Useful to the Student of Cicero.

HISTORY. With this speech should be read Plutarch's lives of Pompeius, Cicero, Caesar, Brutus and Antonius (translated, with others, by Mr Long in his 'Civil Wars of Rome,' forming five of 'Knight's Shilling Volumes'). Cf. Dio (as far as b. XLVI.), Caesar b. c., Appian b. c. (II—IV.), Suet. Caes., Velleius (II. 29—66), Mr Merivale's 'Fall of the Roman Republic,' and Abeken's 'Account of the Life and Writings of Cicero,' 1854. To the scholar perhaps no books on ancient history are more useful than W. H. Suringar's 'M. Tullii Ciceronis commentarii de vita sua. Accesserunt Annales Ciceroniani. Leidae. 1854,' and Orelli's 'Onomasticon Tullianum.' [Forsyth's Life of Cic.]

CHRONOLOGY. Zumpt's 'Annales' (reprinted by Mr T. K. Arnold) for schools. Fischer's 'römische Zeittafeln' (Altona, 1846, 4to, consisting chiefly of extracts from ancient authors) for the university.

LEXICONS. The large lexicons of Gesner, Scheller, and even Forcellini, may now be bought for the same sum as the abridgements of Freund's abridgement of Forcellini. To the scholar nothing can supply the place of these great storehouses of the facts of the language. For Cicero specially, Ernesti's Clavis (ed. 6. Halle, 1831, 8vo) is very convenient. The 'Lexicon Ciceronianum' of Schütz (Lips. 1819) and that of Nizolius (best ed. Patav. 1734, fol.) should be added by the more advanced scholar. Merguet's complete 'Lexikon zu den Reden des Cicero. Jena, Mauke,' small fol. has been brought down to 'ingredior.'

EDITIONS. a. Rhetorical works. Ellendt's 'de oratore' (Königsb. 1840, 2 vols. 8vo) and 'Brutus' (ib. 1844), 8vo. A. S. Wilkins 'de or. Oxf. 1879,' vol. I.

b. Speeches. With Lat. notes by Halm, Lipsiae, 'p. Sulla,' 1845; 'p. Sestio,' 1845; 'in Vatinius,' 1846; 'de imper. Cn. Pompei,' 1848. In the same series 'p. Caccina,' 1847, by Jordan.—'p. Clancio,' Lips. 1830, 4to, by Wunder.—'p. Cluentio,' with English notes by Prof. Ramsay (2d ed.).—'p. Archia' and 'p. Balbo' by J. S. Reid, Camb. 1879. 'Catilin.' and 'p. leg. Manil.' by A. S. Wilkins after Halm. 'p. Murena' and 'div. in Caecilii' in Verr. act. I., by W. E. Heitland, Camb. 1877.

c. Philosophical works. 'de finibus,' Hauniae, 1876, by Madvig; 'Laelius,' Lips. 1828, by C. Beier; 'de officiis,' ibid. 1820—1821, by the same. 'Tusc. disp.' Jenae. 1853, by R. Kühner. 'de officiis' by H. A. Holden, Camb. 1879. 'Academia' by J. S. Reid, Camb. 1874. 'n. d.' by J. B. Mayor, vol. I. Camb. 1880. 'Cato' and 'Laelius' by J. S. Reid, Camb. 1879. See my 'Bibliographical clue to lat. literature. Macmillan 1875.' J. B. Mayor 'guide to the choice of classical books. Bell. 1879.'

HAVING long regarded Halm's commentaries on Cicero as admirably fitted to spread a sound knowledge of those writings, which are the test* of proficiency in Latin, I did not hesitate to recommend his edition to the class, with which I read the Second Philippic in the last October term. As however the book was not accessible to all my hearers, I determined to put the introduction and notes into an English dress.

I have endeavoured to translate the introduction tolerably closely; with the notes I have taken greater liberties, abridging, enlarging, or omitting, at discretion; where Halm gives a reference to a classic, I have generally printed the passage at length; where the reference is to his own notes on other speeches, or to modern books, I have worked in the additional matter; I have also rendered into English the numerous Greek quotations.

My own additions†, which have grown to a far greater bulk than I had intended, have been drawn, i. from the ancient authorities for the history of the period, which I have carefully read over again for the purpose; ii. from my own marginal references, and grammatical, historical, and antiquarian collections; iii. from the notes of previous commentators‡, among

* Quintilian.

† Enclosed in crotchets [], with a few unimportant exceptions. The same mark in the text of the speech denotes an interpolation.

‡ Quintilian's observations I have quoted at length. I have also gone through the prolix variorum notes (500 pages, double columns, in Wernsdorf's edition); the commentary of Manutius; the notes of Orelli's smaller edition (Cic. Oratt. sel. xv. Turici, 1836); the prefaces of Madvig (Cic. Oratt. sel. XII. I have used the second, third, and fourth editions, Hauniae, 1841, 1848, 1858, and the preface of the first ed., ibid. 1830, printed in his opuscula whom the learned Jesuit Nicolas Abram deserves special commendation; if he has often given me the labour of hunting through a whole volume to verify a reference, I do not grudge the time so spent, for I generally found much by the way to reward the search; iv. from Drumann's Geschichte Roms, Becker's Handbuch der römischen Alterthümer continued by Marquardt*, Fischer's römische Zeittafeln, Pauly's Real-encyclopädie, and Mr Bunbury's careful articles on the geography of ancient Italy; v. from the principal grammar†; if I have everywhere referred to those of Zumpt and Madvig, it is only because they contain more examples than their English rivals. Of Nägelsbach's Lateinische Stylistik I have made very frequent use.

Throughout the book what has been taken from others has been acknowledged; a scholar to whom the cause of sound grammatical learning is greatly indebted, Mr Shilleto, has kindly furnished the remarks distinguished by his name or initials (R. S.).

The copious 'argument' may, I hope, supersede that coward's aid, a literal translation.

It is perhaps necessary to add, that I have purposely refrained from looking into any English notes on the speech. [1861]

I. III seq.; the substance of his notes from these and other works is here incorporated; and the critical notes of the Zürich edition. I have further consulted, but to no purpose, the notes of Klotz (Cicero's sämtliche Reden, Band 3. Leipzig. 1839), and Winckler (or. Phil. II. adnot. in us. scholarum illustrata. Marburg. 1829), the German translation of Wernsdorf, and the text of Frot-scher.

* I have cited this as 'Becker,' where the volume and page are given, but have elsewhere named Marquardt.

INTRODUCTION.

MARCUS ANTONIUS¹ was grandson of the celebrated orator of the same name, who as a zealous partisan of the aristocracy² was put to death by order of Marius and Cinna B.C. 87. The father's spirit had not descended upon his sons. The elder, Marcus, father of the triumvir, when as proprætor (B.C. 74) he assumed the command against the pirates, abused his extensive powers³ to plunder the provinces with whose protection he was charged, and tarnished the honour of the Roman arms by an incapacity, which drew upon him the nickname Creticus. The younger, § 2 Gaius, as consul B.C. 63, betrayed his sympathy for the designs of Catilina, but wanted courage openly to declare himself. The shameless extortions of which, as proconsul of Macedonia (62—60), he was guilty, led to his banishment, nor was he recalled until shortly before Cæsar's death⁴. Thus the earliest impressions of Marcus' boyhood were none of the best; but the example of his stepfather, P. Lentulus⁵ the confederate of Catilina, who died a traitor's death by the hand of the executioner, may have been still more pernicious. It is remarked by Plutarch⁶, that it was the execution of Lentulus that sowed in the heart of Antonius the seeds of an implacable hatred against Cicero. From the pictures of Antonius' youth which his enemy has drawn, however overcharged they may be by party spirit, we cannot doubt that the young Marcus soon plunged into the grossest excesses of every kind. Thus the small fortune which his father left him⁷, was quickly squandered⁸; notwithstanding which he persisted in maintaining his place in the theatre among the seats of the knights⁹. His engaging person[†], the charm of his manner, his lively and impassioned temperament, worked upon young voluptuaries with an extraordinary force of attraction. In the society of such companions Antonius gave himself up to sensuality, and sank to the lowest depths of degradation in his intercourse with the profligate C. Curio⁹, who on his part supplied the partner of his lusts with the means of continuing his dissolute life. Thus he became surety for Antonius to the large amount of 6,000,000 sesterces; a debt which Curio's father long refused to discharge, and when at last he did so at Cicero's entreaty, it was only on the condition that the impure commerce of the young men should be entirely dissolved¹⁰.

¹ Cf. Drumann Geschichte Roms, I. 64 sq. Brückner's account of the same period (Leben des M. Cicero, I. 698 seq.) is inexact and uncritical.

B.C. 58, when the notorious P. Clodius was tribune § 4 of the people, Antonius, being then about 25 years of age, attached himself to him, and for a time supported his plans¹¹. A breach however soon ensued, whether because the frantic violence of the tribune alarmed Antonius¹², or because an intrigue of Antonius with Fulvia¹³, (who became afterwards¹⁴ his third¹⁵ wife), awoke the jealousy of her husband Clodius. In the same year Antonius left Italy for Greece, where he employed himself partly in rhetorical exercises, partly in bodily training for a soldier's career¹⁶. From these § 5 pursuits he was called off by A. Gabinius, whose acquaintance he had probably made while an adherent of Clodius. In the year 57 on Gabinius' invitation he accompanied him to Syria, as *praefectus equitum*¹⁷; and was also at his side, when in B.C. 55, ¹⁴) After her second husband, the above mentioned C. Scribonius Curio (Phil. II. §§ 11 and 113), had fallen fighting on Caesar's side in Africa B.C. 49. Fulvia's marriage with Antonius took place in the latter half of the year 47 (Plut. Ant. 10. cf. Phil. II. § 69 about the divorce from Cytheris).

¹⁵) Fadia, daughter of Q. Fadius a freedman (Phil. II. § 3, cf. ad Att. XVI. II. § 1 there quoted [and Phil. XIII. § 23]), was his first wife, his second Antonia, daughter of his uncle C. Antonius (hence soror, i.e. patruelis, § 99), whom he put away B.C. 47 on suspicion of adultery with Dolabella (ibid. Plut. Ant. 9).

¹⁶) Plut. Ant. 2. ¹⁷) Plut. 3: 'when Gabinius, a consular, on his voyage to Syria urged him to join in his expedition, he unauthorised either by the senate or the people, he deserted his province, in order to reinstate king Ptolemy Auletes on the throne of Egypt¹⁸. As commander of cavalry Antonius had opportunity for the first time of making himself known to fame; he displayed great wariness and decision in action, and by his humanity and courtesy left behind him an honoured name¹⁹ in Alexandria.

§ 6 When in the year 54 Gabinius returned to Italy, Antonius offered his services to C. Iulius Cæsar, who was then in northern Gaul²⁰. Cæsar's eagle eye discovered in the bold and ambitious young man the fitting instrument for the furtherance of his own designs. In order however to support Cæsar's cause with the necessary external authority, it was indispensable that Antonius should obtain admission to the senate by filling public offices. Accordingly he returned (B.C. 53) to Rome, furnished by Cæsar with recommendations, to Cicero²¹ among others, and probably also with supplies of money, to sue for the quaestorship. Cicero, flattered by Cæsar's application, lent his countenance to Antonius the more readily, because the latter, while still a candidate for the quaestorship, on an occasion of which the particulars are unknown, stoutly assaulted the constant disturber § 7 of the public peace, P. Clodius²². Immediately on refused to go in a private capacity, but accepted the call when appointed to a command of cavalry.¹⁸ § 48. According to Plut. l. c. it was Antonius, who emboldened the hesitating Gabinius to undertake the illegal expedition.¹⁹ Plut. l. c. 'On this account he left behind him a very high reputation in Alexandria, and won the admiration of the Roman troops.'²⁰ § 48: in ultimam Galliam.²¹ § 49. ²² §§ 21, 49. p. Mil. § 40. [Cic. ap. Dion. XLV. 40].

his appointment Antonius returned to Cæsar, to administer the office under him²³, without either awaiting the decision of the lot²⁴, or being commissioned by express mandate of the people²⁵. The motive for this neglect of legal rules lay, as Cicero asserts²⁶, in the pecuniary embarrassments of Antonius, which could only be retrieved in a province where rich booty was to be had.

In the beginning of the year 50 Antonius left § 8 Gaul, where he had also found opportunity for acquiring further mastery in the practice of war, and returned to the city, in order to canvass for a seat in the college of augurs which had been vacated by the death of Q. Hortensius. By the energetic interposition of Cæsar²⁷, and by the agitation of the tribune C. Curio²⁸, he succeeded in defeating the candidate of the aristocratical party, L. Domitius Ahenobarbus. The influence of Curio, who as tribune had accepted a bribe from Cæsar to betray the cause of the republic²⁹, of which he had been before the champion, procured for Antonius in the same year the office of tribune of the people³⁰. His administration of this magistracy fell in the year so critical for the history of Rome, B.C. 49, in which the long smouldering fires of civil war burst into flames. The position of tribune gave Antonius the desired opportunity of proving his gratitude to his patron Cæsar, and of working with effect upon the course of events; it appears however a mere rhetorical exaggeration, when Cicero visits upon his head the entire responsibility of the war³¹. Yet this accusation was at least nearer the truth than the like charge brought by Antonius against Cicero, as the fomentor of enmity between Cæsar and Pompeius³².

Liv. xxx. 33. § 4: quaestoris extra sortem ex senatus consulto.] ²⁵ This is the meaning of sine lege (§ 50). ²⁶ § 50. ²⁷ de bell. Gall. viii. 50. ²⁸ § 4. ²⁹ Dio xl. 60 seq. [Luc. i. 269: venati . . . Curio lingua, ib. iv. 819, 820: momentumque fuit mutatus Curio rerum, | Gallorum captus spoliis et Caesaris auro.] ³⁰ Plut. Ant. 5. 'Curio the friend of Antonius, changing sides espoused the cause of Cæsar, and brought over Antonius, partly by the great popularity which he had won by his eloquence, partly by means of the sums of money which Cæsar supplied with no niggardly hand, he carried the election of Antonius, first as tribune, next as one of those priests who have the care of the auspices, and are called augurs.'

§9 After long and unavailing negotiations between Cæsar and the senate, his creature Curio in the session of 1 Jan. 49 presented to the consuls L. Lentulus and C. Marcellus a letter from Cæsar, containing his ultimatum: 'he was prepared to lay down his imperium, in case Pompeius would do the same; but if Pompeius retained his, he too would not retire into a private station, but must take the necessary measures for his own safety.' The tribunes M. Antonius and Q. Cassius Longinus with difficulty obtained permission to have the letter read in the senate; all discussion of its contents was denied. The question was put upon the general state of the commonwealth³³. The proposal of Metellus Scipio, that Cæsar should be summoned to discharge his troops by a certain day, on pain of being proclaimed a public enemy³⁴, was carried by a majority, who persisted in it in spite of the intercession of the two tribunes. With respect to the intercession the assembly was specially asked, whether it should be acknowledged as valid³⁵; the answer returned was in the negative, yet it does not appear that on this and the following days any formal conclusion was adopted. Not until § 10 the decisive session of 6 Jan. were the two tribunes, who stiffly adhered to their protest, ejected from the curia by the consul Lentulus, and warned to provide for their own safety³⁶. Antonius rose from his seat swelling with rage, and hurried from the curia, after invoking the gods as witnesses of the desecration of the hallowed office. In the following night he with Cassius and Curio left the city in a hired carriage and made the best of his way to Cæsar³⁷. After the departure of the two tribunes the senate decreed: darent operam consules, praetores, tribuni pl. quibus pro consulibus essent ad urbem, ne quid res publica

I. 5: de sua salute septimo (reckoning from 1 Jan.) die cogitare coguntur, quod illi turbulentissimi superioribus temporibus tribuni pl. octavo denique mense suarum actionum respicere ac timere consueverant: whence we learn that from the 7th of Jan. their potestas sacrosancta ceased to protect them. Hence Cicero's statements, Phil. II. §§ 51, 52. Cicero's forebodings (in a letter written B.C. 50) are interesting [ad Att. VII. 9]: cum sit necesse . . . illum (Caesarem) initium facere armorum aut statim nobis minus paratis aut tum, cum comitiis, amicis eius postulantis ut e lege ratio habeatur, impetratum non sit, ire autem ad arma aut hanc unam ob causam, quod ratio non habeatur, aut addita causa, si forte tribunus pl. senatum impediens aut populum incitans notatus aut senatus consulto circumscriptus aut sublatus aut expulsus sit dicens se expulsus ad illum confugerit etc. *detrimenti caperet*³⁸. This decree empowered Pompeius, who was then as imperator standing before the gates, to draw the sword against Cæsar. The die was cast. Cæsar crossed the Rubicon.

§ 11 However often Pompeius with boastful self-confidence had assured the senate and his party, that with his disposable forces he felt himself strong enough to meet every contingency, he nevertheless quickly perceived the impossibility of holding Italy against the seasoned Gallic veterans of Cæsar. Accordingly he first procured a decree of the senate, transferring the seat of government to Capua; but Cæsar's rapid successes soon necessitated the entire evacuation of Italy. In March Pompeius crossed with his army from Brundisium to Greece, accompanied by the magistrates and leaders of the party of the optimates, and also by the greater part of the senate³⁹. Thus Cæsar almost without striking a blow found

§ 12 himself master of Italy. Thinking it at the moment unadvisable to pursue the enemy over the sea, he repaired to Rome at the end of March. With him Antonius (who had meanwhile discharged the functions of legatus in Cæsar's army⁴⁰) and Cassius Longinus had returned and had resumed their dignity; for the competence of the tribunate did not extend beyond the city itself and a circuit of 1000 paces. Even before Cæsar's arrival the senators who remained in Italy had been summoned from their estates to Rome, because it served his turn to proceed with a constitutional council. The rump senate, thus brought together, was convened by Antonius and Cassius⁴¹; before it Cæsar justified his past conduct, and probably also demanded authority to require the delivery of the sacred treasure⁴². However that might be, he proceeded, regardless of the prohibition of the tribune L. Metellus, to seize it by force, and then, after taking the military precautions necessary to secure Italy, left Rome before the middle of April, in order to disarm Pompeius' lieutenants in Spain, and thus in the first place to clear the west of his adversaries. As praefectus urbi he left behind M. Lepidus, while § 13 to Antonius he confided the command of the troops in Italy⁴³, with the title of *proprætor*⁴⁴, charging him at the same time to prevent all egress from the peninsula. In this position Antonius won the affections of the soldiery⁴⁵, but gave great offence by his haughty and arbitrary behaviour and his profligate life, which he exposed unblushingly to the eyes of all Italy, while travelling on circuit through the municipia for military purposes⁴⁶. In consideration however of his important services, Cæsar readily winked at the orgies, by which his progress was disgraced. On his westward march Cæsar had nowhere met with serious opposition except at Massilia, for the investment of which he was compelled to leave behind a division of his forces; but the city threw open her gates to the conqueror, when he returned after receiving the submission of Petreius and Afranius in Spain. He there learnt that the people at Rome had appointed him dictator on the motion of the prætor and praefectus urbi Lepidus⁴⁷. Though there was no precedent for the creation of a dictator lege lata, i.e. by vote of the people, he nevertheless accepted the honour, as indispensable for the speedy execution of many of his designs at Rome.

⁴²) From an expression of Dio's we may infer that it was Antonius who made the proposal to this effect. For he ends his narrative of the removal of the treasure with the words (XLI. 17): 'moreover, their other measures also were both carried and executed under the name of equality (for they were generally introduced by Antonius) but substantially by arbitrary power.'

§ 14 As dictator Cæsar held consular comitia, in which he himself was elected with P. Servilius Isauricus; he also alleviated the fate of the exiles, by recalling (at the suggestion, as he says himself, of prætors and tribunes⁴⁸) many of those who had been banished under the *lex Pompeia de ambitu*⁴⁹ (of the year 52). This popular measure had no doubt a wider scope, for Cicero distinctly states that Antonius in his tribuneship, not content with pardoning exiles, also reversed other criminal judgements, in which despotic acts not only political motives but also the baser impulses of vulgar cupidity came into play⁵⁰. Cæsar had only enjoyed the dictatorship 11 days, when he voluntarily abdicated that extraordinary dignity, in order as consular general to open the campaign against his great opponent. A narrative of the well-known events which succeeded until the battle of Pharsalus would here be out of place, but it may be remarked in passing, that Antonius, not only by the boldness and skill⁵¹ with which he brought up the legions which had at the first embarkation been left behind at Brundisium, rescued Cæsar from great straits at Dyrrachium, but also in the decisive battle itself commanded the left wing⁵².

