PREFACE

As this play was an old one, revised to some extent by Shakespeare in his 'prentice days, it is very seldom, if ever, read in secondary schools and Shakespeare clubs, or by other students and readers until they have become somewhat familiar with the dramatist. These and other minor reasons naturally affected my treatment of the play in the original edition of 1882, and have also had their influence in the present revision. The general plan of the new series has, however, been thoroughly carried out in both the introduction and the notes.

In the Appendix (pp. 229-232) I think I have settled the question whether Chettle, in his comments on Greene's Groatsworth of Wit, refers to Shakespeare (rather than one of the three dramatists whom Greene addresses) as "exelent in the qualitie he professes" and praised by "divers of worship" for "his facetious grace in writing."

EDWARD, PRINCE OF WALES

INTRODUCTION TO THE THIRD PART OF KING HENRY THE SIXTH

THE HISTORY OF THE PLAY

THE Second Part of Henry VI., like the First Part, was first printed, so far as we know, in the folio of 1623. The two plays, which are closely connected in their history, are recasts of two earlier plays, published in 1594 and 1595. These are entitled, respectively, "The First part of the Contention betwixt the two famous Houses of Yorke and Lancaster;" and "The true Tragedie of Richard Duke of Yorke, and the death of good King Henrie the Sixt, with the whole contention between the two Houses Lancaster and Yorke." Second editions of both these plays appeared in 1600; and in 1619 a third edition of the two together was issued with the title: "The Whole Contention betweene the two Famous Houses, Lancaster and Yorke." This last was said to be "Written by William Shakespeare, Gent."

About 3240 lines of these old plays appear either in the same or in an altered form in 2 and 3 Henry VI., the remainder of these latter, or about 2740 lines, being entirely new.

Various theories have been advanced with respect to the authorship of the earlier plays, and their relation to the later ones. Johnson, Steevens, Knight, Ulrici, Delius, and the Germans generally, contend that Shakespeare wrote both the earlier and the later plays.

Of the other theories, which assume a mixed authorship for all the plays, that of Miss Jane Lee seems, on the whole, the most plausible. She takes the ground that Marlowe and Greene (and possibly Peele) were the authors of the old plays; and that Shakespeare and Marlowe, working together, recast these into the later ones. In the old plays, the parts of King Henry, Cardinal Beaufort, York (many of whose speeches, however, are by Greene), Suffolk, the two Cliffords, and Richard are assigned by Miss Lee to Marlowe, "with the reservation that in certain scenes written by Greene the parts of these characters were written by Greene also;" while Duke Humphrey (in a measure), the Duchess Eleanor, Clarence, Edward IV., Elizabeth, Sir John Hume, and Jack Cade belong to Greene.

"The Third Part of Henry VI.," as Miss Lee remarks, "underwent a much less thorough revision than the Second. Out of 3075 lines in Part II. there are 1715 new lines, some 840 altered lines (many but very slightly altered), and some 520 old lines. In Part III., out of 2902 lines, there are about 1021 new lines, about 871 altered lines, and about 1010 old lines. Hence it is that in Part III. there are fewer resemblances of thought and verbal expression to Shakespeare's undoubted writings than in Part II."¹

There are difficulties in all the theories, and these multiply as we study the plays more minutely. It is not easy, on the one hand, to deny Shakespeare a share in the early plays. The humorous Jack Cade scenes in the Contention, for instance, are too good for Greene, to whom they must be ascribed if they are not Shakespeare's. Miss Lee admits that they are "almost too good" for Greene, and says that we see him here at his best, while we see him at his worst in the earlier comic parts of the play. On the other hand, some of the passages which appear for the first time in Henry VI. are more like Marlowe than Shakespeare.

The earliest known allusion to any of these plays, and one that has a significant bearing upon the question of their authorship, is in Greene's Groatsworth of Wit, a pamphlet written a short time before his death in September, 1592. In the parting words addressed "To those Gentlemen his Quondam acquaintance, that spend their wits in making Plaies," he says: "Yes, trust them not: for there is an vpstart Crow, beautified with our feathers, that, with his Tygers heart wrapt in a Players hide, supposes he is as well able to bumbast out a blanke verse as the best of you: and being an absolute Iohannes fac totum, is in his owne conceit the onely Shake-scene in a countrie." By "Shake-scene" it is certain that he meant Shakespeare; and the "Tygers heart," etc., is a parody of 3 Henry VI. i. 4. 137: "O tiger's heart wrapp'd in a woman's hide!" Some believe that the reference here is to Shakespeare as a player, and not as a writer; but the more probable meaning is that Shakespeare had borrowed from Greene and his friends, and that the line parodied was one of his plagiarisms.¹

As to the date of the plays, all that can be said is that the earlier ones at least must have been written before 1592, when Greene's Groatsworth of Wit was written; and the revision, if Marlowe had a hand in it, must have been made before his death in 1593. Even if the later plays are all Shakespeare's they cannot well be dated later than 1594, as they preceded Richard III. which was probably written in 1594 or 1595.

THE HISTORICAL SOURCES OF THE PLOT

The Contention and the True Tragedie appear to have been founded on Hall's Chronicle rather than Holinshed's; but in the revision of the plays the latter was also used, as the quotations in the Notes will show.

GENERAL COMMENTS ON THE PLAY

Knight, in his Essay on Henry VI. and Richard III., mentioned above, remarks:—

“Sir Walter Scott somewhere speaks, through one of his characters, of the ‘Lancastrian prejudices’ of Shakspeare. The great novelist had probably in his mind the delineation of Richard. But it would be difficult, we think, to have conducted the entire chronicle history of the Contention between the two famous Houses of York and Lancaster with more rigid impartiality. This just and tolerant view of human events and characters constitutes one of the most remarkable peculiarities of the mind of Shakspeare; and its manifestation in the dramas before us furnishes one of the many proofs, and to us not the least convincing, that they could alone have emanated from that mind. For, let us turn to the very first scenes of these dramas, and we shall find the character of the Lancastrian Margaret gradually displaying itself in an aptitude for bold and dangerous intrigue, founded upon her pride and impatience of a rival in authority. The Duchess of Gloster is tempted by her own weak ambition to meddle with the 'lime-twigs' that have been set for her. But it is the passionate hatred of Margaret, lending itself to schemes of treachery and bloodshed, that drives on the murder of the 'good Duke Humphrey.' With the accomplices of Margaret the retribution is instant and terrible. The banished Suffolk falls, not by the hand of the law, but by some mysterious agency which appears to have armed against him a power mightier than the law, which seizes upon its victim with an obdurate ferocity, and hurries him to death in the name of a wild and irregular justice. To the second great conspirator against the Protector the retribution is even more fearful — the death, not of violence, but of mental torture, far more terrible than any bodily pain. The 'Look, look, comb down his hair!' of Beaufort, speaks of sufferings far higher than those of the proud Suffolk, when the pirate had denounced him as 'Pole, puddle, kennel, sink, and dirt!' and he saw the prophecy of the 'cunning wizard' about to be accomplished. The justice which followed the other conspirator against Humphrey had not yet unsheathed its sword. His punishment was postponed till the battle-day of Wakefield.

“The scenes of the first four acts of the First Part of the Contention may appear to a superficial observation to be very slightly linked with the after-scenes of the great contest of the Roses. But it was the object of the poet to show the beginnings of faction, continued onward in the same form from the previous drama. The Protectorship was essentially a government of weakness, through the jealousies which it engendered and the intrigues by which it was surrounded. But the removal of the Protector left the government more weak, subjected as it then was to the capricious guidance of the imbecility of Henry and the violence of Margaret. Of such a rule popular commotions are the natural fruit. The author of the Contention, with a depth of political wisdom which Shakspeare invariably displays, has exhibited the insurrection of Cade, not as a revolt for specific objects, such as the removal of public oppressors or the redress of popular wrongs, but as a movement of the most brutal ignorance, instigated by a coarse ruffian, upon promises which could be realized in no condition of society, and for ends which proposed only such peace and security as would result from the overthrow of all rule and order. ‘You shall have seven halfpenny loaves for a penny, and the three-hooped pot shall have ten hoops, and it shall be felony to drink small beer,’ is the proper prologue to ‘Henceforward all things shall be in common, and in Cheapside shall my palfrey go to grass.’ The same political sagacity has given us the inconstancy, as well as the violence, of the multitude. Nor are these remarkable scenes an episode only in this great dramatic history. Cade perishes, but York is in arms. The civil war is founded upon the popular tumult.

“The civil war is begun. The Yorkists are in the field. The poet has delineated the character of their leader with a nice discrimination, and certainly without any of the coarseness of partisanship. He conveys to us that York is ambitious and courageous, but somewhat weak, and, to a great extent, a puppet in the hands of others. In the early scene in the Temple-garden his ambition is rashly discovered, in a war of words, commenced in accident and terminated in fruitless passion. That ambition first contents itself 'to be restored to my blood.' And when Henry grants this wish the submission of the half-rebel is almost groveling: —

'Thy humble servant vows obedience,
And humble service, till the point of death.'

The full development of his ambition is the result of his estimation of the character of Henry, and his sense of the advantage which he derives from the factions which grow out of an imbecile government. But he is still only a dissembler, exciting his fancies with some shadowy visions of a crown, lending himself to the dark intrigues of his natural and avowed enemies, and calling up the terrible agency of popular violence, reckless of any consequences so that confusion be produced: —

'From Ireland then comes York again
To reap the harvest which that coystrell sow'd.'

The schemes of York are successful, and he is at length in arms; but he still dissembles. When Buckingham demands 'the reason of these arms,' and addresses him as a 'subject, as I am,' his wounded pride has vent in the original play in a few words. But Shakspeare, in his additions to the sketch, has marked the inflated weakness of York's character by putting in his mouth words of 'sound and fury' which he is afraid to speak aloud:—

'O, I could hew up rocks, and fight with them,
I am so angry at these abject terms;
And now, like Ajax Telamonius,
On sheep or oxen could I spend my fury!
I am far better born than is the king,
More like a king, more kingly in my thoughts;
But I must make fair weather yet awhile,
Till Henry be more weak and I more strong.'

Passion, however, precipitates that decided movement which prudence would have avoided; and the battle of St. Alban's is the result.

"The poet has now fairly opened 'The purple testament of bleeding war.' Smothered dislikes are now to become scorching hatreds; and the domestic affections, bruised and wounded, are to be the stimulants of the most savage revenge. Shakspeare has, with wonderful knowledge of human nature, made the atrocities of Clifford spring from the very depths of his filial love. The original conception is found in the Contention; but its elaboration in the Second Part of Henry VI. is perhaps unsurpassed in beauty of expression by any passage of our matchless poet:—

'Wast thou ordain'd, dear father,
To lose thy youth in peace, and to achieve

The silver livery of advised age,
 And in thy reverence and thy chair days thus
 To die in ruffian battle? Even at this sight
 My heart is turn'd to stone; and while 't is mine
 It shall be stony.'

With this preparation the savage ferocity of Clifford in the murder of Rutland is rendered less revolting: 'Thy father slew my father, therefore die.' This is the key to his cold-blooded participation in the butchery of York: 'There 's for my oath, there 's for my father's death.'

"And what a real exhibition is this of the foulest crimes perpetrated under gentle impulses, where ill-regulated love and hate keep together as twin-sisters! But this is chivalry. Here, even the kindly affections have an aspect of intense selfishness; and 'fierce wars and faithful loves' spring from the same want of the principle of self-control, and the same ignorance of the duties of a large and comprehensive charity. The partisanship of chivalry, displaying itself in bold adventure and desperate courage, looks to be something high and glorious. But it is the same blind emanation of self-love as the factious partisanship of modern politics, in which the leader and the serf are equally indifferent to the justice of the quarrel, and equally regardless of the ends by which victory is to be achieved. Shakspeare has given us every light and shadow of the partisanship of chivalry in his delineation of the various characters in these two wonderful dramas. Apart and isolated from all active agency in the quarrel stands out the remarkable creation of Henry. The poet, with his instinctive judgment, has given the king a much higher character than the chroniclers assign to him. Their relations leave little doubt upon our minds that his imbecility was very nearly allied to utter incapacity; and that the thin partition between weakness and idiocy was sometimes wholly removed. But Shakspeare has never painted Henry under this aspect: he has shown us a king with virtues unsuited to the age in which he lived; with talents unfitted for the station in which he moved; contemplative amidst friends and foes hurried along by a distempered energy; peaceful under circumstances that could have no issue but in appeals to arms; just in thought, but powerless to assert even his own sense of right amidst the contests of injustice which hemmed him in. The entire conception of the character of Henry, in connection with the circumstances to which it was subjected, is to be found in the Parliament-scene of the Third Part of Henry VI. This scene is copied from the Contention, with scarcely the addition or alteration of a word. We may boldly affirm that none but Shakspeare could have depicted with such marvellous truth the weakness, based upon a hatred of strife — the vacillation, not of imbecile cunning, but of clear-sighted candour — the assertion of power through the influence of habit, but of a power trembling even at its own authority — the glimmerings of courage utterly extinguished by the threats of ‘armed men,' and proposing compromise even worse than war. We request our readers to peruse this scene in the Second Part of the Contention, and endeavour to recollect if any poet besides Shakspeare ever presented such a reality in the exhibition of a mind whose principles have no coherency and no self-reliance; one moment threatening and exhorting his followers to revenge, the next imploring them to be patient; now urging his rival to peace, and now threatening war; turning from the assertion of his title to acknowledge its weakness; and terminating his display of 'words, frowns, and threats' with 'Let me but reign in quiet while I live.' It was weakness such as this which inevitably raised up the fiery partisans that the poet has so wonderfully depicted; the bloody Clifford — the 'she-wolf of France' — the dissembling York — the haughty Warwick — the voluptuous Edward — and, last and most terrible of all, he that best explains his own character, 'I am myself alone.'

"One by one the partisans that are thus marshalled by the poet in the Parliament-scene of London are swept away by the steady progress of that justice which rides over their violence and their subtlety. The hollow truce is broken. Margaret is ready to assail York in his castle; York is prepared for the field, having learned from the precocious sophist Richard how an 'oath is of no moment.' Now are let loose all the 'dogs of war.' The savage Clifford strikes down the innocent Rutland; the more savage Margaret dips her napkin in his blood. York perishes under the prolonged retribution that awaited the ambition that dallied with murder and rebellion. Clifford, to whom nothing is so odious as 'harmful pity,' falls in the field of Towton, where the son was arrayed against the father, and the father against the son; and the king, more 'woe-begone' than the unwilling victims of ambition, moralizes upon the 'happy life' of the 'homely swain.' The great actors of the tragedy are changed. Edward and Richard have become the leaders of the Yorkists, with Warwick, 'the king-maker,' to rest upon. Henry has fled to Scotland; Margaret to France. Then is unfolded another leaf of that Sibylline book. Edward is on the throne, careless of everything but self-gratification; despising his supporters, offending even his brothers. Warwick takes arms against him; Clarence deserts to Warwick; Richard alone remains faithful, sneering at his brother, and laughing in the concealment of his own motives for fidelity. Edward is a fugitive, and finally a captive; but Richard redeems him, and Clarence again cleaves to him. The second revolution is accomplished. The 'king-maker' yields his 'body to the earth' in the field of Barnet; Margaret and her son become captives in the plains near Tewkesbury. Then comes the terrible hour to the unhappy queen—that hour which she foresaw not when she gave the 'bloody napkin' to the wretched York—that hour whose intensity of suffering reached its climax of expression in 'You have no children.' But Richard is fled 'To make a bloody supper in the Tower.' The three that stab the defenceless Edward equally desire another murder; but one is to do the work. It is accomplished."

SANDAL CASTLE

ACT I

SCENE I. London. The Parliament-house

Alarum. Enter the DUKE of YORK, EDWARD, RICHARD, NORFOLK, MONTAGUE, WARWICK, and Soldiers

Warwick. I wonder how the king escap'd our hands.

York. While we pursued the horsemen of the North,
He slyly stole away and left his men,
Whereat the great Lord of Northumberland,
Whose warlike ears could never brook retreat,
Cheer'd up the drooping army ; and himself,

Lord Clifford, and Lord Stafford, all abreast, Charg'd our main battle's front, and breaking in
 Were by the swords of common soldiers slain.

Edward. Lord Stafford's father, Duke of Buckingham, 10

Is either slain or wounded dangerously ;
 I cleft his beaver with a downright blow.
 That this is true, father, behold his blood.

[Showing his bloody sword.

Montague. And, brother, here's the Earl of Wilt-shire's blood, [To York, showing his.

Whom I encounter'd as the battles join'd.

Richard. Speak thou for me, and tell them what I did. [Throwing down the Duke of Somerset's head.

York. Richard hath best deserv'd of all my sons. —
 But is your grace dead, my Lord of Somerset?

Norfolk. Such hope have all the line of John of Gaunt !

Richard. Thus do I hope to shake King Henry's head. 20

Warwick. And so do I.— Victorious Prince of York,
 Before I see thee seated in that throne
 Which now the house of Lancaster usurps,
 I vow by heaven these eyes shall never close.
 This is the palace of the fearful king,
 And this the regal seat ; possess it, York,
 For this is thine, and not King Henry's heirs'.

York. Assist me, then, sweet Warwick, and I will ;
 For hither we have broken in by force.

Norfolk. We 'll all assist you ; he that flies shall die.

York. Thanks, gentle Norfolk. — Stay by me, my lords ; — www.libtool.com.cn 31

And, soldiers, stay, and lodge by me this night.

Warwick. And when the king comes, offer him no violence,

Unless he seek to thrust you out perforce. [They retire.]

York. The queen this day here holds her parliament, But little thinks we shall be of her council.

By words or blows here let us win our right.

Richard. Arm'd as we are, let 's stay within this house.

Warwick. The bloody parliament shall this be call'd, Unless Plantagenet, Duke of York, be king, 40

And bashful Henry depos'd, whose cowardice Hath made us bywords to our enemies.

York. Then leave me not, my lords ; be resolute. I mean to take possession of my right.

Warwick. Neither the king, nor he that loves him best,

The proudest he that holds up Lancaster, Dare stir a wing if Warwick shake his bells.

I 'll plant Plantagenet, root him up who dares. — Resolve thee, Richard ; claim the English crown.

[Warwick leads York to the throne, who seats himself.]

Flourish. Enter KING HENRY, CLIFFORD, NORTHUMBERLAND, WESTMORELAND, EXETER, and the rest

King Henry. My lords, look where the sturdy rebel sits, 50

Even in the chair of state ! belike he means,
 Back'd by the power of Warwick, that false peer,
 To aspire unto the crown and reign as king. —
 Earl of Northumberland, he slew thy father ;
 And thine, Lord Clifford ; and you both have vow'd revenge

On him, his sons, his favourites, and his friends.

Northumberland. If I be not, heavens be reveng'd on me !

Clifford. The hope thereof makes Clifford mourn in steel.

Westmoreland. What ! shall we suffer this ? let's pluck him down ;

My heart for anger burns, I cannot brook it. 60

King Henry. Be patient, gentle Earl of Westmoreland.

Clifford. Patience is for poltroons, such as he ;
 He durst not sit there had your father liv'd.
 My gracious lord, here in the parliament
 Let us assail the family of York.

Northumberland. Well hast thou spoken, cousin ; be it so.

King Henry. Ah, know you not the city favours them,
 And they have troops of soldiers at their beck ?

Exeter. But when the duke is slain, they'll quickly fly.

King Henry. Far be the thought of this from Henry's heart, 70

To make a shambles of the parliament-house !

Cousin of Exeter, frowns, words, and threats Shall be the war that Henry means to use. —

www.libtool.org [They advance to the duke.

Thou factious Duke of York, descend my throne,
And kneel for grace and mercy at my feet ;
I am thy sovereign.

York. I am thine.

Exeter. For shame, come down ; he made thee Duke of York.

York. 'T was my inheritance, as the earldom was.

Exeter. Thy father was a traitor to the crown.

Warwick. Exeter, thou art a traitor to the crown 80
In following this usurping Henry.

Clifford. Whom should he follow, but his natural king ?

Warwick. True, Clifford ; and that 's Richard, Duke
of York.

King Henry. And shall I stand, and thou sit in my throne ?

York. It must and shall be so. Content thyself.

Warwick. Be Duke of Lancaster ; let him be king.

Westmoreland. He is both king and Duke of Lancaster ;

And that the Lord of Westmoreland shall maintain.

Warwick. And Warwick shall disprove it. You forget

That we are those which chas'd you from the field, 90
And slew your fathers, and with colours spread March'd through the city to the palace gates.

Northumberland. Yes, Warwick, I remember it to my grief;

And, by his soul, thou and thy house shall rue it.

Westmoreland. Plantagenet, of thee, and these thy sons,

Thy kinsmen, and thy friends, I 'll have more lives Than drops of blood were in my father's veins.

Clifford. Urge it no more; lest that instead of words I send thee, Warwick, such a messenger As shall revenge his death before I stir. 100

Warwick. Poor Clifford! how I scorn his worthless threats!

York. Will you, we shew our title to the crown? If not, our swords shall plead it in the field.

King Henry. What title hast thou, traitor, to the crown?

Thy father was, as thou art, Duke of York;
Thy grandfather, Roger Mortimer, Earl of March.
I am the son of Henry the Fifth,
Who made the Dauphin and the French to stoop,
And seiz'd upon their towns and provinces.

Warwick. Talk not of France, sith thou hast lost it all. 110

King Henry. The lord protector lost it, and not I; When I was crown'd I was but nine months old.

Richard. You are old enough now, and yet, methinks, you lose. —

Father, tear the crown from the usurper's head.

Edward. Sweet father, do so; set it on your head.

Montague. Good brother, as thou lov'st and honour'st arms,

Let's fight it out, ~~and not stand cap~~illing thus.

Richard. Sound drums and trumpets, and the king will fly.

York. Sons, peace!

King Henry. Peace thou, and give King Henry leave to speak. 120

Warwick. Plantagenet shall speak first; hear him, lords,

And be you silent and attentive too,
For he that interrupts him shall not live.

King Henry. Think'st thou that I will leave my kingly throne,

Wherein my grandsire and my father sat?

No! first shall war unpeople this my realm;

Ay, and their colours — often borne in France,

And now in England, to our heart's great sorrow —

Shall be my winding sheet. — Why faint you, lords?

My title's good, and better far than his. 130

Warwick. Prove it, Henry, and thou shalt be king.

King Henry. Henry the Fourth by conquest got the crown.

York. 'T was by rebellion against his king.

King Henry. [Aside] I know not what to say; my title's weak. —

Tell me, may not a king adopt an heir?

York. What then?

King Henry. And if he may, then am I lawful king;

For Richard, in the view of many lords,
Resign'd the crown to Henry the Fourth,
Whose heir my father was, and I am his. 140

York. He rose against him, being his sovereign,
And made him to resign his crown perforce.

Warwick. Suppose, my lords, he did it unconstrain'd,
Think you 't were prejudicial to his crown ?

Exeter. No ; for he could not so resign his crown
But that the next heir should succeed and reign.

King Henry. Art thou against us, Duke of Exeter ?

Exeter. His is the right, and therefore pardon me.

York. Why whisper you, my lords, and answer not ?

Exeter. My conscience tells me he is lawful king.

King Henry. [Aside] All will revolt from me and turn to him. 151

Northumberland. Plantagenet, for all the claim thou lay'st,

Think not that Henry shall be so depos'd.

Warwick. Depos'd he shall be, in despite of all.

Northumberland. Thou art deceiv'd ; 't is not thy southern power,

Of Essex, Norfolk, Suffolk, nor of Kent,
Which makes thee thus presumptuous and proud,
Can set the duke up in despite of me.

Clifford. King Henry, be thy title right or wrong,
Lord Clifford vows to fight in thy defence. 160
May that ground gape and swallow me alive,
Where I shall kneel to him that slew my father !

King Henry. O Clifford, how thy words revive my heart!

York. Henry of Lancaster, resign thy crown. —

What mutter you, or what conspire you, lords?

Warwick. Do right unto this princely Duke of York,
Or I will fill the house with armed men,
And over the chair of state where now he sits
Write up his title with usurping blood.

[He stamps, and the soldiers show themselves.]

King Henry. My Lord of Warwick, hear me but one word:

170

Let me for this my lifetime reign as king.

York. Confirm the crown to me, and to mine heirs,
And thou shalt reign in quiet while thou liv'st.

King Henry. I am content; Richard Plantagenet,
Enjoy the kingdom after my decease.

Clifford. What wrong is this unto the prince your son!

Warwick. What good is this to England and himself!

Westmoreland. Base, fearful, and despairing Henry!

Clifford. How hast thou injur'd both thyself and us!

Westmoreland. I cannot stay to hear these articles.

Northumberland. Nor I.

Clifford. Come, cousin, let us tell the queen these news.

Westmoreland. Farewell, faint-hearted and degenerate king,

In whose cold blood no spark of honour bides.

Northumberland. Be thou a prey unto the house of York,

And die in bands for this unmanly deed!

Clifford. In dreadful war mayst thou be overcome,
Or live in peace abandon'd and despis'd!

[Exeunt Northumberland, Clifford, and Westmoreland.

Warwick. Turn this way, Henry, and regard them not.

Exeter. They seek revenge, and therefore will not yield. 190

King Henry. Ah, Exeter!

Warwick. Why should you sigh, my lord?

King Henry. Not for myself, Lord Warwick, but my son,

Whom I unnaturally shall disinherit. —

But be it as it may, I here entail

The crown to thee, and to thine heirs for ever;

Conditionally, that here thou take an oath

To cease this civil war, and whilst I live

To honour me as thy king and sovereign,

And neither by treason nor hostility

To seek to put me down and reign thyself. 200

York. This oath I willingly take and will perform.

[Coming from the throne.

Warwick. Long live King Henry! — Plantagenet, embrace him.

King Henry. And long live thou, and these thy forward sons!

York. Now York and Lancaster are reconcil'd.

Exeter. Accurs'd be he that seeks to make them foes! [Sennet. The Lords come forward.

York. Farewell, my gracious lord; I'll to my castle.

Warwick. And I'll keep London with my soldiers.

Norfolk. And I to Norfolk with my followers.

Montague. And I unto the sea from whence I came.

[Exeunt York and his Sons, Warwick, Norfolk, Montague, Soldiers, and Attendants.

King Henry. And I, with grief and sorrow, to the court. 210

Enter QUEEN MARGARET and the PRINCE OF WALES

Exeter. Here comes the queen, whose looks bewray her anger.

I'll steal away.

King Henry. Exeter, so will I. [Going.

Queen Margaret. Nay, go not from me; I will follow thee.

King Henry. Be patient, gentle queen, and I will stay.

Queen Margaret. Who can be patient in such extremes?

Ah, wretched man! would I had died a maid,
And never seen thee, never borne thee son,
Seeing thou hast prov'd so unnatural a father!
Hath he deserv'd to lose his birthright thus?
Hadst thou but lov'd him half so well as I,
Or felt that pain which I did for him once,
Or nourish'd him as I did with my blood,

Thou wouldst have left thy dearest heart-blood there
 Rather than have made that savage duke thine heir
 And disinherited thine only son.

Prince. Father, you cannot disinherit me.
 If you be king, why should not I succeed?

King Henry. Pardon me, Margaret; — pardon me, sweet son;

The Earl of Warwick and the duke enforc'd me.

Queen Margaret. Enforc'd thee! art thou king, and wilt be forc'd? 230

I shame to hear thee speak. Ah, timorous wretch!

Thou hast undone thyself, thy son, and me,
 And given unto the house of York such head
 As thou shalt reign but by their sufferance.
 To entail him and his heirs unto the crown,
 What is it but to make thy sepulchre
 And creep into it far before thy time?

Warwick is chancellor and the lord of Calais;
 Stern Faulconbridge commands the narrow seas;
 The duke is made protector of the realm; 240

And yet shalt thou be safe? such safety finds
 The trembling lamb environed with wolves.

Had I been there, which am a silly woman,
 The soldiers should have toss'd me on their pikes
 Before I would have granted to that act.

But thou preferr'st thy life before thy honour;
 And seeing thou dost, I here divorce myself,
 Both from thy table, Henry, and thy bed,
 Until that act of parliament be repeal'd

Whereby my son is disinherited. 250

The northern lords that have forsworn thy colours

Will follow mine if once they see them spread ;

And spread they shall be to thy foul disgrace

And utter ruin of the house of York.

Thus do I leave thee. — Come, son, let's away :

Our army is ready ; come, we'll after them.

King Henry. Stay, gentle Margaret, and hear me speak.

Queen Margaret. Thou hast spoke too much already ;
get thee gone.

King Henry. Gentle son Edward, thou wilt stay with me ?

Queen Margaret. Ay, to be murther'd by his enemies. 260

Prince. When I return with victory from the field

I'll see your grace ; till then I'll follow her.

Queen Margaret. Come, son, away ! we may not linger thus. [Exeunt Queen Margaret and the Prince.]

King Henry. Poor queen ! how love to me and to her son

Hath made her break out into terms of rage !

Reveng'd may she be on that hateful duke

Whose haughty spirit, winged with desire,

Will coast my crown, and like an empty eagle

Tire on the flesh of me and of my son.

The loss of those three lords torments my heart ; 270

I'll write unto them and entreat them fair. —

Come, cousin, you shall be the messenger.

Exeter. And I, I hope, shall reconcile them all.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II. Sandal Castle

Enter EDWARD, RICHARD, and MONTAGUE

Richard. Brother, though I be youngest, give me leave.

Edward. No; I can better play the orator.

Montague. But I have reasons strong and forcible.

Enter YORK

York. Why, how now, sons and brother! at a strife? What is your quarrel? how began it first?

Edward. No quarrel, but a slight contention.

York. About what?

Richard. About that which concerns your grace and us, —

The crown of England, father, which is yours.

York. Mine, boy? not till King Henry be dead. 10

Richard. Your right depends not on his life or death.

Edward. Now you are heir, therefore enjoy it now; By giving the house of Lancaster leave to breathe, It will outrun you, father, in the end.

York. I took an oath that he should quietly reign.

Edward. But for a kingdom any oath may be broken; I would break a thousand oaths to reign one year.

Richard. No; God forbid your grace should be forsworn.

York. I shall be, if I claim by open war.

Richard. I'll prove the contrary if you'll hear me speak. 20

York. Thou canst not, son; it is impossible.

Richard. An oath is of no moment, being not took Before a true and lawful magistrate
 That hath authority over him that swears.
 Henry had none, but did usurp the place;
 Then, seeing 't was he that made you to depose,
 Your oath, my lord, is vain and frivolous.
 Therefore, to arms! And, father, do but think
 How sweet a thing it is to wear a crown,
 Within whose circuit is Elysium 30
 And all that poets feign of bliss and joy.
 Why do we linger thus? I cannot rest
 Until the white rose that I wear be dyed
 Even in the lukewarm blood of Henry's heart.

York. Richard, enough; I will be king, or die. —
 Brother, thou shalt to London presently,
 And whet on Warwick to this enterprise. —
 Thou, Richard, shalt to the Duke of Norfolk,
 And tell him privily of our intent. —
 You, Edward, shall unto my Lord Cobham, 40
 With whom the Kentishmen will willingly rise.
 In them I trust; for they are soldiers,
 Witty, courteous, liberal, full of spirit. —
 While you are thus employ'd, what resteth more
 But that I seek occasion how to rise,
 And yet the king not privy to my drift,
 Nor any of the house of Lancaster?

Enter a Messenger

But stay. — What news? Why com'st thou in such post?

Messenger. The queen, with all the northern earls and lords,

Intend here to besiege you in your castle. 50

She is hard by with twenty thousand men,
And therefore fortify your hold, my lord.

York. Ay, with my sword. What! think'st thou that we fear them? —

Edward and Richard, you shall stay with me;
My brother Montague shall post to London.

Let noble Warwick, Cobham, and the rest,
Whom we have left protectors of the king,
With powerful policy strengthen themselves,
And trust not simple Henry nor his oaths.

Montague. Brother, I go; I'll win them, fear it not: 60

And thus most humbly I do take my leave. [Exit.

Enter SIR JOHN and SIR HUGH MORTIMER

York. Sir John and Sir Hugh Mortimer, mine uncles,

You are come to Sandal in a happy hour;
The army of the queen mean to besiege us.

Sir John. She shall not need; we'll meet her in the field.

York. What, with five thousand men?

Richard. Ay, with five hundred, father, for a need.
A woman-general! what should we fear?

Edward. I hear their drums; let's set our men in order,

And issue forth and bid them battle straight. 70

York. Five men to twenty!—though the odds be great,

I doubt not, uncle, of our victory.

Many a battle have I won in France

Whenas the enemy hath been ten to one;

Why should I not now have the like success?

[Alarum. Exeunt.

SCENE III. Plains near Sandal Castle

Alarums. Enter RUTLAND and his Tutor

Rutland. Ah! whither shall I fly to scape their hands?
Ah, tutor! look, where bloody Clifford comes.

Enter CLIFFORD and Soldiers

Clifford. Chaplain, away! thy priesthood saves thy life.

As for the brat of this accursed duke
Whose father slew my father, he shall die.

Tutor. And I, my lord, will bear him company.

Clifford. Soldiers, away with him!

Tutor. Ah, Clifford, murder not this innocent child,
Lest thou be hated both of God and man!

[Exit, forced off by Soldiers.

Clifford. How now! is he dead already? Or is it fear 10

That makes him close his eyes? — I 'll open them.

Rutland. So looks the pent-up lion o'er the wretch
That trembles under his devouring paws;
And so he walks, insulting o'er his prey,
And so he comes to rend his limbs asunder. —
Ah, gentle Clifford, kill me with thy sword,
And not with such a cruel threatening look.
Sweet Clifford, hear me speak before I die:
I am too mean a subject for thy wrath;
Be thou reveng'd on men, and let me live. 20

Clifford. In vain thou speak'st, poor boy; my father's blood

Hath stopp'd the passage where thy words should enter.

Rutland. Then let my father's blood open it again;
He is a man, and, Clifford, cope with him.

Clifford. Had I thy brethren here, their lives and thine
Were not revenge sufficient for me.

No; if I digg'd up thy forefathers' graves
And hung their rotten coffins up in chains,
It could not slake mine ire nor ease my heart.

The sight of any of the house of York 30

Is as a fury to torment my soul;
And till I root out their accursed line
And leave not one alive, I live in hell.
Therefore —

Rutland. O, let me pray before I take my death! —
To thee I pray; sweet Clifford, pity me!

Clifford. Such pity as my rapier's point affords.

Rutland. I never did thee harm; why wilt thou slay me?
www.libtool.com.cn

Clifford. Thy father hath.

Rutland. But 't was ere I was born.

Thou hast one son; for his sake pity me, 40

Lest in revenge thereof, sith God is just,

He be as miserably slain as I.

Ah, let me live in prison all my days,

And when I give occasion of offence,

Then let me die, for now thou hast no cause.

Clifford. No cause?

Thy father slew my father; therefore, die.

Rutland. Dii faciant laudis summa sit ista tuae!

[Dies.

Clifford. Plantagenet! I come, Plantagenet!

And this thy son's blood cleaving to my blade 50

Shall rust upon my weapon till thy blood

Congeval'd with this do make me wipe off both. [Exit.

