) The right of the accused to accompany the jury when it goes to view the place where the crime was committed may be waived. Neal v. State, 32 Neb. 120 (49 N. W. 174).

Remarks and conduct of judge.

522. (1886.) Where a defendant, accused of having committed a felony, files an affidavit for a continuance on the ground that she could not procure certain necessary witnesses in her defense, it is error for the trial judge, in the presence of some of the jurors, to declare the affidavit to be false, and charge to defendant with committing perjury therein, and is ground for a new trial. Bowman v. State, 19 Neb. 523 (28 N. W. 1; 56 Am. Rep. 750).

523. (1891.) A statement of the court in ruling in the admissibility of evidence of an alleged confession, "In view of the fact that the jury will ultimately pass upon this question it is perhaps improper for the court to review the evidence, and the court will only announce the conclusion arrived at, and that is that it has not been shown that the statements made to the witness, if any, witness King was produced either by promise or favor or through threats; or in other words, that it was involuntary, but on the contrary that the evidence shows that the statements made to King were voluntary, and the objection to the witness King stating what the defendant had stated to him will be overruled," held proper. Shepherd v. State, 31 Neb. 389 (47 N. W. 1118).

524. (1904.) No error is found in the request of the court to counsel to desist from the further cross-examination of a witness along lines held by the court to be improper, nor in the manner of making the request. Woodruff v. State, 72 Neb. 815 (101 N. W. 1114).

525. (1906.) Remarks by the court in the presence of the jury, reflecting upon the evidence of an expert witness, will not be held prejudicial, if there is no evidence before the jury to render the expert evidence applicable to the issue being tried. Haddix v. State, 76 Neb. 369 (107 N. W. 781).

——— Examination of witnesses.

526. (1887.) While it is the right of a trial judge to interrogate witnesses when essential to the administration of justice, yet the practice of so doing, except when absolutely necessary, should be discouraged. The common law rule conferring arbitrary power upon trial judges has been so far modified by the code as to greatly limit this power, and, in case of its abuse, a reviewing court would not hesitate to give a new trial to the injured party. Fager v. State, 22 Neb. 332 (35 N. W. 195); (1902) Leo v. State, 63 Neb. 723 (89 N. W. 303).

527. (1898.) The right of the trial judge to interrogate witnesses should be very sparingly exercised. Bartley v. State, 55 Neb. 294 (75 N. W. 832).

528, 529. (1901.) To prevent a miscarriage of justice the trial judge may, sparingly and discreetly, cross-examine a witness for the accused. Nightingale v. State, 62 Neb. 371 (87 N. W. 158).

530. (1902.) The record disclosed an abuse of discretion by the trial judges in the examination of witnesses which was prejudicial to the defendant. Leo v. State, 63 Neb. 723 (89 N. W. 303).

Conduct of by-standers.

531. (1895.) When the county attorney finished his closing address to the jury some of the by-standers, without the knowledge or connivance of any one connected with the prosecution, applauded, which was quickly suppressed by the presiding judge, and who administered a rebuke to the persons making the applause. Held, That the record failed to disclose that the defendant was prejudiced by the demonstration. Debney v. State, 45 Neb. 856 (64 N. W. 446; 34 L. R. A. 851).

Procedure on finding defects in indictment.

532. (1894.) When an information proves upon trial to be defective, the trial judge should inquire as to whether probable cause exists for holding the defendant, and in the exercise of a sound legal discretion may then either discharge him from custody or recognize him to answer at the next term of court. State v. Kendall, 38 Neb. 817 (57 N. W. 525).

C. Reception of Evidence.

Examination and cross-examination of witnesses, see Witnesses.

In general.

533. (1879.) The mere asking of a question calling for incompetent evidence, but not answered is not ground of error. St. Louis v. State, 8 Neb. 405.

Separation and exclusion of witnesses.

534. (1884.) In the trial of criminal cases, it is a matter of discretion on the part of the court whether it will or not order that the witness be examined out of the hearing of each other. Binfield v. State, 15 Neb. 484 (19 N. W. 607).

535. (1894.) The trial court may, in its discretion, refuse to exclude the witnesses for the state from the court room during the trial, and such an order, in the absence of an evident abuse of discretion, is not the subject of review on appeal. Murphey v. State, 43 Neb. 34 (61 N. W. 491).

536. (1896.) There is no presumption that the district judge, without sufficient justification, required witnesses, though relations of the prisoner, to leave the immediate vicinity of the accused during the progress of the trial; neither does the mere fact that this was done in an unusual manner justify the assumption that thereby prejudice resulted. Hoover v. State, 48 Neb. 184 (66 N. W. 1117).

Presence of jury during argument as to admission.

537. (1891.) The preliminary examination before the court to ascertain whether or not a confession of a prisoner offered in evidence is voluntary, is properly conducted in the hearing of the jury. Shepherd v. State, 31 Neb. 389 (47 N. W. 1118).

Necessity of calling witnesses.

538. (1901.) A party cannot be prejudiced in a legal sense by the failure of his adversary to produce evidence against him. Jerome v. State, 61 Neb. 459 (85 N. W. 394).

539. (1901.) The refusal of the state to call certain witnesses, on a second trial, whose testimony on a former trial had been impeached, there being many other trustworthy witnesses by which the same facts could be proven, held not a suppression of evidence nor prejudicial to the rights of the defendant. Argabright v. State, 62 Neb. 402 (87 N. W. 146).

Offer of proof.

540. (1883.) Alleged error in the exclusion of evidence is unavailable in the absence of an offer of proof. Denman v. State, 15 Neb. 138 (17 N. W. 347); (1886) Mathews v. State, 19 Neb. 330 (27 N. W. 234); (1894) Berneker v. State, 40 Neb. 810 (59 N. W. 372); (1895) Ford v. State, 46 Neb. 390 (64 N. W. 1082); (1901) Savary v. State, 62 Neb. 166 (87 N. W. 34).

541. (1901.) An offer to prove should fairly apprise the court of the nature of evidence offered, and unless it does, its rejection is not error. State v. Moore, 1 Unof. 213 (95 N. W. 334).

Exclusion of improper evidence.

542. (1897.) The trial court may, on its own motion, refuse to permit a witness to answer a question calling for incompetent, immaterial, or irrelevant evidence. Davis v. State, 51 Neb. 301 (70 N. W. 984).

Number of witnesses.

543. (1897.) The district court may place a reasonable limit upon the time for the production of evidence. Morgan v. State, 51 Neb. 672 (71 N. W. 788).

544. (1897.) An exercise of discretion in placing a reasonable limit upon the time for the production of evidence is not subject to review except in case of an abuse of power on part of the trial court. Morgan v. State, 51 Neb. 672 (71 N. W. 788).

545. (1902.) It is permissible for trial courts, in the exercise of a sound discretion, to limit the number of witnesses that may be called to prove facts collateral to the main issue. Beister v. State, 65 Neb. 276 (91 N. W. 416).

545*a*. (1907.) Where a number of witnesses have testified to a fact which is not in dispute, the trial court may, in the exercise of a reasonable discretion, limit the number of witnesses testifying in regard to same. Cate v. State, 80 Neb. 611 (114 N. W. 942).

Order of proof.

546. (1878.) The order in which the evidence for the prosecution shall be introduced is within the discretion of the judge presiding at the trial. Clough v. State, 7 Neb. 320; (1897) Davis v. State, 51 Neb. 301 (70 N. W. 984); (1897) Ream v. State, 52

Neb. 727 (73 N. W. 227); (1897) Whitney v. State, 53 Neb. 287 (73 N. W. 696); (1900) Baer v. State, 59 Neb. 655 (81 N. W. 856).

547. (1895.) The order in which a party shall introduce his proof is, to a great extent, discretionary with the trial judge, and the action of the court in that regard will not be cause for reversal when no abuse of discretion is shown. Basye v. State, 45 Neb. 261 (63 N. W. 811).

548. (1898.) The order of introducing testimony in a criminal case rests largely in the discretion of the trial court, and an abuse of discretion in that regard is sufficient ground for reversal. Argabright v. State, 56 Neb. 363 (76 N. W. 876).

Rebuttal evidence.

549. (1894.) As a rule, the party holding the affirmative will not be permitted to prove again in rebuttal facts shown in making out his case in chief; but it is within the discretion of the court to permit the introduction, in closing, of evidence not strictly rebutting. Murphey v. State, 43 Neb. 34 (61 N. W. 491).

550. (1894.) In the trial of a criminal case it is competent for the state in rebuttal to show that a witness who testified for the defendant was intoxicated at the time of the happening of the events about which such witness has testified. Hill v. State, 42 Neb. 503, reaffirmed. Willis v. State, 43 Neb. 102 (61 N. W. 254).

551. (1896.) Evidence contradictory of the statements of a prosecuting witness may be met by statements in rebuttal though the names of the witnesses giving the rebutting testimony are not indorsed on the information. Fager v. State, 49 Neb. 439 (68 N. W. 611).

552. (1899.) The state may introduce rebutting evidence to meet any pertinent issue raised by the accused in making out his case. Kastner v. State, 58 Neb. 767 (79 N. W. 713).

553. (1901.) On the trial of a criminal case the state is under no legal obligation to produce evidence in rebuttal. Jerome v. State, 61 Neb. 459 (85 N. W. 394).

Reopening case for further evidence.

554. (1878.) It is not error to permit the prosecutor to reopen his case, and introduce further evidence in chief, even after the examination of witnesses for the defense has commenced. Clough v. State, 7 Neb. 320.

555. (1897.) An order in a criminal case permitting the state to withdraw its rest, for the purpose of introducing further testimony, will not be disturbed where an abuse of discretion on the part of the trial court has not been shown. Hans v. State, 50 Neb. 150 (69 N. W. 838).

556. (1904.) It is within the sound discretion of the trial court to permit a party, in furtherance of justice, to reopen his case and introduce other and further evidence at any time before the close of the trial; and where it is made to appear that there has been no abuse of discretion, and the substantial rights of the opposite party have been in no manner prejudiced by such a course, error cannot be predicated thereon. Blair v. State, 72 Neb. 501 (101 N. W. 17).

Repetition of testimony.

557. (1906.) If it appears to the court that a juror, for any cause, has failed to hear the evidence given by a witness, the witness should be required to repeat his evidence or such part thereof as the juror has failed to hear. But, unless it clearly appears that the evidence or some part of it has not been heard by all the jurors, the court is not required, on its own motion, to cause the evidence to be repeated. Haddix v. State, 76 Neb. 369 (107 N. W. 781).

D. Objections to Evidence and Motions to Strike Out.

Time for objection.

558. (1872.) The rule, that in a capital case the accused does not waive a right by not insisting upon it, entitled him to have proof which is prejudicial to his case, and is not legally admissible, withdrawn from the jury, although he does not object to it when offered. Rakes v. People, 2 Neb. 157.

559. (1878.) Objection to evidence on the ground that the witness had refreshed his memory by reference to a memorandum, must be made when the testimony is first offered, and a motion to strike it out after the witness has completed his testimony is too late. Clough v. State, 7 Neb. 320.

560. (1899.) A party cannot reserve his objection to a question calling for incompetent testimony until the answer of the witness has been received. Dunn v. State, 58 Neb. 807 (79 N. W. 719).

Sufficiency of objection.

561. (1878.) An objection to the admission of testimony must state the grounds on which it is claimed to be inadmissible. Clough v. State, 7 Neb. 320.

Argument as to admissibility of evidence.

562. (1881.) The refusal of a court to hear argument of counsel as to the admissibility of evidence is not, per se, error. Olive v. State, 11 Neb. 1 (7 N. W. 444).

www.libtool.com.cn

Motion to strike out.