After the victory Antonius was sent back with § 15 a detachment of the army to guard Italy from outbreaks and from the superior fleet of the enemy. At Brundisium he met Cicero, who, instead of taking part in the battle of Pharsalus, had remained in the Pompeian camp at Dyrrachium*, and dismissed him unharmed⁵³, although Cæsar's orders would have warranted the utmost severity⁵⁴. Cæsar himself on the third day after the battle commenced his march toward the east, in pursuit of the fugitive Pompeius. In the passage of the Hellespont, which for want of ships of war he crossed in small craft, his fortune saved him from most imminent jeopardy. For C. Cassius, afterwards one of his murderers, met him with numerous triremes; but instead of hazarding an attack, delivered

His interference in the disputed succession to the throne of Egypt and his support of queen Cleopatra next involved him in the formidable Alexandrian war, which lasted nine months. After its settlement he turned his arms against king Pharnaces of Pontus, whose conquests in Asia Minor he checked by a speedy victory. While still in Alexandria, he was appointed at Rome dictator for a year⁵⁶ (late in 48), and chose Antonius his magister equitum, though Antonius had not yet filled the office of prætor⁵⁷.

§ 16 From the day when Antonius first led his legions from Brundisium to Rome, the Italian towns had groaned under the pressure of military force; but at that time the billeting of troops on the townspeople⁵⁸, however oppressive, might still be excused on the plea of necessity. But when in the beginning of 47 he seized the reins of government as magister equitum, his despotism pressed still more heavily upon Rome ⁵⁵ Suet. Caes. 63, Dio XLII. 6, App. b. c. II. 88. The story of Caesar's encounter with Cassius on the coast of Cilicia, mentioned only by Cicero (Phil. II. § 26), either arose from a confusion with the meeting in the Hellespont, or is a false report, which Cicero heard during his long sojourn at Brundisium. The occurrence must have happened, when Caesar crossed over from Egypt to Syria to wage war against Pharnaces.

⁵⁶ The regular term of an extraordinary dictatorship was 6 months. ⁵⁷ Dio XLII. 20, 21, Plut. Ant. 8. Cicero's statement (Phil. II. § 62) is distorted. ⁵⁸ § 62: in oppida militum crudelis et misera deductio.

itself. "Pitiable," says Dio⁵⁹, "was the unwonted aspect of the city on the first of January and long after. No consul or prætor was to be seen⁶⁰. Antonius did indeed by convening the senate still keep up a semblance of the commonwealth; he also contented himself with the prætexta and with the legal number of six lictors; but the sword which he always wore at his girdle, the throng of soldiers who surrounded him, above all, the actions which he performed or allowed to pass unchallenged in others, only too plainly testified the existence of a despotism. For robberies⁶¹, rapes, and murders were the order of the day. And the actual condition of Rome led men to apprehend still worse calamities from Caesar's arrival. 'What,' they asked, 'was to be expected from the dictator, if his representative could venture on acts of such brutal violence?'" The troubles were still further aggravated by the quarrels of the tribunes P. Dolabella and L. Trebellius, and by Dolabella's agitation in favour of a cancelling of debts⁶². The steps taken by Antonius towards abating the confusion, were inadequate to restore lasting order and tranquillity, and the conflicting parties stood confronting one another like two hostile armies, when Caesar at the news of the alarming ferment in Rome hastened back from Asia in September 47. His coming brought back quiet, and § 17

the most feared the severest punishments. But Caesar once again pursued his wonted course. Satisfied with the re-establishment of order, he not only overlooked the offence, but raised many of the offenders to honour, as for instance Dolabella himself, to whom as one of the earliest renegades of the Pompeian party he thought himself specially beholden⁶³. At this juncture the confiscated estate of Pompeius was also put up to sale by Caesar's order, a proceeding, which, if we may credit Cicero, caused great irritation. The chief purchaser⁶⁴ was Antonius, who however neglected to pay the purchase-money, the more as a great part of his acquisition was in a short time wasted in rioting § 18 and intemperance. Before the year had run out, Caesar, after having been again invested with the dictatorship and having named M. Lepidus as his *magister equitum*⁶⁵, left the city to renew the struggle with the Pompeians in Africa, who had raised very imposing forces while he had been engaged in Egypt and Asia. Fortune again stood his friend; after the battle of Thapsus [6 Apr. A.U. 708] he celebrated at Rome in the year 46 his magnificent four-fold triumph over Gaul, Egypt, and the kings Pharnaces of Pontus and Juba of Numidia⁶⁶. The hard ⁶³ Dio XLII. 33 and 50. Plut. Ant. 10 assigns another motive: 'These things (the insolences of Antonius and his crew) appear both to have inflamed the sedition and to have let the soldiery loose for acts of violence and rapacity. Hence too Caesar on his return both forgave Dolabella, and when elected consul (ὑπατος, rather δικτάτωρ) for the third time, chose not Antonius, but Lepidus as partner of his power' (magister equitum).

struggle in Africa was not the last which he had to maintain for the supremacy, which was to be of such short duration; the most stubborn of all awaited him in Spain against the sons of Cn. Pompeius. It is well known that in the battle of Munda (17 March, 45) a single day had well nigh destroyed the fruits of years of toils and victories. Caesar's dearly-bought success gave the last blow to the freedom of Rome.

Neither in Africa⁶⁷ nor in Spain did Antonius § 19 fight at Caesar's side. A coolness had sprung up between them⁶⁸, because Caesar demanded the payment of the sum, which Antonius had bid for the estate of Pompeius⁶⁹. Antonius was nettled by this demand, thinking that he had deserved so well of Caesar, that he might securely reckon on a greater recompense⁷⁰. But the dictator insisted, and even threatened to put in a military execution⁷¹, which determined Antonius to have an auction of goods. But here too he was foiled; for when the heirs of the knight L. Rubrius, whose inheritance Antonius had embezzled, put in a claim as owners of the goods ⁶⁷ § 71. Plut. Ant. 10: 'When the house of Pompeius was put up for sale, Antonius became the purchaser; but took in great dudgeon the demand of payment. He himself declares that his reason for bearing no part in Caesar's African campaign was, that his former successes had been unrequited.' ⁶⁸ As Plut. (ibid.) hints, Antonius' dissolute life also had somewhat estranged him from Caesar: 'Caesar however by shewing himself not blind to his failings, seems to have weaned Antonius in great measure from his folly and profligacy.' ⁶⁹ Dio XLII. 50: 'Caesar evidently declared his design of appropriating the property of others to his own use by absolute power; whereby he incurred the displeasure even of his own associates; for after they had bought up many confiscated estates, sometimes for more than the value, in the hope of obtaining them gratis, they were constrained to make payment in full.' offered for sale, the bidding was stopped by Cæsar's order⁷². Antonius' irritation was so great, that he was even charged with hiring an assassin to despatch Cæsar, which seems however to be only a malicious calumny, although Cicero assures us⁷³, that Cæsar openly complained of the matter in the senate. Ultimately Cæsar was so far appeased, that before his journey to Spain he consented to a further postponement of the day of payment⁷⁴. As has been already § 20 remarked, Antonius held aloof from this campaign also. He did indeed make as though he purposed to follow Cæsar; but advanced only to Narbo in Gaul⁷⁵, giving out that his further progress was hindered by the insecurity of the roads. At Narbo he fell in with the Cæsarian C. Trebonius, who is said to have made to him disclosures of a plot against the dictator, which Antonius neither himself gave in to, nor yet betrayed⁷⁶. His return to Rome (he is said to have come in by stealth under cover of night, to the surprise even of his devoted Fulvia) was altogether unlooked for; it spread great uneasiness throughout the city, being regarded as a confirmation of the alarming reports which were then rife respecting Cæsar's designs⁷⁷. Accordingly Antonius found it necessary for

When Cæsar drew near, Antonius again left the city to meet him, on which occasion an entire reconciliation ensued⁸⁰, the price of which on Cæsar's part was undoubtedly the remission of the outstanding debt.

The greater the apprehensions with which many § 21 had looked forward to the conqueror's coming, the more lavishly were the most extravagant honours bestowed upon him, either immediately, or in the course of the following months. It is enough here to mention the most prominent. Beside the celebration of a stately triumph, a thanksgiving of 50 days was decreed in honour of his last victory. He was allowed to wear on all festivals the triumphal robe, and to appear everywhere and at all times with a laurel crown⁸¹. He was appointed consul for 10 years, dictator and praefectus morum for life⁸⁴. His person was declared inviolable, and magistrates on assuming office were required to swear that they would affirm the projects (acta) of Cæsar. The month Quintilis, in which he was born, received the name Iulius on the proposal of Antonius. It was further resolved that his ivory statue should be carried in the Circensian games,—drawn, as was afterwards added, in a state-carriage (tensa) like the images of the gods⁸⁵,—that his birthday should be kept as an annual feast with sacrifices, and solemn vows be yearly offered for his wellbeing; moreover a special festival was to be observed every 5th year (ludi quinquennales) as in honour of a demigod (ἡρως)⁸⁶. To the two colleges of Luperci (priests of Lupercus)⁸⁷, Fabiani and Quinctiliani, which celebrated the Lupercalia, a third was added and named the Julian⁸⁸. Finally they did not stick to style him Iuppiter Iulius, and to ordain the erection of a temple to him and his Clementia, nominating Antonius beforehand as its special priest (flamen)⁸⁹. The official residence also, which he occupied as pontifex maximus, should be taken the god upon earth; it was embellished with a

Thus his countrymen worshipped him as a god § 23 rather than a man, and his authority was that of an absolute king rather than of the chief officer in a commonwealth; the name alone was still wanting, for the formal perfection of the monarchy which already existed in fact. But this end, after which the heart of the man who felt himself born to empire, yearned with such impatient longings, could not be compassed by a mere wish. The Romans had borne so much in silence,—indeed the remembrance of the sanguinary times of a Marius and a Sulla might well teach them resignation,—that Cæsar's flatterers deemed they might safely risk the last step, and Antonius, never backward in any slavish office, gladly made proffer of his services for the purpose. But before we come to narrate his rash venture, it is necessary shortly to touch on the previous occurrences of the year 44.

As dictator⁹¹ Cæsar had again designated Lepidus § 24 his magister equitum for the year, while he himself with M. Antonius assumed the consulship⁹². As however P. Dolabella⁹³ also could claim that dignity by virtue of a previous promise⁹⁴, Cæsar on the 1st of January declared in the senate, that Dolabella should hold the consulship during his own campaign against the Parthians, and enter upon office before he himself departed from Rome⁹⁵. Upon this Antonius, who in Caesar's absence could brook no division of power, least of all with his old opponent, avowed his determination of interrupting the election in his capacity of augur by the announcement of unlucky auspices. A violent altercation succeeded, ending in the bitterest personalities between him and Dolabella⁹⁶. On the day of the comitia (the precise date cannot be fixed) Antonius actually carried out his threat. The voting had already begun, when he interrupted the proceedings⁹⁷ with the exclamation 'alio die'⁹⁸. The election appears indeed to have been continued and brought to a conclusion, but its validity was questioned and stood over for the determination of the §25 senate on the fatal 15th of March⁹⁹. As Cæsar disposed of the consulship of the year 44 according to his own good pleasure, so by the projected campaign against the Parthians,—a truly national enterprise, on which public opinion expressed itself very favourably¹⁰⁰,—he gained a still more extensive authority. For by a law introduced by the tribune L. Antonius¹⁰¹, he was empowered before marching against the Parthians, to distribute offices and provinces prospectively. In fact the consuls tribunes¹⁰² and governors of provinces were already nominated for the two following years. Thus the people had for the nonce divested itself of its highest prerogative, the choice of officers, which it must be confessed had declined almost to a shadow. Still public opinion, in spite of all the influences which were brought to bear upon it¹⁰³, was very loath to recognise by name the uncontrolled power, which Cæsar in fact exercised. On the 15th § 26 of February, during the solemnity of the Lupercalia, a religious festival of atonement and purification, the consul Antonius essayed a bolder step¹⁰⁴. Cæsar had seated himself in the Rostra on his golden chair of state, arrayed in purple toga and laurel crown, to watch the wanton progress of the Luperci, who used to run through the city with no other clothing than an apron of skin¹⁰⁵. All on a sudden Antonius leapt up to the Rostra from the frolicsome ring of Luperci, reaching out to Cæsar a laurel crown, in which was entwined a diadem. Cæsar thrust back the diadem; for only faint notes of applause, drowned by groans, were heard from the surrounding multitude. Antonius renewed the attempt, and would have pressed the diadem on Cæsar's brow. Again Cæsar rejected it, and was greeted on all sides by the wondering crowd with acclamations and clapping of hands¹⁰⁶. Cæsar closed the scene with the words 'Juppiter alone is king,' and directed the diadem to be carried to the §27 Cæsar, dictator for life, who had declined it. After this miscarriage, recourse was had to religion, in order to effect that for which other means had proved unavailing. A prophecy was brought to light from the Sibylline books, which announced that the Parthians could not be vanquished except by a king of Rome¹⁰⁸. And as the saying was industriously noised abroad, voices were heard to cry, 'Cæsar must indeed still be styled dictator and imperator of the Romans, but as against foreign and conquered nations must be exalted to the majesty of the kingly name¹⁰⁹.' Cæsar however, as Appian relates, deprecated this proposal also, and resolved to open his campaign without delay, that he might no longer remain in the city as the common mark of envy. His enemies were thus driven to the speedier execution of the plot which had long been hatching against his life, and of which M. Brutus and C. Cassius were the heart and soul. The day appointed was the Ides of March, when the senators were to meet in the curia of Pompeius, in order to hear from Cæsar his final arrangements before setting out for the east. Without waiting to see whether, as was reported, an offer of the royal dignity would really be made, they fell upon the unsuspecting imperator, and laid him low with their daggers at the foot of Pompeius' statue, pierced with twenty-three stabs. The tragic deed was done, but the conspirators in the tumult of their blind fanaticism had neither made provision for seizing the reins of government, nor asked themselves whether the hero's treacherous murder would as a necessary consequence involve the recovery of liberty¹¹⁰. It was impossible to address the §29 assembled senators, as overwhelmed with consternation they had burst wildly out of the curia. Accordingly the conspirators, brandishing their reeking daggers in their hands, hurried to the forum, crying aloud* that the king and tyrant was slain, and calling on the people to restore the republic. But when here too they found nothing but panic terror¹¹¹ or apathy, they became perplexed and confounded. The veterans also inspired them with alarm, who happened at the moment to be congregated in the city in great numbers, some lately disbanded and awaiting the assignment of lands, while others had come up from the country to form a guard of honour to Cæsar on his outward march¹¹². In this embarrassment the conspirators withdrew to the Capitol, avowedly to offer thanks to the gods, in fact from fear for their lives¹¹³. They had as a guard the gladiators of Decimus Brutus¹¹⁴, who were to have been exhibited on the same day in the theatre of Pompeius, and other hired ruffians. In the evening several men of eminence, strangers to the plot, appeared on the Capitol¹¹⁵, and amongst them Cicero¹¹⁶, whom the conspirators requested to negotiate with Antonius for the re-establishment of the old constitution. Cicero however declined to treat with a man whose designs he distrusted. Antonius had not been present at the scene of terror. For as it was feared that his staunch resolution might frustrate the attempt¹¹⁷, the conspirators had charged one of their accomplices, C. Trebonius, to detain him in conversation without the walls of the *curia*¹¹⁸. Some of them had proposed that he also, as Cæsar's most powerful friend and the special favourite of the soldiery, should be put to death¹¹⁹ together with Lepidus¹²⁰, but Brutus spurned the suggestion, lest the glory of their undertaking should be sullied by the imputation of interested motives¹²¹. Ignorant alike of the designs of the conspirators and of the number of their adherents¹²³, he let slip the opportunity for a sudden assault upon the Capitol, which amid the general trepidation could scarcely have failed of success. In the night Lepidus brought troops into the city, and made a feint of avenging the dictator's murder; but after a conference with Antonius determined, especially as the disposition of the senate was not yet declared, to watch the course of events¹²⁴.

On the following day (March 16) Dolabella appeared with the insignia of the consulship. He and others had in readiness a mercenary throng¹²⁵, under whose escort Brutus and Cassius ventured to descend from the Capitol and harangue the assembly. The result however did not answer to their hopes, so that they again retreated to their refuge, and found it expedient to make advances to Antonius, through the good offices of friendly senators¹²⁶. expressed his readiness to leave everything to the disposal of the senate¹²³. In the following very bustling night Caesar's private treasure and his memoranda were conveyed to the dwelling of Antonius, whether because Caesar's widow Calpurnia thought that they would there be more secure, or because Antonius had of his own authority given orders to that effect¹²⁴. An edict of Antonius also appeared, summoning the senate to meet on the next morning (March 17) in the temple of Tellus; which was selected for the place of meeting as adjoining the house of Antonius¹²⁵. All approaches to the temple were, as Cicero assures us¹²⁶, beset with troops. After a long debate, in which Antonius displayed extraordinary adroitness¹²⁷, the pacific resolution was at last adopted, that no judicial inquiry should be instituted into the murder of Caesar, but at the same time everything which he had done and appointed (acta Caesaris), should, on grounds of public advantage¹²⁸, remain in force. An additional proviso expressly guaranteed to the veterans the

According to Plutarch this did not take place until after the funeral (Ant. 15): 'On this account Brutus and his immediate adherents withdrew from the city; upon which Caesar's friends gathered about Antonius, and Calpurnia Caesar's wife shewed her confidence by depositing with him the bulk of the treasure from her house, to the amount of 4000 talents in all.'

grants of land which had been made or promised to them. Antonius in this session also tacitly recognised Dolabella as consul, as he allowed him to occupy the curule chair without protest¹³⁴. At the news of these occurrences Brutus and Cassius invited the people to an assembly on the Capitol, where Brutus spoke amidst great applause, and in the name of his party too allayed the apprehensions of the veterans respecting their grants of land¹³⁵. The consuls also summoned the people to a contio, in which the resolutions of the senate were read, and Cicero in a long oration extolled the amnesty. Carried away by the orator's enthusiasm, the people called on the conspirators to come down from their sanctuary. Still they did not venture to appear without security, on which the sons of Antonius¹³⁶ and Lepidus¹³⁷ were sent up to them as hostages. When at last they came in sight, they were welcomed with cheers and clapping of hands; when the consuls would have spoken, the multitude refused to listen, calling on them to shake hands and seal the work of reconciliation¹³⁸. The consuls complied, but in no cheerful mood: Antonius was greatly disturbed by the sudden veering of popular favour.

On the following day (18 Mar.) the deliverers¹³⁹—for by this name or that of tyrant-killers they thenceforth went amongst the republican party—re-appeared in the senate, where over and above the general sanction of all acta Caesaris which had been passed the day before, Caesar's disposal of the provinces was separately approved.

§ 34 The work of pacification thus begun was destined to be rudely shaken by an occurrence, the first occasion of which was given in the session of 17 March. At the close of the discussion some of the senators had addressed themselves to Caesar's father-in-law, L. Piso, entreating him, by way of precaution against further commotions, to take care that Caesar's body should be privately buried, and his will be kept secret. Piso resolutely refused, in spite of all their threats, and called upon the consuls once more to take the opinions of the senators who still remained; whereupon the senate ordered not only that the will should be opened, but also that the body should be interred at the public cost (funus publicum)¹⁴⁰. In the will C. Octavius, grandson of Caesar's younger sister Julia, appeared as principal heir and adopted son; while to the people were bequeathed gardens beyond the Tiber, and to each citizen 300 sesterces¹⁴¹. This proof of affection powerfully impressed the multitude, which was no less exasperated by the discovery that amongst the 'second heirs†' (i. e. those who were to succeed the principal heirs, in the event of their death), together with M. Antonius and others, one of the conspirators, Decimus Brutus, was named. Still more violent was the agitation roused by the funeral solemnity. As was customary in the case of § 35 persons of the highest rank, the body was to be buried in the field of Mars, the laudatio funebris to be pronounced as usual in the forum. When the procession came there to a stand, Antonius by a very dexterous speech¹⁴², and by tricks of stage-effect, lashed his hearers into the wildest frenzy, which reached its highest pitch when he opened out the purple toga drenched with blood, and exposed to view the mangled corpse¹⁴³. In a transport of rage‡ they threw themselves upon the body; some were for carrying it to the scene of the crime, the curia of Pompeius; others for dragging it up to the Capitol and burning it there. Hardly diverted from this purpose, they raise a pyre of benches and other furniture, and heap on the burning pile crowns, rich dresses, and valuables of every kind¹⁴⁴. In the tumult the § 36 house of a senator, L. Bellienus¹⁴⁵, was burnt to the ground, and nothing but the interference of the soldiery prevented further devastation. From the Forum the infuriated crowd hurried with firebrands to the houses of the leading conspirators¹⁴⁶. On the way they fell in with the tribune, Helvius Cinna, and, confounding him with his namesake, the prætor Cinna, who was one of the conspirators, tore him limb from limb like so many wild beasts¹⁴⁷. The attempt upon the houses failed; for preparations had been promptly made for a stout resistance, and the neighbours also supplicated for indulgence; whereupon the assailants at last with uproarious threatenings retired¹⁴⁸. During this stormy scene the conspirators had either hidden themselves in safe retreats, or fled from the city.