SCENE IV. The Same

Alarum. Enter YORK

York. The army of the queen hath got the field.

My uncles both are slain in rescuing me;

And all my followers to the eager foe

Turn back and fly like ships before the wind,

Or lambs pursued by hunger-starved wolves.

My sons — God knows what hath bechanced them ;
 But this I know, — they have demean'd themselves
 Like men born to renown by life or death.
 Three times did Richard make a lane to me,
 And thrice cried ' Courage, father ! fight it out ! ' 10
 And full as oft came Edward to my side,
 With purple falchion painted to the hilt
 In blood of those that had encounter'd him ;
 And when the hardiest warriors did retire
 Richard cried ' Charge ! and give no foot of ground ! '
 And cried ' A crown, or else a glorious tomb !
 A sceptre, or an earthly sepulchre ! '
 With this, we charg'd again ; but, out, alas !
 We budg'd again, as I have seen a swan
 With bootless labour swim against the tide 20
 And spend her strength with overmatching waves.

[A short alarum within.

Ah, hark ! the fatal followers do pursue,
 And I am faint and cannot fly their fury ;
 And were I strong, I would not shun their fury.
 The sands are number'd that make up my life ;
 Here must I stay, and here my life must end. —

Enter QUEEN MARGARET, CLIFFORD, NORTHUMBER-LAND, and Soldiers

Come, bloody Clifford, rough Northumberland,
 I dare your quenchless fury to more rage.
 I am your butt, and I abide your shot.

Northumberland. Yield to our mercy, proud Plantagenet. 30

Clifford. Ay, to ~~such~~ ~~mercy~~ ~~as~~ ~~his~~ ruthless arm
With downright payment show'd unto my father.
Now Phaethon hath tumbled from his car,
And made an evening at the noontide prick.

York. My ashes, as the phœnix, may bring forth
A bird that will revenge upon you all ;
And in that hope I throw mine eyes to heaven,
Scorning whate'er you can afflict me with.
Why come you not ? — what ! — multitudes, and fear ?

Clifford. So cowards fight when they can fly no further ; 40

So doves do peck the falcon's piercing talons ;
So desperate thieves, all hopeless of their lives,
Breathe out invectives 'gainst the officers.

York. O, Clifford, but bethink thee once again,
And in thy thought o'errun my former time ;
And, if thou canst for blushing, view this face,
And bite thy tongue, that slanders him with cowardice
Whose frown hath made thee faint and fly ere this.

Clifford. I will not bandy with thee word for word,
But buckle with thee blows, twice two for one. 50

Queen Margaret. Hold, valiant Clifford ! for a thousand causes

I would prolong awhile the traitor's life. —

Wrath makes him deaf ; speak thou, Northumberland.

Northumberland. Hold, Clifford ! do not honour him so much

To prick thy finger, though to wound his heart.
 What valour were it, when a cur doth grin,
 For one to thrust his hand between his teeth,
 When he might spurn him with his foot away?
 It is war's prize to take all vantages,
 And ten to one is no impeach of valour. 60

[They lay hands on York, who struggles.

Clifford. Ay, ay; so strives the woodcock with the gin.

Northumberland. So doth the coney struggle in the
 net. [York is taken prisoner.

York. So triumph thieves upon their conquer'd booty;

So true men yield, with robbers so o'ermatch'd.

Northumberland. What would your grace have done unto him now?

Queen Margaret. Brave warriors, Clifford and Northumberland,

Come, make him stand upon this molehill here,
 That raught at mountains with outstretched arms,
 Yet parted but the shadow with his hand. —

What! was it you that would be England's king? 70

Was 't you that revell'd in our Parliament,
 And made a preachment of your high descent?

Where are your mess of sons to back you now?

The wanton Edward and the lusty George?

And where 's that valiant crook-back prodigy,

Dicky your boy, that with his grumbling voice

Was wont to cheer his dad in mutinies?

Or, with the rest, where is your darling Rutland?

Look, York ; I stain'd this napkin with the blood
 That valiant Clifford with his rapier's point 80
 Made issue from the bosom of the boy,
 And, if thine eyes can water for his death,
 I give thee this to dry thy cheeks withal.
 Alas, poor York ! but that I hate thee deadly
 I should lament thy miserable state.

I prithee, grieve to make me merry, York ;
 Stamp, rave, and fret, that I may sing and dance.
 What, hath thy fiery heart so parch'd thine entrails
 That not a tear can fall for Rutland's death ?
 Why art thou patient, man ? thou shouldst be mad ; 90
 And I, to make thee mad, do mock thee thus.
 Thou wouldst be feed, I see, to make me sport ;
 York cannot speak unless he wear a crown.—
 A crown for York ! — and, lords, bow low to him. —
 Hold you his hands whilst I do set it on. —

[Putting a paper crown on his head.]

Ay, marry, sir, now looks he like a king.
 Ay, this is he that took King Henry's chair ;
 And this is he was his adopted heir. —
 But how is it that great Plantagenet
 Is crown'd so soon and broke his solemn oath ? 100
 As I bethink me, you should not be king
 Till our King Henry had shook hands with Death.
 And will you pale your head in Henry's glory,
 And rob his temples of the diadem,
 Now in his life, against your holy oath ?
 O, 't is a fault too, too unpardonable. —

Off with the crown, and with the crown his head !
 And whilst we breathe take time to do him dead.

Clifford. That is my office, for my father's sake.

Queen Margaret. Nay, stay ; let's hear the orisons
 he makes. 110

York. She-wolf of France, but worse than wolves of France,

Whose tongue more poisons than the adder's tooth,
 How ill-beseeming is it in thy sex
 To triumph, like an Amazonian trull,
 Upon their woes whom fortune captivates !
 But that thy face is, vizard-like, unchanging,
 Made impudent with use of evil deeds,
 I would assay, proud queen, to make thee blush.
 To tell thee whence thou cam'st, of whom deriv'd,
 Were shame enough to shame thee, wert thou not shameless. 120

Thy father bears the type of King of Naples,
 Of both the Sicils and Jerusalem,
 Yet not so wealthy as an English yeoman.
 Hath that poor monarch taught thee to insult ?
 It needs not, nor it boots thee not, proud queen ;
 Unless the adage must be verified,
 That beggars mounted run their horse to death.
 'T is beauty that doth oft make women proud ;
 But, God he knows, thy share thereof is small.
 'T is virtue that doth make them most admir'd ; 130
 The contrary doth make thee wonder'd at.
 'T is government that makes them seem divine ;

The want thereof makes thee abominable.

Thou art as opposite to every good

As the Antipodes are unto us,

Or as the south to the Septentrion.

O tiger's heart wrapp'd in a woman's hide !

How couldst thou drain the life-blood of the child,

To bid the father wipe his eyes withal,

And yet be seen to bear a woman's face ?

Women are soft, mild, pitiful, and flexible ;

Thou stern, obdurate, flinty, rough, remorseless.

Bidd'st thou me rage ? why, now thou hast thy wish :

Wouldst have me weep ? why, now thou hast thy will ;

For raging wind blows up incessant showers,

And when the rage allays the rain begins.

These tears are my sweet Rutland's obsequies,

And every drop cries vengeance for his death,

'Gainst thee, fell Clifford, and thee, false Frenchwoman.

Northumberland. Beshrew me, but his passion moves me so

150

That hardly can I check my eyes from tears.

York. That face of his the hungry cannibals

Would not have touch'd, would not have stain'd with blood ;

But you are more inhuman, more inexorable,

O, ten times more, than tigers of Hyrcania.

See, ruthless queen, a hapless father's tears ;

This cloth thou dipp'dst in blood of my sweet boy,

And I with tears do wash the blood away.

Keep thou the napkin and go boast of this ;

And if thou tell'st the heavy story right, 160
 Upon my soul, the hearers will shed tears,
 Yea, even my foes will shed fast-falling tears
 And say 'Alas! it was a piteous deed.'—
 There, take the crown, and with the crown my curse;
 And in thy need such comfort come to thee
 As now I reap at thy too cruel hand!—
 Hard-hearted Clifford, take me from the world;
 My soul to heaven, my blood upon your heads!

Northumberland. Had he been slaughter-man to all my kin,

I should not, for my life, but weep with him, 170
 To see how inly sorrow gripes his soul.

Queen Margaret. What! weeping-ripe, my Lord Northumberland?

Think but upon the wrong he did us all,
 And that will quickly dry thy melting tears.

Clifford. Here's for my oath, here's for my father's death. [Stabbing him.]

Queen Margaret. And here's to right our gentle-hearted king. [Stabbing him.]

York. Open thy gate of mercy, gracious God!
 My soul flies through these wounds to seek out thee.

[Dies.]

Queen Margaret. Off with his head, and set it on York gates;

So York may overlook the town of York. 180

[Flourish. Exeunt.]

COSTUMES OF THE PERIOD

ACT II

SCENE I. A Plain near Mortimer's Cross in Herefordshire

A March. Enter EDWARD and RICHARD, with their Power

Edward. I wonder how our princely father scap'd,
Or whether he be scap'd away or no
From Clifford's and Northumberland's pursuit.
Had he been ta'en, we should have heard the news ;
Had he been slain, we should have heard the news ;
Or had he scap'd, methinks we should have heard
The happy tidings of his good escape. —
How fares my brother ? why is he so sad ?

Richard. I cannot joy, until I be resolv'd
Where our right valiant father is become. 10

I saw him in the battle range about,
And watch'd him how he singled Clifford forth.
Methought he bore him in the thickest troop
As doth a lion in a herd of neat ;
Or as a bear, encompass'd round with dogs,
Who having pinch'd a few and made them cry,
The rest stand all aloof and bark at him.
So far'd our father with his enemies ;
So fled his enemies my warlike father :
Methinks 't is pride enough to be his son. — 20

See how the morning opes her golden gates
And takes her farewell of the glorious sun !
How well resembles it the prime of youth,
Trimm'd like a younker prancing to his love !

Edward. Dazzle mine eyes, or do I see three suns ?

Richard. Three glorious suns, each one a perfect sun,
Not separated with the racking clouds,
But sever'd in a pale clear-shining sky.
See, see ! they join, embrace, and seem to kiss,
As if they vow'd some league inviolable ; 30
Now are they but one lamp, one light, one sun.
In this the heaven figures some event.

Edward. 'T is wondrous strange, the like yet never heard of.

I think it cites us, brother, to the field,
That we, the sons of brave Plantagenet,
Each one already blazing by our meeds,

Should, notwithstanding, join our lights together,
 And overshine the earth, as this the world.

Whate'er it bodes, henceforward will I bear
 Upon my target three fair shining suns. 40

Richard. Nay, bear three daughters; by your leave
 I speak it,
 You love the breeder better than the male. —

Enter a Messenger

But what art thou, whose heavy looks foretell
 Some dreadful story hanging on thy tongue?

Messenger. Ah, one that was a woeful looker-on Whenas the noble Duke of York was slain,
 Your princely father and my loving lord.

Edward. O, speak no more, for I have heard too much!

Richard. Say how he died, for I will hear it all.

Messenger. Environed he was with many foes, 50
 And stood against them as the hope of Troy
 Against the Greeks that would have enter'd Troy.
 But Hercules himself must yield to odds;
 And many strokes, though with a little axe,
 Hew down and fell the hardest-timber'd oak.
 By many hands your father was subdued,
 But only slaughter'd by the ireful arm
 Of unrelenting Clifford and the queen,
 Who crown'd the gracious duke in high despite,
 Laugh'd in his face, and when with grief he wept 60
 The ruthless queen gave him, to dry his cheeks,

A napkin steeped in the harmless blood
 Of sweet young Rutland, by rough Clifford slain.
 And, after ~~many scorns, many~~ foul taunts,
 They took his head, and on the gates of York
 They set the same ; and there it doth remain,
 The saddest spectacle that e'er I view'd.

Edward. Sweet Duke of York ! our prop to lean upon,
 Now thou art gone, we have no staff, no stay.
 O Clifford ! boisterous Clifford ! thou hast slain 70
 The flower of Europe for his chivalry ;
 And treacherously hast thou vanquish'd him,
 For hand to hand he would have vanquish'd thee.
 Now my soul's palace is become a prison.
 Ah, would she break from hence, that this my body
 Might in the ground be closed up in rest !
 For never henceforth shall I joy again,
 Never, O, never, shall I see more joy !

Richard. I cannot weep, for all my body's moisture Scarce serves to quench my furnace-burning heart ; 80
 Nor can my tongue unload my heart's great burthen,
 For selfsame wind that I should speak withal
 Is kindling coals that fires all my breast
 And burns me up with flames that tears would quench.
 To weep is to make less the depth of grief ;
 Tears, then, for babes, blows and revenge for me ! —
 Richard, I bear thy name ; I 'll venge thy death,
 Or die renowned by attempting it.

Edward. His name that valiant duke hath left with thee ;

His dukedom and his chair with me is left. 90

Richard. Nay, if thou be that princely eagle's bird,
Show thy descent by gazing 'gainst the sun ;
For chair and dukedom, throne and kingdom say,
Either that is thine, or else thou wert not his.

March. Enter WARWICK and MONTAGUE, with their Army

Warwick. How now, fair lords! What fare? what news abroad?

Richard. Great Lord of Warwick, if we should recount

Our baleful news, and at each word's deliverance
Stab poniards in our flesh till all were told,
The words would add more anguish than the wounds.
O, valiant lord, the Duke of York is slain! 100

Edward. O, Warwick! Warwick! that Plantagenet
Which held thee dearly as his soul's redemption
Is by the stern Lord Clifford done to death.

Warwick. Ten days ago I drown'd these news in tears,

And now, to add more measure to your woes,
I come to tell you things sith then befallen.
After the bloody fray at Wakefield fought,
Where your brave father breath'd his latest gasp,
Tidings, as swiftly as the posts could run,
Were brought me of your loss and his depart. 110
I, then in London, keeper of the king,
Muster'd my soldiers, gather'd flocks of friends,

And very well appointed, as I thought,
 March'd towards Saint Alban's to intercept the queen,
 Bearing the king in my behalf along;
 For by my scouts I was advertised
 That she was coming with a full intent
 To dash our late decree in parliament
 Touching King Henry's oath and your succession.
 Short tale to make, we at Saint Alban's met, 120
 Our battles join'd, and both sides fiercely fought;
 But, whether 't was the coldness of the king,
 Who look'd full gently on his warlike queen,
 That robb'd my soldiers of their heated spleen,
 Or whether 't was report of her success,
 Or more than common fear of Clifford's rigour,
 Who thunders to his captives blood and death,
 I cannot judge; but, to conclude with truth,
 Their weapons like to lightning came and went,
 Our soldiers' — like the night-owl's lazy flight, 130
 Or like an idle thrasher with a flail —
 Fell gently down, as if they struck their friends.
 I cheer'd them up with justice of our cause,
 With promise of high pay and great rewards,
 But all in vain; they had no heart to fight,
 And we in them no hope to win the day;
 So that we fled: the king unto the queen;
 Lord George your brother, Norfolk, and myself,
 In haste, post-haste, are come to join with you;
 For in the marches here, we heard, you were 140
 Making another head to fight again.

Edward. Where is the Duke of Norfolk, gentle Warwick?

And when came George from Burgundy to England?

Warwick. Some six miles off the duke is with the soldiers;

And for your brother, he was lately sent
From your kind aunt, Duchess of Burgundy,
With aid of soldiers to this needful war.

Richard. 'T was odds, belike, when valiant Warwick fled;

Oft have I heard his praises in pursuit,
But ne'er till now his scandal of retire. 150

Warwick. Nor now my scandal, Richard, dost thou hear;

For thou shalt know, this strong right hand of mine
Can pluck the diadem from faint Henry's head,
And wring the awful sceptre from his fist,
Were he as famous and as bold in war
As he is fam'd for mildness, peace, and prayer.

Richard. I know it well, Lord Warwick, blame me not;

'T is love I bear thy glories makes me speak.
But in this troublous time what 's to be done?

Shall we go throw away our coats of steel, 160

And wrap our bodies in black mourning-gowns,
Numbering our Ave-Maries with our beads?

Or shall we on the helmets of our foes
Tell our devotion with revengeful arms?

If for the last, say ay, and to it, lords.

Warwick. Why, therefore Warwick came to seek you out,

And therefore comes my brother Montague.
Attend me, lords. The proud insulting queen,
With Clifford and the haught Northumberland,
And of their feather many moe proud birds, 170
Have wrought the easy-melting king like wax.
He swore consent to your succession,
His oath enrolled in the parliament ;
And now to London all the crew are gone,
To frustrate both his oath and what beside
May make against the house of Lancaster.
Their power, I think, is thirty thousand strong ;
Now, if the help of Norfolk and myself,
With all the friends that thou, brave Earl of March,
Amongst the loving Welshmen canst procure, 180
Will but amount to five and twenty thousand,
Why, Via ! to London will we march amain,
And once again bestride our foaming steeds,
And once again cry ' Charge upon our foes !'
But never once again turn back and fly.

Richard. Ay, now, methinks, I hear great Warwick speak.

Ne'er may he live to see a sunshine day
That cries ' Retire,' if Warwick bid him stay.

Edward. Lord Warwick, on thy shoulder will I lean ;
And when thou fail'st — as God forbid the hour ! — 190
Must Edward fall, which peril heaven forefend !

Warwick. No longer Earl of March, but Duke of York.

The next degree is England's royal throne ;
For King of England shalt thou be proclaim'd
In every borough as we pass along,
And he that throws not up his cap for joy
Shall for the fault make forfeit of his head.

King Edward, — valiant Richard, — Montague, —
Stay we no longer dreaming of renown,
But sound the trumpets and about our task. 200

Richard. Then, Clifford, were thy heart as hard as steel,

As thou hast shown it flinty by thy deeds,
I come to pierce it, or to give thee mine.

Edward. Then strike up, drums ! — God and Saint George for us !

Enter a Messenger

Warwick. How now ! what news ?

Messenger. The Duke of Norfolk sends you word by me,

The queen is coming with a puissant host,
And craves your company for speedy counsel.

Warwick. Why then it sorts ; brave warriors, let 's away.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II. Before York

Flourish. www.libtool.com.cn
Enter KING HENRY, QUEEN MARGARET, the PRINCE OF WALES, CLIFFORD, and NORTHUMBERLAND, with drums and trumpets

Queen Margaret. Welcome, my lord, to this brave town of York.

Yonder 's the head of that arch-enemy
 That sought to be encompass'd with your crown ;
 Doth not the object cheer your heart, my lord ?

King Henry. Ay, as the rocks cheer them that fear their wrack ;

To see this sight, it irks my very soul. —
 Withhold revenge, dear God ! 't is not my fault,
 Nor wittingly have I infring'd my vow.

Clifford. My gracious liege, this too much lenity
 And harmful pity must be laid aside. 10

To whom do lions cast their gentle looks ?
 Not to the beast that would usurp their den.
 Whose hand is that the forest bear doth lick ?
 Not his that spoils her young before her face.
 Who scapes the lurking serpent's mortal sting ?
 Not he that sets his foot upon her back.
 The smallest worm will turn, being trodden on,
 And doves will peck in safeguard of their brood.
 Ambitious York did level at thy crown,
 Thou smiling while he knit his angry brows. 20
 He, but a duke, would have his son a king,

And raise his issue like a loving sire ;
 Thou, being a king, blest with a goodly son,
 Didst yield consent to disinherit him,
 Which argu'd thee a most unloving father.
 Unreasonable creatures feed their young ;
 And though man's face be fearful to their eyes,
 Yet, in protection of their tender ones,
 Who hath not seen them, even with those wings
 Which sometime they have us'd in fearful flight, 30
 Make war with him that climb'd unto their nest,
 Offering their own lives in their young's defence ?
 For shame, my liege ! make them your precedent.
 Were it not pity that this goodly boy
 Should lose his birthright by his father's fault,
 And long hereafter say unto his child,
 ' What my great-grandfather and grandsire got,
 My careless father fondly gave away ?'
 Ah, what a shame were this ! Look on the boy,
 And let his manly face, which promiseth 40
 Successful fortune, steel thy melting heart
 To hold thine own, and leave thine own with him.

King Henry. Full well hath Clifford play'd the orator,

Inferring arguments of mighty force.
 But, Clifford, tell me, didst thou never hear
 That things ill got had ever bad success ?
 And happy always was it for that son
 Whose father for his hoarding went to hell ?
 I 'll leave my son my virtuous deeds behind,

And would my father had left me no more ; 50
 For all the rest is held at such a rate
 As brings a thousand-fold more care to keep
 Than in possession any jot of pleasure. —
 Ah, cousin York, would thy best friends did know
 How it doth grieve me that thy head is here !

Queen Margaret. My lord, cheer up your spirits ; our foes are nigh,
 And this soft courage makes your followers faint.
 You promis'd knighthood to our forward son ;
 Unsheathe your sword and dub him presently. —
 Edward, kneel down. 60

King Henry. Edward Plantagenet, arise a knight ;
 And learn this lesson, — draw thy sword in right.

Prince. My gracious father, by your kingly leave,
 I'll draw it as apparent to the crown,
 And in that quarrel use it to the death.

Clifford. Why, that is spoken like a toward prince.

Enter a Messenger

Messenger. Royal commanders, be in readiness ;
 For with a band of thirty thousand men
 Comes Warwick, backing of the Duke of York,
 And in the towns, as they do march along, 70
 Proclaims him king, and many fly to him.
 Darraign your battle, for they are at hand.

Clifford. I would your highness would depart the field ;
 The queen hath best success when you are absent.

Queen Margaret. Ay, good my lord, and leave us to our fortune.

King Henry. Why, that's my fortune too; therefore I'll stay.

Northumberland. Be it with resolution then to fight.

Prince. My royal father, cheer these noble lords, And hearten those that fight in your defence. Unsheathe your sword, good father; cry, 'Saint George!'

March. Enter EDWARD, GEORGE, RICHARD, WARWICK, NORFOLK, MONTAGUE, and Soldiers

Edward. Now, perjur'd Henry, wilt thou kneel for grace,

And set thy diadem upon my head,
Or bide the mortal fortune of the field?

Queen Margaret. Go, rate thy minions, proud, insulting boy!

Becomes it thee to be thus bold in terms
Before thy sovereign and thy lawful king?

Edward. I am his king, and he should bow his knee. I was adopted heir by his consent;
Since when, his oath is broke, for, as I hear,
You, that are king, though he do wear the crown, 90
Have caus'd him, by new act of parliament,
To blot out me and put his own son in.

Clifford. And reason, too;
Who should succeed the father but the son?

Richard. Are you there, butcher? — O, I cannot speak!

Clifford. Ay, crook-back; here I stand, to answer thee,

Or any he ~~the proudest of thy~~ sort.

Richard. 'T was you that kill'd young Rutland, was it not?

Clifford. Ay, and old York, and yet not satisfied.

Richard. For God's sake, lords, give signal to the fight. 100

Warwick. What say'st thou, Henry, wilt thou yield the crown?

Queen Margaret. Why, how now, long-tongued Warwick! dare you speak?

When you and I met at Saint Alban's last,
Your legs did better service than your hands.

Warwick. Then 't was my turn to fly, and now 't is thine.

Clifford. You said so much before, and yet you fled.

Warwick. 'T was not your valour, Clifford, drove me thence.

Northumberland. No, nor your manhood that durst make you stay.

Richard. Northumberland, I hold thee reverently.

Break off the parley; for scarce I can refrain 110

The execution of my big-swoln heart

Upon that Clifford, that cruel child-killer.

Clifford. I slew thy father; call'st thou him a child?

Richard. Ay, like a dastard and a treacherous coward,
As thou didst kill our tender brother Rutland,
But ere sunset I 'll make thee curse the deed.

King Henry. Have done with words, my lords, and hear me speak.

Queen Margaret. ~~Defy them then~~ or else hold close thy lips.

King Henry. I prithee, give no limits to thy tongue ;
I am a king, and privileg'd to speak. 120

Clifford. My liege, the wound that bred this meeting here

Cannot be cur'd by words ; therefore be still.

Richard. Then, executioner, unsheathe thy sword.

By him that made us all, I am resolv'd
That Clifford's manhood lies upon his tongue.

Edward. Say, Henry, shall I have my right, or no ?
A thousand men have broke their fasts to-day
That ne'er shall dine unless thou yield the crown.

Warwick. If thou deny, their blood upon thy head ;
For York in justice puts his armour on. 130

Prince. If that be right which Warwick says is right,
There is no wrong, but every thing is right.

Richard. Whoever got thee, there thy mother stands ;
For, well I wot, thou hast thy mother's tongue.

Queen Margaret. But thou art neither like thy sire nor dam,

But like a foul misshapen stigmatic,
Mark'd by the destines to be avoided,
As venom toads or lizards' dreadful stings.

Richard. Iron of Naples hid with English gilt,
Whose father bears the title of a king, — 140
As if a channel should be call'd the sea, —

Sham'st thou not, knowing whence thou art extraught,
To let thy tongue detect thy base-born heart?

Edward. A wisp of straw were worth a thousand crowns

To make this shameless callat know herself. —

Helen of Greece was fairer far than thou,
Although thy husband may be Menelaus;
And ne'er was Agamemnon's brother wrong'd
By that false woman as this king by thee.

His father revell'd in the heart of France, 150
And tam'd the king, and made the dauphin stoop,

And, had he match'd according to his state,
He might have kept that glory to this day;

But when he took a beggar to his bed,
And grac'd thy poor sire with his bridal day,
Even then that sunshine brew'd a shower for him
That wash'd his father's fortunes forth of France
And heap'd sedition on his crown at home.

For what hath broach'd this tumult but thy pride?

Hadst thou been meek, our title still had slept, 160

And we, in pity of the gentle king,

Had slipp'd our claim until another age.

George. But when we saw our sunshine made thy spring,

And that thy summer bred us no increase,

We set the axe to thy usurping root;

And though the edge hath something hit ourselves,

Yet, know thou, since we have begun to strike,

We 'll never leave till we have hewn thee down

Or bath'd thy growing with our heated bloods.

Edward. And in this resolution I defy thee; 170

Not willing any longer conference, cn

Since thou deniest the gentle king to speak. —

Sound trumpets! — let our bloody colours wave,

And either victory or else a grave!

Queen Margaret. Stay, Edward.

Edward. No, wrangling woman, we 'll no longer stay;

These words will cost ten thousand lives this day.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III

A Field of Battle near Towton

Alarums. Excursions. Enter WARWICK

Warwick. Forspent with toil, as runners with a race,
I lay me down a little while to breathe;
For strokes receiv'd, and many blows repaid,
Have robb'd my strong-knit sinews of their strength,
And, spite of spite, needs must I rest awhile.

Enter EDWARD, running

Edward. Smile, gentle heaven, or strike, ungentle death!

For this world frowns and Edward's sun is clouded.

Warwick. How now, my lord? what hap? what hope of good?

Enter GEORGE

George. Our hap is loss, our hope but sad despair ;
Our ranks are broke and ruin follows us. 10
What counsel give you ? whither shall we fly ?

Edward. Bootless is flight, they follow us with wings ;
And weak we are and cannot shun pursuit.

Enter RICHARD

Richard. Ah, Warwick, why hast thou withdrawn thyself ?

Thy brother's blood the thirsty earth hath drunk,
Broach'd with the steely point of Clifford's lance ;
And in the very pangs of death he cried,
Like to a dismal clangour heard from far,
' Warwick, revenge ! brother, revenge my death !'
So, underneath the belly of their steeds 20
That stain'd their fetlocks in his smoking blood,
The noble gentleman gave up the ghost.

Warwick. Then let the earth be drunken with our blood ;
I 'll kill my horse, because I will not fly.
Why stand we like soft-hearted women here,
Wailing our losses whiles the foe doth rage,
And look upon, as if the tragedy
Were play'd in jest by counterfeiting actors ?
Here on my knee I vow to God above,
I 'll never pause again, never stand still, 30
Till either death hath clos'd these eyes of mine,

Or fortune given me measure of revenge.

Edward. O Warwick, I do bend my knee with thine,
 And in this vow do chain my soul to thine! —
 And, ere my knee rise from the earth's cold face,
 I throw my hands, mine eyes, my heart to thee,
 Thou setter-up and plucker-down of kings,
 Beseeching thee, if with thy will it stands
 That to my foes this body must be prey,
 Yet that thy brazen gates of heaven may ope, 40
 And give sweet passage to my sinful soul. —
 Now, lords, take leave until we meet again,
 Where'er it be, in heaven or in earth.

Richard. Brother, give me thy hand; — and, gentle
 Warwick,
 Let me embrace thee in my weary arms.
 I, that did never weep, now melt with woe,
 That winter should cut off our spring-time so.

Warwick. Away, away! Once more, sweet lords, farewell.

George. Yet let us all together to our troops,
 And give them leave to fly that will not stay, 50
 And call them pillars that will stand to us;
 And if we thrive, promise them such rewards
 As victors wear at the Olympian games.
 This may plant courage in their quailing breasts,
 For yet is hope of life and victory. —
 Forslow no longer; make we hence amain. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV

~~www.Alibon.com~~ Another Part of the FieldExcursions. Enter RICHARD and CLIFFORD

Richard. Now, Clifford, I have singled thee alone.
 Suppose this arm is for the Duke of York,
 And this for Rutland; both bound to revenge,
 Wert thou environ'd with a brazen wall.

Clifford. Now, Richard, I am with thee here alone.
 This is the hand that stabb'd thy father York,
 And this the hand that slew thy brother Rutland;
 And here 's the heart that triumphs in their death,
 And cheers these hands that slew thy sire and brother
 To execute the like upon thyself; 10
 And so have at thee.

[They fight. Warwick enters; Clifford flies.

Richard. Nay, Warwick, single out some other chase;
 For I myself will hunt this wolf to death. [Exeunt.

SCENE V

Another Part of the FieldAlarum. Enter KING HENRY

King Henry. This battle fares like to the morning's war,
 When dying clouds contend with growing light,
 What time the shepherd, blowing of his nails,

Can neither call it perfect day nor night.
 Now sways it this way, like a mighty sea
 Forc'd by the tide to combat with the wind ;
 Now sways it that way, like the selfsame sea
 Forc'd to retire by fury of the wind.
 Sometime the flood prevails, and then the wind,
 Now one the better, then another best, 10
 Both tugging to be victors, breast to breast,
 Yet neither conqueror nor conquered ;
 So is the equal poise of this fell war.
 Here on this molehill will I sit me down.
 To whom God will, there be the victory !
 For Margaret my queen, and Clifford too,
 Have chid me from the battle, swearing both
 They prosper best of all when I am thence.
 Would I were dead ! if God's good will were so ;
 For what is in this world but grief and woe ? 20
 O God ! methinks it were a happy life,
 To be no better than a homely swain ;
 To sit upon a hill, as I do now,
 To carve out dials quaintly, point by point,
 Thereby to see the minutes how they run,
 How many make the hour full complete,
 How many hours bring about the day,
 How many days will finish up the year,
 How many years a mortal man may live.
 When this is known, then to divide the times : 30
 So many hours must I tend my flock ;
 So many hours must I take my rest ;

So many hours must I contemplate ;
 So many hours must I sport myself ;
 So many days my ewes have been with young ;
 So many weeks ere the poor fools will ean ;
 So many years ere I shall shear the fleece.
 So minutes, hours, days, months, and years,
 Pass'd over to the end they were created,
 Would bring white hairs unto a quiet grave. 40
 Ah, what a life were this ! how sweet ! how lovely !
 Gives not the hawthorn bush a sweeter shade
 To shepherds looking on their silly sheep
 Than doth a rich embroider'd canopy
 To kings that fear their subjects' treachery ?
 O, yes, it doth ; a thousand-fold it doth !
 And to conclude, the shepherd's homely curds,
 His cold thin drink out of his leather bottle,
 His wonted sleep under a fresh tree's shade,
 All which secure and sweetly he enjoys, 50
 Is far beyond a prince's delicates,
 His viands sparkling in a golden cup,
 His body couched in a curious bed,
 When care, mistrust, and treason wait on him.

Alarum. Enter a Son that hath killed his father, bringing in the dead body

Son. Ill blows the wind that profits nobody.
 This man, whom hand to hand I slew in fight,
 May be possessed with some store of crowns ;
 And I, that haply take them from him now,

May yet ere night yield both my life and them
 To some man else, as this dead man doth me. — 60
 Who 's this? — O God! it is my father's face,
 Whom in this conflict I unwares have kill'd.
 O heavy times, begetting such events!
 From London by the king was I press'd forth;
 My father, being the Earl of Warwick's man,
 Came on the part of York, press'd by his master;
 And I, who at his hands receiv'd my life,
 Have by my hands of life bereaved him. —
 Pardon me, God, I knew not what I did; —
 And pardon, father, for I knew not thee. — 70
 My tears shall wipe away these bloody marks,
 And no more words till they have flow'd their fill.

King Henry. O piteous spectacle! O bloody times!
 Whiles lions war and battle for their dens,
 Poor harmless lambs abide their enmity.
 Weep, wretched man, I'll aid thee tear for tear;
 And let our hearts and eyes, like civil war,
 Be blind with tears, and break o'ercharg'd with grief.

Enter a Father who has killed his son, with the body in his arms

Father. Thou that so stoutly hast resisted me,
 Give me thy gold, if thou hast any gold, 80
 For I have bought it with an hundred blows. —
 But let me see; — is this our foeman's face?
 Ah, no, no, no! it is mine only son! —
 Ah, boy! if any life be left in thee,

Throw up thine eye ; see, see, what showers arise,
Blown with the windy tempest of my heart,
Upon thy wounds that kill mine eye and heart ! —

O, pity, God, this miserable age ! —

What stratagems, how fell, how butcherly,

Erroneous, mutinous, and unnatural,

90

This deadly quarrel daily doth beget ! —

O boy, thy father gave thee life too soon,

And hath bereft thee of thy life too late !

King Henry. Woe above woe ! grief more than common grief !

O that my death would stay these ruthful deeds ! —

O, pity, pity ! gentle heaven, pity ! —

The red rose and the white are on his face,

The fatal colours of our striving houses ;

The one his purple blood right well resembles,

The other his pale cheeks, methinks, presenteth.

100

Wither one rose, and let the other flourish !

If you contend, a thousand lives must wither.

Son. How will my mother, for a father's death.

Take on with me and ne'er be satisfied !

Father. How will my wife, for slaughter of my son,

Shed seas of tears and ne'er be satisfied !

King Henry. How will the country, for these woful chances,

Misthink the king and not be satisfied !

Son. Was ever son so rued a father's death ?

Father. Was ever father so bemoan'd his son ?

110

King Henry. Was ever king so griev'd for subjects' woe?

Much is your sorrow, mine ten times so much.

Son. I'll bear thee hence, where I may weep my fill.
[Exit with the body.]

Father. These arms of mine shall be thy winding-sheet;

My heart, sweet boy, shall be thy sepulchre,
For from my heart thine image ne'er shall go;
My sighing breast shall be thy funeral bell;
And so obsequious will thy father be,
E'en for the loss of thee, having no more,
As Priam was for all his valiant sons.

120

I'll bear thee hence; and let them fight that will,
For I have murther'd where I should not kill.

[Exit with the body.]

King Henry. Sad-hearted men, much overgone with care,

Here sits a king more woful than you are.