563. (1894.) Where the state called a witness to prove a confession made by accused, if the defendant's counsel neglect to cross-examine the witness before he answers as to the circumstances under which the confession was made and the answer is responsive to the inquiry, error cannot be predicated on the refusal of the trial court to strike out the answer of the witness. Willis v. State, 43 Neb. 102 (61 N. W. 254).

563*a*. (1907.) The fact that a witness testifies to matters on his cross-examination which are somewhat inconsistent with his direct evidence does not warrant the court in rejecting his testimony altogether, for it is the province of the jury to determine the matter of the credibility of the witnesses, and the weight which should be given to their evidence. Steele v. State, 80 Neb. 9 (113 N. W. 798).

563*b*. (1907.) It is not error to refuse an instruction removing certain evidence from the consideration of the jury at the close of the trial, where the evidence was received without objection at the time of its admission, and no motion then made to strike it out. Younger v. State, 80 Neb. 201 (114 N. W. 170).

E. Arguments and Conduct of Counsel.

Ground for new trial, see post, § 867.

Harmless error, see post, §§ 1140, 1141.

In general.

564. (1888.) The constitutional right of impartial trial should be carefully protected, and conduct of attorneys and all others which prevents such trial, should not be permitted. Carr v. State, 23 Neb. 749 (37 N. W. 630).

565. (1895.) A prosecuting attorney, with proper sense of his duty, stands, of course, not entirely in the attitude of counsel in a civil action. It is his duty to enforce the criminal law. It is not his duty to procure a wrong determination of questions of criminal law or to urge a wrongful conviction. Dixon v. State, 46 Neb. 298 (64 N. W. 961).

566. (1905.) Prosecuting attorney is a semi-judicial officer. The state for whom he prosecutes does not desire the conviction of an innocent person, and it is as much his duty to see to it that such conviction shall not take place as it is his duty to use his utmost endeavors to fairly convict the guilty. Nicholizack v. State, 75 Neb. 27 (105 N. W. 895).

567. (1907.) A person accused of crime can be convicted only by legitimate evidence establishing his guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. The trial court should not allow the prosecuting attorney to use any other means to secure a conviction. Clark v. State, 79 Neb. 482 (113 N. W. 804).

Opening statement.

568. (1901.) In a prosecution for murder it is competent for the county attorney before the introduction of testimony to outline to the jury the evidence which the state expects to produce to sustain a conviction. Russell v. State, 62 Neb. 512 (87 N. W. 344).

Stifling evidence.

569. (1888.) A prosecuting attorney endeavoring to dissuade witnesses from testifying, is guilty of misconduct. Gandy v. State, 24 Neb. 716 (40 N. W. 302).

Presentation of evidence.

570. (1902.) Where a police officer was a witness in behalf of the prosecution, the assistant prosecutor, after an objection to a question propounded, stated: "I want to show that he [the witness] has known him [the accused] a long time, and had him under observation for other jobs." Held, Prejudicial. Leo v. State, 63 Neb. 723 (89 N. W. 303).

Right of argument.

571. (1875.) If an attorney for a prisoner voluntarily waives his right to argue the case to the jury, he cannot, after they have retired to consider their verdict, insist as a matter of right to have the jury recalled for the purpose of hearing such argument. Palmer v. People, 4 Neb. 68.

Limiting time of argument.

572. (1883.) When the court after limiting the argument of counsel, in a criminal case, to two and a half hours extends it one half hour, it is not error, when it does not appear that more time was needed, or no objection made to the order. Hart v. State, 14 Neb. 572 (16 N. W. 905).

573. (1895.) It is within the discretion of the trial court to limit the time for arguments to the jury, and an order so limiting time ppresents no question for review, unless it is made to appear that the arguments were thereby unduly restricted and that the time allotted to the complaining party was consumed. Dixon v. State, 46 Neb. 298 (64 N. W. 961).

www.libtool.com.cn

Argument.

574. (1885.) It is not error on the part of the court to allow counsel for the state, in summing up to the jury, to comment upon the presumption of guilt arising from the possession, by the accused, of recently stolen goods, without explanation of such possession, even where counsel fail to state the law with technical accuracy. McLain v. State, 18 Neb. 154 (24 N. W. 720).

575. (1895.) Alleged misconduct of the attorney for the state by use of improper language during his argument to the jury, held, when viewed in connection with the evidence and all facts and circumstances of the case, not prejudicial to the rights of the defendant. McMahon v. State, 46 Neb. 166 (64 N. W. 694).

576. (1901.) Misconduct of counsel for the state in the argument of the case, in order to work prejudicial error, must have been in disregard of the rules of legitimate argument of the evidence, and sufficient to unduly influence the jury and prejudice the rights of the defendant. Argabright v. State, 62 Neb. 402 (87 N. W. 146).

577. (1992.) Argument of prosecutor in a murder case held not misconduct of counsel sufficient to warrant a reversal. Rhea v. State, 63 Neb. 461 (88 N. W. 789).

578. (1902.) It is highly improper for the prosecuting attorney in a criminal case to declare to the jury his personal belief in defendant's guilt, unless such belief is given as a deduction from the evidence. Reed v. State, 66 Neb. 184 (92 N. W. 321).

579. (1902.) There is no rule of law that limits counsel in debate to mere articulation. He may use any appropriate vehicle of thought to carry his conceptions of truth to the jury. Russell v. State, 66 Neb. 497 (92 N. W. 751).

580. (1905.) Misconduct of the county attorney in the argument of a case will work a reversal, where it is reasonably apparent that such misconduct worked prejudice to the defendant. Power v. State, 75 Neb. 226 (106 N. W. 332).

——— Private counsel.

581. (1899.) Whether the court might properly permit private counsel in a criminal case to make an argument to the jury on behalf of the state when such counsel did not appear in his professional character until the evidence was closed, quære, Knights v. State, 58 Neb. 225 (78 N. W. 508; 76 Am. St. Rep. 78).

——— Appeal for conviction.

582. (1902.) While considerable allowance is made for professional enthusiasm in the argument of a criminal case, it is never permissible to ground an appeal for conviction upon facts not given in evidence at the trial. Reed v. State, 66 Neb. 184 (92 N. W. 321).

583. (1903.) An appeal for conviction based altogether upon the evidence, however fervent it may be, is not an abuse of the privilege of advocacy. Parker v. State, 67 Neb. 555 (93 N. W. 1037).

——— Comments on failure of accused to testify.

584. (1903.) The prohibition contained in section 473 of the criminal code against referring to, or commenting upon, the failure of an accused person to testify, was intended as a restraint upon the prosecuting attorney and, to some extent, upon the court as well. Lamb v. State, 69 Neb. 212 (95 N. W. 1050).

——— Comments on evidence or witnesses.

585. (1883.) It is not error for counsel in arguing, in the presence of the jury, the competency of a witness, based on testimony given of her admissions, to make a fair reference thereto, to say it is "false," and that the witness will deny it. Polin v. State, 14 Neb. 540 (16 N. W. 898).

586. (1886.) If a person accused of crime testifies in his own behalf he is to be treated as any other witness, and if he fails to deny a material fact which has been testified against him, the district attorney may comment upon such omission in his argument to the jury. Heidt v. State, 20 Neb. 492 (30 N. W. 626; 58 Am. Rep. 835).

587. (1894.) On the trial of a criminal cause the county attorney made a portion of his closing address to the jury while the trial judge was absent from the court room, and in said address said prosecutor, over the objection of the accused, misquoted the testimony in a material matter, to which counsel for the prisoner at the time objected, but, owing to the said absence of the judge, no ruling was had thereon. Held, Such error as demanded a reversal. Palin v. State, 38 Neb. 862 (57 N. W. 743).

Digitized by Google

588. (1901.) Strictures by counsel of a witness for the defense held to be of a character warranted by the evidence, and that such argument was not misconduct upon which prejudicial error could be predicated. Tatum v. State, 61 Neb. 229 (85 N. W. 40).

589. (1905.) Where the woman, with whom a defendant is accused of having committed adultery, is called as a witness in the prosecution therefor and refuses to testify as to the relations between herself and the accused, comments by the prosecutor on such refusal to testify, and charging it as an admission of guilt, is such misconduct as amounts to prejudicial error. Powers v. State, 75 Neb. 226 (106 N. W. 332).

——— Comment on instructions.

590. (1889.) It is not error for attorney to read instructions and comment on them to the jury while making his closing argument. Burrell v. State, 25 Neb. 581 (41 N. W. 399).

——— Comments on character or conduct of accused.

591. (1884.) Where the testimony showed that the plaintiff was a herder on the plains, carried two revolvers and a knife, and made a display of them, and his companion carried four revolvers, held, that it was not error for the district attorney to speak of him to the jury as "Billy the Kid or Jesse James sort of a cowboy," as the testimony warranted the language. Simmerman v. State, 16 Neb. 615 (21 N. W. 387).

592. (1901.) Counsel for the state in argument to the jury may criticise the conduct of the defendant as disclosed by the evidence, though such defendant was not a witness in his own behalf. Dinsmore v. State, 61 Neb. 418 (85 N. W. 445).

Correction of objectionable matter.

593. (1896.) Where the only objection by accused to the misconduct of the county attorney was that he made statements unwarranted by the evidence, an instruction directing the jury to disregard such statements left no ground for complaint. Hoover v. State, 48 Neb. 184 (66 N. W. 1117).

F. Province of Court and Jury in General.

Questions of law or fact.

594. (1883.) In criminal trials jurors are not judges of the law. While jurors have the power to disregard the law as given by the judge, they have neither a legal nor moral right to do so. Parrish v. State, 14 Neb. 60 (15 N. W. 357).

595. (1902.) In a trial for a felony the presiding judge is without authority to determine the issue or any of the questions of fact involved in the issue. That power belongs exclusively to the jury, regardless of the state of the evidence. They must be fully satisfied of the existence of every fact constituting an element of the crime charged, and it can not be assumed that they are so satisfied because they ought to be. Goldsberry v. State, 66 Neb. 312 (92 N. W. 906).

595*a*. (1907.) The question as to whether the acts charged, if committed, were maliciously done was one of fact for the jury to decide from all the evidence upon that part of the case. Carson v. State, 80 Neb. 619 (114 N. W. 938).

——— Intent.

596. (1894.) The test as to the intent is one of logic rather than one of law; and while the jury are at liberty, if the circumstances warrant, to infer the intention from the act, they are under no legal obligation to do so. Krchnavy v. State, 43 Neb. 337 (61 N. W. 628).

597. (1898.) If the defendant solemnly admit facts establishing his guilt, he is not entitled to have the jury pass on the issue of his actual intent to violate the law. Ignorantia legis neminem excusat. Pisar v. State, 56 Neb. 455 (76 N. W. 869).

——— Uncontroverted evidence.

598. (1886.) Where the defendant in a criminal case has pleaded not guilty, the jury, in order to convict him of the offense charged, must find from the evidence that he is guilty, and the court has no authority to say to them that certain allegations are uncontradicted, and therefore may be by the jury considered as proved. Heldt v. State, 20 Neb. 492 (30 N. W. 626; 58 Am. Rep. 835).

——— Effect of admitted facts.

599. (1898.) In a criminal case, if the defendant on the trial stipulate that certain facts exist, the court may properly assume those facts as established and instruct the jury as to their legal effect. Pisar v. State, 56 Neb. 455 (76 N. W. 869).

——— Weight and sufficiency of evidence.