§ 37 The senate gravely rebuked Antonius for his indiscreet oration¹⁴⁹, whereby, among other ill effects, the late amnesty had become an empty promise¹⁵⁰. Antonius suffered himself to be corrected, and appeased

He makes Antonius himself say (iii. 35): 'I overthrew the amnesty, not by decrees of the people or senate (for that was not in my power), but by working covertly upon the people; that is, by bringing Cæsar's body, as if for burial, to the forum, and laying bare his wounds, displaying their number and the bloody stains and the stabs in his clothes; passionately in-the senate by salutary measures¹⁵¹. By his recommendation the proposal of Servius Sulpicius, that from the Ides of March no ordinance or pardon of Cæsar's should be published, was passed as a decree of the senate¹⁵². He himself advocated the perpetual abolition of the dictatorship, which was so universally approved, as to be accepted without discussion¹⁵³. He also obviated further outbreaks of popular violence by his vigorous interposition against the demagogue Amatius¹⁵⁴. This man, an oculist by profes- § 38 sion¹⁵⁵, had exchanged his Greek name Herophilus for the Roman name Amatius, and by giving himself out as the grandson of C. Marius had won such favour with the people, that many municipal and colonial towns and most of the guilds (collegia) named him as their patron. Banished from Italy by Cæsar on account of his dangerous agitation¹⁵⁶, he had stolen again into Rome, and now took advantage of his pretended relationship to the deceased dictator, in order to counterfeit the very fanaticism of mourning. He erected upon the bustum (i. e. place where the corpse had been burnt) an altar, on which to sacrifice to Cæsar as to a god, surrounded himself with a gang of desperadoes, and let them loose upon Cæsar's enemies and upon all aristocrats in general¹⁵⁷.  § 39 out trial. In this energetic proceeding Antonius was no doubt in earnest, since he too must have feared the spread of fanaticism in the mob, but the guise of moderation, which he had hitherto worn, was a mere mask. When as consul he had accepted or procured from the senate a commission to test Cæsar's ordinances, and to execute everything according to Cæsar's will¹⁵⁸, he soon began in the most barefaced manner to drive trade with Cæsar's papers¹⁵⁹, of which he had made himself master immediately after the Ides of March, unscrupulously converting them into instruments of his own ambition and avarice¹⁶⁰. He issued ordinances of every kind, as if in compliance with the acta Cæsaris, recalled exiles in troops from banishment¹⁶¹, bestowed honours, exemptions from imposts, and the franchise not only on individuals, but on whole districts and provinces, and § 40 all to fill his own purse¹⁶². To arm the acts of his own arbitrary will with a sanction as of Cæsar's autograph, he directed Cæsar's secretary, Faberius, to garble authentic documents and to forge new ones¹⁶³. Still even the profusion of wealth, which flowed in upon the conscientious friend of the murdered dictator in return for countless acts of grace and favour, could not glut his rapacity; Cæsar's papers must throw open the doors of the temple of Ops, and place at the disposal of Antonius and his creatures the public treasure there deposited, to the amount of 700,000,000 sesterces¹⁶⁴.

It may readily be conceived that these enormous § 41 resources must have put at the command of Antonius a power, with which the constitutional authorities were unable to cope. A new opportunity for bestowing favours on his intimates, and of engaging the veterans still more decidedly in his party, was procured by an agrarian law, which his brother Lucius, the tribune, introduced and carried without regard to the legal forms¹⁶⁵. In order to assign for distribution the fertile Leontine domain in Sicily, lands in Campania¹⁶⁶ and even the Pontine marshes¹⁶⁷, as though they had been already drained and reclaimed, seven commissioners¹⁶⁸ were nominated, amongst whom was the consul Antonius¹⁶⁹. With this commission is connected the journey which he undertook through Italy in the latter half of April and the beginning of May. Its design was not merely to settle the veterans on the lands assigned to them and to bind them to aid all his plans¹⁷⁰, but he also enlisted from among them a prætorian cohort, which he is said gradually to have raised to the number of 6,000¹⁷¹. We may be excused a description of the journey, as all that we know of it rests on the authority of this speech¹⁷² and we seek in vain even in Cicero's letters for further particulars.

§ 42 During Antonius' absence from Rome there appeared on the scene the man, who was destined to inherit not merely the name, but the power of Cæsar. The first interview of Antonius and C. Octavianus, whom Cicero does not yet mention in the second Philippic, was none of the friendliest. Antonius refused to deliver to him Cæsar's remaining estate, or to give an account of the purposes to which his inheritance had been applied. Hereupon Octavianus offered Cæsar's lands for sale, and also devoted his own patrimony to the payment of Cæsar's legacies to the people, and to the exhibition of magnificent games. All Antonius' intrigues proving unavailing to divert the current of popular favour from his rival, he thought it wisest to come to terms, the more as he needed the assistance of Octavianus for the accomplishment of § 43 his designs respecting the provinces. He found it easier again to bring over to his side another antagonist, who had arisen against him during his absence. This was no other than his colleague Dolabella, whose bearing had been such, that the optimates flattered themselves with the hope of winning him as an ally. We have already seen, how Antonius quelled the excesses of the mutineers at Cæsar's bustum by the execution of the counterfeit Marius. But the altar, which had been erected in the form of a pillar¹⁷³, was still standing, and soon again became the rendezvous for all the discontented of the populace. Sacrifices were still offered upon it, vows paid, and disputes settled by oaths sworn in Cæsar's name¹⁷⁴. But this fanatical idolatry was only the cloak of the most dangerous designs, which threatened the life and property of the better citizens¹⁷⁵. Dolabella at length (at the end of April) put a stop to the ferment¹⁷⁶; he sent a strong force against the brigands, with orders to clear the Forum. Part of the mutinous masses offered resistance; these were either cut down on the spot, or taken prisoners, and, if slaves, crucified, if free-born, thrown from the Tarpeian rock¹⁷⁷. Finally, the pillar, the beacon of Italy, was raised to the ground, the site levelled and paved. The great applause, which Dolabella won by this bold stroke¹⁷³, may have inspired him with the thought of assuming an independent position with relation to Antonius, and of making a bid for the leadership of the aristocratical party¹⁷⁹. Antonius however knew his man; he directed the scrivener Faberius to draw up in Caesar's name and in favour of Dolabella an order on the treasure in the temple of Ops¹⁸⁰; Dolabella was relieved from his embarrassments and the threatened opposition was silenced, the rather as he was apprehensive that if he provoked Antonius, he might forfeit the province of Syria which he had already secured, and with it the expectations of a rich plunder¹⁸¹.

¹⁷¹ So App. III. 5; who adds, doubtless by mere conjecture, that after the execution of the pretender Marius the senate authorised Antonius to form a body-guard of veterans for the defence of his person against the rabble. In Cicero's letters we find no hint either of such a permission or of the levy of an armed force before the journey in April and May. ¹⁷² §§ 100 seq.

Decimus Brutus, Asia to C. Trebonius, to Tillius Cimber Bithynia; to the praetors M. Brutus and Cassius Macedonia and Syria were assigned for the year 43, after the expiration of their year of office¹⁸². The first three had set out for their provinces, either immediately after Caesar's tumultuous funeral, or in the course of April¹⁸³; which M. Brutus and Cassius as praetors were unable to do. After the Ides of March they tarried in Rome for about a month, but since the decisive day of the burial lived in entire seclusion. About the middle of April they left Rome, and moved to and fro among the municipal towns in the vicinity, waiting for a possible change of popular feeling. They § 46 purposed to shew themselves again in Rome on the first of June, for on that day Antonius had appointed a meeting of the senate which was anticipated with eager excitement; but were daunted by the veterans, who escorted Antonius on his return from his progress. One of Antonius' first measures in the month of June was to secure the permanent removal from Rome of the two chiefs of the adverse faction. First of all Brutus was relieved, by a lex introduced by Antonius, from the constitutional restriction which made it illegal for a *praetor urbanus*¹⁸⁴ to be absent from the city more than 10 days; next, also on the proposal of Antonius¹⁸⁵, he and Cassius on the 5th of June¹⁸⁶ received a cura annonae, i.e. a commission to purchase § 47 ¹⁸⁷. The provinces assigned to them by Cæsar had already been otherwise disposed of. As early as the month of April¹⁸⁸ Dolabella had received Syria from the people, with the right of conducting the war against the Parthians¹⁸⁹; whereupon Antonius procured from the senate Macedonia, where were posted the legions, which Cæsar had sent forward for the same war¹⁹⁰. Afterwards he desired to exchange this province for *Gallia cisalpina, with the proviso that the legions should be transported thither, and that Decimus Brutus should receive Macedonia without an army. What the senate denied was conceded by the people, as he had desired¹⁹¹. The refusal of Brutus to abandon Gaul was afterwards the occasion of the so-called bellum Mutinense.

§ 48 Under these circumstances, Brutus and Cassius perceived that it was no longer feasible to remain in Italy. Yet it was with reluctance that they resolved on departing for their provinces. Brutus in particular wished to await the result of the *ludi Apollinares*¹⁹² which belonged to the office of the praetor urbanus, and which in his name and at his charges¹⁹³ were

In this perplexity it was a welcome relief to him, when Dolabella, after he had received the province of Syria, nominated him as his *legatus*¹⁹⁸. He had thus a colourable excuse for absence. With a heavy heart he began his journey on the 17th of July, intending in the first place to make for Greece; for nothing was further from his intention than actually to discharge the functions of *legatus*¹⁹⁹. On the 1st of August he reached Syracuse, where he took ship for § 50 Greece²⁰⁰. Cicero's was not strictly a legatio libera (i. e. without limitation to any place), such as senators often procured in troublous times as a decent pretext for absence from Italy, but he was nominally legatus of Dolabella for Syria. Still his right was liberum, in so far as he was by virtue of it free to go and come. Cf. Ep. ad Att. xv. 11. § 4: Dolabella me sibi legavit a. d. III. Nonas; id mihi heri vesperi nuntiatum est. Votiva (sc. legatio) ne tibi quidem placebat. Etenim erat absurdum, quae, si stetisset res publica, vorissem, ea me eversa illa vota suscipere, et habent, opinor, liberae legationes definitum tempus lege Iulia nec facile addi potest. Aveo genus legationis, ut, cum velis, introire caire liceat: quod nunc mihi additum est. Bella est autem huius iuris quinquenni licentia.

happy reconciliation was the first of September, when a full meeting of the senate was anticipated, whereas of late the patriots, especially since Antonius had begun to check all freedom of debate by the presence of troops, had not dared to take their seats. This cheering news determined Cicero at once to return; on the last of August he entered the city after an absence of half a year.

On the march of events in Rome after the arrival § 51 of Antonius, our information is very scanty. We have no detailed accounts even of the often mentioned session of the 1st of June, when a commission was to be named²⁰², which should put a stop to further abuse of Caesar's papers, by ascertaining what were his genuine acts. The meeting from fear of Antonius' military dispositions was very thinly attended²⁰³; it appears however from distinct statements in Cicero's letters²⁰⁴ that the commission was actually appointed.

venerunt Roma sane recentes, in iis Bruti nostri hospes, qui Brutum Neapoli reliquisset. Haec adferebant: edictum Bruti et Cassii, et fore frequentem senatum Kalendis, a Bruto et Cassio litteras missas ad consulares et praetorios ut adessem rogare. Summam spem nuntiabant fore ut Antonius cederet, res conveniret, nostri Romam redirent. Addebant etiam me desiderari, subaccusari. Quae cum audissem, sine ulla dubitatione abiici consilium profectionis, quo me hercule ne antea quidem delectabar.

²⁰² Phil. II. § 100: sic placuerat ut Kal. Iuniis de Caesaris actis cum consilio cognosceretis. ²⁰³ II. § 108 ad fin. ad Att. xiv. 22. § 2: Equidem in his locis moneor a multis, ne in senatu Kalendis; dicuntur enim occulte milites ad eam diem parati et quidem in istos (liberatores), qui mihi videntur ubi vis tutius quam in senatu fore. ²⁰⁴ Cic. Capitone (ad Att. xvi. 16 c. § 11): Deinde, quem ad modum tu scis—interfuit enim, cum consules oporteret ex senatus consulto de actis Caesaris cognoscere—, res ab iis in Kalendas dilata est. Accessit ad senatus consultum lex, quae lata est a. d. III. Non. Iun., quae lex earum rerum, quas Caesar statuisset decrevisset egisset, consubibus (i. e. to them and the elected committee of the senate, see ad Att. xvi. 16. § 18) cognitionem dedit; cf. too ad Att. xvi. 16. § 8. Hence it is no slight misrepresentation, when Cic. says,

Ignorant as we are of the conclusions²⁰⁵ arrived at by this conclave appointed by the influence of Antonius and under his presidency, one thing we may regard as certain, that he would not consent to any restrictions, as is manifest e. g. from the law respecting the province of Crete, which Cicero (Phil. II. § 97) § 52 has justly ridiculed. In general it may be asserted, that after the first of June Antonius governed more despotically than ever. Trusting to the support of the band of veterans which he had brought with him²⁰⁶, he now adopted an openly hostile attitude towards the senate, and looked to the people for the attainment of his ends²⁰⁷; indeed, at this time he was even suspected of aiming at the dictatorship, which he had himself § 53 abolished in the senate²⁰⁸. Supported by the giddy multitude Antonius now ventured to bring forward laws, directly superseding some of Cæsar's²⁰⁹. For instance, Cæsar, taking warning by his own example (for it was to his long-continued government in Gaul that he owed the inclination and the means for compassing the supreme power)²¹⁰, had made a law, that late prætors should only hold a government for one year, consulars for not more than two successive years, and generally, that no imperium should be held for a longer term. Antonius, who hoped one day, like Cæsar, at the head of a formidable force to plunder his Gallia cisalpina, instigated tribunes to bring in a bill, whereby he and Dolabella as consuls of the current year were guaranteed the exceptional privilege of a 5-years' tenure of government²¹¹. When Cicero again entered Rome, two new bills of Antonius, unmistakably of democratic tendency, were promulgated, one for the creation of a third decury of jurors²¹², the other granting an appeal to the people in actions for assault and for high treason²¹³.

Phil. II. § 100: quem umquam convocasti? ²⁰⁵ Some such are mentioned ad Att. XVI. 16 E and F. §§ 15 and 18. ²⁰⁶ Brutus et Cassius Antonio (ad fam. XI. 2. § 1): Scribitur nobis magna veteranorum multitudinem Romam convenisse iam et ad Kal. Iunias futuram multo maiorem. Cf. Phil. II. §§ 8, 15, 19, 100, 104, 112, esp. § 108. The alleged reason for establishment of a body-guard was the fear of treachery; see ad Att. XV. 17. § 1: de consulum ficto timore cognoveram: and cf. Phil. I. § 27 ad fin. II. § 112. ²⁰⁷ Phil. I. § 6, II. § 109. As early as 23 May Cicero wrote to Atticus (xv. 4. § 1): Antonii consilia narras turbulenta: atque utinam potius per populum agat quam per senatum, quod quidem ita credo. Sed mihi totum eius consilium ad bellum spectare videtur, si quidem D. Bruto provincia eripitur. ²⁰⁸ ad Att. xv. 21. § 1. ²⁰⁹ Phil. I. §§ 18 seq. II. § 109. ²¹⁰ Dio XLIII. 25.

²¹¹ I. § 19, II. § 109. In the above account we have adopted Mommsen's view (Die Rechtsfrage zwischen Cæsar und dem Senat, p. 43), who has confuted the common hypothesis that Antonius altogether rescinded the law of Cæsar. The number of years is variously given by Cicero. In Phil. v. § 7, we read: Tribuni pl. tulerunt de provinciis contra acta Cæsaribus, ille biennium, iste sexennium; (VIII. § 28: ipse autem ut quinquennium, inquit, obtineam (sc. provinciam Galliam comatam). At istud vetat lex Cæsaribus et tu acta Cæsaribus defendis. With this agrees ep. ad Att. xv. 11. § 4 where it appears that Dolabella received the province of Syria for five years. Mommsen (l.c.) explains the discrepancy by supposing that in the sexennium the year of succession is also taken into account. ²¹² The law is mentioned as existing Phil. v. § 12 and VIII. § 27. Phil. I. § 19: Quid? lege, quæ promulgata est de tertia decuria, nonne omnes iudicariæ leges Cæsaribus dissolvuntur? Cf. ib. § 20. The lex Aurelia of the prætor L. Aurelius Cotta (B. C. 70) created 3 decuries of iudices, one of senators, one of knights, one of tribuni ærarii. Pompeius (B. C. 55) limited the choice to the wealthiest members of the three orders, and changed the mode of election. Cæsar (B. C. 46) limited the iudicia to senators and knights. Antonius again created a third decuria, consisting chiefly of centurions and discharged soldiers. But the law did not long remain in force. ²¹³ Phil. I. §§ 21—23. There was no appeal against a sentence pronounced in quaestiones perpetuæ, because in such actions all sentences appeared to be pronounced in the name of the people,

§ 54 ~~What like general condition~~ of affairs was not so hopeful as Cicero had been assured on his journey, was seen on the 1st of September, in the meeting of the senate convened by Antonius in the temple of Concordia. Antonius there proposed, that in all supplicationes a day in honour of Cæsar should be added²¹⁴, i. e. that on occasion of every thanksgiving for public successes, a special day should be appropriated for offerings to the deified Cæsar²¹⁵. As Cicero was doubtless informed beforehand of the subject of the deliberation, he excused himself to Antonius for non-appearance, on the plea that he had not recovered from the fatigue of his journey. The threat which Antonius thereupon let fall, that he would pull down his house about his ears²¹⁶, was not indeed carried out, but it plainly shewed that he was determined that the which, as these regular trials were introduced for most offences, gradually delegated its powers to the prætor and the iudices appointed by him.

²¹⁴ Phil. II. § 110: an supplicationes addendo diem contaminari passus es etc. ²¹⁵ This explanation is favoured by Dio XLIII. 44: 'They granted Cæsar a public residence, and a special festival (επομνησίων ἐξαιτησέων = propriam supplicationem), whenever sacrifices should be offered in honour of a victory; where however Dio is mistaken in fixing the date of this grant immediately after the battle of Munda. He says correctly of the honours conferred after Cæsar's death, (XLV. 7): 'on certain thanksgivings for victory (επομνησίων) they offered sacrifices in honour of his name on a day specially appropriated to that purpose.' And of the triumvirs he says (XLVII. 18): 'They founded a chapel (ἱερόν) to him as a hero in the Forum and on the spot where he had been burnt, and also at the horse-races (ludis circensibus) carried an image of him in procession with one of Venus; and when news came of any victory, they granted the distinction of a thanksgiving severally to the conqueror and to Cæsar even after his death.' I have cited these passages at length, because the account in Drumann (I. 192) and Brückner (I. 731) is inaccurate.