*Alarums. Excursions. Enter QUEEN MARGARET,
PRINCE OF WALES, and EXETER*

Prince. Fly, father, fly! for all your friends are fled,
And Warwick rages like a chafed bull.
Away! for death doth hold us in pursuit.

Queen Margaret. Mount you, my lord; towards Berwick post amain.

Edward and Richard, like a brace of greyhounds,
Having the fearful flying hare in sight,

130

With fiery eyes, sparkling for very wrath,
 And bloody steel grasp'd in their ireful hands,
 Are at our backs; and therefore hence amain.

Exeter. Away! for vengeance comes along with them.

Nay, stay not to expostulate; make speed,
 Or else come after; I'll away before.

King Henry. Nay, take me with thee, good sweet Exeter;

Not that I fear to stay, but love to go
 Whither the queen intends. Forward! away! [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI. Another Part of the Field

A loud alarum. Enter CLIFFORD, wounded

Clifford. Here burns my candle out; ay, here it dies,
 Which whiles it lasted gave King Henry light.
 O Lancaster! I fear thy overthrow
 More than my body's parting with my soul!
 My love and fear glued many friends to thee;
 And, now I fall, thy tough commixtures melt,
 Impairing Henry, strengthening mis-proud York.
 The common people swarm like summer flies;
 And whither fly the gnats but to the sun?
 And who shines now but Henry's enemies?
 O Phœbus, hadst thou never given consent
 That Phaethon should check thy fiery steeds,
 Thy burning car never had scorch'd the earth!
 And, Henry, hadst thou sway'd as kings should do,

Or as thy father and his father did,
 Giving no ground unto the house of York,
 They never then had sprung like summer flies ;
 I, and ten thousand in this luckless realm,
 Had left no mourning widows for our death,
 And thou this day hadst kept thy chair in peace. 20
 For what doth cherish weeds but gentle air ?
 And what makes robbers bold but too much lenity ?
 Bootless are complaints, and cureless are my wounds ;
 No way to fly, nor strength to hold out flight.
 The foe is merciless and will not pity,
 For at their hands I have deserv'd no pity.
 The air hath got into my deadly wounds,
 And much effuse of blood doth make me faint. —
 Come, York, and Richard, Warwick, and the rest ;
 I stabb'd your fathers' bosoms, split my breast. 30
[He faints.

Alarum and retreat. Enter EDWARD, GEORGE, RICHARD, MONTAGUE, WARWICK, and Soldiers

Edward. Now breathe we, lords ; good fortune bids us pause,
 And smooth the frowns of war with peaceful looks. —
 Some troops pursue the bloody-minded queen,
 That led calm Henry, though he were a king,
 As doth a sail, fill'd with a fretting gust,
 Command an argosy to stem the waves.
 But think you, lords, that Clifford fled with them ?
Warwick. No, 't is impossible he should escape ;

For, though before his face I speak the words,
 Your brother Richard mark'd him for the grave, 40
 And wheresoe'er he is he's surely dead.

[Clifford groans and dies.]

Edward. Whose soul is that which takes her heavy leave?

Richard. A deadly groan, like life and death's departing.

Edward. See who it is ; and, now the battle's ended,
 If friend or foe, let him be gently us'd.

Richard. Revoke that doom of mercy, for 't is Clifford,

Who, not contented that he lopp'd the branch,
 In hewing Rutland when his leaves put forth,
 But set his murdering knife unto the root
 From whence that tender spray did sweetly spring ; 50
 I mean our princely father, Duke of York.

Warwick. From off the gates of York fetch down the head,
 Your father's head, which Clifford placed there ;
 Instead whereof, let this supply the room.
 Measure for measure must be answered.

Edward. Bring forth that fatal screech-owl to our house,
 That nothing sung but death to us and ours ;
 Now death shall stop his dismal threatening sound,
 And his ill-boding tongue no more shall speak.

[Soldiers bring the body forward.]

Warwick. I think his understanding is bereft. — 60

Speak, Clifford, dost thou know who speaks to thee? —
Dark cloudy death o'ershades his beams of life,
And he nor sees, nor hears us, what we say.

Richard. O, would he did! and so, perhaps, he doth;
'T is but his policy to counterfeit,
Because he would avoid such bitter taunts
Which in the time of death he gave our father.

George. If so thou think'st, vex him with eager words.

Richard. Clifford, ask mercy, and obtain no grace.

Edward. Clifford, repent in bootless penitence. 70

Warwick. Clifford, devise excuses for thy faults.

George. While we devise fell tortures for thy faults.

Richard. Thou didst love York, and I am son to York.

Edward. Thou pitiedst Rutland, I will pity thee.

George. Where's Captain Margaret to fence you now?

Warwick. They mock thee, Clifford; swear as thou wast wont.

Richard. What! not an oath? nay then, the world goes hard

When Clifford cannot spare his friends an oath. —

I know by that he 's dead; and, by my soul,

If this right hand would buy two hours' life, 80

That I in all despite might rail at him,

This hand should chop it off, and with the issuing
blood

Stifle the villain whose unstanched thirst

York and young Rutland could not satisfy.

Warwick. Ay, but he 's dead. Off with the traitor's
head,

And rear it in the place your father's stands. —

And now to London with triumphant march,
There to be crowned England's royal king ;
From whence shall Warwick cut the sea to France,
And ask the Lady Bona for thy queen. 90

So shalt thou sinew both these lands together,
And, having France thy friend, thou shalt not dread
The scatter'd foe that hopes to rise again ;
For though they cannot greatly sting to hurt,
Yet look to have them buzz to offend thine ears.
First will I see the coronation,
And then to Brittany I 'll cross the sea,
To effect this marriage, so it please my lord.

Edward. Even as thou wilt, sweet Warwick, let it be ;
For in thy shoulder do I build my seat, 100
And never will I undertake the thing
Wherein thy counsel and consent is wanting. —
Richard, I will create thee Duke of Gloster ; —
And George, of Clarence. — Warwick, as ourself, Shall do and undo as him pleaseth best.

Richard. Let me be Duke of Clarence, George of Gloster,
For Gloster's dukedom is too ominous.

Warwick. Tut ! that 's a foolish observation ;
Richard, be Duke of Gloster. Now to London, 109
To see these honours in possession. [Exeunt.

CHASE IN THE NORTH

ACT III

SCENE I. A Forest in the North of England

Enter two Keepers, with crossbows in their hands

1 Keeper. Under this thick-grown brake we'll shroud ourselves ;

For through this laund anon the deer will come,
And in this covert will we make our stand,
Culling the principal of all the deer.

2 Keeper. I'll stay above the hill, so both may shoot.

1 Keeper. That cannot be ; the noise of thy crossbow
Will scare the herd, and so my shoot is lost.

Here stand we both, and aim we at the best ;
 And, for the time shall not seem tedious,
 I 'll tell thee what befell me on a day 10
 In this self place where now we mean to stand.

2 Keeper. Here comes a man ; let 's stay till he be past.

Enter KING HENRY, disguised, with a prayer-book

King Henry. From Scotland am I stolen, even of pure love,
 To greet mine own land with my wishful sight.
 No, Harry, Harry, 't is no land of thine ;
 Thy place is fill'd, thy sceptre wrung from thee,
 Thy balm wash'd off wherewith thou wast anointed.
 No bending knee will call thee Cæsar now,
 No humble suitors press to speak for right ;
 No, not a man comes for redress of thee, 20
 For how can I help them, and not myself ?

1 Keeper. Ay, here 's a deer whose skin 's a keeper's fee.

This is the quondam king ; let 's seize upon him.

King Henry. Let me embrace thee, sour adversity ;
 For wise men say it is the wisest course.

2 Keeper. Why linger we ? let us lay hands upon him.

1 Keeper. Forbear awhile ; we 'll hear a little more.

King Henry. My queen and son are gone to France for aid ;

And, as I hear, the great commanding Warwick

Is thither gone, to crave the French king's sister 30
 To wife for Edward. If this news be true,
 Poor queen and son, your labour is but lost,
 For Warwick is a subtle orator,
 And Lewis a prince soon won with moving words.
 By this account then Margaret may win him,
 For she's a woman to be pitied much.
 Her sighs will make a battery in his breast,
 Her tears will pierce into a marble heart ;
 The tiger will be mild whiles she doth mourn,
 And Nero will be tainted with remorse 40
 To hear and see her plaints, her brinish tears.
 Ay, but she's come to beg, Warwick to give ;
 She on his left side craving aid for Henry,
 He on his right asking a wife for Edward.
 She weeps and says her Henry is depos'd,
 He smiles and says his Edward is install'd ;
 That she, poor wretch, for grief can speak no more,
 Whiles Warwick tells his title, smooths the wrong,
 Inferreth arguments of mighty strength,
 And, in conclusion, wins the king from her, 50
 With promise of his sister, and what else,
 To strengthen and support King Edward's place.
 O Margaret, thus 't will be ! and thou, poor soul,
 Art then forsaken, as thou went'st forlorn.

2 Keeper. Say, what art thou, that talk'st of kings and queens ?

King Henry. More than I seem, and less than I was born to ;

A man at least, for less I could not be ;
 And men may talk of kings, and why not I ?

2 Keeper. Ay, but thou talk'st as if thou wert a king.

King Henry. Why, so I am, in mind ; and that's enough. 60

2 Keeper. But, if thou be a king, where is thy crown ?

King Henry. My crown is in my heart, not on my head,

Not deck'd with diamonds and Indian stones,
 Nor to be seen ; my crown is call'd content,
 A crown it is that seldom kings enjoy.

2 Keeper. Well, if you be a king crown'd with content,
 Your crown content and you must be contented
 To go along with us ; for, as we think,
 You are the king King Edward hath depos'd,
 And we his subjects, sworn in all allegiance, 70
 Will apprehend you as his enemy.

King Henry. But did you never swear, and break an oath ?

2 Keeper. No, never such an oath, nor will not now.

King Henry. Where did you dwell when I was King of England ?

2 Keeper. Here in this country, where we now remain.

King Henry. I was anointed king at nine months old,
 My father and my grandfather were kings,
 And you were sworn true subjects unto me ;
 And tell me, then, have you not broke your oaths ?

I Keeper. No ; 80

For we were subjects but while you were king.

King Henry. Why, am I dead? do I not breathe, a man?

Ah, simple men! you know not what you swear.

Look, as I blow this feather from my face,

And as the air blows it to me again,

Obeying with my wind when I do blow,

And yielding to another when it blows,

Commanded always by the greater gust,

Such is the lightness of you common men.

But do not break your oaths; for of that sin 90

My mild entreaty shall not make you guilty.

Go where you will, the king shall be commanded;

And be you kings, command, and I'll obey.

I Keeper. We are true subjects to the king, — King Edward.

King Henry. So would you be again to Henry

If he were seated as King Edward is.

I Keeper. We charge you, in God's name and the king's

To go with us unto the officers.

King Henry. In God's name lead; your king's name be obey'd;

And what God will, that let your king perform; 100

And what he will, I humbly yield unto. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. The Palace

Enter KING EDWARD, GLOSTER, CLARENCE, and LADY GREY

King Edward. Brother of Gloster, at Saint Alban's field

This lady's husband, Sir John Grey, was slain,
His lands then seiz'd on by the conqueror ;
Her suit is now to repossess those lands,
Which we in justice cannot well deny,
Because in quarrel of the house of York
The worthy gentleman did lose his life.

Gloster. Your highness shall do well to grant her suit ;

It were dishonour to deny it her.

King Edward. It were no less ; but yet I 'll make a pause.

Gloster. [Aside to Clarence] Yea ; is it so ? II

I see the lady hath a thing to grant
Before the king will grant her humble suit.

Clarence. [Aside to Gloster] He knows the game ;
how true he keeps the wind !

Gloster. [Aside to Clarence] Silence !

King Edward. Widow, we will consider of your suit,
And come some other time to know our mind.

Lady Grey. Right gracious lord, I cannot brook delay ;

May it please your highness to resolve me now,
And what your pleasure is shall satisfy me.

Gloster. [Aside to Clarence] Ay, widow? then I'll warrant you all your lands,

An if what pleases ~~whim shall~~ pleasure you.

Fight closer, or, good faith, you'll catch a blow.

Clarence. [Aside to Gloster] I fear her not, unless she chance to fall.

Gloster. [Aside to Clarence] God forbid that, for he'll take vantages.

King Edward. How many children hast thou, widow? tell me.

Clarence. [Aside to Gloster] I think he means to beg a child of her.

Gloster. [Aside to Clarence] Nay, whip me then; he'll rather give her two.

Lady Grey. Three, my most gracious lord.

Gloster. [Aside to Clarence] You shall have four if you'll be rul'd by him. 30

King Edward. 'T were pity they should lose their father's lands.

Lady Grey. Be pitiful, dread lord, and grant it then.

King Edward. Lords, give us leave; I'll try this widow's wit.

Gloster. [Aside to Clarence] Ay, good leave have you; for you will have leave

Till youth take leave and leave you to the crutch.

[Gloster and Clarence stand apart.]

King Edward. Now tell me, madam, do you love your children?

Lady Grey. Ay, full as dearly as I love myself,

King Edward. And would you not do much to do them good?

Lady Grey. To do them good I would sustain some harm.

King Edward. Then get your husband's lands to do them good. 40

Lady Grey. Therefore I came unto your majesty.

King Edward. I'll tell you how these lands are to be got.

Lady Grey. So shall you bind me to your highness' service.

King Edward. What service wilt thou do me if I give them?

Lady Grey. What you command that rests in me to do.

King Edward. But you will take exceptions to my boon.

Lady Grey. No, gracious lord, except I cannot do it.

King Edward. Ay, but thou canst do what I mean to ask.

Lady Grey. Why, then, I will do what your grace commands.

Gloster. He plies her hard; and much rain wears the marble. 50

Clarence. As red as fire! nay, then, her wax must melt.

Lady Grey. Why stops my lord? shall I not hear my task?

King Edward. An easy task; 't is but to love a king.

Lady Grey. That's soon perform'd, because I am a subject.

King Edward. Why, then, thy husband's lands I freely give thee.

Lady Grey. I take my leave with many thousand thanks.

Gloster. The match is made; she seals it with a curtsy.

King Edward. But stay thee; 't is the fruits of love I mean.

Lady Grey. The fruits of love I mean, my loving liege.

King Edward. Ay, but, I fear me, in another sense. What love, think'st thou, I sue so much to get? 61

Lady Grey. My love till death, my humble thanks, my prayers;
That love which virtue begs, and virtue grants.

King Edward. No, by my troth, I did not mean such love.

Lady Grey. Why, then, you mean not as I thought you did.

King Edward. But now you partly may perceive my mind.

Lady Grey. My mind will never grant what I perceive Your highness aims at, if I aim aright.

King Edward. To tell thee plain, I aim to lie with thee.

Lady Grey. To tell thee plain, I had rather lie in prison. 70

King Edward. Why, then thou shalt not have thy husband's lands.

Lady Grey. Why, then mine honesty shall be my dower,

For by that loss I will not purchase them.

King Edward. Therein thou wrong'st thy children mightily.

Lady Grey. Herein your highness wrongs both them and me.

But, mighty lord, this merry inclination
Accords not with the sadness of my suit ;
Please you dismiss me either with ay or no.

King Edward. Ay, if thou wilt say ay to my request.
No, if thou dost say no to my demand. 80

Lady Grey. Then no, my lord. My suit is at an end.

Gloster. The widow likes him not, she knits her brows.

Clarence. He is the bluntest wooer in Christendom.

King Edward. [Aside] Her looks do argue her replete with modesty,

Her words do shew her wit incomparable,
All her perfections challenge sovereignty ;
One way or other she is for a king,
And she shall be my love, or else my queen. —
Say, that King Edward take thee for his queen?

Lady Grey. 'T is better said than done, my gracious lord ;

I am a subject fit to jest withal,

But far unfit to be a sovereign.

King Edward. Sweet widow, by my state I swear to thee,
www.libtool.com.cn

I speak no more than what my soul intends ;
And that is to enjoy thee for my love.

Lady Grey. And that is more than I will yield unto.
I know I am too mean to be your queen,
And yet too good to be your concubine.

King Edward. You cavil, widow ; I did mean my queen.

Lady Grey. 'T will grieve your grace my sons should call you father. 100

King Edward. No more than when my daughters call thee mother.

Thou art a widow, and thou hast some children ;
And, by God's mother, I, being but a bachelor,
Have other some ; why, 't is a happy thing
To be the father unto many sons.

Answer no more, for thou shalt be my queen.

Gloster. The ghostly father now hath done his shrift.

Clarence. When he was made a shriver, 't was for shift.

King Edward. Brothers, you muse what chat we two have had. [Gloster and Clarence come forward.]

Gloster. The widow likes it not, for she looks very sad. 110

King Edward. You 'd think it strange if I should marry her.

Clarence. To whom, my lord ?

Like one that stands upon a promontory,
 And spies a far-off shore where he would tread,
 Wishing his foot were equal with his eye,
 And chides the sea that sunders him from thence,
 Saying, he 'll lade it dry to have his way.
 So do I wish the crown, being so far off, 140
 And so I chide the means that keep me from it ;
 And so I say I 'll cut the causes off,
 Flattering me with impossibilities. —
 My eye 's too quick, my heart o'erweens too much,
 Unless my hand and strength could equal them.
 Well, say there is no kingdom then for Richard,
 What other pleasure can the world afford ?
 I 'll make my heaven in a lady's lap,
 And deck my body in gay ornaments,
 And witch sweet ladies with my words and looks. 150
 O miserable thought ! and more unlikely
 Than to accomplish twenty golden crowns.
 Why, love forswore me in my mother's womb ;
 And, for I should not deal in her soft laws,
 She did corrupt frail nature with some bribe
 To shrink mine arm up like a wither'd shrub ;
 To make an envious mountain on my back,
 Where sits deformity to mock my body ;
 To shape my legs of an unequal size ;
 To disproportion me in every part, 160
 Like to a chaos, or an unlick'd bear-whelp
 That carries no impression like the dam.
 And am I then a man to be belov'd ?

O, monstrous fault, to harbour such a thought !
 Then, since this earth affords no joy to me
 But to command, to check, to o'erbear such
 As are of better person than myself,
 I 'll make my heaven to dream upon the crown,
 And, whiles I live, to account this world but hell
 Until my mis-shap'd trunk that bears this head 170
 Be round impaled with a glorious crown.
 And yet I know not how to get the crown,
 For many lives stand between me and home,
 And I, like one lost in a thorny wood,
 That rends the thorns, and is rent with the thorns,
 Seeking a way, and straying from the way,
 Not knowing how to find the open air,
 But toiling desperately to find it out,
 Torment myself to catch the English crown ;
 And from that torment I will free myself, 180
 Or hew my way out with a bloody axe.
 Why, I can smile, and murder while I smile,
 And cry ' Content ' to that which grieves my heart,
 And wet my cheeks with artificial tears,
 And frame my face to all occasions.
 I 'll drown more sailors than the mermaid shall,
 I 'll slay more gazers than the basilisk ;
 I 'll play the orator as well as Nestor,
 Deceive more slyly than Ulysses could,
 And like a Sinon take another Troy. 190
 I can add colours to the chameleon,
 Change shapes with Proteus for advantages,

And set the murtherous Machiavel to school.

Can I do this, and cannot get a crown?

Tut! were it farther off, I'll pluck it down. [Exit.

SCENE III. France. The King's Palace

Flourish. Enter LEWIS, the French King, and LADY BONA, attended: the King takes his state. Then enter QUEEN MARGARET, PRINCE EDWARD, and the EARL OF OXFORD; LEWIS rising as she enters

King Lewis. Fair Queen of England, worthy Margaret,

Sit down with us; it ill befits thy state

And birth that thou shouldst stand while Lewis doth sit.

Queen Margaret. No, mighty King of France; now Margaret

Must strike her sail and learn awhile to serve

Where kings command. I was, I must confess,

Great Albion's queen in former golden days;

But now mischance hath trod my title down

And with dishonour laid me on the ground,

Where I must take like seat unto my fortune

10

And to my humble seat conform myself.

King Lewis. Why, say, fair queen, whence springs this deep despair?

Queen Margaret. From such a course as fills mine eyes with tears

And stops my tongue, while heart is drown'd in cares.

King Lewis. Whate'er it be, be thou still like thyself,

And sit thee by our side ; yield not thy neck

[Seats her by him.]

To fortune's yoke, but let thy dauntless mind

Still ride in triumph over all mischance.

Be plain, Queen Margaret, and tell thy grief ;

It shall be eas'd if France can yield relief.

20

Queen Margaret. Those gracious words revive my drooping thoughts,

And give my tongue-tied sorrows leave to speak.

Now, therefore, be it known to noble Lewis

That Henry, sole possessor of my love,

Is of a king become a banish'd man

And forc'd to live in Scotland a forlorn,

While proud ambitious Edward, Duke of York,

Usurps the regal title and the seat

Of England's true-anointed lawful king.

This is the cause that I, poor Margaret,

30

With this my son, Prince Edward, Henry's heir,

Am come to crave thy just and lawful aid ;

And if thou fail us, all our hope is done.

Scotland hath will to help, but cannot help ;

Our people and our peers are both misled,

Our treasure seiz'd, our soldiers put to flight,

And, as thou seest, ourselves in heavy plight.

King Lewis. Renowned queen, with patience calm the storm

While we bethink a means to break it off.

Queen Margaret. The more we stay, the stronger grows our foe. 40

King Lewis. The more I stay, the more I'll succour
thee.

Queen Margaret. O, but impatience waiteth on true sorrow! —

And see where comes the breeder of my sorrow.

Enter WARWICK, attended

King Lewis. What's he approacheth boldly to our presence?

Queen Margaret. Our Earl of Warwick, Edward's greatest friend.

King Lewis. Welcome, brave Warwick. What brings thee to France?

[He descends. Queen Margaret rises.]

Queen Margaret. Ay, now begins a second storm to rise,

For this is he that moves both wind and tide.

Warwick. From worthy Edward, king of Albion,
My lord and sovereign, and thy vowed friend, 50
I come, in kindness and unfeigned love,
First, to do greetings to thy royal person;
And then, to crave a league of amity;
And lastly, to confirm that amity
With nuptial knot, if thou vouchsafe to grant
That virtuous Lady Bona, thy fair sister,
To England's king in lawful marriage.

Queen Margaret. [Aside] If that go forward, Henry's hope is done.

Warwick. [To Bona] And, gracious madam, in our king's behalf,

I am commanded, with your leave and favour, 60
Humbly to kiss your hand, and with my tongue
To tell the passion of my sovereign's heart,
Where fame, late entering at his heedful ears,
Hath plac'd thy beauty's image and thy virtue.

Queen Margaret. King Lewis, — and Lady Bona, —
hear me speak

Before you answer Warwick. His demand
Springs not from Edward's well-meant honest love,
But from deceit, bred by necessity ;
For how can tyrants safely govern home
Unless abroad they purchase great alliance? 70
To prove him tyrant this reason may suffice, —
That Henry liveth still ; but were he dead,
Yet here Prince Edward stands, King Henry's son.
Look therefore, Lewis, that by this league and marriage
Thou draw not on thy danger and dishonour ;
For though usurpers sway the rule awhile,
Yet heavens are just, and time suppresseth wrongs.

Warwick. Injurious Margaret !

Prince. And why not queen ?

Warwick. Because thy father Henry did usurp,
And thou no more art prince than she is queen. 80

Oxford. Then Warwick disannuls great John of Gaunt,

Which did subdue the greatest part of Spain ;
And, after John of Gaunt, Henry the Fourth,
Whose wisdom was a mirror to the wisest ;
And, after that wise prince, Henry the Fifth,
Who by his prowess conquered all France.
From these our Henry lineally descends.

Warwick. Oxford, how haps it in this smooth discourse,

You told not how Henry the Sixth hath lost
All that which Henry the Fifth had gotten? 90
Methinks these peers of France should smile at that.
But for the rest, you tell a pedigree
Of threescore and two years, — a silly time
To make prescription for a kingdom's worth.

Oxford. Why, Warwick, canst thou speak against thy liege,

Whom thou obeyedst thirty and six years,
And not bewray thy treason with a blush ?

Warwick. Can Oxford, that did ever fence the right,
Now buckler falsehood with a pedigree ?
For shame leave Henry and call Edward king. 100

Oxford. Call him my king by whose injurious doom
My elder brother, the Lord Aubrey Vere,
Was done to death ? and more than so, my father,
Even in the downfall of his mellow'd years,
When nature brought him to the door of death ?
No, Warwick, no ; while life upholds this arm,
This arm upholds the house of Lancaster.

Warwick. And I the house of York.

King Lewis. Queen Margaret, Prince Edward, and Oxford,

Vouchsafe at our request to stand aside 110
While I use further conference with Warwick.

Queen Margaret. Heavens grant that Warwick's words bewitch him not! [They stand aloof.]

King Lewis. Now, Warwick, tell me, even upon thy conscience,

Is Edward your true king? for I were loath
To link with him that were not lawful chosen.

Warwick. Thereon I pawn my credit and mine honour.

King Lewis. But is he gracious in the people's eye?

Warwick. The more that Henry was unfortunate.

King Lewis. Then further, all dissembling set aside,
Tell me for truth the measure of his love 120
Unto our sister Bona.

Warwick. Such it seems
As may besee a monarch like himself.
Myself have often heard him say and swear
That this his love was an eternal plant,
Whereof the root was fix'd in virtue's ground,
The leaves and fruit maintain'd with beauty's sun,
Exempt from envy, but not from disdain,
Unless the Lady Bona quit this pain.

King Lewis. Now, sister, let us hear your firm resolve.

Bona. Your grant or your denial shall be mine. 130
Yet I confess [to Warwick] that often ere this day,

When I have heard your king's desert recounted,
Mine ear hath tempted judgment to desire.

King Lewis. Then, Warwick, thus : our sister shall be Edward's ;

And now forthwith shall articles be drawn
Touching the jointure that your king must make,
Which with her dowry shall be counterpois'd. —
Draw near, Queen Margaret, and be a witness
That Bona shall be wife to the English king.

Prince. To Edward, but not to the English king. 140

Queen Margaret. Deceitful Warwick ! it was thy device

By this alliance to make void my suit.
Before thy coming Lewis was Henry's friend.

King Lewis. And still is friend to him and Margaret ;
But if your title to the crown be weak,
As may appear by Edward's good success,
Then 't is but reason that I be releas'd
From giving aid which late I promised.
Yet shall you have all kindness at my hand
That your estate requires and mine can yield. 150

Warwick. Henry now lives in Scotland, at his ease,
Where, having nothing, nothing can he lose.
And as for you yourself, our quondam queen,
You have a father able to maintain you,
And better 't were you troubled him than France.

Queen Margaret. Peace, impudent and shameless
Warwick,
Proud setter-up and puller-down of kings !

I will not hence, till, with my talk and tears,
 Both full of truth, I make King Lewis behold
 Thy sly conveyance and thy lord's false love ; 160
 For both of you are birds of selfsame feather.

[A horn sounded within.]

King Lewis. Warwick, this is some post to us or thee.

Enter the Post

Post. My lord ambassador, these letters are for you.
 Sent from your brother Marquess Montague. —
 'These from our king unto your majesty. —
 And, madam, these for you, from whom I know not.

[They all read their letters.]

Oxford. I like it well that our fair queen and mistress

Smiles at her news while Warwick frowns at his.

Prince. Nay, mark how Lewis stamps as he were nettled ;

I hope all 's for the best. 170

King Lewis. Warwick, what are thy news? — and yours, fair queen?

Queen Margaret. Mine, such as fill my heart with unhop'd joys, Warwick. Mine, full of sorrow and heart's discontent.

King Lewis. What! has your king married the Lady Grey,

And now, to soothe your forgery and his,
 Sends me a paper to persuade me patience?
 Is this the alliance that he seeks with France?

Dare he presume to scorn us in this manner?

Queen Margaret. I told your majesty as much before;

This proveth Edward's love and Warwick's honesty.

Warwick. King Lewis, I here protest, in sight of heaven, 181

And by the hope I have of heavenly bliss,

That I am clear from this misdeed of Edward's;

No more my king, for he dishonours me,

But most himself, if he could see his shame.

Did I forget that by the house of York

My father came untimely to his death?

Did I let pass the abuse done to my niece?

Did I impale him with the regal crown?

Did I put Henry from his native right, 190

And am I guerdon'd at the last with shame?

Shame on himself! for my desert is honour;

And to repair my honour lost for him,

I here renounce him and return to Henry. —

My noble queen, let former grudges pass,

And henceforth I am thy true servitor.

I will revenge his wrong to Lady Bona,

And replant Henry in his former state.

Queen Margaret. Warwick, these words have turn'd my hate to love;

And I forgive and quite forget old faults, 200

And joy that thou becom'st King Henry's friend.

Warwick. So much his friend, ay, his unfeigned friend,

That, if King Lewis vouchsafe to furnish us
 With some few bands of chosen soldiers,
 I'll undertake to land them on our coast
 And force the tyrant from his seat by war.
 'T is not his new-made bride shall succour him ;
 And as for Clarence, — as my letters tell me, —
 He's very likely now to fall from him,
 For matching more for wanton lust than honour, 210
 Or than for strength and safety of our country.

Bona. Dear brother, how shall Bona be reveng'd
 But by thy help to this distressed queen ?

Queen Margaret. Renowned prince, how shall poor
 Henry live
 Unless thou rescue him from foul despair ?

Bona. My quarrel and this English queen's are one.

Warwick. And mine, fair Lady Bona, joins with yours.

King Lewis. And mine with hers, and thine, and Margaret's.

Therefore, at last I firmly am resolv'd
 You shall have aid. 220

Queen Margaret. Let me give humble thanks for all at once.

King Lewis. Then, England's messenger, return in post,
 And tell false Edward, thy supposed king,
 That Lewis of France is sending over maskers
 To revel it with him and his new bride.

Thou seest what 's past ; go fear thy king withal.

Bona. Tell him, in hope he'll prove a widower shortly, www.libtool.com.cn

I'll wear the willow garland for his sake.

Queen Margaret. Tell him my mourning weeds are laid aside,

And I am ready to put armour on. 230

Warwick. Tell him from me that he hath done me wrong,

And therefore I'll uncrown him ere 't be long.

There 's thy reward ; be gone. [Exit Post.

King Lewis. But, Warwick,

Thou and Oxford, with five thousand men,
Shall cross the seas and bid false Edward battle ;

And, as occasion serves, this noble queen

And prince shall follow with a fresh supply.

Yet, ere thou go, but answer me one doubt :

What pledge have we of thy firm loyalty ?

Warwick. This shall assure my constant loyalty, —
That if our queen and this young prince agree, 241

I'll join mine eldest daughter and my joy

To him forthwith in holy wedlock bands.

Queen Margaret. Yes, I agree, and thank you for your motion —

Son Edward, she is fair and virtuous ;

Therefore delay not, give thy hand to Warwick,

And with thy hand thy faith irrevocable

That only Warwick's daughter shall be thine.

Prince. Yes, I accept her, for she well deserves it ;

And here, to pledge my vow, I give my hand. 250

[He gives his hand to Warwick.

King Lewis. Why stay we now? These soldiers shall be levied,

And thou, Lord Bourbon, our high admiral,
Shalt waft them over with our royal fleet. —
I long till Edward fall by war's mischance
For mocking marriage with a dame of France.

[Exeunt all but Warwick.

Warwick. I came from Edward as ambassador,
But I return his sworn and mortal foe;
Matter of marriage was the charge he gave me,
But dreadful war shall answer his demand.
Had he none else to make a stale but me? 260
Then none but I shall turn his jest to sorrow.
I was the chief that rais'd him to the crown,
And I'll be chief to bring him down again;
Not that I pity Henry's misery,
But seek revenge on Edward's mockery. [Exit.

PARK AT MIDDLEHAM CASTLE

ACT IV

SCENE I. London. The Palace

Enter GLOSTER, CLARENCE, SOMERSET, and MONTAGUE

Gloster. Now tell me, brother Clarence, what think you

Of this new marriage with the Lady Grey?
Hath not our brother made a worthy choice?

Clarence. Alas! you know 't is far from hence to France;

How could he stay till Warwick made return?

Somerset. My lords, forbear this talk ; here comes the king.

Flourish. Enter KING EDWARD, attended ; LADY GREY, as Queen ; PEMBROKE, STAFFORD, HASTINGS, and others

Gloster. And his well-chosen bride.

Clarence. I mind to tell him plainly what I think.

King Edward. Now, brother Clarence, how like you our choice,

That you stand pensive as half malcontent ? 10

Clarence. As well as Lewis of France, or the Earl of Warwick,

Which are so weak of courage and in judgment

That they 'll take no offence at our abuse.

King Edward. Suppose they take offence without a cause,

They are but Lewis and Warwick ; I am Edward, Your king and Warwick's, and must have my will.

Gloster. And shall have your will because our king ; Yet hasty marriage seldom proveth well.

King Edward. Yea, brother Richard, are you offended too ?

Gloster. Not I. 20

No ; God forbid that I should wish them sever'd Whom God hath join'd together ; ay, and 't were pity To sunder them that yoke so well together.

King Edward. Setting your scorns and your mislike aside,

Tell me some reason why the Lady Grey
Should not become my wife and England's queen. —
And you too, Somerset and Montague,
Speak freely what you think.

Clarence. Then this is mine opinion, — that King
Lewis

Becomes your enemy, for mocking him 30
About the marriage of the Lady Bona.

Gloster. And Warwick, doing what you gave in charge,
Is now dishonoured by this new marriage.

King Edward. What if both Lewis and Warwick be appeas'd
By such invention as I can devise?

Montague. Yet to have join'd with France in such alliance
Would more have strengthen'd this our commonwealth
'Gainst foreign storms than any home-bred marriage.

Hastings. Why, knows not Montague that of itself
England is safe if true within itself? 40

Montague. But the safer when 't is back'd with France.

Hastings. 'T is better using France than trusting France.

Let us be back'd with God, and with the seas
Which he hath given for fence impregnable,
And with their helps only defend ourselves;
In them and in ourselves our safety lies.

Clarence. For this one speech Lord Hastings well deserves

To have the heir of the Lord Hungerford.

King Edward. Ay, what of that? it was my will and grant;

And for this once my will shall stand for law. 50

Gloster. And yet, methinks, your grace hath not done well

To give the heir and daughter of Lord Scales
Unto the brother of your loving bride.

She better would have fitted me or Clarence;
But in your bride you bury brotherhood.

Clarence. Or else you would not have bestow'd the heir

Of the Lord Bonville on your new wife's son,
And leave your brothers to go speed elsewhere.

King Edward. Alas, poor Clarence! is it for a wife
That thou art malcontent? I will provide thee. 60

Clarence. In choosing for yourself you show'd your judgment,

Which being shallow you shall give me leave
To play the broker in mine own behalf;
And to that end I shortly mind to leave you.

King Edward. Leave me or tarry, Edward will be
king,

And not be tied unto his brother's will.

Queen Elizabeth. My lords, before it pleas'd his majesty

To raise my state to title of a queen,

Do me but right and you must all confess
 That I was not ignoble of descent, 70
 And meaner than myself have had like fortune.
 But as this title honours me and mine,
 So your dislikes, to whom I would be pleasing,
 Doth cloud my joys with danger and with sorrow.