600. (1877.) Where evidence of good character is before the jury it is their duty to give it such weight as they think it is entitled to. It is the province of the jury to weigh the evidence and determine the facts, and they should be left as free and untrammelled to give such weight to the evidence of good character as they are in relation to other facts. Garrison v. State, 6 Neb. 274.

www.libtool.com.cn

601. (1891.) After a confession is given in evidence it is for the jury to determine from all the facts and circumstances proven on the trial, in connection with the confession, whether it was voluntary and what credit should be given it. Shepherd v. State, 31 Neb. 389 (47 N. W. 1118).

602. (1894.) The jury must determine the weight of evidence adduced, and its estimate thereof will not be interfered with, unless it is clearly wrong. Whitman v. State, 42 Neb. 841 (60 N. W. 1025).

603. (1895.) The credibility of witnesses and the weight to be given their testimony are questions for the jury. Carleton v. State, 43 Neb. 373 (61 N. W. 699).

604. (1896.) The effect of the evidence and the inferences deducible therefrom are for the jury. Williams v. State, 46 Neb. 704 (65 N. W. 783).

605. (1897.) The jurors are, under our practice, judges of the probative force of the evidence. Henry v. State, 51 Neb. 149 (70 N. W. 924; 66 Am. St. Rep. 450).

Direction of verdict.

606. (1887.) Where testimony is such as would warrant jury in finding guilt, it is error for court to direct verdict of acquittal. State v. Sneff, 22 Neb. 481 (35 N. W. 219).

607. (1896.) It is not error to refuse to direct a verdict for a defendant in a criminal prosecution, at the close of the testimony for the state, where the evidence before the jury would warrant a conviction. Hornberger v. State, 47 Neb. 40 (66 N. W. 23).

608. (1900.) When an information in a criminal cause fails to state a crime, it is not proper to direct a verdict of not guilty, but the jury should be discharged. State v. Dennison, 60 Neb. 157 (82 N. W. 383).

Instructions invading province of jury.

609. (1896.) It is error to give an instruction infringing on the province of the jury. Haskins v. State, 46 Neb. 888 (65 N. W. 894).

——— Assumption as to facts.

610. It is not, in a criminal prosecution, error for the trial court to assume the existence of facts asserted by the accused on the trial, or treated by him as proved. (1894) Hill v. State, 42 Neb. 503 (60 N. W. 916; (1897) Morgan v. State, 51 Neb. 672 (71 N. W. 788).

611. (1895.) It is error to give an instruction which assumes a controverted material fact upon which there is a conflict of testimony. Metz v. State, 46 Neb. 547 (64 N. W. 190).

612. (1900.) It is not error to assume in an instruction the existence of a collateral fact established by uncontroverted evidence, which tends to prove one of the constituent elements of a crime. Welsh v. State, 60 Neb. 101 (82 N. W. 368).

G. Necessity, Requisites and Sufficiency of Instructions.

Harmless error, see post, §§ 1129-1139.

Issues and theories of case.

613. (1895.) It is the duty of the court to present the issues to the jury whether requested or not, and a charge which, by the omission of certain elements, has the effect of withdrawing from the jury an essential issue of the case is erroneous. Dolan v. State, 44 Neb. 643 (62 N. W. 1090).

614. (1896.) In criminal cases it is the duty of the court to present the issues to the jury whether requested or not, and a charge which, by the omission of certain elements, has the effect of withdrawing from the jury an essential issue is erroneous, but is not cause for reversal unless prejudicial to accused. Pjarrou v. State, 47 Neb. 294 (66 N. W. 422).

615. (1899.) There is not an assumption of any fact in an instruction plainly professing to be a mere statement of the material averments of the information. Knights v. State, 58 Neb. 225 (78 N. W. 508; 76 Am. St. Rep. 78).

616. (1903.) An instruction which informs the jury that the material facts charged in the information must be established by the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt, is unobjectionable, if supplemented by other instructions clearly indicating what facts are material. Lamb v. State, 69 Neb. 212 (95 N. W. 1050).

Law of the case in general.

617. (1877.) The charge of the court to the jury should be a clear and explicit statement of the law applicable to the facts in the case, and should cover all the questions involved in the issue. Milton v. State, 6 Neb. 136.

618. (1883.) It is not essential to the ends of justice that the judge, in charging a jury, should rehearse the sayings of law writers as to the policy of the law in the punishment of criminals. Parrish v. State, 14 Neb. 60 (15 N. W. 357).

www.tiptool.com.cn

619. (1886.) The charge of the court to a trial jury should be a clear and explicit statement of the law applicable to the facts in the case. Ballard v. State, 19 Neb. 609 (28 N. W. 271).

620. (1886.) Although the law in force at the time of the commission of the alleged offense provided that juries should be the judges of the law, but which law was repealed before the trial, it was competent for the legislature to make such change, and no error for the trial court to refuse to instruct the jury in the language of the prior law. Marion v. State, 20 Neb. 233 (29 N. W. 911; 57 Am. Rep. 825).

621. (1901.) Where, in the trial of a person charged as an accessory before the fact, the evidence tends to prove the commission of the crime in two or more counties, the court should, in plain terms, charge the jury that there should be an acquittal, if no accessorial act was committed in the county in which the information was filed. Burlingim v. State, 61 Neb. 276 (85 N. W. 76).

621*a*. (1907.) It is not error for the court to refuse to give an instruction requested by the defendant which does not contain a full and correct statement of the law applicable to the facts of the case as shown by the evidence. Clements v. State, 80 Neb. 313 (114 N. W. 271).

Cautionary instruction in general.

622. (1901.) In a criminal prosecution the trial court may, in its discretion, give a cautionary instruction. Dinsmore v. State, 61 Neb. 418 (85 N. W. 445).

Elements and incidents of defense in general.

623. (1897.) It is error in a criminal prosecution for the trial court to discredit a particular defense by advising the jury that it is one "easily fabricated, that it has occasionally been successfully fabricated, and that the temptation to resort to it as a spurious defense is very great, especially in cases of importance." Henry v. State, 51 Neb. 149 (70 N. W. 924; 66 Am. St. Rep. 450).

Insanity.

624. (1881.) An instruction in a trial for malicious shooting, that "the law requires something more than occasional oddity or hypochondria to exempt the perpetrator of an offense from its punishment," is not erroneous. Hawe v. State, 11 Neb. 537 (10 N. W. 452; 38 Am. Rep. 375).

625. (1891.) Instructions as to the criminal responsibility of parties laboring under insanity and insane delusions, examined, considered, and held to be correctly given. Thurman v. State, 32 Neb. 224 (49 N. W. 338).

626. (1899.) It is prejudicially erroneous to inform the jury in a criminal case, where the defense is insanity, that want of capacity on the part of the prisoner to understand the nature of the act in question, at the time of its commission, is necessary to render him irresponsible. Knights v. State, 58 Neb. 225 (78 N. W. 508; 76 Am. St. Rep. 78).

Intoxication.

627. (1898.) On trial of accused for robbery where the evidence tends to show that he was intoxicated when the crime was committed, there being no evidence that he premeditated the commission of the crime and then became intoxicated, it was held error to charge the jury that no state of mind resulting from drunkenness, short of actual insanity or loss of reason, was any excuse for a criminal act. Latimer v. State, 55 Neb. 609 (76 N. W. 207; 70 Am. St. Rep. 403).

Alibi.

Necessity for request, see post, § 789.

628. (1885.) Instructions on questions of alibi examined, and held proper. McLain v. State, 18 Neb. 154 (24 N. W. 720).

629. (1896.) An alibi is a legitimate defense to a criminal charge and should not be disparaged by the trial court, the weight or sufficiency of the evidence for that purpose being a question for the consideration of the jury. Casey v. State, 49 Neb. 403 (68 N. W. 643).

630. (1896.) It is error to instruct that the accused in a criminal prosecution is required to prove an alibi. Casey v. State, 49 Neb. 403 (68 N. W. 643).

631. (1898.) It is improper to instruct a jury that under the defense of alibi it must appear that the distance was so great as to preclude the possibility that accused could have been at the scene of the crime. Peyton v. State, 54 Neb. 188 (74 N. W. 597).

632. (1898.) Where an alibi and its effect were correctly stated in an instruction, no harm will be presumed from the fact that in referring to it the court descriptively said that an alibi is a part of the defense. McVey v. State, 57 Neb. 471 (77 N. W. 1111).

633. (1901.) An instruction in which the court said to the jury that the evidence tended to show that the defendant was, when the crime was being committed, at such a distant and different place that he could not have participated in its commission, and that they should acquit unless the evidence satisfied them beyond a reasonable doubt that he was present when the crime was committed, held not error. Nightingale v. State, 62 Neb. 371 (87 N. W. 158).

Motive and intent.

634. (1878.) When the evidence fails to show some motive on the part of the accused to commit the crime charged, this is a circumstance in favor of his innocence which the jury should consider together with all the other evidence, in making up their verdict. But it is not error for the court to refuse to charge the jury that the absence of such motive "ought to operate strongly" in favor of the accused, this being a matter for the jury alone to determine. Clough v. State, 7 Neb. 320.

635. (1895.) It is proper to instruct that "malice" in its legal sense, denotes that condition of mind which is manifested by the intentionally doing of a wrongful act without just cause or excuse. It means any wilfull or corrupt intention of the mind. Housh v. State, 43 Neb. 163 (61 N. W. 571).

636. (1895.) Where the offense consists of an act with a specific intent, it may not be error to instruct that the accused is presumed to have intended the natural and proximate consequences of his voluntary act. Krchnavy v. State, 43 Neb. 337 (61 N. W. 628).

Self-defense.

637. (1906.) Self-defense is extended to the defense of the person and of the domicile, and an instruction which correctly defines the elements of such defense is a sufficient charge on that subject. Reed v. State, 75 Neb. 509 (106 N. W. 649).

Presumptions and burden of proof.

638. (1892.) An instruction that "If you find the defendants tendered a reasonable doubt" is erroneous, as it in effect shifts the burden of proof onto the accused. The true rule is that if upon all the evidence the jury entertain a reasonable doubt of the guilt of the accused they should acquit. Burger v. State, 34 Neb. 397 (51 N. W. 1027).

639. (1896.) An instruction in a criminal case is erroneous which has the effect to shift the burden of proof from the state to the accused. Haskins v. State, 46 Neb. 888 (65 N. W. 894).

640. (1898.) An instruction in a criminal case, in effect, that every one is presumed sane, but if there is evidence tending to rebut the presumption and sufficient to raise a reasonable doubt on the issue of insanity, then the burden is upon the state to show sanity beyond a reasonable doubt, shifts the burden of proof and is therefore erroneous. Snider v. State, 56 Neb. 309 (76 N. W. 574).

641. (1899.) In a criminal prosecution it is reversible error to instruct the jury upon the question of insanity that the burden of proof shifts from the prisoner to the state during the progress of the trial. Knights v. State, 58 Neb. 225 (78 N. W. 508; 76 Am. St. Rep. 78).

642. (1899.) The court in its charge may properly say that when the presumption of sanity encounters opposing proof the burden is upon the state to satisfy the jury, by evidence beyond a reasonable doubt, that the accused was sane at the time he committed the alleged criminal act. Knights v. State, 58 Neb. 225 (78 N. W. 508; 76 Am. St. Rep. 78).

643. (1901.) An instruction in a criminal prosecution which casts the burden of proof on a defendant to establish his defense by a preponderance of the evidence, is erroneous. Howell v. State, 61 Neb. 391 (85 N. W. 289).

644. (1902.) An instruction which in substance informs the jury that they cannot convict unless all the material averments of the information are established by the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt, does not, by implication, authorize a conviction without presumption or proof of defendant's sanity. Schwartz v. State, 65 Neb 196 (91 N. W. 190).