²¹⁶ Phil. I. §§ 11, 12. v. § 19: huc etiam nisi venirem Kal. Sept., fabros et missurum et domum meam disturbaturum esse dixit. [Plut. Cic. 43.]

consular should declare himself either as friend or foe. On the following day the senate again assembled in § 55 the temple of Concordia; Cicero appeared, but no Antonius. In this sitting Cicero delivered the first of his speeches against Antonius, known as *Philippics*²¹⁷. In it he endeavoured to explain his long absence from the senate and sudden return, deprecated Antonius' harsh requital of his non-attendance the day before, and frankly spoke his mind about the line of policy pursued by the consul and his colleague, yet still with a certain reserve and moderation*, as he was loath entirely to foreclose every avenue of accommodation. Antonius, who was irritated by the speech § 56 beyond measure, immediately renounced his friendship, and did not long delay an answer²¹⁸. In a meeting of ²¹⁷ If we may trust the collection of letters between Cicero and Brutus, the occasion of this title was accidental. Brutus writes II. 5. § 4: Legi orationes duas tuas, quarum altera Kal. Ian. usus es (Phil. v.), altera de litteris meis (Phil. x.), quae habita est abs te contra Calenum. Nunc scilicet hoc exspectas, dum eas laudem. Nescio animi an ingenii tui maior in his libellis laus contineatur. Iam concedo ut vel Philippici vocentur, quod tu quadam epistola iocans scripsisti. And Cicero says II. 4. § 2: De te etiam dixi tum quae dicenda putavi. Haec ad te oratio perferetur, quoniam te video delectari Philippicis nostris. In the historians and grammarians, as well as in the MSS., the speeches are called Philippicae; A. Gellius however always uses the title 'Orationes Antonianae.' [Plut. (Cic. 24 and 48) distinctly says that Cic. himself entitled his speeches against Antonius Philippics. So App. b. c. iv. 20. Plutarch also (Cic. 41) cites a written reply of Antonius to the Philippics (ἐν ταῖς πρὸς τοὺς Φιλίππικὸς ἀντιγραφαῖς). Quintil. III. 8. § 46: cum Ciceroni dabimus consilium, ut Antonium roget, vel etiam 'ut Philippicas' (ita vitam pollicente eo) 'exurat.' (These seem to have been favourite themes for rhetorical exercises. See Sen. suas. VI.) Suet. rhet. 5 and Juvenal also use this title. Gellius four times (I. 22, VII. 11, XIII. 1, and 21 or 22) cites Antonianae, once (I. 16) 'M. Cicero in secta in Antonium.' [* Yet cf. c. 13 § 33: domestici.] ²¹⁸ Phil. v. § 19: Locutus sum de re publica, minus equidem libere quam mea consuetudo, liberius the senate on Sept. 19, from which Cicero kept away out of fear for his life²¹⁹, Antonius delivered a lengthy oration, in which with merciless caricature he held up Cicero's conduct both as a man and as a politician to unqualified contempt. Cicero wanted heart to reply to this speech by word of mouth; but he wrote the second Philippic*, which however he did not pluck up courage to publish, until Antonius had left Rome, in order to wrest from Decimus Brutus by force of arms the province which the people had revoked. It was succeeded by twelve others²²⁰, the contents of which need not here be given. It is divided into two § 57 parts, a defensive, in which the orator rebuts the charges brought against himself, and an offensive, in which he paints in the darkest colours the public and private life of his opponent. In order to give the composition the freshness of a spoken harangue, it assumes to be an immediate reply to Antonius' speech in the senate†. Cicero, who had the fairer field for invective in the life of Antonius, doubtless came off victorious in the combat of words, but his enemy's power was neither crushed nor even shaken²²¹; the written reply*, which Antonius vouchsafed a year

²²⁰ The grammarian Nonius cites two passages of a 16th speech, which are not found in the extant Philippics. See the Zürich edition p. 1410. [† The scene is laid in the temple of Concord (§§ 15, 19, 112), on the 19th of September (§ 110). Calenus, in his invective against Cicero, comments severely on his practice of preparing speeches for publication, which were never delivered. (Dio XLVI. 7, 8): 'When you mount the tribunal you quake for fear, as though it were a matter of life and death; your studied eloquence slips from you, and all you say is tame and dead (τρεβηρός). Not one of all your famous orations was really pronounced as we read it; There is your accusation against Verres for example...I say nothing of the books which you compose against your friends; which you do not dare to publish from a consciousness of the villainy of the act.' Milo, when living in exile, on receiving a copy of the extant speech pro Milone, wrote back, that it was a happy chance for him that Cicero had not spoken as he had written; otherwise he should have missed the delicious mullets of Massilia (ib. xl. 54.) ²²¹ Cf. ep. ad fam. XII. 22. § 1: Nos hic cum homine gladiatore omnium nequissimo, collega nostro Antonio, bellum gerimus, sed non pari conditione contra arma verbis. [* What Ant. would have said, may be gathered from the invective of Q. the second Philippic, as Cicero's invective against Antonius (ib. XLV. 18—47) is in great part a reproduction of it.] [† In the proscription of the triumvirs Lepidus gave up to death his brother L. Paullus, Antonius his uncle L. Cæsar (infr. § 14), and Octavianus Cicero (Liv. perioch. cxx. Plut. Cic. 46). Antonius despatched the centurion Herennius and M. Popilius Lænas, by whom Cicero was murdered 7 Dec. B.C. 43, aet. 64. (dial. de orat. 17. § 2. See the extracts from Livy and others, all describing the murder, in Sen. suas. 6; cf. Plut. Ant. 20, Cic. 48, 49). App. b. c. iv. 20: 'Then Lænas, though he had once won an action through Cicero's advocacy, drew his head from the litter and cut it off, striking or rather sawing it three times; so unhandy was he. He likewise cut off the hand, wherewith Cicero wrote those orations against the tyranny of Antonius, which in imitation of Demosthenes he called Philippics. On the instant expresses posted away by sea and land to convey the good news to Antonius. Lænas on his arrival, finding Antonius seated in the forum, waved the head and hand while yet a long way off, by way of displaying them. Antonius overjoyed put a crown on the centurion's head, and gave him over and above the promised reward 250,000 Attic drachms, as having rid him of the greatest and most rancorous of his enemies. Cicero's head and hand long hung from the rostra, where he used to speak; and more now flocked together to see him, than formerly to hear. It is said that Antonius set Cicero's head before the table at his meal, till he had glutted himself with the sight.' Fulvia is said (Dio XLVII. 8) to have placed the head upon her knees, and pricked with hair-pins the tongue which had abused her. On receiving the ghastly offering, Antonius exclaimed that the proscription was complete (Plut. Cic. 49). Cf. Vell. II. 64. §§ 3, 4: Haec sunt tempora, quibus M. Tullius continuis actionibus aeternas Antonii memoriae inussit notas. Sed hic fulgentissimo et caelesti ore, at tribunus Caninius continua rabie lacerabat Antonium. Utrique vindicta libertatis morte stetit: sed tribuni sanguine commissa proscripio, Ciceronis, velut satiatio Antonio poena, finita.]

M. TULLII CICERONIS
IN M. ANTONIUM

PHILIPPICARUM LIBER SECUNDUS.

I. 1. QUONAM meo fato, patres conscripti, fieri dicam, ut nemo his annis viginti rei publicae fuerit hostis, qui non bellum eodem tempore mihi quocumque indixerit? Nec vero necesse est quemquam nominari: vobiscum ipsi recordamini. Mihi vobis illi plus quam optarem dederunt: te mihi Antonii, quorum facta imitere, eorum exitus non potest evadere. Atque hoc in aliis minus mirabar. Nemo illorum inimicus mihi fuit voluntarius: omnes a me rei publicae causa lacessiti. Tu ne verbo quidem violatus, ut audacior quam Catilina, furiosior quam Clodius viderere, ultro me maledictis lacessisti tuamque a me alienationem commendationem tibi ad inpios cives fore putavisti. 2. Quid putem? contemptum me? Non video nec in vita nec in gratia nec in rebus gestis nec in hac mea mediocritate ingenii, quid despiciere possit Antonius. An in senatu facillime de me detrahi posse credidit? qui ordo clarissimis civibus bene gestae rei publicae testimonium multis, mihi uni conservatae dedit. An decertare mecum voluit contentione dicendi? Hoc quidem est beneficium. Quid enim plenius, quid uberius quam mihi et pro me et contra Antonium dixere? ~~illud profecto non~~ existimavit sui similibus probari posse se esse hostem patriae, nisi mihi esset inimicus. 3. Cui prius quam de ceteris rebus respondeo, de amicitia, quam a me violatam esse criminatus est, quod ego gravissimum crimen iudico, pauca dicam. 5

II. Contra rem suam me nescio quando venisse questus est. An ego non venirem contra alienum pro familiari et necessario? non venirem contra gratiam non virtutis spe, sed aetatis flore collectam? non venirem contra iniuriam, quam iste intercessoris iniquissimi beneficio obtinuit, non iure praetorio? Sed hoc idcirco commemoratum a te puto, uti te infimo ordini commendares, cum omnes te recordarentur libertini generum et liberos tuos nepotes [Q. Fadii] libertini hominis fuisse. At enim te in disciplinam meam tradideras—nam ita dixisti—, domum meam ventitaras. Ne tu, si id fecisses, melius famae, melius pudicitiae tuae consuluisses. Sed neque fecisti nec, si cuperes, tibi id per C. Curionem facere licuisset.—
4. Auguratus petitionem mihi te concessisse dixisti. O incredibilem audaciam! o inpudentiam praedicandam! Quo enim tempore me augurem a toto collegio expetiturum Cn. Pompeius et Q. Hortensius nominaverunt—nec enim licebat a pluribus nominari—, tu nec solvendo eras nec te ullo modo nisi eversa re publica fore incolumem putabas. Poteras autem eo tempore auguratum petere, cum in Italia C. Curio non esset? aut tum, cum es factus, unam tribum sine Curione ferro potuisses? cuius etiam familiares de vi condemnati sunt, quod tui nimis studiosi fuissent. III. 5. At beneficio sum tuo usus. Quo? quamquam illud ipsum, quod commemoras, semper prae me tuli: malui me tibi debere confiteri quam cuiquam minus prudenti non satis gratus videri. Sed quo beneficio? quod me Brundisii non occideris? Quem ipse victor, qui tibi, ut tute gloriari solebas, detulerat ex latronibus suis principatum, salvum esse voluisset, in Italiam ire iussisset, cum tu occideres? Fac potuisse. Quod est aliud, patres conscripti, beneficium latronum, nisi ut commemorare possint eis se dedisse vitam, quibus non ademerint? Quod si esset beneficium, numquam qui illum interfecerunt, a quo erant conservati, quos tu clarissimos viros soles appellare, tantam essent gloriam consecuti. Quale autem beneficium est, quod te abstineris nefario scelere? Qua in re non tam iucundum mihi videri debuit non interfectum me a te, quam miserum te id impune facere potuisse. 6. Sed sit beneficium, quando quidem maius accipi a latrone nullum potuit: in quo potes me dicere ingratum? An de interitu rei publicae queri non debui, ne in te ingratus viderer? At in illa querella, misera quidem et luctuosa, sed mihi pro hoc gradu, in quo me senatus populusque Romanus collocavit, necessaria, quid est dictum a me cum contumelia? quid non moderate? quid non amice? Quod quidem cuius temperantiae fuit, de M. Antonio querentem abstinere maledictis, praesertim cum tu reliquias rei publicae dissipavisses, cum domi tuae turpissimo mercatu omnia essent venalia, cum leges eas, quae numquam promulgatae essent, et de te et a te latas confiterere, cum esses augur, intercessionem consul sustulisses, cum esses foedissime stipatus armatis, cum omnes impuritates impudica in domo cotidie susciperes vino lustrisque confectus. 7. At ego, tamquam mihi cum M. Crasso contentio esset, quocum multae et magnae fuerunt, non cum uno gladiatore nequissimo, de re publica graviter querens de homine nihil dixi. Itaque hodie perficiam ut intellegat, quantum a me beneficium tum acceperit.

IV. At etiam litteras, quas me sibi misisse diceret, recitavit homo et humanitatis expertus et vitae communis ignarus. Quis enim umquam, qui paulum modo bonorum consuetudinem nosset, litteras ad se ab amico missas offensione aliqua interposita in medium protulit palamque recitavit? Quid est aliud tollere ex vita vitae societatem, tollere amicorum conloquia absentium? Quam multa ioca solent esse in epistulis, quae prolata si sint, inepta videantur! quam multa seria, neque tamen ullo modo divulganda! 8. Sit hoc inhumanitatis: stultitiam incredibilem videte. Quid habes quod mihi opponas, homo diserte, ut Tironi et Mustelae iam esse videris? qui cum hoc ipso tempore stent cum gladiis in conspectu senatus, ego quoque te disertum putabo, si ostenderis, quo modo sis eos inter sicarios defensurus — sed quid opponas tandem, si negem me umquam ad te istas litteras misisse? Quo me teste convincas? an chirographo? in quo habes scientiam quaestuosam. Qui possis? sunt enim librarii manu. Iam invidео magistro tuo, qui te tanta mercede, 25 quantam iam proferam, nihil sapere doceat. 9. Quid enim est minus non dico oratoris, sed hominis, quam id obicere adversario, quod ille si verbo negarit, longius progredi non possit qui obiecerit? At ego non nego, teque in isto ipso convinco non inhumanitatis solum, 30 sed etiam amentiae. Quod enim verbum in istis litteris est non plenum humanitatis, officii, benevolentiae?

Omne autem crimen tuum est, quod de te in his litteris non male existimem, quod scribam tamquam ad civem, tamquam ad bonum virum, non tamquam ad sceleratum et latronem. At ego tuas litteras, etsi siure poteram a te lacessitus, tamen non proferam: quibus petis ut tibi per me liceat quendam de exsilio reducere, adiurasque id te invito me non esse facturum. Idque a me impetrasti. Quid enim me interponerem audaciae tuae, quam neque auctoritas huius ordinis neque existimatio populi Romani neque leges ullae possent coercere? 10. Verum tamen quid erat quod me rogares, si erat is, de quo rogabas, Caesaris lege reductus? Sed videlicet meam gratiam voluit esse, in quo ne ipsius quidem ullā esse poterat lege lātā.

V. Sed cum mihi, patres conscripti, et pro me aliquid et in M. Antonium multa dicenda sint, alterum peto a vobis ut me pro me dicentem benigne, alterum ipse efficiam ut, contra illum cum dicam, attentē audiat. Simul illud oro, si meam cum in 25 omni vita, tum in dicendo moderationem modestiamque cognostis, ne me hodie, cum isti, ut provocavit, respondero, oblitum esse putetis mei. Non tractabo ut consulem: ne ille quidem me ut consularem. Etsi ille nullo modo consul, vel quod ita vivit vel quod ita 25 rem publicam gerit vel quod ita factus est: ego sine ulla controversia consularis. 11. Ut igitur intellegetis, qualem ipse se consularem profiteretur, obiecit mihi consulatum meum. Qui consulatus verbō meus, patres conscripti, rē vester fuit. Quid enim ego 30 stitui, quid gessi, quid egi nisi ex huius ordinis consilio, auctoritate, sententia? Haec tu homo sapiens, non solum eloquens, apud eos, quorum consilio sapientiaque gesta sunt, ausus es vituperare? Quis autem meum consulatum praeter te Publiumque Clodium, qui vituperaret, inventus est? Cuius quidem tibi factum, sicut C. Curioni, manet, quoniam id domi tuae est, quod fuit illorum utriusque fatale. 12. Non placet M. Antonio consulatus meus. At placuit P. Servilio, ut cum primum nominem ex illius temporis consularibus, qui proxime est mortuus; placuit Q. Catulo, cuius semper in hac re publica vivet auctoritas; placuit duobus Lucullis, M. Crasso, Q. Hortensio, C. Curioni, C. Pisoni, M. Glabrioni, M. Lepido, L. Volcatio, C. Figulo, D. Silano, L. Murenas, qui tum erant consules designati; placuit idem quod consularibus M. Catoni, qui cum multa vita excedens providit, tum quod te consulem non vidit. Maxime vero consulatum meum Cn. Pompeius probavit, qui, ut me primum decedens ex Syria vidit, complexus et gratulans meo beneficio patriam se visurum esse dixit. Sed quid singulos commemoro? Frequentissimo senatui sic placuit, ut esset nemo, qui mihi non ut parenti gratias ageret, qui mihi non vitam suam, fortunas, liberos, rem publicam referret acceptam. VI. 13. Sed quoniam illis, quos nominavi, tot et talibus viris res publica orbata est, veniamus ad vivos, qui duo de consularium numero reliqui sunt. L. Cotta, 25 vir summo ingenio summaque prudentia, rebus eis gestis, quas tu reprehendis, supplicationem decrevit verbis amplissimis, eique illi ipsi, quos modo nominavi, consulares senatusque cunctus adsensus est, qui honos post conditam hanc urbem habitus est togato ante me nemini. 14. L. Caesar, avunculus tuus, qua oratione, qua constantia, qua gravitate sententiam dixit in sororis suae virum, vitricum tuum! Hunc tu cum auctorem et praeceptorem omnium consiliorum totiusque vitae debuisses habere, vitrici te similem quam avunculi maluisti. Huius ego alienus consilii 5 consul usus sum: tu, sororis filius, ecquid ad eum umquam de re publica rettulisti? At ad quos refert? di immortales! Ad eos scilicet, quorum nobis etiam dies natales audiendi sunt. 15. Hodie non descendit Antonius. Cur? dat natalicium in hortis. Cui? neminem nominabo: putate tum Phormioni alicui, tum Gnathoni, tum etiam Ballioni. O foeditatem hominis flagitiosam! o inpudentiam, nequitiam, libidinem non ferendam! Tu cum principem senatorem, civem singularem tam propinquum habeas, ad eum de re publica nihil referas, referas ad eos, qui suam rem nullam 15 habent, tuam exhauriunt? VII. Tuus videlicet salutaris consulatus, ^{maestrosus} perniciosus meus. Adeone pudorem cum pudicitia perdidisti, ut hoc in eo templo dicere ausus sis, in quo ego senatum illum, qui quondam 20 florens orbi terrarum praesidebat, consulebam, tu homines perditissimos cum gladiis collocavisti? 16. At etiam ausus es—quid autem est quod tu non audeas?—clivum Capitolinum dicere me consule plenum servorum armatorum fuisse. Ut illa, credo, nefaria 25 senatus consulta fierent, vim adferebam senatui. O miser, sive illa tibi nota non sunt—nihil enim boni nosti—sive sunt, qui apud tales viros tam inpudenter loquere! Quis enim eques Romanus, quis praeter te adulescens nobilis, quis ullius ordinis, qui se civem 30 esse meminisset, cum senatus in hoc templo esset, in clivo Capitolino non fuit? quis nomen non dedit! quamquam nec scribae sufficere nec tabulae nomina illorum capere potuerunt. 17. Etenim cum homines nefarii de patriæ parricidio confiterentur, consociorum iudiciis, sua manu, voce paene litterarum coacti, se urbem inflammare, cives trucidare, vastare Italiam, delere rem publicam consensisse, quis esset, qui ad salutem communem defendendam non excitaretur? praesertim cum senatus populusque Romanus haberet duces, qualis si qui nunc esset, tibi idem quod illis accidit contigisset.—Ad sepulturam corpus vitrici sui negat a me datum. Hoc vero ne Publius quidem 10 Clodius dixit umquam: quem quia iure ei inimicus fui, doleo a te omnibus vitiis esse superatum. 18. Qui autem tibi venit in mentem redigere in memoriam nostram, te domi P. Lentuli esse educatum? An verebare ne non putarem natura te potuisse tam improbum evadere, nisi accessisset etiam disciplina? VIII. Tam autem eras excors, ut tota in oratione tua tecum ipse pugnares, non modo non cohaerentia inter se diceres, sed maxime diiuncta atque contraria, ut non tanta mecum quanta tibi tecum esset contentio. Vitricum tuum fuisse in tanto scelere fatebare, poena adfectum querebare. Ita quod proprio meum est, laudasti, quod totum est senatus, reprehendisti: nam comprehensio sontium mea, animaversio senatus fuit. Homo disertus non intellegit 25 eum, quem contra dicit, laudari a se, eos, apud quos dicit, vituperari. 19. Iam illud cuius est, non dico audaciae—cupit enim se audacem—, sed, quod minime vult, stultitiae, qua vincit omnes, clivi Capitolini mentionem facere, cum inter subsellia nostra versentur 30 armati? cum in hac cella Concordiae, di immortales, in qua me consule salutare sententiae dictae sunt, quibus ad hanc diem viximus, cum gladiis homines conlocati stent? ~~Accusa~~ senatum, ~~accusa~~ equestrem ordinem, qui tum cum senatu copulatus fuit, accusa omnes ordines, omnes cives, dum confiteare hunc ordinem hoc ipso tempore ab Itryaeis circumsederi. Haec tu non propter audaciam dicis tam impudenter, sed quia, cum tantam rerum repugnantiam non videas, nihil profecto sapis. Quid est enim dementius quam, cum rei publicae perniciosa arma ipse ceperis, ~~obicere~~ 10 alteri salutaria? 20. At etiam quodam loco facetus esse voluisti. Quam id te, di boni, non decebat! in quo est tuaculpa non nulla; aliquid enim salis a mima uxore trahere potuisti. Cedant arma togae. Quid? tum nonne cesserunt? At postea tuis armis cessit toga. Quaeramus igitur, utrum melius fuerit, libertati populi Romani sceleratorum arma an libertatem nostram armis tuis cedere. Nec vero tibi de versibus plura respondebo: tantum dicam breviter, te neque illos neque ullas omnino litteras nosse, me nec 20 rei publicae nec amicis umquam defuisse, et tamen omni genere monumentorum meorum perfecisse, ut meae vigiliae meaeque litterae et iuventuti utilitatis et nomini Romano laudis aliquid adferrent. Sed haec non huius temporis: maiora videamus. 25 IX. 21. P. Clodium meo consilio interfectum esse dixisti. Quidnam homines putarent, si tum occisus esset, cum tu illum in foro spectante populo Romano gladio insecutus es negotiumque transegisses, nisi se ille in scalas tabernae librariae coniecisset iisque 30 oppilatis impetum tuum compressisset? Quod quidem ego favisse me tibi fateor, suasisse ne tu quidem dicis. At Miloni ne favere quidem potui; prius enim rem transiit quam quisquam eum facturum id suspicatur. At ego suasi. Scilicet is animus erat Milonis, ut prodesse rei publicae sine suasore non posset! At laetatus sum. Quid ergo? in tanta laetitia cunctae civitatis me unum tristem esse oportebat? 22. Quamquam de morte Clodii fuit quaestio—non satis prudenter illa quidem constituta; quid enim attinebat nova lege quaeri de eo, qui hominem occidisset, cum esset legibus quaestio constituta? quaesitum est tamen —: quod igitur, cum res agebatur, nemo in me dixit,¹⁰ id tot annis post tu es inventus qui diceres?