King Edward. My love, forbear to fawn upon their frowns.

What danger or what sorrow can befall thee
 So long as Edward is thy constant friend
 And their true sovereign, whom they must obey?
 Nay, whom they shall obey, and love thee too,
 Unless they seek for hatred at my hands; 80
 Which if they do, yet will I keep thee safe,
 And they shall feel the vengeance of my wrath.

Gloster. [Aside] I hear, yet say not much, but think the more.

Enter a Messenger

King Edward. Now, messenger, what letters or what news
 From France?

Messenger. My sovereign liege, no letters, and few words,
 But such as I, without your special pardon,
 Dare not relate.

King Edward. Go to, we pardon thee; therefore, in brief,
 Tell me their words as near as thou canst guess them.
 What answer makes King Lewis unto our letters? 91

Messenger. At my depart these were his very words :
 ‘ Go tell false Edward, thy supposed king,
 That Lewis of France is sending over maskers
 To revel it with him and his new bride.’

King Edward. Is Lewis so brave? belike he thinks me Henry.
 But what said Lady Bona to my marriage?

Messenger. These were her words, utter’d with mild disdain :
 ‘ Tell him, in hope he ’ll prove a widower shortly,
 I ’ll wear the willow garland for his sake.’ 100

King Edward. I blame her not, she could say little less,
 She had the wrong; but what said Henry’s queen?
 For I have heard that she was there in place.

Messenger. ‘ Tell him,’ quoth she, ‘ my mourning weeds are done,
 And I am ready to put armour on.’

King Edward. Belike she minds to play the Amazon.
 But what said Warwick to these injuries?

Messenger. He, more incens’d against your majesty
 Than all the rest, discharg’d me with these words :
 ‘ Tell him from me that he hath done me wrong, 110
 And therefore I ’ll uncrown him ere ’t be long.’

King Edward. Ha! durst the traitor breathe out so proud words!
 Well, I will arm me, being thus forewarn’d;
 They shall have wars, and pay for their presumption.
 But say, is Warwick friends with Margaret?

Messenger. Ay, gracious sovereign ; they are so link'd in friendship

That young Prince Edward marries Warwick's daughter.

Clarence. Belike the elder ; Clarence will have the younger.

Now, brother king, farewell, and sit you fast,
For I will hence to Warwick's other daughter ; 120
That, though I want a kingdom, yet in marriage
I may not prove inferior to yourself. —
You that love me and Warwick, follow me.

[Exit Clarence, and Somerset follows.]

Gloster. [Aside] Not I.

My thoughts aim at a further matter ; I
Stay not for the love of Edward, but the crown.

King Edward. Clarence and Somerset both gone to Warwick !

Yet am I arm'd against the worst can happen,
And haste is needful in this desperate case. —
Pembroke and Stafford, you in our behalf 130
Go levy men and make prepare for war ;
They are already, or quickly will be landed.
Myself in person will straight follow you. —

[Exeunt Pembroke and Stafford.]

But, ere I go, Hastings and Montague,
Resolve my doubt. You twain, of all the rest,
Are near to Warwick by blood and by alliance ;
Tell me if you love Warwick more than me ?
If it be so, then both depart to him.
I rather wish you foes than hollow friends ;

But, if you mind to hold your true obedience, 140
 Give me assurance with some friendly vow,
 That I may never have you in suspect.

Montague. So God help Montague as he proves true!

Hastings. And Hastings as he favours Edward's cause!

King Edward. Now, brother Richard, will you stand by us?

Gloster. Ay, in despite of all that shall withstand you.

King Edward. Why, so! then am I sure of victory.
 Now, therefore, let us hence; and lose no hour
 Till we meet Warwick with his foreign power. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. A Plain in Warwickshire

Enter WARWICK and OXFORD with French and other Forces

Warwick. Trust me, my lord, all hitherto goes well;
 The common people by numbers swarm to us.
 But see where Somerset and Clarence comes!—

Enter CLARENCE and SOMERSET

Speak suddenly, my lords, are we all friends?

Clarence. Fear not that, my lord.

Warwick. Then, gentle Clarence, welcome unto Warwick;—

And welcome, Somerset. — I hold it cowardice
 To rest mistrustful where a noble heart
 Hath pawn'd an open hand in sign of love;

Else might I think that Clarence, Edward's brother, 10
 Were but a feigned friend to our proceedings.

But welcome, sweet Clarence, my daughter shall be thine.

And now what rests but in night's coverture,
 Thy brother being carelessly encamp'd,
 His soldiers lurking in the towns about,
 And but attended by a simple guard,
 We may surprise and take him at our pleasure?
 Our scouts have found the adventure very easy;
 That as Ulysses and stout Diomed
 With sleight and manhood stole to Rhesus' tents, 20
 And brought from thence the Thracian fatal steeds,
 So we, well cover'd with the night's black mantle,
 At unawares may beat down Edward's guard,
 And seize himself, — I say not slaughter him,
 For I intend but only to surprise him. —
 You that will follow me to this attempt,
 Applaud the name of Henry with your leader.

[They all cry, 'Henry!']

Why, then, let 's on our way in silent sort;
 For Warwick and his friends, God and Saint George!

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Edward's Camp near Warwick

Enter certain Watchmen, to guard the KING's tent

1 Watchman. Come on, my masters, each man take his stand;

The king by this is set him down to sleep.

2 Watchman. What, will he not to bed?

1 Watchman. Why no; for he hath made a solemn vow

Never to lie and take his natural rest

Till Warwick or himself be quite suppress'd.

2 Watchman. To-morrow, then, belike shall be the day,

If Warwick be so near as men report.

3 Watchman. But say, I pray, what nobleman is that
That with the king here resteth in his tent? 10

1 Watchman. 'T is the Lord Hastings, the king's chiefest friend.

3 Watchman. O, is it so? But why commands the king

That his chief followers lodge in towns about him,

While he himself keeps in the cold field?

2 Watchman. 'T is the more honour, because more dangerous.

3 Watchman. Ay, but give me worship and quietness;

I like it better than a dangerous honour.

If Warwick knew in what estate he stands,

'T is to be doubted he would waken him. 19

1 Watchman. Unless our halberds did shut up his passage.

2 Watchman. Ay; wherefore else guard we his royal tent

But to defend his person from night-foes?

Enter WARWICK, CLARENCE, OXFORD, SOMERSET, and Forces silently
www.libtool.com.cn

Warwick. This is his tent ; and see, where stand his guard.

Courage, my masters! honour now or never !
But follow me, and Edward shall be ours.

1 Watchman. Who goes there ?

2 Watchman. Stay, or thou diest.

[*Warwick and the rest cry all, ' Warwick !
Warwick ! ' and set upon the guard, who fly, crying, ' Arm ! Arm ! ' Warwick and the rest following them.*

Drums beating and trumpets sounding ; enter WARWICK and the rest, bringing the KING out in his gown sitting in a chair. GLOSTER and HASTINGS fly over the stage

Somerset. What are they that fly there ?

Warwick. Richard and Hastings. Let them go ;
here is the duke.

King Edward. The duke ! why, Warwick, when we parted,

Thou call'dst me king !

Warwick. Ay, but the case is alter'd ;
When you disgrac'd me in my embassy,
Then I degraded you from being king
And come now to create you Duke of York.

Alas ! how should you govern any kingdom
 That know not how to use ambassadors,
 Nor how to be contented with one wife,
 Nor how to use your brothers brotherly,
 Nor how to study for the people's welfare,
 Nor how to shroud yourself from enemies ?

40

King Edward. Yea, brother of Clarence, art thou here too ?

Nay, then I see that Edward needs must down. —
 Yet, Warwick, in despite of all mischance
 Of thee thyself and all thy complices,
 Edward will always bear himself as king ;
 Though fortune's malice overthrow my state,
 My mind exceeds the compass of her wheel.

Warwick. Then for his mind be Edward England's king ;

[Takes off his crown.

But Henry now shall wear the English crown
 And be true king indeed, thou but the shadow. — 50
 My Lord of Somerset, at my request,
 See that forthwith Duke Edward be convey'd Unto my brother, Archbishop of York.
 When I have fought with Pembroke and his fellows,
 I'll follow you and tell what answer
 Lewis and the Lady Bona send to him. —
 Now, for a while farewell, good Duke of York.

King Edward. What fates impose, that men must needs abide ;

It boots not to resist both wind and tide.

[Exit King Edward, led out ; Somerset with him.

Oxford. What now remains, my lords, for us to do,
But march to London with our soldiers? 61

Warwick. Ay, ~~that's the first thing~~ that we have to do, —
To free King Henry from imprisonment
And see him seated in the regal throne. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. London. The Palace

Enter QUEEN ELIZABETH and RIVERS

Rivers. Madam, what makes you in this sudden change?

Queen Elizabeth. Why, brother Rivers, are you yet to learn

What late misfortune has befallen King Edward?

Rivers. What! loss of some pitch'd battle against Warwick?

Queen Elizabeth. No, but the loss of his own royal person.

Rivers. Then is my sovereign slain?

Queen Elizabeth. Ay, almost slain, for he is taken prisoner,

Either betray'd by falsehood of his guard

Or by his foe surpris'd at unawares,

And, as I further have to understand, 10

Is new committed to the Bishop of York,

Fell Warwick's brother and by that our foe.

Rivers. These news, I must confess, are full of grief;

Yet, gracious madam, bear it as you may.
Warwick may lose, that now hath won the day.

Queen Elizabeth. Till then, fair hope must hinder life's decay ;

And I the rather wean me from despair,
For love of Edward's offspring in my womb.
This is it that makes me bridle passion
And bear with mildness my misfortune's cross ; 20
Ay, ay, for this I draw in many a tear,
And stop the rising of blood-sucking sighs,
Lest with my sighs or tears I blast or drown
King Edward's fruit, true heir to the English crown.

Rivers. But, madam, where is Warwick then become ?

Queen Elizabeth. I am informed that he comes towards London,
To set the crown once more on Henry's head.
Guess thou the rest : King Edward's friends must down ;

But to prevent the tyrant's violence, —
For trust not him that hath once broken faith, — 30
I'll hence forthwith unto the sanctuary,
To save at least the heir of Edward's right.
There shall I rest secure from force and fraud.
Come therefore, let us fly while we may fly ;
If Warwick take us we are sure to die. [Exeunt.

SCENE V. A Park near Middleham Castle in Yorkshire

Enter GLOSTER, HASTINGS, SIR WILLIAM STANLEY, and others

Gloster. Now, my Lord Hastings, and Sir William Stanley,

Leave off to wonder why I drew you hither
Into this chiefest thicket of the park.

Thus stands the case : you know our king, my brother,
Is prisoner to the bishop here, at whose hands
He hath good usage and great liberty,
And often, but attended with weak guard,
Comes hunting this way to disport himself.

I have advertis'd him by secret means

That if about this hour he make this way, 10

Under the colour of his usual game,

He shall here find his friends, with horse and men,
To set him free from his captivity.

Enter KING EDWARD and a Huntsman

Huntsman. This way, my lord, for this way lies the game.

King Edward. Nay, this way, man ; see, where the huntsmen stand. —

Now, brother of Gloster, Lord Hastings, and the rest,
Stand you thus close to steal the bishop's deer ?

Gloster. Brother, the time and case requireth haste ;
Your horse stands ready at the park corner.

King Edward. But whither shall we then? 20

Hastings. To Lynn, my lord, and ship from thence to Flanders.

Gloster. Well guess'd, believe me, for that was my meaning.

King Edward. Stanley, I will requite thy forward-
ness.

Gloster. But wherefore stay we? 't is no time to talk.

King Edward. Huntsman, what say'st thou? wilt thou go along?

Huntsman. Better do so than tarry and be hang'd.

Gloster. Come then; away! let's have no more ado.

King Edward. Bishop, farewell; shield thee from Warwick's frown,

And pray that I may repossess the crown. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI. London. The Tower

Enter KING HENRY, CLARENCE, WARWICK, SOMERSET, Young RICHMOND, OXFORD, MONTAGUE, Lieutenant of the Tower, and Attendants

King Henry. Master Lieutenant, now that God and friends

Have shaken Edward from the regal seat
And turn'd my captive state to liberty,
My fear to hope, my sorrows unto joys,
At our enlargement what are thy due fees?

Lieutenant. Subjects may challenge nothing of their sovereigns;

But if an humble prayer may prevail,
I then crave pardon of your Majesty.

King Henry. For what, lieutenant? for well using me?

Nay, be thou sure I'll well requite thy kindness, 10

For that it made my imprisonment a pleasure;

Ay, such a pleasure as incaged birds

Conceive when, after many moody thoughts,

At last by notes of household harmony

They quite forget their loss of liberty. —

But, Warwick, after God thou sett'st me free,

And chiefly therefore I thank God and thee;

He was the author, thou the instrument.

Therefore, that I may conquer fortune's spite,

By living low where fortune cannot hurt me, 20

And that the people of this blessed land

May not be punish'd with my thwarting stars,

Warwick, although my head still wear the crown,

I here resign my government to thee,

For thou art fortunate in all thy deeds.

Warwick. Your grace hath still been fam'd for vir-tuous,

And now may seem as wise as virtuous

By spying and avoiding fortune's malice,

For few men rightly temper with the stars;

Yet in this one thing let me blame your grace, 30

For choosing me when Clarence is in place.

Clarence. No, Warwick, thou art worthy of the sway,
To whom the heavens in thy nativity

Adjug'd an olive branch and laurel crown,
 As likely to be blest in peace and war ;
 And therefore, I yield thee my free consent.

Warwick. And I choose Clarence only for protector.

King Henry. Warwick and Clarence, give me both your hands.

Now join your hands, and with your hands your hearts,
 That no dissension hinder government. 40

I make you both protectors of this land,
 While I myself will lead a private life
 And in devotion spend my latter days,
 To sin's rebuke and my Creator's praise.

Warwick. What answers Clarence to his sovereign's will?

Clarence. That he consents if Warwick yield consent,
 For on thy fortune I repose myself.

Warwick. Why, then, though loath, yet I must be content.

We 'll yoke together, like a double shadow
 To Henry's body, and supply his place, — 50
 I mean in bearing weight of government
 While he enjoys the honour and his ease.
 And, Clarence, now then it is more than needful
 Forthwith that Edward be pronounc'd a traitor,
 And all his lands and goods be confiscate.

Clarence. What else? and that succession be determin'd.

Warwick. Ay, therein Clarence shall not want his part.

King Henry. But with the first of all your chief affairs,

Let me entreat — for I command no more —

That Margaret your queen, and my son Edward, 60

Be sent for to return from France with speed ;

For, till I see them here, by doubtful fear

My joy of liberty is half eclips'd.

Clarence. It shall be done, my sovereign, with all speed.

King Henry. My lord of Somerset, what youth is that

Of whom you seem to have so tender care ?

Somerset. My liege, it is young Henry, Earl of Richmond.

King Henry. Come hither, England's hope. — If secret powers [Lays his hand on his head.

Suggest but truth to my divining thoughts,

This pretty lad will prove our country's bliss. 70

His looks are full of peaceful majesty,

His head by nature fram'd to wear a crown,

His hand to wield a sceptre, and himself

Likely in time to bless a regal throne.

Make much of him, my lords ; for this is he Must help you more than you are hurt by me.

Enter a Messenger

Warwick. What news, my friend ?

Messenger. That Edward is escaped from your brother, And fled, as he hears since, to Burgundy.

Warwick. Unsavoury news! but how made he escape? 80

Messenger. He was convey'd by Richard Duke of Gloster

And the Lord Hastings, who attended him
In secret ambush on the forest side,
And from the bishop's huntsmen rescued him,
For hunting was his daily exercise.

Warwick. My brother was too careless of his charge. —

But let us hence, my sovereign, to provide
A salve for any sore that may betide.

[Exeunt King Henry, Warwick, Clarence, Lieutenant, and attendants.]

Somerset. My lord, I like not of this flight of Edward's,
For doubtless Burgundy will yield him help, 90
And we shall have more wars before 't be long.
As Henry's late presaging prophecy
Did glad my heart with hope of this young Richmond,

So doth my heart misgive me, in these conflicts
What may befall him, to his harm and ours ;
Therefore, Lord Oxford, to prevent the worst,
Forthwith we 'll send him hence to Brittany
Till storms be past of civil enmity.

Oxford. Ay ; for if Edward repossess the crown,
'T is like that Richmond with the rest shall down. 100

Somerset. It shall be so ; he shall to Brittany.
Come therefore, let 's about it speedily. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII. Before York

Enter KING EDWARD, GLOSTER, HASTINGS, and Forces

King Edward. Now, brother Richard, Lord Hastings, and the rest,

Yet thus far fortune maketh us amends,
And says that once more I shall interchange
My waned state for Henry's regal crown.
Well have we pass'd and now repass'd the seas,
And brought desired help from Burgundy.
What then remains, we being thus arriv'd
From Ravenspurgh haven before the gates of York,
But that we enter as into our dukedom?

Gloster. The gates made fast!— Brother, I like not this; 10

For many men that stumble at the threshold
Are well foretold that danger lurks within.

King Edward. Tush, man! abodements must not now affright us;

By fair or foul means we must enter in,
For hither will our friends repair to us.

Hastings. My liege, I'll knock once more to summon them.

Enter on the walls, the Mayor of York and his Brethren

Mayor. My lords, we were forewarned of your coming
And shut the gates for safety of ourselves,
For now we owe allegiance unto Henry. 19

King Edward. But master mayor, if Henry be your king, Yet Edward, at the least, is Duke of York.

Mayor. True, my good lord; I know you for no less.

King Edward. Why, and I challenge nothing but my dukedom,
As being well content with that alone.

Gloster. [Aside] But when the fox hath once got in his nose,
He 'll soon find means to make the body follow.

Hastings. Why, master mayor, why stand you in a doubt?

Open the gates; we are King Henry's friends.

Mayor. Ay, say you so? the gates shall then be open'd. [Exeunt from above.]

Gloster. A wise, stout captain, and soon persuaded. 30

Hastings. The good old man would fain that all were well,

So 't were not long of him; but, being enter'd,
I doubt not, I, but we shall soon persuade
Both him and all his brothers unto reason.

Enter the Mayor and two Aldermen, below

King Edward. So, master mayor; these gates must not be shut
But in the night or in the time of war.
What! fear not, man, but yield me up the keys;
[Takes his keys.]

For Edward will defend the town and thee,
And all those friends that deign to follow me.

March. www.libtool.com.cn Enter MONTGOMERY and Forces

Gloster. Brother, this is Sir John Montgomery, 40
Our trusty friend unless I be deceiv'd.

King Edward. Welcome, Sir John; but why come you in arms?

Montgomery. To help King Edward in his time of storm,

As every loyal subject ought to do.

King Edward. Thanks, good Montgomery; but we now forget

Our title to the crown, and only claim
Our dukedom till God please to send the rest.

Montgomery. Then fare you well, for I will hence again;

I came to serve a king, and not a duke. —

Drummer, strike up, and let us march away. 50

[A march begun.]

King Edward. Nay, stay, Sir John, awhile, and we'll debate

By what safe means the crown may be recover'd.

Montgomery. What talk you of debating? in few words, —

If you'll not here proclaim yourself our king,

I'll leave you to your fortune and begone

To keep them back that come to succour you.

Why shall we fight if you pretend no title?

Gloster. Why, brother, wherefore stand you on nice points?

King Edward. When we grow stronger, then we'll make our claim;

Till then 't is wisdom to conceal our meaning. 60

Hastings. Away with scrupulous wit! now arms must rule.

Gloster. And fearless minds climb soonest unto crowns. —

Brother, we will proclaim you out of hand;
The bruit thereof will bring you many friends.

King Edward. Then be it as you will; for 't is my right,

And Henry but usurps the diadem.

Montgomery. Ay, now my sovereign speaketh like himself,

And now will I be Edward's champion.

Hastings. Sound, trumpet! Edward shall be here proclaim'd. —

Come, fellow-soldier, make thou proclamation. 70

[Gives him a paper. Flourish.

Soldier. [Reads] 'Edward the Fourth, by the grace of God,

King of England and France, and Lord of Ireland,' etc.

Montgomery. And whosoe'er gainsays King Edward's right,

By this I challenge him to single'fight.

[Throws down his gauntlet.

All. Long live Edward the Fourth!

King Edward. Thanks, brave Montgomery, and thanks unto you all;

If fortune serve me, I'll requite this kindness.

Now for this night let's harbour here in York;

And when the morning sun shall raise his car

Above the border of this horizon

We'll forward towards Warwick and his mates,

For well I wot that Henry is no soldier. —

Ah, froward Clarence! how evil it beseems thee

To flatter Henry and forsake thy brother!

Yet, as we may, we'll meet both thee and Warwick. —

Come on, brave soldiers; doubt not of the day,

And, that once gotten, doubt not of large pay.

[Exeunt.

SCENE VIII. London. The Palace

Flourish. Enter KING HENRY, WARWICK, CLARENCE,
MONTAGUE, EXETER, and OXFORD

Warwick. What counsel, lords? Edward from Belgia,

With hasty Germans and blunt Hollanders,

Hath pass'd in safety through the narrow seas,

And with his troops doth march amain to London;

And many gidly people flock to him.

King Henry. Let's levy men and beat him back again.

Clarence. A little fire is quickly trodden out,
Which, being suffer'd, rivers cannot quench.

Warwick. In Warwickshire I have true-hearted friends,

Not mutinous in peace, yet bold in war. 10

Those will I muster up; — and thou, son Clarence,

Shalt stir up in Suffolk, Norfolk, and in Kent

The knights and gentlemen to come with thee. —

Thou, brother Montague, in Buckingham,

Northampton, and in Leicestershire shalt find

Men well inclin'd to hear what thou command'st. —

And thou, brave Oxford, wondrous well belov'd,

In Oxfordshire shalt muster up thy friends. —

My sovereign, with the loving citizens,

Like to his island girt in with the ocean, 20

Or modest Dian circled with her nymphs,

Shall rest in London till we come to him. —

Fair lords, take leave, and stand not to reply. —

Farewell, my sovereign.

King Henry. Farewell, my Hector, and my Troy's true hope.

Clarence. In sign of truth I kiss your highness' hand.

King Henry. Well-minded Clarence, be thou fortunate!

Montague. Comfort, my lord; — and so I take my leave.

Oxford. And thus [kissing Henry's hand] I seal my truth, and bid adieu.

King Henry. Sweet Oxford, and my loving Montague, 30

And all at once, once more a happy farewell.

Warwick. Farewell, sweet lords ; let 's meet at Coventry.

[Exeunt Warwick, Clarendon, Oxford, and Montague.

King Henry. Here at the palace will I rest awhile. —
Cousin of Exeter, what thinks your lordship ?
Methinks the power that Edward hath in field
Should not be able to encounter mine.

Exeter. The doubt is that he will seduce the rest.

King Henry. That 's not my fear ; my meed hath got me fame.

I have not stopp'd mine ears to their demands,
Nor posted off their suits with slow delays ; 40
My pity hath been balm to heal their wounds,
My mildness hath allay'd their swelling griefs,
My mercy dried their water-flowing tears.
I have not been desirous of their wealth
Nor much oppress'd them with great subsidies,
Nor forward of revenge, though they much err'd ;
Then, why should they love Edward more than me ?
No, Exeter, these graces challenge grace ;
And when the lion fawns upon the lamb
The lamb will never cease to follow him. 50

[Shout within. ' A Lancaster ! A Lancaster ! '

Exeter. Hark, hark, my lord ! what shouts are these ?

Enter KING EDWARD, GLOSTER, and Soldiers

King Edward. Seize on the shame-fac'd Henry !
bear him hence,

And once again proclaim us king of England. —

You are the fount that makes small brooks to flow.
 Now stops thy spring ; my sea shall suck them dry
 And swell so much the higher by their ebb. —
 Hence with him to the Tower ! let him not speak. —

[Exeunt some with King Henry.

And, lords, towards Coventry bend we our course,
 Where peremptory Warwick now remains.
 The sun shines hot, and, if we use delay, 60
 Cold biting winter mars our hop'd-for hay.

Gloster. Away betimes, before his forces join,
 And take the great-grown traitor unawares.
 Brave warriors, march amain towards Coventry.

[Exeunt.

COVENTRY

ACT V

SCENE I. Coventry

Enter, upon the walls, WARWICK, the Mayor of Coventry, two Messengers, and others

Warwick. Where is the post that came from valiant Oxford? —

How far hence is thy lord, mine honest fellow?

1 Messenger. By this time at Dunsmore, marching hitherward.

Warwick. How far off is our brother Montague?

Where is the post that came from Montague?

2 Messenger. By this at Daintry, with a puissant troop.

Enter SIR JOHN SOMERVILLE

Warwick. Say, Somerville, what says my loving son?
And, by thy guess, how nigh is Clarence now?

Somerville. At Southam I did leave him with his forces

And do expect him here some two hours hence. 10

[Drum heard.

Warwick. Then Clarence is at hand; I hear his drum.

Somerville. It is not his, my lord; here Southam lies.

The drum your honour hears marcheth from Warwick.

Warwick. Who should that be? belike, unlook'd-for friends.

Somerville. They are at hand, and you shall quickly know.

March. Flourish. Enter KING EDWARD, GLOSTER, and Forces

King Edward. Go, trumpet, to the walls and sound a parle.

Gloster. See how the surly Warwick mans the wall.

Warwick. O, unbid spite! is sportful Edward come?
Where slept our scouts, or how are they seduc'd,
That we could hear no news of his repair? 20

King Edward. Now, Warwick, wilt thou ope the city gates?

Speak gentle words and humbly bend thy knee,

Call Edward king and at his hands beg mercy,
And he shall pardon thee these outrages.

Warwick. Nay, rather, wilt thou draw thy forces
hence,

Confess who set thee up and pluck'd thee down ?

Call Warwick patron and be penitent,
And thou shalt still remain the Duke of York.

Gloster. I thought, at least, he would have said the king ;

Or did he make the jest against his will ? 30

Warwick. Is not a dukedom, sir, a goodly gift ?

Gloster. Ay, by my faith, for a poor earl to give ;
I 'll do thee service for so good a gift.

Warwick. 'T was I that gave the kingdom to thy brother.

King Edward. Why, then, 't is mine, if but by Warwick's gift.

Warwick. Thou art no Atlas for so great a weight,
And, weakling, Warwick takes his gift again ;
And Henry is my king, Warwick his subject.

King Edward. But Warwick's king is Edward's prisoner ;

And, gallant Warwick, do but answer this : 40
What is the body when the head is off ?

Gloster. Alas ! that Warwick had no more forecast,
But, whiles he thought to steal the single ten,
The king was slyly finger'd from the deck !
You left poor Henry at the bishop's palace,
And, ten to one, you 'll meet him in the Tower.

King Edward. 'T is even so; yet you are Warwick still.

Gloster. Come, Warwick, take the time; kneel down, kneel down.

Nay, when? strike now, or else the iron cools.

Warwick. I had rather chop this hand off at a blow,
And with the other fling it at thy face, 51
Then bear so low a sail, to strike to thee.

King Edward. Sail how thou canst, have wind and tide thy friend,
This hand, fast wound about thy coal-black hair,
Shall, whiles thy head is warm and new cut off,
Write in the dust this sentence with thy blood,
'Wind-changing Warwick now can change no more.'

Enter OXFORD, with Forces

Warwick. O cheerful colours! see where Oxford comes.

Oxford. Oxford, Oxford, for Lancaster!

[He and his forces enter the city.]

Gloster. The gates are open; let us enter too. 60

King Edward. So other foes may set upon our backs.
Stand we in good array, for they no doubt
Will issue out again and bid us battle;
If not, the city being but of small defence,
We'll quickly rouse the traitors in the same.

Warwick. O, welcome, Oxford, for we want thy help.

Enter MONTAGUE, with Forces

Montague. Montague, Montague, for Lancaster!

[He and his forces enter the city.]

Gloster. Thou and thy brother both shall buy this treason,

Even with the dearest blood your bodies bear. 69

King Edward. The harder match'd, the greater victory ;

My mind presageth happy gain and conquest.

Enter SOMERSET, with Forces

Somerset. Somerset, Somerset, for Lancaster !

[He and his forces enter the city.]

Gloster. Two of thy name, both Dukes of Somerset, Have sold their lives unto the House of York ; And thou shalt be the third if this sword hold.

Enter CLARENCE, with Forces

Warwick. And, lo, where George of Clarence sweeps along,

Of force enough to bid his brother battle ;
With whom an upright zeal to right prevails,
More than the nature of a brother's love ! —

[Gloster and Clarence whisper.]

Come, Clarence, come ; thou wilt if Warwick calls. 80

Clarence. Father of Warwick, know you what this means ? [Taking the red rose out of his hat.]

Look here, I throw my infamy at thee ;
I will not ruinate my father's house,
Who gave his blood to lime the stones together
And set up Lancaster. Why, trow'st thou, Warwick,
That Clarence is so harsh, so blunt, unnatural,
To bend the fatal instruments of war

Against his brother and his lawful king?
 Perhaps thou wilt object thy holy oath;
 To keep that oath were more impiety
 Than Jephtha's when he sacrific'd his daughter.

90

I am so sorry for my trespass made
 That, to deserve well at my brother's hands,
 I here proclaim myself thy mortal foe,
 With resolution, wheresoe'er I meet thee —
 As I will meet thee, if thou stir abroad —
 To plague thee for thy foul misleading me.
 And so, proud-hearted Warwick, I defy thee,
 And to my brother turn my blushing cheeks. —
 Pardon me, Edward, I will make amends; —
 And, Richard, do not frown upon my faults,
 For I will henceforth be no more unconstant.

100

King Edward. Now, welcome more, and ten times more belov'd,
 Than if thou never hadst deserv'd our hate.

Gloster. Welcome, good Clarence; this is brother-like.

Warwick. O passing traitor, perjur'd and unjust!

King Edward. What, Warwick, wilt thou leave the town and fight,

Or shall we beat the stones about thine ears?

Warwick. Alas! I am not coop'd here for defence;
 I will away towards Barnet presently,
 And bid thee battle, Edward, if thou dar'st.

110

King Edward. Yes, Warwick, Edward dares, and leads the way. —

Lords, to the field! Saint George and victory!

[March. Exeunt.]

SCENE II. A Field of Battle near Barnet

Alarums and Excursions. Enter KING EDWARD, bringing in WARWICK wounded

King Edward. So, lie thou there; die thou, and die our fear,

For Warwick was a bug that fear'd us all. —

Now, Montague, sit fast; I seek for thee,

That Warwick's bones may keep thine company. [Exit.]

Warwick. Ah! who is nigh? come to me, friend or foe,

And tell me who is victor, York or Warwick.

Why ask I that? my mangled body shows;

My blood, my want of strength, my sick heart shows

That I must yield my body to the earth

And, by my fall, the conquest to my foe. 10

Thus yields the cedar to the axe's edge,

Whose arms gave shelter to the princely eagle,

Under whose shade the ramping lion slept,

Whose top-branch overpeer'd Jove's spreading tree,

And kept low shrubs from winter's powerful wind.

These eyes, that now are dimm'd with death's black veil,

Have been as piercing as the midday sun,

To search the secret treasons of the world;

The wrinkles in my brows, now fill'd with blood,

Were liken'd oft to kingly sepulchres, 20
 For who liv'd king but I could dig his grave?
 And who durst smile when Warwick bent his brow?
 Lo, now my glory smear'd in dust and blood!
 My parks, my walks, my manors that I had,
 Even now forsake me, and of all my lands
 Is nothing left me but my body's length.
 Why, what is pomp, rule, reign, but earth and dust?
 And, live we how we can, yet die we must.

Enter OXFORD and SOMERSET

Somerset. Ah, Warwick, Warwick! wert thou as we are,

We might recover all our loss again. 30
 The queen from France hath brought a puissant power;
 Even now we heard the news. Ah, couldst thou fly!

Warwick. Why, then I would not fly. — Ah, Montague!

If thou be there, sweet brother, take my hand
 And with thy lips keep in my soul awhile.
 Thou lov'st me not; for brother, if thou did'st,
 Thy tears would wash this cold, congealed blood
 That glues my lips and will not let me speak.
 Come quickly, Montague, or I am dead.

Somerset. Ah, Warwick, Montague hath breath'd his last, 40

And to the latest gasp cried out for Warwick,
 And said 'Commend me to my valiant brother.'
 And more he would have said, and more he spoke,

Which sounded like a clamour in a vault
 That might not be distinguish'd ; but at last
 I well might hear, deliver'd with a groan, —
 'O, farewell, Warwick!'

Warwick. Sweet rest his soul! — Fly, lords, and save yourselves ;
 For Warwick bids you all farewell, to meet in heaven.

[Dies.

Oxford. Away, away, to meet the queen's great power! [Exeunt bearing off Warwick's body.

SCENE III. Another Part of the Field

Flourish. Enter KING EDWARD in triumph ; with CLARENCE, GLOSTER, and the rest

King Edward. Thus far our fortune keeps an upward course,
 And we are grac'd with wreaths of victory.
 But, in the midst of this bright-shining day,
 I spy a black, suspicious, threatening cloud,
 That will encounter with our glorious sun
 Ere he attain his easeful western bed.
 I mean, my lords, those powers that the queen
 Hath rais'd in Gallia have arriv'd our coast
 And, as we hear, march on to fight with us.

Clarence. A little gale will soon disperse that cloud
 And blow it to the source from whence it came ; II
 Thy very beams will dry those vapours up,
 For every cloud engenders not a storm.

Gloster. The queen is valued thirty thousand strong,
 And Somerset, with Oxford, fled to her ;
 If she have time to breathe, be well assur'd,
 Her faction will be full as strong as ours.

King Edward. We are advertis'd by our loving friends
 That they do hold their course toward Tewkesbury.
 We, having now the best at Barnet field, 20
 Will thither straight, for willingness rids way ;
 And, as we march, our strength will be augmented
 In every county as we go along. —
 Strike up the drum ! cry ' Courage ! ' and away.

[Flourish. Exeunt.

SCENE IV. Plains near Tewkesbury

March. Enter QUEEN MARGARET, PRINCE EDWARD,
 SOMERSET, OXFORD, and Soldiers

Queen Margaret. Great lords, wise men ne'er sit and wail their loss,
 But cheerly seek how to redress their harms.
 What though the mast be now blown overboard,
 The cable broke, the holding-anchor lost,
 And half our sailors swallow'd in the flood ?
 Yet lives our pilot still. Is 't meet that he Should leave the helm, and like a fearful lad
 With tearful eyes add water to the sea,
 And give more strength to that which hath too much,
 Whiles in his moan the ship splits on the rock, 10

Which industry and courage might have sav'd ?
 Ah, what a shame ! ah, what a fault were this !
 Say Warwick was our anchor ; what of that ?
 And Montague our topmast ; what of him ?
 Our slaughter'd friends the tackles ; what of these ?
 Why, is not Oxford here another anchor,
 And Somerset another goodly mast ?
 The friends of France our shrouds and tacklings ?
 And, though unskilful, why not Ned and I
 For once allow'd the skilful pilot's charge ? 20
 We will not from the helm to sit and weep,
 But keep our course, though the rough wind say no,
 From shelves and rocks that threaten us with wrack.
 As good to chide the waves as speak them fair.
 And what is Edward but a ruthless sea ?
 What Clarence but a quicksand of deceit ?
 And Richard but a ragged fatal rock ?
 All these the enemies to our poor bark ?
 Say you can swim ; alas, 't is but a while !
 Tread on the sand ; why, there you quickly sink : 30
 Bestride the rock ; the tide will wash you off,
 Or else you famish, — that 's a threefold death.
 This speak I, lords, to let you understand,
 If case some one of you would fly from us,
 That there 's no hop'd-for mercy with the brothers
 More than with ruthless waves, with sands, and rocks.
 Why, courage then ! what cannot be avoided
 'T were childish weakness to lament or fear.