644*a*. (1908.) An instruction which requires a defendant to prove beyond a reasonable doubt his innocence of a graver crime before he can be found guilty of a less heinous offense imposes an unwarranted burden upon the defendant and is erroneous. Kennison v. State, 80 Neb. 688 (115 N. W. 289).

644*b*. (1908.) In a criminal prosecution the burden is upon the state to establish every element of the crime charged beyond a reasonable doubt; and an instruction which shifts the burden of proof to the defendant, and informs the jury that the evidence must show beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant in doing the act complained of acted in good faith, and was not actuated by improper motives, is erroneous. Chamberlain v. State, 80 Neb. 812 (115 N. W. 555).

www.libtool.com.cn

——Presumption of innocence.

645. (1874.) An instruction in these words, "the accused is presumed innocent until the contrary be proved, and if the evidence satisfies you, beyond a reasonable doubt, that he is not guilty of the charge alleged against him in the indictment, it is your duty to acquit," is erroneous. Caw v. State, 3 Neb. 357).

646. (1878.) It is not error for the court, in speaking of the legal presumption of innocence, to say to the jury that, unless this presumption is overthrown by "sufficient evidence," the defendant must be acquitted. The use of the term "sufficient evidence," could not have led the jury to understand that they were at liberty to convict on a mere preponderance of evidence, especially when, in a subsequent part of the charge, they were told that "the proof must be such as to satisfy them beyond a reasonable doubt" of the existence of all the facts necessary to constitute his guilt. Clough v. State, 7 Neb. 320.

647. (1881.) An instruction that, until proven guilty, accused should be considered legally innocent and that his case should "receive the same impartial consideration as if they were really so," is erroneous since it tends to lead the jury to believe that the judge believes accused to be guilty. Olive v. State, 11 Neb. 1 (7 N. W. 444).

648. (1894.) In a criminal prosecution the court instructed the jury, in substance, that the law presumed the accused innocent of the crime charged, and that such presumption continued until his guilt should be established by competent evidence beyond a reasonable doubt. Held, Sufficient to apprise the jury that their verdict must be based upon the evidence in the case alone, and that it was not error to refuse an instruction that "the information in this case is of itself a mere accusation or charge against the defendant, and is not, of itself, any evidence of the defendant's guilt; and no juror in this case should permit himself to be, to any extent, influenced against the defendant because or on account of the information in this case; that your personal opinion as to facts not proven cannot properly be considered as the basis of your verdict. You may believe as men that certain facts exist, but as jurors you can only act upon evidence introduced upon the trial, and from that alone you must form your verdict, unaided, unassisted, and uninfluenced by any opinion or presumption not formed upon the testimony." Palin v. State, 38 Neb. 862 (57 N. W. 743).

649. (1897.) The court charged the jury that: "The law raises no presumption against the defendant. On the contrary, the presumption of law is in favor of his innocence. This presumption of innocence continues through the trial until every material allegation in the information is established by the evidence to the exclusion of all reasonable doubt." Held, Equivalent to the rule that the presumption of innocence is a matter of evidence, to the benefit of which accused is entitled. Bartley v. State, 53 Neb. 310 (73 N. W. 744).

650. (1898.) Instruction examined, and held not to state that the presumption of innocence exists in favor of the accused when no evidence has been introduced. McVey v. State, 55 Neb. 777 (76 N. W. 438).

651. (1899.) Where the jury was instructed that the presumption of innocence continues with accused until his guilt is established by the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt, held not prejudicially erroneous to refuse to further instruct that such presumption is a matter of evidence. McVey v. State, 57 Neb. 471 (77 N. W. 1111).

652. (1903.) An instruction, in which the jury are told that the presumption of innocence continues until the material allegations of the information are established by the evidence "to the exclusion of all reasonable doubt," is entirely accurate. Edwards v. State, 69 Neb. 386 (95 N. W. 1038).

653. (1903.) An instruction which in substance advises the jury that the presumption of innocence remains with the accused till by competent evidence the state establishes guilt beyond a reasonable doubt, is not subject to the objection that the burden of proof is thereby shifted to the defendant. Van Syoc v. State, 69 Neb. 520 (96 N. W. 266).

Character of defendant.

Necessity for request, see post, § 790.

www.libook.com.cn

654. (1881.) An instruction that "Every man is presumed in law to have a good character until the contrary is proved. The indictment is this case having been found and the prisoners put on trial, their characters thereby have a stain or imputation cast upon the original presumption. To remove this stain or imputation, and restore their characters to its former presumption, they have introduced witnesses to prove their good character * * *," is erroneous. Olive v. State, 11 Neb. 1 (7 N. W. 444).

655. (1888.) The jury alone are the judges of the weight of evidence. Therefore an instruction that, "evidence of good character is entitled to great weight when the evidence against the accused is weak or doubtful, but is entitled to very little weight when the proof is strong," was held to be erroneous. Long v. State, 23 Neb. 33 (36 N. W. 310).

656. (1892.) Previous good character of the accused in a criminal prosecution is a fact which he is entitled to have submitted for the consideration of the jury precisely as any other circumstance favorable to him, without any disparagement by the court, hence it is error to instruct that "good character is a circumstance of great weight in doubtful cases and of less weight in less doubtful cases." Johnson v. State, 34 Neb. 257 (51 N. W. 835).

657. (1898.) Previous good character of accused is a fact which he is entitled to have submitted to the jury, precisely as any other circumstance favorable to him, without any disparagement by the court. Latimer v. State, 55 Neb. 609 (76 N. W. 207; 70 Am. St. Rep. 403).

658. (1902.) An instruction as to the effect of evidence of defendants previous good character stating that if the proof shows that defendant is guilty the former good character "would not be a defense," is not erroneous. McCormick v. State, 66 Neb. 337 (92 N. W. 606).

659. (1904.) In criminal trials, the previous good character of the defendant has great weight as tending to show the improbability of guilt. The weight to be given such evidence is for the jury to determine. The court is not required to tell the jury that, if the other evidence is sufficient to satisfy the jury of the defendant's guilt, they must still consider whether previous good character, when weighed with all other facts and circumstances in the case, raises a reasonable doubt of guilt. Lillie v. State, 72 Neb. 228 (100 N. W. 316).

660. (1905.) It is not error to refuse an instruction concerning evidence of the previous good character of the accused, when the instruction calls attention especially to such evidence and to no other, and tells the jury that it may be relied on to raise a doubt of the guilt of the accused sufficient to acquit him, which, without such proof, would not have existed. Sweet v. State, 75 Neb. 263 (106 N. W. 31).

Elements of offense.

661. (1895.) It is the duty of the court to instruct the jury on the law of the case, whether requested so to do or not, and an instruction or instructions which by the omission of certain elements have the effect of withdrawing from the consideration of the jury an essential issue or element of the case is erroneous; but when the jury is instructed generally upon the law, and when the instructions given do not have the effect above stated, then error cannot be predicated upon the failure of the court to charge upon some particular phase of the case, such as the purpose for which certain evidence was admitted, unless a proper instruction was requested by the party complaining. Carleton v. State, 43 Neb. 373 (61 N. W. 699).

662. (1895.) An instruction by which it is sought to cover the whole case, and upon which, if met by the evidence, the jury is instructed to find in a certain way, should include all the elements necessarily involved in the case and within the evidence. McAleer v. State, 46 Neb. 116 (64 N. W. 358).

663. (1898.) An instruction purporting to cover the whole case is erroneous, which fails to include all the elements necessarily involved in the issues and within the evidence. Bergeron v. State, 53 Neb. 752 (74 N. W. 253).

664. (1902.) It is error for the court to instruct the jury that they may convict the defendant without finding a specific fact which constitutes one of the essential ingredients of the offense charged. Goldsberry v. State, 66 Neb. 312 (92 N. W. 906).

665. (1905.) It is the duty of the trial judge, particularly in criminal actions, to instruct the jury as to the rules of law governing the disposition of the cause, whether he is requested to do so or not; and if a charge to a jury, by omission to instruct on certain points, in effect withdraws from their consideration an essential issue of the case, it is erroneous. Young v. State, 74 Neb. 346 (104 N. W. 867).

www.libtool.com.cn

666. (1906.) It is not error for the court to refuse to give an instruction relating to the matter of a crime for which the defendant is not on trial. Steinkuhler v. State, 77 Neb. 331 (109 N. W. 395.)

Degrees of crime.

Necessity for request, see post, §§ 791, 792.

667. (1895.) Where an information contained two counts charging different degrees of the crime, and there was no evidence to support the first count, it is error to submit to the jury the question of guilt or innocence under that count although defendant was not convicted on that count. Botsch v. State, 43 Neb. 501 (61 N W. 730).

668. (1895.) It was not error to submit to the jury the question of defendant's guilt of a higher grade of offense than that for which conviction is had, where there is evidence to sustain the higher grade. Whitner v. State, 46 Neb. 144 (64 N. W. 704).

669. (1901.) The court in charging the jury, is only required to state the law applicable to the facts proved and those which the evidence tends to prove. So, where it is conclusively shown that the defendant either committed the crime charged or is entirely innocent, the failure to instruct with respect to other crimes, or inferior degrees of the crime, embraced within the facts alleged in the information, is not error. Strong v. State, 63 Neb. 440 (88 N. W. 772).

670. (1906.) On the trial of one charged with a heinous crime, where the charge set forth in the information or indictment fully embraces all of the ingredients of a lesser offense, it is proper for the trial court to define the lesser offense and instruct the jury that, where the evidence requires it, they may convict of such offense. McConnell v. State, 77 Neb. 773 (110 N. W. 666).

Punishment.

671. (1895.) A refusal to instruct as to the statutory penalty, or to permit that question to be argued, is not error, where the jury is not required to fix the punishment. Ford v. State, 46 Neb. 390 (64 N. W. 1082).

672. (1903.) Where the jury are not required to fix the punishment, the trial court is under no obligation to tell them what penalty is annexed by law to the crime charged in the information. Edwards v. State, 69 Neb. 386 (95 N. W. 1038).

Statement of evidence.

673. (1896.) In a trial for murder, the defense being insanity, the court must impartially recite the material evidence offered by both parties, where it undertakes to detail in an instruction what evidence the jury may consider in determining whether accused knew the killing was wrong. Williams v. State, 46 Neb. 704 (65 N. W. 783).

674. (1896.) It is prejudicial error for the court in a murder case, the defense of which is insanity, to group together in an instruction the important material facts put in evidence by the state as to the prisoner's sanity and omit all mention of the evidence produced by the prisoner tending to traverse that of the state. Williams v. State, 46 Neb. 704 (65 N. W. 783).

Determination of sufficiency of evidence.

675. (1892.) An instruction in a criminal case that "you should be satisfied of the truth of the material allegations contained in the particular count of the information," without stating from what the jury was to be satisfied or the degree of proof required to convict, is erroneous. Elliott v. State, 34 Neb. 48 (51 N. W. 315).

676. (1897.) It is not prejudicial error for a court in its charge to say to the jury that the evidence before them is both direct and circumstantial. Davis v. State, 51 Neb. 301 (70 N. W. 984).

677. (1897.) An instruction that the acts constituting a crime may be proved by circumstances and any other competent evidence, held proper when preceded by a direction that the jury must be governed by what had appeared in evidence. Mills v. State, 53 Neb. 263 (73 N. W. 761).

678. (1899.) In a criminal prosecution direct and circumstantial evidence adduced on the trial should be weighed in reaching a verdict, and it is not error in such case to so instruct the jury. Kastner v. State, 58 Neb. 767 (79 N. W. 713).