✓ 23. Quod vero dicere ausus es idque multis verbis, opera mea Pompeium a Caesaris amicitia esse diiunctum ob eamque causam culpa mea bellum civile esse natum, in eo non tu quidem tota re, sed, quod maximum est, temporibus errasti. X. Ego M. Bibulo, praestantissimo cive, consule nihil praetermisi, quantum facere enitique potui, quin Pompeium a Caesaris conjunctione avocarem. In quo Caesar felicior fuit; ipse enim Pompeium a mea familiaritate diiunxit. Postea vero quam se totum Pompeius Caesari tradidit, quid ego illum ab eo distrahere conarer? Stulti erat sperare, suadere inpudentis. 24. Duo tamen tempora inciderrunt, quibus aliquid contra Caesarem Pompeio suaserim. Ea velim reprehendas, si potes: unum, ne quinquennii imperium Caesari prorogaret, alterum, ne pateretur ferri ut absentis eius ratio haberetur. Quorum si utrumvis persuasissem, in has miseras numquam incidissemus. Atque idem ego, cum iam opes omnes et suas et populi Romani Pompeius ad Caesarem detulisset seroque ea sentire coepisset, quae ego multo ante provideram, inferrique patriae bellum viderem nefarium, tam dis hominibusque hostis, qui ad illud scelus sectionis auderet accedere, inventus est nemo praeter Antonium, praesertim cum tot essent circum hastam illam, qui alia omnia auderent: unus inventus est qui 5 id auderet, quod omnium fugisset et reformidasset audacia. 65. Tantus igitur te stupor oppressit vel, ut verius dicam, tantus furor, ut primum, cum sector sis isto loco natus, deinde cum Pompei sector, non te exsecratum populo Romano, non detestabilem, non 10 omnes tibi deos, non omnes homines esse inimicos et futuros scias? At quam insolenter statim helluo invasit in eius viri fortunas, cuius virtute terribilior erat populus Romanus exteris gentibus, iustitia carior. XXVII. In eius igitur viri copias cum se subito in-15 gurgitasset, exsultabat gaudio persona de mimo 'modo egens repente dives.' Sed, ut est apud poetam nescio quem, 'male parta male dilabuntur.' 66. Incredibile ac simile portenti est, quonam modo illa tam multa quam paucis non dico mensibus, sed diebus 20 effuderit. Maximus vini numerus fuit, permagnum optimi pondus argenti, pretiosa vestis, multa et lauta suppellex et magnifica multis locis, non illa quidem luxuriosi hominis, sed tamen abundantis: horum paucis diebus nihil erat. 67. Quae Charybdis tam

25 vorax? Charybdim dico? quae si fuit, animal unum fuit: Oceanus, me dius fidius, vix videtur tot res, tam dissipatas, tam distantibus in locis positas tam cito absorbere potuisse. Nihil erat clausum, nihil ob-30 signatum, nihil scriptum. Apothecae totae nequissimis hominibus condonabantur. Alia mimi rapiebant, alia mimae: domus erat aleatoribus referta, plena ebriorum; totos dies potabatur atque id locis plumbis suggererentur etiam saepe—non enim semper iste felix—damna aleatoria. Conchyliatis Cn. Pompei peristromatis servorum in cellis lectos stratos videres. Quam ob rem desinite mirari haec tam celeriter esse consumpta: non modo unius patrimonium quamvis amplum, ut illud fuit, sed urbes et regna celeriter tanta nequitia devorare potuisset. 68. At idem aedes etiam et hortos. O audaciam immanem! tu etiam ingredi illam domum ausus es? tu illud sanctissimum limen intrare? tu illarum aedium dispenatibus os inpurissimum ostendere? Quam domum aliquamdiu nemo adspicere poterat, nemo sine lacrimis praeterire, hac te in domo tam diu deversari non pudet? in qua, quamvis nihil sapias, tamen nihil tibi potest esse iucundum. XXVIII. An tu, illa in vestibulo rostra cum adspexisti, domum tuam te introire putas? fieri non potest. Quamvis enim sine mente, sine sensu sis, ut es, tamen et te et tua et tuos nosti. Nec vero te umquam neque vigilantem neque in somnis credo posse mente consistere. Necesse est, quamvis sis, ut es, violentus et furens, cum tibi obiecta sit species singularis viri, perterritum te de somno excitari, furere etiam saepe vigilantem. 69. Me quidem miseret parietum ipsorum atque tectorum. Quid enim umquam domus illa viderat nisi pudicum, quid nisi ex optimo more et sanctissima disciplina? Fuit enim ille vir, patres conscripti, sicuti scitis, cum foris clarus tum domi admirandus, neque rebus externis magis laudandus quam institutis domesticis: huius in sedibus pro cubiculis stabula, pro conclavibus popinae sunt. Etsi iam negat: nolite quaerere; frugi factus est: illam mimam suas res sibi habere iussit, ex duodecim tabulis claves ademit, exegit. Quam porro spectatus civis, quam probatus! cuius ex omni vita nihil est honestius quam quod cum mimam fecit divortium. 70. At quam crebro usurpat 'et consul et Antonius': hoc est dicere: et consul et impudicissimus, et consul et homo nequissimus. Quid est enim aliud Antonius? Nam si dignitas significaretur in nomine, dixisset, credo, aliquando avus tuus se et consulem et Antonium—numquam dixit—: dixisset etiam conlega meus, patruus tuus, nisi si tu es solus Antonius. XXIX. 71. Sed omitto ea peccata, quae non sunt earum partium propria, quibus tu rem publicam vexavisti: ad ipsas tuas partes redeo, id est ad civile bellum, quod natum, conflatum, susceptum opera tua est. Cui bello cum propter timiditatem tuam, tum propter libidines defuisti. Gustaras civilem sanguinem vel potius exorbueras; fueras in acie Pharsalica antesignanus; L. Domitium, clarissimum et nobilissimum virum, occideras, multosque praeterea qui e proelio effugerant, quos Caesar, ut nonnullos, fortasse servasset, crudelissimo persecutus trucidaras. Quibus rebus tantis talibus gestis, quid fuit causae cur in Africam Caesarem non sequerere, cum praesertim belli pars tanta restaret? Itaque quem locum apud ipsum Caesarem post eius ex Africa reditum obtinuisti? quo numero fuisti? Cuius tu imperatoris quaestor fueras, dictatoris magister equitum, belli princeps, crudelitatis auctor, praedae socius, testamento, ut dicebas ipse, filius, appellatus es de pecunia, quam pro domo, pro hortis, pro sectione debebas. 72. Primo respondisti plane ferociter et, ne omnia videar contra te, prope modum aequa et iusta dicebas. A me C.

Caesar. ~~Heu quid~~ cur potius quam ego ab illo? an sine me ille vicit? At ne potuit quidem. Ego ad illum belli civilis causam attuli; ego leges perniciosas rogavi; ego arma contra consules imperatoresque populi Romani, contra senatum populumque Romanum, 5 contra deos patrios arasque et focos, contra patriam tuli. Num sibi soli vicit? Quorum facinus est commune, cur non sit eorum praeda communis? Ius postulabas, sed quid ad rem? plus ille poterat. 73. Itaque excussis tuis vocibus et ad te et ad praedes tuos milites misit, cum repente a te praeclara illa tabula prolata est. Qui risus hominum! tantam esse tabulam, tam varias, tam multas possessiones, ex quibus praeter partem Miseni nihil erat, quod is qui auctionaretur posset suum dicere. Auctionis vero miserabilis ad 15 spectus: vestis Pompei non multa eaque maculosa, eiusdem quaedam argentea vasa conlisa, sordidata mancipia, ut doleremus quicquam esse ex illis reliquiis, quod videre possemus. 74. Hanc tamen auctionem heredes L. Rubrii decreto Caesaris prohibuerunt. Haerebat nebulo: quo se verteret non habebat. 20 Quin his ipsis temporibus domi Caesaris percussor ab isto missus deprehensus dicebatur esse cum sica: de quo Caesar in senatu aperte in te invehens questus est. Proficiscitur in Hispaniam Caesar, paucis tibi 25 ad solvendum propter inopiam tuam prorogatis diebus. Ne tum quidem sequeris. Tam bonus gladiator rudem tam cito? Hunc igitur quisquam, qui in suis partibus, id est in suis fortunis, tam timidus fuerit, pertimescat?

XXX. 75. Profectus est aliquando tandem in Hispaniam, sed tuto, ut ait, pervenire non potuit.

Quonam modo igitur Dolabella pervenit? Aut non suscipienda fuit ista causa, Antoni, aut, cum suscepisses, defendenda usque ad extremum. Ter depugnavit Caesar cum civibus, in Thessalia, Africa, Hispania. Omnibus 5 adfuit his pugnis Dolabella: in Hispaniensi etiam vulnus accepit. Si de meo iudicio quaeris, nollem; sed tamen consilium a primo reprehendendum, laudanda constantia: tu vero quid es? Cn. Pompei liberi tum primum patriam repetebant—esto; fuerit haec 10 partium causa communis—: repetebant praeterea deos patrios, aras, focos, larem suum familiarem, in quae tu invaseras. Haec cum peterent armis ii, quorum erant legibus—etsi in rebus iniquissimis quid potest esse aequi?—tamen quem erat aequissimum contra Cn. 15 Pompei liberos pugnare? quem? te, sectorem. An cum tu Narbone mensas hospitum convoveres, Dolabella pro te in Hispania dimicaret?

76. Qui vero Narbone reditus? etiam quaerebat cur ego ex ipso cursu tam subito revertissem. Exposui 20 nuper, patres conscripti, causam reditus mei: volui, si possem, etiam ante Kalendas Ianuarias prodesse rei publicae. Nam quod quaerebas, quo modo redissem: primum luce, non tenebris, deinde cum calceis et toga, nullis nec Gallicis nec lacerna. At etiam adspicis me et quidem, ut videris, iratus. Ne tu iam mecum in gratiam 25 redeas, si scias quam me pudeat nequitiae tuae, cuius te ipsum non pudet. Ex omnium omnibus flagitiis nullum turpius vidi, nullum audivi. Qui magister equitum fuisse tibi viderere, in proximum annum consulatum peteres vel potius rogares, per municipia coloniasque Galliae, e qua nos tum, cum consulatus petebatur, non rogabatur, petere consulatum solebamus, cum Gallicis et lucerna cucurbitis. XXXI 77. At videte levitatem hominis. Cum hora diei decima fere ad Saxa rubra venisset, delituit in quadam caupōnula atque ibi se occultans perpotavit ad vesperam; inde cisio celeriter ad urbem advectus domum venit capite obvoluto. Ianitor: 'Quis tu?' 'A Marco tabellarius.' Confestim ad eam, cuius causa venerat, eique epistulam tradidit. Quam cum illa legeret flens—erat enim (scripta amatorie); caput autem litterarum, sibi cum illa mimā posthac nihil futurum; omnem se amorem¹⁰ abiecisse illum atque in hanc transfudisse—: cum mulier fleret uberius, homo misericors ferre non potuit: caput aperuit, in collum invasit. O hominem nequam! quid enim aliud dicam? magis proprie nihil possum dicere. Ergo ut te Catamitum, nec opinato¹⁵ cum te ostendisses, praeter spem mulier adspiceret, idcirco urbem terrore nocturno, Italiam multorum dierum metu perturbasti? 78. Et domi quidem causam amoris habuisti, foris etiam turpiorem, ne L. Plancus praedes tuos venderet. Productus autem in²⁰ contionem a tribuno pl. cum respondisses te rei tuae causa venisse, populum etiam dicacem in te reddidisti. Sed nimis multa de nugis: ad maiora veniamus.

XXXII. C. Caesari ex Hispania redeunti obviam longissime processisti. Celeriter isti redisti, ut cog²⁵ nosceret te, si minus fortem, at tamen strenuum. Factus es ei rursus nescio quo modo familiaris. Habebat hoc omnino Caesar: quem plane perditum aere alieno egentemque, si eundem nequam hominem audacemque, cognorat, hunc in familiaritatem liben³⁰ tissime recipiebat. 79. His igitur rebus praeclare commendatus iussus es renuntiari consul et quidem cum ipso. Nihil queror de Dolabella, qui tum est impulsus, inductus, elusus. Qua in re quantā fuerit uterque vestrum perfidiā in Dolabellam, quis ignorat? Ille promissum et receptum intervertit ad seque transtulit: tu eius perfidiae voluntatem tuam adscripsisti. Veniunt Kalendae Ianuariae: cogimur in senatum; invectus est copiosius multo in istum et paratius Dolabella quam nunc ego. 80. Hic autem iratus quae dixit, diboni! Primum cum Caesar ostendisset se prius quam proficisceretur Dolabellam consulem esse iussurum—quem negant regem, qui et faceret semper eius modi aliquid et diceret—: sed cum Caesar ita dixisset, tum hic bonus augur eo se sacerdotio praeditum esse dixit, ut comitia auspiciis vel inpedire vel vitiare posset, idque se facturum esse adseveravit. In quo primum incredibilem stupiditatem hominis cognoscite. 81.

 Quid enim? istud, quod te sacerdotii iure facere posse dixisti, si augur non esses et consul esses, minus facere potuisses? Vide ne etiam facilius. Nos enim nunti-ationem solum habemus, consules et reliqui magis-tratus etiam spectionem. Esto: hoc inperite; nec enim est ab homine numquam sobrio postulanda prudentia: sed videte inpudentiam. Multis ante mensibus in senatu dixit se Dolabellae comitia aut prohi-biturum auspiciis aut id facturum esse, quod fecit.
 Quisquamne divinare potest, quid vitii in auspiciis futurum sit, nisi qui de caelo servare constituit? quod neque licet comitiis per leges, et, si qui servavit, non comitiis habitis, sed prius quam habeantur, debet nunti-are. Verum implicata inscientia inpudentia est: nec scit quod augurum, nec facit quod prudentem decet.
 82. Itaque ex illo die recordamini eius usque ad Idus Martias. liberal.com quis unquam apparitor tam humilis, tam abiectus? Nihil ipse poterat; omnia rogabat; caput in aversam lepticam inserens beneficia, quae venderet, a collega petebat. XXXIII. Ecce Dolabellae comitiorum dies: sortitio praerogativae; quiescit. Renuntiatur; tacet. Prima classis vocatur, renuntiatur; deinde, ita ut adsolet, suffragia; tum secunda classis vocatur: quae omnia sunt citius facta quam dixi. 83. Confecto negotio bonus augur—C.

 Laelium diceret—alio die inquit. O inpudentiam singularem! Quid videras? quid senseras? quid audieras? neque enim te de caelo servasse dixisti nec hodie dicis. Id igitur obvenit vitium, quod tu iam Kalendis Ianuariis futurum esse provideras et tanto ante praedixeras. Ergo hercule magna, ut spero, tua potius quam rei publicae calamitate ementitus es auspicia, obstrinxisti religione populum Romanum, augur auguri, consul consuli obnuntiasti. Nolo plura, ne acta Dolabellae videar convellere, quae necesse est aliquando ad nostrum collegium deferantur. 84. Sed adrogantiam hominis insolentiamque cognoscite. Quam diu tu voles, vitiosus consul Dolabella: rursus, cum voles, salvis auspiciis creatus. Si nihil est, cum augur iis verbis nuntiat, quibus tu nuntiasti, confitere te, cum alio die dixeris, sobrium non fuisse: sin est aliqua vis in istis verbis, ea quae sit augur a collega requiro.

XXXIV. Sed ne forte ex multis rebus gestis Antonii rem unam pulcherrimam transiliat oratio, ad Lupercalia veniamus. Non dissimulat, patres conscripti: apparet esse commotum; sudat, pallet. Quid-libet, modo ne nauseet, faciat, quod in porticu Minucia fecit. Quae potest esse turpitudinis tantae defensio?

 Cupio audire, ut videam, ubi rhetoris tanta merces, ubi campus Leontinus appareat. ¶ 85. Sedebat in rostris collega tuus, amictus toga purpurea, in sella au-rea, coronatus. Escendis, accedis ad sellam—ita eras Lupercus, ut te consulem esse meminisse deberes—diadema ostendis. Gemitus toto foro. Unde diadema?
 non enim abiectum sustuleras, sed attuleras domo me-ditatum et cogitatum scelus. Tu diadema imponebas cum plangore populi: ille cum plausu reiciebat. Tu ergo unus, scelerate, inventus es qui, cum auctor regni esses eumque, quem collegam habebas, dominum habere velles, idem temptares, quid populus Romanus ferre et pati posset. 86. At etiam misericordiam captabas: supplex te ad pedes abiciebas. Quid petens? ut servives? Tibi uni peteres, qui ita a puero vixeras, ut omnia paterere, ut facile servires: a nobis populoque Romano mandatum id certe non habebas. O praeclaram illam eloquentiam tuam, cum es nudus con-tionatus! Quid hoc turpius? quid foedius? quid sup-pliciis omnibus dignius? Num exspectas, dum te stimulis fodiamus? haec te, si ullam partem habes sensus, lacerat, haec cruentat oratio. Vereor ne imminuam summorum virorum gloriam; dicam tamen dolore commotus. Quid indignius quam vivere eum qui inposuerit diadema, cum omnes fateantur iure in-terfectum esse qui abiecerit? 87. At etiam adscribi iussit in fastis ad Lupercalia: C. Caesari, dictatori perpetuo, M. Antonium consulem populi iussu regnum detulisse, Caesarem uti noluisse. Iam, iam minime miror te otium perturbare; non modo ur-bem odisse, sed etiam lucem; cum perditissimis latronibus non solum de die, sed etiam in diem vivere. Ubi enim tu in pace consistes? qui locus tibi in legibus et in iudiciis esse potest, quae tu, quantum in te fuit, dominatu regio sustulisti? Ideone L. Tarquinius exactus est, Sp. Cassius, Sp. Maelius, M. Manlius necati, ut multis post saeculis a M. Antonio, quod fas non est, rex Romae constitueretur?

XXXV. 88. Sed ad auspicia redeamus, de quibus Idibus Martiis fuit in senatu Caesar acturus. Quaero: tum tu quid egisses? Audiebam equidem te paratum venisse, quod me de eminentis auspiciis, quibus tamen parere necesse erat, putares esse dicturum. Sustulit illum diem Fortuna rei publicae. Num etiam tuum de auspiciis iudicium interitus Caesaris sustulit? Sed incidi in id tempus, quod iis rebus, in quas ingressa erat oratio, praevertendum est. Quae tua fuga! quae formido praeclaro illo die! quae propter conscientiam scelerum desperatio vitae, cum ex illa fuga beneficio eorum, qui te, si sanus esses, salvum esse voluerunt, clam te domum recepisti. 89. O mea frustra semper verissima auguria rerum futurarum! Dicebam illis in Capitolio liberatoribus nostris, cum me ad te ire vellent, ut ad defendendam rem publicam te adhortarer: quoad metueres, omnia te promissurum; simul ac timere desisses, similem te futurum tui. Itaque cum ceteri consulares irent redirent, in sententia mansi: neque te illo die neque postero vidi, neque ullam societatem optimis civibus cum inportunissimo hoste foedere ullo confirmari posse credidi. Post diem tertium veni in aedem Telluris, et quidem invitus, cum omnes aditus armati obsiderent. 90. Qui tibi dies ille, Antoni, fuit! quamquam mihi inimicus subito exstitisti, tamen me tui miseret, quod tibi invideris. XXXVI. Qui tu vir, di immortales, et quantus fuisses, si illius diei mentem servare potuisses! Pacem haberemus, quae erat facta per obsidem puerum nobilem, M. Bambalionis nepotem. Quamquam bonum te timor faciebat, non diuturnus magister officii, improbum fecit ea, quae, dum timor abest, a te non discedit, audacia. Etsi tum, cum optimum te putabant, me quidem dissentiente, funeri tyranni, si illud funus fuit, sceleratissime prae-fuisti. 91. Tua illa pulchra laudatio, tua miseratio, tua cohortatio, tu, tu, inquam, illas faces incendisti, et eas, quibus semustilatus ille est, et eas, quibus incensa L. Bellieni domus deflagavit. Tu illos impetus perditorum hominum et ex maxima parte servorum, quos nos vi manuque reppulimus, in nostras domos immisisti. Idem tamen quasi fuligine abstersa reliquis diebus in Capitolio praeclara senatus consulta fecisti, ne qua post Idus Martias immunitatis tabula neve cuius beneficii figeretur. Meministi ipse de exsulis, scis de immunitate quid dixeris. Optimum vero, quod dictaturae nomen in perpetuum de re publica sustulisti: quo quidem facto tantum te cepisse odium regni videbatur, ut teius omne nomen propter proximum dictatoris metum tolleres. 92. Constituta res publica videbatur aliis, mihi vero nullo modo, qui omnia te gubernante naufragia metuebam. Num igitur me fefellit? aut num diutius sui potuit dissimilis esse? Inspectantibus vobis toto Capitolio tabulae figebantur, neque solum singulis venibant immunitates, sed etiam populis universis: civitas non iam singillatim, sed provinciis totis dabatur. Itaque si haec manent, quae stante re publica manere non possunt, provincias universas, patres conscripti, perdidistis; neque vectigalia solum, sed etiam imperium populi Romani huius domesticis nundinis deminutum est. / XXXVII. 93. Ubi est septiens miliens, quod est in tabulis, quae sunt ad 5 Opis? funestae illius quidem pecuniae, sed tamen quae nos, si iis, quorum erat, non redderetur, a tributis posset vindicare. Tu autem quadringentiens sesterium, quod Idibus Martiis debuisti, quonam modo ante Kalendas Apriles debere desisti? Sunt ea quidem in- 10 numerabilia, quae a tuis emebantur non insciente te, sed unum egregium de rege Deiotaro, populi Romani amicissimo, decretum in Capitolio fixum: quo proposito nemo erat, qui in ipso dolore risum posset continere. 94. Quis enim cuiquam inimicior quam Deiotaro Caesar? 15 aequae atque huic ordini, ut equestri, ut Massiliensibus, ut omnibus, quibus rem publicam populi Romani caram esse sentiebat. Igitur a quo vivo nec praesens nec absens rex Deiotarus quicquam aequi boni inpetravit, apud mortuum factus est graciosus? Compellarat 20 hospitem praesens, computarat, pecuniam inpetrarat, in eius tetrarchia unum ex Graecis comitibus suis collocarat, Armeniam abstulerat a senatu datam. 95. Haec vivus eripuit: reddit mortuus. At quibus verbis? modo aequum sibi videri, modo non iniquum. Mira 25 verborum complexio! At ille numquam—semper enim absenti adfui Deiotaro—quicquam sibi, quod nos pro illo postularem, aequum dixit videri. Syngrapha sestertii centiens per legatos, viros bonos, sed timidos et inperitos, sine nostra, sine reliquorum hospitem 30 regis sententia facta in gynaecio est, quo in loco plurimae res venierunt et veneunt. Qua ex syngrapha quid sis acturus meditere censeo: rex enim ipse sua sponte, nullis commentariis Caesaris, simul atque audivit eius interitum, suo Marte res suas recipera- 96. Sciebat homo sapiens ius semper hoc fuisse, ut, 5 quae tyranni eripuissent, ea tyrannis interfectis ei, quibus erepta essent, reciperarent. Nemo igitur iure consultus, ne iste quidem, qui tibi uni est iure consultus, per quem haec agis, ex ista syngrapha deberi dicit pro iis rebus, quae erant ante syngrapham recipera- 10 tae: non enim a te emit, sed prius, quam tu suum sibi venderes, ipse possedit. Ille vir fuit, nos quidem contemnendi, qui auctorem odimus, acta defendimus.