Prince. Methinks, a woman of this valiant spirit

Should, if a coward heard her speak these words, 40
 Infuse his breast with magnanimity,
 And make him, naked, foil a man at arms.
 I speak not this as doubting any here ;
 For, did I but suspect a fearful man,
 He should have leave to go away betimes,
 Lest in our need he might infect another
 And make him of like spirit to himself.
 If any such be here — as God forbid ! —
 Let him depart before we need his help.

Oxford. Women and children of so high a courage, 50
 And warriors faint ! why, 't were perpetual shame. —
 O, brave young prince ! thy famous grandfather
 Doth live again in thee ; long mayst thou live
 To bear his image and renew his glories !

Somerset. And he that will not fight for such a hope,
 Go home to bed, and like the owl by day,
 If he arise, be mock'd and wonder'd at.

Queen Margaret. Thanks, gentle Somerset. — Sweet
 Oxford, thanks.

Prince. And take his thanks that yet hath nothing else.

Enter a Messenger

Messenger. Prepare you, lords, for Edward is at hand 60

Ready to fight ; therefore be resolute.

Oxford. I thought no less ; it is his policy
 To haste thus fast, to find us unprovided.

Somerset. But he 's deceiv'd ; we are in readiness.

Queen Margaret. This cheers my heart, to see your forwardness.

Oxford. Here pitch our battle; hence we will not budge.

Flourish and March. Enter KING EDWARD, CLARENCE, GLOSTER, and Forces

King Edward. Brave followers, yonder stands the thorny wood

Which, by the heaven's assistance and your strength,
Must by the roots be hewn up yet ere night.

I need not add more fuel to your fire, 70

For, well I wot, ye blaze to burn them out.

Give signal to the fight, and to it, lords!

Queen Margaret. Lords, knights, and gentlemen,
what I should say,

My tears gainsay; for every word I speak,
Ye see I drink the water of my eyes.

Therefore, no more but this: Henry, your sovereign,

Is prisoner to the foe, his state usurp'd,

His realm a slaughter-house, his subjects slain,

His statutes cancell'd, and his treasure spent;

And yonder is the wolf that makes this spoil. 80

You fight in justice; then, in God's name, lords,

Be valiant and give signal to the fight.

[Exeunt both armies.]

SCENE V. Another part of the Field

Flourish. Enter KING EDWARD, CLARENCE, GLOSTER, and Forces ; with QUEEN MARGARET, OXFORD, and SOMERSET, as prisoners

King Edward. Now, here a period of tumultuous broils.

Away with Oxford to Hames Castle straight ;

For Somerset, off with his guilty head.

Go, bear them hence ; I will not hear them speak.

Oxford. For my part, I'll not trouble thee with words.

Somerset. Nor I, but stoop with patience to my fortune.

[Exeunt Oxford and Somerset, guarded.]

Queen Margaret. So part we sadly in this troublous world,

To meet with joy in sweet Jerusalem.

King Edward. Is proclamation made that who finds Edward

Shall have a high reward, and he his life ? 10

Gloster. It is ; and, lo, where youthful Edward comes !

Enter Soldiers with PRINCE EDWARD

King Edward. Bring forth the gallant ; let us hear him speak.

What ! can so young a thorn begin to prick ? —

Edward, what satisfaction canst thou make

For bearing arms, for stirring up my subjects,
 And all the trouble thou hast turn'd me to ?

Prince. Speak like a subject, proud, ambitious York !
 Suppose that I am now my father's mouth ;
 Resign thy chair, and where I stand kneel thou,
 Whilst I propose the selfsame words to thee 20
 Which, traitor, thou wouldst have me answer to.

Queen Margaret. Ah, thy father had been so resolv'd !

Gloster. That you might still have worn the petticoat,
 And ne'er have stolen the breech from Lancaster.

Prince. Let Æsop fable in a winter's night ;
 His currish riddles sort not with this place.

Gloster. By heaven, brat, I 'll plague you for that word.

Queen Margaret. Ay, thou wast born to be a plague to men.

Gloster. For God's sake, take away this captive scold.

Prince. Nay, take away this scolding crook-back rather. 30

King Edward. Peace, wilful boy, or I will charm your tongue.

Clarence. Untutor'd lad, thou art too malapert.

Prince. I know my duty ; you are all undutiful.
 Lascivious Edward, — and thou perjurd George, —
 And thou misshapen Dick, — I tell ye all,
 I am your better, traitors as ye are ; —
 And thou usurp'st my father's right and mine.

King Edward. Take that, the likeness of this railer here. [Stabs him.

Gloster. Sprawlst thou? take that, to end thy agony. [Stabs him.

Clarence. And there's for twitting me with perjury. [Stabs him.

Queen Margaret. O, kill me too! 41

Gloster. Marry, and shall. [Offers to kill her.

King Edward. Hold, Richard, hold! for we have done too much.

Gloster. Why should she live to fill the world with words?

King Edward. What! doth she swoon? use means for her recovery.

Gloster. Clarence, excuse me to the king, my brother. I'll hence to London on a serious matter; Ere ye come there, be sure to hear some news.

Clarence. What? what?

Gloster. The Tower! the Tower! [Exit.

Queen Margaret. O Ned! sweet Ned! speak to thy mother, boy. 51

Canst thou not speak? — O traitors! murtherers!
They that stabb'd Cæsar shed no blood at all,
Did not offend, nor were not worthy blame,
If this foul deed were by to equal it.
He was a man; this, in respect, a child,
And men ne'er spend their fury on a child.
What's worse than murtherer, that I may name it?
No, no, my heart will burst, an if I speak;

And I will speak, that so my heart may burst. — 60

Butchers and villains ! bloody cannibals !

How sweet a plant have you untimely cropp'd !

You have no children, butchers ! if you had,

The thought of them would have stirr'd up remorse ;

But, if you ever chance to have a child,

Look in his youth to have him so cut off

As, deathsmen, you have rid this sweet young prince !

King Edward. Away with her ! go, bear her hence perforce.

Queen Margaret. Nay, never bear me hence, dispatch me here ;

Here sheathe thy sword, I 'll pardon thee my death. 70

What ! wilt thou not ? — then, Clarence, do it thou.

Clarence. By heaven, I will not do thee so much ease.

Queen Margaret. Good Clarence, do ; sweet Clarence, do thou do it.

Clarence. Didst thou not hear me swear I would not do it ?

Queen Margaret. Ay, but thou usest to forswear thyself ;

'T was sin before, but now 't is charity.

What ! wilt thou not ? where is that devil's butcher,

Hard-favour'd Richard ? — Richard, where art thou ?

Thou art not here ; murder is thy alms-deed,

Petitioners for blood thou ne'er putt'st back. 80

King Edward. Away, I say ! I charge ye, bear her
hence.

Queen Margaret. So come to you and yours as to this prince! [She is taken out.

King Edward. Where's Richard gone?

Clarence. To London, all in post, and, as I guess,
To make a bloody supper in the Tower.

King Edward. He's sudden if a thing comes in his head.

Now march we hence; discharge the common sort
With pay and thanks, and let's away to London,
And see our gentle queen how well she fares. 89
By this, I hope, she hath a son for me. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI. London. The Tower

KING HENRY is discovered sitting with a book in his hand, the Lieutenant attending. Enter GLOSTER

Gloster. Good day, my lord. What! at your book so hard?

King Henry. Ay, my good lord;— my lord, I should say rather.

'T is sin to flatter; 'good' was little better.
Good Gloster and good devil were alike,
And both preposterous; therefore, not good lord.

Gloster. Sirrah, leave us to ourselves; we must confer. [Exit Lieutenant.

King Henry. So flies the reckless shepherd from the wolf;

So first the harmless sheep doth yield his fleece,

And next his throat unto the butcher's knife. —

What scene of death hath Roscius now to act? 10

Gloster. Suspicion always haunts the guilty mind ;
The thief doth fear each bush an officer.

King Henry. The bird that hath been limed in a bush

With trembling wings misdoubteth every bush ;

And I, the hapless male to one sweet bird,

Have now the fatal object in my eye

Where my poor young was lim'd, was caught, and kill'd.

Gloster. Why, what a peevish fool was that of Crete
That taught his son the office of a fowl !

And yet, for all his wings, the fool was drown'd. 20

King Henry. I, Dædalus ; my poor boy, Icarus ;

Thy father, Minos, that denied our course ;

The sun that sear'd the wings of my sweet boy,

Thy brother Edward ; and thyself, the sea

Whose envious gulf did swallow up his life.

Ah, kill me with thy weapon, not with words !

My breast can better brook thy dagger's point

Than can my ears that tragic history.

But wherefore dost thou come ? is 't for my life ?

Gloster. Think'st thou I am an executioner ? 30

King Henry. A persecutor, I am sure, thou art ;

If murdering innocents be executing,

Why, then thou art an executioner.

Gloster. Thy son I kill'd for his presumption.

King Henry. Hadst thou been kill'd when first thou didst presume,

Thou hadst not liv'd to kill a son of mine.
 And thus I prophesy, — that many a thousand,
 Which now mistrust no parcel of my fear,
 And many an old man's sigh and many a widow's,
 And many an orphan's water-standing eye, — 40
 Men for their sons', wives for their husbands' fate,
 And orphans for their parents' timeless death, —
 Shall rue the hour that ever thou wast born.
 The owl shriek'd at thy birth, an evil sign ;
 The night-crow cried, aboding luckless time ;
 Dogs howl'd, and hideous tempest shook down trees ;
 The raven rook'd her on the chimney's top,
 And chatt'ring pies in dismal discord sung.
 Thy mother felt more than a mother's pain,
 And yet brought forth less than a mother's hope, 50
 An indigested and deformed lump,
 Not like the fruit of such a goodly tree.
 Teeth hadst thou in thy head when thou wast born,
 To signify thou cam'st to bite the world ;
 And, if the rest be true which I have heard,
 Thou cam'st —

Gloster. I 'll hear no more. Die, prophet, in thy speech ; [Stabs him.

For this, amongst the rest, was I ordain'd.

King Henry. Ay, and for much more slaughter after
 this. 59

O, God forgive my sins, and pardon thee ! [Dies.

Gloster. What ! will the aspiring blood of Lancaster
 Sink in the ground ? I thought it would have mounted.

See, how my sword weeps for the poor king's death !
 O, may such purple tears be always shed
 From those that wish the downfall of our house ! —
 If any spark of life be yet remaining,
 Down, down to hell ; and say I sent thee thither,

[Stabs him again.

I, that have neither pity, love, nor fear.
 Indeed, 't is true that Henry told me of ;
 For I have often heard my mother say 70
 I came into the world with my legs forward.

Had I not reason, think ye, to make haste
 And seek their ruin that usurp'd our right ?
 The midwife wonder'd ; and the women cried,
 'O, Jesus bless us, he is born with teeth !'
 And so I was, which plainly signified
 That I should snarl and bite and play the dog.
 Then, since the heavens have shap'd my body so,
 Let hell make crook'd my mind to answer it.

I have no brother, I am like no brother, 80
 And this word 'love,' which greybeards call divine,
 Be resident in men like one another,
 And not in me ! I am myself alone. —

Clarence, beware ! thou keep'st me from the light ;
 But I will sort a pitchy day for thee,
 For I will buzz abroad such prophecies
 That Edward shall be fearful of his life,
 And then, to purge his fear, I 'll be thy death.
 King Henry and the prince his son are gone ;
 Clarence, thy turn is next, and then the rest, 90

Counting myself but bad till I be best.
 I'll throw thy body in another room,
 And triumph Henry in thy day of doom.

[Exit with the body.]

SCENE VII. London. The Palace

KING EDWARD is discovered sitting on his throne; QUEEN ELIZABETH with the infant Prince, CLARENCE, GLOSTER, HASTINGS, and others, near him

King Edward. Once more we sit in England's royal throne,
 Re-purchas'd with the blood of enemies.
 What valiant foemen, like to autumn's corn,
 Have we mow'd down in tops of all their pride!
 Three Dukes of Somerset, threefold renown'd
 For hardy and undoubted champions;
 Two Cliffords, as the father and the son;
 And two Northumberlands, — two braver men
 Ne'er spurr'd their coursers at the trumpet's sound;
 With them the two brave bears, Warwick and Montague,
 That in their chains fetter'd the kingly lion
 And made the forest tremble when they roar'd.
 Thus have we swept suspicion from our seat
 And made our footstool of security. —
 Come hither, Bess, and let me kiss my boy. —
 Young Ned, for thee thine uncles and myself

Have in our armours watch'd the winter's night,
 Went all afoot in summer's scalding heat,
 That thou mightst ~~repossess the crown~~ in peace ;
 And of our labours thou shalt reap the gain. 20

Gloster. [Aside] I'll blast his harvest if your head were laid ;

For yet I am not look'd on in the world.
 This shoulder was ordain'd so thick to heave ;
 And heave it shall some weight or break my back. —
 Work thou the way, — and that shall execute.

King Edward. Clarence and Gloster, love my lovely queen ;

And kiss your princely nephew, brothers both.

Clarence. The duty that I owe unto your majesty
 I seal upon the lips of this sweet babe.

Queen. Thanks, noble Clarence ; worthy brother, thanks. 30

Gloster. And, that I love the tree from whence thou sprang'st,

Witness the loving kiss I give the fruit. —

[Aside] To say the truth, so Judas kiss'd his master,
 And cried, all hail ! whenas he meant all harm.

King Edward. Now am I seated as my soul delights,
 Having my country's peace and brothers' loves.

Clarence. What will your grace have done with Margaret ?

Reignier, her father, to the King of France
 Hath pawn'd the Sicils and Jerusalem,
 And hither have they sent it for her ransom. 40

King Edward. Away with her and waft her hence to France. —

And now what rests but that we spend the time
With stately triumphs, mirthful comic shows,
Such as befits the pleasure of the court?
Sound drums and trumpets! — farewell sour annoy!
For here, I hope, begins our lasting joy. [Exeunt.

TEWKESBURY

NOTES

INTRODUCTION

THE METRE OF THE PLAY.—It should be understood at the outset that metre, or the mechanism of verse, is something altogether distinct from the music of verse. The one is matter of rule, the other of taste and feeling. Music is not an absolute necessity of verse ; the metrical form is a necessity, being that which constitutes the verse.

The plays of Shakespeare (with the exception of rhymed passages, and of occasional songs and interludes) are all in unrhymed or blank verse ; and the normal form of this blank verse is illustrated by the first line of the present play: “I wonder how the King escap’d our hands.”

This line, it will be seen, consists of ten syllables, with the even syllables (2d, 4th, 6th, 8th, and 10th) accented, the odd syllables (1st, 3d, etc.) being unaccented. Theoretically, it is made up of five feet of two syllables each, with the accent on the second syllable. Such a foot is called an iambus (plural, iambuses, or the Latin iambi), and the form of verse is called iambic.

This fundamental law of Shakespeare's verse is subject to certain modifications, the most important of which are as follows:—

1. After the tenth syllable an unaccented syllable (or even two such syllables) may be added, forming what is sometimes called a female line; as in i. 1. 54: "Earl of Northumberland, he slew thy father." The rhythm is complete with the first syllable of father, the second being an extra eleventh syllable. In i. 1. 33 ("And when the King comes, offer him no violence") we have two extra syllables, the rhythm being complete with the first syllable of violence.

2. The accent in any part of the verse may be shifted from an even to an odd syllable; as in i. 1. 8: "Charg'd our main battle's front, and breaking in," and i. 1. 17: "Richard hath best deserv'd of all my sons." In both lines the accent is shifted from the second to the first syllable. This change occurs very rarely in the tenth syllable, and seldom in the fourth; and it is not allowable in two successive accented syllables.

3. An extra unaccented syllable may occur in any part of the line; as in i. 1. 11, 21, and 40. In 11 the second syllable of dangerously is superfluous; in 21 the third syllable of victorious, and in 40 that of Plantagenet. In line 53 the word To is superfluous.

4. Any unaccented syllable, occurring in an even place immediately before or after an even syllable which is properly accented, is reckoned as accented for the purposes of the verse; as, for instance, in lines 4 and 10. In 4 the last syllable of Northumberland, and in 10 that of Buckingham, are metrically equivalent to accented syllables; and so with the last syllable of dangerously in 11, of Somerset in 18, and of Lancaster in 23.

5. In many instances in Shakespeare words must be lengthened in order to fill out the rhythm:—

(a) In a large class of words in which e or i is followed by another vowel, the e or i is made a separate syllable; as, ocean, opinion, soldier, patience, partial, marriage, etc. For instance, i. 2. 6 (“No quarrel, but a slight contention”) appears to have only nine syllables, but contention is a quadrisyllable; and the same is true of occasions in iii. 2. 185. This lengthening occurs most frequently at the end of the line. See also on passion, iv. 4. 19, soldiers, iii. 3. 204, and presumption, v. 6. 34.

(b) Many monosyllables ending in r, re, rs, res, preceded by a long vowel or diphthong, are often made dissyllables; as, fare, fear, dear, hair, hour (see on ii. 5. 26), your, etc. In ii. 1. 83 (“Is kindling coals that fires all my breast”), fires is a dissyllable. If the word is repeated in a verse it is often both monosyllable and dissyllable. In J. C. iii. 1. 172: “As fire drives out fire, so pity, pity,” the first fire is a dissyllable, the second a monosyllable.

(c) Words containing l or r, preceded by another consonant, are often pronounced as if a vowel came between or after the consonants; as in Henry [Hen(e)ry] in i. 1. 139, i. 2. 10, and iii. 3. 90. In v. 4. 18 (“The friends of France, our shrouds and tacklings”) tacklings [tackl(e)ings] is a trisyllable. See also T. of S. ii. 1. 158: “While she did call me rascal fiddler” [fiddl(e)er]; All’s Well, iii. 5. 43: “If you will tarry, holy pilgrim” [pilg(e)rim]; C. of E. v. 1. 360: “These are the parents of these children” (childeren, the original form of the word); W. T. iv. 4. 76: “Grace and remembrance [rememb(e)rance] be to you both!” etc.

(d) Monosyllabic exclamations (ay, O, yea, nay, hail, etc.) and monosyllables otherwise emphasized are similarly lengthened; also certain longer words; as captain (trisyllable) in iv. 7. 30; safety (trisyllable) in Ham. i. 3. 21; business (trisyllable, as originally pronounced) in Rich. II. ii. 1. 217 (so in several other passages); and other words mentioned in the notes to the plays.

6. Words are also contracted for metrical reasons, like plurals and possessives ending in a sibilant, as, balance, horse (for horses, as in i. 4. 127, and horse’s), princess, sense, marriage (plural and possessive), image, etc. So with many adjectives in the superlative (like cold’st, stern’st, kind’st, secret’st, etc.), and certain other words.

7. The accent of words is also varied in many instances for metrical reasons. Thus we find both révenue and revénue in the first scene of M. N. D. (lines 6 and 158), confine (noun) and confine, obscure and obscure, présage and presage, sépulchre (noun) and sepulchre, distinct and distinct, etc.

These instances of variable accent must not be confounded with those in which words were uniformly accented differently in the time of Shakespeare; like aspéct, obdúrate (see on i. 4. 142), advér-tise (see on ii. i. 116), impórtune, sepúlchre (verb), perséver, (never persevére), perséverance, rheúmatic, etc.

8. Alexandrines, or verses of twelve syllables, with six accents, occur here and there in the plays. They must not be confounded with female lines with two extra syllables (see on I above) or with the many other lines in which two extra unaccented syllables may occur.

9. Incomplete verses, of one or more syllables, are scattered through the plays. See i. i. 76, 119, 136, 181, etc.

10. Doggerel measure is used in the earliest comedies (L. L. L. and C. of E. in particular) in the mouths of comic characters, but nowhere else in those plays, and never anywhere in plays written after 1598. There is none in this play.

11. Rhyme occurs frequently in the early plays, but diminishes with comparative regularity from that period until the latest. Thus, in L. L. L. there are about 1100 rhyming verses (about one-third of the whole number), in M. N. D. about 900, in Rich. II. and R. and J. about 500 each, while in Cor. and A. and C. there are only about 40 each, in Temp. only two, and in W. T. none at all, except in the chorus introducing act iv. Songs, interludes, and other matter not in ten-syllable measure are not included in this enumeration. In the present play out of 2905 lines about 300 are in rhyme.

Alternate rhymes are found only in the plays written before 1599 or 1600. In L. L. L. we find 242 lines, in C. of E. 64, and in M. N. D. 96. In M. of V. there are four lines at the end of iii. 2.

In Much Ado and A. Y. L., we also find a few lines, but none at all in subsequent plays. There are none in the present play, though it is an early one.

Rhymed couplets, or "rhyme-tags," are often found at the end of scenes; as in 10 of the 28 scenes of the present play. In Ham. 14 out of 20 scenes, and in Macb. 21 out of 28, have such "tags;" but in the latest plays they are not so frequent. In Temp., for instance, there is but one, and in W. T. none.

12. In this edition of Shakespeare, the final -ed of past tenses and participles in verse is printed 'd when the word is to be pronounced in the ordinary way; as in join'd, line 15, and deserv'd, line 17, of the first scene. But when the metre requires that the -ed be made a separate syllable, the e is retained; as in armed, line 167, where the word is a dissyllable, and environed (quadrisyllable) in line 242. The only variation from this rule is in verbs like cry, die, sue, etc., the -ed of which is very rarely, if ever, made a separate syllable.

SHAKESPEARE'S USE OF VERSE AND PROSE IN THE PLAYS.—This is a subject to which the critics have given very little attention, but it is an interesting study. In most of the plays we find scenes entirely in verse or in prose, and others in which the two are mixed; but the present play (like King John and Rich. II.) is wholly in verse. In general, we may say that verse is used for what is distinctly poetical, and prose for what is not poetical. The distinction, however, is not so clearly marked in the earlier as in the later plays. The second scene of M. of V., for instance, is in prose, because Portia and Nerissa are talking about the suitors in a familiar and playful way; but in T. G. of V., where Julia and Lucetta are discussing the suitors of the former in much the same fashion, the scene is in verse. Dowden, commenting on Rich. II., remarks: "Had Shakespeare written the play a few years later, we may be certain that the gardener and his servants (iii. 4) would not have uttered stately speeches in verse, but would have spoken homely prose, and that humour would have mingled with the pathos of the scene. The same remark may be made with reference to the subsequent scene (v. 5) in which his groom visits the dethroned king in the Tower." Comic characters and those in low life generally speak in prose in the later plays, as Dowden intimates, but in the very earliest ones doggerel verse is much used instead. See on 10 above.

The change from prose to verse is well illustrated in the third scene of M. of V. It begins with plain prosaic talk about a business matter; but when Antonio enters, it rises at once to the higher level of poetry. The sight of Antonio reminds Shylock of his hatred of the Merchant, and the passion expresses itself in verse, the vernacular tongue of poetry.

The reasons for the choice of prose or verse are not always so clear as in this instance. We are seldom puzzled to explain the prose, but not unfrequently we meet with verse where we might expect prose. As Professor Corson remarks (Introduction to Shakespeare, 1889), "Shakespeare adopted verse as the general tenor of his language, and therefore expressed much in verse that is within the capabilities of prose; in other words, his verse constantly encroaches upon the domain of prose, but his prose can never be said to encroach upon the domain of verse." If in rare instances we think we find exceptions to this latter statement, and prose actually seems to usurp the place of verse, I believe that careful study of the passage will prove the supposed exception to be apparent rather than real.

SOME BOOKS FOR TEACHERS AND STUDENTS.—A few out of the many books that might be commended to the teacher and the critical student are the following: Halliwell-Phillipps's Outlines of the Life of Shakespeare (7th ed. 1887); Sidney Lee's Life of Shakespeare (1898; for ordinary students the abridged ed. of 1899 is preferable); Rolfe's Life of Shakespeare (1904); Schmid's Shakespeare Lexicon (3d ed. 1902); Littledale's ed. of Dyce's Glossary (1902); Bartlett's Concordance to Shakespeare (1895); Abbott's Shakespearian Grammar (1873); Furness's "New Variorum" ed.

of the plays (encyclopædic and exhaustive); Dowden's Shakspeare: His Mind and Art (American ed. 1881); Hudson's Life, Art, and Characters of Shakespeare (revised ed. 1882); Mrs. Jameson's Characteristics of Women (several eds.; some with the title, Shakespeare Heroines); Ten Brink's Five Lectures on Shakespeare (1895); Boas's Shakespeare and His Predecessors (1895); Dyer's Folk-lore of Shakespeare (American ed. 1884); Gervinus's Shakespeare Commentaries (Bunnett's translation, 1875); Wordsworth's Shakespeare's Knowledge of the Bible (3d ed. 1880); Elson's Shakespeare in Music (1901).

Some of the above books will be useful to all readers who are interested in special subjects or in general criticism of Shakespeare. Among those which are better suited to the needs of ordinary readers and students, the following may be mentioned: Mabie's William Shakespeare: Poet, Dramatist, and Man (1900); Dowden's Shakspeare Primer (1877; small, but invaluable); Rolfe's Shakespeare the Boy (1896; not a mere juvenile book, but treating of the home and school life, the games and sports, the manners, customs, and folk-lore of the poet's time); Guerber's Myths of Greece and Rome (for young students who may need information on mythological allusions not explained in the notes).

H. Snowden Ward's Shakespeare's Town and Times (2d ed. 1902) and John Leyland's Shakespeare Country (2d ed. 1903) are copiously illustrated books (yet inexpensive) which may be particularly commended for school libraries.

For the English historical plays B. E. Warner's English History in Shakespeare's Plays (1894) will be good collateral reading, particularly in secondary schools.

ABBREVIATIONS IN THE NOTES.—The abbreviations of the names of Shakespeare's plays will be readily understood; as, T. N. for Twelfth Night, Cor. for Coriolanus, 2 Hen. IV. for The Second Part of King Henry the Fourth, etc. P. P. refers to The Passionate Pilgrim; V. and A. to Venus and Adonis; L. C. to Lover's Complaint; and Sonn. to the Sonnets.

Other abbreviations that hardly need explanation are Cf. (confer, compare), Fol. (following), Id. (idem, the same), and Prolog. (prologue). The numbers of the lines in the references (except for the present play) are those of the "Globe" edition (the cheapest and best edition of Shakespeare in one compact volume), which is now generally accepted as the standard for line-numbers in works of reference (Schmidt's Lexicon, Abbott's Grammar, Dowden's Primer, the publications of the New Shakspeare Society, etc.).

THE STORY OF THE PLAY AS TOLD BY THE CHRONICLERS.—For the following outline of the history of the play, with illustrative extracts from the chroniclers, I am indebted to Knight:—

ACT I.—"The battle of St. Alban's concluded the Second Part of the drama of Henry VI.; in the first scene of the Third Part the conquerors are assembled in the parliament-house, boasting of their exploits, and resolved to carry out their victory to its utmost consequences. Yet five years had elapsed between this first great triumph of the Yorkists and the compromise between the rival houses which we find in the scene before us. That compromise followed the battle of Northampton, in the 38th year of Henry VI.; the battle of St. Alban's was fought in the 33d year of that reign. We transcribe the passages from the Chroniclers upon which Shakspeare has constructed his plot. Hall says,—

"During this trouble was a parliament summoned to begin at Westminster in the month of October next following. Before which time Richard Duke of York, being in Ireland, by swift couriers and flying posts, was advertised of the great victory gained by his party at the field of Northampton, and also knew that the king was now in case to be kept and ordered at his pleasure and will; wherefore, losing no time, nor slugging one hour, he sailed from Develine to Chester with no small company, and by long journeys came to the city of London, which he entered the Friday next before the feast of Saint Edward the Confessor, with a sword borne naked before him, and took his lodging in the king's own palace, whereupon the common people babbled that he should be king, and that King Henry should no longer reign. During the time of this parliament, the Duke of York, with a bold countenance, entered into the chamber of the peers and sat down in the throne royal under the cloth of estate (which is the king's peculiar seat), and in the presence as well of the nobility as of the spirituality (after a pause made) said these words in effect.' . . .

"Hall gives a long oration, which Holinshed copies, with the following remarks: 'Master Edward Hall, in his Chronicle, maketh mention of an oration which the Duke of York uttered, sitting in the regal seat there in the chamber of the peers, either at this his first coming in amongst them, or else at some one time after, the which we have thought good also to set down; though John Wethamsted, the Abbot of St. Alban's, who lived in those days, and by all likelihood was there present at the parliament, maketh no further recital of any words which the duke should utter at that time in that his book of records, where he entreateth of this matter.' Hall thus proceeds: 'When the duke had thus ended his oration, the lords sat still like images graven in the wall, or dumb gods, neither whispering nor speaking, as though their mouths had been sewed up. The duke, perceiving none answer to be made to his declared purpose, not well content with their sober silence and taciturnity, advised them well to digest and ponder the effect of his oration and saying, and so, neither fully displeased nor all pleased, departed to his lodging in the king's palace.'

"The compromise upon which the parliament resolved is thus noticed by Hall: 'After long arguments made, and deliberate consultation had among the peers, prelates, and commons of the realm, upon the vigil of All Saints it was condescended and agreed by the three estates, for so much as King Henry had been taken as king by the space of xxxviii years and more, that he should enjoy the name and title of king, and have possession of the realm, during his life natural: And if he either died or resigned, or forfeited the same for infringing any point of this concord, then the said crown and authority royal should immediately be divoluted to the Duke of York, if he then lived, or else to the next heir of his line and lineage, and that the duke from thenceforth should be protector and regent of the land. Provided alway, that if the king did closely or apertly study or go about to break or alter this agreement, or to compass or imagine the death or destruction of the said duke or his blood, then he to forfeit the crown, and the Duke of York to take it. These articles, with many other, were not only written, sealed, and sworn by the two parties, but also were enacted in the high court of parliament. For joy whereof, the king, having in his company the said duke, rode to the cathedral church of Saint Paul within the city of London; and there, on the day of All Saints, went solemnly, with the diadem on his head, in procession, and was lodged a good space after in the bishop's palace, near to the said church. And upon the Saturday next ensuing Richard Duke of York was, by the sound of a trumpet, solemnly proclaimed heir apparent to the crown of England, and protector of the realm.'

“The battle of Wakefield soon followed this hollow compromise. The main incidents of the third and fourth scenes are built upon the Chroniclers. Hall writes thus: ‘The Duke of York with his people descended down in good order and array, and was suffered to pass forward toward the main battle: but when he was in the plain ground between his castle and the town of Wakefield he was environed on every side, like a fish in a net, or a deer in a buck-stall: so that he, manfully fighting, was within half an hour slain and dead, and his whole army discomfited; and with him died of his trusty friends, his two bastard uncles, Sir John and Sir Hugh Mortimers, Sir Davy Halle his chief counsellor, Sir Hugh Hastings, Sir Thomas Nevel, William and Thomas Aparre, both brethren, and two thousand and eight hundred other, whereof many were young gentlemen and heirs of great parentage in the south part, whose lineages revenged their deaths within four months next and immediately ensuing. . . . Whilst this battle was in fighting, a priest called Sir Robert Aspoll, chaplain and schoolmaster to the young

Earl of Rutland, ii son to the above named Duke of York, scarce of the age of xii years, a fair gentleman, and a maidenlike person, perceiving that flight was more safeguard than tarrying, both for him and his master, secretly conveyed the earl out of the field, by the Lord Clifford's band, toward the town ; but ere he could enter into a house he was by the said Lord Clifford espied, followed, and taken, and by reason of his apparel demanded what he was. The young gentleman, dismayed, had not a word to speak, but kneeled on his knees imploring mercy, and desiring grace, both with holding up his hands and making dolorous countenance, for his speech was gone for fear. Save him, said his chaplain, for he is a prince's son, and peradventure may do you good hereafter. With that word, the Lord Clifford marked him, and said, By God's blood, thy father slew mine, and so will I do thee and all thy kin : and with that word stuck the earl to the heart with his dagger, and bade his chaplain bear the earl's mother and brother word what he had done and said.'

“This ferocious revenge of Clifford is commented upon with just indignation by Hall : ‘In this act the Lord Clifford was accompted a tyrant, and no gentleman.’ He then proceeds to describe the death of the Duke of York : ‘This cruel Clifford and deadly blood-supper, not content with this homicide, or childkilling, came to the place where the dead corpse of the Duke of York lay, and caused his head to be stricken off, and set on it a crown of paper, and so fixed it on a pole, and presented it to the queen, not lying far from the field, in great despite and much derision, saying, Madam, your war is done, here is your king's ransom : at which present was much joy and great rejoicing ; but many laughed then that sore lamented after, as the queen herself, and her son : and many were glad then of other men's deaths, not knowing that their own were near at hand, as the Lord Clifford, and other. But, surely, man's nature is so frail that things passed be soon forgotten, and mischiefs to come be not foreseen. After this victory by the queen and her party obtained, she caused the Earl of Salisbury, with all the other prisoners, to be sent to Pomfret, and there to be beheaded, and sent all their heads, and the Duke's head of York, to be set upon poles over the gate of the city of York, in despite of them and their lineage?

“The circumstances attending the death of York are, however, differently told. Holinshed says : ‘Some write that the duke was taken alive, and in derision caused to stand upon a molehill, on whose head they put a garland instead of a crown, which they had fashioned and made of segges or bulrushes, and having so crowned him with that garland they kneeled down afore him as the Jews did to Christ in scorn, saying to him, Hail, king without rule ; hail, king without heritage ; hail, duke and prince without people or possessions. And at length, having thus scorned him with these and divers other the like despightful words, they stroke off his head, which (as ye have heard) they presented to the queen.’ The poet has taken the most picturesque parts of the two narratives.”

ACT II.—“The events which followed the death of the Duke of York are thus described by Hall : ‘The Earl of March, so commonly called, but after the death of his father in deed and in right very Duke of York, lying at Gloucester, hearing of the death of his noble father, and loving brother, and trusty friends, was wonderfully amazed ; but after comfort given to him by his faithful lovers and assured allies, he removed to Shrewsbury and other towns upon the river of Severn, declaring to them the murder of his father, the jeopardy of himself, and the unstable state and ruin of the realm. The people on the Marches of Wales, which above measure favoured the lineage of the lord Mortimer, more gladly offered him their aid and assistance than he it either instantly required or heartily desired, so that he had a puissant army, to the number of twenty-three thousand, ready to go against the queen and the murderers of his father. But when he was setting forward news were brought to him that Jasper Earl of Pembroke, half-brother to King Henry, and James Butler Earl of Ormond and Wiltshire, had assembled together a great number, both of Welsh and Irish people, suddenly to surprise and take him and his friends, and as a captive to convey him to the queen. The Duke of York, called Earl of March, somewhat spurred and quickened with these novelties, retired back, and met with his enemies in a fair plain near to Mortimer's Cross, not far from Hereford east, on Candlemas-day in the morning, at which time the sun (as some write) appeared to the Earl of March like three suns, and suddenly joined altogether in one, and that upon the sight thereof he took such courage that he fiercely set on his enemies, and them shortly discomfited: for which cause men imagined that he gave the sun in his full brightness for his cognizance or badge.'