679. (1901.) In an instruction as to the consideration of evidence by the jury, the use of the word "impartial" does not render the instructions erroneous. Savary v. State, 62 Neb. 166 (87 N. W. 34).

680. (1901.) An instruction laying down the proposition that false testimony, whether given corruptly or through mistake, should not influence the decision, is abstractly correct, and was, in this case, properly given. Strong v. State, 63 Neb. 440 (88 N. W. 772).

681. (1902.) A request for an instruction to the effect that defendants should be acquitted if there is evidence supporting any theory of their innocence is rightly refused. Reed v. State, 66 Neb. 184 (92 N. W. 321).

Reasonable doubt.

682. (1879.) It is not error to charge the jury that "absolute, unequivocal, mathematical certainty of proof is not required" on a criminal trial. St. Louis v. State, 8 Neb. 405.

683. (1883.) An instruction in which it is said that: "The proof is deemed to be beyond a reasonable doubt when the evidence is sufficient to impress the judgment and understanding of ordinarily prudent men with a conviction on which they would act in their most important concerns or affairs in life," sustained. Polin v. State, 14 Neb. 540 (16 N. W. 898); (1896) Lawhead v. State, 46 Neb. 607 (65 N. W. 779).

684. (1886.) An instruction that persons sometimes say they are morally certain of the existence of a fact or facts, but have not the evidence to prove it, this is the condition of mind one is in when convinced beyond a reasonable doubt, is erroneous. Heldt v. State, 20 Neb. 492 (30 Neb. 626; 58 Am. Rep. 835.

685. (1887.) An instruction that reasonable doubt "is a doubt for having which the jury can give a reason, based upon testimony," is erroneous and calculated to mislead. Cowan v. State, 22 Neb. 519 (35 N. W. 405).

686. (1888.) An instruction that "The jury was not required to be satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt of each link in the chain of circumstances relied upon to establish defendant's guilt. It is sufficient if, taking the testimony altogether, the jury are satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that the state has proved each material fact charged, and that the defendant is guilty," is correct. Jameson v. State, 25 Neb. 185 (41 N. W. 138).

687. (1891.) Instruction to the jury that "a reasonable doubt is an actual, substantial doubt, arising from the evidence, or want of evidence, in the case," held, not error. Langford v. State, 32 Neb. 782 (49 N. W. 766).

688. (1892.) An instruction "On the question of reasonable doubt the court instructs the jury that the term 'reasonable doubt,' as used in these instructions, means a doubt which has some good reason for it arising out of the evidence in the case; such a doubt as you are able to find a reason in the evidence for," etc., held, erroneous, and cause for reversal of the judgment. Childs v. State, 34 Neb. 236 (51 N. W. 837).

689. (1894.) In a murder trial the court instructed the jury: "The court further instructs the jury, as a matter of law, that the doubt which the juror is allowed to retain on his own mind, and under which he should frame his verdict of not guilty, must always be a reasonable one. A doubt produced by undue sensibility in the mind of any juror in view of the consequences of his verdict is not a reasonable doubt, and a juror is not allowed to create sources or materials of doubt by resorting to trivial or fanciful suppositions and remote conjectures as to possible states of facts differing from that established from the evidence. You are not at liberty to disbelieve as jurors, if from the evidence you believe as men. Your oath imposes on you no obligation to doubt where no doubt would exist if no oath had been administered. The jury are instructed that if, after a careful and impartial consideration of all the evidence in the case, they can say they feel an abiding conviction of the guilt of the defendant, and are fully satisfied to a moral certainty of the truth of the charge made against him, then the jury are satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt." Held, That the instruction was correct in every respect. Willis v. State, 43 Neb. 102 (61 N. W. 254); (1901) Nightingale v. State, 62 Neb. 371 (87 N. W. 158).

690. (1894.) In a murder trial the court instructed the jury: "A doubt to justify an acquittal must be reasonable, and it must arise from a candid and impartial investigation of all the evidence in the case; and unless it is such that were the same kind of doubt interposed in the graver transactions of life it would cause a reasonable and prudent man to hesitate and pause, it is insufficient to authorize a verdict of not guilty." Held, That the instruction was correct. Willis v. State, 43 Neb. 102 (61 N. W. 254).

691. (1895.) Where a charge distinctly states that to warrant a conviction the state must make out the whole case beyond a reasonable doubt, it is not necessary to repeat in every instruction the degree of proof required. Carleton v. State, 43 Neb. 373 (61 N. W. 699); (1897) Davis v. State, 51 Neb. 301 (70 N. W. 984).

692. (1895.) Instructions as to reasonable doubt, set out in opinion, held not erroneous. Carleton v. State, 43 Neb. 373 (61 N. W. 699); (1897) Davis v. State, 51 Neb. 301 (70 N. W. 984); (1897) Whitney v. State, 53 Neb. 287 (73 N. W. 696); (1904) Bothwell v. State, 71 Neb. 747 (99 N. W. 669).

693. (1895.) An instruction, in a prosecution for murder, on the question of reasonable doubt is not erroneous because it includes a statement that "mathematical certainty is not required." Collins v. State, 46 Neb. 37 (64 N. W. 432).

694. (1896.) In a criminal case it is not erroneous to direct the jury that its oath imposes upon it no obligation to doubt, where no doubt would have existed if no oath had been administered. Barney v. State, 49 Neb. 515 (68 N. W. 636); (1897) Catron v. State, 52 Neb. 389 (72 N. W. 354).

695. (1897.) An instruction defining a reasonable doubt held not to deny accused the benefit of a reasonable doubt arising from the lack of evidence in the case, and that it was not error to state in such instruction: "You are not at liberty to disbelieve as jurors if from all the evidence you believe as men. Your oath imposes on you no obligation to doubt where no doubt would exist if no oath had been administered." Bartley v. State, 53 Neb. 310 (73 N. W. 744).

696. (1898.) A portion of an instruction, worded as follows: "You are not at liberty to disbelieve as jurors if you believe as men. Your oath imposes on you no obligation to doubt where no doubt would exist if no oath had been administered,"—held not objectionable and erroneous when read and construed with the further portions of the same instruction and the other paragraphs of the charge in that the first sentence did not read, "You are not at liberty to disbelieve as jurors if from the evidence you believe as men," instead of as it did with the omission of the reference to the evidence. Carrall v. State, 53 Neb. 431 (73 N. W. 939).

697. (1898.) An instruction in a criminal prosecution is not erroneous which defines a reasonable doubt as being such a doubt as arises from a candid and impartial consideration of all the evidence in the case, and which would cause a reasonable and prudent man to pause and hesitate in the graver transactions of life, and that a juror is satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt if from a consideration of the entire evidence he has an abiding conviction of the truth of the charge. Maxfield v. State, 54 Neb. 44 (74 N. W. 401).

698. (1899.) In a felony case it is reversible error for a court to charge the jury that it may find the defendant guilty if it entertain a reasonable doubt of the truth of each or all of the material allegations of the indictment. Atkinson v. State, 58 Neb. 356 (78 N. W. 621).

699. (1899.) After a jury in a criminal case has been once informed that there can be no conviction without proof beyond a reasonable doubt, and that their conclusion should be based on the evidence, the failure to reiterate such statements in other paragraphs of the charge is not error. Dunn v. State, 58 Neb. 807 (79 N. W. 719).

700. (1900.) The definition of a reasonable doubt contained in the instructions did not permit the jury to enter the field of conjecture, but confined them to the consideration of the evidence adduced on the trial. McArthur v. State, 60 Neb. 390 (83 N. W. 196).

701. (1900.) It is not error for the court in a criminal case to charge the jury, inter alia, "You are not at liberty to disbelieve as jurors if from all the evidence you believe as men. Your oath imposes upon you no obligation to doubt where no doubt would exist if no oath had been administered." Leisenberg v. State, 60 Neb. 628 (84 N. W. 6); (1901) Savary v. State, 62 Neb. 166 (87 N. W. 34); (1902) Reed v. State, 66 Neb. 184 (92 N. W. 321).

702. (1901.) An instruction that if there was any one single fact proved which is inconsistent with the guilt of the defendant, this is sufficient to raise a reasonable doubt, as properly refused in a murder case. Smith v. State, 61 Neb. 296 (85 N. W. 49).

703. (1903.) The instruction on the subject of reasonable doubt, considered by this court in several cases, and found in Good and Corcoran, Instructions to Juries, section 146, at page 261, is, perhaps, less intelligible that the phrase defined, but yet plain enough to be within the comprehension of ordinary men. Edwards v. State, 69 Neb. 386 (95 N. W. 1038).

704. (1904.) An instruction that: "A doubt produced by an undue sensibility in the mind of any juror in view of the consequences of his verdict is not a reasonable doubt. And the juror is not allowed to create sources or materials of doubt by resorting to trivial or fanciful suppositions and remote conjectures as to a possible state of facts differing from those established by the evidence. You are not at liberty to disbelieve as jurors if, from all the evidence, you believe as men. Your oath imposes on you no obligation to doubt where no doubt would exist if no oath had been administered"—is not to be commended in all cases. Lillie v. State, 72 Neb. 228 (100 N. W. 316); (1904) Mays v. State, 72 Neb. 723 (101 N. W. 979); (1905) Junod v. State, 73 Neb. 208 (102 N. W. 462); (1905) Keeler v. State, 73 Neb. 441 (103 N. W. 64).

705. (1906.) Where, in a criminal prosecution, the court has instructed the jury that the state must prove all of the material averments of the information, naming them, beyond a reasonable doubt, it is not error to afterwards instruct that the burden of proof to establish one of such material averments is on the state, without again qualifying such statement by the words "beyond a reasonable doubt." Steinkuhler v. State, 77 Neb. 331 (109 N. W. 395).

706. (1907.) An instruction defining a reasonable doubt is not rendered prejudicial to the defendant by the use of the word "fully," as, for example, "If the jury are fully satisfied to a moral certainty of the truth of the charges made against the defendant, then they are satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt." Such an instruction is more favorable to the defendant than to the state. Wheeler v. State, 79 Neb. 491 (113 N. W. 253).

706*a*. (1907.) An instruction that "a doubt produced by an undue sensibility in the mind of any juror in view of the consequences of his verdict is not a reasonable doubt; and the juror is not allowed to create sources or materials of doubt by resorting to trival or fanciful suppositions and remote conjectures as to a possible state of facts differing from those established by the evidence. You are not at liberty to disbelieve as jurors, if, from all the evidence, you believe as men. Your oath imposes on you no obligation to doubt where no doubt would exist if no oath had been administered"—is not to be commended in all cases, but we cannot reverse a judgment of conviction solely for the giving of this instruction. Clements v. State, 80 Neb. 313 (114 N. W. 271).

Weight of evidence.

707. (1893.) It is reversible error to instruct the jury in a criminal case that "evidence of good character is entitled to great weight when the evidence against the accused is weak or doubtful, but is entitled to very little weight when the proof is strong," as it invades the province of the jury. Vincent v. State, 37 Neb. 672 (56 N. W. 320).

Circumstantial evidence.

708. (1884.) The propriety of instructing a jury that in cases of circumstantial evidence it is not necessary for the jury to be satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt of "each link in the chain of circumstances relied on to establish defendant's guilt," doubted. Marion v. State, 16 Neb. 349 (20 N. W. 289, 396).

709. (1888.) In criminal prosecutions the jury must be satisfied of defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt from the evidence. They must not go outside of the evidence. Hence an instruction that the evidence includes not only the sworn testimony of the witnesses who have testified, but all the circumstances surrounding the tragedy, was erroneous. Long v. State, 23 Neb. 33 (36 N. W. 310).