XXXVIII. 97. Quid ego de commentariis infinitis, quid de innumerabilibus chirographis loquar? quorum etiam institores sunt, qui ea tamquam gladiatorum libellos palam venditent. Itaque tanti acervi nummorum apud istum construuntur, ut iam expendantur, non numerentur pecuniae. At quam caeca avaritia est! Nuper fixa tabula est, qua civitates locupletissimae 20 Cretensium vectigalibus liberantur, statuturque ne post M. Brutum pro consule sit Creta provincia. Tu mentis es compos? tu non constringendus? In Caesaris decreto Creta post M. Bruti decessum potuit liberari, cum Creta nihil ad Brutum Caesare vivo pertineret? 25 At huius venditione decreti, ne nihil actum putetis, provinciam Cretam perdidistis. Omnino nemo ullius rei fuit empor, cui defuerit hic venditor. 98. Et de exsulibus legem, quam fixisti, Caesar tulit? Nullius insector calamitatem: tantum queror, primum eorum 30 reditus inquinatos, quorum causam Caesar dissimilem iudicavit; deinde nescio cur non reliquis idem tribuas: neque enim plus quam tres aut quattuor reliqui sunt.

Qui simili in calamitate sunt, cur tua misericordia non simili fruuntur? cur eos habes in loco patri? de quo ferre, cum de reliquis ferres, noluit: quem etiam ad censuram petendam impulisti, eamque petitionem comparasti, quae et risus hominum et querellas moveret. 5
99. Cur autem ea comitia non habuisti? an quia tribunus pl. sinistrum fulmen nuntiabat? Cum tua quid interest, nulla auspicia sunt, cum tuorum, tum fis religiosus. Quid? eundem in septemviratu nonne destituisti? intervenit enim, cui metuisti, credo, ne 10 salvo capite negare non posses. Omnibus eum contumeliis onerasti, quem patris loco, si ulla in te pietas esset, colere debebas. Filiam eius, sororem tuam, eiecisti, alia condicione quaesita et ante perspecta. Non est satis: probri insimulasti pudicissimam femi- 15 nam. Quid est quod addi possit? contentus eo non fuisti. Frequentissimo senatu Kalendis Ianuariis sedente patruo hanc tibi esse cum Dolabella causam odii dicere ausus es, quod ab eo sorori et uxori tuæ stuprum esse oblatum comperisses. Quis interpretari 20 potest, impudentiorne, qui in senatu, an improbius, qui in Dolabellam, an impurius, qui patruo audiente, an crudelior, qui in illam miseram tam spurce, tam impie dixeris? XXXIX. 100. Sed ad chirographa redeamus. Quae tua fuit cognitio? Acta enim Caesaris 25 pacis causa confirmata sunt a senatu, quae quidem Caesar egisset, non ea, quae egisse Caesarem dixisset Antonius. Unde ista erumpunt? quo auctore proferuntur? si sunt falsa, cur probantur? si vera, cur veneunt? At sic placuerat, ut Kalendis Iuniis de 30 Caesaris actis cum consilio cognosceretis. Quod fuit consilium? quem umquam convocasti? quas Kalendas Iunias expectasti? an eas, ad quas te peragratis veteranorum coloniis stipatum armis rettulisti?

O praeclaram illam percursorum tuam mense Aprili atque Maio, tum cum etiam Capuam coloniam 5 deducere conatus es! Quem ad modum illinc abieris vel potius paene non abieris, scimus. 101. Cui tu urbi minitaris. Utinam conere, ut aliquando illud paene tollatur! At quam nobilis est tua illa peregrinatio! Quid prandiorum adparatus, quid furiosam 10 vinolentiam tuam proferam? Tua ista detrimenta sunt, illa nostra. Agrum Campanum, qui cum de vectigalibus eximebatur ut militibus daretur, tamen infligi magnum rei publicae vulnus putabamus, hunc tu conpransoribus tuis et conlusoribus dividebas. 15 Mimos dico et mimas, patres conscripti, in agro Campano conlocatos. Quid iam querar de agro Leontino? quoniam quidem hae quondam arationes Campana et Leontina in populi Romani patrimonio grandiferae et fructuosae ferebantur. Medico tria milia iugerum: 20 quid, si te sanasset? rhetori duo: quid, si te disertum facere potuisset? Sed ad iter Italiamque redeamus. XL. 102. Deduxisti coloniam Casilinum, quo Caesar ante deduxerat. Consuluisti me per litteras de Capua tu quidem, sed idem de Casilino respondi: possesne, 25 ubi colonia esset, eo coloniam novam iure deducere. Negavi in eam coloniam, quae esset auspiciato deducta, dum esset incolumis, coloniam novam iure deduci: colonos novos adscribi posse rescripti. Tu autem insolentia elatus omni auspiciorum iure turbato Casili- 30 num coloniam deduxisti, quo erat paucis annis ante deducta, ut vexillum tolleres, ut aratrum circumduceres: cuius quidem vomere portam Capuae paene perstrinxisti, ut florentis coloniae territorium minuere-tur. 103. Ab hac perturbatione religionis advolas in M. Varronis, sanctissimi atque integerrimi viri, fundum Casinatem. Quo iure? quo ore? Eodem, inquires, quo in heredum L. Rubrii, quo in heredum L. Turselii praedia, quo in reliquas innumerabiles possessiones. Et si ab hasta, valeat hasta, valeant tabulae, modo Caesaris, non tuae; quibus debuisti, non quibus tu te liberavisti. Varronis quidem Casinatem fundum quis venisse dicit? quis hastam istius venditionis vidit? quis vocem praecoris audivit? Misisse te dicis Alexandream, qui emeret a Caesare. Ipsum enim exspectare magnum fuit! 104. Quis vero audivit umquam—nullius autem salus curae pluribus fuit—de fortunis Varronis rem ullam esse detractam? Quid? 15 si etiam scripsit ad te Caesar ut redderes, quid satis potest dici de tanta inpudentia? Remove gladios parumper illos, quos videmus: iam intelleges aliam causam esse hastae Caesaris, aliam confidentiae et temeritatis tuae: non enim te dominus modo illis 20 sedibus, sed quivis amicus, vicinus, hospes, procurator arcebit. XLI. At quam multos dies in ea villa turpissime es perbacchatus! Ab hora tertia bibebatur, ludebatur, vomebatur. O tecta ipsa misera quam dispari domino! Quamquam quo modo iste dominus? 25 sed tamen quam ab dispari tenebantur! studiorum enim suorum M. Varro voluit illud, non libidinum deversorium. 105. Quae in illa villa antea dicebantur! quae cogitabantur! quae litteris mandabantur! Iura populi Romani, monumenta maiorum, omnis sapientiae 30 ratio omnisque doctrinae. At vero te inquilino—non enim domino—personabant omnia vocibus ebriorum, natabant pavimenta vino, madebant parietes, ingenui pueri cum meritoriis, scorta inter matres familias versabantur. Casino salutatum veniebant, Aquino, Interamna. Admissus est nemo. Iure id 5 quidem; in homine enim turpissimo obsolebant dignitatis insignia. 106. Cum inde Romam proficiscens ad Aquinum accederet, obviam ei processit, ut est frequens municipium, magna sane multitudo. At iste operta lectica latus per oppidum est ut mortuus. Stulte 10 Aquinates, sed tamen in via habitabant. Quid Anagnini? Qui cum essent devii descenderunt, ut istum, tamquam si esset, consulem salutarent. Incredibile dictum est; sed sum vicinus; inter omnes constabat neminem esse resalutatam, praesertim cum duos secum Anagni-15 nos haberet, Mustelam et Laconem, quorum alter gladiatorum est princeps, alter poculorum. 107. Quid ego illas istius minas contumeliasque commemorem, quibus invectus est in Sidicinos, vexavit Puteolanos, quod C. Cassium et Brutos patronos adoptassent?

 20 Magno quidem studio, iudicio, benevolentia, caritate, non, ut te et Basilum, vi et armis, et alios vestri similes, quos clientes nemo habere velit, non modo illorum cliens esse. XLII. Interea dum tu abes, qui dies ille collegae tui fuit, cum illud, quod venerari 25 solebas, bustum in foro evertit! qua re tibi nuntiata, ut constabat inter eos, qui una fuerunt, concidisti.
 Quid evenerit postea nescio—metum credo valuisse et arma—: collegam quidem de caelo detraxisti effecisti-que, non tu quidem etiam nunc, ut similis tui, sed 30 certe ut dissimilis esset sui.

108. Qui vero inde reditus Romam! quae perturbatio totius urbis! Memineramus Cinnam nimis poten-tem, Sullam postea dominantem, modo regnantem Caesarem videramus. Erant fortasse gladii, sed absconditi nec ita multi. Ista vero quae et quanta barbaria est! Agmine quadrato cum gladiis sequuntur: scutorum lecticas portari videmus. Atque his quidem iam, inveteratis, patres conscripti, consuetudine obdurimus. Kalendis Iuniis cum in senatum, ut erat constitutum, venire vellemus, metu perterriti repente diffugimus. 109. At iste, qui senatu non egeret, neque desideravit quemquam, sed potius discessu nostro laetatus est, statimque illa mirabilia facinora effecit. Qui chirographa Caesaris defendisset luci sui causa, is leges Caesaris easque praeclaras, ut rem publicam concutere posset, evertit. Numerum annorum provinciis prorogavit, idemque, cum actorum Caesaris defensor esse deberet, et in publicis et in privatis rebus acta Caesaris rescidit. In publicis nihil est lege gravius, in privatis firmissimum est testamentum. Leges alias sine promulgatione sustulit, alias ut tolleret, promulgavit. Testamentum inritum fecit, quod etiam infimis civibus semper obtentum est. Signa, tabulas, quas populo Caesar una cum hortis legavit, eas hic partim in hortos Pompei deportavit, partim in villam Scipionis.

XLIII. 110. Et tu in Caesaris memoria diligens? tu illum amas mortuum? Quem is honorem maiorem consecutus erat, quam ut haberet pulvinar, simulacrum, fastigium, flaminem? Est ergo flamen, ut Iovi, ut Marti, ut Quirino, sic divo Iulio M. Antonius. Quid igitur cessas? cur non inauguraris? Sume diem, vide qui te inauguret: collegae sumus; nemo negabit. O detestabilem hominem, sive quod Caesaris sacerdos es, sive quod mortui! Quaero deinceps, num hodiernus dies qui sit ignores? Nescis heri quantum in circo diem ludorum Romanorum fuisse? te autem ipsum ad populum tulisse ut quintus praeterea dies Caesari tribueretur? Cur non sumus praetextati? cur honorem Caesaris tua lege datum deserere patimur? an supplicationes addendo diem contaminari passus es, pulvinaria contaminari noluisse? Aut undique religionem tolle aut usque quaque conserva. 111. Quaeris placeatne mihi pulvinar esse, fastigium, flaminem. Mihi vero nihil istorum placet: sed tu, qui acta Caesaris defendis, quid potes dicere cur alia defendas, alia non cures? nisi forte vis fateri te omnia quaestu tuo, non illius dignitate metiri. Quid ad haec tandem?—exspecto enim eloquentiam tuam: disertissimum cognovi avum tuum, at te etiam apertiore in dicendo; ille numquam nudus est contionatus, tuum hominis simplicis pectus vidimus—: respondebisne ad haec aut omnino hiscere audebis? ecquid reperies ex tam longa oratione mea, cui te respondere posse confidas?

XLIV. 112. Sed praeterita omittamus: hunc unum diem, unum, inquam, hodiernum diem, hoc punctum temporis, quo loquor, defende, si potes. Cur armatorum corona senatus saeptus est? cur me tui satellites cum gladiis audiunt? cur valvae Concordiae non patent? cur homines omnium gentium maxime barbaros, Ithraeos, cum sagittis deducis in forum? Praesidii sui causa se facere dicit. Non igitur miliens perire est melius quam in sua civitate sine armatorum praesidio non posse vivere? Sed nullum est istud, mihi crede, praesidium: caritate te et benevolentia civium saeptum oportet esse, non armis. 113. Eripiet et extorquebit tibi ista populus Romanus, utinam

salvis nobis! sed quomodo nobiscum egeris, dum istis consiliis uteris, non potes, mihi crede, esse diuturnus. Etenim ista tua minime avara coniunx, quam ego sine contumelia describo, nimium diu debet populo Romano tertiam pensionem. Habet populus Romanus ad quos gubernacula rei publicae deferat: qui ubicumque terrarum sunt, ibi omne est rei publicae praesidium vel potius ipsa res publica, quae se adhuc tantum modo ulta est, nondum recipere. Habet quidem certe res publica adulescentes nobilissimos paratos defensores: 10 quam volent illi cedant otio consulentes, tamen a re publica revocabuntur. Et nomen pacis dulce est et ipsa res salutaris; sed inter pacem et servitatem plurimum interest. Pax est tranquilla libertas, servitus postremum malorum omnium, non modo bello, sed morte etiam repellendum. 114. Quod si se ipsos illi nostri liberatores e conspectu nostro abstulerunt, at exemplum facti reliquerunt. Illi, quod nemo fecerat, fecerunt. Tarquinius Brutus bello est persecutus, qui tum rex fuit, cum esse Romae licebat; Sp. Cassius, Sp. Maelius, 20 M. Manlius propter suspicionem regni adpetendi sunt necati: hi primum cum gladiis non in regnum adpetentem, sed in regnantem impetum fecerunt. Quod cum ipsum factum per se praeclarum est atque divinum, tum expositum ad imitandum [est], praesertim cum illi 25 eam gloriam consecuti sint, quae vix caelo capi posse videatur. Etsi enim satis in ipsa conscientia pulcherrimi facti fructus erat, tamen mortali immortalitatem non arbitror esse contemnendam.

XLV. 115. Recordare igitur illum, M. Antoni, 30 diem, quo dictaturam sustulisti; pone ante oculos laetitiam senatus populi que Romani, confer cum hac inmani nundinatione tua tuorumque: tum intelleges quantum inter lucrum et laudem intersit. Sed nimirum, ut quidam morbo aliquo et sensus stupore suavitatem cibi non sentiunt, sic libidinosi, avari, facinerosi 5 verae laudis gustatum non habent. Sed si te laus adlicere ad recte faciendum non potest, ne metus quidem a foedissimis factis potest avocare? Iudicia non metuis. Si propter innocentiam, laudo: sin propter vim, non intellegis, qui isto modo iudicia non 10 timeat, ei quid timendum sit? 116. Quod si non metuis viros fortes egregiosque cives, quod a corpore tuo prohibentur armis, tui te, mihi crede, diutius non ferent. Quae est autem vita dies et noctes timere a suis? nisi vero aut maioribus habes beneficiis obligatos, 15 quam ille quosdam habuit ex eis, a quibus est interfectus, aut tu es ulla re cum eo comparandus. Fuit in illo ingenium, ratio, memoria, litterae, cura, cogitatio, diligentia; res bello gesserat quamvis rei publicae calamitosas, at tamen magnas; multos annos regnare 20 meditatus, magno labore, multis periculis quod cogitavit effecerat; muneribus, monumentis, congiariis, epulis multitudinem inperitam delenierat; suos praemiis, adversarios clementiae specie devinxerat: quid multa? attulerat iam liberae civitati partim metu, partim 25 patientia consuetudinem serviendi. XLVI. 117. Cum illo ego te dominandi cupiditate conferre possum, ceteris vero rebus nullo modo comparandus es. Sed ex plurimis malis, quae ab illo rei publicae sunt inusta, hoc tamen boni exstitit, quod didicit iam populus 30 Romanus, quantum cuique crederet, quibus se committeret, a quibus caveret. Haec non cogitas? neque intellegis satis esse viris fortibus didicisse, quam sit re pulchrum, beneficio gratum, fama gloriosum tyrannum occidere? An, cum illum homines non tulerint, te ferent? 118. Certatim posthac, mihi crede, ad hoc opus curretur neque occasionis tarditas expectabitur.

Resipisce, quaeso, aliquando; quibus ortus sis, non quibuscum vivas considera; mecum, uti voles: redi cum re publica in gratiam. Sed de te tu videris, et de me ipse profitebor. Defendi rem publicam, contempnens, non deseram senex: contempnens gladios, non pertimescam tuos. Quod si tuus liber libenter obtulerim, si repraesentaveris, si libertas civitatis potest, ut aliquando populi Romani pariat, quod iam diu parturit. Etenim si abhinc annos prope viginti hoc ipso in templo negavi posse mortem immaturam esse consulari, quanto verius nunc negabo seni! Mihi vero, patres conscripti, iam etiam optanda mors est, perfuncto rebus iis, quas adeptus sum quasque gessi. Duo modo haec opto, unum, ut moriens populum Romanum liberum relinquam—hoc mihi maius ab dis immortalibus dari nihil potest—; alterum, ut ita cuique eveniat, ut de re publica quisque mereatur.

[ARGUMENT. cc. I—III. §§ 1—5.]

EXORDIUM. c. I.

c. I. § 1. For the last twenty years every enemy of the republic has been fain to declare war against me also; with what issue, the senate well knows. Yet their deserved doom has not deterred you, Antonius, from a more reckless venture: Catilina and Clodius would gladly have avoided me; you dare me to the encounter, knowing that there is no readier way to win the love of traitors. (§ 1. cf. § 2. p. 2. line 1). For what other motive can he have had? Not (1) contempt for his antagonist; my private character, my influence, my public services, my abilities, are scarcely such as Antonius can afford to slight. Nor (2) the prospect of a favourable audience; the senate which hailed me 'saviour of the country' offers no vantage ground to my detractors. Nor yet (3) the ambition of trying his strength with me as a speaker; else he would not give me such odds: what more can I desire than to speak for myself (c. II—XVII) and against Antonius? (c. XVIII—XLIV.)*

REPLY TO THE CALUMNIES OF ANTONIUS (c. II—XVII).