"The poet passes over the battle of Mortimer's Cross, but gives us the incident of the three suns. He also, not crowding the scene with an undramatic succession of events nearly similar, omits all mention of the second battle of St. Alban's, in which the queen was victorious. This battle was fruitless to the cause of Lancaster, for Edward was almost immediately after recognized as king by the parliament assembled in London. The poet postpones this event, and, after the imaginary interview of the second scene, brings us to the great battle of Towton, which is thus described by Hall: 'This battle was sore fought, for hope of life was set on side on every part, and taking of prisoners was proclaimed as a great offence; by reason whereof every man determined either to conquer or to die in the field. This deadly battle and bloody conflict continued ten hours in doubtful victory, the one part sometime flowing and sometime ebbing; but, in conclusion, King Edward so courageously encouraged his men, refreshing the weary and helping the wounded, that the other part was discomfited and overcome, and, like men amazed, fled toward Tadcaster bridge to save themselves. . . . This conflict was in manner unnatural, for in it the son fought against the father, the brother against the brother, the nephew against the uncle, and the tenant against his lord.'"

ACT III.—"The first scene exhibits the capture of Henry VI.

upon his abandonment of his secure asylum in Scotland. Between that period, 1464, and the accession of Edward, three years had elapsed — years of unavailing struggle on the part of the Lancastrians. The capture of Henry is thus described by Hall: ‘Whatsoever jeopardy or peril might be construed or deemed to have ensued by the means of King Henry, all such doubts were now shortly resolved and determined, and all fear of his doings were clearly put under and extinct. For he himself, whether he were past all fear, or was not well stablished in his perfect mind, or could not long keep himself secret, in a disguised apparel boldly entered into England. He was no sooner entered but he was known and taken of one Cantlowe, and brought toward the king, whom the Earl of Warwick met on the way, by the king’s commandment, and brought him through London to the Tower, and there he was laid in sure hold. Queen Margaret his wife, hearing of the captivity of her husband, mistrusting the chance of her son, all disconsolate and comfortless, departed out of Scotland and sailed into France, where she remained with Duke Reyner her father till she took her unfortunate journey into England again, where she lost both husband and son, and also all her wealth, honour, and worldly felicity.’

“In the second scene the poet, with great dramatic skill, exhibits the course of that wooing which ended in the marriage of Edward with Elizabeth Woodville — an event altogether unpropitious and finally destructive to his house. Hall (whom we still follow, for Holinshed is almost his literal copyist) tells the story with great quaintness, and Shakspeare clearly follows him: ‘But now consider the old proverb to be true that sayeth that marriage is destiny. For during the time that the Earl of Warwick was thus in France concluding a marriage for King Edward, the king, being on hunting in the forest of Wichwood beside Stoney Stratford, came for his recreation to the manor of Grafton, where the duchess of Bedford sojourned, then wife to Sir Richard Woodville, Lord Rivers, on whom then was attending a daughter of hers, called

Dame Elizabeth Grey, widow of Sir John Grey, knight, slain at the last battle of St. Alban's by the power of King Edward. This widow, having a suit to the king, either to be restored by him to something taken from her, or requiring him of pity to have some augmentation to her living, found such grace in the king's eyes that he not only favoured her suit, but much more phantasied her person; for she was a woman more of formal countenance than of excellent beauty, but yet of such beauty and favour that with her sober demeanour, lovely looking, and feminine smiling (neither too wanton nor too humble), beside her tongue so eloquent, and her wit so pregnant, she was able to ravish the mind of a mean person, when she allured and made subject to her the heart of so great a king. After that King Edward had well considered all the lineaments of her body, and the wise and womanly demeanour that he saw in her, he determined first to attempt if he might provoke her to be his sovereign lady, promising her many gifts and fair rewards; affirming farther, that, if she would thereunto condescend, she might so fortune of his paramour and concubine to be changed to his wife and lawful bedfellow; which demand she so wisely and with so covert speech answered and repugned, affirming that, as she was for his honour far unable to be his spouse and bedfellow, so for her own poor honesty she was too good to be either his concubine or sovereign lady; that, where he was a little before heated with the dart of Cupid, he was now set all on a hot burning fire, what for the confidence that he had in her perfect constancy, and the trust that he had in her constant chastity; and without any farther deliberation he determined within himself clearly to marry with her, after that asking counsel of them which he knew neither would nor once durst impugn his concluded purpose. But the Duchess of York, his mother, letted it as much as in her lay, alleging a precontract made by him with the Lady Lucy and divers other lettes; all of which doubts were resolved, and all things made clear, and all cavillations avoided. And so, privily in a morning, he married her at Grafton, where he first phantasied her visage.'

“The contemporary historians, with one exception, make no mention of the suit of Edward, through Warwick, for the hand of the sister of the crafty Lewis XI. But the poet had ample authority for the third scene of this act, in the relation of Hall, which Holinshed also adopts: ‘The French king and his queen were not a little discontent (as I cannot blame them) to have their sister first demanded and then granted, and in conclusion rejected and apparently mocked, without any cause reasonable. But when the Earl of Warwick had perfect knowledge by the letters of his trusty friends that King Edward had gotten him a new wife, and that all that he had done with King Lewis in his ambassage for the conjoining of this new affinity was both frustrate and vain, he was earnestly moved and sore chafed with the chance, and thought it necessary that King Edward should be deposed from his crown and royal dignity, as an inconstant prince, not worthy of such a kingly office. All men for the most part agree that this marriage was the only cause why the Earl of Warwick bare grudge and made war on King Edward. Other affirm that there were other causes, which, added to this, made the fire to flame which before was but a little smoke.’”

ACT IV.—“The defection of Clarence from the cause of his brother has been worked up by the poet into a sudden resolve; — it was probably the result of much contrivance slowly operating upon a feeble mind, coupled with his own passion for the daughter of Warwick. What is rapid and distinct in the play is slow and obscure in the Chronicles. Warwick and Clarence in the play are quickly transformed into enemies to the brother and the ally; in the Chronicles we have to trace them through long courses of intrigue and deception. When Warwick possessed himself of the person of Edward, it is difficult, from the contemporary historians, to understand his real intentions. Hall, however, who compiles with a picturesque eye, tells the story of his capture and release in a manner which was not unfitted to be expanded into dramatic effect: ‘All the king’s doings were by espials declared to the Earl of Warwick, which, like a wise and politic captain, intending not to lose so great an advantage to him given, but trusting to bring all his purposes to a final end and determination by only obtaining this enterprise, in the ~~dead of the night,~~ with an elect company of men of war, as secretly as was possible, set on the king's field, killing them that kept the watch, and or the king were ware (for he thought of nothing less than of that chance that happened), at a place called Wolney, four miles from Warwick, he was taken prisoner, and brought to the castle of Warwick. And to the intent that the king's friends might not know where he was, nor what was chanced of him, he caused him by secret journeys in the night to be conveyed to Middleham Castle in Yorkshire, and there to be kept under the custody of the Archbishop of York his brother, and other his trusty friends, which entertained the king like his estate, and served him like a prince. But there was no place so far off but that the taking of the king was shortly known there with the wind, which news made many men to fear and greatly to dread, and many to wonder and lament the chance. King Edward, being thus in captivity, spake ever fair to the archbishop and to the other keepers; but, whether he corrupted them with money or fair promises, he had liberty divers days to go on hunting; and one day on a plain there met with him Sir William Stanley, Sir Thomas of Borogh, and divers other of his friends, with such a great band of men, that neither his keepers would nor once durst move him to return to prison again.'

"In the beginning of 1471 Edward was a fugitive, almost without a home. The great Earl of Warwick had placed Henry again in the nominal seat of authority; a counter-revolution had been effected. By one of those bold movements which set aside all calculation of consequences Edward leaped once more into the throne of England. In an age when perjury and murder were equally resorted to, Edward, on landing, did not hesitate to disguise his real objects, and to maintain that he was in arms only to enforce his claims as Duke of York. The scene before the walls of York is quite borne out by the contemporary historians; and especially in that most curious Historie of the arrival of Edward IV. in England, published by the Camden Society. Shakspeare evidently went to Hall as his authority: 'King Edward, without any words spoken to him, came peaceably near to York, of whose coming when the citizens were certified, without delay they armed themselves and came to defend the gates, sending to him two of the chiefest aldermen of the city, which earnestly admonished him on their behalf to come not one foot nearer, nor temerarily to enter into so great a jeopardy, considering that they were fully determined and bent to compel him to retract with dint of sword. King Edward, marking well their message, was not a little troubled and unquieted in his mind, and driven to seek the farthest point of his wit; for he had both two mischievous and perilous chances even before his eyes, which were hard to be evaded or repelled:—one was, if he should go back again he feared lest the rural and common people, for covetousness of prey and spoil, would fall on him, as one that fled away for fear and dread; the other was, if he should proceed any farther in his journey, then might the citizens of York issue out with all their power, and suddenly circumvent him and take him. Wherefore he determined to set forward, neither with army nor with weapon, but with lowly words and gentle entreatings, requiring most heartily the messengers that were sent to declare to the citizens that he came neither to demand the realm of England nor the superiority of the same, but only the duchy of York, his old inheritance; the which duchy if he might by their means readopt and recover, he would never pass out of his memory so great a benefit and so friendly a gratuity to him exhibited. And so, with fair words and flattering speech, he dismissed the messengers; and with good speed he and his followed so quickly after, that they were almost at the gates as soon as the ambassadors. The citizens, hearing his good answer, that he meant nor intended nothing prejudicial to King Henry nor his royal authority, were much mitigated and cooled, and began to commune with him from their walls, willing him to convey himself into some other place without delay, which if he did, they assured him that he should have neither hurt nor damage. But he, gently speaking to all men, and especially to such as were aldermen, whom he called worshipful, and by their proper names them saluted, after many fair promises to them made, exhorted and desired them that, by their favourable friendship and friendly permission, he might enter into his own town, of the which he had both his name and title. All the whole day was consumed in doubtful communication and earnest interlocution. The citizens, partly won by his fair words, and partly by hope of his large promises, fell to this pact and convention, that if King Edward would swear to entertain his citizens of York after a gentle sort and fashion, and hereafter to be obedient and faithful to all King Henry's commandments and precepts, that then they would receive him into their city, and aid and comfort him with money. King Edward (whom the citizens called only Duke of York), being glad of this fortunate chance, in the next morning, at the gate where he should enter, a priest being ready to say mass, in the mass time, receiving the body of our blessed Saviour, solemnly swearing to keep and observe the two articles above mentioned and agreed upon, when it was far unlike that he either intended or purposed to observe any of them, which afterwards was to all men manifest.' ”

ACT V.—“Of the battle of Barnet the following is Hall's description :—

“‘When the day began to spring the trumpets blew courageously and the battle fiercely began. Archers first shot, and bill-men them followed. King Edward, having the greater number of men, valiantly set on his enemies. The earl on the other side, remembering his ancient fame and renown, manfully withstood him. This battle on both sides was sore fought and many slain, in whose rooms succeeded ever fresh and fresh men. In the mean season, while all men were together by the ears, ever looking to which way fortune would incline, the Earl of Warwick, after long fight, wisely did perceive his men to be over pressed with the multitude of his adversaries; wherefore he caused new men to relieve them that fought in the forward, by reason of which succours King Edward's part gave a little back (which was the cause that some lookers-on, and no fighters, galloped to London, saying that the earl had won the field), which thing when Edward did perceive, he with all diligence sent fresh men to their succours.

“‘If the battle were fierce and deadly before, now it was crueller, more bloody, more fervent and fiery, and yet they had fought from morning almost to noon without any part getting advantage of other. King Edward, being weary of so long a conflict and willing to see an end, caused a great crew of fresh men (which he had for this only policy kept all day in store) to set on their enemies, in manner being weary and fatigate: but although the earl saw these new succours of fresh and new men to enter the battle, being nothing afraid, but hoping of the victory (knowing perfectly that there was all King Edward's power), comforted his men, being weary, sharply quickening and earnestly desiring them with hardy stomachs to bear out this last and final brunt of the battle, and that the field was even at an end. But when his soldiers, being sore wounded, wearied with so long a conflict, did give little regard to his words, he, being a man of a mind invincible, rushed into the midst of his enemies, where as he (aventured so far from his own company to kill and slay his adversaries that he could not be rescued) was in the middle of his enemies stricken down and slain. The Marquis Montacute, thinking to succour his brother, which he saw was in great jeopardy, and yet in hope to obtain the victory, was likewise overthrown and slain. After the earl was dead his party fled, and many were taken, but not one man of name nor of nobility.’

“The most curious accounts, both of the battles of Barnet and Tewkesbury, and indeed of all this rapid counter-revolution, which has scarcely a parallel in our English annals, are to be found in a contemporary narrative published by the Camden Society. Neither that narrative, nor the Ghent MS., which is an abridgment of it, were probably accessible to Shakspeare. We must therefore still be content to trace him in Hall and Holinshed. The following graphic account of the battle of Tewkesbury is from Hall:—

“ ‘After the field ended King Edward made a proclamation that whosoever could bring Prince Edward to him, alive or dead, should have an annuity of an c l. during his life, and the prince’s life to be saved. Sir Richard Croftes, a wise and a valiant knight, nothing mistrusting the king’s former promise, brought forth his prisoner Prince Edward, being a goodly feminine and a well-featured young gentleman, whom when King Edward had well advised, he demanded of him how he durst so presumptuously enter into his realm with banner displayed. The prince, being bold of stomach and of a good courage, answered, saying, To recover my father’s kingdom and inheritance from his father and grandfather to him, and from him, after him, to me lineally divoluted. At which words, King Edward said nothing, but with his hand thrust him from him (or, as some say, stroke him with his gauntlet), whom incontinent they that strode about, which were George Duke of Clarence, Richard Duke of Gloster, Thomas Marquis Dorset, and William Lord Hastings, suddenly murdered and piteously mangled. The bitterness of which murder some of the actors after in their latter days tasted and essayed by the very rod of justice and punishment of God. His body was homeiy interred with the other simple corpses in the church of the monastery of Black Monks in Tewkesbury. This was the last civil battle that was fought in King Edward’s days, which was gotten the iii day of May, in the x year of his reign, and in the year of our Lord mccccclxxi then being Saturday. And on Monday next ensuing was Edmund Duke of Somerset, John Longstrother, Prior of Saint John’s, Sir Garveys Clifton, Sir Thomas Tresham, and xii other knights and gentlemen beheaded in the market-place at Tewkesbury.’

“It is unnecessary for us here to enter upon the disputed question as to whether Richard Duke of Gloster were the actual mur-derer of Henry VI. The following is Holinshed's account of this event:—

“Poor King Henry VI., a little before deprived (as we have heard) of his realm and imperial crown, was now in the Tower spoiled of his life by Richard Duke of Gloster (as the constant fame ran), who, to the intent that his brother King Edward might reign in more surety, murdered the said King Henry with a dagger, although some writers of that time, favouring altogether the house of York, have recorded that, after he understood what losses had chanced to his friends, and how not only his son but also all other his chief partakers were dead and despatched, he took it so to heart, that of pure displeasure, indignation, and melancholy, he died the three-and-twentieth of May. The dead corpse, on the Ascension even (the 29th) was conveyed with bills and glaives pompously (if you will call that a funeral pomp) from the Tower to the church of St. Paul, and there laid on a bier, where it rested the space of one whole day, and, on the next day after, it was conveyed, without priest or clerk, torch or taper, singing or saying, unto the monastery of Chertsey, distant from London fifteen miles, and there was it first buried; but after, it was removed to Windsor, and there in a new vault newly inhumate.’”

ACT I

SCENE I.—Edward, Prince of Wales, was born Oct. 14, 1453. The Duke of York was Richard Plantagenet, who figures in the preceding plays. The Duke of Norfolk was John Mowbray, fourth Duke of Norfolk, the last male descendant of his race, and an important character in Rich. III. The Marquess of Montague was Sir John Neville, son of Richard, Earl of Salisbury, and brother of the “King-maker.” The Earl of Oxford was John de Vere, thirteenth Earl of Oxford, who is also a character in Rich. III. The Duke of Somerset was Edmund Beaufort, fourth and last Duke of Somerset, and son of the Duke in 2 Hen. VI. The Duke of Exeter was Henry Holland, son of John Holland, Earl of Huntingdon, created Duke of Exeter in 1445. The Earl of Northumberland was Henry Percy, grandson of Hotspur, and succeeded to the title in 1455. The Earl of Westmoreland was the second earl, and grandson of the famous Ralph Neville, who figures in 1 and 2 Hen. IV. and Hen. V. Edmund, Earl of Rutland, was the third son of the Duke of York, born May 17, 1443, and seventeen years old when killed by Clifford. George, Duke of Clarence, was the sixth son of the Duke of York, born Oct. 21, 1449. He appears again in Rich. III. The Earl of Pembroke was William Herbert, son of Sir William Ap Thomas Herbert.

1. I wonder how, etc. White remarks: "This reference to the last scene of the preceding Part is a mere dramatic contrivance to establish an intimate connection between the two. Between the battle of St. Alban's, with which the Second Part closes, and the Parliament at which the ineffectual compromise between Henry VI. and the Duke of York was made, five years elapsed: — the date of the latter was 1460. Indeed, the reader of these plays must constantly remember that he is not reading a chronicle, or even a history; and that Shakespeare grouped the events of the reigns which he undertook to illustrate with a single eye to dramatic effect."

7. Lord Clifford, etc. The account of Clifford's death here differs from that in 2 Hen. VI. v. 2. 13 fol. That is from the Contention, this from the True Tragedy.

8. Battle's. Army's; as often. Cf. 15 just below; also ii. 1. 121, ii. 2. 72, etc.

9. By the swords of common soldiers. "The elder Clifford was slain by York, and his son lives to revenge his death" (Mason).

11. Dangerously. The folio has "dangerous;" corrected by Theobald from the old play. S. does not elsewhere use dangerous as an adverb.

12. Beaver. Helmet. Cf. Rich. III. v. 3. 50. It was properly the visor of the helmet; as in Ham. i. 2. 230, etc.

16. Speak thou for me, etc. As Malone notes, Richard was only a year old at the time of the first battle of St. Alban's, at which he is represented as present (2 Hen. VI. v. 3), and only six years old at this time. The anachronism is from the old play.

19. Hope. Capell reads "end," and Dyce "hap." The latter may be right.

25. Fearful. Full of fear, timorous, cowardly; as in 178 below.

34. Perforce. Rowe reads "by force," as in 29 above.

41. Henry. A trisyllable; as often in this play and the preceding. See 107 below, etc.

47. Shake his bells. An allusion to the little bells which were attached to hawks. Cf. A. Y. L. iii. 3. 81: "As the ox hath his bow, sir, the horse his curb, and the falcon her bells," etc. See also R. of L. 511: "With trembling fear, as fowl hear falcons' bells." The bells were supposed to frighten the birds that were hawked at.

62. Patience. Apparently a trisyllable here. Cf. patient in 215 below.

69. But when, etc. The folios give this to "Westm.;" corrected by Theobald (from the old play).

76. I am thine. Some read, with the old play, "Thou art deceiv'd: I am thine."

78. The earldom. That of March, which he inherited from his mother, and by which he claimed his title to the throne. The old play has "the kingdom."

83. And that's Richard. The 1st folio omits and, which the 2d supplies, and which is also in the old play.

93. Yes. Theobald has "No" (from the old play). As Clarke remarks, you forget = you do not remember.

105. Thy. The folios have "My;" corrected by Rowe. As Malone notes, Richard's father was Earl of Cambridge, and never Duke of York, having been beheaded while his elder brother, Edward Duke of York, was still living. The error is taken from the old play.

107. I am the son of Henry the Fifth. "The military reputation of Henry V. is the sole support of his son. The name of Henry V. dispersed the followers of Cade" (Johnson).

110. Sith. Since. Cf. i. 3. 41 below.

114. Father, tear the crown. Hanmer reads "Tear the crown, father," which improves the metre; but there are many such metrical imperfections in this play.

120. Peace thou, etc. Some follow the old play in giving this speech to Northumberland, but Henry now and then can speak sharply.

133. Rebellion. A quadrisyllable.

139. Henry. A trisyllable. Cf. 41 and 107 above.

144. Crown. Johnson remarks that the meaning of the text must be "detrimental to the general rights of hereditary royalty;" but he conjectures "son" for crown. Dr. Percy reminds him that Richard II. had no son. Capell reads "the crown" (from the old play).

164. Thy crown. The crown you wear. Some read "the crown."

170. Hear me. The me, omitted in the 1st and 2d folios, is restored in the 3d folio from the old play.

186. Bands. Bonds; as often.

190. They seek revenge, etc. "They go away, not because they doubt the justice of this determination, but because they have been conquered and seek to be revenged. They are not influenced by principle, but passion" (Johnson).

206. Sennet. A particular set of notes on the trumpet or cornet.

My castle. Sandal Castle in Yorkshire, where the next scene is laid. It was demolished by order of the Parliament in 1646, but its ruins are still to be seen in the village of Sandal, about two miles from Wakefield.

207. Soldiers. A trisyllable; as in i. 2. 42 and iv. 3. 61 below.

211. Bewray. Betray, show; as in iii. 3. 97 below. Cf. Lear, ii. 1. 109, iii. 6. 18, etc.

212. Exeter, so will I. Pope reads "So, Exeter, will I." See on 114 above.

233. Given . . . such head. A "horseman's phrase." Cf. T. of S. i. 2. 249; "Give him head; I know he'll prove a jade." See also Rich. II. iii. 3. 12.

234. As. That. Cf. Rich. III. iii. 4. 41, etc.

239. Faulconbridge. Thomas Nevil, natural son of William Nevil, Lord Faulconbridge. He had been appointed vice-admiral by Warwick, and had orders to guard the passage between Dover and Calais, in order that no friends of King Henry might land in England (Ritson).

For the narrow seas, cf. M. of V. ii. 8. 28:—

"in the narrow seas that part
The French and English;"

and Id. iii. 1. 4: "wracked on the narrow seas." See also iv. 8. 3 below.

245. Granted to. Assented to.

261. From the field. The 1st folio has "to" for from; corrected in the 2d. The old play also has from.

268. Coast. Watch and follow, or hover around, like a bird of prey. The folio has "cost," which some retain (as = cost me), but it does not suit the context. Steevens conjectures "cote" (see Ham. ii. 2. 330); and Dyce "souse" (see K. John v. 2. 150). Hanmer has "truss." Empty = hungry; as in V. and A. 55 (see next note) and 2 Hen. VI. iii. 1. 248.

269. Tire on. Seize and feed on ravenously. Cf. V. and A. 56:—

"Even as an empty eagle, sharp by fast,
Tires with her beak on feathers, flesh, and bone,
Shaking her wings, devouring all in haste,
Till either gorge be stuff'd or prey be gone."

See also Cymb. iii. 4. 97.

270. Three lords. Northumberland, Clifford, and Westmoreland. Cf. 183-188 above.

272. Cousin. Henry Holland, Duke of Exeter, was cousin-german to the king, his grandfather John having married Elizabeth Plantagenet, daughter of John of Gaunt by his first wife.

www.libtool.com.cn

SCENE II. — 6. Contention. A quadrisyllable.

10. Henry. A trisyllable. See on i. 1. 41 above.

22. An oath is of no moment, etc. "The obligation of an oath is here avoided by a very despicable sophistry. A lawful magistrate alone has the power to exact an oath, but the oath derives no part of its force from the magistrate. The plea against the obligation of an oath obliging to maintain a usurper (taken from the unlawfulness of the oath itself), in the foregoing play, was rational and just" (Johnson).

43. Witty. Intelligent, sagacious. Cf. T. N. i. 5. 39: "Better a witty fool than a foolish wit."

44. Resteth. Remains; as in 1 Hen. VI. i. 3. 70: "Nought rests for me," etc. Cf. iv. 2. 13 and v. 7. 42 below.

47. Enter a Messenger. The folios have "Enter Gabriel," which was probably the Christian name of an actor. There was a player named Gabriel Spencer in Henslowe's company in 1598. See on iii. 1 (first note).

48. Post? Haste; as in iii. 3. 222 below.

49. The queen, with all the northern earls, etc. "I know not whether the author intended any moral instruction; but he that reads this has a striking admonition against precipitancy, by which we often use unlawful means to do that which a little delay would put honestly in our power. Had York stayed but a few moments, he had saved his cause from the stain of perjury" (Johnson).

50. Intend. A "confusion of construction;" as in 1 Hen. VI. iii. 2. 129. Pope reads "Intends."

68. Woman-general! Most of the editors read "woman's general," as the folio does. The text is due to White.

74. Whenas. Used sometimes for when, as whileas (2 Hen. VI. i. 1. 225) for while, etc. Cf. ii. 1. 46 and v. 7. 34 below.

SCENE III.—1. His Tutor. “A prieste called Sir Robbert Aspall” (Hall).

5. Whose. Referring to brat.

13. Devouring paws. Steevens remarks that paws is odd here; but cf. Milton, Lycidas, 128:—

“ Besides what the grim wolf with privy paw
Daily devours apace.”

26. Sufficient. A quadrisyllable. This lengthening seldom occurs except at the end of a line, but there are several instances of the exception in this play. See on i. 1. 133, 215, etc.

39. Ere I was born. Malone remarks: “Rutland was born, I believe, in 1443; and Clifford’s father was killed at the battle of St. Alban’s in 1455.” The error is from the old play.

40. Thou hast one son. Henry, the hero of Wordsworth’s Song at the Feast of Brougham Castle.

41. Sith. See on i. 1. 110 above.

48. Dii faciant, etc. “The gods grant that this be the sum of thy glory!” As Steevens remarks, this is from Ovid’s Epistle from Phillis to Demophoon.

SCENE IV.—2. Uncles. Sir John and Sir Hugh Mortimer. Cf. i. 2. 62 above.

9. Make a lane. Cut his way through the enemy.

19. Budg’d. Gave way, yielded the ground. Cf. v. 4. 66 below. The folios have “bodg’d,” which some take to be = botched; but that does not suit the context. York does not mean that they fought in a bungling way, but that the struggle was bootless on account of the over-matching force opposed to them.

33. Phaethon. For the allusion, cf. Rich. II. iii. 3. 178 and R. and J. iii. 2. 3. See also ii. 6. 12 below.

34. Prick. Mark, dial-point. Cf. R. and J. ii. 4. 119: “the prick of noon;” and R. of L. 781: “Ere he arrive his weary noon-tide prick.”

50. Buckle. Join in close fight ; as in 1 Hen. VI. i. 2. 95, iv. 4. 5, and v. 3. 28. The folios have "buckler;" corrected by Theobald. Hudson reads "buckle thee with blows," since he does "not understand the meaning of ~~if buckle with thee~~ blows;" but buckle is no more a transitive verb than strive or struggle, and requires with to complete the sense. Besides, buckle with thee is evidently meant to jingle with bandy with thee. Of course it is not necessary to consider blows the direct object of buckle. It is added as an antithesis to word, but the construction (about which the writer of course did not trouble himself) is not precisely the same. The expression is sufficiently justified by the analogy of "fight with thee blow for blow," etc. Cf. ii. 5. 76 below: "I'll aid thee tear for tear." The grammatical license — if it be so regarded — is by no means so bold as in making buckle transitive, with thee for its object.

55. To prick. As to prick. For the ellipsis, cf. J. C. iii. 1. 40, M. of V. iii. 3. 10, etc.

59. Prize. Warburton reads "praise;" but prize here is the "right" which the "might" of war gives. As Johnson says, "all vantages are in war lawful prize." In ii. 1. 20 below some see a similar use of prize; but that is not so clear.

60. Impeach. For the noun, cf. C. of E. v. 1. 269: "why, what an intricate impeach is this!"

61. Gin. Snare; as in T. N. ii. 5. 92, Mach. iv. 2. 35, etc.

68. Raught. The only form of the past tense of reach in S. The participle reached occurs only in Oth. i. 2. 24.

73. Mess. Often used to denote a company of four. Cf. L. L. L. iv, 3. 207, v. 2. 361, etc.

77. Mutinies. Contentions, conflicts; as in L. L. L. i. 1. 170, etc.

79. Napkin. Handkerchief; as often.

84. Deadly. For the adverbial use, cf. Much Ado, v. 1. 178, A. W. v. 3. 117, etc.

87. Stamp, rave, etc. In the folio this line is placed after 91 below; but Malone saw that it belongs here, as in the old play.

White remarks: "The passage is taken bodily from the old version, except that two new lines [90, 91] are added; and these two lines are added to make the transition from the allusion to York's tearless eyes to 'Thou wouldst be fee'd,' etc., less abrupt; which intention the transposition of the line 'Stamp, rave,' etc., and the interposition of it between the added lines and the remainder of the passage, entirely defeats; as, in that case, this line is isolated, whereas in the old octavo, as will be seen in our text, it has a direct relation to the one which immediately precedes it. The transposition was doubtless an accidental consequence of the alteration made in the old text."

100. And broke. Hanmer reads "hath broke," but such ellipses are not rare in S.

103. Pale. Enclose, encompass; as in A. and C. ii. 7. 74: "Whate'er the ocean pales, or sky inclips."

106. Too, too. Some print "too-too," but the more emphatic repetition seems better here; as in Ham. i. 2. 129: "this too, too solid flesh," etc.

108. Do him dead. Cf. 2 Hen. VI. iii. 2. 179: "who should do the duke to death?" See also ii. 1. 103 and iii. 3. 103 below.

114. Trull. Harlot, drab.

115. Captivates! Used in its original sense of make captive, bring into bondage. Cf. Armado's use of it in L. L. L. iii. 1. 126: "immured, restrained, captivated, bound."

116. Vizard-like. Like a vizard, or visor.

118. Assay. Try, attempt. Cf. Ham. iv. 7. 153: "'T were better not assay'd," etc.

121. Type. Badge, mark. Cf. Rich. III. iv. 4. 244: "The high imperial type of this earth's glory;" where, as here, the crown is meant.

122. Sicils. Sicilies; as in v. 7. 39 below. Cf. 2 Hen. VI. i. 1. 6.

127. Horse. Apparently to be regarded as a plural. See p. 163 above.

129. God he knows. Cf. K. John, v. 7. 60, Rich. III. iii. 1. 10, 26, iii. 7. 235, etc.

132. Government. Self-control; as in 1 Hen. IV. i. 2. 31, iii. 1. 184, Oth. iii. 3. 256, etc. www.libtool.com.cn

136. Septentrion. North (Latin septentrio); used by S. only here. Cf. Milton, P. R. iv. 31: "From cold septentrion blasts;" the only instance in which he uses the word.

137. O tiger's heart, etc. See p. 12 above.

142. Obdurate. Regularly accented on the second syllable by S.

146. The rain begins. Cf. T. and C. iv. 4. 55: "rain to lay this wind." See also R. of L. 1788, Macb. i. 7. 25, and ii. 5. 85 below.

150. Passion moves. The 1st folio has "passions moves," and the 2d "passions move." The text is that of the Cambridge ed.

152, 153. The lines are arranged as by Warburton from the old play. In the folios they form three lines, ending with his, touch'd, and blood. The passage is perhaps corrupt, but no satisfactory emendation has been proposed. For with blood the 2d folio has "the roses just with blood."

155. Tigers of Hyrcania. Cf. Macb. iii. 4. 101: "the Hyrcan tiger." Hyrcania was a Persian province.

169. To all. Capell reads "of all," and in the next line "could" for should (both from the old play).

171. Inly. Inward; as in T. G. of V. ii. 7. 18: "the inly touch of love."

172. Weeping-ripe. Ripe or ready for weeping; as in L. L. L. v. 2. 274. Cf. sinking-ripe in C. of E. i. 1. 78.

ACT II

SCENE I. — 9. Resolv'd. Satisfied; as in ii. 2. 124 below.

10. Is become. That is, what has become of him. Cf. iv. 4. 25 below. See also Spenser, F. Q. i. 10. 16: "the deare Charissa, where is she become?"

14. Neat. Neat or horned cattle. Cf. W. T. i. 2. 125 :—

“ the steer, the heifer, and the calf

Are all call'd neat.”

www.libtool.com.cn

20. Pride. The folios have “ prize ; ” corrected by Warburton from the old play. Some would make “ prize ” = privilege, comparing i. 4. 59 above ; but this does not seem to me a parallel case. Besides, the line is taken bodily from the old play ; and, as White remarks, “ it is impossible to believe that S., in doing this, changed intentionally a word with a good and pertinent signification for one for which, in its present connection, no proper meaning can be found.”

22. Takes her farewell, etc. “ Aurora takes for a time her farewell of the sun when she dismisses him to his diurnal course ” (Johnson) ; or “ when she leaves him to take her place ” (Clarke).

24. Trimm'd like a younker, etc. Cf. I Hen. IV. iii. 3. 92 : “ Will you make a younker of me ? ” Most editors read younker in M. of V. ii. 6. 14.

25. Three suns. This is from the chroniclers. See p. 173 above.

27. Racking. Floating like rack (see Ham. ii. 2. 506) or floating cloud ; the only instance of the verb in S. Malone quotes Edw. III. :—

“ like inconstant clouds

That, rack'd upon the carriage of the winds,

Increase,” etc.

36. Meeds. Merits ; as in iv. 8. 38 below.

46. Whenas. See on i. 2. 74 above.

48. O, speak no more, etc. “ The generous tenderness of Edward and savage fortitude of Richard are well distinguished by their different reception of their father's death ” (Johnson).

51. The hope of Troy. Hector. Cf. iv. 8. 25 below.

82. Selsame. The very. Hanmer reads “ th' selfsame.”

83. Fires. A dissyllable. Capell reads “ fire,” and “ burn ” in the next line. It would be better to change coals to "coal," as the Cambridge editors suggest, if any change were called for ; but the relative often takes a singular verb, though the antecedent is plural.

91. Bird. Eaglet. For its use for a young bird, cf. 1 Hen. IV. v. 1. 60 : "the cuckoo's bird." See also T. A. ii. 3. 154.

92. Show thy descent by gazing 'gainst the sun. It was a very ancient belief that the eagle was the one bird that could gaze undazzled at the sun. Pliny says that it exposes its brood to this test as soon as they are hatched, to prove if they are genuine or not. Chaucer refers to the belief in his Parlement of Foules ; as Spenser does in the following fine passage from the Hymn of Heavenly Beauty :—

"Mount up aloft through heavenly contemplation,
From this darke world, whose dampes the soule do blynd,
And, like the native brood of Eagles kynd
On that bright Sunne of Glorie fixe thine eyes, Clear'd from grosse mists of fraile infirmitie."

95. Fare. Luck, fortune ; as in K. John, v. 7. 35 : "ill fare ;" the only other instance of the noun in S.

99. Thy words would add, etc. Cf. Much Ado, ii. 1. 255 : "She speaks poniards, and every word stabs ;" and Ham. iii. 2. 414 : "I will speak daggers to her."