710. (1897.) The court, in an instruction, stated to the jury that there had been offered in the case both direct and circumstantial evidence. He then defined these two kinds of evidence and stated that the circumstantial evidence which had been received was legal and competent, and then said: "And if it is of such a character as to exclude every reasonable theory, supposition, or hypothesis other than that of the defendant's guilt, then, and in that event, it should be given the same weight by you as direct evidence." Held, (1) That the last clause of the instruction quoted was erroneous; (2) but when considered in connection with the remainder of the instruction, that it was error without prejudice; (3) that it was not an unconditional instruction to the jury to give the same weight to circumstantial evidence as direct evidence. Davis v. State, 51 Neb. 301 (70 N. W. 984).

711. (1901.) Instructions to the jury examined, and held to embody the rule of law that circumstantial evidence, to justify a conviction, must be of such a character as to exclude every reasonable hypothesis save that of the guilt of the accused. Tatum v. State, 61 Neb. 229 (85 N. W. 40).

712. (1901.) An instruction as to the force and effect of circumstantial evidence, copied in the opinion, held to have been properly given. Smith v. State, 61 Neb. 296 (85 N. W. 49).

713. (1903.) The court in effect charged, (1) that circumstantial evidence, to warrant a conviction, must be of such a character as to exclude every reasonable hypothesis excepting only the one implying defendant's guilt; (2) that every incriminating circumstance which may be considered as evidence of guilt must be proved to a moral certainty or beyond a reasonable doubt. Held, To be a correct statement of the law and to include every material feature of the instructions upon that point requested and refused. Lamb v. State, 69 Neb. 212 (95 N. W. 1050).

Testimony of accomplices.

714. (1881.) An instruction to the effect that while it is unsafe to convict upon the testimony of an accomplice alone, the jury were at liberty to do so if, on due consideration, they deemed it sufficient, held, not erroneous. Olive v. State, 11 Neb. 1 (7 N. W. 444).

Credibility and interest of witnesses.

Necessity for request, see post, § 793.

715. (1877.) Where informers, detectives, or other persons employed to hunt up testimony against the accused, are called to testify against him, he is entitled to an instruction to the jury that in weighing their testimony greater care should be exercised than in the case of witnesses who are wholly disinterested. Preuit v. People, 5 Neb. 377; (1899) Kastner v. State, 58 Neb. 767 (79 N. W. 713).

716. (1879.) It is not error to charge the jury in effect that in determining the weight of evidence upon any given point in the case, they are not required to give equal weight to the testimony of each witness, but only such weight as, under all the circumstances, they believe him entitled to. St. Louis v. State, 8 Neb. 405.

717. (1888.) It is the duty of a trial court to submit to the jury, by way of proper instructions, such principles of law as may be applicable to the case on trial as it appears from the evidence, and also such principles as should be applied to witnesses who are interested in the result, or whose testimony should be weighed with special care and caution as accomplices. But it is not proper to discuss the policy of using such witnesses. This should be left to counsel in the argument. Long v. State, 23 Neb. 33 (36 N. W. 310).

718. (1892.) An instruction as to credibility of witnesses, and commenting on the evidence, set out in the opinion, held erroneous. Elliott v. State, 34 Neb. 48 (51 N. W. 315).

719. (1897.) The charge of the court on the subject of the weight of evidence and the credibility of witnesses set out in the opinion and held not prejudicially erroneous. Davis v. State, 51 Neb. 301 (70 N. W. 984).

720. (1901.) An instruction of general application regarding the credibility of witnesses, otherwise proper and correct, is not open to objection because the defendant who testified in his own behalf was the only witness having a direct legal interest in the result of the trial. Savary v. State, 62 Neb. 166 (87 N. W. 34).

721. (1902.) In an instruction in a criminal prosecution relating to the credibility of witnesses and the weight to be attached to the testimony of each, it is not error to charge that the jury should consider the relationship, if any is shown, of any witness to the defendant. Van Buren v. State, 63 Neb. 453 (88 N. W. 671).

722. (1902.) In a criminal prosecution, where the state relies upon the evidence of detectives employed for the purpose of procuring testimony against the accused, it is reversible error to instruct the jury that they should give to the testimony of such detectives "the same consideration as to any other testimony in the case, giving it such weight as, considering the nature of the same, their opportunities for knowing the facts of which they testify and their appearance and demeanor upon the witness stand and all the other elements which go to their credibility, including their interest and bias, and to give their testimony such weight as under all circumstances the same is, in your judgment, entitled to receive." Fruide v. State, 66 Neb. 244 (92 N. W. 320).

723. (1903.) An instruction cautioning the jury as to the weight that should be given to the evidence of detectives examined, and held, that it did not invade the province of the jury and was properly given. Everson v. State, 4 Unof. 109 (93 N. W. 394).

724. (1907.) It is error for the court to give undue prominence to the fact of defendant's interest in the result of the prosecution by repeatedly calling the attention of the jury thereto, and informing them that they must consider that fact in determining the weight and credibility of his evidence. Burk v. State, 79 Neb. 241 (112 N. W. 573).

724*a*. (1907.) The introduction of evidence tending to impeach a witness does not require the court to instruct the jury to totally disregard his evidence, and it is proper to refuse such instruction. Clements v. State, 30 Neb. 313 (114 N. W. 271).

724*b*. (1907.) It is not error for the court to refuse to instruct the jury that they should carefully scrutinize evidence of the prosecuting attorney because of the natural and unavoidable tendency of persons in his position to hear and remember only such matters as are favorable to the state. Clements v. State, 80 Neb. 313 (114 N. W. 271).

Credibility of testimony of defendant.

725. (1884.) An instruction "The evidence of the defendant is not to be disregarded because he is on trial for a crime—a defendant in a criminal prosecution is ordinarily entitled to the same credit as a party in an important civil suit," is properly refused. Murphy v. State, 15 Neb. 383 (19 N. W. 489).

726. When the defendant in a criminal case testifies in his own behalf, it is not error to charge the jury that in weighing his testimony they might consider his interest in the result of the trial. (1879) St. Louis v. State, 8 Neb. 405; (1891) Davis v. State, 31 Neb. 247 (47 N. W. 854); (1892) Johnson v. State, 34 Neb. 257 (51 N. W. 835); (1895) Housh v. State, 43 Neb. 163 (61 N. W. 571); (1899) Philamalee v. State, 58 Neb. 320 (78 N. W. 625).

727. (1891.) Where a person on trial for a crime testifies in his own behalf, the court may instruct the jury that in weighing his testimony they may consider his interest in the result of the suit. The court, however, cannot, by repeating its statement in that regard, give it undue weight or say aught calculated to disparage the testimony of the accused. Clark v. State, 32 Neb. 246 (49 N. W. 367).

728. (1895.) It is not error to charge the jury that in weighing the testimony of defendant they should fully and fairly consider whether it is true and made in good faith, the terms "true" and "made in good faith" being, in such case, synonymous, and therefore not implying that the testimony should be rejected, though true, if not made in good faith. Carleton v. State, 43 Neb. 373 (61 N. W. 699).

729. (1903.) It is not error to instruct the jury that they must give the testimony of the defendant in a criminal case "only such weight" as they think it deserves. Palmer v. State, 70 Neb. 136 (97 N. W. 235).

730. (1904.) The law makes a defendant in a criminal trial a competent witness in his own belief, and the court should in no manner disparage his evidence. Therefore, an instruction, otherwise correctly stating the rules by which the jury should determine the weight to be given to the evidence of the accused, and which concludes with the words, "You are not required to receive blindly the testimony of such accused person as true, but you are to consider whether it is true and made in good faith, or only for the purpose of avoiding conviction," is prejudicial to the defendant's rights. Donner v. State, 72 Neb. 263 (100 N. W. 305; 117 Am. St. Rep. 789).

Failure of accused to testify.

Necessity of request, see post, § 794.

731. (1897.) Where, in a criminal prosecution, a defendant does not testify in his own behalf, it is not reversible error for the trial court to mention such neglect or omission in its instructions, when followed in the same connection with the direction that "nothing must be taken against him because he had not so testified." Ferguson v. State, 52 Neb. 432 (72 N. W. 590; 66 Am. St. Rep. 512).

732. (1904.) It is not error to instruct the jury that the defendant is under no obligations to testify in her own behalf, and that the statute expressly declares that her neglect to testify shall not create any presumption against her. Lillie v. State, 72 Neb. 228 (100 N. W. 316).

Failure of accused to deny testimony.

733. (1906.) If a defendant in a criminal case is a witness in his own behalf, it is error to instruct the jury that, "if the defendant by his own testimony has not denied in any way any material fact proved in the case within his personal knowledge, such testimony or material fact proved, if not denied by the defendant, is admitted by the defendant to be true." Russell v. State, 77 Neb. 519 (110 N. W. 380).

Effect of admissions made to avoid continuance.

734. (1902.) Where the prosecution, to avoid a continuance, admits that the absent witness will testify as alleged in the affidavit for continuance and such affidavit is admitted in evidence in lieu of the testimony of the absent witness, it is not error to charge the jury that the state does not admit the truth of the matter alleged in the affidavit, but only that the witness would testify as therein alleged, and that such evidence should be weighed and considered the same as the testimony of other witnesses in the case. McCormick v. State, 66 Neb. 337 (92 N. W. 606).

Influence of argument or statements of counsel.

735. (1897.) Where a party has improperly stated to the jury a fact concerning which there is no evidence, he cannot, as a matter of right, demand that the trial court instruct the jury that improper or unjustifiable comments made by opposing counsel with reference to such facts must not be considered. Catron v. State, 52 Neb. 389 (72 N. W. 354).

Form of verdict.

736. (1902.) An instruction submitting blank forms of verdict, held not to submit a count of the information which by a prior instruction was withdrawn from consideration. Rhea v. State, 63 Neb. 461 (88 N. W. 789).

Recommendations to mercy.

737. (1901.) It is not error to instruct the jury that questions of mercy are for the executive. Dinsmore v. State, 61 Neb. 418 (85 N. W. 445).

Application of instructions to the evidence.

738. (1874.) Instructions asked for by the accused, which were predicated on the assumption that there was testimony from which the jury might find that the accused was first assaulted by the deceased, and in danger of being seriously beaten by him, there being nothing in the evidence to warrant such assumption, was properly refused. Caw v. State, 3 Neb. 357.

739. (1876.) Instructions to jury should be given with reference to the evidence in each particular case. Smith v. State, 5 Neb. 181; (1886) Marion v. State, 20 Neb. 233 (29 N. W. 911; 57 Am. St. Rep. 825).

740. (1877.) Instructions given to a jury should be applicable to the case as made by the testimony, and if they are not, and have a tendency to mislead, the judgment will be reversed. Williams v. State, 6 Neb. 334; (1891) Clark v. State, 32 Neb. 246 (49 N. W. 367); (1904) Blair v. State, 72 Neb. 368 (100 N. W. 808).

741. (1878.) Instructions to the jury must be based upon and be applicable to the evidence; and it is error to instruct the jury that they may find a material fact, of which there is no evidence from which it may be legally inferred. Wolrath v. State, 8 Neb. 80.

742. (1881.) Instructions relative to insanity of prisoner are properly refused, there being no evidence concerning it. Wells v. State, 11 Neb. 409 (9 N. W. 552).