First charge. Breach of friendship †. (c. II—IV.) § 3. 'I once appeared in court against your interest.' i.e. for my friend Sicca against your minion the young freedman. Why rake up this story? unless to curry favour with the freedmen, who regard you as by marriage one of themselves. 'You resorted to my house for lessons in statesmanship.' False; Curio (c. 18) would not have given you up; your reputation might have gained, if he had. § 4. 'I owed my election as augur to your withdrawal.' No; when (B. C. 53) I was nominated by the two leading augurs in the name of the college, Curio, whose cutthroats afterwards (B. C. 50) carried your election, was in Asia, and you were bankrupt. c. III. § 5. 'You saved my life at Brundisium,' (B. C. 48). No

* § 2: quid uberius quam mihi et pro me et contra Antonium dicere? § 10: cum mihi et pro me aliquid et in M. Antonium multa dicenda sint. Cf. § 43, and Aristot. Rhet. III. 14, § 7.

† § 3: Cui prius quam de ceteris rebus respondeo, de amicitia, quam a me violatam esse criminatus est, pauca dicam.

thanks to you, but to Cæsar's safe-conduct; or, if you did spare me, you cannot call me ungrateful, without branding Brutus too and Cassius, 'who we all know are honourable men,' as ingrates no less; for they also were spared by Cæsar. §§ 6, 7. However, where have I shewn ingratitude? 'In the 1st Philippic (Sept. 2.)' No, truly; I then blamed your measures, but did not touch your person. To-day you shall learn how much you owed to my forbearance.

iv. § 7. He also read a letter, as from me. § 8. Let the ill-breeding pass;—mark his folly.—Tiro and Mustela may applaud your eloquence (as I shall, if you procure their acquittal for this day's work of intimidating the senate); but how will all your eloquence confute me, if I disown the letter? Not by the handwriting; for it is a clerk's. O for a chance like your master's (the rhetorician Sext. Clodius, § 101), who earns estates by making a blockhead of his scholar! § 9. However the letter was mine; nor will I deny that it addressed you as a man of honour. I shall not retaliate by publishing that, in which you beg me to allow the recall of the other Sext. Clodius; § 10. a superfluous request, if he were already, as you say, included in a general pardon.

Second charge. My consulship. (B. c. 63, c. v—VIII.) § 10. Apology for disrespect to the consul Ant. (no true consul, in life, in policy, or in mode of appointment). § 11. You have declared your principles sufficiently, Ant., in censuring my consulship; a consulship directed by the senate, § 12, c. vi. § 13, approved by the chief consulars of that day, § 14, and among the rest by L. Cæsar; whose counsels you, his sister's son, then rejected for those of your step-father the traitor Lentulus; § 15, as now for those of parasites or pimps, whose birthdays you spend in feasting, careless of the delay of public business. c. vii. 'Your consulship heals the wounds which mine opened.' And this you say in that temple of Concord in which I consulted the senate's every wish, and which you are besetting with assassins! §§ 16, 17. 'I posted armed slaves on the ascent of the Capitol.' (5 Dec. A. u. 691 = 7 Feb. B. c. 62). Not slaves; every knight, every high-born youth but you, enlisted in defence of order. 'I denied the body of Lentulus for burial.' A falsehood too gross even for P. Clodius; § 18, but why remind us in what school you were bred a traitor? VIII. You confess the crime, for which I arrested Lentulus, but complain of his execution, i. e. you blame the senate's work, and praise mine. § 19. 'I posted an armed force on the ascent to the Capitol.' Yes, a force of citizens to guard that senate, which at this very moment is overawed by your barbarian bowmen. § 20. You are pleased to crack a jest upon my verses. 'Let arms yield to the gown.' Is it better that freedom should yield to your arms? Of my writings, however little they may be to your taste, I make bold to say, that they have been serviceable to our youth, and no discredit to the Roman name.

Third charge. The murder of P. Clodius. (c. ix.) § 21. 'I tutored Milo to kill P. Clodius.' (18 Jan. A. u. 702 = 8 Dec. B. c. 53). What if you, Ant., had despatched Clodius, when you chased him through the forum with drawn sword? (B. c. 53). I cheered you on, I confess; you will scarcely say that I tutored you. § 22. If this charge were true, we should have heard it on Milo's trial. (March B. c. 52).

Fourth charge. The civil war. (c. ix, x.) § 23. 'I caused Pompeius' alienation from Cæsar, i. e. the civil war.' An error in dates still more than of fact. 'Distingue tempora.' x. In Cæsar's consulship B. c. 59, I did warn Pompeius against him. But when Pompeius had married his daughter, further remonstrance was hopeless. § 24. Yet twice I did remonstrate; (1) against the prolongation of Cæsar's command, B. c. 55, (2) against his admission as a candidate for the consulship in his absence B. c. 52. But when a rupture was imminent, I never ceased to promote peace.

Fifth charge. Cæsar's murder. (15 Mar. 44. c. xi—xiv.) § 25. 'I planned Cæsar's murder.' Now you are playing into my hands, forcing upon me undeserved honours. For how could my name have been concealed till now? § 26. Did Brutus and Cassius need other suggestions than the example of their ancestors? § 27. Domitius had private wrongs to revenge; others were so bound to Cæsar that I could not have dared to sound them, if the plot had been mine. xii. § 28. 'Brutus raised his dagger, reeking with Cæsar's blood, and wished me joy, singling me out by name.' Yes; because I too as consul had saved the country. § 29. If it is a crime in me to rejoice at our deliverance, it is a crime of which no honest man is clear. § 30. Me you condemn on a mere suspicion of complicity; Brutus, whose hand dealt the blow, 'you wish to name with all respect.' Scatter the fumes of last night's debauch; and, by your consulship I conjure you, tell us plainly; are Brutus and the rest assassins or deliverers? xiii. § 31. If assassins, why 'honourable men'; why grant all their requests? You do not then hold them for assassins, if we may judge by your words and acts. §§ 32, 33. Consequently,—the reasoning is cogent, however the dilemma may bewilder you—you must hold them for liberators. Good; I deny the charge no longer; I will beg the conspirators to confirm it; I glory in being shut up, as in the Trojan horse, amid a company, where the least is a hero, whom to have seen is an epoch in any man's life. xiv. § 34. Yet if my stilus (dagger-pen) had indeed written that play, it would not have been sheathed after Act 1, the tyrant's fall,—but would in Act 5 have felled the tyranny in your person. What will you say, if I ~~revert your accusation?~~ You discussed such a plot with Trebonius at Narbo (B. C. 45). § 35. You are the greatest gainer by Caesar's death, for you inherit his power, § 36, and have cleared off your debts. Nay, do not be startled; no one will believe it of you; no one will give you credit for patriotism.

Lighter charges. (c. xv, xvi.) My gloom and illtimed jests in Pompeius' camp. (B. C. 48). § 37. I then tried to avert ruin by peaceful counsels. § 38. Pompeius would not bate one jot of dignity, I sought safety first, next dignity. But these differences never interrupted our friendship. § 39. On his flight from the field of Pharsalus Pompeius confessed that, if he had been the more sanguine, I had proved the truer prophet. And are you jealous for the memory of Pompeius against me his friend,—you who are living on his spoils? XVI. I may now and then have enlivened life in camp by a jest. § 40. Your censure of my melancholy and my mirth may prove that neither transgressed the mean. 'No friend ever remembered me in his will.' My books tell another tale. Not that I can boast your luck, for whom a perfect stranger, Rubrius, § 41, disinherited not only his brother's son, but also his declared heir, young Fufus. By as odd a whim L. Turselius discarded his brother in your favour. Other cases of spoliation I omit. § 42. Indeed, this is the last sarcasm I should have expected from you, whose own father left you not a sesterce.

Conclusion of defence. c. xvii. This then is the sum of your grand impeachment, the fruit of your many rehearsals in Scipio's villa! For this you became the butt of Sext. Clodius' wit! § 43. For this you repaid him by a grant of public land! Enough of reply*; it is time to examine our examiner.

CHARGES AGAINST ANTONIUS. (c. xviii—xliv.)

His early profligacy. (c. xviii, xix. §§ 44—47.) § 44. While yet a boy you became bankrupt, but still appeared among the knights, not on the seats assigned to bankrupts by the Roscian law. You disgraced the gown of manhood by prostituting your body to all comers; till young Curio outbid his rivals by the offer of a permanent settlement. §§ 45, 46. I persuaded the elder Curio to discharge a bond which the son had signed on your behalf, on condition that you never entered the house again. xix. § 47. But modesty bids me veil your private life†. I will briefly touch on your public career before the civil war.

His life from B. C. 58—B. C. 49. (c. xix, xx. §§ 48—50.)

* § 43: Iam enim, quoniam criminibus eius satis respondi, de ipso emendatore et correctore nostro quaedam dicenda sunt.

† § 47: iam supra et flagitia omitamus;... reliquum vitae cursum videte, quem quidem celeriter perstringam. Ad haec enim, quae in civili bello, ... et ad ea, quae cotidie facit, festinat animus.

You supported Clodius in his tribuneship (B. C. 58). You were with Gabinius (B. C. 55), when he illegally reinstated king Ptolemy Auletes. In B. C. 54, having no other home than a share of a villa at Misenum, you joined Caesar in Gaul. xx. § 49. You came to Rome B. C. 53, as a candidate for the quaestorship, and I, at Caesar's request, supported you. Then it was (§ 21) that you attempted the life of P. Clodius. § 50. On being elected, instead of waiting for the legal distribution of provinces, you at once returned to Caesar, in the hope of sharing his plunder.

His tribuneship.* (B. C. 49. c. xxi—xxiv. §§ 50—58.) I pass to the treasons of Ant. § 51. On New-year's day, A. U. 705 (= 13 Nov. B. C. 50) the senate proscribed you as an enemy, for obstructing its decree; § 52. a proscription brought upon you by your own obstinacy. § 53. You saved your life by flying (7 Jan. A. U. 705) to the camp of Caesar, xxii, and so furnished him with the desired pretext for drawing the sword. §§ 54, 55. Posterity will hold you guilty of all the ensuing carnage and ruin. You are the Helen of our Troy. xxiii. § 56. You restored illegally many exiles (amongst the rest the notorious gambler Licinius Denticulus), and yet (scelus in scelere) had no mercy on your banished uncle C. Antonius. § 57. Then came your progress through Italy during Caesar's absence in Spain. xxiv. § 58. Your mistress Cytheris, borne in an open litter among your victors, received the homage of the country towns, while your neglected mother brought up the rear.

Antonius after the battle of Pharsalus. (9 Aug. A. U. 706 = 6 Jun. 48. c. xxiv, xxv. § 59—63.) §§ 59, 60. On your return to Brundisium you did not put me to death. A great kindness truly! Yet your affronts made it difficult to shew due gratitude. xxv. § 61. Cytheris came all the length of the Appian way to welcome you home. § 62. Again you made a progress through Italy, to the grievous loss of the people. Then (B. C. 48) while Caesar was in Egypt you were named master of the horse. As such (ἑταίρος) you were entitled to live with (the actor) Hippias, and to leave to Sergius (another actor) those appointments of the racecourse, which belong of right to senators. All this time you lived, like a robber, on your daily booty. § 63. After a surfeit at the marriage-feast of Hippias you were fain to vomit in full assembly.

Purchase of Pompeius' confiscated house in the Curia. (c. xxvi—xxviii.) § 64. On Caesar's return from Alexandria (in the summer of B. C. 47) you did not fear to purchase the estate of Pompeius. xxvii. § 65. Then, like a character in a farce, 'yesterday a beggar to-day a Cæsar; § 66, in a few weeks you wasted all that ill-gotten wealth. § 67. There might be seen one incessant debauch, without stint or check. § 68. How can you cross that threshold, XXVIII, or see those trophies at the gate, and not be maddened with remorse? § 69. For me, I pity the very walls and roofs. But you have turned a new leaf. You have solemnly put away the actress; so far well; but what must we think of him, whose life can boast no more virtuous act than such a divorce? § 70. What then can you mean by that favourite phrase, 'both a consul and Antonius,' if not 'both a consul and a debauchee'? But I return to your peculiar work, the civil war*.

* § 50: Accipite nunc,.... quae in nos fortunae nostras impleat nefarie fecerit.

Civil war in Africa and Spain. (B.C. 47—45. c. XXIX, XXX.) § 71. You hung back, while Cæsar fought in Africa, and were required on his return to pay for the house of Pompeius. § 72. In spite of your outcry, § 73, Cæsar was enforcing payment, when you advertised for sale the plate, furniture, and slaves; all grievously damaged while in your hands. § 74. On Rubrius' heirs (§ 40) forbidding the sale, you tried to rid yourself of Cæsar by an assassin's knife. On Cæsar's departure for Spain, you again lingered behind; so sturdy a gladiator might surely have been less impatient for discharge. XXX. § 75. You set out at last, but turned back, 'finding the roads dangerous.' Dolabella, however, could make his way to the field of Munda (17 Mar. B.C. 45), though he had not the private quarrel which you have with the heirs of Pompeius.

Antonius' return from Narbo. (B.C. 45. c. XXX, XXXI.) § 76. You asked how I returned the other day (31 Aug. 44). Not in the dark, as you did last year from Narbo; not in easy undress, but in the full Roman costume. XXXI. § 77. Merely for the pleasure of giving Fulvia a surprise, you startled the whole of Italy. § 78. This was one of the 'private affairs' which brought you to Rome; another was to save your securities from distraint.

ANTONIUS CONSUL. (B.C. 44. c. XXXII—end.)

Thwarted Dolabella's election. (c. XXXII, XXXIII.) On Cæsar's return (Sept. or Oct. 45) you became reconciled to him. § 79. He made you consul for the next year with himself, breaking his word to Dolabella, who thereupon bitterly denounced you (1 Jan. 44). § 80. On Cæsar's promising to retire, you threaten as augur to vitiate Dolabella's election, § 81, neither knowing that as augur you have less power of obstruction than as consul, nor scrupling to predict an informality long before the day of election. § 82. Not to dwell on your slavish deference to Cæsar, XXXIII, I come to the day of Dolabella's election. After the votes had been declared, § 83, you pronounced the proceedings null and void, as you had threatened. § 84. And yet now you allow their validity.

Antonius offers Cæsar a diadem on the Lupercalia. (15 Feb. 44. c. XXXIV.) You change colour at the sound 'Lupercalia. Indeed if your eloquence can remove that slur, your liberality to Sext. Clodius is justified. § 85. When Cæsar pushed back the proffered diadem, § 86, you fell at his feet, entreating him to enslave us. A consul, you harangued the Roman people in the apron of a Lupercus. Your conscience, if not utterly seared, must bleed as I recall that scene; my words must prick you to the quick. § 87. You register in the calendar your offer and Cæsar's refusal. No wonder you hate law and order, which cannot consist with tyranny.

Antonius in Rome on and after the Ides of March. (15 Mar. 44. c. XXXV—XXXIX.) § 88. On the Ides of March Cæsar was to have opened the debate on the election. His death removed all your scruples about its legality.—His death;—after which you were spared, § 89, in spite of my warnings. On the third day (17 Mar.) I attended the meeting of the senate in the temple of Tellus, XXXVI. § 90, and lament your apostasy from the principles you then professed. Yet even then your fair words were belied by your funeral oration on the tyrant, § 91, and by your instigation of rioters; although to please the senate you abolished the dictatorship, and prohibited arbitrary immunities and acts of grace. § 92. Then suddenly your proclamations appear, bestowing immunities and the franchise on whole states. XXXVII. § 93. You embezzle the treasures in the temple of Ops, and in Cæsar's name sell privileges to all comers; even king Deiotarus, § 94, who in Cæsar's lifetime could never obtain common justice, is restored by the dead Cæsar, § 95, 96, for the king's envoys had bribed Fulvia; while their bolder master no sooner heard of the tyrant's death, than he recovered his throne by force of arms. XXXVIII. § 97. Your forged 'notes of Cæsar' were hawked about the streets like playbills. In Cæsar's name you decreed that from and after Brutus' departure Crete should cease to be a province; forgetting that while Cæsar lived Brutus had no connexion with Crete. § 98. You recalled the exiled convicts, and yet excepted three or four from pardon, as you had before (§ 56) excepted your uncle. You set up your uncle as a candidate for the censorship, § 99, and then withdrew him. You struck his name out of the commission for dividing lands. You divorced his daughter, after blasting her character by a charge of adultery with Dolabella (1 Jan. 44. cf. § 79). XXXIX. § 100. You neglected to convene the committee appointed to ascertain Cæsar's genuine acts (1 June 44).

Progress of Ant. through Campania. (End of Apr. to middle of May 44. c. XXXIX—XLII.) In the attempt to found a new colony in Capua, you nearly lost your life. § 101. You assigned to your dissolute retainers Campanian and Leontine lands, so crippling the public revenues. XL § 102. With much state you planted a colony at Casilinum, though warned that it would confuse auspices to settle two colonies in one place. § 103. You then took up your quarters in Varro's house at Casinum, which not even by right of confiscation could you claim as your own, § 104, as Cæsar had commanded you to restore it. XLII § 105. That abode of learning you stained with riotous orgies, dismissing unseen the neighbours who came to greet their consul. § 106. With as lordly a disdain you repelled the homage of Aquinum and Anagnia. § 107. You roundly rated the Sidicini and men of Puteoli for choosing the liberators as their patrons. XLIII. In your absence, Dolabella had rased the altar and pillar erected in honour of Cæsar. But you found means to curb the dangerous activity of your colleague.

Return of Ant. to Rome. (c. XLIII.) § 108. You enter Rome at the head of your troops in order of battle. On 1 June 44 the senators durst not come together. § 109. Their absence did not prevent you from repealing the law limiting the tenure of proconsulships. You also rifled the 'people's park' beyond the Tiber of the statues and pictures bequeathed with it by Cæsar.

'Consecration' of Cæsar. (c. XLIII.) § 110. Divine honours have been voted to Cæsar, and you are his flamen. Why are you not consecrated? Yesterday (18 Sept.) was the 4th day of the ludi Romani in circo, to-day by your law (of 1 Sept.) is a 5th day of festival, in honour of Cæsar. Why is the feast not observed? § 111. I wait for your eloquent rejoinder. For even your grandfather, consummate orator as he was, was not so transparently clear as you; he never spoke so lightly clad as you at the Lupercalia.

PERORATION. (c. XLIV—end.)

Force put upon the senate by Antonius; threats of retaliation. (c. XLIV.) § 112. Why is the senate hemmed in with troops as I speak? To guard the consul? Better a thousand deaths than life so secured. § 113. The people will wrest those arms from your hands. Fulvia, your wife, has paid two instalments of her debt—(her former husbands, Clodius and Curio)—the third has long been due. The state can find worthier rulers when you are no more. § 114. Our deliverers may be absent, but their glory remains.

Call to repentance and amendment. (c. XLV, XLVI.) § 115. Remember the glory you won by abolishing the dictatorship. Or if glory cannot, let fear move you. § 116. You cannot trust your own followers; Cæsar was slain by those who owed him most. Not that you can bear comparison with him, XLVI § 117, except in ambition. His tyranny at least taught us whom to trust, whom to fear. Now too we know the glory and profit of tyrannicide. § 118. Return then to the paths of honour. Reconcile yourself to your country. In the worst event, I who set at nought the arms of Catiline, will not quail before yours. § 119. Death will always find me prepared; I pray only that I may leave this people free, and that all may be recompensed, as they shall deserve of the commonwealth.]

[l. 13. alienis. So Halm and Madvig from cod. Vat.; other MSS. read oneraret alienis, which reading Orelli (Cic. oratt. xv. Turici 1836) thus defended, 'immeritae laudes et alienae reapse oneri sunt, non ornamento,' referring to Zumpt (ad Verr. p. 661) for exx. of annominatio or verbal allusion in Cic. Zumpt quotes Cic. N.D. I. § 17 (adiutorem—auditorem), or. Phil. III. § 22 (ex oratore arator), etc., and refers to Quintil. IX. 3. § 65 seq., ad Herenn. IV. § 29 seq., Rutil. Lup. I. § 3 (where Ruhnk. illustrates the example 'non honori, sed oneri'). The most familiar instance is the proverbial nec prece, nec pretio (Ov. fast. II. 805, 806, cod. Justin. I. 3. 31, [al. 30] med., Phaedr. v. 7. 18, Ter. Eun. v. 8. 27=11. 7, Bothe Poet. Scen. Lat. v. 248). The later writers, e.g. St Augustine, revel in the use of this puerile figure. Milton has not disdained it, 'beseeching or besieging.' Auson. has the following exx. prof. 15. 2, and epist. 15. 5, (felle—melle); epist. 22. 30, cf. epigr. 33. 1 (solo—salo—Caelo); epigr. 91. 3 (mores—amores), cf. Plaut. Pseud. See p. 160.]