103. Done to death. See on i. 4. 108 above.

106. Sith. See on i. 1. 110 above.

110. Depart. For the noun, cf. iv. 1. 92 below.

113. And very well appointed, etc. This line is omitted in the folios ; restored by Steevens from the old play. As the whole speech is reproduced almost without change, the omission was probably accidental. For well appointed (= well equipped), cf. Hen. V. iii. chor. 4.

116. Advertised. Regularly accented by S. on the second syllable. Cf. iv. 5. 9 and v. 3. 18 below.

124. Heated spleen. Ardent impetuosity. Cf. Rich III. v. 3.

350 : "Inspire us with the spleen of fiery dragons," etc. Warburton changes heated to "hated," spoiling the antithesis with coldness.

130. The night-owl's lazy flight. Yarrell (British Birds) says that the flight of owls "is easy and buoyant, but not rapid."

131. Idle. The folios have "lazy;" corrected by Capell (from the old play). White retains "lazy."

140. Marches. Borders, border country; as in Hen. V. i. 2. 140.

141. Making another head. Gathering another force. Cf. the play on head in I Hen. IV. i. 3. 284 : "to save our heads by raising of a head," etc.

146. Your kind aunt. Isabel, daughter of John I., King of Portugal, by Philippa of Lancaster, eldest daughter of John of Gaunt : she was therefore third cousin to Edward instead of aunt. The George, referred to in 143, was at this time in his twelfth year, and Richard was in his ninth.

150. Retire. Retreat ; as in K. John, ii. 1. 326, v. 5. 4, etc.

169. Haught. Haughty. Cf. Rich. II. iv. 1. 254 and Rich. III. ii. 3. 28.

170. Moe. More ; used only with a plural or collective noun.

182. Via! An interjection of encouragement (Italian), literally = away ! Amain is omitted in the folios ; restored by Theobald from the old play.

190. Fail'st. Changed by Steevens to "fall'st." The old play has "faints."

191. Forefend. Forbid ; as in W. T. iv. 4. 541, Rich. II. iv. 1. 129 (in quartos ; "forbid" in folios), etc.

207. Puissant. A dissyllable ; as elsewhere. Cf. v. 1. 6 and v. 2. 31 below. The noun puissance is either dissyllabic or trisyllabic in S.

209. Sorts. Suits, is well. Cf. T. and C. i. 1. 109 : —

" this woman's answer sorts,
For womanish it is to be from thence."

Lines 205–209 are not in the old play.

SCENE II.—6. Irks. Is irksome to, annoys. Cf. 1 Hen. VI. i. 4. 105 : "It irks his heart he cannot be reveng'd," etc.

8. Nor wittingly. Nor purposely.

10. Harmful. Hanmer reads "harmless," but harmful is consistent with the preceding too much.

19. Level. Aim. Cf. 2 Hen. IV. iii. 2. 286 : "the foeman may with as great aim level at the edge of a penknife," etc.

30. Fearful. Timorous. See on i. 1. 25 above. The folio has "with" for in (from the old play).

38. Fondly. Foolishly; as in K. John, ii. 1. 258 : "But if you fondly pass our proffer'd offer," etc.

44. Inferring. Bringing forward, adducing. Cf. iii. 1. 49 below.

46. Bad success. A bad issue. Cf. Rich. III. iv. 4. 236 : "dangerous success," etc.

47. Happy always was it, etc. "Alluding to a common proverb : 'Happy the child whose father went to the devil'" (Johnson). The folios make the sentence an assertion, but it is a question in the old play, as the context requires it to be.

57. Soft courage. The editors have been in doubt how to explain this, and Collier reads "soft carriage" (the conjecture of Mason). Schmidt, Clarke, and Hudson make courage = heart, disposition; and it certainly may have that sense, though White says that no instance of it has been found. Cf. Spenser, F. Q. ii. 5. 1 : —

"Disleall Knight, whose coward corage chose
To wreake it selfe on beast all innocent."

Ascham, in his Toxophilus, speaks of "having a faint hart or courage." White takes the word to be here = encouragement : "the queen means to say that the king's tame replies to her and to Clifford are poor encouragement to those who are fighting his battles." Soft courage seems to me simply = soft kind of courage, or weak courage. Cf. iv. 1. 12 below ; "so weak of courage;" a very similar expression, whether courage have its ordinary sense or be = heart.

64. Apparent. That is, heir-apparent; as, figuratively, in W. T. i. 2. 177:—

“Next to thyself and my young rover, he’s Apparent to my heart.”

66. Toward. Forward, bold. Elsewhere it is opposed to forward; as in T. of S. v. 2. 182, etc.

72. Darraign your battle. “That is, range your host, put your host in order” (Johnson). Cf. Spenser, F. Q. i. 4. 40: “Redoubted battaile ready to darrayne;” Id. i. 7. 11: “Did to him pace sad battaile to darrayne;” and Id. iii. 1. 20:—

“On which she saw six knights, that did darrayne
Fiers battaile against one with cruell might and mayne.”

Steevens cites Guy Earl of Warwick, 1661: “Darraign our battles, and begin the fight.” The old play has “Prepare your battles.” Darraign occurs nowhere else in S.

89. Since when, etc. The 1st folio gives lines 89–92 to “Cla.,” and the old play to “George;” but in 92 “his brother” is altered to “me,” which shows that S. intended the whole to belong to Edward. In the old play the passage reads thus:—

“George. Since when he hath broke his oath,
For as we heare you that are king
Though he doe weare the Crowne,
Haue causede him by new act of Parlement
To blot our brother out, and put his owne son in.”

97. Sort. Set, crew; contemptuous; as in 1 Hen. VI. ii. 1. 167, etc.

112. Clifford. Capell reads “Clifford there” (from the old play).

124. Resolv'd. Satisfied, convinced. See on ii. 1. 9 above.

133. Whoever got thee, etc. The folios give this to "War.," but the reply of the queen shows that the old play is right in assigning it to Richard.

134. Wot. Know; used only in the present tense and the participle wotting, for which see W. T. iii. 2. 77.

136. Stigmatic. One branded by nature with the stigma of deformity. Cf. 2 Hen. VI. v. 1. 215, where the term is also applied to Richard. These are the only instances of the word in S., but stigmatical is used in the same sense in C. of E. iv. 2. 22.

138. Venom toads. Cf. A. Y. L. ii. 1. 13: "the toad, ugly and venomous." Rowe reads "venomous;" but we have four other instances of venom as an adjective in S. The lizard's sting is equally fictitious.

141. Channel. Kennel, gutter. Cf. 2 Hen. IV. ii. 1. 52: "throw the quean in the channel."

142. Extraught. Elsewhere the participle is extracted; but cf. distraught in Rich. III. iii. 5. 4 and R. and J. iv. 3. 49. The old play has "deriv'd."

143. Detect. Expose, betray.

144. A wisp of straw. Malone and others have shown by quotations from writers of the time that scolds and strumpets were sometimes made to wear a wisp of straw on their heads as a mark of disgrace.

145. Callat. Drab, harlot. Cf. W. T. ii. 3. 90 or Oth. iv. 2. 121.

147. Menelaus. That is, a cuckold like him. Steevens compares T. and C. v. 1. 61, where Thersites calls Menelaus "the primitive statue and oblique memorial of cuckolds."

162. Age. Generation; as often.

172. Deniest. The folio has "denied'st;" corrected by Warburton from the old play. The reference is to what Margaret has said in 118 above.

173. Our bloody colours. Cf. Hen. V. i. 2. 101: "your bloody flag."

SCENE III.—1. Forspent. Exhausted; as in 2 Hen. IV. i. 1. 37: “almost forspent with speed,” etc. The old play has “Sore spent.”

5. Spite of spite. Cf. K. John, v. 4. 5: “In spite of spite,” etc.

15. Thy brother's blood. A half-brother who does not appear in the play—an illegitimate son of Salisbury.

27. Look upon. That is, are mere spectators. Cf. W. T. v. 3. 100: “all that look upon with marvel,” etc.

37. Thou setter-up, etc. Cf. Daniel, ii. 21: “He removeth kings and setteth up kings.” In iii. 3. 157 below, Margaret calls Warwick “Proud setter-up and puller-down of kings,” and some have supposed that Warwick is addressed here; but the latter part of the passage ought to make it clear that it is a prayer to the Deity.

43. In earth. Pope reads “on earth;” but cf. V. and A. 143, M. for M. ii. 4. 50, etc. See also Matthew, vi. 10.

56. Forslow. Delay; used by S. only here. Steevens quotes The Battle of Alcazar, 1594: “Why, King Sebastian, wilt thou now foreslow?” and Marlowe, Edw. II.: “Foreslow no time; sweet Lancaster, let 's march.” Cf. Spenser, F. Q. iv. 10. 15: “But by no meanes my way I would forslow,” etc.

SCENE IV.—12. Some other chase. Some other game. Cf. 2 Hen. VI. v. 2. 14:—

“Hold, Warwick, seek thee out some other chase;
For I myself must hunt this deer to death.”

SCENE V.—1. This battle fares, etc. Verplanck remarks: “Henry's soliloquy certainly has more of the poet's manner about the date of Much Ado About Nothing than of his earlier style. Yet the character of Henry is just as well marked in the old play as in the enlarged one, as well as the incidents of the unhappy son and father:—

‘Hen. O gracious God of heaven, look down on us,
And set some ends to these incessant griefs.

How like a mastless ship upon the seas
 This woeful battle doth continue still,
 Now leaning this way, now to that side driven,
 And none doth know to whom the day will fall.
 Oh, would my death might stay these civil jars!
 Would I had never reign'd, nor ne'er been king,
 Margaret and Clifford chide me from the field,
 Swearing they had best success when I was thence.
 Would God that I were dead, so all were well;
 Or would my crown suffice, I were content
 To yield it them, and live a private life.' "

3. Blowing of his nails. Cf. L. L. L. v. 2. 923:—

“When icicles hang by the wall,
 And Dick the shepherd blows his nail.”

Whether the shepherd blows his fingers because they are cold or because he has nothing to do, the commentators are not agreed; but I have no doubt that here and in L. L. L. the former is the meaning. In T. of S. i. 1. 109, the other sense is clear enough.

24. Quaintly. Curiously, fancifully. Cf. M. of V. ii. 4. 6, etc.

26. Hour. A dissyllable, as below in several lines. Cf. fires in ii. 1. 83 above.

36. Ean. Theobald reads “yea,” which means the same. Cf. M. of V. i. 3. 88: “in eaning time.”

37. Years. Changed by Rowe to “months;” but the reference probably is to the years that must elapse before the lambs just eaned can be shorn. For poor fool as an expression of pity or tenderness, cf. Much Ado, ii. 1. 3, 26, A. Y. L. ii. 1. 22, etc.

38. Days, months. Rowe (followed by some editors) reads plausibly “days, weeks, months.” As the text stands, days may be a dissyllable.

43. Silly. Harmless, innocent. Cf. V. and A. 1098: “the silly lamb;” R. of L. 167: “the silly lambs,” etc.

51. Delicates. Delicacies; the only instance of the noun in S.

Johnson remarks: “This speech is mournful and soft, exquisitely sued to the character of the king, and makes a pleasing interchange, by affording, amidst the tumult and horror of the battle, an unexpected glimpse of rural innocence and pastoral tranquillity."

Verplanck adds: "There are some verses preserved of Henry VI. which are in a strain of the same pensive, moralizing character. The reader may not be displeased to have them here subjoined, that he may compare them with the congenial thoughts the poet has attributed to him: —

' Kingdoms are but cares;
State is devoid of stay;
Riches are ready snares,
And hasten to decay.

' Pleasure is a privy [game,]
Which vice doth still provoke;
Pomp unprompt; and fame a flame;
Power a smouldering smoke.

' Who meaneth to remove the rock
Out of his slimy mud,
Shall mire himself, and hardly scape
The swelling of the flood.'

57. Possessed with. Cf. K. John, iv. 2. 9: "possess'd with double pomp;" 1 Hen. VI. v. 4. 138: —

"'T is known already that I am possess'd
With more than half the Gallian territories," etc.

Possessed of is more common in S.

62. Unwares. An old form of unawares, but not found elsewhere in S.

77. And let our hearts, etc. "The king intends to say that the state of their hearts and eyes shall be like that of the kingdom in a civil war; all shall be destroyed by power formed within themselves" (Johnson); or "let our hearts and eyes, like ourselves in civil war, be self-destructive" (Clarke).

82. Our foeman's face? The face of one of our foemen.

86. Blown with the windy tempest, etc. Cf. i. 4. 145 above.

89. Stratagems. Dreadful deeds. Cf. 2 Hen. IV. i. 1. 8, M. of V. v. 1. 85, etc. www.libtool.com.cn

92, 93. O boy . . . too late. The old play reads:—

“Poore boy thy father gaue thee lif too late,
And hath bereau'de thee of thy life too sone,” which Hanmer and Capell followed; but, as the Cambridge editors remark, this “merely transfers the difficulty of explanation from one line to another.” White says: “The passage seems to be quite inexplicable. Warburton, who was the first to comment upon it, was of the opinion that, in the reading of the folio, ‘gave thee life too soon’ meant, ‘because, had he been born later, he would not have been of years to engage in this quarrel,’ and that ‘bereft thee of thy life too late’ meant, ‘he should have done it by not bringing thee into being.’ Henley, adopting the same view of the former phrase, explains the latter, ‘had the father recognized him before the fatal blow, it would not have been too late to have saved [to save] him from death.’ Malone and Steevens consider ‘too late’ to mean recently; and such may have been the sense in which it was used. There may be some readers to whom these explanations will be satisfactory; I am far from being sure that they would have been so to Shakespeare. And yet he may possibly have written the passage as it stands in the octavo, and have changed it to the reading of the folio. This I am the more inclined to believe since my discovery of the following line, in a speech of Andromache concerning Hector, in Heywood’s translation of Seneca’s Troas, 1581, with which Shakespeare was familiar: ‘O sonne begot too late for Troy, but borne too soone for me.’ It is at least not improbable that the line in The True Tragedy was a reminiscence of this one, and that, on the revision and rewriting of that play, the ineffectual change was made, hastily and without sufficient thought, in the hope of improving the passage.” Hudson thinks that too soon may be = “too gladly, too willingly,” and too late = “too recently.”

For the latter, he compares Rich. III. iii. 1. 99: "Too late he died that might have kept that title." Cf. also R. of L., 1801:—

www.libtool.com did give that life

Which she too early and too late hath spill'd."

On the whole, Henley's explanation is the least unsatisfactory that has been proposed — which is the best that can be said for it.

95. Ruthful. Piteous; as in Rich. III. iv. 3. 5: "ruthful butchery," etc.

100. Presenteth. Represents; as often.

104. Take on. Fret, get angry; as in M. W. iii. 5. 40, iv. 2. 22, etc.

108. Misthink. Misjudge; as in A. and C. v. 2. 176: "mis-thought For things that others do."

118. Obsequious. Lavish of obsequies. Cf. Ham. i. 2. 92: "obsequious sorrow," etc.

119. E'en. The folios have "Men" or "Man;" corrected by Capell.

123. Overgone. Overcome; found in S. only here.

126. Chafed. Infuriated. Cf. T. A. iv. 2. 138: "the chafed boar," etc.

130. Fearful. Frightened. Cf. ii. 2. 30 above.

SCENE VI.—8. The common people, etc. This line, omitted in the folios, was restored by Theobald from the old play. Line 17 below, which Capell omits, and which has no counterpart in the old play, is probably, as White suggests, the result of the accidental transposition of the present line, and its subsequent alteration by the players or the printers to fit it to its new place.

12. Phaethon. See on i. 4. 33 above.

19. Mourning widows for our death. That is, widows mourning for our death. Cf. 56 below.

28. Effuse. The only instance of the noun in S.

30. Split my breast. Cf. Lear, v. 3. 177: "Let sorrow split my heart." See also Rich. III. i. 3. 300 and A. and C., v. 1. 24.

36. Argosy. A large merchant ship. Cf. M. of V. i. 1. 9, i. 3. 18, iii. 1. 105, etc.

42. Whose soul, etc. The folios give this to "Rich.," together with what follows to See who it is, inclusive; assigning only the remnant of 44, 45 to "Ed." As White remarks, this must be corrupt, "as it makes Richard ask who it is that groans, and give directions to see who it is, and comply with his own command and answer his own question." The arrangement in the text is that of the old play, restored by Capell.

43. Departing. Parting, separation. Cf. K. John, ii. 1. 563, etc.

49. But set his. A "confusion of construction."

56. To our house. These words modify fatal. See on 19 above.

67. Which. Changed by Pope to "As;" but such . . . which occurs repeatedly in S.

68. Eager words. "Sour words; words of asperity" (Johnson). Cf. Rich. II. i. 1. 49: "The bitter clamour of two eager tongues." For the literal use of the word (= sour), see Ham. i. 5. 69: "eager droppings into milk."

75. Fence. Defend; as in iii. 3. 98 below.

82. This hand should chop. Capell reads "I'd chop" (from the old play).

91. Sinew. Firmly bind; the only instance of the verb in S. Cf. insinewed in 2 Hen. IV. iv. 1. 172.

96. Coronation. Metrically five syllables. See on i. 2. 6 above. Cf. 108 and 110 below.

100. In thy shoulder. The 2d folio has "on" for in; but the latter is often found where we should expect the former. Cf. "in the neck" in 1 Hen. IV. iv. 3. 92, etc.

105. Him pleaseth. It pleases him.

107. Too ominous. "Alluding, perhaps, to the deaths of Thomas of Woodstock and Humphrey, Dukes of Gloster" (Stevens).

ACT III

SCENE I. — Enter two Keepers. The folios have “Enter Sinklo, and Humfrey.” As Sinklo is the name of an actor, mentioned in T. of S. ind. 1 and in 2 Hen. IV. v. 4, it is probable that Humfrey is the name of another actor — perhaps, as Malone suggests, Humphrey Jaeffes, who is mentioned in Henslowe’s Diary. See also on i. 2. 47 above.

2. Laund. Lawn, glade ; as in V. and A. 813 : “And homeward through the dark laund runs apace.”

9. For. In order that. Cf. iii. 2. 154 below.

11. Self. Same. Cf. C. of E. v. 1. 10 : “that self chain,” etc.

14. Wishful. Wistful, longing.

17. Balm. Consecrated oil. Cf. Rich. II. iii. 2. 55 : —

“Not all the water in the rough rude sea
Can wash the balm from an anointed king.”

24. Sour adversity. The folios have “the sower Adversaries ;” and Pope reads “these sour adversities.” The text is Dyce’s.

40. Tainted with remorse. Touched with pity. Cf. 1 Hen. VI. v. 3. 183 : “Never yet taint with love,” etc. For remorse = pity, cf. v. 5. 64 below.

47. That. So that ; as often.

49. Inferreth. See on ii. 2. 44 above.

55. Thou, that talk’st. The folios have “thou talk’st,” and the old play “thou that talks.” The text is Rowe’s.

60. In mind. Malone suggests that there may be an allusion to the old song, “My mind to me a kingdom is.”

82. Breathe, a man. Some omit the comma. Cf. Rich. III. iii. 5. 26 : “That breath’d upon this earth a Christian.”

97. And the king’s. Rowe reads “and in the king’s,” which is plausible.

SCENE II. — 2. John. The folios and the old play have “Richard ;” corrected by Pope from Hall. The metre favours the emendation.

3. His lands then seiz'd, etc. Malone remarks : "This is, in every particular, a falsification of history. Sir John Grey fell in the second battle of St. Alban's, fighting on the side of King Henry ; and so far is it from being true that his lands were seized by the conqueror (Queen Margaret), that they were in fact seized by King Edward, after his victory at Towton (1461). The present scene is laid in 1464. Shakespeare followed the old play in this instance ; but when he afterwards had occasion to mention this matter, in writing Richard III., he stated it truly, as he found it in the chronicles. In act i. scene 2 of that play, Richard, addressing himself to Queen Elizabeth (the Lady Grey of the present scene), says : —

'In all which time you and your husband Grey
Were factious for the house of Lancaster ; —
And, Rivers, so were you : — was not your husband
In Margaret's battle at Saint Alban's slain ?'

14. Keeps the wind. That is, keeps the scent. Cf. A. W. iii. 6. 122 : "this same coxcomb that we have i' the wind." See also Ham. iii. 2. 362, etc.

19. Resolve. Satisfy, give me an answer. See on ii. 1. 9 above. 24–33. I fear . . . this widow's wit. Like 36–50 below, an example of stichomythia, or dialogue in alternate lines. Cf. T. G. of V. i. 2. 20–32, Rich. III. iv. 1. 343–367, etc.

24. Fear. Fear for. Cf. Rich. III. i. 1. 137 : "his physicians fear him," etc.

32. It. Referring to Lady Grey's suit. Cf. v. 7. 40 below.

68. If I aim. If I guess, or conjecture. Cf. 2 Hen. VI. ii. 4. 58 : "thou aimest all awry," etc.

72. Honesty. Chastity ; as often. Cf. M. W. i. 3. 55, ii. 1. 88, ii. 2. 75, etc.

77. Sadness. Seriousness. Cf. the adjective in 110 below.

107. Hath done his shrift. Has heard the confession and granted absolution. Cf. M. for M. iv. 2. 223, etc.

108. For shift. For a cunning purpose. The 3d folio has "for a shift," which was the more common expression.

109. Muse. Wonder. Cf. King John, iii. 1. 317 : "I muse your majesty doth seem so cold," etc.

112. To whom, etc. The 1st folio has "To who," but the old play, like the later folios, To whom.

114. A day longer, etc. Cf. A. Y. L. iii. 2. 185 : "I was seven of the nine days out of the wonder before you came," etc.

122. Apprehension. Metrically five syllables.

123. Honourably. The 1st folio has "honourable," which is sometimes found as an adverb (cf. J. C. v. 1. 60, T. and C. ii. 2. 149, etc.) ; but here the reply shows that honourably is the word, as in the old play.

124. Ay, Edward will use women honourably, etc. Verplanck remarks : "This soliloquy is strongly impressed with all the peculiar characteristics of our great poet, and especially with his power of developing character ; giving us a bold and distinctly marked outline of the approaching Richard III. Yet this is but the enlargement of a similar and brief soliloquy of Gloster, in the old play—containing the same thoughts, less powerfully and vividly brought out. I think there are but few readers who will not agree with me, that the author of the original young Gloster must be also the author of the full-grown Richard III. ; for, if the old Contention be not Shakespeare's, he owes to its author not only the groundwork of Henry VI., but the whole character of Richard. To my mind, this soliloquy, as it stands in the old play, is alone conclusive of Shakespeare's authorship, and of his sole paternity of the character. The reader will judge for himself : —

' Glo. Ay, Edward will use women honourably.
 Would he were wasted, marrow, bones, and all,
 That from his loins no issue might succeed,
 To hinder me from the golden time I look for :
 For I am not yet look'd on in the world !
 First is there Edward, Clarence, and Henry,
 And his son, and all they look for issue
 Of their loins, ere I can plant myself :

A cold premeditation for my purpose!
 What other pleasure is there in the world beside?
 I will go clad my body in gay ornaments,
 And lull myself within a lady's lap,
 And witch sweet ladies with my words and looks.
 O monstrous man, to harbour such a thought!
 Why, love did scorn me in my mother's womb;
 And, for I should not deal in her affairs,
 She did corrupt frail nature in the flesh,
 And plac'd an envious mountain on my back,
 Where sits deformity to mock my body;
 To dry mine arm up like a wither'd shrimp;
 To make my legs of an unequal size.
 And am I then a man to be belov'd?
 Easier for me to compass twenty crowns.
 Tut, I can smile, and murder when I smile;
 I cry content to that which grieves me most;
 I can add colours to the chameleon;
 And for a need change shapes with Proteus,
 And set the aspiring Catiline to school.
 Can I do this, and cannot get the crown?
 Tush, were it ten times higher, I'll pull it down."

129. Buried. A trisyllable.

131. Unlook'd for issue. The old play has "lookt for issue," which some editors follow, on the ground that Gloster refers to the children that might reasonably be expected; but counting babies before they are born is uncertain, as in the case of chickens before they are hatched.

139. Lade. Bail, as with a ladle; the only instance of the verb in S. Cotgrave defines baqueteur as "to lade, or draine a river, or other water, with pailles, or buckets."

143. Flattering me. Flattering myself. Pope reads "Flatt'ring my mind with things impossible."

154. For. In order that. Cf. iii. 1. 9 above.

161. An unlick'd bear-whelp. Referring, as Johnson notes, to the old opinion that "the bear brings forth only shapeless lumps of animated flesh, which she licks into the form of bears."

166. To o'erbear, etc. Johnson observes: "Richard speaks here the language of nature. Whoever is stigmatized with deformity has a constant source of enmity in his mind, and would counterbalance by some other superiority those advantages which he feels himself to want. Bacon remarks that the deformed are commonly daring; and it is almost proverbially observed that they are ill-natured. The truth is, that the deformed, like all other men, are displeased with inferiority, and endeavour to gain ground by good or bad means, as they are virtuous or corrupt."

170. Until my mis-shap'd trunk, etc. The editors have not been willing to let this alone, though it is probably what S. wrote. Hanmer, for instance, reads "Until the head this mis-shap'd trunk doth bear," and Steevens conjectures "Until my head that this mis-shap'd trunk bears."

171. Impaled. Enclosed, encircled. Cf. iii. 3. 189 below, and pale in i. 4. 103 above.

175. Rends. The folios have "rents," which is an old form of the word and might be retained here. Cf. Macb. iv. 3. 168, M. N. D. iii. 2. 215, etc.

185. Occasions. A quadrisyllable. See on i. 2. 6 above.

186. Mermaid. Siren; as elsewhere in S. Cf. C. of E. iii. 2. 45, 169, M. N. D. ii. 1. 150, etc.

187. Basilisk. The fabled monster that was supposed to kill by a glance. Cf. Hen. V. v. 2. 17, Cymb. ii. 4. 107, etc.

190. Sinon. The artful Greek who persuaded the Trojans to take the wooden horse into their city. Cf. Cymb. iii. 4. 61, R. of L. 1521, 1529, etc.

192. Proteus. The marine god who had the power of changing his shape at pleasure. The meaning is, "advantageously compete with Proteus in changing shapes" (Clarke).

193. Machiavel. An anachronism, of course, but none the less substituted deliberately by S. for "the aspiring Catiline" of the old play. Cf. M. W. iii. i. 104 and 1 Hen. VI. v. 4. 74. The allusion was a familiar one in the poet's day.

SCENE III.—II. Seat. Walker conjectures "state," but the change is hardly called for.

25. Of a king. From being a king; or, as Abbott gives it (Grammar, 171), "instead of" a king.

26. Forlorn. Not elsewhere used substantively by S., and rarely found before his day or since.

44. What's he. Who is he that. Cf. iv. 3. 28 below.

46. Welcome, brave Warwick, etc. Ritson remarks: "This nobleman's embassy and commission, the insult he received by the king's hasty marriage, and his consequent resolution to avenge it, with the capture, imprisonment, and escape of the king (Edward), Shakespeare found in Hall and Holinshed; but later, as well as earlier writers, of better authority, incline us to discredit the whole, and to refer the rupture between the king and his political creator to unknown causes, or to that jealousy and ingratitude too natural to those who are under obligations too great to be discharged. There needs no other proof how little our common histories are to be depended on, than this fabulous story of Warwick and the Lady Bona. The king was privately married to the Lady Elizabeth Woodville, in 1463; and in February, 1465, Warwick actually stood sponsor to the Princess Elizabeth, their first child."

57. Marriage. A trisyllable.

78. Injurious. Insolent. Cf. Cor. iii. 3. 69, Cymb. iv. 2. 86, etc.

81. Disannuls. Disregards, ignores.

82. The greatest part of Spain. This is an error, not taken from Holinshed. Gaunt accomplished little in Spain. The writer may have seen an old play, known only from Henslowe's Diary, entitled The Conquest of Spayne by John A Gant.

90. Henry. A trisyllable. See on i. i. 41 above.

93. Silly. Poor, petty.

94. To make prescription for. To establish a prescriptive right or claim to.

96. Thirty and six years. The old play has "thirtie and eight," which, as Malone remarks, is the correct number.

97. Bewray. Betray. Cf. i. 1. 211 above.

98. Fence. Defend; as in ii. 6. 75 above.

99. Buckler. Shield, defend; as in 2 Hen. VI. iii. 2. 216 and T. of S. iii. 2. 241.

103. Done to death. See on i. 4. 108 above, and cf. ii. 1. 103.

124. Eternal. Perennial. The folios have "externall" or "external;" corrected by Warburton from the old play.

127. Envy. Perhaps = hatred, malice; as often. Steevens says: "His situation places him above these, though it cannot secure him from female disdain." Clarke thinks the meaning to be that "the strength of Edward's love secures it from exciting the French princess's hatred, though not, perhaps, from incurring her disdain." Johnson suggests that it may mean "that his love is superior to envy, and can feel no blast from the lady's disdain." No one of these explanations is quite satisfactory.

154. You have a father able, etc. "This seems ironical. The poverty of Margaret's father is a very frequent topic of reproach" (Johnson).

156. Warwick. The reading of the 1st folio; the 2d (followed by some editors) has "Warwick, peace."

157. Proud setter-up and puller-down of kings. See on ii. 3. 37 above.

160. Conveyance. Artifice, fraud. Cf. 1 Hen. VI. i. 3. 2: "Since Henry's death, I fear, there is conveyance." See also on iv. 6. 81 below.

171. News? Used by S. both as singular and plural.

175. Soothe. "Act in conformity with" (Schmidt). According to Baret, the word meant "to countenance a falsehood, or forged tale; to uphold one in his talke, and affirme it to be true which he speaketh."

187. His death. He was in fact taken at the battle of Wakefield by the Lancastrians, and subsequently beheaded by them at Pomfret.

188. The abuse done to my niece. Holinshed says: "Other affirm other causes [of Warwick's defection] and one specialie, for that King Edward did attempt a thing once in the earles house which was much against the earles honestie (whether he would have defloured his daughter or his neece, the certainty was not for both their honours openlie revealed) for surelie such a thing was attempted by King Edward."

189. Impale. See on iii. 2. 171 above.

191. Guerdon'd. Rewarded; as in 2 Hen. VI. i. 4. 49.

204. Soldiers. A trisyllable; as in i. 1. 207 and i. 2. 42 above.

222. In post. In haste. Cf. i. 2. 48 above.

226. Fear. Affright. Cf. v. 2. 2 below.

228. The willow garland. On the willow as the emblem of unhappy lovers, cf. iv. 1. 100 below.

230. Put armour on. It was no unusual thing for queens to appear in armour at the head of their armies. A suit worn by Elizabeth is still to be seen in the Tower of London.

242. Mine eldest daughter. It was Anne, Warwick's second daughter, whom Edward married. Theobald reads "my younger daughter."

252. Lord Bourbon. Louis, Count of Roussillon, a natural son of Charles, Duke of Bourbon, and grandson of John, Duke of Bourbon in Hen. V.

260. Stale. Laughing-stock, butt. Cf. T. of S. i. 1. 58, C. of E. ii. 1. 101, etc.

ACT IV

SCENE I.—Enter King Edward, etc. "Collier remarks the particularity of the stage-directions in this play, in the folio (1623). Here we have the addition of words to show how the principal characters were to be ranged on the stage: 'Four stand on one side, and four on the other.' The attendants were probably to retire to the back of the scene, and were supposed to be out of hearing: there were nine principal persons present, viz., the King, the Queen, Gloster, Clarence, Somerset, Montague, Pembroke, Stafford, and Hastings. The King was therefore to stand in the middle, with 'four on one side and four on the other' (Verplanck).

8. I mind. I have a mind, or mean. Cf. 64, 106, and 140 below.

12. Weak of courage. Wanting in courage or spirit. See on ii. 2. 57 above.

13. Abuse. Deception of them. Cf. Ham. iv. 7. 51, etc. The verb is often = deceive.

17. And shall. Rowe reads "And you shall."

41. But the safer. The 2d folio has "Yes, but." "But then," "Ay, but," and "But yet" have also been conjectured. It is easy enough to tinker the defective measure of the play, if one chooses to do it.

53. The brother, etc. Anthony Woodville, made Lord Rivers in 1469.

56. You would not have bestow'd the heir, etc. Till the Restoration the heiresses of great estates were in the wardship of the king, who in their minority gave them up to plunder, and afterwards married them to his favourites (Johnson).

57. Your new wife's son. Sir Thomas Grey, made Marquess of Dorset.

63. Broker. Agent, negotiator.

70. Not ignoble. Her father was Sir Richard Woodville, afterwards Earl of Rivers; and her mother Jaqueline, Duchess Dowager of Bedford, daughter to Peter of Luxembourg, Earl of St. Paul (Malone).

73. Dislikes. Some change this to "dislike," and others Doth in the next line to "Do;" but see R. and J. prol. 8, etc. Some call it "the old third person plural in -th."

92. Depart. See on ii. 1. 110 above.

103. In place. Present. Cf. iv. 6. 31 below.

104. My mourning-weeds are done. My mourning garments are done with, or laid aside. Cf. iii. 3. 229 above.

118. The elder. Theobald transposes elder and younger. See on iii. 3. 242 above.

119. Sit you fast. A popular phrase, meaning "Look to yourself." Cf. v. 2. 3 below.

140. Mind. See on 8 above.

142. Suspect. For the noun (used by S. some dozen times), cf. Rich. III. i. 3. 89, iii. 5. 32, etc.

SCENE II. — 2. By numbers swarm. Pope reads "swarm by numbers."

3. Comes! Rowe reads "come;" but a singular verb is often found with two singular nominatives.

4. Suddenly. Quickly.

12. Sweet Clarence. Pope reads "sweet friend," and Capell omits sweet.

13. Coverture. Covert, shelter. Cf. Much Ado, iii. 1. 30: "in the woodbine coverture." For rests, see on i. 2. 44 above.

15. Towns. The folios have "towne" or "town;" corrected by Theobald.

20. Sleight and manhood. Craft and bravery.

21. The Thracian fatal steeds. The oracle had declared that Troy could not be taken if the horses of Rhesus once drank of the Xanthus and grazed on the Trojan plains. The Greeks therefore sent Diomedes and Ulysses to intercept the Thracian prince when he came to bring help to Priam; and they killed him on the night of his arrival, and carried off the horses. The story is told in the Iliad (x.). See also Ovid, Met. xiii. and Virgil, Æneid, i. 469 fol.

SCENE III. — 2. Is set him down. Has set himself down.

19. Doubted. Suspected, feared; as often.

22. Enter Warwick, etc. Collier notices the alteration of the old play in the conduct of this scene, as showing the extreme simplicity of the stage just before Shakespeare's time : "In the older play, Warwick, Oxford, and Clarence, aided by a party of soldiers, standing on one part of the stage, concert a plan for surprising Edward IV. in his tent, on another part of the stage. Having resolved upon the enterprise, they merely cross the boards to Edward's encampment, the audience being required to suppose that the assailing party had travelled from their own quarters in order to arrive at Edward's tent. Shakespeare showed his superior judgment by changing the place, and by interposing a dialogue between the watchmen who guard the king's tent."