743. (1879.) It is not error to refuse an instruction, although correct as an abstract proposition, which is not applicable to the evidence before the jury. St. Louis v. State, 8 Neb. 405; (1883) Parrish v. State, 14 Neb. 60 (15 N. W. 357); (1885) Bradshaw v. State, 17 Neb. 147 (22 N. W. 361); (1896) Wells v. State, 47 Neb. 74 (66 N. W. 29); (1900) Cardwell v. State, 60 Neb. 480 (83 N. W. 665); (1901) Spaulding v. State, 61 Neb. 289 (85 N. W. 80); (1902) Rhea v. State, 63 Neb. 461 (88 N. W. 789); (1905) Connolly v. State, 74 Neb. 340 (104 N. W. 754).

744. (1896.) The giving of an instruction which submits to the jury the existence or non-existence of a fact material to the issues in the case on trial, when no evidence has been introduced which would support a finding of its existence, is error for which the judgment may be reversed. Morearty v. State, 46 Neb. 652 (65 N. W. 684).

745. (1896.) An instruction which recites material evidence that is not before the jury in such a way as to imply that the judge trying the case understands that such evidence is in the record, is erroneous. Williams v. State, 46 Neb. 704 (65 N. W. 781).

746. (1898.) It is not error to refuse an instruction which has the effect to withdraw from the consideration of the jury competent material evidence in the case. Chezem v. State, 56 Neb. 496 (76 N. W. 1056).

747. (1903.) There being no evidence tending to prove that defendant was present when the alleged crime was committed, it was not error to refuse to instruct on the assumption that he was present. Lamb v. State, 69 Neb. 212 (95 N. W. 1050).

Undue prominence of particular matters.

748. (1886.) If testimony is given from which a material fact may be inferred, it is the duty of the court to submit the question of such inference to the jury by proper instructions. And such instruction would not be open to the objection that the court gave undue prominence to that item of the testimony. Marion v. State, 20 Neb. 233 (29 N. W. 911; 57 Am. St. Rep. 825).

749. (1907.) It is proper for the court to charge the jury that procuring a witness to leave the state is a circumstance which may be considered by them, with all of the other evidence in the case, in determining the guilt or innocence of the accused. Crowell v. State, 79 Neb. 784 (113 N. W. 262).

Oral instructions.

750. (1895.) Under the provisions of sections 52 to 56, chapter 19, Compiled Statutes, the giving of oral instructions in either civil or criminal cases, without a waiver of the statutory requirement that they be given in writing, is reversible error. An oral instruction, over proper objections, having been given in this case in disregard of the above statutory provisions, the judgment of the district court is reversed. Ehrlich v. State, 44 Neb. 810 (63 N. W. 35).

751. (1903.) Oral directions to the jury relative to the reception of a verdict held not to be violative of the rule requiring all instructions to be in writing; nor to be evidence of coercion of the jury. Williams v. State, 69 Neb. 402 (95 N. W. 1014).

Form and language in general.

752. (1888.) While it is doubtless advisable and perhaps better to use the statutory language descriptive of a crime in an instruction, yet where words are used which convey the same meaning and import, and which cannot be misconstrued by the jury, the instruction may not be thereby rendered erroneous. Long v. State, 23 Neb. 33 (36 N. W. 310).

753. (1895.) While it is the better practice in a criminal case for the trial court to charge the jury in concise and informal language what facts are essential to warrant a conviction, the defendant cannot complain if the court charges the jury in the language of the information that all the allegations thereof are material, no technical or ambiguous language being used. Dixon v. State, 46 Neb. 298 (64 N. W. 961).

754. (1897.) An instruction in a criminal prosecution that if the jury should find the facts essential to establish guilt they should acquit, but if such facts had not been proven they should convict, is erroneous and ground for reversal, though it may be apparent to the appellate court that the trial court unintentionally transposed the words "convict" and "acquit." Cummings v. State, 50 Neb. 274 (69 N. W. 756).

755. (1898.) Text-books on instructions should be used with caution. Snider v. State, 56 Neb. 309 (76 N. W. 574).

756. (1899.) An instruction which, in substance, informs the jury that a conviction on either count of an information would be warranted only by proof beyond a reasonable doubt of the essential elements of the crime charged in such count; and that there might be a conviction on one count and an acquittal on the other, is not erroneous or assuming defendant's guilt as to the second count. Dunn v. State, 58 Neb. 807 (79 N. W. 719).

757. (1902.) An instruction otherwise unobjectionable, which omitted the conjunction "and" between the words "fairly" and "truthfully," held not prejudicially erroneous because of such apparent error. McCormick v. State, 66 Neb. 337 (92 N. W. 606).

758. (1903.) The word "evidence," when used in an instruction, is understood to include all the means employed at the trial to ascertain the truth respecting the matters in dispute. Lamb v. State, 69 Neb. 212 (95 N. W. 1050).

Appeal to sympathy or prejudice.

759. (1876.) A correct instruction of the law, applicable in a trial for murder, is not objectionable because it contains the words, "you will allow no false sympathy to sway you from a proper discharge of your duty." Smith v. State, 4 Neb. 277.

760. (1901.) It is not erroneous to designate the defendant in such a case in an instruction as the "prisoner." Dinsmore v. State, 61 Neb. 418 (85 N. W. 445).

Argumentative instructions.

761. (1895.) A judgment will not be reversed because an instruction was somewhat argumentative in its nature, when the argument consisted simply of stating a reason for a rule of law, there being no comment upon the facts and no appeal in any manner to the jury. Carleton v. State, 43 Neb. 373 (61 N. W. 699).

Misleading or confusing instructions.

762 (1881.) An instruction which tends to mislead or even confuse a jury, is erroneous. Olive v. State, 11 Neb. 1 (7 N. W. 444).

Necessity of covering whole case in single instruction.

763. (1901.) It is not required that all phases of the case be covered by one instruction. An instruction referring only to murder in the first degree may be given without objection when other instructions properly advise the jury as to the lesser degrees of the crime charged in the information and also the defense interposed by the plea of not guilty. Savary v. State, 62 Neb. 166 (87 N. W. 34).

764. (1904.) The fact that a single clause of an instruction is incomplete is not sufficient ground for a reversal, if, when the whole paragraph is read and construed together, its meaning is clear and certain, and it appears from the record that the jury could not have been misled thereby. Blair v. State, 72 Neb. 501 (101 N. W. 17).

Quoting statutes.

765. (1897.) While it is proper in a criminal case in defining a crime in an instruction to use the language of the statute descriptive of such crime, yet, if the import of the language used in the instruction is the same as the statute, an instruction will not be held erroneous because the language employed by the court is different from the language of the statute. Long v. State, 23 Neb. 33, followed. Davis v. State, 51 Neb. 301 (70 N. W. 984).

766. (1897.) An instruction quoting portions of the statute under which the prosecution was instituted, held not improper or misleading. Mills v. State, 53 Neb. 263 (73 N. W. 761).

Repetition.

767. (1881.) Court should not multiply instructions, with changed phraseology, on a single proposition of law. One clear, pointed statement to the jury of each proposition advanced is sufficient. Olive v. State, 11 Neb. 1 (7 N. W. 444).

768. (1883.) Instructions ought to be as few as practicable, in view of the evidence, couched in plain, simple language; and where they are, and conform to the principles and policy of the law, it is enough. Parrish v. State, 14 Neb. 60 (15 N. W. 357).

769 (1894.) Undue prominence should not be given to a particular proposition by frequent repetition thereof in charging the jury, but a violation of that rule in a criminal prosecution is not of itself reversible error when it is apparent that there was no controversy respecting the proposition stated. Hill v. State, 42 Neb. 503 (60 N. W. 916).

770. (1895.) The repetition of a proposition of law in an instruction is not reversible error unless it appears that the repetition might operate to the prejudice of accused by misleading the jury. Carleton v. State, 43 Neb. 373 (61 N. W. 699).

771. (1895.) In a criminal case the repetition of a proposition is not reversible error where it does not prejudice the rights of the accused. Dixon v. State, 46 Neb. 298 (64 N. W. 961).

772. (1904.) The repetition of an instruction is not reversible error, unless its effect is to mislead the jury. Robinson v. State, 71 Neb. 142 (98 N. W. 694).

Reference to matters in previous instruction.

773. (1901.) When a point arising in a criminal trial has been covered in an instruction to the jury, it is not error to refer to such instruction as answering an inquiry submitted by the jury during their deliberations, in place of giving another instruction on the same point, although another instruction might properly have been given. Savary v. State, 62 Neb. 166 (87 N. W. 34).

Reason for instruction.

774. (1886.) A correct instruction given, or any instruction given on request of a defendant on trial, will not be held to be erroneous because an improper reason for the instruction is given. Marion v. State, 20 Neb. 233 (29 N. W. 911; 57 Am. Rep. 825).

Construction and effect of charge as a whole.

775. (1879.) The true meaning and effect of instructions are not to be determined by the selection of detached parts thereof, but by considering all that is said on each particular subject or branch of the case. St. Louis v. State, 8 Neb. 405; (1884) Murphy v. State, 15 Neb. 383 (19 N. W. 489); (1902) Rhea v. State, 63 Neb. 461 (88 N. W. 789).

776. (1895.) The charge is to be taken together, and when the instructions taken as a whole, without conflict or confusion, state the law, error cannot be predicated upon the fact that any one of them was in itself, and unexplained, incomplete and calculated to mislead. Carleton v. State, 43 Neb. 373 (61 N. W. 699); (1897) Bartley v. State, 53 Neb. 310 (73 N. W. 744); (1898)

777. (1895.) Instructions given to a jury should be construed together; and if, when so considered as a whole, they properly state the law, it is sufficient. Debney v. State, 45 Neb. 856 (64 N.W. 446; 34 L. R. A. 851); (1895) Ford v. State, 46 Neb. 390 (64 N. W. 1082); (1897) Hans v. State, 50 Neb. 150 (69 N. W. 838); (1897) Davis v. State, 51 Neb. 301 (70 N. W. 984); (1897) Mills v. State, 53 Neb. 263 (73 N. W. 761); (1899) Philamalee v. State, 58 Neb. 320 (78 N. W. 625); (1901) Clary v. State, 61 Neb. 688 (85 N. W. 897).

778. (1899.) Instructions should be considered as an entirety, and where they correctly state the law no criticism will be available which counts upon the fact that one instruction covers but a part of the entire ground. McVey v. State, 57 Neb. 471 (77 N. W. 1111).

779. (1899.) Two paragraphs of a charge to the jury, one immediately following the other, will be considered together, and treated as one, when they relate to a particular phase of the case, and each is plainly complemental of the other. Dunn v. State, 58 Neb. 807 (79 N. W. 719).

780. (1905.) An instruction is not prejudicially erroneous because it states some of the elements of the crime charged and omits others, when the other elements are correctly stated and defined in other instructions. Instructions must not contain conflicting statements, and when read and construed together must correctly state the law. Higbee v. State, 74 Neb. 331 (104 N. W. 748).

781. (1906.) It is not the true method of construing instructions to select detached portions thereof and consider them as independent of the whole of the charge to the jury. The correct rule of construction is that all that is said in the entire charge upon any one question shall be construed together, and if, when so construed, it is not inconsistent as a whole, and states the law correctly, no valid assignment of error can be predicated thereon. Reed v. State, 75 Neb. 509 (106 N. W. 649).

782. (1907.) Error cannot be successfully assigned for the giving of an instruction because it fails to cover all of the questions of law arising in a criminal prosecution if the instructions, when considered as a whole, fairly and correctly state the law applicable to the facts of the case as disclosed by the evidence. Clark v. State, 79 Neb. 473 (113 N. W. 211).

Error cured by withdrawal or giving other instructions.

783. (1901.) An instruction whereby the whole case is attempted to be covered, but which omits an essential element, is erroneous, and is not cured by another instruction which covers the point. Dobson v. State, 61 Neb. 584 (85 N. W. 843).