[l. 15. qui—fuisset. § 7. l. 8 n. in eo numero, far more common in Cic. than in eorum n. So p. Marcell. § 21: ex hoc numero, qui una tecum fuerunt. Madvig, § 317, Zumpt, § 366, and esp. Stürenb. ad Cic. p. Arch. p. 185 seq. So ex eo genere, qui, &c. On the other hand we have exx. corresponding to the Engl. 'of the number of those, who' etc. e.g. de orat. l. 17. Citius, 'sooner', passing into the sense of potius, for which reason quam ut follows, as after potius. [Just as our 'rather' originally meant 'earlier,' and as 'sooner' often = rather; and in vulgar English 'I would die first.' Cf. the Germ. 'eher.']

l. 17. aliquos. e.g. P. Corn. Lentulus Spinther, ad Fam. XII. 14 § 6. [and C. Octavius, Plut. Caes. 67. ABB. App. b. civ. II. 119, Dio XLIV. 21.]

l. 23. auctoribus. 'authors, devisers,' sc. caedis. Madvig [Opusc. I. 164] reads actoribus. Brutos. Marcus and Decimus.

l. 24. L. Brutus, the founder of the republic. His patrician family became extinct on the death of his two sons (Dionys. v. 18. Dio XLIV. 12); the later Junii were of plebeian descent. But it was for the interest of Caesar's murderers to represent the Bruti as descendants of the first champion of liberty. Plut. (Brut. 1), who appeals to Posidonius, has allowed himself to be misled. [Phil. I. § 13: ille Brutus, qui et ipse dominatu regio rem publicam liberavit et ad similem virtutem et simile factum stirpem iam prope in quingentesimum annum propagavit. HEUS. On the statues of the old L. Brutus, and on the tribunal of the praetor Marcus, unknown hands wrote at night, 'Would that thou wert living!' 'Thy posterity is degenerate.' 'Brutus, art thou dead?' and again, 'Thou art not sprung from him!' 'Brutus, dost thou take bribes?' (App. II. 112, cf. Plut. Brut. 9).]

l. 25. Ahalae. Servilia, Marcus' mother, traced her pedigree to C. Servilius Ahala, who slew Sp. Maelius B.C. 439. [Plut. Brut. I. Cf. infr. § 27. l. 13. §§ 87, 114. From Polyb. VI. 53. § 5 seq. we learn that imagines were painted masks of wax, worn at funerals by men chosen for their resemblance to those ancestors of the deceased whom they personated. Sometimes casts were taken from the face of a corpse (Quintil. VI. I. § 40). They correspond to our 'family portraits.' Here we see that imagines of maternal ancestors were included; in Vatin. § 28 Vatinus, brother-in-law of M. Antonius, has those of the Antonii. In Tac. Ann. III. 76, those of twenty families are carried in one funeral.]

[l. 27. foris-domo. i.e. from abroad—from home. Cf. ab alienis, a suis, l. 26. foris though often opposed to domi, Romae, etc. and joined with verbs of rest; yet often, as here, is joined with verbs of motion; e.g. Lucr. v. 544: quaecumque foris veniunt. Cf. Hand Tursell. II. 708, 709. Mencken cites for foris petere. de fin. III. § 24, Tusc. disp. III. § 6.]

[l. 28. non modo—sed ne—qu. Zumpt, § 724 b. Madvig, § 461 b. Where the two clauses have the same predicate (verb), and that is placed in the second clause, the negative in ne quidem is generally understood in the first clause, i.e. non modo is used for non modo non. Cf. Tusc. disp. I. § 87: mortuorum autem non modo vitae commodis, sed ne vita quidem ipsa quisquam caret, which might have been expressed thus. M. a. nemo non modo v. c. caret, s. n. v. q. i. The order of the sentences may be inverted, e.g. de divin. l. 31. in Cilicia, Intr. n. 55. [The Cydnus, now 'Tersus-tschai,' or 'Kara-Su,' flowed through the midst of Tarsus; a bath in its cold waters, remedial for the gout, nearly cost Alexander his life. At its mouth it spread into lagoons (called Rhegma), which served as the harbour of Tarsus.]

l. 32. [ille Caesar.] ad eam ripam, quam. [Where the same preposition governs the antecedent and relative, the prep. is often omitted before the latter, if the verb in both clauses is the same.] So § 37: me tanta in maestitia fuisse quanta ceteri. ad Att. That he was one of the conspirators is asserted also by Dio XLVIII. 7, and 29. Suet. however (Ner. 3) says: is inter conscios Caesarianae necis quamquam insons damnatus lege Pedia (on the lex Pedia cf. Vell. II. 69. § 5); so too L. Coceius Nerva in App. b. civ. v. 62. I. 32. quaestores additi. Not that Cæsar, when distributing the provinces (Intr. § 25) named also the quaestors and legati beforehand; it appears rather that Ant. in his lex proposed an extraordinary no. of quaestors and legati for Brutus and Cassius.

Madvig, § 228 a, and n. Zumpt, § 391. Madvig (*Bemerkungen über verschiedene Punkte des Systems der lat. Both constructions were afterwards combined. Cic. uses celor with de (p. Sull. § 39, p. Cluent. § 189, ad fam. v. 2. § 9, ad Att. x. 14. § 3) or with the acc. of a neut. pron. (cf. § 21. Such a sale was called sectio, the purchaser sector; Gaius inst. IV. § 146: sectores vocantur qui publica bona mercantur. The grammarians wrongly derive the word from sequi, instead of secare (Cic. p. Rosc. Amer. § 80: sectores bonorum et collarum). The supposition that sectores were so called, because they generally resold the purchased estate in small parcels, is confuted by Cic. ib. § 103: is qui et sector est... hoc est, qui et illorum ipsorum bonorum, de quibus agitur, emptor atque possessor est. As the purchaser must take with the estate all its liabilities, Mommsen refers the word to the deduction made in the price on this account. l. 13. dicta 'witticisms.' In Gr. also where we find λόγος (λόγος) λέγειν, λόγος has a different (more restricted) sense; e.g. Herod. I. 141, ἔλεξε λόγον 'he recited a fable'; Eurip. Med. 322: μὴ λόγους λέγει 'do not speak empty words.' [Lobeck Paralipom. 504 seq., Herm. ad Soph. Phil. 281, Krüger's Gram. § 304, Madvig, § 223. n. 4, Zumpt, § 384, Reisig, § 383. The general rule is that the cognate accusative must either be defined by an adj., pron., or attributive clause, or else must itself connote something more than the verb; otherwise the addition would be merely superfluous. Just so in English we should scarcely say 'he fought a fight,' but we do say 'he fought a good fight,' 'he fought a fight at Leuctra,' 'he fought a fight, and won the day.' Thus in servituten servire (Plaut. Aul. IV. I. 6, Cic. Top. § 29, p. Mur. § 61), servitus implies more than servire; not all who serve are staves. Cf. infr. § 109. p. 44. l. 11. n. (Most of the heathen emperors, even an Antoninus and a Trajan, and most poets, except Ovid, of the Augustan age, were notoriously addicted to it etc.) Even this very invective attests the predominance of the moral pestilence. Cicero, himself doubtless a man of blameless life, confesses that, knowing Antonius to be a sink of all uncleanness, he yet helped him to the quaestorship, and would gladly have remained his friend. There is here little of the 'indignatio' of the satirist, nothing of the mingled shame and sorrow with which the Apostle represents this sin against our nature.]

That Dent. was not in exile is clear from the words quasi vero ludere cum condemnato non liceret. For him therefore the restitutio in integrum would consist in the revocation of the legal penalty. Dio in the speech which he puts into Cicero's mouth (XLV. 18—47, chiefly taken from Phil. II.), has mistaken this passage, when (c. 47) he calls Denticulus an exile.

Praeterea Antonius redemptas habebat ab aerario vectigales quadrigas, quam redemptionem senatori habere licet per legem.* The equi vectigales, as Cic., or quadrigae vectigales, as Asc. calls them, are the curules equi of Festus ep. p. 49 (curules equi vectigales) and of Liv. XXIV. 18 (cum censores ob inopiam aerari se iam locationibus abstinerent aedium sacrarum tuendarum curuliumque equorum praebendorum—convenerunt ad eos frequentes, qui hastae huius generis adsueverant etc.) That the race-horses which ran in the public games are meant, appears also from Dio LV. 10, who tells us that Augustus extended to the new games in honour of Mars the old privilege of the ludi Romani and Apolinares, 'that even senators might contract for the supply of horses for the races.' Ant. as magister equitum, in his government of the city (Intr. § 16) gave this contract to the player Sergius, whereas hitherto, being probably rather sought for popularity than profit, such contracts had been undertaken by senators or eminent knights. [The friend who furnished Halm with this note gives vectigales an altogether unattested signification, 'Fahrpferd' (i) (equus curulis = 'Wagenpferd'), and finds here an allusion to a doughty champion of the Hannibalian wars, 'the Roman Götz with the iron hand,' M. Sergius Silus (Plin. h. n. VII. § 104), who on coins (Eckhel v. 306) appears on horseback. 'So knightly was the conduct of our master of the knights, that he chose for the horse-rices a Sergius—only it was a player of that name.' Sergio, ut ex iis quem vellet quaestum faceret, tradebat.' ORELLI, who thinks that Juv. VI. 82, 104, 105, has borrowed the names Sergiolus and Hippia (whom he makes a woman) from this passage.]

l. 14. impedire, ne fierent (l. 18 n.). vitiare, facta; disturb them by obnuntiation, i. e. by declaring that there was a vitium, which made them null and void.

l. 18. minus etc. Cic. justly reproaches Ant. as ignorant of augural law, in trusting to his augurship rather than to his consulship as a means of vitiating the election. The auspices, the signs of the divine will, were supposed in political matters to be given to the magistrates chosen auspicato, not immediately to the augurs, who, unless invested with some office of state, were homines privati, not entitled to interrogate the auspices independently on any res publica. They could only observe and interpret at such times as they were called in by a magistrate. The formula by which they were consulted was (Cic. de divin. II. § 71): te mihi in auspicio esse volo. After the augur had taken his observations, he reported to the magistrate the result, either by the formula silentium esse videtur, i. e. there is no vitium of any kind (Cic. de div. I. c. id silentium dicimus in auspiciis, quod omni vitio caret), or by the formula alio die, i. e. the comitia are for the day null and void, on account of some observed vitium. This report to the magistrate was called nuntiatio (if unfavourable, generally obnuntiatio). On the other hand the augurs had not the right of spectio, i. e. of watching the heaven for themselves (de caelo servare), and entreating for signs of the divine will. In the spectio the magistrate's bare announcement se servaturum (or ~~versus de bello, ut non sit~~ make comitia impossible for the day (comitia impedire). This important right probably rested on the belief in presentiments granted to magistrates solemnly consecrated, whereby they could presage, that on certain days the divine will would be manifested by signs in heaven; hence the mere declaration of the intention to seek such signs was sufficient to postpone the comitia.

l. 19. Nos, the college of augurs.

l. 21. etiam is added, because one magistrate could also obnuntiare to another, i. e. suspend his proceedings by asserting that he had noticed an inauspicious sign.

l. 23. mensibus, rather diebus. [The comitia for Dolabella's election were held on some day between 1 Jan. and 15 Feb. 44.]

l. 25. id facturum = ea vitiatum. § 80 n. [§ 83. l. 10.]

l. 26. quid vitii etc. i. e. one cannot, without making mockery of religious institutions, anticipate the appearance of unfavourable signs, (cannot, that is, determine beforehand on an obnuntiatio); but it is possible to resolve that on a given day one will announce se servare de caelo.

[l. 28. comitiis, abl. of time; so ludis, and even gladiatoribus.] per leges. Cic. probably means the lex Clodia of B. C. 58 which abrogated the lex Aelia and Fufia. Cic. p. Sest. § 33: lata lex (i. e. Clodia) est, ne auspicia valerent, ne quis obnuntiaret, ne quis legi intercederet; ut omnibus festis diebus legem ferri liceret; ut lex Aelia, lex Fufia ne valerent. (The lex Aelia regulated the right of spectio and obnuntiatio; the lex Fufia appointed that legislative comitia should not be held on every dies fastus without exception.) For though after B. C. 58 several obnuntiationes occur (p. Sest. §§ 78, 79, 83, 129. cf. Phil. I. § 25, II. § 83), it does not follow that the lex Clodia was formally repealed, but only that the old practice was resumed, in spite of its prohibition. Thus Cic. says; it is illegal de caelo servare at the comitia, but if it is done, it should be done before they begin, and not when business is actually in progress.

[l. 30. inplicata. in Vatin. § 3: inconstantiam tuam cum levitate tum etiam periurio implicatam. inpudentia abl. 'He is a mixture of ignorance and impudence' (his ignorance goes hand in hand with his impudence). In Cic. de imp. Cn. Pomp. § 19. Halm has on good authority expelled the form inpletus. l. 3. in aversam lecticam, into the further side of the lectica, where the cushion (pulvinar) was placed. [The constr. is like that of summus mons 'the top of the mountain,' etc. Madvig, § 311. Mart. VIII. 62. 2: charta aversa, 'the back of the paper.']

c. XXXIII. l. 4 seq. Ecce etc. The voting in the comitia centuriata at this time took place according to the reformed constitution of the centuries. The chief change introduced by the reform was the combination of the local division of the people in 35 districts (tribus) with the Servian division. Neither the time of this reform (Mommsen röm. Gesch. I. 796. ed. 2. dates it B. C. 241) nor the number of the new centuries is exactly known; it is most likely, however, that the 35 tribes were divided into 350 centuries. By the Servian constitution the people was divided into 5 classes according to property, and each class was subdivided into iuiores and seniores. This division was applied to the tribes in such a way, that each tribe was divided according to property into 5 classes, each class according to age into two halves. Thus each of the 35 tribes contained 10 centuries, and 70 centuries (35 iuiorum and 35 seniorum) formed one class. Whether beside the 70 centuries from the tribes each class contained a distinct century of artisans (fabri, liticines, cornicines), as Mommsen assumes (die röm. Tribus in administrativer Beziehung, esp. p. 92), cannot be proved, but is probable, because that would give an odd no. (71) of centuries in each class for voting. To the 350 centuries forming the tribes were further added the 18 (or probably at this time only 12, cf. Liv. XLIII. 16) centuries of knights, which were retained as distinct centuries from the Servian constitution. (Thus Cic. plainly distinguishes the tribes from the centuries of knights, or. Phil. VII. § 16: Est enim (L. Antonius) patronus quinque et triginta tribuum, quarum sua lege, qua cum Caesare magistratum (magistratum comitia?) partitus est, suffragium sustulit; patronus centuriarum equitum Romanorum, quas item sine suffragio esse voluit.) Another innovation was, that the centuries of knights lost the privilege of voting first, and the centuria praerogativa (century that voted first) was determined by lot. That this was taken from the 70 centuries of the first class, is probable, but it remains uncertain, whether from all 70, or only from the 31 tribus rusticae iuniorum. When the centuria equitum gave their votes, whether immediately after the praerogativa, or together with the centuries of the first class, or after them, cannot be determined from other authorities; nor does our passage lead to any certain result, as it is doubtful whether the centuries of knights are mentioned here or no. As far as the words deinde, ita ut adsolent, suffragia, all is plain. 'The day for D's election comes: the praerogativa is determined by lot; Ant. holds his peace. Its vote is proclaimed; still he is silent. The first class is called forward, and its vote announced etc.' But the word suffragia is very variously interpreted. Some, and this is at first sight the most natural view, understand by it the votes of the first class; but then renuntiatur cannot possibly stand where it does; it must either be transposed, or struck out (so Garat. and Madvig [opusc. I. 169, II. 330]). But even granting that renuntiatur is an interpolation, it is strange that Cic. should introduce by ita ut adsolet so natural a proceeding as the tendering of the votes. Hence it seems better with other scholars to understand deinde...suffragia of the votes of the knights. Thus the words ita ut adsolet are no longer superfluous; we can see too why the orator, after saying 'prima classis vocatur, renuntiatur,' does not go on to speak at once of the secunda classis. As however suffragia cannot by itself denote the votes of the knights, we must in this case suppose a hiatus in the MSS. Mommsen conjectures: deinde equitum, ut adsolet, suffragia (or equitum might easily drop out after suffragia, as tum follows). Or else XVIII. (or XII.) may have fallen out before suffragia, 'then, as usual, the 18 votes,' i. e. of the knights. [On this difficult passage see the references in the Zürich edition. Madvig, opusc. II. 330: 'Iis enim prorsus assentior, qui, cum illo tempore singulae tribus binas centurias habent, in ipsis centuriis classium discrimen fuisse statuunt; itaque Cic. narrat primum praerogativae centuriae sortitionem factam eventumque sortitionis renuntiatum esse; deinde praerogativae centuriae primam classem intro vocatam suffragia consueto more tulisse, tum secundam classem; hic demum Antonium obnuntiasse. Prima classe vocata nee dum suffragiis latis nulla renuntiatio intelligi potest; vox renuntiatur ex superiore versu errore in hunc locum irrepsit. He fought at the battle of Pharsalus, and accompanied Pompeius in the earlier part of his flight. In November B. C. 45 Cicero defended his friend from a charge of plotting Caesar's murder. [l. 4. Capuam. Capua, as a colony of Caesar's veterans (below l. 11 n.), was attached to his heir Octavianus, who afterwards called out the settlers (hence evocati or vocati, Dio XLV. 12) to his aid against Antonius. with grants of land, it was again the ager Campanus ['domain of Capua, for Campanus (not Capuanus) is the adj. for 'Capuan'] which was brought into requisition. l. 16. Leontino. This was domain land or property of the Roman people, and was not even let to the townspeople; Cic. Verr. III. § 109 asserts that with the exception of a single family no Leontine occupied so much as a clod (glæba) of earth there; the ager was farmed partly by Roman citizens, partly by other Sicilians (esp. Centuripini. Verr. III. § 114). [The town had properly no name, but took the name of the people; hence Verr. II. § 160: Leontinis, misera in civitate.]

I. § 90: Verum hoc quidem, ut voletis.]

1. 7. videris. Madvig, § 340. n. 4. [Zumpt, § 511. On this use of the future exact in putting off the consideration of a thing see Madvig, opusc. II. 92: 'coniuncta autem cum differendi notione est curae aut in alium aut in se transferendae, quo simul ea cura differtur.' He gives examples of dixero, rediero, ivero, etc. so used by Plautus and Terence, but videro (with which Heinsius compares $\tau\acute{\iota}\ \pi\rho\delta\varsigma\ \eta\mu\acute{\alpha}\varsigma$; $\sigma\acute{\upsilon}\ \delta\psi\epsilon\iota$) alone remained in common use (ibid. 96, 'Cic. ad Qu. fr. II. 15. § 2: sed videro, spatium sumens cogitandi et se deliberaturum promittens'). Tertullian employs videro rather singularly, 'viderit persona' (=quid mihi cum p.?), cum doctrina mihi quaestio est. Add to the passages cited in the index of Schütz, de test. anim. c. 1.]

[1. 8. ipse. We say, 'I will make protestation for myself' (de me ipso); in Lat. and still more in Gr. ($\alpha\upsilon\tau\acute{\eta}\ \epsilon\iota\ \alpha\upsilon\tau\acute{\eta}\varsigma$, etc.) the ipse ($\alpha\upsilon\tau\acute{\rho}\varsigma$) very frequently is attached to the nominative, even where there is not (as here there is tu—ego) a contrast between it and a nom. in another clause, but oblique cases are contrasted in the two clauses, as in Liv. II. 9. § 5: nec hostes medo timebant, sed suosmet ipsi (not ipsorum) cives. The reason is that there is a twofold contrast; within the clause between subject and object, without between the two objects. We lay stress on the latter, the Romans often on the former contrast. See Kühner on Tusc. disp. I. § 73. ad fam. IV. 8. § 1: non ita abundo ingenio, ut te consolcr, cum ipse me non possim. NAEGELSB. Weissenborn adds Liv. I. 11. § 9, 54. § 8. See Madvig, § 487 b, Zumpt, § 696.] adulescens, as consul. [B. § 119. abhinc, with acc. Madvig, § 235. n. 2. [Abhinc with the acc. 'ago' (i. e. before this time); with the abl. 'before that time' (=ante). The rarer use with the abl. (Cic. Verr. II. § 130, Plaut. Most. II. 2. 62) may be compared with the use of adhuc for ad id tempus (Madvig on Cic. de fin. v. c. 6. p. 639) and etiam nunc for etiamtum. In Cic. ad Att. XII. 17 the abl. is owing to the comparative amplius. Abhinc with acc. p. Rosc. com. § 37 (triennium; but also annis). Verr. I. c. 12, II. c. 9, p. Balb. c. 6, de divin. II. c. 57, Hor. epist. II. i. 36. etc. MADVIG, Bemerkungen, 65, 66.]

Madvig (opusc. II. 339, 341) justly insists upon this proof of the genuineness of the 4th Catilinarian. Oxon. = § 215, μὲν should be omitted by so many MSS. The same however (with one or two more) omit δέ in the second clause. I am still more surprised that in S. Paul Rom. vi. 17, μὲν is omitted. Surely God is not thanked that men were the servants of sin. Is it fanciful in I Corinth. viii. 1, 4, to conjecture οἷδα μὲν for οἶδαμεν?' R. S.]