28. What are they, etc. Who are they, etc. See on iii. 3. 44 above.

31. The case is alter'd. The expression had become proverbial. Jonson later took it as the title of a comedy.

32. Embassade. Used by S. only here. Capell reads "embasage" (from the old play).

38. Brotherly. For the adverbial use, cf. A. Y. L. i. 1. 162 and Cymb. iv. 2. 158.

44. Complices. Not to be printed as an abbreviation of accomplices. Cf. Rich. II. ii. 3. 165, iii. 1. 43, etc.

48. For his mind. As regards his mind, in his own mind.

55. Tell what answer. Pope reads "tell you what reply," Capell "tell his grace what answer," Dyce "tell him there what answer;" and so on. The line could be eked out in a dozen other ways, if one had the itch of "emendation." White very sensibly remarks : "This verse is imperfect, and a word of one or two syllables has probably been lost. They are not necessary to the sense, however, and there is no justification or ground for the attempts which have been made to restore them."

SCENE IV.—16. Life's. The folios have "lives;" corrected by Rowe.

19. Passion. A trisyllable. See on i. 2. 6 above. Rowe, not understanding this, reads "in my passion."

22. Blood-sucking sighs. Alluding to the old notion that each sigh cost the heart a drop of blood. Cf. M. N. D. iii. 2. 97, Ham. iv. 7. 123, Much Ado, iii. 1. 78, etc.

25. Is . . . become. See on ii. 1. 10 above.

THE SANCTUARY AT WESTMINSTER

31. The sanctuary. The sanctuary at Westminster, for which see Rich. III. ii. 4. 66, 73, iii. 1. 42, iv. 1. 94, etc. The cut is from a drawing made before the destruction of the building in 1775. It stood where Westminster Hospital now stands (then within the precincts of the Abbey), and retained its privileges as a refuge for criminals until the dissolution of the monastery, and for debtors until 1602. Elizabeth fled thither in 1470, when with her mother and her three daughters she was the guest of Abbot Milling until the birth of her son Edward, Nov. 1 of that year. She took refuge there again at the time referred to in Rich. III. The open space to the west of the Abbey is still called Broad Sanctuary.

SCENE V.—Middleham Castle. This castle was at Middleham, in Yorkshire, and its remains are still to be seen on a rocky eminence near the town. Tradition says that it was destroyed by Cromwell, but there is no historical record to that effect. Edward gave the castle to his eldest brother, the Duke of Gloster, afterwards Richard III. Here Richard Plantagenet was born, and here, according to Stow, the Bastard of Faulconbridge (cf. i. 1. 239 above) was beheaded.

9. Advertis'd. For the accent, see on ii. 1. 116 above.

21. Ship. The 1st folio has “shipt,” which White thinks might be retained, “the full reply being, ‘We shall go to Lynn, and shall be shipped from thence to Flanders.’”

SCENE VI.—5. Thy due fees? Cf. W. T. i. 2. 52 :—

“Force me to keep you as a prisoner,
Not like a guest; so you shall pay your fees
When you depart, and save your thanks.”

Lord Campbell remarks that, whether guilty or innocent, the prisoner was liable to pay a fee on his liberation—a procedure that “could hardly be known to any except lawyers, or those who had themselves actually been in prison on a criminal charge.”

6. Challenge. Claim; as in iv. 7. 23 below.

11. My imprisonment. Pope drops my, and Hudson reads “prisonment;” but there are countless similar examples of the light extra syllable in the line.

29. Temper with the stars. Yield to destiny, act in conformity with their fortune.

31. In place. Present. See on iv. 1. 103 above.

55. Be confiscate. The first folio omits be, which Malone supplied. The 2d folio has “confiscated,” which S. never uses. The accent is generally on the first syllable, but sometimes on the second, as in Cymb. v. 5. 323: “And let it be confiscate all, so soon,” etc.

67. Young Henry. This boy, then in his tenth year, was son to Edmond Tudor, Earl of Richmond, and Margaret, daughter to John Beaufort, first Duke of Somerset. He afterwards became Henry VII.

81. Convey'd. Carried off, kidnapped. Cf. the cant use of convey = steal; as in M. W. i. 3. 32, Rich. II. iv. 1. 317, Cymb. i. 1. 63, etc. See also on conveyance, iii. 3. 160 above.

82. Attended him. That is, were waiting for him.

SCENE VII. — 8. Ravenspurg (also called Ravensburg, Ravenspurn, etc.) was an important port at the mouth of the Humber, sheltered from the sea by the point now known as Spurn Head. In 1346 it had suffered so much from the inroads of the sea that the merchants residing there removed to Hull. The high tides of 1357 and subsequent years swept away nearly all that remained of the town, and but few vestiges of the ancient port could have been left at the time of Bolingbroke's landing. In 1471, Edward IV. also landed here, after his brief exile in Holland. In the town of Hedon, a few miles distant, there still stands a beautiful old cross, which is believed to have been erected at Ravenspurg in memory of the landing of Bolingbroke. To prevent its destruction by the sea, it was first removed to Kilnsea, and again in 1818 to Burton Constable, whence it was in 1832 taken to Hedon.

13. Abodements. "Bodements" (T. and C. v. 3. 80 and Macb. iv. 1. 96), or bad omens; used by S. only here. Cf. aboding in v. 6. 45 below.

23. Challenge. Claim; as in iv. 6. 6 above.

30. Captain. A trisyllable (= capitain). Cf. Macb. i. 2. 34. Spenser (F. Q. ii. 11. 14) has "And evermore their wicked Capitayn;" and, again (Id. vi. 11. 3), "That he which was their Capitaine profest."

32. Long of. Along of; but not to be printed "'long of" as it often is. "The mayor is willing we should enter, so he may not be blamed" (Johnson).

57. Pretend. Assert. Cf. its use = mean, intend; as in Macb. ii. 4. 24, etc.

61. Scrupulous wit! "Policy that too scrupulously weighs chances" (Clarke).

64. Bruit. Report, rumour, as in T. and C. v. 9. 4, etc. Cf. Jeremiah, x. 22.

80. Horizon. Apparently accented on the first syllable; the only instance of the word in S. The same accent is found in Chaucer and other early writers.

82. Wot. Know. See on ii. 2. 134 above.

83. How evil it beseems. How ill it becomes. For the adverbial evil, cf. Hen. VIII. i. 2. 207: "evil us'd."

SCENE VIII.—Enter . . . Exeter. The folios give "Somerset," who had gone with Richmond to Brittany. The correction is due to Capell.

2. Hasty. Rash, or passionate; as blunt = rough, reckless, as in v. 1. 86 below. See also V. and A. 884: "the blunt boar, rough bear," etc.

3. The narrow seas. The English Channel. See on i. 1. 239 above.

6. Let's levy men, etc. "Dr. Johnson remarked that this line expresses a warlike spirit unsuitable to the character of Henry; and Malone, for this reason, and because in the old version the second speech is given to Oxford, assigned this line to him — an arrangement very generally followed to this day. But this line does not appear in any form in the old play, where Oxford's speech is: —

'T is best to look to this betimes,
For if this fire do kindle any further
It will be hard for us to quench it out.'

It will be seen that in the revised play the second and third lines are made the basis of the two-line speech assigned to Clarence, while for the first the line is substituted which is assigned to King Henry. And although it is so bellicose, and not improbably should be assigned to Oxford or some other lord, or made a part of Clarence's speech, under these circumstances the change would not be justifiable" (White). I am inclined to agree with Collier, who says: "It is not inconsistent with the other speeches of the King in this scene, who seems by the intelligence to have been roused, at least in the commencement, to an unusual degree of energy."

8. Suffer'd. Allowed to burn. Cf. V. and A. 388:—

"Affection is a coal that must be cool'd;
Else, suffer'd, it will set the heart on fire."

25. Troy's true hope. Cf. ii. i. 51 above.

37. Doubt. Fear. Cf. the verb in iv. 3. 19 above.

38. Meed. Merit; as in ii. i. 36 above.

40. Posted off. Put off hastily or carelessly. Cf. "posted over" in 2 Hen. VI. iii. i. 255, and "o'erposting" in 2 Hen. IV. i. 2. 171.

43. Water-flowing. Flowing like water, copious; changed by some to "bitter-flowing." Cf. furnace-burning in ii. i. 80 and wind-changing in v. i. 57.

46. Forward of. Eager for.

51. Shout within, 'A Lancaster, a Lancaster.' Some adopt the conjecture of Johnson, "A York! a York!" but, as White remarks, "it was part of Edward's plan that his soldiers should shout 'Long live King Henry!'"

52. Seize on the shame-fac'd Henry, etc. Verplanck remarks: "This line is from the old play, and the epithet of 'shame-fac'd,' so portrait-like of the timid and fearful king, so characteristic of the speaker, so like Shakespeare's own manner of portraiture, is enough to counterbalance a hundred small criticisms, and to stamp these scenes as from his hands—even if other matters remind us that it was but 'the 'prentice's hand.'"

59. Now remains. As Mason remarks, Warwick has but just left the stage to go to Coventry (cf. 32 above), and Edward could hardly be supposed to know of his intention. Cf. the "time-analysis" of the play in the Appendix.

60. The sun shines hot, etc. That is, we must "make hay while the sun shines."

ACT V

SCENE I. — 3. Dunsmore. Dunsmore Heath is about half-way between Daventry and Coventry.

6. Daintry. Daventry. Cf. I Hen. IV. iv. 2. 51. Daintry is still the local pronunciation.

16. Trumpet. Trumpeter; as in T. and C. iv. 5. 6: "Thou trumpet, there's my purse," etc. Parle = parley; as in K. John, ii. 1. 205, etc.

18. Unbid. Unwelcome; accented on the first syllable because coming before the noun. Cf. unborn in Rich. II. ii. 2. 10, unbound in R. and J. i. 3. 87, etc. Sportful = licentious. Cf. T. of S. ii. 1. 263: "let Kate be chaste, and Dian sportful."

20. His repair? His repairing or coming hither. Cf. Ham. v. 2. 228: "then repair hither," etc.

32. Do thee service. Become thy servitor.

36. Atlas. The only allusion in S. to the world-sustaining giant.

44. Deck! Pack of cards. White remarks that "the word was in use even in the eighteenth century." It is not unknown now among card-players in this country.

45. The bishop's palace. "The palace of the Bishop of London" (Malone).

48. Take the time. Improve the opportunity.

49. Nay, when? For when? as an exclamation of impatience, cf. Temp. i. 2. 316, Rich. II. i. 1. 162, etc.

52. To strike. As to strike it. See on i. 4. 55 above.

68. Buy. That is, pay for. Cf. M. N. D. iii. 2. 426: "you shall buy this dear," etc.

73. Two of thy name. Edmund, slain at the battle of St. Alban's, 1455; and Henry, his son, beheaded after the battle of Hexham, 1463 (Ritson).

81. Taking the red rose out of his hat. The stage-direction is not in the folios, but was supplied by Capell from the old play.

83. Ruin. Cf. R. of L. 944: "To ruinate proud buildings;" Sonn. 10. 7: "Seeking that beauteous roof to ruinate," etc.

84. Lime. "Cement" (Johnson); the only instance of this meaning in S. www.libtool.com.cn

85. Trow'st thou. Thinkest thou; as in 2 Hen. VI. ii. 4. 38, etc.

86. Blunt. See on iv. 8. 2 above.

91. Jephtha's, etc. See Judges, xi. 30 fol. Cf. Ham. ii. 2. 422.

106. Passing. Surpassing, egregious; as in T. G. of V. i. 2. 17: "a passing shame," etc.

110. I will away towards Barnet, etc. According to Hall, Edward, finding that Warwick would not come out, withdrew towards London. Warwick pursued and overtook him at Barnet. He could not know that the battle would occur there. Probably, however, Warwick in mentioning Barnet refers only to the direction he was going, not to the place where he expected to overtake Edward. Herford calls the passage "unintelligible," but it does not seem so to me.

SCENE II.—2. A bug that fear'd. A bugbear that frightened. Cf. T. of S. i. 2. 211: "Tush, tush! fear boys with bugs," etc. In Psalms, xci. 5, Coverdale's and some other early versions have "Thou shalt not nede to be afraid for any Bugges by nighte." For fear, see also on iii. 3. 226 above.

13. Ramping. Rampant. Cf. 1 Hen. IV. iii. 1. 153: "a ramping cat," etc.

14. Overpeer'd. Looked down upon. Cf. 1 Hen. VI. i. 4. 11: "In yonder tower to overpeer the city," etc. Jove's tree is the oak, which was sacred to him.

26. But my body's length. Cf. Rich. II. iii. 2. 152:—

"And nothing can we call our own but death,
And that small model of the barren earth
Which serves as paste and cover to our bones."

See also A. Y. L. ii. 6. 2: "Here lie I down and measure out my grave."

44. Clamour. The folios misprint "cannon;" corrected by Warburton from the old play.

45. Might. The folios have "mought," which the Cambridge editors retain. The form is still in vulgar use.

SCENE III.—5. Sun. Alluding to the heraldic cognizance of the king. Cf. Rich. III. i. 1. 2: "this sun of York."

8. Arriv'd. For the transitive use, cf. J. C. i. 2. 110: "But ere we could arrive the point propos'd," etc. Steevens quotes Milton, P. L. ii. 409:—

"ere he arrive
The happy isle."

14. Valued. Reckoned, estimated.

18. Advertis'd. For the accent, see on ii. 1. 116 above.

21. Rids way. Gets rid of distance, or annihilates it.

SCENE IV.—Enter Queen Margaret, etc. This scene is greatly amplified from that in the old play, which stands thus, except that the spelling is modernized:—

"Queen. Welcome to England, my loving friends of France.
And welcome Somerset and Oxford too.
Once more have we spread our sails abroad,
And though our tackling be almost consum'd,
And Warwick as our mainmast overthrown,
Yet, warlike lords, raise you that sturdy post
That bears the sails to bring us unto rest,
And Ned and I, as willing pilots should,
For once with careful minds guide on the stern,
To bear us through that dangerous gulf
That heretofore hath swallow'd up our friends.

Prince. And if there be (as God forbid there should)
Amongst us a timorous or fearful man,
Let him depart before the battles join,
Lest he in time of need entice another,
And so withdraw the soldiers' hearts from us.
I will not stand aloof and bid you fight,

But with my sword press in the thickest throngs,
 And single Edward from his strongest guard,
 And hand to hand enforce him for to yield,
 Or leave my body as witness of my thoughts.

Oxf. Women and children of so high resolve,
 And warriors faint ! why 't were perpetual shame.
 Oh, brave young prince, thy noble grandfather
 Doth live again in thee ; long mayst thou live
 To bear his image, and to renew his glories.

Som. And he that turns and flies when such do fight,
 Let him to bed, and like the owl by day
 Be hiss'd and wonder'd at if he arise."

2. Cheerly. Cheerfully. Cf. A. Y. L. ii. 6. 14, Rich. II. i. 3. 66, etc.

9. To that which hath too much. Cf. A. Y. L. ii. 1. 48:—

" giving the sum of more
 To that which hath too much."

18. Tacklings? A trisyllable.

24. As good, etc. We have nothing to gain by offers of submission, and may as well defy them at once. They will show us no more mercy than the ruthless sea does to the ship in peril.

27. Ragged. The folios have "raged;" corrected by Rowe. Ragged is often = ragged.

34. If case. If it be the case. The 4th folio has "in case," which some adopt, but if case occurs often in writers of the time.

42. Naked. Without armour. Cf. 2 Hen. VI. iii. 2. 234: "naked, though lock'd up in steel," etc.

71. Wot. Know. See on ii. 2. 134 above.

SCENE V.—I. Period. End; as often.

2. Hames. The spelling of the folios and the old play. Rowe reads "Hammes," Hanmer "Holmes," and Delius "Ham's." The castle meant is that of Ham in Picardy, the same in which Louis Napoleon was confined for six years. The present fortress was built in 1470 on the site of an earlier one erected previous to 1226.

16. Turn'd me to? Put me to. Cf. Temp. i. 2. 64: "the teen that I have turn'd you to."

24. Breech. Breeches; the only instance of the singular in S. Cf. 2 Hen. VI. iii. 1. 149: "Though in this place most master wear no breeches."

25. Æsop. A hit at Richard's deformity. The old fabulist is said to have been hunch-backed.

Verplanck remarks here: "There is little alteration in this scene from the old play, where the high spirit of the young Prince, and the brief but strongly marked notices of the other characters, are given with a truly Shakespearian effect. It is, too, well worthy of remark that the fine and animated dramatic effect and personal interest obtained by young Edward's there exhibiting the courage and spirit of his mother, without her vices, instead of his appearing to inherit the meek virtues of his father, is quite original in this play; there being no part of his character, in this respect, in the old historians."

26. Sort. Suit, agree. See on ii. 1. 209 above. Currish riddles = fables about beasts. There may be a play on currish = malicious.

31. Charm your tongue. Stop your tongue, as by a charm or spell. Cf. Oth. v. 2. 183, Much Ado, v. 1. 26, etc.

50. The Tower! the Tower! The folios omit the first The; supplied by Capell.

56. In respect. In comparison with him. Cf. J. C. i. 1. 10: "Truly, sir, in respect of a fine workman, I am but a cobbler."

63. You have no children, etc. Verplanck remarks: "This is from the old play, which has 'You have no children, devils!' Judge Blackstone notes that the poet repeats the same thought in Macduff's lament for his murdered children. This is done with the same sort of variation which Shakespeare is wont to use in repeating a favourite thought, and indicates at least, if it does not absolutely prove, that he was using his own original materials. The speech stands thus in the old play, except in spelling: —

'Queen. Ah, Ned, speak to thy mother, boy:
 Ah, thou canst not speak.
 Traitors, tyrants, bloody homicides,
 They that stabb'd Cæsar shed no blood at all,
 For he was a man; this, in respect a child;
 And men ne'er spend their fury on a child.
 What's worse than tyrant that I may not name?
 You have no children, devils, if you had
 The thought of them would then have stopp'd your rage:
 But if you ever hope to have a son,
 Look in his youth to have him so cut off,
 As, traitors, you have done this sweet young prince.'"

64. Remorse. Pity. See on iii. i. 40 above.

67. Have rid. Have made way with, have destroyed. Cf. v. 3.
 21 above.

75. Thou usest. You are accustomed.

77, 78. The 1st folio reads:—

"Where is that diuels butcher Richard?

Hard fauor'd Richard? Richard, where art thou?"

which is followed substantially by the other folios. The first Richard is clearly accidental, as the old play shows.

Hudson following Theobald thinks it necessary to read "devil-butcher," as devil's butcher "is kill-devil;" and he adds, "rare news for the free thinkers, if there were any grounds for depending on it!" Johnson remarks that devil's butcher (which is the reading of the old play also) "is a butcher set on by the devil," which would be superfluous information if the expression had not been criticised. Hard-favour'd = hard-featured, ugly. Cf. Rich. II. v. i. 14, Hen. V. iii. i. 8, etc.

84. All in post. All in haste. Cf. iii. 3. 222 above.

86. Sudden. Hasty, rash.

SCENE VI.—10. Roscius. Cf. Ham. ii. 2. 410: "When Roscius was an actor in Rome—." Hanmer reads "Richard," which Warburton had suggested on the ground that Roscius was a comedian;

but Steevens cites many contemporaneous references to him as a tragedian. Malone adds the evidence of Quintilian, who says of him, "hic tragoedias egit."

13. Lim'd. Ensnared with bird-lime. Cf. T. N. iii. 4. 82, Ham. iii. 3. 68, etc.

14. Misdoubteth. Suspects, distrusts. Cf. M. W. ii. 1. 192: "I do not misdoubt my wife," etc.

15. Male to one sweet bird. That is, father of one sweet child.

16. Object. That is, the bush, to which he compares Richard. This explains also the following Where.

18. Peevish. Childish, silly; the most common meaning in S. In the old play the passage reads thus: —

" Why, what a foole was that of Creete?
That taught his sonne the office
Of a birde, and yet for all that the poore
Fowle was drownde."

For the allusion to Dædalus, cf. 1 Hen. VI. i. 4. 77.

26. Not with words! Cf. ii. 1. 99 above.

34. Presumption. A quadrisyllable. See on i. 2. 6 above.

38. No parcel of my fear. "No part of what my fears presage" (Johnson).

39, 40. And many . . . eye. Hudson omits these two lines, believing that "the first writing and the correction intended as a substitute for it both got jumbled in together."

41. Fate. This word and the following And are not in the 1st folio, but are supplied by the 2d. White remarks: "The lines here are irregular in the old version, and appear to have been carefully rewritten on the revision; and the construction of the two preceding lines, to which these two parenthetical lines are plainly intended to conform, warrants the emendation."

45. Aboding. Boding; as in Hen. VIII. i. 1. 93. Cf. abode-ments in iv. 7. 13 above.

47. Rook'd her. Squatted herself. Collier quotes The Fardle of Fashions, 1555: "After a mooste comely sorte she rucketh downe upon the grounde, not mucche unlike the sitting of our gentlewomen oftentimes here in England."

48. Discord. The folio has "discords," but the "discord" of the old play is clearly right.

51. Indigested. Shapeless; as in 2 Hen. VI. v. 1. 157. Cf. indigest in Sonn. 114. 5. The folio has "To wit, an indigested and deformed lumpe;" and the old play "To wit: an vndigest created lumpe." The "To wit" seems to have been accidentally retained in rewriting the line.

79. Let hell make crook'd, etc. After this line Theobald inserted from the old play: "I had no father, I am like no father."

80. Brother. The word is used in a figurative sense, of course; and, as Clarke remarks, "there is also a fine bold play upon the word, as marking that the speaker owns no tie of brotherhood or affectionate fraternity with either Edward or Clarence, who are merely born his brothers."

85. Sort. Sort out, find out. Cf. Hen. V. iv. 7. 77, R. and J. iv. 2. 34, etc.

86. Buzz. Whisper. Cf. Rich. II. ii. 1. 26, Hen. VIII. ii. 1. 148, etc.

SCENE VII.—1. In. Changed by Rowe to "on;" but in iv. 3. 63 above he leaves the old text: "seated in the regal throne." Cf. also i. 1. 22, 84, and 125.

2. Re-purchas'd. Regained; not found elsewhere in S. Purchase often = gain, win.

4. In tops of. Cf. 2 Hen. VI. i. 2. 49 and A. and C. v. 1. 43.

6. For. As being. Undoubted = fearless; as in 1 Hen. VI. iii. 3. 41.

10. Brave bears. Referring to the badge of the Warwicks, the bear and ragged staff. Cf. 2 Hen. VI. v. 1. 144.

18. Went. It is remarkable that some meddlesome editor has not "corrected" this to "Gone." Went as participle is occasionally found in other Elizabethan writers.

25. Work thou the way, — and that shall execute. As Johnson and Malone have noted, thou must refer to his head, which he touches; and that to his hand, which he indicates by some appropriate gesture. That may, however, refer to shoulder, as White makes it. The 1st and 2d folios have “that shalt,” and the old play (followed by Capell and others) “thou shalt.”

30. Thanks, noble Clarence, etc. “The folio assigns this line to Clarence, with a new prefix, ‘Cla.,’ which is evidently a misprint of ‘Qu.,’ for the line is assigned to her in the old version, and most appropriately, when Clarence kisses her son in token of reconciliation. Theobald restored it to her. In King Charles I.’s copy, however, his majesty, in the plenary exercise of his royal prerogative, and in ignorance of the old version, changed Cla. to King, which Steevens discovering, that distribution was loyally adopted, and has hitherto been preserved, although in defiance of authority, and in opposition to the finer significance of the speech” (White).

34. Whenas. See on i. 2. 74 above.

39. Sicils. See on i. 4. 122 above.

40. Sent it. That is, the money thus raised.

41. Waft. Cf. iii. 3. 253 above.

42. Rests. Remains; as in i. 2. 44 and iv. 2. 13 above.

43. Triumphs. Pageants. The word had come to mean “a public festivity or exhibition of any kind, particularly a tournament” (Schmidt). Cf. T. G. of V. iv. 4. 161: “With triumphs, mirth, and rare solemnity;” Rich. II. v. 2. 52: “justs and triumphs,” etc. Steevens quotes The Duke of Anjou’s Entertainment at Antwerp, 1581: “Yet notwithstanding, their triumphes [those of the Romans] have so borne the bell above all the rest, that the word triumphing, which cometh thereof, hath been applied to all high, great, and statelie doings.”

APPENDIX

GREENE'S GROATSWORTH OF WIT

THE full title of Greene's book (p. 12 above) in the edition of 1596, the earliest extant, is as follows: "Greens Groats-worth of Wit, bought with a Million of Repentaunce. Describing the follie of youth, the falsehoode of make-shift flatterers, the miserie of the negligent, and mischiefes of deceiving Courtesans. Written before his death and published at his dying request. Fælicem fuisse infaustum." The dedication is "To those Gentlemen, his quondam acquaintance, that spend their wits in making Plaies, R. G. wisheth a better exercise, and wisdom to prevent his extremities."

The passage in which the reference to Shakespeare occurs reads thus:—

"If wofull experience may moove you, gentlemen, to beware, or unheard of wretchednes intreate you to take heed, I doubt not but you will looke backe with sorrow on your time past, and endeavour with repentance to spend that which is to come. Wonder not, for with thee wil I first begin, thou famous gracer of tragedians, that Greene, who hath said with thee, like the foole in his heart, there is no God, should now give glorie unto His greatnesse. . . .

"With thee I joyne young Juvenall, that byting satyrst that lastlie with mee together writ a comedie. Sweete boy, might I advise thee, be advised, and get not many enemies by bitter words; inveigh against vaine men, for thou canst do it, no man better, no man so wel; thou hast a libertie to reprove all, and name none; for one being spoken to, al are offended; none being blamed, no man is injured. . . .

“And thou, no lesse deserving than the other two, in some things rarer, in nothing inferiour ; driven (as myselfe) to extreame shifts ; a little have I to say to thee ; and were it not an idolatrous oth, I would sweare by sweet S. George thou art unworthie better hap, sith thou dependest on so meane a stay. Base minded men al three of you, if by my miserie ye be not warned ; for unto none of you, like me, sought those burres to cleave ; those puppets, I meane, that speake from our mouths, those anticks garnisht in our colours. Is it not strange that I, to whom they al have beene beholding, is it not like that you to whome they all have beene beholding, shall, were ye in that case that I am now, be both at once of them forsaken ? Yes, trust them not ; for there is an upstart crow, beautified with our feathers, that, with his Tygers heart wrapt in a Players hide, supposes he is as well able to bum-bast out a blanke verse as the best of you ; and being an absolute Johannes Factotum, is in his owne conceit the onely Shake-scene in a countrie.” . . .

Here Greene begins by addressing three dramatists — Marlowe, Peele, and probably Lodge — and then turns to the actors — “puppets that speake from our mouths” (that is, declaim our productions), against whom his wrath is mainly directed. He then goes on to refer incidentally to “two more, that both have writ against these buckram gentlemen” (the actors), but does not dwell upon them. He then reverts to the three dramatists : “But now returne I againe to you three,” and urges them to take warning from his wretched fate : “Delight not, as I have done, in irreligious oaths ; for from the blasphemers house a curse shall not depart. Despise drunkennes, which wasteth the wit and making [sic] men all equal unto beasts. Flie lust, as the deathsmen of the soule, and defile not the temple of the Holy Ghost.”

In December of the same year, Henry Chettle, who had published Greene’s pamphlet for him, brought out his own Kind-Harts Dreame, in the preface to which he says : —

“About three moneths since died M. Robert Greene, leaving many papers in sundry bookesellers hands, among other his Groatsworth of Wit, in which a letter, written to divers play-makers, is offensively by one or two of them taken. . . . With neither of them that take offence was I acquainted, and with one of them I care not if I never be. The other, whome at that time I did not so much spare as since I wish I had, for that, as I have moderated the heate of living writers, and might have usde my owne discretion, — especially in such a case, the author beeing dead, — that I did not I am as sory as if the originall fault had beene my fault, because mysefve have seene his demeanor no lesse civill, than he exelent in the qualitie he professes; — besides, divers of worship have reported his uprightnes of dealing, which argues his honesty, and his facetious grace in writting, that aprooves his art.”

In this passage “The other, whome at that time I did not so much spare” is assumed by nearly all the biographers and critics to be Shakespeare; but a few of them (Fleay, Ingleby, and the “Baconian” writers) hold a different opinion. Chettle refers to Greene’s letter as “written to divers play-makers,” and as “offensively by one or two of them taken.” The “one or two” appears from the context to mean just two: “With neither of them that take offence was I acquainted, and with one of them I care not if I never be. The other,” etc. This “other,” it would seem at first sight, must be one of the three “play-makers” addressed by Greene, not one of the “puppets,” or actors, against whom he warns them. Some one suggests that Chettle did not have Greene’s book before him when he wrote, and that, having been particularly impressed by the sneer at Shakespeare, he apologized for it and expressed his own high opinion of the victim, without noticing that he had not made it quite clear to whom he referred. But it seems to me probable enough that, whether he was looking at the book or not, he might have written “them” carelessly, having in mind the persons to whom he was about to refer, and not observing that it would appear to refer to those just mentioned.

It is generally agreed that Greene’s “beautified with our feathers" alludes to acting, though some regard it as insinuating plagiarism; but "bumbast out a blanke verse" (which, taken by itself, might refer to declaiming verse on the stage) appears from the context to mean the writing of such verse. The words, "as the best of you," are evidently addressed to the dramatists, who, though they may all have been actors at some time in their lives, are here viewed by Greene as authors.

The "Johannes Factotum" indicates that Shakespeare is alluded to in some other capacity than that of a mere actor. "A tygers heart wrapt in a players hide" is obviously a parody of "O tiger's heart wrapp'd in a woman's hide!" in 3 Henry VI. (i. 4. 137). That play, then, had been produced before Greene wrote in August, 1592, or earlier, and 1 and 2 Henry VI. had preceded it. Besides his work upon these plays (and possibly upon T. A.) Shakespeare had already written L.L.L., C. of E., and T. G. of V., and must therefore have been well known as an author no less than an actor.

We may assume, then, that Shakespeare is the "other" person meant by Chettle. He is complimented first upon his acting (the interpretation that all give to "the qualitie he professes"), and the reference to his "facetious [felicitous] grace in writing" comes in at the end of the passage as a part of the credit accorded to him by "divers of worship." It is quite certain that Chettle would not refer in that way to Marlowe or any other of Greene's three dramatists, all of whom had established their reputation as authors. It would be damning them with faint praise, but it was no slight compliment to the 'prentice work of Shakespeare, who, after retouching old plays for the stage, was beginning to try his hand at original dramatic composition. The "qualitie he professes" clearly suggests that acting was the regular profession, or occupation, of the person referred to, and this was not true of Marlowe, Peele, or Lodge. At that time they would have regarded it as anything but a compliment to be included among the "puppets" at whom Greene had sneered as noteworthy merely for being "beautified with our feathers."

THE TIME-ANALYSIS OF THE PLAY

This is summed up by Mr. P. A. Daniel (Trans. of New Shaks. Soc. for 1877-79, p. 323) as follows:—

“Time of this play, 20 days represented on the stage, with intervals; suggesting a period in all of say 12 months.

Day 1. Act I. sc. i.

Interval: March of the Queen from London to join with her allies, etc.

“ 2. Act I. sc. ii.-iv.

Interval: rather more than ten days.

[At the beginning of the next scene ‘Enter Edward, Richard, and their power,’ newly escaped, apparently from the battle of Wakefield. They are yet ignorant of their father’s fate when a messenger arrives to tell them of his death. ‘Enter one blowing,’ is the stage direction of the folio when this messenger makes his appearance, and we must imagine that he also has but just fled from the battle; yet a few minutes afterwards, when Warwick and Montague join them, we learn that to Warwick the news of York’s death is ten days old; and that since then, with King Henry in his custody, he has encountered the Queen at St. Alban’s and been defeated — the King escaping to the Queen — and Warwick, with George of York and the Duke of Norfolk, are come in post-haste to the marches, having heard that Edward was ‘making another head to fight again.’]

Day 3. Act II. sc. i.

Interval: The march to York.

“ 4. Act II. sc. ii.-vi.

Interval: during which we are to suppose the flight of Henry and Margaret to Scotland; the departure thence of the latter to France; the coronation of King Edward, and the departure of Warwick on his embassy to France.

“ 5. Act III. sc. i.

Interval: the journey of the captive King Henry to London.

Day 6. Act III. sc. ii.

Interval: marriage of King Edward, and journey of the messenger to the French Court.

“ 7. Act III. sc. iii.

Interval: return of Edward's messenger from France.

“ 8. Act IV. sc. i.

Interval: a few 'dramatic' days, perhaps.

“ 9. Act IV. sc. ii. and iii.

Interval: time for news of these events to reach London.

“ 10. Act IV. sc. iv.

Interval: some weeks probably.

“ 11. Act IV. sc. v.

Interval: time for news of Edward's escape to reach London.

“ 12. Act IV. sc. vi.

Interval: return of Edward from Flanders.

“ 13. Act IV. sc. vii.

Interval.

“ 14. Act IV. sc. viii. (to line 32).

Interval.

“ 15. Act IV. sc. viii. (line 32 to end).

[The probability of the plot absolutely requires a separate scene here; otherwise we have Henry talking of his forces which are not yet levied as in existence, and Edward speaking of Warwick, who has only just left the stage, as now remaining at Coventry.]

Interval: march of Edward from London to Coventry.

Day 16. Act V. sc. i.

Interval: march from Coventry to Barnet.

“ 17. Act V. sc. ii. and iii.

Interval: march from Barnet to Tewksbury.

“ 18. Act V. sc. iv. and v.

Interval: Gloster's journey from Tewksbury to London.

Day 19. Act V. sc. vi.

Interval. www.libtool.com.cn

[Notwithstanding Gloster's intention to make a bloody supper in the Tower on the night of Tewksbury, I incline to give a separate day to this scene. The dramatist, perhaps, would not have been prevented by the 130 miles between the two places from including this and the preceding scene in one day, but he has suggested a certain lapse of time by making Henry acquainted, evidently before the appearance of Gloster, with the fatal result of Tewksbury fight, and the murder of his young son which followed it. I mark, therefore, a separate day for this scene, and an interval between it and the last.]

Day 20. Act V. sc. vii.

The historic period here dramatized commences on the day of the battle of St. Alban's, 23d May, 1455, and ends on the day on which Henry VI.'s body was exposed in St. Paul's, 22d May, 1471. Queen Margaret, however, was not ransomed and sent to France till 1475."

LIST OF CHARACTERS IN THE PLAY

The numbers in parentheses indicate the lines the characters have in each scene.

King Henry: i. 1(75); ii. 2(23), 5(78); iii. 1(69); iv. 6(46), 8(22); v. 6(49). Whole no. 362.

Edward: i. 1(5), 2(9); ii. 1(40), 2(38), 3(15), 6(23); iii. 2(57); iv. 1(63), 3(11), 5(8), 7(43), 8(10); v. 1(28), 2(4), 3(16), 4(6), 5(23), 7(30). Whole no. 429.

King Lewis: iii. 3(66). Whole no. 66.