784. (1905.) An instruction which recites some of the essential elements of the crime charged and omits others, and tells the jury that the things recited in the instruction would constitute the crime, is erroneous and prejudicial, even though there was another instruction which contradicts it and correctly states the other things necessary to be shown to constitute guilt. Higbee v. State, 74 Neb. 331 (104 N. W. 748).

H. Request for Instructions.

Instruction on alibi in larceny, see Larceny, § 126.

Necessity in general.

785. (1882.) Before error can be predicated upon the failure of the judge to charge the jury upon a given point, he must be requested to do so. Gettinger v. State, 13 Neb. 308 (14 N. W. 403).

786. Mere non-direction by the trial court affords no ground for the reversal of a judgment unless proper instructions have been asked and refused. (1894) Hill v. State, 42 Neb. 503 (60 N. W. 916); Housh v. State, 43 Neb. 163 (61 N. W. 571); (1897) Johnson v. State, 53 Neb. 103 (73 N. W. 463); (1897) Mills v. State, 53 Neb. 263 (73 N. W. 761); (1898) Reynolds v. State, 53 Neb. 761 (74 N. W. 330); (1898) Maxfield v State, 54 Neb. 44 (74 N. W. 401).

787. (1895.) A statement made by the court in ruling upon certain evidence, that an instruction would be given as to the purpose for which such evidence might be considered by the jury, does not excuse a party from properly requesting such instruction at the proper time. Carleton v. State, 43 Neb. 373 (61 N. W. 699).

787*a*. (1908.) Under the proofs in this case, held it was not error for the court to omit to instruct as to the defense of insanity, no instruction having been requested by defendant on that point. Cate v. State, 80 Neb. 611 (114 N. W. 942).

——— Effect of attempt to escape.

788. (1903.) When no proper instruction has been requested, it is not prejudicial error for a trial court not to specially instruct the jury as to the law applicable to evidence tending to prove an attempt to escape by a prisoner accused of a crime. Williams v. State, 69 Neb. 402 (95 N. W. 1014).

——— Alibi.

789. (1897.) It is not reversible error to fail to instruct on the subject of an alibi, where no request to charge upon that feature of the case has been tendered. Ferguson v. State, 52 Neb. 432 (72 N. W. 590; 66 Am. St. Rep. 512); (1907) Heidelbaugh v. State, 79 Neb. 499 (113 N. W. 145).

——— Character of defendant.

790. (1903.) Non-instruction alone on the question of evidence of good character, in the absence of a proffered instruction correctly stating the law, is not reversible error. Sweet v. State, 75 Neb. 263 (106 N. W. 31).

——— Degrees of crime.

791. (1891.) It is not error for the court to neglect to instruct that they could find defendant guilty of a lesser offense than the one charged in the indictment, in the absence of a request therefor. Thurman v. State, 32 Neb. 224 (49 N. W. 338).

792. (1895.) In a prosecution for a felony error cannot be predicated upon the failure of the trial court to define a lesser offense included in the crime charged, unless requested so to do. Barr v. State, 45 Neb. 458 (63 N. W. 856).

——— Weight of testimony of detectives.

793. (1901.) Where no cautionary instruction has been requested with reference to the consideration of the testimony of witnesses employed as detectives, a defendant can not predicate error because of a failure to instruct the jury on that point. Kerr v. State, 63 Neb. 115 (88 N. W. 240).

——— Effect of failure of accused to testify.

794. (1895.) The omission of the trial court to instruct the jury that the failure of defendant to testify creates no presumption against him, is not a ground for reversal, where defendant did not request such an instruction. Metz v. State, 46 Neb. 547 (65 N. W. 190).

Further or more specific instructions.

795. (1894.) Where in a criminal case the trial court has correctly charged upon all of the questions presented at the trial, the fact that a single proposition might have been stated with greater precision in a single paragraph is no ground for reversal, particularly where the instructions given are a substantial compliance with the requests presented by the prisoner. Hill v. State, 42 Neb. 503 (60 N. W. 916).

796. (1896.) An assignment that an instruction in a criminal case was not sufficiently explicit may be overruled in the appellate court where accused failed to request an instruction more explicit than that given. Pjarrou v. State, 47 Neb. 294 (66 N. W. 422).

797. (1897.) A party cannot predicate error upon a vague instruction unless he has requested a proper one. Ferguson v. State, 52 Neb. 432 (72 N. W. 590; 66 Am. St. Rep. 512).

798. (1898.) A party cannot usually be heard to complain of the failure of the court to instruct upon a particular feature of the case where he has not requested a proper instruction upon the subject. Chezem v. State, 56 Neb. 496 (76 N. W. 1056); (1899) Philamalee v. State, 58 Neb. 320 (78 N. W. 625); (1903) Martin v. State, 67 Neb. 36 (93 N. W. 161).

799. (1901.) Before a party can complain of an instruction because not sufficiently specific, he must request an instruction covering the point. Dinsmore v. State, 61 Neb. 418 (85 N. W. 445); (1902) Musfelt v. State, 64 Neb. 445 (90 N. W. 237).

Instructions already given.

800. (1876.) It is not error to refuse to give correct instructions, if the court has already charged the jury substantially as asked. Curry v. State, 4 Neb. 545; (1878) Curry v. State, 5 Neb. 412; (1878) Clough v. State, 7 Neb. 320; (1879) St. Louis v. State, 8 Neb. 405; (1884) Binfield v. State, 15 Neb. 484 (19 N. W. 607); (1884) Marion v. State, 16 Neb. 349 (20 N. W. 289, 396); (1885) Bradshaw v. State, 17 Neb. 147 (22 N. W. 361); (1886) Marion v. State, 20 Neb. 233 (29 N. W. 911; 57 Am. Rep. 825); (1888) Carr v. State, 23 Neb. 749 (37 N. State*, 60 Neb. 480 (83 N. W. 665); (1901) Spaulding v. State, 61 Neb. 289 (85 N. W. 80); (1901) Coil v. State, 62 Neb. 15 (86 N. W. 925); (1901) Argabright v. State, 62 Neb. 402 (87 N. W. 146); (1902) Rhea v. State, 63 Neb. 461 (88 N. W. 789); (1902) McCormick v. State, 66 Neb. 337 (92 N. W. 740); (1903) Palmer v. State, 70 Neb. 136 (97 N. W. 235); (1905) Keeler v. State, 73 Neb. 441 (103 N. W. 64); (1907) Wheeler v. State, 79 Neb. 491 (113 N. W. 253).

801. (1883.) Where the instructions given to the jury are as favorable for the prisoner as those requested, a refusal is not error. Comstock v. State, 14 Neb. 205 (15 N. W. 355); (1899) Kastner v. State, 58 Neb. 767 (79 N. W. 713).

802. (1890.) No prejudicial error was committed in refusing the defendant's request on the presumption of innocence as the law on that subject had already been correctly stated in the instructions given. Miller v. State, 29 Neb. 437 (45 N. W. 451).

803. (1896.) Instructions, in a prosecution for larceny, on the weight as evidence of the testimony of certain detectives employed by the state, properly refused having been already given. Lawhead v. State, 46 Neb. 607 (65 N. W. 779).

804. (1903.) When the trial court gives an accurate, pertinent and intelligible instruction covering a particular point, it is not bound, at counsel's request, to give another instruction expressing the same idea in more perspicuous phrase. O'Brien v. State, 69 Neb. 691 (96 N. W. 649).

805. (1905.) It is not error to refuse to give instructions requested by the defendant on the law of self-defense, if the court has already by instructions given on his own motion properly submitted that question to the jury. Connolly v. State, 74 Neb. 340 (104 N. W. 754).

806. (1906.) Where the court on his own motion has correctly instructed the jury on all the issues presented by the record and evidence in a criminal case, it is not error to refuse to give the instructions requested by the defendant. Reed v. State, 75 Neb. 509 (106 N. W. 649).

Request by prosecuting attorney.

807. (1895.) A prosecuting attorney has the same right as counsel in a civil action to request instructions, and instructions given at the request of counsel are entitled to the same weight as instructions given by the court of its own motion. Dixon v. State, 46 Neb. 298 (64 N. W. 961).

Refusal of request.

808. (1878.) When instructions are refused, because substantially the same as those already given, it is not error, under our system of instructing juries, for the court to fail to give the reason for such refusal. Clough v. State, 7 Neb. 320.

Modification by court.

809. (1895.) It is error for the district court to modify an instruction requested, by interlineation or erasure, and thus give such an instruction. (Comp. Stats., ch. 19, sec. 53.) Tracey v. State, 46 Neb. 361 (64 N. W. 1069).

809*a*. (1907.) Where an instruction tendered by the defendant contains a statement not warranted by the evidence, it is not error for the court to modify the instruction by striking out such unwarranted statement, and give it as thus modified. Bridges v. State, 30 Neb. 91 (113 N. W. 1048).

I. Custody, Conduct and Deliberations of Jury.

In general.

810. (1884.) The fact that a man was seen to enter, through a window, a room in which a jury had been sent to deliberate, without proof that the jury were still in the room, will not invalidate a verdict subsequently returned by the jury, where it is shown by the testimony of the jurors that no person, other than the jurors and bailiff, entered the room in which the jury were actually confined during their deliberations. Hair v. State, 16 Neb. 601 (21 N. W. 464).

811. (1901.) Held, That the record discloses that the jury were in the custody of the sheriff during the entire progress of the trial. Bush v. State, 62 Neb. 128 (86 N. W. 1062).

812. (1907.) The fact that the officer in charge of a jury, in taking them to their boarding place, conducted them along the street where the crime was alleged to have been committed, was not such misconduct on the part of the jury as to require a reversal of the judgment. Crowell v. State, 79 Neb. 784 (113 N. W. 262).

Officer in charge.

813. (1903.) A deputy sheriff was a material witness for the state in a criminal prosecution for larceny; he also had charge of the jury during its deliberations. Held, That the fact of his having been called as a witness would not, of itself, disqualify him from serving in the latter mentioned capacity. Van Syoc v. State, 69 Neb. 520 (96 N. W. 266).

Separation.

814. (1871.) It is not error in a case of misdemeanor for the court, having instructed the jury, as is usual, not to hold conversation with any person, to permit the jurors to separate for their meals. Kruget v. State, 1 Neb. 365.

815. (1874.) Separation of jury is permitted under proper admonishment by the court. Caw v. State, 3 Neb. 357.

816. (1874.) Where the jury in a prosecution for murder separates, but do not leave the court room, and affidavits are filed showing that conversations had with spectators had no relation to the case on trial, the verdict will not be disturbed. Caw v. State, 3 Neb. 357.

817. (1878.) The court may, even in a capital case, permit the jury to separate during the adjournments of court, up to the final submission of the case to them. But when permitted to separate they should be admonished by the court as to their duty. Walrath v. State, 8 Neb. 80.

818. (1879.) By section 484 of the criminal code, the jury may, even in a capital case, in the discretion of the presiding judge, be permitted to separate during the trial up to the time the case is finally submitted to them. St. Louis v State, 8 Neb. 405.

819. (1901.) Separation of one of the jurors from the remainder of the jury while they were at meals, where he held no communication with any other person regarding the case, is not ground for new trial. Spaulding v. State, 61 Neb. 289 (85 N. W. 80).

Misconduct of jurors.

820. (1895.) A verdict should not be set aside because a juror, before the jury was sworn, was found with liquor in his possession, it not being established that he was intoxicated, or that after his acceptance as a juror he partook thereof. Carleton v. State, 43 Neb. 373 (61 N. W. 699).
